

EXAMS

Next week the tri-annual period of the third degree rolls around once more and the bright students will once again transfer their accumulated knowledge to a blue book, the conscientious will write in agony in their seats and the lazy and dumb will watch someone else's paper. Not a very pleasant method of testing the student's retention of work. At its best, the present system merely serves as an indicator of the material which is retained in the brain at the moment. It is not safe in hardening the guess as to the present of that knowledge which is recalled in three months. The general impression remains.

Nevertheless, under the modern plan of studying and type of students, it seems to be the only practical way to determine if the college takes the responsibility of educating. It will not be until this is assumed by the student themselves can the examination compulsory class attendance and other distasteful parts of the present educational scheme be eliminated. Then it will be the student's own fault and recognized by the public if they finish school with less than some bills to show that things can happen however they are planned. A general revamping of the present educational arrangement.

LAST NIGHT

Last night was the night many of us have been looking forward to for some time. It marked the final time of the year for the students. No longer could the student reading be done in a comfortable way, the outlining be finished, the experiments be handed in, and the final exam.

The reason we indulged in this activity, left the last night of the year, was because we could not do our work. We were so tired, we could not do our work. We were so tired, we could not do our work. We were so tired, we could not do our work.

REPRESENTATION

Michigan State will be represented at the convention of the National Student Federation of America in Lansing next week. Two men will represent Michigan from this campus and one from the other. The student problems with which the student body is faced, the educational problems of all sections of the country, and the college in being represented at such meetings because of the importance of this school is hoped to be one of the most advanced in the world.

Work will continue in progress in this department as well as in the other departments. It gives the student body a chance to be heard.

WOMEN

The women's perspective of the general knowledge of the student body is a statement made in the past. Even once this day is over, the student body is still in the process of rounding the 278 in the total of a man of 90, but the women are managed by a woman.

MORE CAMPAIGNS

We understand that there was a campaign through at the Varsity club during the other night to have the women members taken and sent to the other side of the street. This was done to meet the competition of a woman campaign which was more successful. The motion was unanimously passed.

OBSTRUCTIONS

It is extremely difficult to obtain a library in these days. In an attempt to do so, the library yesterday, we had a large pile of dirt, huge sewer pipes and so on around a log house. Then there was a tree lying on the sidewalk.

1928 J-HOP WILL BE HELD IN OLDS HOTEL MARCH 2

Favors Chosen and Committees Begin Work on Biggest Party.

200 GUESTS EXPECTED

A Nationally Known Orchestra to Be Imported; Actual Work Next Term.

With the date of March 2 chosen for the J-Hop, the selection of the date was the first step in the planning of the party. The date was chosen because it is a day when the students are not in school, and it is a day when the weather is usually good.

The committee has chosen the Olds Hotel for the party. It is a large hotel with a beautiful view of the city. The committee has also chosen a nationally known orchestra to play at the party. The orchestra will be imported from another city.

The actual work of planning the party will begin next term. The committee will choose the favors and the committees for the party. It is expected that about 200 guests will attend the party.

OLD CHRISTMAS TREE TO SHINE FORTH SOON

Will Be Strung with Many Colored Lights as Soon as Weather Permits.

The college Christmas tree is preparing for another busy season of admiring glances and comments of praise. After standing patiently upon the campus for 11 months, it will soon become the center of attraction and once again radiate its cheery Yuletide greetings.

The Christmas tree is located in front of the Women's building and in every day life it is considered as a state in its tree. During the Yuletide season, however, it is transformed by the many colored lights adorning it. The tree will shine forth in all its splendor as soon as the weather is permissible for the placing of the lights.

SHORT COURSE TO OFFER EIGHT SPECIAL COURSES

Eight special courses of study offered by the short course of Michigan State College will open Jan. 3. The short course is dependent upon the division of R. W. Toney, as upon with the entrance examinations to all men and women of the state over 16 years of age. A new course will be introduced this winter term in home economics, which will offer a variety of useful and interesting subjects.

FORESTRY DEPT. GETS LIGHTEST WOOD KNOWN

Several Pieces of Balsa Sent from South America.

The forestry department has recently received a shipment of several pieces of balsa, the lightest wood known. This wood was sent from South America where it grows in the jungle regions of the tropics, especially in the Amazon river valley.

A large beam of this wood, appearing to be as solid and heavy as any of our North American timbers, upon being placed is found to weigh much less than oak. The lightness, as well as its capacity of growth, make it of great commercial value. It is used in airplane construction, and for purposes in which an extremely light wood is desired. Balsa cross often at 100 lbs. in its green growth, a height of 20 feet and a diameter of 30 inches, Professor Christensen said.

FOUR NEW COURSES WILL BE OFFERED IN ENGLISH

Because of the increased interest of college students in courses in creative writing, the college has been requested to add additional subjects to the English department. Professor A. H. Nelson of the English department has announced that four new courses will be offered in English.

The courses are: Creative Writing, Creative Prose, Creative Verse, and Creative Drama. These courses will be offered during the next term.

Freshmen Present Many Views On Campus Prohibition Question

Prohibition is one issue upon which we all have opinions, whether these opinions are the result of sincere thought or whether they have been picked up from magazines and speak sheets. Such was well proven by a group of freshmen themes written on the subject of prohibition under the direction of the campus Y M C A and the English department.

The variety of freshmen opinion on this subject is truly surprising. While the majority expressed themselves in favor of strict prohibition, one theme advocated light wines and beer, and another went so far as to term prohibition a "delicious fancy."

Drinking in a theme which brought out conflicting ideas, one writer stated that prohibition is becoming a serious college question, another that there is too much drinking in colleges.

EXIT-FALL TERM

The fall term has almost passed its history. A few days of exams constitute the last barrier in the fall hurdle. Two weeks of much needed vacation will be the reward of all students for the holiday season. For a lot of students who have not had the full Christmas vacation will be quite long. For others, it will be a brief respite between terms with a chance to catch up on some much needed sleep.

The Christmas season should be a time of merriment and reunion and we most sincerely hope that it will be. But there are several serious thoughts that we can take with us to our homes. New Year's day is a time for resolutions and promises and we have a few suggestions. There is not one of us who cannot improve during the coming year. Most of us have had down on the job in several instances during the past year. We haven't shown the proper interest and spirit in some things, we have wilfully skipped classes and shirked our campus duties.

When we return to the fall term we will have to turn over a leaf to some things. Let's be loyal to the institution in the first place. Then let us be just to ourselves and to those who are sending us to college by pitching in and getting the most out of our courses. We will have had a real vacation and should return renewed with spirit enough to carry through a successful year.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

The State News staff wishes all of its readers a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. This season may seem a little bit previous but this is the last issue of the State News for the fall term. We appreciate the support given the paper during the past term and we hope that all of our present readers will be with us again next term.

The News will continue its policy of expansion throughout the winter term and many new features will be added. The first issue for 1928 will be published during registration week and regular issues will then follow. We suggest that the work of the assistant editors be scrutinized carefully so that an intelligent vote may be cast at the winter election.

BROCHON FAVORS

"Jim" Bowley, representing Broch on, Chicago, announces he will be on the campus again Jan. 2 to 5 with a complete new line of brochs and programs. The brochs will prove interesting. The line will consist of over 50 creations never shown before. Society committees will do well to get him before passing their orders. Advertisement.

NOTED SCIENTIST SPEAKS ON STARS

Prof. B. R. Baumgardt Develops Fine Program to Large Audience.

Prof. B. R. Baumgardt, noted lecturer and English scientist, spoke Wednesday evening to a large number of students and faculty members who thronged to hear him in the People's church auditorium, giving a very interesting and educational illustrated lecture on astronomy.

Prof. Baumgardt proved to be a charming and at times thorough lecturer and succeeded in creating a new impression in a lecture on general astronomy by the use of poetic interpretation combined with personality. The information that Professor Baumgardt gave was necessarily general but was intelligently up-to-date and interesting. He interspersed his lecture with bits on philosophy and religious thought.

In his introductory paragraphs prior to the illustrated portion, Professor Baumgardt sought to point out the relation of the universe to religion and our own earth. He declared that "life must have a meaning, else it would be an unendurable tragedy." He expressed a belief that the universe was controlled by some supreme power, and that he believed this power to be God. An astronomer is bound to worship and reverence the divine power and he approaches the study of astronomy with true humility, he declared. He further stated that the "laws of nature are the same for the entire universe, therefore the universe is one grand unit, and the earth a smallest part." He said that the comparative method is used in astronomy, as in other sciences, and that consequently the universe cannot see all details, which are only discernible to the trained eye of the experienced observer. Many astronomers are disappointed with their first view of the heavens, since they cannot see what has been described to them by learned scientists.

The glory in astronomy, Professor Baumgardt pointed out, lies certainly not in the money received for this type of scientific jobs, as in other professions. But the men in the observatory work for something else, more than money, since they know that long after we are forgotten and our money blown to the winds, their names will be respected by posterity for the work they have done.

Astronomy leads us up, up, up, and on an on, to truth with all of the beauty in nature which is symbolized by truth, declared the speaker. The showing of the slides, which Professor Baumgardt declared was believed to be the best in the world, again next. A study of the sun, as the most interesting of our stars, was first. Several interesting and remarkable slides were Theta Alpha Phi Does Well in Presentation of R. U. R.

Just a few minutes after 8:15 on last Tuesday evening the green and white curtains of the State theater parted and the first dramatic presentation of Theta Alpha Phi for this term was on.

It is said that the play, "Rossum's Universal Robots" by Conrad Capek, is probably the most ambitious specimen of drama ever undertaken by the dramatic society, and indeed it must have been. The smoothness of action and conversation, the continual motion of the Robots and their mechanical movements and expressions, faces showed weeks of practice on the part of the players.

The unusualness of the story left us with a rather strange feeling. The action of the play blended together comedy, tragedy and fantasy in a new and peculiarly attractive manner which held the audience through to the very close.

The play opened in the central office of the factory of Rossum's Universal Robots, where mechanical men which have all the characteristics of men without a soul are being manufactured by scientists. Two or three maps are tacked upon the wall and through the window in the rear can be seen a part of the factory. Harry Domin, the lead played by Lyle Lyon, is at his desk dictating to his stenographer, a Robotess. Before long Heinrich, played by Elton Farley, enters the office. She has come to see the factory and to object to the manufacture of Robots. She wins the heart not only of Harry Domin but of all five other men who are heads of departments in the factory, and they explain to her that what they are trying to do is fill the world from the working class by letting Robots do the work. Then comes one of the few touches of comedy when Harry, with only five minutes to go, wins Helena for his wife.

The second act takes place in Helena's drawing room ten years later. There has been trouble with the Robots. They have revolted, become enemies of men, and are becoming organ-ized. Helena, hearing all this, in a last effort to stop the manufacture of Robots, among the collection on the sun. One particularly remarkable one was an actual photograph of one of the sun's flames, which had been colored, and was very picturesque. The flames of the sun, Professor Baumgardt pointed out, sometimes reach the height of a half million miles, and are constantly changing and illuminating.

A number of slides on the appearance of the moon all of which were actual photographs followed. The speaker pointed out the absence of life on the moon, which has been a moot question for some time. Another planet very interesting to the inhabitants of the earth was next discussed, this being Mars. Professor Baumgardt affirmed that he is convinced there is no life on this planet, and also stated that he believed there were no stars that a theory which is often held at the present time.

Robots burn the old manuscript of Rossum which contains the secret for which they were produced. At last a ship arrives and the men, believing that the revolt is over, gather in the drawing room to celebrate when word is brought in that the ship is manned by Robots and that they have issued a proclamation declaring that all humans shall be killed. The men rush to the window and find the house surrounded.

The last act portrays the dramatic action which takes place within the house on the afternoon of the same day. We have no way of telling what is going on outside other than by the remarks of the men at the window. There seems to be no possible way of escape. They had hoped to sell the secret formula of old Rossum in return for their freedom but that has been learned. At last Dr. Gall confesses that he has started all the trouble in his experiment to give the Robot a soul. Suddenly the lights go out, the Robots storm the house and kill all but old Morley because he works with his hand like a Robot. And then in the word "freight" the mechanical men, chanting in monotonous march of the stage as the act ends.

As the curtains part for the episode, Alquist, well played by William Montgomery, is discovered at work in a laboratory. For a year he has been working in vain for some formula which will give life to the Robot. He is kept at his task only by the thought that some form of person must be kept living on earth. At last, weary, he falls asleep. As he sleeps a Robot and Robotess enter. They talk to each other of things of beauty. Through the powers of love they are transformed from mechanical beings. Their first laughter wakes old Alquist. For the first time a Robot has shown any sense of emotion. Alquist tests them further and finds that they are human. These more love has found a way and the cycle of life can go on.

SOCIETY

Sophomore Party and Union Hop Ends Fall Term Functions

Sophomore fall term party tonight and the Grand Finale Hop at the Union tonight are the open parties winding up the social events for this term. The annual Olympic venison roast, Abbott hall party, and Alpha Gamma Rho luncheon are other features of Saturday's entertainments. Aside from these affairs, this week has been well filled with an Arts course lecture, the Adrian State football game, and Theta Alpha Phi party.

The sophomore party is the first one of the year for the class this year. It will be held in the Union ballroom, where it is to be held, and will be decorated in the class colors. The Pollohan orchestra plays and some feature entertainment is given. Noel Mason and Mr. and Mrs. Stone, casted are acting as patrons.

Tonight the Union gives a Grand Finale Hop as the official close of fall term activities until winter term. The Pollohan orchestra has been engaged. A Detroit band will play for the Olympic venison roast at the Macmillan hall. This party, which has been a tradition for the fraternity since its formal event given fall term, will be given by Mrs. J. B. Hasselmann, Mrs. T. L. Sherburne, Dean and Mrs. L. W. Bissell, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. King, Mr. and Mrs. Miles Casper, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Traynor, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. VanAlstyne, and J. R. Kowalski, chaplains.

Abbott hall fall term party will take place at the Little Theater with the Pollohan orchestra playing. The party will be given by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Caswell, Mrs. Helen Powell, Miss Helen Boiz, Mr. and Mrs. R. Wycoff and O. Mason. The Alpha Gamma Rho holds an open house with Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Wycoff, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. "Backward march." "Double quick time, run." will almost drive us to a bottle of carbolide. Well, everyone has his tribulations. We have gym, and the department has us, incidentally, it looks as though the department has the worst of the bargain.

There have been some inquiries as to the identity of Ada. She is remaining strictly incognito, believing it to be the best means of preserving her life.

The schedule of the department for winter term is now out, and everyone is frantically juggling their programs so they won't have to have an 8 o'clock. However, if the music department knew how many people (theoretically) had to practice voice or piano at that hour, it would be astounded to say the least. Judging from appearances, there must be a great deal of musical talent in the department.

That gives a clue for signals in a basketball game, a soprano could sing the aria, "Ah, favor, dove, amore," as a signal for the forward to get away.

Some call it mellowness... Some say that Camel is the mellowest cigarette ever made. Some that it's mild and smooth. It's really all good things in one, and that is why it is supreme upon the pinnacle of modern favor. Camel's popularity today is the largest that any cigarette ever had. And, it costs something to make this kind of a smoke. It costs the choicest tobaccos that money can buy, and a blending that spares neither time nor expense. Each Camel cigarette is as full of value as the world of tobacco can give. You can be sure of smoking pleasure, serene and full, in these quality cigarettes. Smoke all of them you want; they simply never tire the taste. "Have a Camel!" B. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY, WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

SPARTAN BASKETBALL TEAM DEFEATS ADRIAN IN OPENER

Close Game Marked by Ragged Play; Chance for Good Team Bright

FINAL SCORE 30-25

Michigan Game Next on State Schedule, Saturday Night

Following a superior team of last year, the Spartans are expected to have their best season of the season here Wednesday night when they defend the Adrian victory in a game at 8:30.

Starting conditions for Michigan State were somewhat favorable as they had the home court advantage and a fine team which had won the championship of the state last year.

The Spartans were well prepared for the game, although they were not expected to win. The Michigan team was expected to be a strong contender.

Ohio University Is Probable Foe of Gridiron Squad Next Fall

With the announcement that Colgate and North Carolina State have stated contracts to play football at East Lansing next fall, the Spartan schedule is almost complete. Colgate will take the place of Indiana University on the 1928 schedule and Cornell college will not be played next year. These will be the last autumn games.

Kalamazoo college will again open the season at East Lansing and it is probable that Ohio University will be played the following week. Negotiations with Michigan State, Ohio State, and the University of Michigan are being held.

The Michigan State football team will play Kalamazoo on September 15, Colgate on September 22, Ohio State on September 29, and Michigan State on October 6. The team will then travel to Ohio University on October 13 and to Cornell on October 20.
