

Current Books in Review

Undoubtedly the biggest of these days in the local book stores are the paper-covered reprints of popular books. Long scorned by the ingenuities for their lack of showiness on library shelves, and curiously under congressional fire for the plunging necklines on the covers, these reprints have one advantage for the college student: their low price. Stores long stocked the usual range in fiction, from the classic to the new, by way of Kathleen Winsor, now selling the more staid of about six months ago, a group of authors, publishers, editors and reviewers got together to discuss the subject of bringing the American public back away from Uncle Mitty and begin reading.

The result of this conference was "The Wonderful World of Books," edited by Alfred Stead, this is an anthology of opinion and technique, with contributions from all phases of the book world. Especially fine is Kenneth C. Carr's article, "It's a Book," by T. V. Smith's "Reading Horrors," comments on the Bible by Helen Miller and Kenneth Miller, "A Book Collecting," by John Winterlich.

For freshmen having reading lists, we suggest "How to Read a Book" by Mortimer Adler, and finally, for harassed English majors, there is included "Good and Bad Poems," by Mrs. E. J. F. Rieu. Naturally, some of the books become a little tinged with cynicism and sentiment, but the unevenness, "The Wonderful World of Books" should encourage book lovers to come out of their shells, and should, furthermore, add impetus to the desire for those who never read to begin.

If you are, or were, one of the L.F.A. students who had been told to "What to Read," you will find "What to Read" in "What to Read" a book which should be read. Written by one of America's foremost literary critics, this is a handy outline and commentary on all phases of modern literature, from the symphony to opera. Each step in the technique is fully illustrated from works of masterpieces in the field, from Bach to Beethoven.

Can you say no more, however, that this book is, or should be, a prerequisite for all amateur listeners, being a clear and concise exposition on Mr. Copland's own field, music.

Many new titles are appearing on paper covers these days, and the publishers seem to have covered good markets for old titles.

One of these series are priced at 50 cents, for the most part, and, at last, a student can keep a book, and still not have to buy the term paper line at the library.

Outdoors Common Cold Flu Bug Hits and Runs

By JERRY HINDEN

Blame the flu bug for piling up a record 7,377 student calls at the college hospital this January. This figure was double that of a year ago, Dr. Charles Holland, director of the Health Center, said.

But glandular fever and "colds," which usually account for 90 per cent of campus illnesses, ran close seconds.

Dr. Holland said that 507 students managed to enter the crowded hospital for average stays of 2 1/2 days each.

Colds started the flood of hospital calls, but by the second week more men had visited the hospital.

Twenty-seven operations were performed in January, most of them appendectomies. Upper respiratory infections, or "colds," spread throughout the system and aggravate an inflamed appendix condition, Dr. Holland said.

Ski trips usually brings two or three broken legs and several sprained ankles cases into the hospital each Monday morning. The accident ratio is about the same for every term, with most injuries resulting from sports, Dr. Holland said.

Warm-weather terms bring a rise in poison ivy cases.

If cramming for finals is a menace to student health, the clinic records don't show it. In fact, calls generally fall off at final-exam time. On the other hand, they are usually highest the first two weeks after students come back from a vacation.

January, with its flu toll, was an exception. Unlike physicians at most colleges, Olin Memorial doctors have no outside practices, and work only at the hospital.

Outside surgeons from Lansing are called in for any operations. If surgery is needed, the college will first contact parents for permission. Dr. Holland said that in his 16 years at the hospital there were only three times they couldn't locate parents. In these cases they went ahead and operated.

Housemoms' Hobbies Fill Spare Time

Housemothers usually have a pretty good idea of what needs to be done in their spare time, but these needs are often in the area of their housework, rather than in the area of their hobbies.

Mrs. Travis M. Landholt of Galesburg has a hobby that has gained some recognition. She is a painter, and only recently returned from Florida where she attended a two-week portrait painting class. Mrs. Landholt, who works mostly in oils, occasionally sells a painting.

Mrs. C. Sophia Johnson, South Williams, collects antiques while traveling. Her collection includes 200 antiques, including some pieces of pressed glass.

'Too Big' Blues Cabinet Troubles Bring Worries to Student Congress

Student Congress and the college carpenters have been getting their signals mixed.

Last November, the congress ordered a cabinet for its workroom on the fourth floor of the Union. When the cabinet was finished, it was too big to pass through the workroom door.

A chagrined student government representative said the congress thought the cabinet would be built right in the workroom because of its size. The carpenters apparently thought they were to build it in their own shop according to measurements submitted.

Upon completing the cabinet, they had to leave it outside, by the freight elevator.

And there it sat for weeks and weeks.

What now? It will be torn down enough to get it into the workroom where it will be rebuilt and repainted.

The cabinet is designed to hold the mimeograph machine used by government members and student organizations. It is patterned after the one in the Union Board office and has three large shelves and two lockable doors.

Fire

The attic, burned through the fireboard ceiling of the third floor to two adjoining sleeping rooms.

Firemen at the house closed the steel doors to the third floor and then notified the East Lansing fire department, which brought the fire under control after several hours. To fight the fire, Marie V. Gray, East Lansing fire chief, called in all his off-duty men.

Construction of the house, which was built only a year-and-a-half ago, forced the firemen to chop through the third floor ceiling to gain access to the attic.

Despite the heat and smoke there were no injuries, although some of the firemen were momentarily overcome by the smoke.

The 36 occupants of the house were forced to sleep at other nearby houses on the block.

The third floor is being closed off until it is repaired. The roof and attic will also need considerable repairs.

Two More Stars? Alaskans, Hawaiians Here Ask Statehood

The lands of the lei and the igloo may soon increase number of stars in the American flag to 50.

President Eisenhower recently stated that he favors statehood for Hawaii, but he has not yet mentioned Alaska.

MSC students from these two territories favor statehood for their areas.

Surprisingly enough, Jim Watt, Fairbanks, Alaska, senior, at first opposed the idea. He was afraid the territory might assume the aspects of a "boom" town.

"In two years they would be ready for statehood and I would be in favor of it," he said.

Watt has lived in Fairbanks for only eight years. The natives are very much in favor of the issue and have made up signs and slogans for it, he said.

Evelyn Lum, Honolulu, Hawaii, senior, expresses the opinion of other Hawaiian students on campus.

"We pay taxes higher than 12 of the 48 states, and our boys are sent out to war. We don't have a vote, but we do have a voice. It's like taxation without representation," she said.

But no one as yet has asked a Texas what he thinks on the subject. After all, if Alaska becomes a state it will be bigger than Texas.

Catholic Diplomat To Speak at Union

Ngo Dinh Diem, visiting diplomat from French Indo-China, will be guest speaker at a special meeting of the International Relations Club at 8 p.m. today in Room 32 of the Union. He will speak on the current situation in Indo-China.

Active in non-Communist political leadership in Indo-China, Diem is the representative of more than three million Catholics there. He was Minister of State to Bao Dai, the king.

Ag Students To Judge FFA Speech Meet

Twelve agriculture students will act as speech contest judges at district meetings of Future Farmers of America clubs Tuesday.

North Kanter, Trout Lake junior, John Halsey, Charlotte freshman, and Maurice Fritch, Inlay City junior, will specialize in parliamentary procedure. Pete Sackett, M. B. Jones senior, and Gene Burkhardt, Danvers junior, will judge demonstrations.

Allen Kuhn, Melvor senior, Frank Popp, Decatur senior, and John Olmstead, Freeland freshman, will travel to Bellevue. Kuhn will judge parliamentary procedure. Popp, demonstration talks; and Olmstead, speeches.

At Reading, Jack Newstead, Onaway junior, Larry Shepherd, East Lansing senior, Joe Hovenes, Lansing senior, and John Stallsteimer, Merrill senior, will all judge parliamentary procedure. Newstead, Shepherd and Hovenes will also listen to speeches. Stallsteimer will check demonstrations.

The regional public speaking contests will be followed by statewide and national ones later in the spring.

Travel Head Prepares for His Own Trip

Dave Peppard is planning on leaving his post as manager of the MSC Travel Bureau before the month is out because he wants to do some traveling of his own.

Not that he has spent all his life watching others do all the traveling, however. Peppard is a man of action.

A 1950 graduate of State, he was a member of the track team for four years. Peppard, Bill Mack, Warren Druetzler and Don Makielski teamed up in 1950 and not only placed first in the Purdue Relays and the ICA meet, but set a world's record time of 7:31.8 for the two miles in the Los Angeles Coliseum Relays.

All of his traveling hasn't been on the cinder track, either. On a two-week vacation last fall he visited London, Paris, Milan and Florence.

After he catches up on his trips, Peppard isn't really sure what the future holds in store. But he thinks it might include a travel agency of his own.

... As Basketball Team Rolls Over Purdue ...

Two Bellarmakers give Spartan forward, Keith Stachhouse, a "rough time" as they attempt to take possession of the ball. On the left are Bob Armstrong (15) and Purdue's Don Beck (40). State came out victorious in the contest, winning 68-57 Saturday in Jensen Fieldhouse.

Forward Al Ferrari (22) attempts to break into the clear as Jim Schlotter (11) and Ricketts (50) attempt to block the shot. Ferrari registered 22 points in the contest to lead both squads.

Center Bob Armstrong and forward Keith Stachhouse (14) go high in the air after a rebound for State as Purdue's center, Gene Cal-

Cagers May Take Over Third Place in Big Ten Tonight

Indiana All But Sews Up Title As Hawkeyes Surprise Illini

The bottom all but fell out of the Big Ten basketball title scrap Saturday night when Iowa surprised Illinois, 67-62, to leave undefeated Indiana cruising toward the crown almost untested.

Iowa sent a home crowd of 14,332 wild by handing Illinois defending champions their third setback of the campaign. As a result of Saturday's Western Conference basketball action, Indiana neared its first undisputed title.

The Hoosiers whipped Ohio State, 81-67 while Iowa pulled their surprise. The league leaders now hold a three-game margin over second place Illinois with 13 wins and no losses compared to the Illini record of ten and three.

In tonight's play, Illinois will meet Minnesota and Purdue will visit Indiana.

MICHIGAN STATE	8	5
Wisconsin	7	7
Ohio State	6	8
Iowa	5	8

Illinois' slight chance for a tie lies in the fact that Branch McCracken's crew has two tough road games ahead, Illinois on Feb. 28, and at Minnesota on March 7 from the tough opponents. If the Hoosiers did lose these two on the road, they would still be favored for the championship because they have two home games with second division clubs, Northwestern and Iowa.

Pacing the Hoosiers to their win over Ohio State was the league's top scorer, Don Schmidt, who knocked 24 counters. Paul Ebert, who holds second in individual scoring, was held to 13 points as guard Dick Farley checked the talented Buckeye throughout the contest.

In another conference tussles Saturday evening, Wisconsin took an unexpectedly easy triumph over Michigan 74-52 to advance into fifth place over the fallen Buckeyes.

Forward Al Ferrari (22) attempts to break into the clear as Jim Schlotter (11) and Ricketts (50) attempt to block the shot. Ferrari registered 22 points in the contest to lead both squads.

Tournament Time Nears For Nation's Cage Teams

The time for basketball tournaments is nearing as evidenced by the wild scramble for star teams by the National Invitational Tournament and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

The N.I.T., with unbroken and top-ranked teams, is looking for the winner. In addition, Rio Grande of Ohio with its fabulous Bevo Francis is eagerly awaiting a call to the "big city."

for play opening in Madison Square Garden on March 7.

Under consideration for this tourney are Duquesne, St. John's, DePaul, St. Louis, Niagara, Holy Cross, Eastern Kentucky, and Oklahoma City. In addition, Rio Grande of Ohio with its fabulous Bevo Francis is eagerly awaiting a call to the "big city."

The NCAA is definitely assured of 13 of the 22 more schools needed to fill the 23 team bracket starting competition on March 9. Fourteen champions are automatically in the NCAA.

Only one of those championships has been decided as Idaho State won the Rocky Mountain conference title. Idaho State will meet high-scoring Seattle in a first round game March 10.

Seattle was picked as one of nine at-large teams which will join the conference titleholders in the NCAA competition.

Conferences which automatically qualify their champions for the title play are Ivy, Southern, Southeastern, Big Ten, Big Seven, Missouri Valley, Southwest, Pacific, Rocky Mountain, Skyline, Border and Mid-American. Representatives of the New England and Middle Atlantic conferences will be selected by committees.

Battle Wisconsin In Home Contest

By KENNETH MILLER

Michigan State's cagers once again have the opportunity to retake third place in the Big Ten basketball standings tonight when they face the Wisconsin Badgers, present occupants of the fifth position, in a Jensen Fieldhouse engagement starting at 8 p.m.

A combination of a Spartan victory and an Illinois win over Minnesota would elevate Pete Newell's crew into third, a half game ahead of the Gophers.

Illinois is heavily favored to defeat Ozzie Cowles' aggregation on the Champaign court.

To pass the Gophers, the Green and White must first take care of a rough Wisconsin contest, which took Michigan's Wolverines a stunning 76-55 defeat in Ann Arbor Saturday evening.

Wisconsin's main threat is center Paul Morrow, who cashed in for 27 points against the Wolverines. The 6'7" pivotman has a total of 247 points in 16 games.

Other Badger leaders are forwards Dick Cable and Tony Stracks with 222 and 177 markers, respectively.

The Madison quintet has a Big Ten record of seven wins and seven losses.

In Saturday's Jensen feature, 4,355 fans saw the Spartans take on only 68-57 win over the Iowa Hawkeyes. In addition, the crowd was the smallest to see State play at home this season with the exception of the Spartan classic which less than 4,000 people saw the games on each night.

Playing a spectacular role in the Spartan success was Al Ferrari, who led State along victory road with 22 points on seven field goals and eight charity tosses.

The New York City sophomore has tallied 263 points in 17 games in his first season as a varsity regular. With two more seasons of eligibility remaining, Ferrari should have a brilliant record when he ends his Spartan cage career.

Second to Ferrari in the scoring column was Purdue's forward Paul Runyan with 16 counters on four felders and eight free shots. Runyan had 17 chances at the charity line hitting just under 500.

The visitors from Lafayette, who reside in the conference's which met ahead of Michigan, never had the lead in Saturday's affair although they had the game tied at 21 all with two minutes remaining in the first half.

Keith Stachhouse scored on a layup, Ricketts Ayala tallied a free throw, and Ferrari meshed a field goal to send the Spartans off to a quiet Bellarmaker's victory.

At halftime State led 34-29. To begin the second half, Ferrari and Bob Armstrong sank two pointers which set the pattern for the final 50 minutes of action. The Spartans, played easily ahead of the Bellarmakers on leads which extended from 10 to 15 points. Coach Pete Newell substituted early in the last hour, using 13 players in State's eighth Big Ten triumph.

When It's Coffee Time . . .

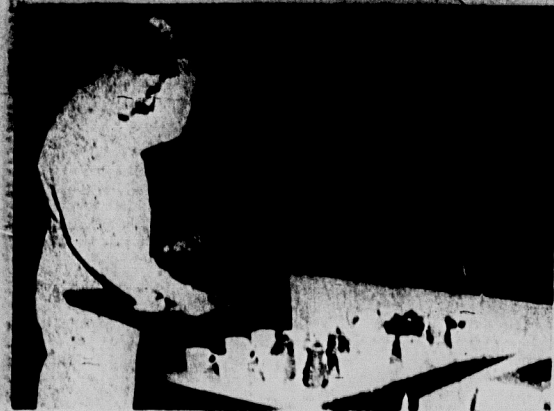

Just before of Lansing brings a load of cups to coffee drinkers.

John Fisher, and Barbara Suprenant, Coldwater sophomores, chat over coffee in the Union Grill.

Brewing their own coffee during a session with the books are Red Beckett, Orionville freshman and Doug Orton, Handbury freshman.

Bill Hyder, East Lansing, prepares to clear away evidence of much coffee-drinking in the Union Grill.

Joe Lange, Allegan sophomore, gulps down a quick cup of coffee before dashing off to class.

... Spartans Come With Java Cups in Hand

They serve an awful lot of coffee in the grill! About 150 gallons of Java, fortified by 50 to 60 pounds of sugar and 10 gallons of cream are served daily to 3,750 out of 4,000 students who pass through the grill.

Jim Tufty, State News photographer, pictorially surveyed grill booths and found coffee, serving as a friendly go-between for that first date, and a consoling drink for lone wolves with nothing more than a cigarette for company.

Coffee isn't always drunk in the grill—and it isn't always drunk. A stimulating cup of coffee is a wonderful pick-up during those long afternoons or evenings spent in the Library Annex, and coeds needing a Hawaiian suntan in a hurry found extra strong coffee more than satisfactory make-up for a costume party.

Grad Plays In Waring Song Fest

Rosalie Randall, MSC music graduate, will be the featured solo harpist with the Fred Waring "Festival of Song" when it appears at the Auditorium Thursday at 8:15 p.m.

Miss Randall received her bachelor of music degree in June of 1951. Soon after graduating, Miss Randall received a scholarship to the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Last summer, while vacationing with her parents at their home in Detroit, she heard of the Fred Waring workshop being conducted on the campus. She visited the workshop, auditioned for it, and was hired on the spot.

The local appearance of Miss Randall with the "Festival of Song" is one of some 85 performances being staged this season on a three-month 16,000-mile tour from Portland, Me. to western Texas.

When "Festival of Song" comes to the Lansing area, under the auspices of the Lecture-concert series, the audience will witness imaginative staging and lighting techniques developed for the Fred Waring television show. The director, Dr. Lara Hoggard, well-known for his work in choral clinics in schools and universities throughout the nation, is also choral director for the Fred Waring television show.

The program includes selections by Debussy, Brahms, Mozart, Mendelssohn and contemporary works by Benjamin Britten and Norman Lockwood. There will also be humorous and novelty songs. Some of the music will be accompanied by instruments, while other works will represent a capella singing.

Miss Randall will be featured harpist for "A Ceremony of Carols," by Benjamin Britten.

Gets Kittenish Frightened Actor Flees Stage — But All Ends Well

A temperamental actor almost wrecked havoc with the Children's Theater opening performance of "Heidi" Saturday in Battle Creek.

In a crucial moment, stage-fright overcame one of the supporting cast, who ran off the stage and necessitated a bit of sudden ad libbing.

The inexperienced actor was a kitten that leaped from the arms of Heidi, Suzanne Rouse, midway across the stage.

"Oh, run and catch the kitty or we won't be able to show him to Clara," Heidi quickly prompted to Guy Gallop, who portrays a little boy in the play.

It worked. Children from the audience asked later, "How did you get the kitten to run off just at the right time?"

MSC Student Earns Post in Sailing Club

Bill Brett, Statesville, N.C., sophomore, was elected publicity chairman of the Midwest Collegiate Sailing Association at a meeting early this month.

MCSA is one of the four sectional sailing associations in the United States.

The association also set up the spring sailing schedule. The first meet of the season will be held April 25 at Wayne University. On May 23 MSC will be host to the regional elimination contest at Lake Lansing.

Other meets scheduled are May 9 and 10, Notre Dame, and May 16 and 17, MCSA champions at Ohio State. Finals will be held May 2 and 3. No location for the regatta has been set.

Brett said that work has begun on repairing the boats for the spring season, and that all members of the Sailing Club should contact their boat captains.

Men's Off-Campus Householders Set Tuesday Meeting

The MSC Householders Association will meet Tuesday at 2 p.m. in Room 33 of the Union.

Members will hear a dramatic reading by Jacqueline DeHaas, Marquette senior, in addition to the regular business meeting. Representing the college housing office will be Elizabeth Corbishley, assistant clerk, and Lyle Thorburn, director of housing.

Education Group Selects Treasurer

W. Lowell Treaster, director of the Department of Information Services, has been selected to serve in two positions for the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education.

Treaster was re-appointed to the national committee on public relations, and was re-elected editor of "Public Relations Ideas," a national publication of the AACTE. Both positions are for one year.

Action on the two positions was taken at the national AACTE conference just concluded in Chicago.

Trailer Village Studied

Ag Board Considers Long-Sought Housing

By TED BAKSTIN

Economy from a long-range standpoint will be of major importance in consideration of a proposed Michigan State College married housing project, Emery G. Foster, manager of food and dorm services, said Friday.

The suggested $1,500,000 project was outlined at last week's meeting of the state Board of Agriculture. It is designed to improve the congested and generally unsatisfactory conditions in Trailer Village, Foster said.

"Trailer Village was constructed in 1945 as a five-year plan to solve problems that arose with a large influx of veterans and their families," Foster said. "However, it's been used for seven years now and many trailers are no longer in good living condition."

Foster said that of 441 trailers originally put in the village, only 336 are still occupied. The rest have been disposed of by sales and open bidding, he said.

The dormitory head said that Harold W. Lautner, campus landscape architect, and a representative from Manson and Carver, Lansing architects, have made a careful study of housing in various midwest colleges and universities and plan to continue their research in the East.

Lautner will report their program at the next board meeting in April, Foster said.

"We're approaching this project with great care because we want to establish some married housing that can be constructed economically and still hold up for a long time," he said.

Lyle A. Thorburn, housing director, said that once the project has been started, a seniority method will be used in moving married students into new quarters.

He said the older residents in Trailer Village will be transferred to barrack apartments, and trailer dwellers with a shorter residence period will be moved to other quarters in the village.

Preliminary drawings of the 168-family project were examined at last week's board meeting. Total cost was estimated at about $8,000 per apartment unit, including landscape and utility costs. The project cost would be

Vocal Program Scheduled Today On Station WKAR

WKAR's bi-weekly series of musical programs, each Monday and Friday at 3:15 p.m., will feature four vocal ensembles today.

The program will include "It Was a Lover and His Lover," by Henry Purcell, arranged by Edward German; "A Tuscan Folk Song," by Luigi Nono; "The Song of the Lark," by Franz Schubert; and "The Song of the Lark," by Franz Schubert.

Honorary to Present Vocal Music Program

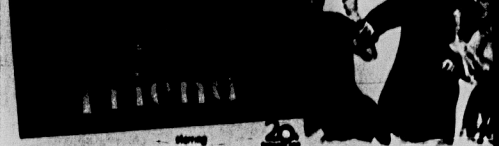

A vocal music program will be presented in the Music Room of the Union at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

Beth Mobley, Katie Creek, and Winifred Allen, all Lansing juniors, will do the program.

The program is a revue of plays currently running on Broadway.
