Vague Proposals Obstruct Balloting

STUDENTS WHO VOTED on the recent Amendment VI to Article IV of the AUSA constitution, concerning changes in the student judiciary, approved the measure overwhelmingly.

But did those who voted either for or against it really know what they were deciding upon? Did they have sufficient knowledge to make intelligent decisions?

We also marked an X in the "Do Approve" square. Now that we have looked further into the matter and discovered what its proposals stand for and the reasons behind them, we are still favorable to its passage.

But we, along with probably the great majority of students who took the extra minute after registration to read and mark the ballot, had only a very sketchy idea of what the proposals outlined there represented.

The changes were explained in detail in four advertisements in the State News at the end of fall term. Students then had a chance to read and understand all sections of the measure.

THE WORDING on the ballot itself, however, was so vague that it can be interpreted in any number of ways. It did not really state the proposal.

Students voted to approve the changes on the ballot, not necessarily the original proposal. Those could still be interpreted, in some cases, to mean just about anything.

Some students refused to vote, some just didn't care. Many, as one may note upon discovering that over 18,000 students went through registration and only about 8,000 voted, hurriedly tossed it aside without even reading it.

Some who obviously took time to read the ballot, however, decided to vote either way. One student wrote on his ballot that he was "not familiar with present procedure." In only one of the six sections was mentioned the difference between present and proposed plans.

Another, who did not mark either square, called the ballot "too nebulous" and requested to know what were "necessary changes" of section 2.

The wording itself was extremely ambiguous. Section 2, for example, read:

"The amendment provides for necessary changes in the petitioning procedure of the judiciary."

"NECESSARY CHANGES" could have been anything from requiring 10,000 student signatures for each candidate's petition to simply making a technical word change in the clause so that it would agree with the other changes.

The principal change, in fact, of the section rescheduled the time of petitioning for judiciary seats from fall to spring term, thus relieving seniors in their final term on campus of their judiciary duties.

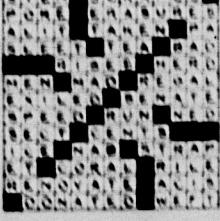

This seems to us a worthwhile change, but it could never have been deciphered from the "necessary changes" of the ballot, and it could still be interpreted to mean otherwise.

Students who voted for the measure, 8,936 of them, perhaps checked the "Do Approve" box on some ballots. "Do Approve" X square trusting to the judgment of Congress members who presented it.

AT ANY RATE, such a ballot is not an acceptable means of getting intelligent student vote.

Students have been given the voting privilege. But we hope that AUSA's ballot makers, in future referenda, will present sufficiently clear information. They must print the ballot proposals in enough detail, stating the measure as it is, to give students an intelligent and effective vote.

Alabama Justice Faces Jail Term

Defies Order to Hand Over Voter Registration Records

CLAYTON, Ala. (UPI) — Circuit Judge George Wallace, admittedly inviting a jail sentence, ignored a federal court order Monday and refused to hand voter registration records to the U. S. Civil Rights Commission.

Wallace, with an assured willingness to face the consequences, turned the records in Madison County over to a two-months-committed county grand jury.

He left it up to the 18 jurors to say whether the federal agents get to see the files as part of their investigation of alleged denial of voting rights in Georgia.

Four hours after it had been demanded, the jury said commissioners had been invited to examine these records jointly with us.

The court said the agents deserved the offer.

Wallace thus faced the risk of a federal jail term for contempt of court because the commission investigators didn't get to see the requested registration files.

He acknowledged that possibly when he told the jury he was ready to face the consequences.

A. H. Rosenthal, director of the commission's bureau of investigations, and his associates refused to leave at the records' office and have authority to do so within the grand jury. They waited as he dealt with Judge Wallace.

Another grand jury is expected to be convened in adjoining Madison County today to take custody of the registration records there.

Wallace, who previously had demanded the records in both counties and refused to surrender them to the federal government, was ordered Friday by U. S. Dist. Judge Frank Johnson to make the files available between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday and today.

Johnson, who can send Wallace to jail for contempt, had nothing to say about Monday's developments. He had already ordered a hearing for Wednesday morning to determine whether his order was carried out.

The White House said Eisenhower would have urgent speech but might make some informal remarks and then reply to written questions.

This is usual practice at the press conference. Questions are sent in writing and submitted to the speaker of the day.

White House Press Secretary James Hagerty said he presumed that, in view of the Press Club appearance, Eisenhower will not hold a formal news conference at which correspondents are able to ask questions orally.

Eisenhower said an invitation was extended to the President by the Press Club some time ago to attend a luncheon or dinner in connection with the Club's 50th anniversary.

Eisenhower, who has not visited the Club since he entered the White House, called Hagerty in last week as the Press Secretary reported it and inquired.

For something, the Press Club would still like to have me," Eisenhouer assured the President he would be more than welcome.

The White House left all arrangements for Eisenhouer's appearance to the Press Club, and said it had no objections to the affair being carried on radio and television.

NAACP Makes Bid to Open Schools

Little Change Seen in Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI) — U.S. Dist. Court Monday denied a motion of Little Rock school board high schools, continuing John R. Blum's Association for the Advancement of Colored People's federal court suit against the state's public school system for depriving Negro children of equal educational opportunities.

While Blum was holding a press conference prior to the state legislature opening on Tuesday, Negro students at the Mount Royal, Highland Park and Ford Rouge schools. All three were dependent for their operations on bargeings supplied from Clinton.

The Clinton plant was shut down by a strike of the UAW there. Eventually, the Detroit steel men were laid off, losing their jobs in three weeks. Their incomes per claim ranged from $27 to $100 each.

The colored workers contend they were off the job through default of their own and therefore entitled to benefits.

The company accused the UAW of staging the Clinton strike as part of a national campaign begun the previous fall to force concessions in reopened negotiations on the existing three-year contracts between Ford and the UAW that was then in force and had two years to run.

Blum, of the NAACP, contended the school system's continuing to keep off-white Negro students from its schools was discriminatory and unconstitutional.

The NAACP sought to open a Negro high school, separating the Negro children from the white ones.

Blum said, "We believe that the Negro school system is unconstitutional. We believe that the Negro school system is unconstitutional. We believe that the Negro school system is unconstitutional."

The Negro NAACP spokesman suggested to Negro members of the state board of education and all state school officials that a party to the school system should be chosen to discuss including a desegregation trial he should file three planks of desegregation legislation from the general assembly in January.

Pollesel, A Scorer On Defense

Ed Pollesel, Spartan hockey defenseman, was selected to the RPI All-Tournament team at the recent invitational in Troy, N.Y. He was also one of the five Spartans to make the Boston All-Tournament team.

Pollesel, who was named the most improved player on the MSU squad last year, is now the highest scoring defenseman with 14 points to his credit. He also has the least number of penalties, a change from last year. The Canadian born player is playing more offense and is getting into the scoring column more often.

Pollesel played on the MSU-U of M team which lost to the Russian hockey team Tuesday night in Detroit. In his opinion, the Russians had "good conditioning and skating, but they wouldn't stand up to a professional team."

Pollesel, who comes from Copper Cliff, Ont., has been playing hockey since he was eight years old. He watched his older brother, Bruno, and others play and picked it up.

Pollesel, a senior, is a physical education major. He plans to do graduate work here and student teach. His prowess on the ice is almost matched by his work in the class room, as he came up with a 3.6 average last term.

According to Pollesel, MSU's toughest games this season were a 3-2 victory over Boston University and the North Dakota game. Against North Dakota, he figured in on all the scoring with one goal and three assists.

On Squad of Eighteen

Spartan Wrestlers Have Eight Lansing Members

By JIM WALLINGTON

The Michigan State wrestling team has found that it does not have to look far for wrestlers. Eight grapplers on this year's 18 member squad come from Lansing. Two others hail from out-state Michigan.

Michigan's large representation on the wrestling team is unique for MSU. Most of the other teams are made up of out-of-state athletes. It is unusual, also, to have so many from Lansing.

In contrast to the wrestling team, the football squad had 30 Michigan athletes on the 72 squad members—and three from Lansing. The basketball team has only one player from Lansing and three others from out-state Michigan.

The eight Lansing grapplers come from two high schools—five from Eastern and three from Sexton. The two schools are considered the top wrestling schools in the state. Year after year they produce outstanding grapplers that usually take most of the laurels in the state wrestling championships.

Three of the Lansing wrestlers started in the Indiana dual-meet. They were Sexton's Norm Young and Eastern's Duane Whalpert and Jerry Jackard.

Ben Brown and Leroy Ganzel from Sexton and John Shurpell, Mike Sensz and Bob Webber of Eastern are other Lansing youths on the team.

Jack Benson from Kalamazoo and Joe Marchal from Traverse City are the other Michigan residents on the team.

Wrestlers from other states round out the squad. Ohio, Illinois and New York have a piece with Oklahoma and Pennsylvania one each.

New Football Coach

University of Detroit Selects Jim Miller

DETROIT (AP) — The University of Detroit, determined to get back into the national football limelight it enjoyed under Gino Dorais, reached into the Big 10 Monday for a new head coach.

He is Jim Miller, defensive line coach of the Purdue Boilermakers the last four seasons.

The 36-year-old Miller, who learned his football under Paul Brown at Massillon (Ohio) High school where many gridiron greats have had their beginning, will be here Wednesday to sign the formal contract.

Terms were not disclosed but university officials said Miller will have a free hand in selecting his assistants. Miller also carries the title of director of football.

The one-time Purdue Boilerman, whose only previous college head coaching experience came during two seasons at Niagara University, replaces Wally Fromholt. The university fired Fromholt Dec. 2 after his 1958 team produced a 4-4-1 record.

Under the Very Rev. Celestin J. Steiner, President of the University of Detroit, the school has attempted to regain national prestige. So far, the move has been something less than successful.

Fromholt, a former Notre Dame quarterback, posted a 19-2 record in five seasons but school officials and alumni groups had high hopes after his 1957 team won six and lost only three.

Dorais, former Notre Dame and then a professional coach, coached at Detroit in the late 1930's and through the early 1940's, and his team had a 112-45-7 record. The school's football fortunes went steadily downward. Attendance dwindled and there was talk of dropping football a few seasons ago.

Injury Stops Neil Johnston

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Neil Johnston says he's had it for this year in the National Basketball Association.

The Philadelphia Warrior 6-8 pivotman, re-injured his left knee Saturday night against New York and said Monday he barely is able to walk.

Johnston, one of the all-time scoring greats of the NBA, has been plagued with a bad knee since early season. He underwent an operation on the injured area and under doctor's orders was attempting to strengthen it by playing.

"I think I've had it for the season," said the downcast Johnston at his home Monday. "It is extremely sore and seems to be getting stiffer. I guess we did the wrong thing. I just didn't have enough time between games to strengthen it sufficiently."

NCAA Penalty

By LARRY WROBLEWSKI

THEY DID IT AGAIN!

They being the ruling body widely-known as the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA). This autonomous organization slapped Southern California University in week—with a two-year probation penalty for "offering excessive inducements to athletes."

Along with the loss of prestige and the tarnishing of its athletic purity code, USC is immediately banned from NCAA championship competition for one year and made ineligible for participation in controlled television programs for two years.

SO THE TROJANS of Southern Cal face an identical penalty of a few years ago. It seems the culprit never learns to shun the easy way to become an average athletic factory.

The strange mental attitude of USC officials probably shows the ineffectiveness of NCAA punishment.

Southern Cal officials say explicitly that the Institute hasn't committed any major crime. (A major-time athletics is the "unlawful" payment or enticement of athletes.) Members of the USC staff of higher education shrug their shoulders and retort, "Why pick on us? There are plenty of offenders that receive the 'clean bill of health' without any substantial reprimand."

No the never-ending web of dog-eat-dog tactics continues its circle of college athletics. Just what can be done to eliminate this ever-present stigma is anyone's guess.

PEOPLE WHO FEEL obligated and dedicated to the proper handling of college sports, we must be thankful few such people still exist, have finally gained enough authority to undo the deceit and corruption of illegal crusaders.

But slapping a violating institution with a two-year punishment is far from the necessary rehabilitating action needed. Southern Cal's second violation of recruiting is prime example.

Unless some really considerate and fruitful NCAA legislation is agreed upon, the perennial violators will continue to darken the college sports scene.

Such legislation for consideration is the national letter of intent. It seems the NCAA fumbled the ball when the piece of regulatory policy was not initiated.

FOUR MAJOR conferences already follow this policy. These conferences being the Big 10, Southeastern, Southwest and Atlantic Coast. Absent from the roll call is the Ivy League, West Coast and Big Eight schools.

The letter of intent specifies that a prospective athlete who accepts a grant-in-aid from one institution can thereafter compete for another member of the conference.

Spokesmen for the groups that operate under this plan hailed it as a deterrent to "raiding" and "high pressure recruiting."

Coaches say such a letter would greatly remove unwanted pressure of high school athletes. But what about alumni groups?

CHIEF OPPOSITION to the plan came from the "sophisticated" Ivy League bloc. This group bases its argument on the assumption that they seldom compete seriously in bidding for blue-chip stars from the talent laden areas of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and other prep schools' "training camps." However, there is an occasional case.

Intertwoven in this argument is the emphasis by Eastern schools that they would be at a serious disadvantage under a national letter of intent because of their strict academic requirements.

So the plan of the schools that presently employ the method of recruiting was balked by the Ivy League.

However, in the years ahead, colleges will have to prove this program or one that is similar in philosophy. This continual war to obtain the best athletic material with complete disregard for providing a haven for high learning has to cease.

GETTING CLOSER to the effect of Southern Cal's position, it's anyone's guess what will eventually be the outcome of the Rose Bowl.

As every Midwest and West Coast sports fan knows, the Rose Bowl is the arena for battle between the Big and the now defunct Pacific Coast champions.

The termination of the Rose Bowl pact in 1960. The feelings in the Big 10, among a majority of the members, to sever relations with the West Coast.

WITH THE PCC no longer a functioning entity, the idea of playing before 100,000 people in sun-basking Pasadena, Cal., remains bleak.

There was a plan to organize Southern Cal, UCLA, California and Stanford in a new conference. But with the placement of USC, it is doubtful that this program will materialize.

WHAT WILL THE Big 10 do? Some observers think the Western Conference will direct its attention to lucrative gate receipts of the Cotton Bowl in Dallas. Some feel the Big 10 should discourage post-season travel and raise the standards of higher education, in other words follow the Ivy League policy.

But again, who can overlook the fact that the Big receives a large sum of $300,000 for one Rose Bowl appearance.

Muzyczko, Horn Becker off Team

Half of the gymnastic squad which earned Michigan State a share of the NCAA team title last spring has been declared scholastically ineligible for this term, the State News learned today.

Brian London Victim

Henry Cooper Cops British Boxing Title

LONDON, April 24.—Blond Henry Cooper, 24-year-old cockney boxer, won the British Heavyweight championship and a possible World Title shot Monday night by outpointing burly Brian London, the defending titleholder, in 15 rounds.

London, 30, and Cooper, who had knocked out London in 1956, used a slugging style to pile up points against his ever-changing opponent in the first 12-round battle, attended by a sellout crowd of 18,000 at Wembley Stadium.

Although London, at 195½ pounds, had a 16½-pound advantage over Cooper at 179½, the challenger was able to stand off his wild punches while waging heavily with his left hand.

Both men were slugging at right and their faces were painted bright red through the final rounds.

At the end of the 12th round, Cooper had a 12½-point lead, but the challenger had held his nerve as apparently London, the right-wielding fighter, was losing the fight.

The results of the fighting by London, 30, and Cooper, 24, were a decided and decided victory for the challenger and held his nerve as apparently London, the right-wielding fighter, was losing the fight.

Although Geoffrion trailed Rathbun in the voting, three other members of the league-leading Canadians took positions on the first team. They were center Henri Richards, left wing Jackie Moore, and defenseman Tom Johnson. Rounding out the squad were goalie Terry Sawchuk and defenseman Marcel Pronovost, both of Detroit.

Moore collected the most points, 88, followed by Sawchuk with 86.

Battaglia, runner-up to Geoffrion in the league's individual voting race, had 89 points.

Geoffrion had 49 and Howe, an All-Star for the last two seasons, had 49.

The second team was composed of Geoffrion, goalie Jacques Plante and center Jean Beliveau of Montreal, defensemen Bill Gadsby of New York and Fern Flaman of Boston and left wing Alex Delvecchio of Detroit.

Another vote will be taken in March based on performance over the second half of the season and the players with the most combined points will be named to the All-Star teams.

London, with the next four days, appeared certain to retain his British and European Championships.

But Cooper, bounding in like a swan, and bloody rings, managed to shoot in a sharp left in the ninth which put London back on his heels.

Although hardly able to go through swollen and bloody eyes, Cooper moved in behind the advantage and swept every round from then until the end.

The fight ended with Cooper taking stiff lefts which at the finish had London's entire face cut into a hacked, hamburgerish mess.

For The Record On 2 Autoramas

ANXIOUS FOR A PREVIEW of this weekend's Lansing Autorama, we dropped in Sunday on Detroit's version of the annual custom car show.

It left plenty to be desired.

Don't get us wrong. The hundred-and-some customs, restorations and race machines on display at the State Fairgrounds Coliseum were, for the most part, worthy—even outstanding examples of work in their respective fields.

The trouble was, only a fraction of the 40,000 spectators filling past the exhibits during the show's three-day run could see the vehicles well enough to appreciate their quality.

PUTTING THE MAGIC of the press card to good use, we got a few breaks that 98 percent of those present didn't. Even so, we got our best look at custom cars in the spectator parking lot on the way to the show.

For the neck-craving, flashlight-popping thousands, there was little relief, save to retire to the balcony for a long-distance view of the stampede. Binoculars would have helped; a better-organized show was the real answer.

The Lansing Autorama (6-11 p.m. Friday, 11-11 Saturday, noon-10 Sunday) could well top its Detroit cousin in terms of audience entertainment and viewing ease for several reasons:

1. There will be only about half the number of cars on display, which should allow more standing room or leakers to look and photographers to photograph.

2. Applications for car entries are being more carefully screened, according to show director Howard Carr. He says some of the less-spectacular vehicles in the Detroit show would never be accepted for the Lansing Civic Center display.

3. There are maybe 150,000 persons living in the Lansing area, compared to 2 million within an hour's drive of Detroit. Should help cut down the subway station effect.

Local Autorama sidelights:

The $20,000 custom Chevy, "Aztec," owned by young Billy Carr of West Virginia, toured campus Monday, winning new fans for the restyling sport or at least drawing a number of surprised and approving glances.

Ten Spartan coeds will compete for the title "Miss Autorama 1959" in an audience vote at the show. A list of the candidates is scheduled for release today.

May Have Tough Time

San Francisco Dons' Coach Objects to Professional Play

SAN FRANCISCO, April 24.—Coach Phil Woolpert, whose University of San Francisco Dons won the NCAA title in 1955 and 1956, says pro basketball will have a tough time if some changes aren't made.

"I like the pros and I'd like to see them come out west," he told the Northern California Basketball Writers and Newsasters Assn. "But I like them to come out and play basketball."

Woolpert, whose club is noted for their defensive ability, objects to the racing offense of the pros with little regard to the rules.

His comments followed last night's National Basketball Assn. game at the Cow Palace in which the Boston Celtics beat the Minneapolis Lakers 108-106. In overtime, Lakers President Robert Short declared there was a good possibility of a pro franchise here next year.

"I think," said Woolpert, "that if college basketball adopted the pro game it would be a loser. Now when you go out and see college basketball you seldom see the same thing as you see in the NBA."

Profs who won the NBA trophy the last three seasons, and compiling the lowest goals-against average, finished right behind Sawchuck with 66 points.

Another vote will be taken in March based on performance over the second half of the season and the players with the most combined points will be named to the All-Star teams.

Kidnap Baby Found Safe

Lisa Rose
Returned To Mother

Woman to Appear In Court Today

NEW YORK (AP)—A baby stolen newborn 10 days ago from her hospital bassinet was restored Monday to its tearful, happy mother. A vague, distraught woman who herself had borne eight children was held as the kidnaper.

The alleged kidnaper was Lisa Rose Chinchio, 43-year-old Mrs. Jean Iavarone, who is to appear in Brooklyn felony court today. She is charged with kidnapping, punishable by a maximum 20 years to life in prison.

Police said Mrs. Iavarone wanted a newborn child to pass off as her own to pressure an unidentified boy friend into marrying her. Divorce and death had shattered her two previous marriages and scattered her seven living children, the youngest three years old.

"It feels wonderful to have her in my arms," said Lisa Rose's mother, Mrs. Frances Chinchio, 66, as she cradled the baby in her left arm. The reunion took place in St. Peter's Hospital in Brooklyn, where the child was found in her apartment.

Despite the ordeal to which the Chinchio family was subjected, members expressed sympathy for the kidnaper.

Police had set up a special telephone line for tips on the kidnapper. Over this Sunday night came a report from a carefully guarded source. It led officers to Mrs. Iavarone's neat but humble Brooklyn apartment where she lived alone. It was only 14 blocks from St. Peter's hospital.

Mrs. Iavarone had to be half-carried into police headquarters for fingerprinting. She seemed especially upset by the flashing of newspaper photographers' flash bulbs.

Later, as she appeared in Brooklyn Felony Court in a long black coat, she seemed wanly. The bond hearing was recessed until today so she could secure a lawyer.

When Mrs. Iavarone was seized last night with the baby, she insisted it was hers and said she had borne it herself Jan. 2, not after blood tests, medical examinations and footprint comparisons, said Asst. Dist. Atty. Kenneth McCabe.

There is no doubt, on the basis of scientific evidence, that she took the child."

No Survivors Found

Wreckage of C124 Reached in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Wreckage of a missing giant C124 Air Force Globemaster was reached by rescuers Monday high on an Alaskan glacier. There were no survivors among the nine men aboard.

The crippled cargo plane crashed late Sunday while trying to reach the airfield at Homer, beyond the Kenai Peninsula mountain range it failed to hurdle. The wreckage was sighted by a civilian pilot in mid-morning Monday.

The Air Force said the four-engine C124 was demolished when it hit Petrot Glacier at between 3,000 and 4,000 foot level.

Helicopters lifted a rescue team to the spot shortly before noon (Alaska time). Three of the nine bodies were recovered and efforts were continued to bring out the others.

No identities were established immediately.

The big Travis AFB, Calif., Globemaster, limping across the Gulf of Alaska with two engines out, was being shepherded by two Coast Guard amphibians toward an emergency landing at Homer, the nearest landing field, when it disappeared in a cloudbank. It was losing altitude.

It had taken off at mid-day Sunday from McChord AFB, Wash., on a supply flight to Kodiak with 34,500 pounds of cargo aboard. Homer, where it was trying to put down, is northeast of Kodiak and about 125 miles southwest of here.

The big Air Force transport was the second to be lost in the same general area recently. A C54 crashed Dec. 22 on a peak across Cook Inlet from Homer, killing all 15 men aboard.
