Music Program Brings Shaw To MSU Campus

Robert Shaw, director of the famed Robert Shaw Chorus, will serve as guest conductor of the Summer Youth Music program.

More than 400 outstanding high school musicians from Michigan and surrounding states are expected to be on campus for the program which opens Sunday and runs through July 23.

The program includes training in concert band, chorus, orchestral music theory, voice, composition, conducting and other subjects.

Assisting Shaw, who is also associate director of the Cleveland Symphony orchestra, will be a staff of some 50 artists-teachers selected from the MSU faculty and other schools throughout the state and the nation.

The Youth Music program, now in its 17th year, is designed to broaden the musical understanding and increase the technical and musical ability of gifted high school students.

Participants will have opportunities to perform as individuals, in large organizations and in small ensembles, with private instruction for those who desire.

Rehearsals will be given by both faculty and students, and student groups will be featured on television and radio programs, and two large concerts.

Kesang Rinzing Tendul-La labeled India the key to Asia in an address Tuesday night for the Summer Institute on Asia.

Tendul-La, son of a Tibetan noble family, is now a businessman in India.

EDUCATED in the Western world he keeps in touch with the Tibetan situation by frequent trips to the border area. He knows the current thinking in his homeland since he is in regular contact with some of the 20,000 refugees who have fled to India.

In an interview with the State News, Tendul-La expressed deep concern over last year's Communist invasion of Tibet.

He said that Red China's occupation of Tibet gives her a strategic advantage over India. He said he feels that a Chinese attack on India is inevitable.

CHINESE LEADERSHIP maintains that war is the only way to destroy capitalism whereas Russia feels that peaceful penetration of capitalist countries is possible. This is the source of much of the friction between the two governments.

Tendul-La holds that Russia has a genuine fear of China's power. He interprets Russia's recent friendship not to Nehru as a play for Indian support and a slap in China's face. India cannot afford to have India friendly to China.

SHOULD CHINA attack India, Tendul-La says that India would not ask either Russia or the U.S. for aid, but both.

Someday Russia and the West may be allied against China, he said.

Win Honors for Technical Papers

Five of the top 10 awards for technical paper publication made by the American Society of Agricultural Engineers for 1960 have been won by Michigan State University staff members or graduates.

Announcements of these awards were made recently at the annual ASAE spring meeting at Ohio State University, Columbus.

Authors of winning papers among the first five include Assoc. Prof. Robert A. Aldrich and Prof. James S. Boyd, "Glass-Fiber Plastics in Farm Building Construction"; and Dr. J. L. Butler, who received his doctorate here in 1958, and Prof. H. P. McCully, "Factors Affecting the Peeling of Hay".

E. H. Buelow's "Air-Flow Measurement in Crop-Diers" won honorable mention and was included in the second five selections. He is an assistant professor in the Ag. Engineering department.

Campus UN Schedules Conference

Plan to Invite UN Officials in Winter

MSU United Nations is planning a three-day conference on international problems for next winter.

"We hope this will be the start of a long and continuous program," Mohammed Toussi, secretary-general of the group, said. Toussi, a native-born Iranian, is studying for a PhD in education on a grant from his government.

The Campus UN is meeting every two weeks throughout the year.

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE

will discuss significant international issues.

The first day will be devoted to registration and to group meetings of such blocks as the Communist nations, Arab, and Western.

The second day, the social, political, and economic groups, the Trusteeship Council, and the Court of Justice will formulate the resolutions to be deliberated in the General Assembly meeting the final day.

"WE WILL INVITE an authority from the United Nations to open our General Assembly meeting," Toussi said. "Another guest will address the group at a banquet."

A cosmopolitan dance and inter-cultural entertainment, sponsored by the International club, will follow the dinner.

General Assembly meetings will be held in the Kiva. The third floor of the Union building will be the center for committee meetings and caucuses. There is a possibility that the State Supreme Court will be used for the meetings of the Court of Justice.

Toussi said that sororities, fraternities, and co-ops were working closely with his group "to provide accommodations for the visitors in order to give a more congenial home atmosphere."

There are two basic differences between Campus UN and the United Nations in New York. Arthur Hodgson, General Assembly president said.

Campus UN has no security council, but a political-committee instead.

"Also," according to Hodgson, a student from Bermuda, "we will accept student delegates from countries that are not members of the United Nations. At present, our organization includes students from Nigeria and Switzerland."

THE TOTAL MEMBERSHIP of MSU United Nations, organized in September, 1959, is over 200. Between 60 and 70 nations are represented, either by their own nationals, or by Americans or Canadians who may represent other nations if approved by the credentials committee.

Any country may have a maximum of five delegates.

Campus United Nations is promoted by the Collegiate Council of the United Nations in New York, organized in 1946 to encourage interest in international problems among college students and to supply materials and information.

"Whenever we discuss a problem," Hodgson said, "we try to write the representative from that country to find out his nation's stand on the issue."

MSU Student Wins Time Prize

Michael Patton, an MSU journalism student, was recently a winner in Time magazine's 24th annual current affairs contest.

The test was given to more than 150,000 U.S. and Canadian college and high school students this year. It consisted of more than 100 questions covering such categories as sports, business, science, journalism, entertainment, religion, literature, education, and a special review section of the past decade.

Top scorers receive a certificate from Time, and have a choice of either a world globe or a book from a specially selected list.

Basic's Name to be Changed

University College Newly-given Label

By Jim Anderson

The Basic College, MSU's pioneering experiment in general education, is to be re-titled University College, effective July 1.

The new title, according to John N. Winburne, Assistant Dean of the Basic College, is there in keeping with the function and philosophy of the program.

THE BASIC COLLEGE came into existence July 1, 1944 after several months of intensive study by a committee specially appointed for the task by President John A. Hannah.

The final report submitted by this committee suggested the establishment of a "College of Basic Education" whose function would be to "provide students with a sound foundation on which to build an intelligent interest in personal, family, vocational, social, and civic problems, a better understanding of these problems, and a greater ability to cope with them."

SINCE A NUMBER of faculty members and administrative officials felt that the name suggested was somewhat cumbersome, the title was abbreviated to Basic College.

Dean Winburne listed three major reasons for the new name of University College. The name Basic College, he said, is not descriptive of the counseling and evaluation services provided by the college.

Also, students have had a tendency to confuse the philosophy underlying the course offerings of the Basic College with the introductory 100 and 200 series courses offered by other MSU colleges.

WINBURNE further asserted that the name "Basic College" is especially inadequate in describing its role in a university, which Michigan State became in 1955.

In reference to the appropriateness of the name "Basic College" the report of the Committee on the Future of the University, submitted to President Hannah in July, 1955, said:

"The name, Basic College, is perhaps no longer appropriate in the light of this college's function of providing a unique educational experience which should not be interpreted as introductory, and of the belief that general education should constitute a dimension of the entire undergraduate program."

Youth Held, Admits Rape In Lansing

By BILL KIELMAN, State News Editor

Department of Public Safety officers Charles J. Brophy and Sgt. Charles H. Anderson were instrumental in the capture of Gary Harris, 18, of 207 N. Magnolia, Lansing, who confessed Wednesday to four charges of assault.

Harris was observed driving "aimlessly around campus" early Wednesday morning, according to Public Safety Lt. Alton H. Andrews, and was stopped for defective equipment on his car.

THE TWO OFFICERS noted a resemblance to descriptions given by Lansing police describing a knife-wielding youth who had assaulted several Lansing women.

Upon questioning, Harris admitted that he had been wandering around the women's dorms, and, earlier in the night, had pulled a "nature boy" act in the Hort gardens.

After further questioning, arrangements were made with State and Lansing police to interview him Wednesday morning.

DURING THE INTERVIEW at the Department of Public Safety office, he admitted several assaults in Lansing, and was taken into custody by Lansing police, according to police.

Harris confessed to four different charges of assault with intent to rape, involving a 57-year-old woman in November, 1959; two sisters, 11 and 13, in February, 1960; a 16-year-old girl in March, and a 72-year-old woman in April, police said.

He was arraigned before Municipal Court Judge Charles Murphy, on four charges of assault with intent to rape. Bond was placed at $7,500 and scheduled examination for July 9.

Officers were unable to establish that Harris had committed any offenses in East Lansing or on the campus.

The object of the institute is to help outstanding high school students increase their knowledge and interest in Journalism, Radio, and Theatre, according to Professor William Haigh, director of the Institute.

THE INSTITUTE is broken into three two-week sessions, the first offering basic courses in writing, news-writing, feature writing, news-editing, photography, discussion and radio production.

The second and third two-week sessions will have advanced courses in these subjects besides basic courses in each and theatre.

MORE THAN 130 students are attending the first session, which will stay on for the second and third sessions. Besides doing classroom work, many students have helped the State News and other publications staffs.

Students studying wireless journalism will put out a paper of their own each two weeks, and a special newspaper will be printed and sent to each student at the end of the six-week institute.

MANY OF THE students are attending the institute on scholarships provided by newspapers, radio and TV stations, banks, business organizations and clubs.

Students taking the radio-teleproduction course will give a special program at 10:30 a.m. every day on station WMSB, under the supervision of Prof. Gordon L. Gray, of the department of radio, television and film.

PARENTS of the TV-radio students have been invited to come to attend the performance at the station.

At awards luncheon will be held at noon Friday in the union ballroom, and all students will receive graduation certificates.

Those who have shown outstanding ability will be presented special honor certificates.

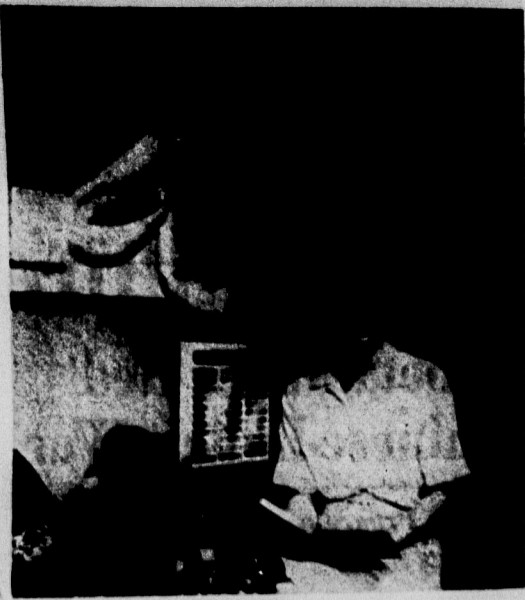

Speakers at the banquet will be Dr. Fred S. Siebert, dean of the College of Communication Arts, and Gordon A. Sabino, MSU vice-president for special programs.

Students Religiously Apathetic

Students at MSU today are generally apathetic toward religion, said a group of East Lansing clergymen who serve as religion advisors for students.

The present trend was attributed to two primary causes: Rebellion against some authority and the way of American life in general.

The natural rebellion of students, away from home against parental authority shows a failure on the part of the parents and the church in terms of religious training, said the Rev. George Jordan, minister-director of the Methodist Welfare Foundation.

He also said he believed that religion is no longer considered a vital part of American life today. Discussing the part it could play in the life of a student, he said:

"THE COLLEGE STUDENT fails to realize that religion can become the living part of all its regular life, knowledge and attitudes of life."

The Rev. Joseph Porter, director of the Christian Student Foundation, said that a student away from home and close observation of his parents takes a new kind of freedom and lets go of a lot of ties.

Most of the clergymen tended to agree with Rabbi Abraham Zeman, director of the Hillel Foundation, who said:

THE STUDENTS on campus are not too much different from the cross-section of the general population whose situation is systematic of religion in America.

He said that American people recognize the importance of Judaism-Christianity as being vital to the very structure of society, and because of this have affiliated with a faith in increasing numbers, but become less religious in the true sense of the word.

Also suggested as reasons for the religious indifference of students is the inability of the church to reach out and have the students, conformity in the universities to "freedom" on Sunday mornings and the numerous activities of the student organizations.

VIEW ORIGINATING in the natural science department created the discussions at several points.

The new student comes up against many new and confusing ideas. Science often creates conflicts in religious beliefs and pulls out," said the Rev. William Holton, pastoral advisor of Gamma Delta, Lutheran student organization.

Father Thomas McDermott, chaplain at the Catholic Student Center, said that often a student uses science as a secondary reason in place of the real problem. Most of the concern over scientific views, he said, lies not in the material but in the way it is presented.

THE REV. JOHN PORTER, Episcopal chaplain and advisor of Canterbury Club for students, expressed this view when he said:

"Natural science reflects the basic tensions of society or whether man is the center of society or not."

He added that there is an immature, narrow attitude among scientists toward Christianity.

All of the clergymen agreed that there has been little increase in religious participation in the last few years in relation to the increase of students on campus.

Mr. Holton added that the situation could change drastically in line with the world situation, since people sometimes cling to religion out of fear of the future.

DISCUSSING HOW to arouse more of an interest in religion on the part of the student, Mr. Joseph Porter said:

"It is not so much a problem of getting him to teach Sunday school or sing in the choir as it is to confront him with the workability of religion to see the relevance of what his faith teaches and how it works. This is the more vital religious stimulus."

Mr. Zeman said that immaturity is a good opportunity to develop more deeply into religious heritage to make future meaningful in actual experience.

MSU Aids Nigerian University

Michigan State will be in on the birth of a new university in a newly independent nation in West Africa.

Coinciding with the independence of Nigeria on Oct. 1 will be the opening of a new university in Nigeria in the eastern region at Nsukka.

The executive secretary, and in effect the acting head, of the new institution is a professor of education from Michigan State, Dr. Troy L. Stearns.

He is the first of a number of MSU specialists who will advise and assist the new university.

Under the sponsorship of the International Cooperation Administration, I.C.A., Michigan State is working with several universities in the Inter-University Council of Great Britain in helping the Nigerian government establish and develop its new university.

Stearns made a preliminary visit to Nigeria earlier this year and was recently back on the East Lansing campus to pave the way for other State advisors who will be going to Nigeria this summer. These include specialists in education, biological science, social science and student affairs.

A wide variety of schools is represented, from Sargent College in Boston to the University of Texas. More distant schools, such as the University of London and Delft, Netherlands, are also represented.

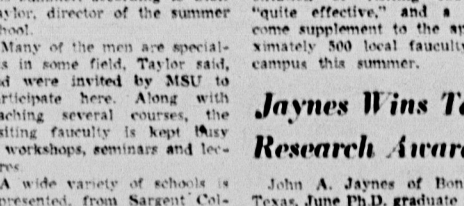

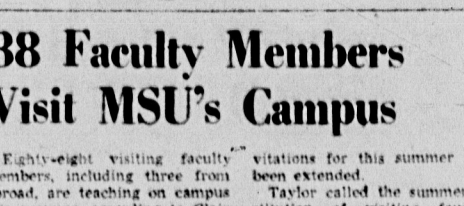

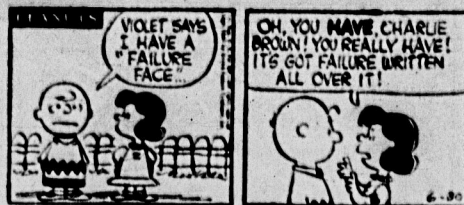

With the constant rise of summer school enrollment in the last five years, the visiting faculty ranks have grown accordingly. At present, 17 more institutions for this summer have been extended.

Taylor called the summer institution of visiting faculty "quite effective," and a welcome supplement to the approximately 500 local faculty on campus this summer.

John A. Jaynes of Bonham, Texas, June Ph.D. graduate from Michigan State, was named winner of the $100 top award in the manufacturing section for the best graduate student research paper presented at the recent American Dairy Science association annual meeting.

Presentation was made during the annual awards night banquet at Utah State University, Logan.

88 Faculty Members Visit MSU's Campus

Eighty-eight visiting faculty members, including three from abroad, are teaching on campus this summer, according to Clair Taylor, director of the summer school.

Many of the men are specialists in some field, Taylor said, and were invited by MSU to participate here. Along with teaching several courses, the visiting faculty is kept busy in workshops, seminars and lectures.

New Texts Seen Here By Teachers

More than 2,000 students and teachers visited the Michigan Bookmen's exhibit at the Kiva this week.

The exhibit of books and visual aids for elementary and secondary schools this year emphasized materials for math, science and communication skills.

Forty-six publishers and visual aids distributors took part in the exhibit, the 24th annual, Monday through Wednesday.

ON DISPLAY were textbooks, encyclopedias, 11 books, maps and globes, visual aids and special services.

Dr. Leonard Luker, of the College of Education, and coordinator for the exhibit called the showing "highly successful." "It looks like the largest turnout we ever had," he said.

ED L. BASKIN, president of the Michigan Bookmen's club said that text books are the least expensive items in school budgets. The cost of books is only 1.4 percent of the school's annual budget.

He noted also that the percentage increase in the cost of textbooks has increased less than any other item used in schools, and that the increase in the cost of publishing is not reflected in the price of textbooks.

DR. WEAVER

For the award in 1957. In 1958 he was named to the citation, the award makes a $1,000 cash award.

Weaver came to MSU as head of the dairy department in 1955. He took an assistant to head MSU's part of the four-year program in Colombia.

Weaver headed a faculty group in the Columbia government and coordinating agricultural research. Dr. Weaver was honored by Columbia for outstanding teaching and counseling.

Language Lab Meets

The second annual language laboratory in French and Spanish for talented high school students began Monday, June 27 and will end Aug. 5.

The laboratory is a joint project of the school boards of Lansing, East Lansing, and Okemos in collaboration with MSU's foreign languages department.

Studying four hours a day, students enrolled will study in a classroom setting, practice in the language laboratory, and hear lectures about French and Spanish speaking countries.

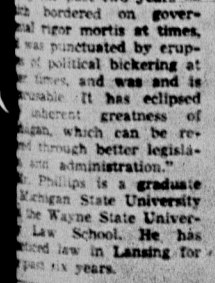

G. R. Phillips

Phillips, Lansing, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the state from this district. He is the incumbent Sen. C. Younger. Mr. Phillips said it is time for a new, more-responsible attitude to be injected into our government at the legislative and executive levels.

A state of near stagnation has existed in the capitol for the past two years — a period bordered on governmental rigor mortis at times, and punctuated by eruptions of political bickering at times, and was and is avoidable. It has eclipsed the inherent greatness of Michigan, which can be reached through better legislative administration.

Phillips is a graduate of Michigan State University and Wayne State University Law School. He has practiced law in Lansing for 16 years.

Olympians Train In MSU Pools

MSU has become a training ground for Olympic diving prospects from three nations.

Divers from the United States, Mexico and Canada are using MSU's new outdoor Olympic pool and new indoor pool to prepare for Olympic level events in their respective countries.

The divers have attracted to MSU, explains Bob Mowbray, Spartan assistant swimming coach, because the facilities are the most complete and finest in the Mid-West.

Sam Hall, Ohio State's national champion, heads the American contingent. Hall, a consumer diver, is a three-time All-American and was the captain of the 1959 U.S. Pan American swimming team.

Josefina Capilla, Mexican AAI champion and Olympic team member, is working along with Canadian Ernie Meissner, who is an AAI champion and a diver at Michigan.

Three other Ohio State swimmers join Hall. They are Glen Vetter, who placed fourth in the 1956 Olympics and who is a former Big Ten and NAAC champion; and Ron O'Brien and Frank Franke, who are rated among the top ten divers in the country.

The Eastern Interscholastic one-meter champion diver, Frank Gorman of Harvard, is part of the talented group.

A promising Spartan freshman, Ron Saria of Detroit, and Michigan co-ed Kathy Harwhig, have joined the stars in hopes of picking up new pointers.

Patrick J. Callahan, MSU graduate and former production facilities manager for MSU TV station WSMB, will take over as WSMB station manager.

The appointment is effective July 1. He will assume his new duties on July 18.

Callahan is replacing Bruce Howard who is joining the staff of the National Educational Television and Radio Center in New York City.

Howard takes on the duties of program associate in the social sciences. He has been with WSMB since 1957.

For the past year Callahan has been with the National Educational and Television Radio Center in New York City. Before that, Callahan worked six years at WSMB.

HE WORKED in many capacities at WSMB. He started out as a cameraman, turned to directing and producing, and eventually became production facilities manager, a post he held until going to New York.

While working in New York with the Educational and Television Radio Center, Callahan worked with the station's relations department of the Center. He worked with educational station managers all over the country.

Callahan is married and has two children.

Present Ag Papers

Two to Speak in England

Two MSU scientists are to present papers at an International Grassland Congress 11-12.

C. Raymond Hoglund, agricultural economist, is to present a paper on the way improved techniques of grassland farming influences its economic position, and Milo B. Tesar, farm crops researcher, is to present one on improvements in methods of establishing alfalfa stands.

Hoglund begins a leave of absence this week which includes a three and one-half month-long study of dairy and grassland farming in Northern European countries. Tesar is on a one-year leave, studying at the grassland research institute at Reading.

About 500 scientists from all major countries in which grassland farming is important, are expected to attend the congress.

The Ledges playhouse current play is "Fallen Angels," one of Noel Coward's funniest comedies.

The plot concerns Julia and Jane, best friends, both happily married for five years. Both have had brief pre-marital affairs with Maurice, a French charmer.

Maurice is now in London and has asked to see them both. Their husbands gone for a day of golf, the two women nervously await Maurice's visit. He arrives late, the husbands return unexpectedly, and everything becomes comic comedy.

Act two has one of the most hilarious drinking scenes in modern theatrical history and is played by the "Six" Players: Marie Boyle and Buzz.

The Ledges playhouse is on 31-43, Fitzgerald Park, Grand Ledge. Curtain times are 8:30 p.m. daily and 8:40 Saturday and 7:30 p.m. Sunday.

Rehearsals are held Monday through Thursday in the Choral room of the Music building from 4:30-5 p.m.

MSU Chorus Seeks Singers

The MSU Chorus is seeking singers to take part in the presentation of Brahms "Requiem" under the direction of Robert Shaw.

Dr. Henry Veld, who will prepare the chorus for Snow, already has more than 100 singers in rehearsal. He hopes to assemble a 250 voice chorus for the concert.

Shaw will be on campus the week of July 18 to participate in the first Fine Arts festival. He will conduct the performance of the "Requiem" July 21 in the Aud.

Rehearsals are held Monday through Thursday in the Choral room of the Music building from 4:30-5 p.m.

Institute in Session Executives to Discuss Organization Problems

An Institute for Organization Management is being held in Kelllogg Center June 26-July 2. Nearly 400 leaders, executives and Chamber of Commerce workers from the mid-west are participating.

Children's Health Aids Advised

School's out, but it will be starting again in three months.

If you are a parent of a child who will be starting off to school for the first time this September, you've got a task to take care of, and the sooner it is done the better.

This task involves taking your prospective kindergarten to the doctor and having him immunized against measles, diphtheria, polio, tetanus and whooping cough. If the child hasn't already had these protective shots,

Dr. Albert E. Humeis, state health commissioner, urges parents to act now. "If you wait until school is ready to open, you not only will tax your doctor's time, but you will also be taking the child to the doctor with crowded offices, crowded waiting rooms and crowded waiting lines for examinations and immunization. But if you take your child to the doctor now, you can avoid all this and have the child ready for school."

These protective immunizations are required under a law passed by the Michigan legislature in April. The law states in part:

"All child enrolling in any public or private school or denominational school for the first time shall submit a statement signed by a physician that they have been immunized against these diseases; a statement signed by one parent or guardian to the effect that the child has not been immunized because of religious convictions or other objection, or a request signed by one parent or guardian that the health department give the instructions."

Most health departments have immunization schedules. Check with one in your area and plan to take the children in during the summer.

"Don't wait until a few days before school or you're very apt to run into a line as long or longer than the usual automobile license deadline," Doctor Humeis pointed out.

If your preschool child has already had the necessary immunizations, all that will be needed is his physical examination and a statement from the doctor that he has been immunized as required.

Geophysicists Search for Oil in Michigan

A geophysical crew from the Michigan State geology department is measuring gravity and magnetic force in most of the lower peninsula this summer.

The data collected will be made public with the expectation that it will ultimately help to determine locations of Michigan oil and mineral deposits.

The most important efforts of the crew are in a belt extending from west to east across lower Michigan.

The schedule calls for the crew to be in Allegan, Ottawa, Barry and Kent counties, June 20-27; Ingham, Eaton, Clinton and Ingham counties, June 28-July 4; and Shiawassee, Livingston, Genesee, Oakland and Lapeer counties, July 5-11.

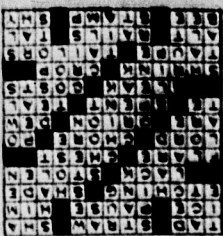

Michigan is believed to have substantial, untapped oil deposits and they are very hard to locate, said Dr. William J. Hines, MSU assistant professor of geology and director of the project.

For technical reasons, he explained, the geological structures under Michigan's surface, the great depth of oil deposits and the ice age glacial debris which covers the state are all major hindrances to oil exploration.

Aid to Research

New buildings just going into use at the MSU Kellogg Biological Station will permit greater emphasis on research. Dr. Milton E. Mueller, MSU vice-president for research development, said

June 20. Dr. Mueller, who is also dean of the School for Advanced Graduate Studies, addressed a convocation marking the opening of the summer session at the Biological Station. The facilities, he pointed out, will enable MSU scientists to do more research on a year-round basis. Dr. Walter F. Morofsky, director of the biological station, announced that the new buildings, which were built through a $600,000 gift from the Kellogg foundation, were being named in honor of deceased persons who have helped to develop the MSU Kellogg properties around Gull Lake.
