3 Fleets Searching For Craft

SAN JUAN, PUERTO RICO, (AP) — The search for the 300-foot liner, the Santa Maria, which was hijacked by 20 Cuban pirates, is being conducted by three fleets of the United States Navy.

GALVAO RADIOTOLD in a broadcast from a tugboat in the Santa Maria's wake that the ship was being towed by the tugboat.

Shipping agents said the Santa Maria carried 588 passengers and 284 crewmen when she put out of La Guaira, Venezuela, last weekend.

FROM WATERS where Blackbeard the Pirate once plied his trade under the skull and crossbones, Galvano radiated that he will put the passengers ashore safely in the first port that agrees him against a government of the ship.

Galvano said the ship was towed in the name of the international Junta of Liberals headed over by Gen. Humberto Delgado, President-elect of the Portuguese Republic fraudulently deprived of his rights by the Salazar government.

Caliber of President Elected Determines Value of Veto Bill

The President's veto power is an essential and wisely-used element of the political process on Capitol Hill. MSU, however, is not Capitol Hill.

Our student government is a training ground for future leaders. The members of AUSG are not trained statesmen, whose only job is that of government. The president of AUSG does not have a staff of experts to advise him, as does the president of the U.S.

Emotion too often dictates the results of AUSG presidential elections; they are frequently popularity contests based on extracurricular activities and social standing, rather than views on controversial issues.

LET'S QUIT BEATING around the bush. The veto resolution is not a poor idea in and of itself, but behind the various reasons given by its opponents lies the following thought: the president's veto power could be a damaging process in the hands of a poor president.

Proponents of the resolution claim that the veto power will bring the president into closer contact with Congress, and will force him to act on any measures approved by two-thirds of Congress.

Yet the situation is sad indeed if the president doesn't already have the necessary interest and wisdom to work with Congress, to rationally exchange ideas, so that Congress can produce resolutions agreeable to both branches of AUSG.

A POOR PRESIDENT doesn't work with Congress, but against Congress. If the opinions of Congress and the president are at odds on many issues, the veto power could act as a severe block to legislative action.

Even though a two-thirds majority could override vetoes, the force of the resolution would be lost in the hickering; and the legislative action, not now prompt, would be slowed even more. The friction between an incompetent president and Congress may drive the branches even farther apart and bring politics into play.

WE FEEL THAT the present president has no motives of prestige or power grabbing. Dan Riedel believes that the veto power would facilitate the student governing process. Dan will not be in office, however, when the veto would go into effect. We have in the past had AUSG presidents whose motives and capabilities were very doubtful. We may most likely have such presidents in the future.

The whole situation, in our opinion, boils down to this: good presidents do not need the veto power to increase their prestige and their relations with Congress; and a poor president will not be improved by access to a veto.

Contribute to Campus Chest

"Student Funds for Student Needs" is the slogan which Campus Chest has adopted for its 1961 drive. We join with the Chest committee in urging students to contribute to this charity, which has set its goal at $5,000.

Campus Chest, the only all-university student-sponsored charity, organizes one drive each year for the support of several worthwhile groups on campus. It contributes to the MSU Scholarship Fund, National Scholarship Service and Fund for Negro Students, Spartan Nursery, United Community Fund and the World University Service.

Because the Chest collects for all these groups at one time, students can breathe a sigh of relief that they won't be expected to donate to each separate charity throughout the year.

SINCE LAST YEAR'S returns did not measure up to the goal set by the Chest committee, a more extensive campaign involving door-to-door solicitation has been set up for this year.

This new type of solicitation has been carefully thought out by the Chest committee in order to avoid pressure on the potential contributor.

Chest representatives in each precinct and living units will distribute envelopes to all individuals living in the precinct. These envelopes will contain pertinent information about the purpose and uses of the contribution, but will not request the name of the donor. All contributions will be strictly anonymous.

THE REPRESENTATIVES will stop back at the rooms one more time to remind students of the purpose of the drive and to collect any envelopes which are ready. Students who desire may simply slip their contributions under any representative's door.

This type of solicitation seems far removed from the repeated visits and pleadings that are usually associated with door-to-door solicitation.

We hope that the Campus Chest precinct representatives will handle this drive wisely, being careful not to put pressure on individuals to contribute. For if the students are pressured to any large extent, they may build up a resistance against this worthwhile charity for years to come.

Too Many Catches

Peace Corps - Wishful Thinking?

Reprinted from the Daily Illini

President Kennedy's proposal for a youth "peace corps" may turn out to be only wishful thinking if current plans for the corps materialize.

When Kennedy first exposed the idea in the waning days of the presidential campaign, it was intended to mean that the corps would be composed of college graduates. "Training people the program must attract," this element would, after a period of training, be sent to help American goods in foreign lands.

It was assumed in many, perhaps premature, discussions that the corps would be a "catch-all" program. If that was the case, there would be a catch for everyone: for the corps, with its "no pay" and "no benefits" policy, Kennedy himself would have to lead the charge in the corps' recruitment drive.

IT APPEARS NOW that further planning by the administration has meant the program will be limited to a select group of students.

Students of parents are likely assuming the program is a nation that such a corps will not be a heavy burden on the draft-drafter. Service in the corps will not mean a loss of educational opportunity.

It is likely that the program will be a "catch-all" program for a select group of students. It is likely that the program will be a "catch-all" program for a select group of students.

As further attempts to eliminate the undesirable in the program, planners are set on the idea of paying the volunteers the same pay as that received by a private first entering the armed services. This would amount to the minimum subsistence allowance—approximately $80 per month. Presumably pay raises would come on a longevity basis as in the military services.

What's then is the incentive? Are not officials seeking a negative rather than positive attitude toward the proposed corps?

THE IDEA IS SAID to have taken on wide interest in the colleges and universities of this country. This is understandable. It would be safe to assume, however, that such conditions as those now proposed would serve to detract rather than attract more potential volunteers.

The draft exemption provision is undoubtedly the point in the program which brought the most initial response. Yet it would be foolish to assume that a college graduate would want to spend two years in a peace corps and then be subject to a possible draft for another two years. Not exempting participants from selective service seemingly excludes the very persons this type of program is attempting to attract.

Johnnie Jones, fresh with sheepskin in hand, doesn't want to gamble on losing four years of his life to neither his purposeful his mission.

It appears that a more workable plan for instituting a peace corps is wanting. The goal is there. Proving that goal will take more than just ideas—planning by the incoming administration.

Hosed in Riot

To the Editor: In The San Francisco "San Francisco" (Oct. 21) heard the records.

Mr. Williams (Jan. 13) saw the movie.

I am a graduate transfer from the University of California, did both of the above and was hosed down the long marble stairs of the San Francisco City Hall.

Why was I, ordinarily a non-leader, non-follower, "duped" by the Communist organizers? Hogwash. The week before the HUAC committee came to the Bay area, press releases announced that spectators at the hearing would be admitted on a first-come first-serve basis. Fine.

THE MORNING of the first day, perhaps fifty interested students were waiting in line quietly outside the hearing room. At the prescribed hour, a policeman informed us that "only invited guests would be admitted at this time" and as he said this, a select group of minked ladies and escorts paraded in.

On the second day a group, led and organized by the chairman of the local YMCA, arrived in SF, first to attempt to gain orderly assistance in the chamber, or, failing this, to picket. (The press release of the first day's hearings made no mention of the selected audience.)

Failing to be admitted, the group began picketing. When one singing could be heard inside the room, the police asked us to leave. When we did not, they appeared with hoses and repeated the request. When no attention was paid to them, the hoses were turned on, literally washing us down the stairs and into the street.

At no time did I, nor any of my friends, feel we had been duped by Communist agitators. We all appeared the third day, and picketed in an orderly fashion, without incident, outside the city hall.

THE COMMITTEE'S result, after three days of investigation, consisted of the "uncovering" of one man, Archie Haller, who had been an open Communist for many years.

The HUAC has given the impression that an attack on it is practically a confession of communist sympathy.

Cut Admissions

To the Editor: MSU has high prestige but the quality of the faculty members comes no where near the standard it should. Some professors here have given much to students through intellectual inspiration. We are criticizing that part of staff members who are poor examples of what such a university as MSU should want to present to its students.

These instructors lecture completely from the text, fail to hold the students' attention, and do not effectively put across to the class the material of the course. Materials are not sufficiently prepared and organized before class, and the instructors fail to say anything worth writing down for future reference.

The equipment provided for both the faculty and the students lacks quality and quantity. Have you ever been in the practice rooms of the music building? One wonders how any musician of quality can emerge from such cubicles with no ventilation, very inadequate sound-proofing, and poor and inadequate equipment. At 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon there are not enough pianos to practice on and one must resort to practicing on the decrepit monstrosities in the old practice building.

There are brilliant men in our chemistry department who must work in a laboratory which is out of date, cramped, and provides poor tools for their use. They are doing a good job but just think how much more successful they could be with the proper facilities.

The library, as new as it is, is too small and lacks a proper supply of books for a university this size.

If admissions were cut down and standards raised, the dropouts because of falling grades would diminish. If admissions were cut down there would be no need to continuously build new dorms.

The money spent for these dorms could be used to hire better faculty members, furnish better equipment for the music and chemistry departments, and also the library.

President's Veto

To the Editor: Should the president of AUSG have a veto over Student Congress? The following points seem pertinent.

Each spring the students elect the president, and in practice the election is a popularity contest. The president of AUSG is not elected because he is identified with or because he presents a definite stand on controversial issues. Therefore the president's claim that he can represent the student's interests in issues seems somewhat strange and tenuous.

The president complains that sometimes he is asked to do things by Congress, and that he should have the right to veto those measures he does not like. But right now the president of AUSG can speak on the floor of Congress for or against any measure under consideration. With his prestige and influence he could most certainly be a factor in Congress's decision.

But experience has shown that the president is not willing to advise Congress, and thus the president's alleged interest in Congress affairs appears somewhat questionable.

The argument is advanced that Congress has no concern with the veto question, but is merely deciding whether this issue should be placed before the students at spring term registration. This is a hands-off policy for those favoring the veto power, for they correctly realize that if this question were placed on the ballot, chances are ten to one it would pass. The inconvenience of registration voting will prevent all but those who have a special interest in this question from voting.

No one denies the right of the students to express their opinion on this issue, but one can object to the groups that no effort will be made to inform them prior to the spring vote.

If Student Congress were to decide this issue merely on the basis they would be shrinking from what little responsibility they have.

In order to enact the veto power two things are required: first, Student Congress must approve the veto and second, the students must approve. Students should watch Congress and their representatives to see if they are carrying out their responsibilities.

It seems fairly clear that the president of AUSG is not entitled to the veto for at least two reasons: first, he is not elected to represent the students on issues, but is a figurehead; and second, the president of AUSG has in the past, thru his failure to use the rights already at his disposal, shown no interest in the affairs of Congress.

It Seems to Me

Response on Pornography

Although this piece is being typed now, the meat or heart of the words here were written long ago. It has been in journals and newspapers the world over. I am only reiterating the thoughts of my minds than mine.

Mary, I too think college men should be responsible for what they read. I think one should. But unfortunately they are not for this reason we have laws.

Who can say a person is more qualified to drive a car at 16 than at 14? What right does someone have to decide that 21 is the legal age to drink alcoholic beverages?

THE ANSWER to these questions is your query about telling people what can read is the same. The people themselves must decide these issues.

In a democratic form of government, as ours Mary, when a law is made, it is people deciding.

You say we must have free press, agree with you. But we must also have responsible press. This is something to have forgotten about. And an atmosphere which borders on pornography, the work of a responsible press.

Where do we draw the line? It is to start with the obvious violation first, to me this trash is an obvious violation, anything and everything a moral society ever stood for.

AND ALTHOUGH you remind me of our friends in communications research, I'm certain a picture of "an undressed man in a seductive position" means the same to Dr. Berlo as it does to me or any other male.

If your argument about letting people what they please was carried to a logical, absurd conclusion we could assume you have people doing what they please also.

Can you imagine the chaos if this were allowed? Therefore I ask you, Mary, who you draw the line?

To me your cry is just an echo of a group of what I call "pseudo freedom" group of what I call "pseudo freedom". This group will protest violently if you tries to take away their movies of their literature or tells them where they call their car or what time they have to be in.

Their cause is freedom and subordination. Yet on real matters where freedom being taken away or rights are abused, group replies only with silence.

I'M GLAD MY EDITORIAL in your Mary because if you are a part of a group pure insult may be the only thing I haven't the time nor space to answer rest of your article, but let me make two points.

Maybe I am striving for a Utopian perfect society. But you are faulty in this with conformity. It isn't that at all. I am not happy with things the way they are now. I am not content to live and let I want that Utopia. If you are satisfied with the world as it is then all these words been wasted.

Mary, someday I hope you do write to me. And contrary to what you will read your book—just to see if your experience have matured your thinking.

Aides Take Oath

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense McNamara swore in three of his aides Tuesday, using the mass technical and President Kennedy for introducing his cabinet members into office.

Others of the new Pentagon secretariat nominations have been confirmed and inducted into their jobs later.

Taking the oath, in unison, were Robert McNamara, Deputy Secretary of Defense, Earl Staley, Secretary of the Army, and Eugene Tamm, Secretary of the Air Force.

McNamara, in introducing the three new members of top military officers, presented the families of the men, presented "Mr. Good Secretary of the Navy."

The words were out before McNamara, each them. Then he augurs honest confidence at his mistake. The Secretary of the -designate, still to be administered the office, is John Connally.

Among those from Congress attending the ceremony was Sen. Stuart Symington, Defense Secretary of the Air Force in the Truman administration.

McNamara, in a brief address, recalled the words Kennedy said in his inaugural speech: "The question was not what the country could do for a man but what a man can do for the country."

"These gentlemen have asked themselves the question," McNamara said. "I am proud to serve with them."

Soviet Publication Reports

Missing American Airmen May Still Be Alive in Russia

WASHINGTON, (AP)—After more than two years of uncertainty, the United States has learned from what officials described as a most unusual source that 11 American airmen, missing since November, 1958, are alive and well in the Soviet Union.

The source is a Soviet government-controlled publication which first published an article in effect first published in an East German magazine. The article reported that the Soviet Foreign Office has clarified the statements in the article but has received no response from the United States.

Officials here confirmed these reports when asked about a dispatch from Moscow, published by the New York Times, relating them.

The 11 are the missing crew members of an Air Force C-130 transport plane which went down in Armenia Sept. 2, 1958. The United States said the plane disappeared on a flight to Alaska. The Soviets returned bodies of six crew members.

disclaiming knowledge of the other 11. Moscow said the plane had crashed by accident, but the State Department said it possessed tape recordings which proved the unarmed plane was shot down by Soviet fighters.

The recordings were identified as radio exchanges between Soviet planes.

In these recordings, made public by the State Department early in 1959, the voices of the Soviet fliers could be heard spotting the American plane, organizing for the attack, and reporting the "kill."

DESPITE several U.S. representations, diplomatic notes and a personal conference between Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and U.S. Ambassador Maxwell Taylor, the Soviets insisted that they could not account for the missing 11.

Last week Orlovsky, a Soviet weekly, published a story written by an East German writer named Wolfgang Schreyer which said that the 11 parachuted to safety and were captured. The German communist article, printed originally in Neue Berliner Illustrierte, an East Berlin magazine and picked up by Orlovsky, did not say what happened to the 11 after their capture.

Officials at the State Department said that the United States has never accepted the Soviet account for the many representations made in the course of the last two years inquiring about the 11 men. It was unbelievable, those officials said, that the men had disappeared in that way without trace.

The article now is that Orlovsky is a government-controlled publication. The Soviet Foreign Office has an obligation to clarify the report published in it.

Some of the workers in Venezuela were taken from Indian airways.

22 Hour Work Day Forecast This Is The Place To Dump Radioactivity

A Massachusetts Institute of Technology professor told a group of MSU Honors College students Monday that it would not be long before they would be taking tranquilizers which would allow them to exist with only two hours of sleep a night.

Dr. Histon Smith, director of philosophy at MIT, outlined a program for the students which he called Science's New Frontier.

INCLUDED in the program is a plan to create life, mind, a good society and well-adjusted individuals by means of chemistry.

He said that through chemistry men will be able to control their mental conditions by using drugs and tranquilizers.

He said drugs will permit man to have a 22-hour day. Also included as one of the four points is a plan to increase the capacity of the use of electronic computers.

He revealed science's fourth plan to be the conditioning of man's mind to develop a personality.

HE SAID the New Frontier for Science also calls for a greater activity into the search for discovering a way to create life.

He questioned the students as to what the New Frontier for Science would mean from a humanistic view.

Most of the students agreed that it wouldn't be long before they would have a 22-hour day but objected to science trying to do this with machines to replace the human mind.

Salt, Anyone? This Is The Place To Dump Radioactivity

By RENEE GERBER State News Staff Writer

In 20 years, Michigan State University may be sitting on hundreds of gallons of radioactive wastes.

Why? Because Michigan has the largest salt reserves of any state in the Union and according to Dr. Shovel Serata, assistant professor of civil engineering, salt formations seem to be the most promising solution for the disposing of radioactive wastes.

AT PRESENT, he said, 100 million gallons of this potentially dangerous by-product of the atomic age fill stainless steel tanks buried in the ground of the United States. Tanks in which these wastes are stored are probably good for 30 or 40 years, he added.

The radioactivity of the wastes will probably remain above the safe level for at least 500 years, said Dr. Serata.

There is no way to reduce radioactivity but time. All you can do is keep the wastes away from the people, explained Dr. Serata.

Lands that are now remote and sparsely populated may seem to be good storage areas for the steel tanks that temporarily confine the wastes, but Dr. Serata pointed out that "five hundred years ago, Manhattan Island may have looked like a good dumping ground."

AN OFF-SHORE disposal practice, at the present, would be impossible, he said, because the quantity and radioactivity of the reactor waste is of such

Army Hawk Missile Displays New Speed, Skill In Tests

White Sands Missile Range, N.M. (AP)—The Army Hawk guided missile has displayed new anti-missile talents with destruction at supersonic speeds of a Corporal Missile.

The Army announced Tuesday the Hawk successfully intercepted and destroyed a Corporal missile launched from the very fringes of space over the New Mexico desert. The glowing speed of the two missiles was several times the speed of sound.

The 17-foot Hawk made its kill in a brilliant explosive flash just beneath cloud cover over the desert. Only the Hawk carried an explosive warhead during the test.

Firemen Run To See 'Steambath'

Heavy big steam, but no smoke. That's what firemen discovered Monday morning when they received a report of smoke by the railroad tracks near the stadium.

The "smoke" was steam being used to unfreeze the chute of a coal car on the tracks.

Another run was made by firemen at 9:41 p.m. to Demonstration Hall. An electric fan to a heater fan overheated, but there was no fire.

Double Provisions

More Foods Offered To Nation's Needy

WASHINGTON, (AP)—In a month or so, low income people who get free food from the Federal government will enjoy a tastier variety—including meat, eggs and other items not now in surplus.

This was announced Tuesday by Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman in line with President Kennedy's order to double the food the government is providing for the nation's needy.

At present, food being distributed includes four, corn meal, non-fat dry milk, rice, lard and butter. These are acquired under farm price support programs as surplus items.

Under Freeman's expanded plan, foods not in surplus which will be purchased and added to the distribution list will include canned pork and gravy, dried edible pea beans and dried whole egg solids.

AND THERE WERE reports that Kennedy is considering asking Congress to take another step to help the needy—to authorize quickly extra money for the unemployed.

Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg told of the President's concern about the problems of the jobless after talking with him Monday. He said Kennedy may have something to say about this at his first news conference Wednesday.

While unemployment and the needy are not in all cases related, the two areas are closely linked. Kennedy's actions in these fields are steps to carry out his campaign promise that he would move quickly to relieve the distress in areas of chronic unemployment.

FREEMAN SAID the new food purchases will add a significant amount of protein food, now scarce in what the needy get from the government.

Dag Urges Lumumba's Release

UNITED NATIONS, (AP)—UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold disclosed Tuesday he has urged Congo President Joseph Kasavubu to return deposed Premier Patrice Lumumba from Katanga Province.

He made the request in a letter last Thursday, one of five he made public.

The letters related to Lumumba's transfer a week ago from a prison in Leopoldville, Province to another in Katanga through arrangements between Kasavubu and Katanga Provincial President Moise Tshombe, foe of Lumumba.

Hammarskjold told Kasavubu that his advisory committee on the Congo strongly believed that negotiations cannot be conducted among political leaders as long as some of them are detained—notably Lumumba.

Hammarskjold also wrote Tshombe to ask "humane and fair treatment" for Lumumba. He protested in another letter to Lumumba's deputy, Antoine Gizenga, in Stanleyville, against a ban on the immigration of Europeans from Oriental Province, which Gizenga controls. He urged Gizenga to see that his troops protected innocent persons against mistreatment. Many whites have been arrested and beaten in Oriental Province.

Ag School To Honor Scholars

Top students in the College of Agriculture will be honored at 8 p.m. Thursday at the annual "Agricultural Honors program" in Anthony's main auditorium.

The program was announced by Vera Freeh, College of Agriculture coordinator of student programs.

Students from various agriculture departments will be recognized for their scholastic, leadership, creativeness, and outside activities, he said.

The top awards to be presented, Freeh said, are the scholarship awards and the agricultural activities award.

The scholarship awards will go to the two seniors with the highest all-college grade point averages, and the activity award to the student who has the most outstanding extracurricular record.

About 40 awards will be presented in the form of either plaques, money or certificates. These awards, Freeh said, are sponsored by the agricultural clubs on campus, the College of Agriculture, and the agricultural organizations around the state.

The program will also feature a talk by Dr. Justin W. Leonard, assistant deputy of Michigan's department of conservation. "Agricultural Honors Night" is sponsored by the Agricultural Council, a student organization consisting of representatives from all the clubs in the College of Agriculture.

Prominent leaders and outstanding individuals in the field of agriculture have been invited to see and meet the outstanding students, according to Freeh. The program is open to everyone at the university.

Asian Expert To Discuss Nations' Roles

Two of Asia's largest nations and their relations with the great powers will be discussed tonight by Asian expert Willard A. Hanna.

This year's second visitor from the American Universities Field Staff, Hanna finishes a week-long stay at MSU with this appearance.

Indonesia's and Japan's roles in the East-West conflict will be Hanna's subject at a meeting open to interested students and faculty at 7:30 p.m. in 22 Union. The talk is sponsored by Delta Phi Epsilon, national professional fraternity for diplomacy and international trade.

Hanna has just returned from an 18 month tour throughout Southeast Asia. He has spent more than ten years working in Indonesia, Malaya, and Singapore as a teacher, writer and administrator.

After the meeting, Delta Phi Epsilon will hold an open rush smoker for students interested in careers in international relations, trade, and related fields.

Commits 'Preposterous' Crime

Scoundrel Ship's Master 'Hawk-Faced Revolutionary'

LISBON, PORTUGAL, (AP)—Henrique Malta Galvao, Master Pro Tem of the cruise liner Santa Maria, is a hawk-faced revolutionary convicted three times of trying to overthrow Premier Antonio De Oliveira Salazar. Now he is trying again—at sea.

Premier Salazar has denounced Galvao's seizure of the liner as a preposterous crime and called for an international hunt for recovery of the ship.

GALVAO is 66, a novelist, and big game hunter who has set his sights again on Salazar after two years in exile in South America as a fugitive from an 18-year prison sentence.

He is tall and lean, with burning eyes. He is an indefatigable writer on politics, big game hunting, plays and romance. He has always had a wide circle of friends.

He is a former Captain in the Portuguese Army and a onetime supporter of Salazar but swung long ago into opposition to the Portuguese Dictatorship.

The turning point apparently came while Galvao was serving as government inspector in Angola, a Portuguese West African Colony that is a neighbor of the Congo. The government pigeon-holed his reports and never made public his findings.

IN DECEMBER, 1952, Galvao was tried with a group of other army officers and civilians on a charge of plotting against the state. He was convicted. The conviction was quashed the following year but he was thrown out of the army.

In 1958 he was tried—once publicly and later in secret—for a variety of charges which included inciting people to revolt.

That was a presidential campaign year and Galvao's candidate was Gen. Humberto Delgado, Director General of Civil Aviation who ran as an independent with the backing of liberal republicans.

Delgado and a leftist opposition candidate, Dr. Arlindo Vicente, poet and painter, were swamped in a landslide by Salazar's man Rear Adm. Americo Thomaz. Thomaz remains

MSU Grads Make a 'Hit'

Three graduates of MSU and a Florida State University graduate have formed a quartet and have made a record which currently is on top of the Florida hit parade.

The group, known as the Sonars, is a rhythm and blues group discovered by the Veeva Records president when they were singing in a Miami night club. Their present recording is "Who's That Knocking?," two more releases are scheduled in the near future.

Iris Morley, 1958; Ken Holmes, 1959, and Tom Morley, 1959, are MSU alumni; Caren McPherson is the other member of the group.

Portugal's President, Delgado charged the election was a fake. He took refuge in Portuguese-speaking Brazil.

IN GALVAO'S public trial both his wife and a girl friend were in the courtroom.

Accused of leading plans for a rebellion, Galvao testified that allegedly incriminating documents found in his apartment were notes for a play he intended to write about a plot against the state.

But he was convicted and sentenced to five years in prison. While he was serving this sentence in Lisbon, Galvao tried to escape and, in a rage hit a guard with a chair.

A SUBSEQUENT shakedown showed he was printing and distributing pamphlets both inside the prison and outside, with the complicity of sympathizers, and calling on the people to revolt.

At a secret trial in May, 1958, he was sentenced to 18 years in prison.

Two years ago he was taken from his cell to undergo medical treatment under guard at a Lisbon hospital.

He disguised himself as a male nurse, eluded the guards and fled to the Argentine Embassy for political asylum.

The government finally allowed him to take a plane for Buenos Aires, using an Argentine passport May 13, 1959.

Later he moved to Brazil, where he and Delgado have taken every opportunity to attack the Salazar administration.

Is Richard M. Nixon Really An 'Utter Dope'?

WASHINGTON, (AP)—George W. Ball, President Kennedy's nominee for Under Secretary of State for economic affairs, was accused yesterday of calling former Vice President Richard M. Nixon an "utter dope."

The interpretation of the remark was made by Sen. Bourke B. Hickenlooper, D-Iowa, in a letter to Ball in the 1960 campaign and printed in the New York Times Oct. 9.

Hickenlooper brought up the remark in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearing on the nomination.

The nominee, a Washington lawyer with an extensive political practice, got a friendly reception from Republicans as well as Democrats on the committee.

Hickenlooper offered the letter to the record but later changed his mind. He said that it seemed to be saying Nixon was an "utter dope" in his experience and an "utter dope" in international affairs.

Ball noted that he had signed a letter with Thomas K. Finley, a New York Secretary of State

Nuclear Weapons Safe Strategic Air Command Jet Bomber Crashes

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)—A $3 million Air Force jet bomber, having difficulty in descent to return to its base from a night mission, crashed in flames here early Tuesday.

Three of its eight crew members, the A-1 Force and a flight instructor, were killed. The A-1 Force carried nuclear weapons but did not detonate.

Mr. Walter F. Tulloch, 45, commander of the B-52G, the largest of plane operators of the A-1 Force, planned for a flight to an emergency landing. He had the base the ship had been airborne several hours, having emergency difficulties.

One of the unarmored nuclear weapons was dropped safely by the plane. Then five of the seven parachuted. The rest of the plane fell into flames and exploded on a plowed field. It was a total wreckage over two miles separated by a one mile road.

The Air Force said the unarmored nuclear weapons were removed from the wreckage. A spokesman said there was no danger of a nuclear explosion and that the wreckage of any radioactive material would be removed.

Two bodies were found in the wreckage. The wreckage was in a field near the base. The wreckage was found in a field near the base.

Landing Gear Collapses, No One Hurt

PITTSBURGH, (AP)—The landing gear of a Capital Airlines airliner collapsed today at the Greater Pittsburgh Airport.

None of the 44 passengers and crew members aboard were injured. Damage to the plane also was reported.

A spokesman said the plane had collapsed half of its landing gear. The plane skidded on the ground before coming to a stop.

The plane, flight no. 30, originated in Minneapolis and was en route to New York City.

Jackie Begins Surveying White House

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy surveyed many of the rooms in the White House Tuesday with a decorator and several fine arts advisers.

The survey was the first of a series of tours of the White House. Mrs. Kennedy is planning to redecorate the White House.

The survey was conducted by Mrs. Kennedy, with the help of decorator Pierre Salinger and several fine arts advisers. They looked at the arrangement of furniture and accessories.

On a survey tour, the first lady was accompanied by her decorator, Mrs. Henry Parish II from New York City, and the chairman of the Commission on Fine Arts, David E. Finley. The commission advises government officials on art.

Also on the tour were William Walton, an artist friend of the Kennedys, and John Walker, director of the National Gallery of Art.

Finley said present plans are to keep the present arrangement of the White House. The plan is to change the furniture and accessories.

Engineers Hear Speakers Tonight

The American Institute of Electrical Engineering and the Institute of Radio Engineering will sponsor a program, "After Graduation, then what?" in room 402 in the Electrical Engineering building tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The speakers, R. E. Albrecht, from Consumers Power; J. M. Waters, from Commonwealth Associates; and A. J. Hoffmeister from Westinghouse will speak upon opportunities and advancement in the fields of consulting and sales in electric utilities. A panel discussion will follow the speeches.

A full grown electric eel can discharge up to 600 volts of electricity. It can produce electricity for long periods without tiring.

Farmers Disappearing? New Farm Census May Be Misleading

A study of a recent agricultural census shows that farmers are disappearing from the American scene.

However, this decline is not as sharp as assumed. Agricultural economists at MSU point out that past census counts have been based on broad definitions, which include non-business units.

These units have included small acreage of farm land and crops which has been too small to represent an important source of employment or income.

Most units with sales of less than $2,500 a year fit this definition, as they provide only a few weeks' full-time employment and a small amount of net income.

Economists emphasize that the census definition of a "commercial" farm changed drastically between 1954 and 1959, because comparisons between reported "commercial" farm numbers have since become meaningless. Trends in the numbers of "type" farms, such as "dairy," "poultry" etc., that are based on a distribution of "commercial" farms, are also subject to meaningless interpretation.

The change in such census definitions can provide some misleading trends.

Plan Frequent Cabinet News Conferences

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The White House predicted Tuesday that members of President Kennedy's Cabinet will hold news conferences far more frequently than cabinet officers did in the Eisenhower Administration.

Pierre Salinger, Kennedy Press Secretary, stated that the new Presidential or Cabinet news conferences will be held at specifically regular intervals, say once a week.

Part of the discussion at Salinger's news conference dealt with whether the new administration is attempting to tighten up the distribution of news. Salinger said this is not the intention.

He added that he is attempting to coordinate the distribution of news with a view to providing more, not less.

The Press Secretary declared that he already has held one meeting with the key information officials of the various government agencies.

He said the consensus of the group was that Cabinet Officers "should make themselves available to the press on a fairly regular basis."

The electric eel may attain nine feet in length and the thickness of a man's leg. The rear four-fifths of its body is made up of the electric generating cells.

Spartans Dumped by Cophers

Lose 89-70, To Big 10 Weak Sister

Michigan State's long cold pursuit of the Big Ten title ended Tuesday night as the Spartans were dumped by the Gophers in a 89-70 victory.

Michigan State's long cold pursuit of the Big Ten title ended Tuesday night as the Spartans were dumped by the Gophers in a 89-70 victory.

The Spartans jumped off to a 20-point lead with but ten minutes left in the contest, 32-12. Michigan State picked up a 10-point lead in the last ten minutes of Saturday's game.

The Spartans then managed to keep with the Gophers for the remainder of the period.

The Spartans seemed to regain their early season poise, showing little in the way of passing, rebounding and scoring. On the boards, Minnesota had complete control, grabbing 41 rebounds to 17 for State in the second half. State managed to pull within 14 points at one point with its full-court press, but Minnesota then pulled away with a breakaway shot and two lay-ups.

Hill had a total of 23 points for the night. Schwartz scored 24 in the losing cause.

State is now solidly in ninth place in the conference, with only Michigan keeping the Spartans out of the cellar. Minnesota has won two of five conference games.

Dems to Aid JFK In Job Appointments

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The White House and the Democratic national committee will share the burden of clearing names for thousands of federal jobs under a patronage policy worked out by the new administration.

Samuel C. Brightman, deputy chairman of the national committee, said Tuesday that the White House will handle appointments of ambassadors and members of the federal regulatory agencies.

The national committee,

Brightman added, will clear appointments of federal judges, U.S. attorneys and marshals. They still will be subject to White House approval.

The policy was worked out by leaders in the Kennedy administration and John M. Bailey, the new Democratic national chairman.

Bailey will work closely with Lawrence O'Brien, President Kennedy's special assistant for personnel, in the patronage field.

Appointments to federal regulatory agencies will be handled through the office of James M. Landis.
