

Civil Liberties: Do Students Have Any?

By MARY BASING
State News Staff Writer
First in a series.

When a MSU student crosses Grand River ave. does he forfeit his civil liberties? Exactly what are the legal functions of the university with regard to the political, social and moral activities of students? Is it right for the university to keep extensive political files on its students? Is it right for the university to photograph student demonstrators, regardless of the nature of the demonstration, and file these pictures? Is this university right to refer to these files while answering inquiries of prospective employers? Does the university have the right to ask a student to inform on students and faculty? IS IT RIGHT FOR THIS university to engineer student elections? Further, is the administration of this university to concern itself in any way, other than reporting the grade point of candidates, with campus elections? On May 17, 1960, from 12 to 2 p.m. the MSU chapter of the NAACP picketed the Kresge store with the avowed purpose of protesting segregated lunch room practices in southern branches of the Kresge chain. Among the newsmen and students taking pictures was Richard A. Atkins, a police officer of the department of public safety, who was identified by a number of faculty and student pickets. At that time Atkins was not in uniform but was wearing civilian clothes. When telephoned about 3 p.m. at the department of public safety by Robert Repas, assistant professor of labor and industrial relations and one of the pickets, and asked if he had been taking individual photographs of the pickets, Atkins said he had not been. At about 11:20 a.m. May 13, Repas confronted Atkins in person at the police quonset and asked him two questions: 1. Had Atkins taken the photos as part of his duties as a member of the campus police, and 2. What use was to be made of these pictures? Again denying that he had taken photographs, Atkins, this time in uniform, refused to answer either of Repas' questions saying, according to Repas, that he was unwilling to discuss what he termed "my official business."

IN A LETTER to Provost Paul Miller, May 23, 1960, six faculty members reported, with a detailed record of Repas' conversations with Atkins, the incident and raised seven questions that they said they felt were in the interests of the university as well as the individuals concerned. The faculty were: Charles P. Larrowe, associate professor of economics and labor and industrial relations, Carl Brehm and Andrew F. Brimmer, assistant professors of economics, John P. Henderson, associate professor of economics, Roger Wescott, associate professor of social science and English, and Repas. Among the questions raised by these men in their letter to the Provost were: Is the department of public safety willing to turn over the negatives and all prints to the individuals photographed on the picket line? Does this department keep files on faculty and students which contain information about activities other than violations of university regulations? What are the precise dimensions of the campus police's jurisdiction concerning off-campus, as well as on-campus, activities of students and faculty and what are their specific procedures to surveillance of political activities of students or faculty? In the following weeks, Repas and Larrowe saw Lt. Steve Naert, in charge of the plain clothes division of the East Lansing police, Arthur Brandstatter, director of police administration, and Richard O. Bernitt, director of public safety. THEY ALSO RECEIVED a letter on June 3, from President John Hannah saying that the university has a "continuing relationship with the East Lansing police department to the effect that in cases of emergency or anticipated emergencies the two police departments will cooperate with each other." This was substantiated by Naert and Brandstatter. Hannah further explained that the East Lansing police had requested that the university provide two plain clothes officers for the May 17 demonstration. Bernitt explained in a letter to Hannah, June 1, that the East Lansing police asked for additional men "because of potential retaliatory activity by a local group known as J.O.L.T." In his letter to the six faculty men, Hannah said that he was informed that J.O.L.T. was a group "with some of the basic precepts as the old K.K.K." According to Hannah, the counter demonstration to the picketing did not materialize and "under the circumstances additional police were not actually needed." Concerning the questions that the faculty had raised in their letter to Miller, Hannah said that the pictures were in the hands of the East Lansing police.

"The department of public safety does not keep files on faculty or students having to do with activities other than violations of university ordinances," Hannah wrote. However in his letter to Hannah, Bernitt said: "OUR DEPARTMENT does maintain reports of activities beyond a simple violation of university regulations because we are also charged with the responsibility of enforcing university ordinances and state statutes which occur within the jurisdiction of MSU property in the East Lansing area." Both Hannah and Bernitt wrote that the campus police has no interest in the political activities of faculty except when they are in violation of the university ordinances or state laws. Bernitt included students as well as faculty members in this last sentence. Hannah did not. In their meeting with Naert, Repas and Larrowe said he said that the East Lansing police have a policy of keeping a photographer standing by in case violence breaks out during a demonstration. However, both Repas and Larrowe claim that Naert at that time made it clear to them that Atkins had been instructed specifically not to take pictures unless this anticipated violence did occur.

Task Force Organized Seek National Belief

To attack and solve the problem of adequately defining our national ideology—and to build from this ideology a set of long-run national objectives. This is the stated purpose of the Task Force, a non-partisan group which met Wednesday night in the Union.

The group was composed of interested community leaders, faculty members and students.

COORDINATORS for the Task Force are Donald W. Riegle, Jr., Flint graduate student in accounting and financial administration; and John D. Lyons, Boston, Mass., a graduate student in hotel administration.

According to Riegle and Lyons, the over-riding problem in America today is that the United States suffers from a lack of consistent direction. This lack of direction, they said, is attributable to an absence of clearly defined long-run goals and a lack of recognized philosophical ideology.

Following an introduction to the objectives of the Task Force, the 50 people present formed several small discussion groups. After an hour of discussion, each group presented its conclusions and ideas to the meeting as a whole.

One group reported that the United States cannot struggle against an ideology like that of communism with guns, but it must be a stronger ideology—one based on the existence of God.

"OTHER COUNTRIES must be helped to reach a position where they are able to choose an ideology, not forced to accept just one," said the first group leader.

Another group stated that the United States must have respect for what it has done.

"Now that our democratic form of government has been attained, we can, through the same working system, continue to make strides.

"The people of the United States should be confident, but their minds should be open to further change."

"THE INTEGRITY of the individual is based on a belief in God. People are willing to die for something if they believe there is a life after death. The founding fathers had a belief in religion."

The responsibilities of Americans were also discussed. One group reported that it felt that Americans are not internationally oriented.

"The United States must assume a personal responsibility toward other countries. Americans must give strength to countries who need it now.

"We must stop being an isolationist country. Students in foreign nations are extremely active politically. We lack national spirit. This lack comes from an inability to find an-

Flappers Compete Today

A Charleston contest and comedy diving exhibitions, special stunts in a Roaring 20's vein, today preview Water Carnival, scheduled for next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Charleston contest will be on the facade behind Campbell's Suburban Shop. It begins at 1:30 p.m. and will last until late afternoon. Anyone may enter.

Four couples will be chosen to dance in the finals, scheduled for the intermission of the first Water Carnival show June 1. All four couples will receive free tickets to the show and the winning couple will be awarded a special prize.

COMEDY DIVING exhibitions at the men's IM outdoor pool, including clowns garbed in flapper-era bathing suits, are scheduled for 3 p.m. today.

Bleachers have been erected along the banks of the Red Cedar across from Shaw hall, and workmen are currently installing an underwater pulley to handle the floats for the Roaring 20's show.

Float construction begins Monday on the river banks. All university living units, sorority and fraternity houses, and co-ops will enter floats carrying out the theme of this year's carnival.

Assembled in the House chambers of the state Capital building, AUSG Congress representatives listen to Tom Bissell, Jackson sophomore, debate the session's stand on the state legislature's appropriation for education.

Request Review of Funds

By DUDLEY MAYNARD
State News Staff Writer.

Student Congress passed a resolution Wednesday putting it on record as strongly opposing the recent, "crippling, tight-fisted appropriation policy of our state legislature."

Attacking the recent appropriations on the grounds that to be neglectful of education is a deplorable situation at any time, but particularly when higher education is a necessity for the progress, enlightenment and defense of our nation, Congress called for reconsideration of the appropriations.

The resolution has the effect of urging the legislature to reconsider its appropriations on two "important unchallengeable" considerations. They are:

1. A TRAGIC loss of human resources at a critical time in our history will result from their present appropriations, and
2. Education must be a primary consideration if we are to have an enlightened and progressive nation.

The legislature reconvenes on June 8.

One section of the resolution introduced by James Wetzel, Owosso senior, and Dick Winters, Lansing sophomore, called the legislature's action "a deplorable and politically oriented blow to higher education."

The wording of this section was considered by many to be too strong. An amendment was submitted twice by Tom Bissell, Jackson sophomore, and voted on three times before it changed the resolution's wording to, "a serious blow . . ."

Copies of the resolution will be sent to Gov. John B. Swainson, Lynn M. Bartlett, state legislators of the House and Senate, John A. Hannah, president of MSU, and the Board of Trustees.

A RESOLUTION to hold a fall referendum on graduate student representation in student government was also passed by Congress.

If the fall vote is favorable to graduate representation they will be given seats in Congress and pay the student tax of 25 cents now paid only by undergraduate students.

Both graduates and undergraduate students will vote in the referendum which could change the AUSG constitution. Congress was forced to adjourn earlier than usual because of a time limit on the use of the House chambers. Among legislation not acted on was a resolution to urge the Board of Trustees to reconsider a compulsory fee to pay for publication of the State News next year.

27 Freedom Riders Jailed

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Two buses carrying 27 "freedom riders"—both whites and Negroes—rolled into Mississippi's capital city Wednesday and all landed in jail.

City policemen who ringed the city's bus terminal—some of them with police dogs on leashes—arrested both groups when they strolled into waiting rooms reserved for whites.

Charges against the "freedom riders," whose trip started in Montgomery, Ala., included breach of peace, disobeying an officer and attempting to incite a riot. Bond for each of the "freedom riders" was set at $500 on each charge, but none made the bail immediately.

The pattern for arrests was the same in both cases. Officers repeatedly ordered the "freedom riders" to leave, but the order was ignored.

POLICE hustled them into a waiting patrol wagon and sped them to jail.

There was one white person in each of the contingents aboard the two buses.

Jackson Police Chief W. D. Rayfield said the "freedom riders" came to Jackson to violate city and state laws and

'Kismet' Begins Tonight

"Kismet," the musical comedy about life against an Arabian Nights setting of old Baghdad will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight through Saturday by the University Theatre.

Tickets are still available at the Auditorium box office from 12:30 to 5 p.m. today and Friday or by phoning the box office at extension 2920. They may also be purchased at Arbaugh's in Lansing or at the Union ticket office.

For past shows like "Harvey" and "Man and Superman" no props were required which couldn't be found in almost any store.

For "Kismet," ordinary props have been magically transformed into such exotic elements as an Oriental bathing fountain, litters on which are to be borne the beauties of the caliph's court, a bangle tree, hookah pipes, glazed wine jugs, accoutrements for an Eastern bazaar, and thrones for a caliph and wizar.

Ordinary students will become the mystical exotic dancers of the Arabian nights and the other characters represented in "Kismet."

He said it would be "wise for those traveling through these two states (Alabama and Mississippi) to delay their trips until the present state of confusion and danger has passed and an atmosphere of reason and normalcy has been restored."

Titan Firing Is Successful

CAPE CANAVERAL (AP)—The Air Force successfully fired a Titan 5,000 miles Tuesday night and moved the ocean-spanning rocket a notch closer to operational status.

The huge missile, 98 feet tall and weighing 125 tons on lift-off, blazed smoothly away from this test center and etched a fiery path in the sky as it streaked to a target in the South Atlantic.

Officials reported the missile performed as planned on the 30-minute test flight.

THE ROCKET—contained nearly all components of the operational design, with only a few reinforcements to be added in the next few flights.

Within a few weeks, Air Force troops are scheduled to fire a Titan from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif. If the flight is successful, the defense department probably will declare the-weapon operational.

This would give the United States two intercontinental range ballistic missiles. About two dozen operational Atlases are on station in California, Wyoming and Nebraska.

Secretary Breslin Pits Wits With Legislature, Budget

By JESS MAXWELL
State News Feature Editor

Secretary of the University Jack Breslin leaned back in his chair against an Oriental rug hanging on the wall.

"It's not always easy getting the needed funds from the legislature," he said, "but it is imperative that our annual legislative appropriations keep pace with the total university growth. It's my job to see that this happens."

Breslin, as secretary, is the liaison between the university and the legislature and acts as the contact for both parties.

IT IS HIS job to interpret the annual university budget, requests to the legislature, and to handle the touchy public relations problems between the university and the legislature. "Basically, I think legislators are fair-minded, honest people," Breslin said. "They are doing the best they can with the dollars and information available."

Breslin, a tall, personable man with a keen sense of humor, replaced James W. Miller as secretary February 16. Miller is now president of Western Michigan University.

Besides handling university legislative work, Breslin is secretary of the board of trustees. His office is also responsible for the personnel department, the inventory department, the supervising architect, retirement records, and health records.

THE SECRETARY'S office is also responsible for setting up the university's programs on building construction.

"We have to establish building programs and needs in advance, before appropriations are allotted," Breslin said.

"We now have a $120 million five-year building program submitted to the legislature—including new forestry and conservation buildings, a new chemistry building, communication arts building, a new administration building, and additional home economics facilities, he said.

The chemistry building is Breslin's number one priority.

"CHEMISTRY conditions are chaotic," he said. "We hope to put a new building up as soon as possible."

Breslin is a native of the Cereal City—Battle Creek. He was an employee of Kellogg's for three years.

A graduate of MSU, Breslin earned a B.S. in physical education in 1946. He received a master's degree in counseling and guidance in 1956 from the university.

A three-sport letterman at the university, Breslin played football, basketball and baseball.

IN HIS junior year, he received the Governor's Award as the football team's most valuable player, and was captain of the baseball team in his senior year.

Breslin played in two East-West Shrine football games and starred on the Chicago All-Stars team against the Pros in 1946.

BRESLIN started his working career with the university as assistant director of alumni relations in 1950.

He was director of placement in 1953 and was appointed assistant to the vice president for off-campus education in 1958.

Breslin served as assistant to the president for two years before being appointed secretary of the university.

He is a member of the Lansing Rotary Club and is a trustee of the Okemos Board of Education.

Book Review

Industry, Labor, Community Tells Labor Facts of Life

"Industry, Labor and Community," William H. Form and Delbert C. Miller, Harper and Brothers, New York, 1960.

The influence exerted by business and organized labor on community policy formulation are felt not only in government, but are extended to all other social institutions—the family, school, church, welfare, and mass communications agencies.

They are manifest in the many roles simultaneously played by the people within their communities. Citizens are at the same time, workers, husbands, fathers, taxpayers, union members, consumers, worshippers, members of the PTA and other organizations.

The interdependence of management, unions and the community rests on the particular organization of these roles so that the actors may play their parts without the help of a director or a written script.

AUTHOR William Form, professor of sociology and associate director of the Labor and Industrial Relations Center at the university, and co-author Delbert Miller, professor of sociology at Indiana University, explain why persons interested in community action—social workers, teachers, ministers, government workers and women's groups, usually find their efforts facilitated or restricted by business and labor groups.

The authors suggest there is a trigger effect that originates with the industrial composition of the community. The industrial composition shapes the community's occupational structure, which, in turn, influences the income and educational levels. These then affect many other community variables including health, education, housing, and cultural attainments.

Business groups are highly concerned about government and politics because government is the only institution which can seriously challenge the business operations.

Prior to 1850 government did not interfere with business operations. Today, however, governmental agencies furnish necessary services such as water, gas, sewage, employment bureaus, education facilities, and transportation services. Further, government regulates internal plant conditions affecting health, safety, employment, cafeteria services, wages and hours, and determines such external influences as taxes, building ordinances, licenses, parking, zoning and controls nuisances of smoke and noise.

United Klans May Be Guilty Of Violation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Rep. Charles S. Joelson, D-N.J., said Tuesday night the United Klans of America may be violating federal laws by telling prospective donors that contributions are tax deductible.

Joelson said he had obtained copies of letters sent out by C.F. Craig of Atlanta, Ga., which asked for donations and stated that such donations could be deducted from the donor's income tax. He said Craig was listed as an official of the United Klans.

The New Jersey congressman said he sent copies of the letter to the internal revenue service and asked for a ruling. He said, "I do not see how an organization which is at least an offshoot of the Ku Klux Klan - an organization declared subversive by the Attorney General - could claim that donations it receives are tax deductible."

Joelson said if the contributions are not deductible, the organization may be guilty of using the mails to defraud. He said the United Klans also may be violating the law in giving out wrong tax information.

Civil Rights

When they confronted Brandstatter and Bernitt with the question of why Atkins had taken pictures when there was no violence, Larowe and Repas found that the campus police disagreed with what Naert had said.

WHEN INTERVIEWED recently, Naert did not seem to remember what Atkins' instructions were.

Though the six faculty men and several students claim that Atkins took at least 30 pictures during the hour and a half demonstration, many of them mug shots, Larowe and Repas saw only 12 pictures that Naert said were returned to the East Lansing police.

During the talk with the campus police, Repas asked Brandstatter if his department would take pictures of a peaceful demonstration on campus. Brandstatter said yes, that they would use the pictures for identification purposes.

Repas asked if the pictures would be destroyed if no incident occurred and Brandstatter said:

"NO WE'D KEEP them for our records."

"The principal job of the university is to develop inquiring minds," Larowe said in an interview. "When we first approached Miller, this was our main objection to this whole procedure: photographing demonstrators and keeping political files, even the threat of such things, discourages students from engaging in activities that will help achieve the university's major goal."

Larowe and Repas said that they found Miller more sympathetic to this idea than Brandstatter, who did not see demonstrations as a part of the educational process.

Apparently somebody still doesn't: on Feb. 22, the State News reported that during the Lumumba demonstration a man in civilian clothes, with a two-way radio blasting away in his car, photographed demonstrators as they crossed in front of the Brody group.

(Next: A student tells how the administration referred to their political files on him when answering a prospective employer.)

U of M's Freehan Wins Batting Title

Bill Freehan of the University of Michigan captured the 1961 Big Ten batting crown with a .585 average, according to final conference records.

In leading the Wolverines to the conference title, Freehan collected the most hits, 24, and was high in runs-batted-in with 18. The all conference catcher set a new Big Ten batting mark in his final two conference games at Illinois Saturday.

Bart Kaufman of Indiana placed second among the league leaders with a .452 mark, followed by Dave Fritz of Minnesota with .429, Bill Elyea of Indiana and Bob Klein of Ohio State, both tied at .426. Bruce Evans of Minnesota finished fifth at .391.

EVANS also registered the most runs, 16, while Elyea and Max Bailey shared top honors in triples with three apiece.

Fritz captured the home run crown with five and also led the league in total bases with 40.

Jerry Renner of Illinois stole the most bases, nine, one more than Klein pilfered. Indiana's Bob Reinhardt and Minnesota's Cal Folloff were tops in doubles with five.

In the pitching department, three hurlers possessed the best won-lost record (4-0). They were Doug Mills and Ron Johnson of Illinois and Paul Deem of Indiana.

Ron Reifert of Iowa completed the most games, five. Jim Garbett allowed the most walks, 32. However, the Northwestern hurler was the kingpin in strikeouts with 39.

MICHIGAN STATE finished fifth in the standings. The Spartans also finished fifth in the league in fielding while a team batting average of .256 captured fourth place for them.

Tom Riley paced MSU in batting. The right-hand hitting outfielder finished thirteenth in the final standings. He played in 12 games and led the Spartans in batting with a .357 league mark.

Riley was followed by Ron Henderson and Bill Schullich as MSU's top batters in league play.

Int'l Club Grants Awards

The International Club's newly-initiated sports competition culminated in the awarding of the trophies to the victors at the recent International Festival.

The program was initiated to enable foreign students to take advantage of the MSU sports facilities. The Club hopes to make the competition an annual affair, participating in the intramural competition and in matches with International Clubs from other universities.

This year's award went to the Indian students, table tennis and badminton; the West Indies, tennis and soccer; the Iranian students, volleyball; and the Canadian students, paddle ball. The general sports award, for greatest participation, went to West Indies.

C. A. SMITH (left), captain of MSU's golf team paced the Spartans to a third place finish in the Big Ten Tournament. He shot a four round total of 305 to take top honors. Gene Hunt tied Buddy Badger for second place with a score of 307.

Coach Disappointed MSU Places Third In Golf Tourney

By ED COLTAR
State News Sports Writer

Coach Jack Botzmann was disappointed with the Spartan golfers showing in the Big Ten tournament at Bloomington, Ind. last weekend.

"No one played as good as I thought they should," said Botzmann. He felt that each man should have shot five to ten strokes better than he did. Even team captain, C. A. Smith, who was low man for MSU with a 72 hole total of 305, should have done better. Smith placed third last year but this year he was six strokes higher and had to settle for sixth place.

"OUR BIG trouble was we pressed ourselves out of it," said Botzmann. At the start of the final round MSU was only three strokes behind Ohio State, (tournament champion), 1140-1143 and the Spartans were 12 strokes ahead of Minn., who placed second.

"We tried too hard," said Botzmann and that caused us to make mistakes. He said most of the mistakes came around the green, poor pitching and putting.

Botzmann said that being 12 strokes behind the leaders actually helped Minnesota, one of the pre-tournament favorites.

They figured they were out of the running and this took the pressure off them. Consequently they shot their best round of the tournament and finished second, two strokes ahead of the Spartans.

THE FINAL standings in Big Ten golf look like this: Ohio State 1527, Minn. 1536, MSU 1538, Purdue 1544, Indiana 1555, Iowa 1565, Michigan 1574 Northwestern 1578, Wisconsin 1597 and Illinois 1636.

The Spartan golfers lined up this way: C. A. Smith 305, Bud Badger 307, Gene Hunt 307, Gary Barrett 309 and Tad Schmidt 310. Marty Kleva was the sixth man but only the best five scores figure in the team total.

Elliot Invited To Moscow

CAMBRIDGE, England, (AP)—Herb Elliott, Australia's world record miler, turned down an invitation Wednesday to run in Moscow.

"It is extremely kind of the Russians to express such an interest in me," Elliott said. "But I must spend some time with my family."

The Russians wanted Elliott for an international meet planned for July 1. This is just after the end of term at Cambridge University, where Elliott is studying for a science degree.

"I have never raced in Moscow, and I sincerely hope the opportunity will come if I am asked again," Elliott said.

9 Colleges Involved Iowa Involved In Basketball Probe

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP)—Forest Evashevski, athletic director at the University of Iowa, said Wednesday the announcement that a Hawkeye freshman was involved in the basketball scandal came as a surprise.

"I just don't know anything about it, and I can't really comment on the matter until I get more of the details," Evashevski said.

He said that when Cornelius (Connie) Hawkins, 19, dropped out of school about two weeks ago, Iowa officials thought it was because of low grades and lack of money.

Hawkins was named Wednesday by New York Dist. Atty. Frank S. Hogan as one of the intermediaries between Joseph Hacken of New York and two players in the New York area.

Hogan named David Budin, a physical education teacher at a Brooklyn junior high school, as a co-conspirator of Hacken's. He said Budin was Hacken's partner player. The D.A. said Budin has not been indicted but that his activities still are under extensive investigation.

Budin was arrested in Lansing, Michigan, last September 4 in connection with an attempt to fix the Michigan-Oregon football game. Hogan said there was insufficient evidence to hold Budin on a bribery charge and he was held on a charge of false registration in a motel. He was convicted and fined $100, Hogan said.

Hogan said Hacken offered Crawford $1,000, during the past season. He said Crawford met with Hacken and Budin and two Seton Hall players, Art Hicks and Henry Gunther. The two players attempted to help persuade Crawford. Crawford, however, turned down the bribe offer although he failed to report it to anyone, Hogan said.

Hicks and Gunther were named by Hogan last March 17 as accepting bribe offers. Hogan said Hawkins acted as an intermediary in recruiting college players for bribes. Sharm Scherzmann, Iowa basketball coach, was not immediately available for comment.

"I talked to Sharm when Hawkins left school," Evashevski said. "Sharm told me that Hawkins was low academically and also had financial problems."

"Hawkins wasn't eligible for a scholarship because of low high school grades and along with working and being a poor student, he just couldn't crack it here," Evashevski said.

Hawkins had been considered a sure starter for the Hawkeyes next season and was impressive in freshman competition last winter. He often put on halftime displays of ball handling and dribbling.

He was a standout player in high school in Brooklyn, where he reportedly has gone since he left the campus.

He is the first player from a Big Ten school ever to be implicated in the basketball scandals. The announcement that he was involved came only a few days after Big Ten commissioner-elect Bill Reed had said that the conference never had had any reason to suspect Big Ten players of point-shaving or involvement in the scandals.

Reed said the conference employed a special service to determine whether there were any large betting fluctuations on Big Ten games.

Charles Finley, owner of the Kansas City Athletics, has promised a bonus to every member of the team if the A's finish in the first division.

Michigan State's track and cross country captain Billy Reynolds has the highest scholastic average for a 1961 male graduate in MSU's college of business and public service.

State Second In Total Sports

Michigan State finished second to the University of Michigan in an unofficial compilation of the 11 sports in which the Big Ten competes.

Based on a ten-point scoring system from first to tenth place, Michigan State finished second with 75 points. That is all.

U. S. Companies Seek Graduates For Foreign Trade Careers

U. S. foreign trade is booming and so is the demand for college graduates trained in that field, according to international trade specialists at The American Institute for Foreign Trade.

The world-famous post-graduate school in Phoenix, Arizona, for the training of young college graduates genuinely interested in a career overseas with U.S. business or government.

R. S. Roberts, vice president of The American Institute and widely-known foreign trade authority, who last year completed 11 years in Brazil as a Sears of Brazil executive, as the originator of the first supermarket chain in Brazil, and finally as a consultant to U.S. foreign and Brazilian firms, said that U.S. international businesses had invested $22 billion overseas as of last year, representing a 17.2% average increase per year.

He placed the earnings from these foreign investments at $3 billion, 700 million. U.S. foreign sales totaled $64 billion, with exports at $21 billion and sales by U.S. foreign subsidiaries at $43 billion of the total.

Roberts, a 1948 graduate of the Institute, applauded the major role played by the 3,000 graduates of this 15-year-old school in the meteoric rise of U.S. foreign trade.

Senator Barry Goldwater, Arizona, member of the Institute board of directors, in a recent speech on the U.S. Senate floor, called American Institute alumni "America's best-trained and most highly-respected corps of goodwill ambassadors." He described the Institute as private industry's training ground for its corps of junior executives in 78 foreign nations.

Graduates in liberal arts, business administration, and science are sought annually at The American Institute for Foreign Trade, P.O. Box 191, Phoenix, Arizona; telephone 938-0001.

stitute for Foreign Trade by more than 500 U.S. international business and banking firms. Fifty percent of the 1959-61 graduates had college majors in liberal arts or sciences. Forty-five percent had majored in business administration.

Cited by U.S. and foreign industrialists, educators, and high government officials as America's most effective institution for the practical training of college graduates in foreign trade, The American Institute offers a 3-part curriculum designed to train its potential junior executives in day-to-day foreign trade techniques, the living culture of the peoples of world market areas, and a foreign language. Recruiters from U.S. international firms have made it clear that they equate general cultural knowledge, a properly-adjusted attitude toward an overseas career, and aptitude when they select Institute graduates.

About 250 carefully-screened young men are graduated yearly. The post-graduate course of study lasts two semesters and starts from the beginning both in September and in January.

Industry and government officials say there is no institution of comparable stature where determined college graduates may so effectively groom themselves for a lucrative career abroad. Senator Goldwater predicts that most Americans who become business leaders in trade centers around the world in the next few years will have been trained "specifically" at The American Institute for Foreign Trade. HERE'S A LIKELY ONE—Hans R. Gringo, sanitation officer of the department of public safety, inspects pies in the Owen graduate center kitchen. His verdict—“Hmmm.”

Aesthetics in Sanitation Work

MSU 'Artist' Escapes Notice

By BILL COTE
State News Editor

You find many artists around campus—artists who work in paints, metals, flowers, electronic tubes and many other fields where a sense of appearance and beauty is desirable. But there's one campus "artist" who may escape notice.

He's the sanitation officer of the department of public safety, Hans R. Grigo.

"Having aesthetics in sanitation work might seem funny," said Grigo, "but I've discovered that there can be a fine line between aesthetics and sanitation.

"A dirty floor, for example, or an old floor that looks dirty may not have any real effect on food quality, but if you're eating there you may think so and what we think does often affect what we feel."

Or it could be argued, Grigo said, that the smell of the sewage treatment plant near Brody may not be Chanel No. 5, but it won't really hurt you.

"But," he said, "for persons with sensitive stomachs, it could really be very unpleasant. It all depends on the person and what they see or feel."

More commonly, Grigo's job is to inspect food for quality and handling. Any spot on campus where food is sold retail or is part of room and board is inspected at least once a term by him.

The testing areas include the 16 food services and the four dormitory grills of Brody, Shaw, Mason-Abbott and Snyder-Phillips.

What does he usually find? "Not much except good food," he said. "Most of our food services are in better shape than many restaurants."

One food quality control difficulty he said he does have is in the upkeep of older equipment and buildings where food is prepared and served.

"It's just harder to keep food as sanitary where equipment is old and breaking down and floors and walls are more difficult to clean."

As for the human element in food preparation, Grigo says his most frequent advice deals with getting food handlers to break habits which may be quite acceptable elsewhere, but are dangerous around food.

"For example," he explained, "when we sneeze, we by habit put a hand over the mouth. Anyone working with food, however, would spread contamination this way. I advise them to use disposable tissues instead."

Grigo also tests campus milk and water supplies. The university dairy plant is a model of sanitation, he said, but occasionally bacteria counts may rise briefly and he searches for the source.

The university processes all the milk it uses and also buys some milk products from private producers.

Drinking water usually only gets periodic checks by Grigo. The campus draws from its own wells for its water supply which is also hooked in with that of East Lansing, so that each could use the other's facilities.

Another water supply on campus, though doesn't rate a clear bill of health from Grigo

—the Red Cedar river. He said a survey of his showed that unless you're a duck, you better stay out of the river.

It's definitely not safe for drinking, Grigo said, and not even for swimming, although he did find one spot that was almost safe enough for a dip, but not quite. Actually he said the river has probably cleared up some in the last four years because of sewage plants and new drains.

Grigo said some new large drains are planned for both the university and East Lansing and perhaps a new higher-capacity sewage plant. These should further clear up the river, he said.

It's always going to be muddy, though, because of the clay, Grigo said, and so the best place for Spartans will continue to be, as the fight song proclaims, on the banks of the Red Cedar.
