Campus UN Votes Down Soviet Resolution for Reorganization

Refuse Demand For Four-Man Executive Board

By ARIEL MELCHIOR Jr.
Of the State News Staff

The resolution for the reorganization of the campus United Nations was defeated by a 62 to 12 roll-call vote Friday night at its first mall session.

Submitted by the Russian delegation, the resolution called for the replacing of the Secretary-General with a four-man executive committee.

With Panama, Union of South Africa, and Yugoslavia abstaining, the Assembly voted down the proposal.

Proceedings were delayed because of a specification not included in the resolution.

THE SPECIFICATION dealt with whether or not the resolution referred to the UN in New York or to the campus organization.

The president of the General Assembly, Walid Khadduri, was challenged by the delegate of Ghana, when the former said that he will decide after the hearing whether a 2/3 majority vote was needed to adopt or reject the resolution.

Arthur Hodgson, Ghana representative, said that the chair was not in the position to make such a decision.

Such a decision, he said, could not be made unless substantiated by some constitutional provision, or by a majority of the members present and voting.

THE RUSSIAN delegate then clarified the resolution by stating that it referred specifically to the campus organization.

Khadduri then substantiated his position by referring to the constitution which states that decisions of the General Assembly on important questions shall be made by a two-thirds majority of the member delegation present.

These questions, the constitution continues, shall include the establishment of permanent organs.

In light of the clarification by Russia, Ghana did not continue the debate on that particular aspect of the resolution.

BESIDE DEBATING on technicalities of the resolution and procedures, the Assembly heard speeches supporting and refuting the proposal.

After the president read the resolution, Russia was called to defend it.

Using the situation in which the international body has found itself as a result of Hammarskjold's death, Jim Anderson, representative of Russia had this to say.

"Proof of Dag Hammarskjold's iron grip on the UN, is the state of helplessness that it finds itself in after his death. To be effective, the decisions must be made by the four major blocs of the world."

REFUTING THE charge by the U.S. that such a proposal would be an attack on the freedom of the members, then Anderson said that the only way to protect all the members is to have them represented in the executive body—that is Russia's plan.

The United Kingdom, which was called to present its side yielded to Ghana.

After denouncing the use of the term "blocs," and admitting that Ghana didn't always go along with Hammarskjold's policies, Hodgson called for a submission to the authority to the authority of the UN.

As a result of the Russian proposal, he said "Another League of Nations would result—countries wouldn't compromise, but drift apart."

HE ALSO CALLED on the small nations to bring pressure to bear on the large powers and hope they will compromise for the sake of humanity.

In sanctioning the proposal, delegate of Cuba, Jan Garrett, justified its stand saying that "one man can make mistake in judgement... but with four men there is less chance of this occurring."

Garrett referred to Hammarskjold's morals as being "unrealistic-pacifistic."

AL SVABODA, China delegate, said that the resolution would paralyze the UN by its veto laden structure, and make the UN ineffective in dealing with the Communist aggressor when it preys on innocent neutral countries.

Con-Con Break Pleases Dems

Michigan's Constitutional Convention, with bipartisan harmony as its theme, opens the second week of sessions tonight by considering the rules under which it will operate.

The convention's committee on permanent organization and rules headed by Richard Van Dusen, Birmingham Republican, adopted more than 70 recommended rules in a nine-hour meeting last week and is scheduled to report on its recommendations.

One of the committee's findings was that there should be no rules at all on the question of whether convention committees could hold secret sessions.

Former Congressman Alvin Bentley, an Owosso Republican, spearheaded the fight to allow committees to go into closed-door executive sessions. One of his proposals would have allowed committee chairmen to close the doors if a majority of committee members approved.

Another would have permitted the same action if authorization was obtained from the convention itself.

Both proposals were beaten down, as was another suggestion that would have required open meetings of all committees except the administration group when it was discussing the qualifications of prospective staff employees for the convention.

Failure of the organization Committee to adopt a rule allowing executive sessions was in conflict with the action of a Republican caucus. The GOP had approved such meetings, with the stipulation that all final voting on issues be taken in open session.

Ford-UAW Strike Continues

DETROIT (AP)—Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers Union postponed top level negotiations Sunday to concentrate on local issues blocking settlement of a nationwide strike that has idled 120,000 Ford production workers.

Their bargaining teams met separately for 3 1/2 hours before deciding to postpone full dress negotiations until more progress is made at the local level.

If all goes well in local bargaining, national negotiations may resume tomorrow but no definite time was set for this. Thirty-three of 85 separate units still have not settled local issues.

The latest settlements were reported at two Cincinnati, Ohio manufacturing units, the Chicago, Ill. stamping plant, and the Sheffield, Ala. aluminum foundry.

The union has said it will not end the national strike, which began last Tuesday, until all locals have reached agreements. One of the bargaining units, at the Ford assembly plant in St. Louis, has been on strike over working conditions since July 26.

With the strike going into the second week, UAW members will become eligible for benefits out of the union's strike fund. Officials of the union's 30,000-member local 600 at the Rouge plant in Dearborn said they will start taking applications Tuesday for strike benefits.

Both UAW President Walter P. Reuther and Ford's top negotiator, Vice President Malcolm L. Denise, declined to speculate on when the strike will end.

Reuther said, "We're working at it." Since the start of the strike bargaining talks at the national level have progressed slowly. Non-economic sections of the national contract are still to be worked out.

Off-Campus To Hold Homecoming Queen Election

All off-campus students who know of a potential candidate should contact Dave Brownlee at IV 5-2855 or leave the information at 313 Student Services Building. The candidate should have been at MSU at least two terms and have a two-point all-college average.

Librarian Found Dead in Bath Tub

Jared Russell Hallowell, 33, librarian, was found dead in his Cherry Lane apartment Friday afternoon. Hallowell took his own life by slashing his forearms, officers of the Department of Public Safety reported.

Scheduled to appear in court on a morals charge, Hallowell was sought by a friend when he failed to appear Friday afternoon.

Arriving at the apartment, the friend found Hallowell's door locked. He summoned the assistant custodian who unlocked the door.

Hallowell's body was in the bathtub with the water still running but not overflowing. A note was found stating that Hallowell was leaving his personal possessions to his brother and apologizing to his father.

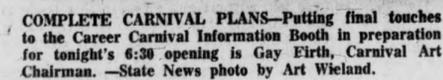

Dorwin Hoffmeyer, Ingham county coroner, said Hallowell had been dead about two hours before he was found at about 1:30 p.m.

Hallowell had waived justice court examination on the morals charge Thursday and was freed under $500 bond to await appearance in circuit court Friday.

Hallowell graduated from the University of Wyoming in 1954. He then worked for the University of Michigan before joining the MSU library staff in June 1960.

Surviving are his father H.L. of Sheridan Wyoming, a brother Jack of Denver, Colorado, and a brother David of Boulder, Colorado.

The body is in the Gorsline-Runciman funeral home.

Career Carnival Opens Tonight

"Opportunities Unlimited" will begin on the second floor of the Union at 6:30 tonight when the 1961 Career Carnival opens. Approximately 250 representatives from 70 corporations will be on hand to partake in the largest vocational information program of its kind on any campus.

One of the first representatives to arrive, Evan Gunthier, Employment Manager for the southern division of KVP Sutherland Company, expressed his appreciation of the Carnival.

"Like any company of our size, we are always looking for bright, young graduates. We've hired many Michigan State graduates in the past as a result of this event," said Gunthier.

Throughout the two-day Carnival, students will be given the opportunity to discuss informally the opportunities available within the represented organization, the background qualifications necessary for employment, and possible training programs.

Both parties, corporations and students, profit by this of ideas. The corporation may interest the student in employment, while the student receives valuable information to guide his choice of courses during the coming terms.

Last minute addition to the Career Carnival guest list is the United States Peace Corps, who will send a special representative.

Allied Stores Corporation, Boeing Airplane Company, Dow Chemical Company, Michigan Bell Telephone Company, Reynolds Metals Company, Standard Oil, Whirlpool Corporation, and the Women's Army Corps are other attending representatives.

In individual ranking, Heister was third in the entire contest. He also ranked second in giving oral reasons and fourth in Guernsey judging. Becker finished fourth in Brown Swiss judging.

As a team, the students finished fourth in Guernsey judging, sixth in Ayrshires, and tenth in Brown Swiss.

COCONUT HUSKS AND ANCIENT ARMOR—Old armor is a new Museum exhibit. Wolfram Neissen, museum artist, is shown here with Spanish half armor. Unusual coconut husk and buffalo horn armor also will be on display along with a range of crossbows.

Bells in the Brain?

Join the Bellringers

The Spartan Bellringers, a unique musical group which plays everything from Mozart to jazz on English handbells, still has several openings for men and women with musical training.

Students interested in auditioning for membership may contact Wendell Westcott, director, at Beaumont Tower after 5 p.m. weekdays, or by phone at IV 9-0663.

"Membership in the Bellringers offers students opportunities for public performance and travel," Westcott said. The group has performed at school assemblies, banquets, and concerts on several tours.

The Bellringers have been featured on the Don McNeil radio show. Their tours during spring vacations have included performances at key cities throughout the Midwest.

The seven-year old group, one of the first bellringing organizations formed in Michigan, performed at the President's Christmas tree lighting ceremony at Washington, D. C. in 1955.

Player's Father Dies in Stands

By PAUL SCHNITT
Of the State News Staff

How does a football team feel after it soundly whips the foe by 28 points and trots off to the locker room victorious, still undefeated. They joke, they laugh, they cheerfully reminisce, they begin looking ahead to next week, excited, optimistic and enthusiastic.

Indeed, that is the way most teams do feel and should feel given these circumstances.

But there was a distinct absence of such an atmosphere as the Michigan State Spartans jogged off the field Saturday after the final second ticked on the clock and the gun sounded.

The Spartan locker room was quiet following the game. There would have been more noise and activity had MSU lost to the Stanford Indians.

Quarterback Pete Smith had suffered a greater loss than any football game could incur upon him.

Sometime during the first half, Archie Smith, 47-year-old father of Pete Smith, died in the stands from a heart attack. Pete did not want his father to come to the game because he had a known heart ailment. It was the first college game Mr. Smith ever attended.

At the end of the half, Coach Duffy Daugherty was informed of the tragedy. Daugherty told all of the players except the quarterbacks who were sent to one corner of the dressing room while Duffy huddled with the other players ostensibly to review some strategy.

It wasn't until after the game that Daugherty, team physician Dr. James Feurig and Father Robert Kavanaugh disclosed the death to Pete.

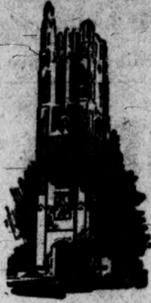

Coach Daugherty said, "The death of Pete's father takes the joy out of a fine victory. The Spartans are a close knit group and any tragedy such as this hits hard no matter who is involved."

Only three years ago a similar tragedy struck the MSU football team. State was engaging the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis. Listening to the game on the radio, the father of sophomore signalcaller Tom Wilson died suddenly of a heart attack in his Lapeer, Michigan living room.

University of Nigeria Growing Rapidly

(Sudhakar S. Tharat, author of this article, holds an assistantship in the Nigeria Program. He is a graduate student in sociology.)
The University of Nigeria Saturday celebrated its first birthday, completing one year of hard work for a team of American, British and Nigerian educators.

Nigeria, the most populous African nation south of the Sahara, gained independence from Britain in 1960. At that time there was only one university in the whole country and it accommodated barely 300 new students a year. Those who could afford it went overseas but thousands of others with modest means had to go without higher education.

The establishment of the University of Nigeria through the cooperation of MSU, the University of London and the Nigerian government opened a new chapter in Nigerian higher education.

THE GOVERNMENT of Eastern Nigeria sent an Economic Mission to Europe and America in 1954. One of the objectives of this mission was "to make arrangements for facilitating higher vocational education in Eastern Nigeria."

In its report, the mission recommended an early establishment of a full-fledged university to act as an instrument for social change. Based on these recommendations, the University of Nigeria Law was enacted by the Legislature of Eastern Nigeria in 1955.

Following the enactment of the law, the government gave directions for the establishment of a University of Nigeria Fund, and invited both the U.S. and the U.K. governments to send advisors for help in planning the physical and educational aspects of the proposed university.

The recommendations of this committee were published through a White Paper issued by the Eastern Nigeria Government in November, 1959. In this paper the desirability of the project was endorsed and a recommendation was made for the establishment of a provisional council to "draw out the technical and consultative resources available throughout the world for help in planning the institution."

ACCORDINGLY, it was authorized in 1959. The council is international in character with members drawn from Nigeria, the U.S. and the U.K. It was entrusted with the financial and administrative power to build a new university. The university was formally dedicated October 7, 1960. Princess Alexandra of Kent performed the opening ceremonies and laid the foundation stone of the auditorium building. President John A. Hannah and Connor D. Smith, chairman of the Board of Trustees, represented MSU.

The university is located on 1,000 acres of attractive, hilly savannah land near Nsukka, 40 miles north of Enugu, the capital of the Eastern Region. The university can be easily reached from the other two regions, which should enable it to fulfill its objectives as a national university.

The university is served by well-engineered, hard-surface roads. An ample water supply is maintained by the university's own pumping station and the Electricity Corporation of Nigeria provides an adequate supply of electricity. Telephone and postal services are also available.

CONSTRUCTION work is going on at a rapid pace. Several buildings have already been completed. Now under construction are faculty housing, two student dormitories—each to house 350 people, a large classroom building, a science block and a library large enough to hold half a million volumes. A stadium, with 30,000 capacity, largest of its kind in Africa, is also being built.

Sports facilities include one cricket field, two soccer fields and 12 tennis courts. The university health center is equipped for the use of faculty and students. The white collar orientation of some of the education of Nigeria youth causes them to put less value upon jobs involving field work and manual skills. This is the legacy of the post in which vocational education was neglected and literary education emphasized.

However, there would be a scarcity of economic development in Africa if sufficient personnel are not trained for technical jobs.

THE UNIVERSITY of Nigeria is, therefore, governed by an orientation not only to classical concepts of academic and cultural excellence but also by vocational objectives suited to Nigerian social and economic needs.

The university is thus committed to a philosophy whereby it can be fully equipped to offer such courses as agriculture and industry without excluding the classics, arts and scientific studies. This approach involves blending the best from the European and American university education systems to develop a distinctly Nigerian pattern. While doing this, the university will still have an international scope and a cosmopolitan outlook. The doors of the university are open to all men and women, irrespective of their caste, color, creed or nationality.

The American, British, Irish, Indian and African faculty members and their families on the Nsukka campus give an eloquent testimony of this philosophy and make it a fascinating experiment in international living.

A STUDENT enrolling there spends most of his first two years in the school of general studies. Here he is given a broad background in such fields as natural science, social science, humanities and English. In the following years a student is expected to take more classes in his major and minor fields.

The University of Nigeria uses the same kind of credit system followed in American universities. However, the examination system is somewhat different. Individual professors give examinations throughout the academic year when they consider it necessary. But the work of a student is assessed largely on the basis of his final exams.

The initial enrollment of the university was 220 students selected from 1,400 applicants. To start with, there were 13 faculty members drawn from Nigeria, the U.S., England and India. The university is making rapid strides and already has about 1,000 students and 100 faculty members. Facilities will be gradually expanded to accommodate about 10,000 students within the next 10 years.

When the Peace Corps program of the U.S. government was announced, the Nigerian government asked for volunteers to help at the University of Nigeria. Training is now being given 45 Peace Corps members here. Thirty persons will be selected to work in Nigeria as teaching and research assistants.

THE PROGRESS made by the university is encouraging. A UPI news dispatch July 20 said, "Michigan State University's role in the development of the University of Nigeria has won praise of U.S. and African officials alike. They consider the university a showcase of U. S.-African teamwork."

Point of View A Team Game

Jack Shea

A political column nowadays should be easy to write—what with all the really serious world problems.

Among those that this reporter finds himself concerned with are such things as Northern Ireland's fight against colonialism, Dick Nixon's typical campaign in California, and last but not least Michigan's 1961 Constitutional Convention.

The first session got off to a flying start. Newly elected president, Stephen Nisbet, highlighted his acceptance speech by reflecting on an old story from the files of the immortal Babe Ruth.

THE BABE, when asked by a crippled youngster how the Yankees always seem to come out on top, replied: "It's a team game, Jimmy."

It is hoped that this phrase finds a place in every delegates' memory. For only by working as a team can the 144 delegates give to the people of the State of Michigan a document that will persevere.

Selfless, not selfishness, must be available for heavy pinning duty. But what are the chances? Can it be, will it be, a successful convention?

It certainly can be; but whether it will be or not hinges on how the convention deals with the all-important question of re-apportionment. If agreement can be reached here, then an optimistic attitude should be shared by all.

THE REPUBLICAN Party, at present, has a majority of the Representatives in both the House and the Senate. This majority however represents a minority of the people of our state. This situation occurs because Republican Representatives come from less populated out-state regions, while their Democratic colleagues come from the densely populated metropolitan areas.

From this point of view it seems unlikely that the political party that now controls the state legislature will support any measure that tends to lessen their grip. Since the same party has a more than two-thirds majority of the delegates at the convention, one can see the problem.

It is not unsolvable. But it will require a dedication to proper democratic government rather than to the lobby and the caucus.

The convention will be flooded with lobbyists. Labor, farm, business and many others will have their interests represented directly on the floor by elected delegates.

One sure way to come up with a good constitution would be to enlist at least 73 delegates to lobby for our state. Remember the Babe's words: "It's a team game, Jimmy."

NYU Professor Rates Campuses

Portrait painting of American colleges and universities has become a favorite national pastime. Everyone from Barry Goldwater to Robert Welch seems to have thrown a few blotches at the easel.

This week, a new and what we consider an important, attempt at sketching the scene of present-day higher education has been published. It was written by David Boroff, assistant professor of English at New York University.

In his book, "Campus, U.S.A." (Harper and Brothers, $4.50), Boroff is candid and pointed in assigning grades to 10 universities and colleges specifically and to American higher education generally.

IN WHAT amounts to a coast-to-coast and border-to-border trek (moving from Harvard to Wisconsin, Claremont, Swarthmore, Brooklyn, Parsons, Birmingham-Southern, Smith, Sarah Lawrence and Michigan), Boroff has come up with some challenging, if harsh, conclusions.

He believes that American universities divide reservations, fenced off from serious adult content into two kinds: those which he calls adolescent camps, and those which represent a transition to adulthood.

Boroff gives the students, faculty and administration of Harvard the most points on his academic scorecard — he calls it an imperial but modest, dignified but humorous, well-mannered colossus.

On the other hand, he has few good words for what he calls a "distorted progressivism" on the part of a good many university and college administrations. He accuses them of clawing and pushing into areas in which they don't belong.

A CASE in point: "The brash imperialism of personnel services and student activities strives to dominate the students' private and social life," he accuses. "In contrast with today's organized fun, there was something innocent about the horseplay of the twenties."

"At least the hell-raisers were autonomous. Their infantilism wasn't sponsored by the administration, which these days lays down the ground rules and acts as umpire for the nursery games. There is even a dreadful sameness about campus activities from coast to coast, for the personnel technicians are quick to import wholesome nonsense from other campuses."

Boroff points out that his quarrel is with the "personnel engineers," whom he says are likely to be smiling products of Teachers College or some other emporium of inane good-will and well-roundedness.

"AND ALL too frequently they are undereducated themselves," he charges. "Yet they shape decisions which are academic ones, for every decision on a college campus is academic."

He goes on: "And they fuss too much over students. I challenge the concern with student mental hygiene and the close supervision of student organizations — 'psychiatric babysitting' someone called it. On examination, it often turns out to be something quite different: The will to power on the part of administrators. It is another instance of the invasion of privacy that characterizes our time."

Harsh Budget Dangerous to Students and Applicants

The sad story foretold last spring has been written. Talented high school students throughout the state have been denied admission to universities because there is no room for them.

Our own freshman class totals only 4,740, a mere one percent increase over last year's class. The high school graduation rate rose more than one percent, however.

Although Michigan State was not expected to accommodate all these extra students, the total higher education system in Michigan was. But with other colleges and universities in the same precarious financial predicament, they cannot meet the demands throughout the state.

The students who were left out, the ones who were not admitted, are now left to their own resources in a society which depends more and more on the formally educated man. Job opportunities are becoming more restricted for those without a higher education.

Perhaps the most tragic part of the entire situation is that limited college opportunities will tend to produce an educated elite. Universities are now forced into the position of accepting only the most highly qualified students from high schools.

While it is laudable that a university try to improve its standards by admitting more capable students, it is also necessary to continue to serve as much of the population as possible.

The philosophy under which MSU was founded asserts that all citizens are entitled to an education. Unless these opportunities remain open, an elite class will emerge.

Under the crowded conditions which now prevail, not only the outsiders suffer. Those in the university are forced to live under conditions which are far from perfect: Three in a dormitory room, crowded classrooms where some students must stand, high student loads for professors, overtaxed library, insufficient laboratory equipment. The list might be expanded but the point is the same.

A university which is forced by budget problems to overcrowd its facilities without even meeting the needs of graduated high school students is not the valuable asset to a nation that it should be.

Alphabet Soup

With their usual delight in alphabetic organizations, those of the political left have spawned or continued four groups of overlapping memberships to advance their ideas.

WE NOW HAVE CORE (Congress on Racial Equality), the ADA (Americans for Democratic Action), the N.L.P. (New Liberal Party) and SCCR (Student Council for Civil Rights). They may not contain more people than the Conservative Club, but as far as publicity and headline space go they have it all over their Rightist opponents.

Perhaps to even things up, the Conservatives should split into similar units. They may not be more effective, but they would certainly be more noticed.

Those of the extreme right could form BIRCH (Be In the Right—Crush Heresy), the more moderates could coalesce into BARRY (Business is Always Respected, Reuther's a Yoke), the Eisenhower Republicans would join IKE (I Kill English) and the liberals (pardon the word) would withdraw into BARF (Be a Rockefeller Fan).

On second thought, maybe the Conservatives are just as smart to remain a single group.

Audit Board Formed

David L. Jaehnig

Lansing's "budget-benders" have been having trouble dealing out the state's money, except to themselves, for years.

Working with millions of dollars, just one mistake in judgment, or one bit of faulty reasoning on the part of these men has been very costly.

In an effort to curb the economic nonsense that has been going on for years as the appropriating committees of the legislature blocked government operations and made private deals to their own benefit, an Audit Commission has been set up to protect the people of Michigan.

Consisting of three hirelings that might or might not become the personal employees of the committee heads, the Audit Commission is at least an attempt at supervision of the political profiteers who make more money in government than Vanderbilt did in railroads.

Much of the problem that the annual budget-making presents to the commission is due to the lack of scrutiny by legislators who are not in the appropriating committees.

Thus, if an appropriating committee member wants a private deal out of the budget, he can easily sneak it through by making use of the legislative confusion.

There have been other proposed solutions to curb the "budget-benders" — some of which would cost even more than the committee leaders are wasting.

The most usual one proposed technical staff workers for each committee, working on the budget year-round.

Thus when the legislature convened only budget details would have to be filled in. They could also prepare analyses of the budget for other legislators. These and other duties would lend continuity and economy to state government finances. However, this mammoth police force would necessarily have to operate with budget funds.
There is a chance that with the inauguration of the Audit Commission, Michigan might have a better budget next year. But with the "budget-benders" willing to spend money to make money, the commission members will have to watch out for those dark corners in the Capitol Building.

Band Day Draws 2,700 H.S. Musicians

By CHERIE MITCHELL & DAVID JAEHNIG
Of the State News Staff

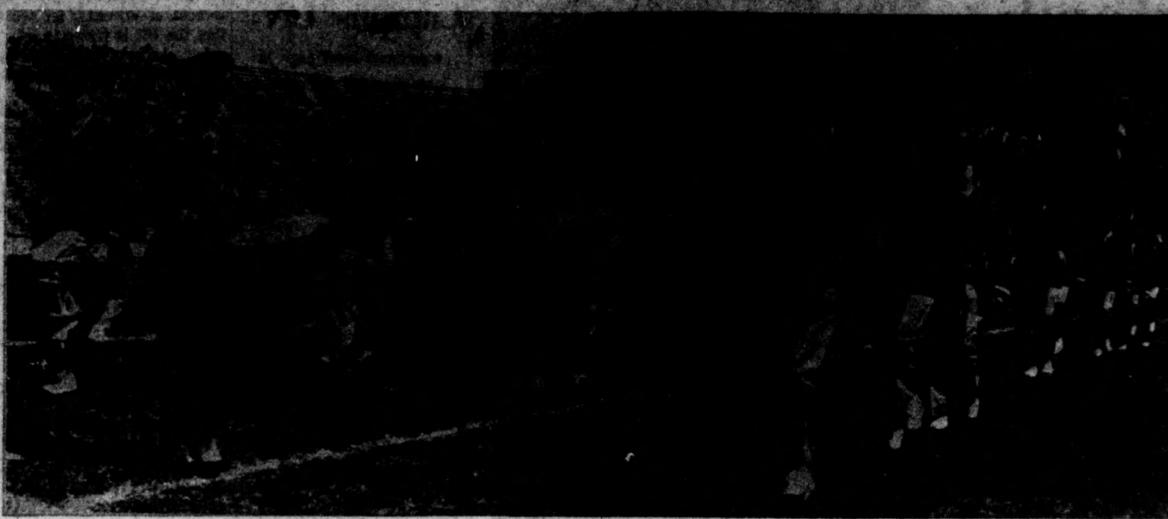

Nearly 2,700 high school bandmen joined the Spartan "men of brass" Saturday as they danced and pranced their way through MSU's seventh annual Band Day.

Buses arriving at Old College Field at 8:30 Saturday morning unloaded swarms of uniformed students and harried band directors.

Lining up under the direction of State Band Director Leonard V. Falcone, the "toy soldiers" of 35 bands fell in for inspection by U.S. Navy Band conductor Commander Charles Brendler, the director of the massed bands.

The show for the public began 11:30 a.m. as the Allegan High School Marching Band led the parade of bands into Spartan Stadium.

The stands filled slowly and didn't reach near-capacity until many of the bands had already performed. Those who were present for the entire pre-game show saw Charlotte MARCHING ALONG TOGETHER—Bands from 35 Michigan high schools pranced and played at MSU's seventh annual band day Saturday. Nearly 2,700 high school students joined the Spartan band members in presenting the pre-game and half-time shows.

High School's fancy stepping, Lansing Sexton's spinning drums; Grand Rapids Lee's Confederate uniforms and the Midland High School Band's imitation of State's high-stepping strutters.

Climax - Scotts Community Band received the cheers of the Spartan crowd when they marched through the middle of the Stanford football team. With the Spartan team leading at half time, the "Wonderland of Bands" hit the field with their freshly shined instruments and moved through "Navy Log March," "Anchors Aweigh," the "Michigan State Fight Song," and "MSU Shadows."

As the brilliant array of band pagentry began to fade through "M.S.U. Shadows," the appreciation of what a high school band really was began to grow, and the crowd met this feeling with applause that made the long weeks of work by the young musicians well worth their while.

SOON "THE LONG, THE SHORT AND THE TALL"

The Wolverines, meanwhile, mauled Army, 38-8, in their last outing before the contest, which Spartan Coach Duffy Daugherty terms, "one of the decisive games in the conference this year."

U of M was listed as a pre-season dark horse by Big Ten prognosticators and has bounced into the spotlight with their two straight victories.

TWO WEEKS AGO Coach Bump Elliott's boys knocked off the pick of the Pacific Coast, UCLA, 29-6, with apparent ease. Ohio State, a Big Ten favorite, had a hard time getting by the same squad, 13-3 Saturday.

It was an unimpressive opening game for the Spartans as they piled up 360 yards rushing to Stanford's 37, fumbled eight times and had one touchdown called back because of illegal use of the hands.

Commenting on the fumbles, Daugherty said, "I don't think we can fumble that many times next week and be in the ball game." The Indians recovered four of the Spartan fumbles.

The Wolverines capitalized on two Army fumbles to get away to an early lead at Ann Arbor Saturday.

Daugherty used 51 players to subdue Stanford and the brightest spot in the Spartan attack was the running performance of sophomore halfbacks, Dewey Lincoln and Sherman Lewis.

Lincoln, wearing Herb Adderley's old number and running in a style reminiscent of Adderley's better days, piled up 93 yards on 10 carries.

LEWIS, the 160 pound "pony back" twisted for 72 yards on 13 tries.

Pete Smith, Spartan quarterback, completed three of seven passes attempted for 46 yards. Smith tossed one pass 33-yards to end Lonnie Sanders to set up Michigan State's second-score by George Saimes, five plays later. However, two of Smith's aeriels strayed into Stanford hands for interceptions.

The death of Smith's father, Archie, during the game took much of the joy out of the Spartan victory according to Daugherty.

DAUGHERTY felt the team improved most defensively. The real test of the 207-pound defensive line will come next week when they try to contain the running attack of Wolverine speedsters Bennie McRae, Dave Raimy and Bill Tunnicliff; and the passing attack of Dave Glinka.

The University of Michigan squad will be trying to avenge two straight defeats to Spartan squads, Saturday. Two years ago MSU mauled the Wolverine squad, 34-8, at Ann Arbor and last year the Spartans bounced over U of M by a 24-17 score.

JIM CORGIAT, defensive end, and another unidentified Spartan pull halfback Larry Royse to the ground after a short pickup. Later in the game Royse was to suffer a broken shoulder.

Whitewash No. 5 - Last Game Today?

By MIKE SKINNER
State News Sports Writer

Five shutouts in a row!
That's the success story on Michigan State's soccer team.

Its latest victim was Wheaton College, 5-0 here Saturday.

STATE'S whitewashing jobs started a year ago in its last three victories of the season.

Two more shutout wins have been added by the Spartan booters this fall.

While limiting its opponents to zeros, State has been doing well on its side of the scoreboard.

Spartans closed out last season with 5-0, 17-0 and 6-0 wins over Calvin, Purdue and Indiana respectively.

A week ago State traveled to Earlham and embarrassed the local team to the tune of 7-0.

State booted five more goals Saturday at Wheaton's expense while leaving the visiting Crusaders homeward bound still looking for a goal of its own.

Figure up the goals-for and goals-against Michigan State in its last five games covering last year and the present.

It's Michigan State 40, opponents 6. But the Spartans were slow in starting Saturday.

JEAN LOHRI, inside right, got the State ball rolling with a goal, his second of the season, at the seven minute mark of the first period.

Following Lohri's goal State's offense continued to keep the ball in Wheaton territory but it couldn't cash in for a goal.

"They (Wheaton) packed their goal," Gene Kenney, Spartan coach, explained. Picking a goal means placing several players in front of one's own goalie to help ward off shots.

It's a defensive move which, while helpful defensively, limits a team's scoring power.

Being one goal down forced Wheaton to come out of its "pack" in the second period and they remained out of it the rest of the game.

But it wasn't until the third period that State could score again.

MAB Ventura, a center forward who scored five goals against Earlham last week, nailed home the Spartan's third period goal.

Ventura was set-up by Lohri. Time of the goal was the nine minute mark.

After three periods the Spartans led by only a 2-0 margin.

But Lohri with one and Ventura with two more goals in the final period clinched the State win.

Lohri finished the game with two goals, both unassisted, and Ventura with three goals.

BESIDES the third period set-up from Lohri, Ventura was assisted by Ruben Filizola, inside left, on his second goal, and by Jerry Heron, right wing on his third.

Ventura now has scored eight goals in two games this season. He had 14 last year.

No one player was singled out by Coach Kenney as being the outstanding performer against the Crusaders.

"The whole team played well," he said. "It was a good team victory."

CINCINNATI

New York took a commanding lead of 3 games to 1 in the World Series Sunday by defeating the Cincinnati Reds, 7-0, behind the superb pitching of Whitey Ford and Jim Coates.

Ford, who retired after pitching to one man in the sixth inning because of a foot injury, set a series record by running his string of consecutive scoreless innings to 32. That wiped out the old mark of 29½ innings set by Babe Ruth, then a southpaw pitcher for the Boston Red Sox in the 1916 and 1918 series.

Ford shut out the Pittsburgh Pirates in both his appearances in the 1960 series, blanked the Reds in the opener on Wednesday and kept them at bay in the first five frames Sunday.

He fouled a ball off his foot in the top half of the sixth but took his place on the mound when the Reds came to bat. He yielded a single to Elio Chacon, then quit when he found he could not stride properly.

The fifth game will be played here today, starting at 1 p.m. EST., and the National League championship Cincinnati team must win or it is all over.

The Yankees pecked away at Jim O'Toole's offerings for single runs in the fourth and fifth. They banded Jim Brosan for two in the sixth and then added three more runs off the same hurler in the seventh.

TED SAUNDERS - one of the reasons why the Michigan State soccer team has been unscored upon in the last five games. He is a goalie for Coach Gene Kenney's booters.

Detroit Lions Clobbered By Chicago Bears, 31-17

For the second week in a row, the Detroit Lions were handed a crushing defeat as the Chicago Bears upset the favored Lion squad, 31-17.

Last Sunday, the Lions were smashed, 49-0, by San Francisco. After winning its first two league games, Detroit has suffered two straight losses.

The Bears fought from a 10-0 deficit to overcome the Lions before 50,521 fans in Tiger Stadium.

In other games, the New York Giants won their third victory in a row as they avenged their only loss this season by dumping the St. Louis Cardinals, 24-9.

Bobby Mitchell scored three touchdowns on a run of 31 yards and a punt return of 64 yards and a 52 yard pass from Milt Plum as the Cleveland Browns whipped the Washington Redskins, 31-7.

The Green Bay Packers routed the Baltimore Colts, 45-7, while the Dallas Cowboys shut-out Minnesota, 28-0.

And the defending world champion Philadelphia Eagles came from behind twice to beat the Pittsburgh Steelers, 21-16.

Sanitation Methods Published by Profs

Two University professors have authored an article which appears in the October issue of Water & Sewage Works, technical journal for sanitary engineers.

W. L. Mallmann and Frank R. Peabody, Department of Microbiology and Public Health combined to write this technical article, Multiple-tube Dilution and Membrane Filter Methods.

THE ARTICLE is a detailed comparison of bacteriological (bacteria) techniques used in sampling of water. These two techniques are used in the routine examination of water for disease-carrying organisms. Mallmann introduced changes into the Multiple-tube method several years ago and explains in the article the reasons for using only this technique on raw or lake and stream waters.

THE INFORMATION presented ought to stir thinking by the sanitation analysts and experts.

THE AUTHORS suggest that further research must be encouraged and aimed at evolving techniques by means of which sampling and parallel analysis using the two methods would yield comparative results.

Needles Cleared For Earth Orbit

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy was advised by a panel of scientists recently that the planned placing of a "belt of needles" in orbit around the earth would not interfere with scientific observations or manned space flight.

"Project West Ford," as it has been named, contemplates the release of 75 pounds of tiny, hairlike filaments from a satellite, to form a narrow belt which could be used to reflect signals between microwave transmitters and receivers.

Some scientists have had apprehensions that the belt might impair the study of the skies by lightwaves or the reception of radio signals.

A special panel of the President's Science Advisory Committee was directed to investigate these possibilities and report.

"We conclude that the U.S. can proceed with the project West Ford communications experiment without danger to science," the group head Dr. John W. Tukey, Princeton University mathematician, reported.

"We are also convinced that it will offer no additional hazard to manned space flight," he said.

The panel said there is reasonable assurance that virtually all the filaments will have returned to earth within four to eight years. If, however, they remain in orbit for many years, the belt would spread and its density decreased so that the possible interference with observations from space satellites or from the ground would be negligible, the panel said.

Getting The Bird

Some persons are extra sensitive to pet parakeets and canaries and can actually have asthma attacks because there is a bird in the house. Most of the troublesome allergic agents are apparently in bird feathers.

Some patients have a greater sensitivity to the extracts of canary and parakeet feathers than to an equally concentrated extract of mixed feathers and down, doctors report.

Space Studies Duplicated

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate report said costly and avoidable duplication in electronic research for defense has slowed the space science program.

The report pinned the blame on poor facilities provided by the government for exchange of information among electronic researchers.

IT WAS SIGNED by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., as chairman of a special government operations subcommittee.

"One tenth of federally supported electronic research and development may consist of unwitting, needless duplication of efforts," Humphrey said in a statement analyzing the report. "No one really knows who is now doing what, where and how in experiments."

"The waste may add up to $200 million out of $2 billion currently expended for this type of work per year."

HUMPHREY CONCEDED, however, that little definitive proof exists on which to base the estimate.

"There is no reason to doubt that space science has been slowed by absence to date of a reliable, comprehensive system for centrally indexed, broadly and promptly disseminated data on currently and completed research and development contracts and subcontracts," the report said.

THE REPORT said the subcommittee found red tape and lack of facilities are so acute that "innumerable scientists and engineers state that it takes less time to perform their own research than it takes to try to find out if the research has already been performed or is being performed."

The subcommittee estimated it might cost $6 million to provide adequate facilities for quick checks and easy location of data to show whether preliminary research had been completed on some given problem.

Grissom Speeding?

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—"I usually don't go this fast," Astronaut Gus Grissom told a South Daytona Beach patrolman.

The officer, Elliot Davis, had just stopped Grissom for driving 45 miles per hour in a 40-mph zone.

"I'm terribly sorry, officer, I don't usually go this fast," said the man who traveled 5,200 mph in a rocket.

The patrolman then took a closer look at Grissom's smiling companion. It was Alan Shepard Jr., the nation's first space traveler.

They got off with a warning.
