14 Injured

Tornadic winds in Illinois wrecked a supermarket, killing two shoppers, and collapsed the roof of an Illinois grade school as destructive storms ripped across the midwest Monday.

The winds smashed the roof of a supermarket in Rantoul, in central Illinois. The violent storm also reportedly caused heavy damage to Chanute Air Force Base in Rantoul.

The school building, at Springfield, was damaged when the storm struck during the children's lunch hour.

One boy was unaccounted for and two others jumped through a window to safety. There were no reports of injuries.

School Principal John Cavitt, who ordered the children outside when black clouds appeared, said it was an "act of providence that no one was killed."

The damage was confined to the old section of the two-story McClernand Grade School. Most of the pupils had gone home for lunch, were outside the building or were in other sections of the building when the winds struck
