Bus Now Goes To Lansing

Spartan Village residents can now ride a bus directly to downtown Lansing, said John A. Cole, manager of Lansing Suburban Bus Lines.

The Spartan Village direct-run announcement was one of three changes made in on-campus service by the bus firm for the summer.

Cole said there would be no University Village-Owen Hall service this summer. Resumption of this route depends on the passenger load in the fall, he said.

University Village residents have to walk to the corner of Kalamazoo street and Harrison road to catch a bus going to campus points. The Spartan Village-downtown Lansing bus will pass through University Village, Cole said.

Beginning July 9 Spartan Village-downtown busses will travel through the campus to University Village on trips both ways to give University Village residents direct service to campus and Spartan Village, Cole said.

"Several people who live in Spartan Village work in downtown Lansing, so we put the Village on direct service," Cole said.

The firm's busses are also taking a different route inside Spartan Village for safety reasons during the summer, Cole said.

"Instead of traveling on the roads between apartment buildings our busses are taking the roads (Crescent and Middlevale) behind the apartments," he said.

"There are so many little children playing near the apartments now that school is out," he said. "So from the safety standpoint we thought we would change the route until fall when I believe we will return to our regular route through the village."

Donald Hayworth, professor of speech, recently announced his candidacy for U.S. representative from the Sixth Congressional district, which includes Ingham, Genesee and Livingston counties.

Hayworth, a Democrat, served in the 84th Congress from 1954 through 1956 and will face incumbent Charles E. Chamberlain, who defeated Hayworth by a 3,097 vote margin for the seat in 1956 and a 3,895 vote margin in 1958. The 1960 population of the three counties is 619,733.

In 1960 Chamberlain defeated Jerome O'Rourke by a 333,391 margin.

Hayworth listed six reasons why he felt his campaign for reelection should be more successful in 1962 than it was in 1956 and 1958.

He said:

1--"In 1958 the incumbent was defending a well liked and admired president (Eisenhower); in 1962 he is attacking a well liked and admired president (Kennedy)."

2--"In 1958 Michigan Democrats were overconfident; in 1962 we are determined to fight for our lives."

3--"In 1958 the incumbents shortcomings had a first term excuse; in 1962 he has shown six years of high pressure public relations, but still little or no interest in any field of legislation."

4--"In 1958 the district party organization had not been stepped up; in 1962 there has been a big upsurge, with full time and paid secretaries in both Genesee and Ingham counties."

5--"In 1958 the party was split by a hard fought primary; in 1962 we have every evidence of a new found unity."

6--"In 1958 we had little money

Concert Set Here Tonight

The dream of a lifetime for 100 young musicians comes true tonight.

They will be led by one of the top symphonic conductors, Erich Leinsdorf of the Boston Symphony, in the first public concert of the Congress of Strings.

The concert, which is free to the public, will begin at 8:15 p.m. in Fairchild Theater.

The program will include works of Mendelssohn, Brahms and Schoenberg.

The concert is the first of a series which will run to Aug. 9 and conducted by renowned symphony orchestra leaders. They are part of the instruction of the 100 young musicians who are studying here.

They are winners of competition in the U.S. and Canada conducted and financed by the American Federation of Musicians, which also is financing the Congress in its fourth year and second at Michigan State.

ROAD WORK BEGINS--Motorists using Shaw and Farm lanes will be ducking cranes, tractors and workmen all summer as construction crews begin street widening projects on both thoroughfares and repair steam tunnels along them.

'Front Page' Good As Season Starts

By UTE AULD
Of The State News Staff

If the first production of University Theatre's Summer Circle, "The Front Page," a rowdy farce by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, is an indication of things to come, then summer theatre patrons can expect an entertaining and rewarding second season of arena staging.

The play concerns the tactics of a group of Chicago newspapermen, all walking-talking representatives of the notorious "yellow journalism" of the 1920's, who are gathered in the press room of the Criminal Courts Building awaiting the execution of a political prisoner.

When "The Front Page" was first produced by Jed Harris in New York during the summer of 1928, it was considered the first smash hit of the otherwise calamitous theatrical season of 1928-29, during which every other play was ignominiously withdrawn after a brief run.

Although the play was a successful money-maker, it was condemned by some critics as "extraordinary vulgar" and its characters were described as "belonging to the sewer."

Director James Brandon, associate professor of speech, has not toned down the coarse characterizations and brutally humorous lines in his interpretation of the play, but, nevertheless, it does not come across as vulgar, but merely as a "fun" play to see and also to act, which is apparent in the enthusiasm of the actors.

After all, it would be rather

7 Million Cut From U. Budget

By JIM WALLINGTON
State News Managing Editor

The Michigan House of Representatives Wednesday supported a Senate bill ordering Michigan State to drop the Labor-Industrial Relations Center (LIRC).

The House also voted to appropriate $31,170,402 to MSU for the fiscal year 1962-63. It was the same amount approved earlier by the Senate.

Attempts to soften or kill the Senate bill which tells Michigan State to suspend the Center fell short.

A Democratic-supported amendment deleting the Senate bill was voted down, 49-47, which was seven votes short of the required 56 votes needed for approval.

In earlier amendments offered by Rep. Robert Waldron, Rep.-Grosse Pointe, which advised the University to kill the LIRC or lose appropriations next year, failed to pass by a single vote, 55-47.

The order that remains in the appropriations bill reads:

"... As a condition of appropriating funds to the university (MSU) under this act, no portion of such appropriation shall be used to maintain or continue the Industries and Labor Relation Center or any center or school of a similar nature."

The section was sponsored by Sen. Lynn Francis, Rep.-Midland, who investigated the LIRC and reported that it operated in favor of labor.

The MSU appropriation figure is more than $7 million short of the amount university officials said was needed and it was a million dollars short of the appropriations asked for by Gov. John Swainson.

Michigan State received $29,677,219 last year.

The total higher education figure approved by the House was $16.5 million, $400,000 more than the amount approved by the Senate.

The House also voted $36.6 million to the University of Michigan and $16.4 million to Wayne State, the same amount approved by the Senate. Both amounts were short of the figures asked for by the two Universities.

University officials have said that tuition would be increased if the legislature failed to give the university enough money.

During the appropriation bill debate Rep. Russell Strange Jr., Rep.-Clare, asked for re-examination of the Cooperative Extension Service, which he said has drifted too far from its initial purpose of dealing with agriculture.

L.I.R.C. Seen As Precedent

The state legislature has been misguided in its attempt to erase the Labor Industrial Relations Center (LIRC) from the University program.

Proposals to cut the center were based on a report issued by one of the most conservative, anti-labor senator in the legislature. We feel he let his emotions over rule attempts to make an unbiased report.

The center, contrary to the senate report, has sponsored programs beneficial to management as well as labor. Management has expressed positive reaction to the center's programs.

Recently the LIRC sponsored a convention which attracted more businessmen than labor men and had more pro-business speakers on the rostrum than labor leaders, such as James P. Mitchell, secretary of labor in the Eisenhower administration.

The university has accepted the center as an integral part of its program. Pres. John Hannah told legislators in a letter:

"The university feels that the labor and industrial relations center is rendering important and valuable services to labor and industry, and educators."

What disturbs us the most is the setting of a precedent of having the legislator restricting courses taught or programs made available at a university.

Hannah expressed this fear when he said to the legislature:

"It is only another step to declaring it appropriate for the legislature to be concerned with the courses that are taught and with the qualifications of the professors who teach them."

Gilbert Bursley, a Republican representative whose district includes the University of Michigan, expressed the same fear.

"It is interference with constitutionally independent universities," Bursley said.

The controversy over the LIRC was started with a film the center released which Sen. Lynn Francis complained was putting business in a bad light.

Center spokesmen have said scenes allegedly derogatory to businessmen were not intentional and were put into the film by the producer, who did it for "art's sake" or realism.

The controversy has been fanned by the alleged firing of Charles A. Rogers, whose release from the center started the whole thing. He charged the center with anti-business tendencies.

Rogers was in charge of the business division of the center, whose officials say Rogers was released because he was doing a poor job, even for management.

Rogers' firing, the disputed film and the intent of the center all have been blown out of proportion. The center has been of service to the community. There should be a fight to retain it despite legislative rulings.

to spend in 1962 we anticipate more funds and the will to win."

Hayworth continued, "The Democratic national committee plans to give us more help than ever before and this is one of 29 districts in the U.S. that the Democratic party is going all out to try to win from the Republicans."

Hayworth was a member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce during his stay in Congress.

In announcing his candidacy for the 1962 race, Hayworth said, "My decision to seek this office is based upon a determination to broaden Congressional support for President Kennedy's legislative program and my conviction that the President's program is what the people want."

"The Republicans have already served notice nationally that their campaign will be centered on an attempt to gain control of Congress by discrediting President Kennedy. We Democrats welcome this battle arena."

President Kennedy's appreciation of the needs of the world and nation have brought about many dramatic changes, according to Hayworth.

Hayworth listed a turn in foreign affairs, with this country regaining the initiative as one of the chief gains of the Kennedy administration.

He cited a reversal in the area of national growth as one of the chief failures during the period.

"Chamberlain has established a record which I will challenge on a number of issues," Hayworth said. "My particular concern is over his blind opposition to the forward-looking proposals of the Kennedy administration."

Chamberlain has had no comment regarding the news that Hayworth will again seek office. Hayworth lives with his wife, Frances, and has three daughters, one a junior at Michigan State.

Comparing statistics for the past three sixth district campaigns helps to place Hayworth's statements in proper perspective.

In 1956 Hayworth won the predominant Democrat Genesee county by a 10,000 vote margin.

In Republican Ingham county Chamberlain made up the 10,000 votes and a 4,000 vote edge in Livingston county won the election for him.

In 1958, an off year since there was no presidential election, voting dropped off.

Hayworth still managed to win Genesee county with 53,950 votes, but his margin had slipped to 6,000 votes. In Ingham county Chamberlain again won by a 10,000 vote margin. He dropped 1,000 votes in Livingston county, winning it by 3,000 votes to win his re-election.

In 1960 Hayworth chose not to run and Chamberlain beat O'Rourke by 4,000 votes in a surprise upset in Genesee county. He won Ingham county by 24,000 votes and took Livingston county by 5,000 votes to win his third term.

From the statistics of 1960, it would seem that Chamberlain's popularity was on the rise rather than decline. The only alternative conclusion would be that O'Rourke was an extremely unpopular candidate and even the fact that President Kennedy was winning the state could not swing enough votes to his cause.

It would seem that Hayworth is going to need all the help the Democratic National Committee can give him if he hopes to head off Chamberlain's bid for a fourth term.

dull describing reporters as they really are, plodding and harrowing, with their rights protected by the union. This play merely enforces the public's image of the journalist as a card-playing madman who spends every night at the copy desk calling in frantic last-minute "scoops" (with his hat on, of course) while the sick wife and children starve at home.

These reporters, who scoff at any news item that doesn't involve the murder of a beautiful blonde or the expose of a corrupt city official, are ably portrayed by graduate students Don Heady, East Lansing; Bud Spangler, Southgate; Roger Long, Decatur, Illinois; Alan Kennedy, Buffalo, New York; and junior Ken Andrews, Allegan.

Ken Andrews as the pill-swallowing hypochondriac newsman from the "Tribune" and Roger Long as the obnoxious Murphy of the "Journal" are especially fine performers, while Alan Kennedy as the hard-boiled McCue overplays his part somewhat, making the audience painfully aware of every "hell" and "damn" that is supposed to fall effortlessly from his lips.

Both David Calvin Berg, Oak Park senior, as Hildy Johnson, the reporter born with a "nose for news," and Foy Witherspoon as Walter Burns, Hildy's shrewdly domineering city editor, are sufficiently convincing in their roles so that the audience can despise their lack of ethics but can't help admiring all that spunk.

Robert Winters, Columbus, Ohio, who has yet to turn in a bad performance, in a University Theatre production, plays the floundering Sheriff Hartman, who can't be bothered to make the distinction between a Bolshevik and an anarchist just before election day, with just the right touch of humor.

If understood within the context of the last days of the Wilson administration when an atmosphere of narrow nationalism and intolerance swept the country, the motivations and actions of some of the characters in the play become more plausible. After the First World War, many Americans felt that dangerous radicalism was rampant in the land and that the government would surely be overthrown by the dreaded Bolsheviks.

For this reason the city officials and reporters of "The Front Page" are so intent on condemning this supposedly dangerous radical, that their actions appear to have no semblance of humanity left in them. Tickets to the execution are handed out like folly tickets, the papers are so plastered with stories about the hanging "that there isn't even room for the ads," and the pleadings of a young prostitute who respects the doomed man for treating her decently are completely ignored.

Although the play is fairly long and the actors at times fail to pick up their cues rapidly enough, the whole production moves along at a brisk pace, the many entrances and exits are handled smoothly and efficiently, and the stage movement and business is diversified enough to allow the actors to play to the whole house.

The set, designed by Anthony Collins, looked like a real city room with the desks sufficiently cluttered but always with just enough space for the men to put their feet up.

Students from the high school Communication Arts Institute helped build the set and one East Lansing High School student, Marilyn Rall, portrayed Hildy Johnson's fiancée who is always waiting for him to finish his "last" big story, in the play.

"The Front Page" will run through Saturday, June 30 with the curtain going up at 8:30 p.m. in Demonstration Hall.

'Our Town' Has Tryouts Tonight

Tryouts for "Our Town" to be performed by the Circle Theatre late in July, will be held today and Friday from 7:30 to 10:00 p.m. in the University auditorium.

New Swarthout Book Relies Upon Shock

Former Michigan State professor Glendon Swarthout, famous for his books Where the Boys Are and They Came to Cordura, has written a melodrama about a small Michigan town. Swarthout was formerly a member of the MSU Communication Skills staff.

Below is a review of his latest book by Associated Press critic Miles A. Smith.

WELCOME TO THEBES. By Glendon Swarthout. Random House, $4.95.

A melodrama about a small town boy who comes back home and starts wrecking the lives of the town fathers, this novel is full of shock words, brutal situations and polluted people.

The town is Thebes, Mich., and the boy is Sewell Smith. In a series of jumbled episodes, the author first discloses to the reader Sewell's early involvement with rape, an act of vandalism, his mother's insanity, his father's mysterious death and finally an interlude in which Sewell is an heroic soldier.

After the war, Sewell writes a bitter novel that becomes a best seller, but he soon goes down the financial slide. So when he returns to Thebes he is secretly broke and trying to find material for another book.

Feeling that the town's leaders had betrayed his father, he sees an opportunity for revenge when he discovers that six of them have become lecherously involved with a 14-year-old girl.

Trying to blackmail them for large sums of money, he also plans to use them as material for a lurid book. But the closer the situation comes to a showdown, the less sure Sewell is about his course of action. The outcome is an unusual resolution of the plot.

There are strong doses of evil in this book, without any contrasting relief. The writer's style is rather hard to follow and in some passages high-flown. Yet he can stir the reader powerfully.

All in all, it is a curious production that depends heavily on shock for its effect. For readers who like strong fare, there is plenty of it here.

Growing Camper Army Takes City on Trip

America's growing army of 15 to 20 million campers seek the great outdoors, but most of them bring along city conveniences rather than "rough it." This helps boost the economy of wooded areas like northern Michigan.

Development researcher Leslie Reid and sociologist Sheldon Lowry recently studied camper activities and preferences in Iron County on the southwest edge of Michigan's Upper Peninsula. Reid spent one summer interviewing campers.

A typical family of four spends up to $100 per week for goods and services while camping, they discovered. The equivalent of 100 families might camp in Iron County throughout a normal summer week. That would pump as many as 10,000 much-needed dollars into the local economy.

The average camper had about $1,000 invested in equipment. However, there was much variation. Reid met one family that lived comfortably in a station wagon and $100 worth of camping gear, including a small tent for their two boys.

Another family traveled in a custom-made van costing over $7,000. Mother and the kids could fix dinner or play on the go.

"Many people cited economy as a main reason for camping," Reid found. "That's especially true of larger families. While the investment is substantial, equipment can be used again next year. A motel room is usually abandoned after one night."

Camping trips lasted about two weeks on the average. A surprising number of families lived in a campground all summer with dad working in town each day.

Reid recalls one retired couple that spent their winters in Florida and camped nine months each year. They would start through the south and west in the spring, coming east through northern Michigan by late summer. Then they would go through New England and home.

Over two-thirds of the women and almost half the men surveyed had never camped during their childhood. Reid notes that camping has boomed since 1950.

Morrill Act Centennial Celebrated Monday

One hundred years ago on Monday President Abraham Lincoln signed the Morrill Land-Grant College Act, putting higher education within the reach of millions of Americans.

To commemorate the centennial of the signing of that Act, two special programs will be presented Monday.

Sponsors of the observance are Michigan State and the Michigan Civil War Centennial Commission.

In a 2 p.m. program in Kijlogg Auditorium, three distinguished historians will present papers on "The American Civil War." The public is invited.

The speakers and their topics are: Richard N. Current, University of Wisconsin, "The Central Issue in Secession and War."

Bell I. Wiley, Emory University, "The Role of the Negro in the Civil War."

Paul W. Gates, Cornell University, "The Morrill Act and Early Agricultural Science."

Chairman of the program is Dr. Frederick D. Williams, MSU associate professor of history and a member of the Michigan

Civil War Centennial Commission.

Current is an outstanding authority on Lincoln and the civil War and is author of numerous works, including, "The Lincoln Nobody Knows" and "Old Thad Stevens."

Muzzle-Loading Buffs Gather For Competitions

Civil War enthusiasts and muzzle-loading gun buffs met at Greenfield Village last week to take part in the 8th annual Muzzle-Loaders Festival. Among the participants was the 5th Light Artillery Battery of Lansing. The local unit, excellent in drill and shooting, thrilled the crowds with their close adherence to Civil War drill. The 23 military units in the event, came from eight states, and included Confederate units from the south.

Arata Defends Milk Intake

Americans are drinking less milk these days for three reasons:

1. They're trying to lose weight.
 2. They're worried about the cholesterol levels in their blood.
 3. They're scared about possible contamination from radioactive fallout of nuclear testing.
- If this were a test, you might be asked to select the best reason for drinking less milk.

By the end of this year, Michigan should be joined to Canada by another new international bridge.

This summer will find construction at its peak on the new bridge between Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. The target date for completion is Nov. 1.

When the Soo bridge is complete, it will be Michigan's third direct highway connection with Ontario. The other two are the Blue Water Bridge between Port Huron and Sarnia, and the Ambassador Bridge between Detroit and Windsor.

The Blue Water Bridge was in the news recently when its tolls were cancelled. The Ambassador Bridge still imposes tolls and so will the new bridge at the Soo.

The Ambassador is Michigan's oldest highway bridge to Canada. It was opened in 1929 and for a time was the longest bridge in the world. This title has long since passed to other structures, although the Ambassador is still the longest bridge between two countries.

Although the Ambassador is more than 30 years old, the engineers who watch over it say that with proper maintenance it will last indefinitely.

Like all large bridges, the Ambassador has never had its paint job completed. By the time the painters cover the whole bridge, it's time to start over. So the painting continues year after year, from May through October.

Every spring, when the painters resume their work, they find a couple dozen American and Canadian coins lodged among the girders under the roadway. These are good luck tokens tossed from the bridge and intended for the Detroit River.

If you were Dorothy Arata, MSU researcher, you wouldn't select any, and you wouldn't stop drinking milk.

"I know of no food which is as nutritious as milk," states Dr. Arata, an associate professor of foods and nutrition. "I am not saying milk is indispensable in the human diet. It is not. No single food is indispensable. However, milk is one of the most complete foods available in relation to its nutritive value."

Arata feels that the milk industry has been the unfair target of attacks against fallout and cholesterol.

She points out that strontium 90, the radioactive isotope which makes up fallout, follows the metabolic pathway taken by calcium in the body. But, she also says that the body prefers calcium to the strontium 90.

"In diets where the calcium content is high, little strontium will be absorbed and what is absorbed will be, for the most part, excreted," she says, reminding us at the same time that milk is a rich source of calcium.

"There may be less strontium 90 in a low calcium food, but it would be more utilized by the body than strontium 90 in foods with a high calcium content," she explains. She adds that you can't talk about the concentration of strontium 90 in absolute terms. You have to refer to it in terms of the amount of calcium a food contains as well.

Strontium 90 concentration is very low in terms of the calcium content of milk, she continues, which means that "milk supplies calcium less contaminated with strontium 90 than do many other foods."

Pointing out that levels of strontium 90 now present in our civilization are far below that set as a permissible safe limit, Dr. Arata says, "In my opinion, the problem of strontium 90 contamination does not exist at the present time."

Attacking the milk problem on another front, Dr. Arata feels that milk should not be considered the villain in heart failure cases because of the relation of fat in milk and other foods to cholesterol levels.

"It is not proved that lowering blood cholesterol will protect against heart failure," she says. "In fact, a few studies have begun to appear which suggest this is not the case. The cause of atherosclerosis may well be a metabolic fault. We just don't know."

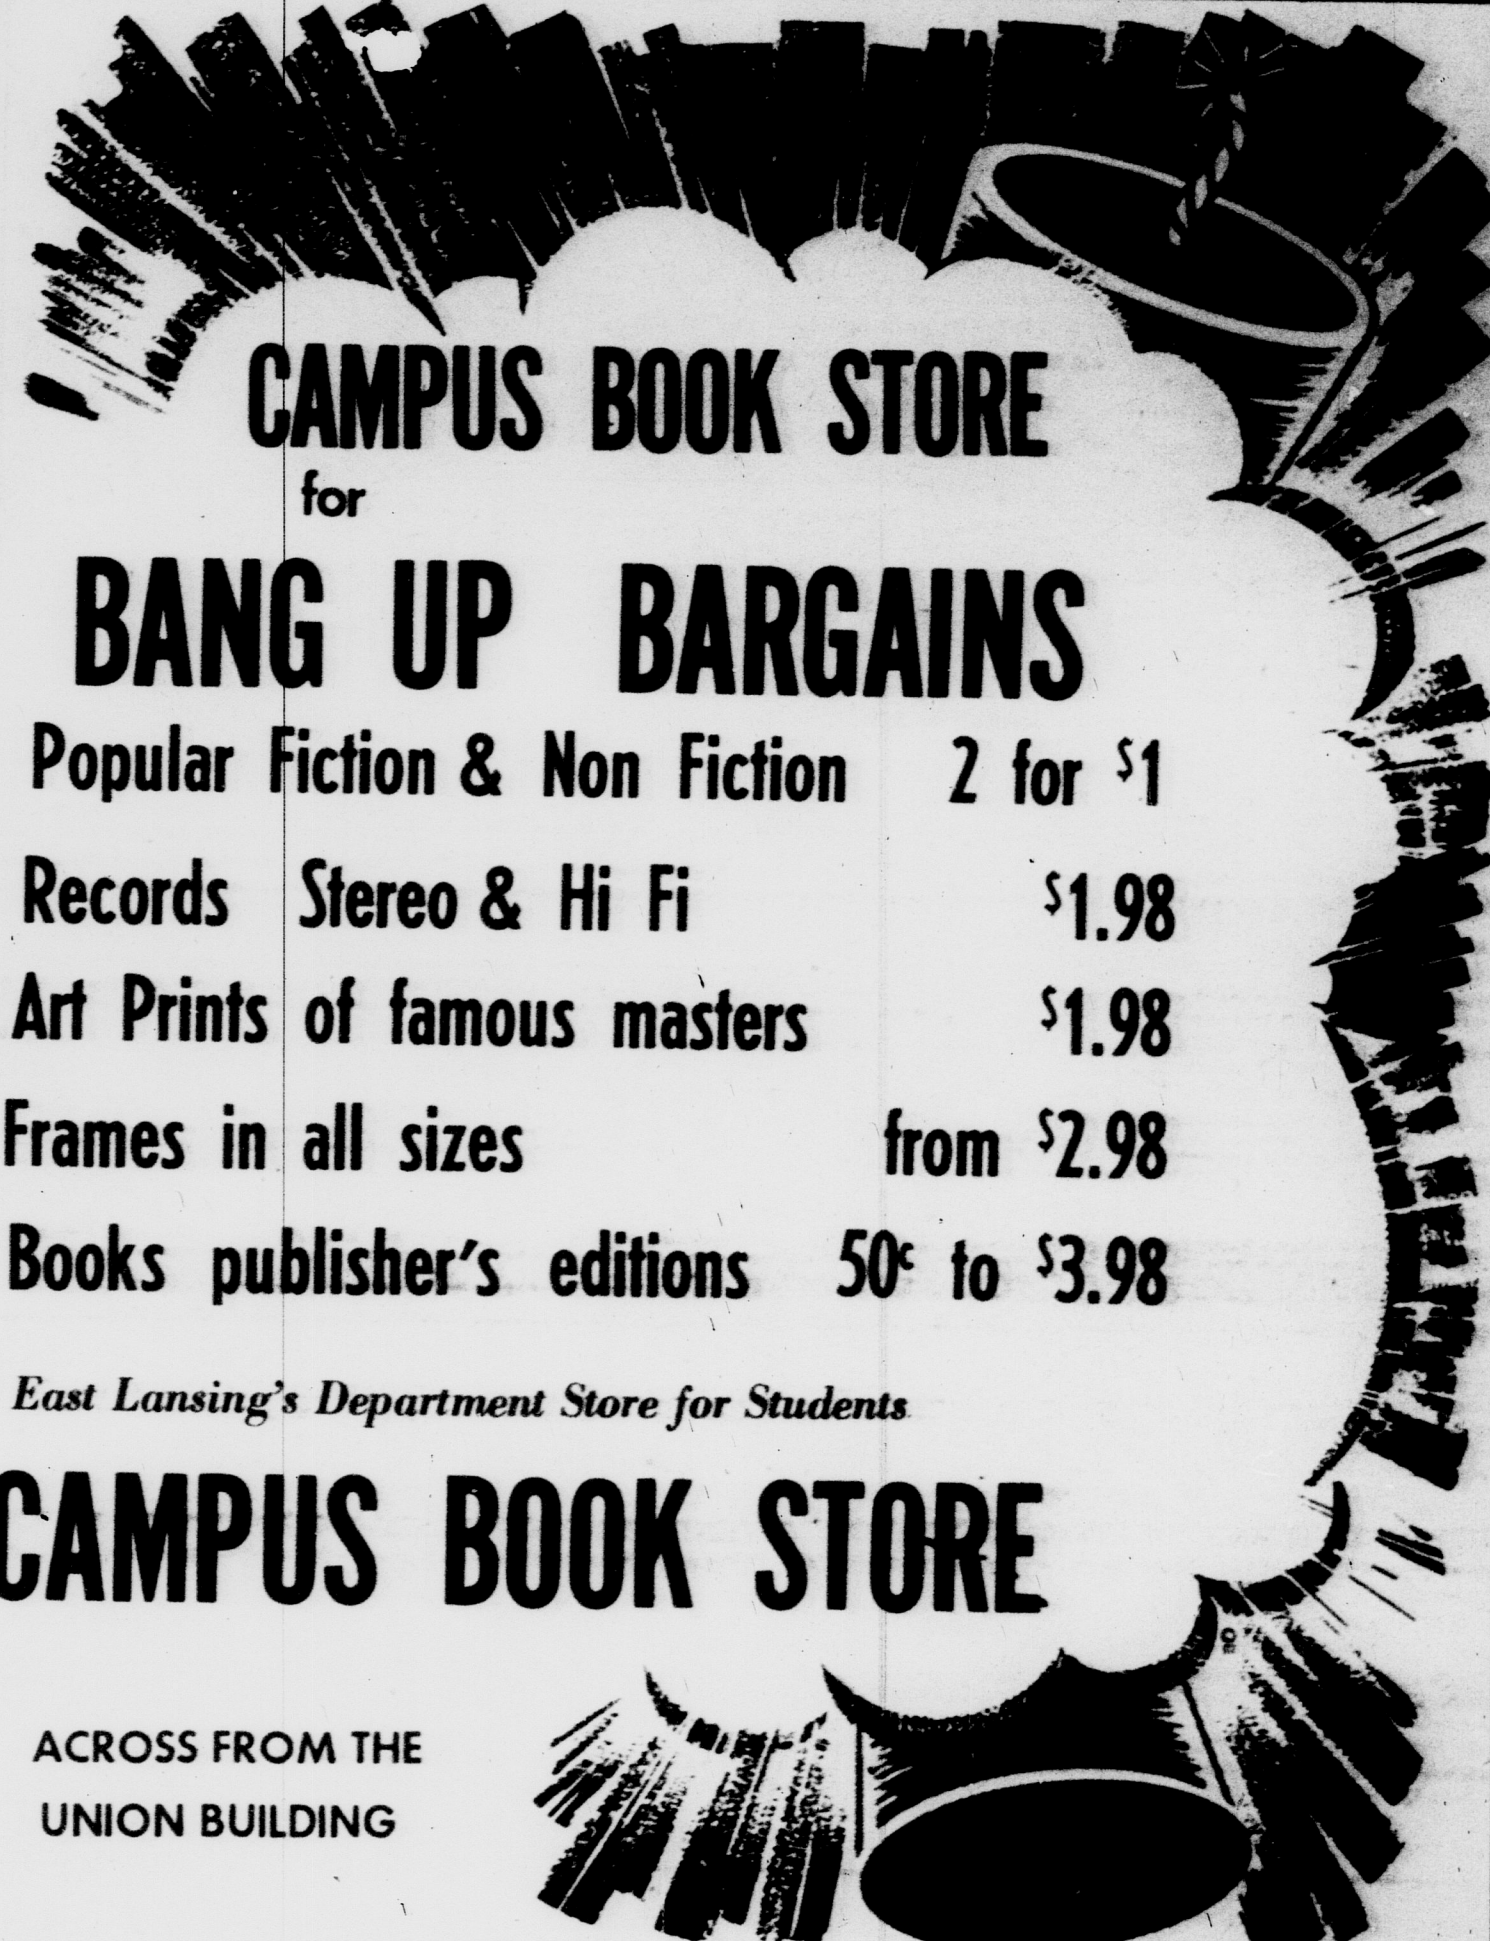

To combat milk's possible contributions to overweight, Dr.

Arata suggests that skim milk be used in place of whole milk.

Since fat contains more than twice the number of calories than does an equal weight of carbohydrate, she says it is "simply a matter of good horse-sense to cut calories by reducing the fat content of the diet."

Gordon J. Aldridge, director of the School of Social Work, is participating in a three-day meeting of the Social Work Advisory Panel this week in Washington, D.C.

The panel, of which Dr. Aldridge is a member, is an advisory group to the Department of Vocational Rehabilitation of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. This week's meeting is to evaluate training programs in social work rehabilitation offered by American universities.

Myrtle R. Reul, assistant professor of social work at Michigan State University, delivered two addresses this week at the 23rd annual international convention of the American Collectors Association in French Lick, Ind.

Reul spoke before the general session on "The Psychology of Human Motivation and Reaction." Her other presentation, "Understanding Ourselves," was delivered at a luncheon for delegate's wives and the women members of the association.

The association has a membership of over 2,500 collection agencies serving more than 8,000 communities in the U.S. and in Canada and other foreign countries.

Mary Lou Second In Queen Contest

Mary Lou Gillengerten has placed second in the National Queen Contest, it was learned here.

Miss Gillengerten, an East Lansing freshman, participated in an intense competition with girls from across the nation. Criteria of the 40 judges were academic achievements, personality, poise and attractiveness.

College To Sign Out

Monday marks the start of three new colleges at MSU and the end of the college of Science and Arts.

According to Dean Lloyd C. Ferguson, the change over to the Colleges of Arts and Letters, Social Science and Natural Science will be made smoothly with as little inconvenience as possible.

"Those students who are in the upper school will follow their present program through to graduation," Ferguson said. "Those students who have not attained upper school standing will have their choice of which college to go into."

The program will be comparable to those we have now, and there will not be any drastic changes in the next few months. Perhaps over the next year there will be some changes.

Divisional social science majors will be put into the College of Arts and Letters on the College of Social Science depending on the program they have been carrying.

Louis McQuitty, formerly the head of the psychology department and Paul Varg, professor of history will head the Colleges of Arts and Letters and Social Science, respectively.

The Board of Trustees had not yet announced who will head the College of Natural Science.

The office of the College of Natural Science will be in the Natural Science building and the offices of Arts and Letters and Social Science will be in Berkeley hall.

The College of Science and Arts handled 36 percent of the instruction in the university and this is the main reason for the breakup.

Kenney Gets Ford Grant

Charles D. Kenney, associate professor of social science, has been granted a Ford International Programs research grant to study at Stanford and the University of California next year. Kenney will do research in the Soviet policy for underdeveloped areas from September to August.

Frosh Means Anxiety

By ROBERT H. ROSS
Of The State News Staff

Anxieties and freshmen: the words are almost synonymous. Each year the total number of incoming students increases and chaos could easily prevail if the entire group knew absolutely nothing about the facilities of MSU and how to use them.

For 13 years the University has sponsored a series of Summer Counseling Clinics for high school students who have been accepted for fall term. Today there are 11 sessions of three and a half days each.

Rowland R. Pierson, acting director of the Counseling Center at MSU, stated the purpose of the Clinic as "one part of the University's orientation type activities to assist entering students to make the best possible adjustment to the University."

In the time allotted each group, the new students meet members of the faculty, become familiar with the campus, experience resident hall living, meet with upperclassmen, make new friendships for the fall term and complete in advance most of the preregistration requirements.

If this sounds like a lot to accomplish in three days, it is. And the man responsible to see that all goes well is Thomas A. Goodrich, coordinator of the Summer Clinics.

Goodrich calls the process "extending Welcome Week back into the summer months." Welcome Week now is mainly for those freshmen who can't come to one of the clinics.

He said the program involves the taking of several different tests: general academic aptitude, reading and English. A math exam is given to these students entering the engineering or science fields.

Budding English majors, future foreign service employees and all others taking foreign languages are given placement tests in foreign languages.

Goodrich outlined the program as follows: on the first day the students set up their schedules with counselors and hear a talk by John Maes entitled "Look Under Every Rock."

The talk outlines all the resources available to students at the University.

Parents even get into the act on opening day when Vice-President Gordon Sabine and Beulah Hedahl of the Counseling Center meet them to discuss the services of the University.

Things really get rolling on the second day: tests start, chest X-rays and speech and hearing tests are given, and the ROTC detachments meet the young men.

Also on the second day, faculty members explain the requirements and opportunities in their respective departments.

Clinic counselors then meet the students individually for interpretation of their test results and consideration of all other matters that will assist in making sound academic and vocational plans.

Only after this procedure is complete does the student meet his academic adviser, who will formally enroll him or her for the fall term program of studies.

That night the students are introduced to the whole range of extra-curricular activities when representatives from the Dean of Students office talks on "The Orientation To Campus Life."

Tests continue on the third day and the religious advisers explain their services and the location of the various churches in the East Lansing area.

Fun sets in that evening during the Clinic's recreation period. The IM building is opened to the new freshmen. They play on the courts and relax in the pools.

Former Spartan Star Runs for U.S. Squad

Willie Atterberry, former Michigan State Track star from Detroit, will be a member of the U.S. track team which competes against Poland today and Saturday and Russia July 21 and 22. Atterberry, Big Ten 1,000 yard run champion in 1960, earned a berth on the American team by winning the 440 yard hurdles in :50.5 at the NAAU track championships at Walnut, Calif., last week.

He edged Rex Cawley, a former Michigan high school hurdles champion from Farmington. Cawley joins the U.S. team, also.

Alaska has the longest sea-coast of any state, with at least 6,640 miles. Florida is second with 1,197; California third with 840.

Alumni Relations Program Two Way Street-Keesler

The Alumni Relations program is a two way street, said Starr Keesler, director of Alumni Relations. The alumni can build the image of the University and the University can keep the alumni informed.

Through the alumni program MSU graduates continue to contribute and feel a part of the University even though they have earned their degrees and departed.

The University keeps track of its alumni through Keesler's department, which serves as a liaison between the University and the alumni.

Prior to adding this June's graduating class, Keesler said, the department had on file the records of more than 71,000 alumni. These are arranged alphabetically, by geographical location and by class.

All MSU graduates are life members of the alumni association. Unlike many college alumni groups, the MSU association has no dues.

Alumni are kept informed of current University activities and receive news of other alumni and their doings through three University publications, Keesler said.

They receive free two bulletins, one containing general news of alumni functions, students and faculty, and the other sports information.

A third magazine, edited by alumni and published by the Department of Information Services, is sent free to alumni their first year out of the University.

One of the University's most dynamic alumni activities is the Alumni Club. MSU has 87 alumni clubs in 22 states, the Philippines and Japan.

"This is one way we have of keeping in contact with those who don't get back to the campus often," Keesler said. "Interpreting the University to their communities is something alumni are very helpful in doing."

The department sends out between 1 1/4 and 1 1/2 million mailings a year and handles some 1600 change-of-addresses every month. It also processes most of the addressing of mailings for the various alumni clubs.

Other services offered by the department are the contracting of speakers for alumni clubs, distribution of films and the coordination of class reunions.

Homecoming and academic reunion by colleges and departments are two on-campus functions held for alumni on an annual basis.

The anniversary reunion pattern, Keesler said, falls on the 5th, 10th and 25th years after graduation. After the 25th anniversary, reunions are held every five years.

WMSB to Present Intertel Documentary

WMSB-TV will present "Living with a Giant," the newest Intertel documentary dealing with the study of the fears and prejudices that many Canadians harbor toward their high industrial neighbor, the United States.

The program will be telecast 6:30 p.m. on Channel 10, Thursday.

The hour long documentary uncovers the anxieties Canadians feel about their efforts to establish a national identity.

Producer-director Rollo Gamble explores Canadian opinion and the schism within Canada itself by moving among residents of two contrasting communities: Guelph, Ont. and St. Hyacinthe, Queb.

The editor of a local French newspaper in St. Hyacinthe, Yves Michaud, discusses their next door neighbor who is not the United States but British Canada. As his people's spokesman Michaud says, "We are Canadians, speaking French, living the American way under British traditions."

In Guelph, local businessmen reveal their fears of U.S. economic and cultural domination in an argument at the bar of the Royal Hotel. The owner of a millinery shop explains to an irate customer why she sells products of American as well as Canadian industry.

Vets Club Resumes 2-Point Dinner

The Veterans Association All-University 2.0 dinner, not held during the 1961-62 school year, will be held in October. The 2.0 dinner previously has had great success in bringing together students and faculty on an informal basis.

Last year's dinner, held at the Coral Gables and attended by over 1,000, featured Governor Swainson as guest speaker.

Another noted speaker will be guest at the dinner in October and plans for additional entertainment are in progress.

The Veterans Association has sponsored the 2.0 dinner to promote open discussion between the MSU faculty and students away from the campus.

Enthusiastic support has been received in the past and many good ideas have been exchanged

College Sound Proposition

Education is an increasingly sound dollars and cents proposition for both the individual and the community, according to John L. O'Donnell, assistant director of the Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

In 1949 a man with four or more years of college earned about $93,000 more between the ages of 25 and 64 than a high school graduate. By 1958, according to a U.S. Department of Labor Study, the difference had increased to $152,000.

"As modern technology continues its breakneck pace there is every reason to think that the advantages of an education will become even more pronounced," said Dr. O'Donnell in the June issue of the Michigan Economic Record. "The general character of current trends is demonstrated by the sharp rise in the proportion of the labor force engaged in managerial and professional work."

The surging demand for education presents many problems including the inevitable costs of such growth, according to O'Donnell.

"We have no difficulty praising and encouraging rising expenditures in new plant and equipment that involve many billions of dollars of debt," he said, "yet we often find ourselves deploring expenditures on human capital. Even professional economists have tended to overlook the vital importance of the quality of human capital as part of our total capital resources."

Last year Professor Theodore W. Schultz reviewed these problems before the American Economic Association.

"Among other things," said O'Donnell, "Professor Schultz noted that increases in our national output have been large as compared with the increases in physical capital, and ventured the opinion that investment in human capital is probably the major explanation of this puzzle."

"Previous failures to recognize human capital as part of total capital have led to some wide miscalculations. As an illustration, one has only to remember how much more quickly Europe recovered from the war than most experts had predicted.

"Equally important are the cultural values involved," he said. "When the private and social benefits of education are added up, they present an impressive picture."

GOV. JOHN B. SWAINSON (left) and State Police Commissioner Joseph A. Childs have urged Michigan citizens to join in an all-out anti-litter campaign this summer. Swainson and Childs, who is chairman of the Governor's Keep Michigan Beautiful Committee, are holding a poster which the Committee will be distributing throughout the State.

Litter Campaign Starts Here

Gov. John B. Swainson and State Police Commissioner Joseph Childs have urged Michigan citizens to join in an all-out anti-litter campaign.

Commissioner Childs is chairman of the governor's anti-litter committee.

"Summer is the time of year when Michigan families and out-of-state visitors enjoy our outdoors to the fullest," Swainson said. "We encourage motorists to enjoy using our highways and state and roadside parks—but please leave them clean for the enjoyment of others."

Swainson said motorists should set a good example for their children and neighbors by always disposing of trash in proper receptacles and carrying litterbags in their cars.

The anti-litter committee slogan is, "Keep Michigan Beautiful."

Charcoal burns with a pale blue flame at high temperatures and glows at lower temperatures.

Cytologist To Canada

G. B. Wilson, professor of Botany and Plant Pathology at Michigan State University, has accepted an invitation to present 10 public lectures this summer at the University of New Brunswick, Canada.

Wilson will speak on "Problems and Progress in Experimental Biology," in lectures given between July 3 and Aug. 10.

A member of the MSU staff since 1948, Wilson is a recognized authority on cytology, the study of cells. His research, which concerns regulation of the reproductive cycle of pea-root cells, has significance for understanding the production of cancer.

Science Writer Attends Meet

James Stokley, associate professor of journalism, will attend the semi-annual convention of The National Association of Science Writers, in Chicago this week.

The group will meet in connection with the American Medical Association which holds its meeting at the same time.

Professor Stokley, a member of the NASW, will confer with reporters and feature writers on science during the meeting. He teaches science and technical writing on campus.

Museum Given Diaries

Receipt of four significant and valuable additions to the Museum manuscript collection was announced by Marvin R. Cain, curator of history.

The additions are extensive 19th century diaries of three men and the personal correspondence of six constitutional convention delegates, including that of Pres. John A. Hannah.

The diaries of Charles H. Thompson, Lansing, cover the 58 years from 1858 to 1916 during which he worked in state governmental offices. Mr. Thompson's diaries were donated to the museum by his grandchildren, Miss Ellen Thompson, 625 N. Deerfield, and Max G. Thompson, 2529 Eaton rd., both of Lansing, and Leroy H. Thompson, Riviera Beach, Florida. All three grandchildren are graduates of MSU.

A second set of diaries, those of Edwin Osband, give an unusually detailed report of hospital life during the civil war. Mr. Osband was a medical orderly in Union hospitals from 1861 through 1864.

His diaries were donated by his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Larrabee, 1917 Teel, Lansing, and his granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. C. Edward Johnson, 1001 E. Columbia, Mason.

George Wilson's diaries, covering the years 1868-1922, give a detailed picture of farming techniques and social life in the Aurelius area. His diaries were given on permanent loan by Mrs. Ward Bullen, 328 N. Onondaga rd., Mason.

"It is unusual to find detailed diaries, like these, kept over long periods of time," said Cain. "Such diaries, because of their continuity, are of great value in reconstructing the life and

The personal correspondence of constitutional convention delegates will supplement official reports and will be of help to Michigan historians.

Delegates who donated their correspondence are: Arthur G. Elliot, Jr., 17 Kenberton, Pleasant Ridge, chairman of the standing committee on local government; Claud R. Erickson, 1307 Cambridge rd., Lansing, chairman of the standing committee on miscellaneous provisions and schedules; Mr. Hannah, chairman of the standing committee on legislative organization; J. 1962 Map Ready

The 1962 Official Michigan State Highway Map is off the press, the State Highway Department reports.

State Highway Commissioner John C. Mackie said nearly 2,000 changes have been made on the map since last year, mainly the result of 238 miles of new freeway that were opened to traffic in Michigan during 1961.

In addition, detailed strip maps of the state's major freeways are on the map for the first time this year. They show location and design of freeway interchanges.

This year's highway map has nine color photos on the front and back covers, including pictures of the Capitol Building, the 500 Locks, the Mackinac Bridge, Interstate 75 Freeway in Northern Michigan and other scenic views.

Mackie said 600,000 copies of the new map have been printed by Rand McNally & Co. of Skokie, Ill.

Highest priority has been given to distribution of maps to nearly 25,000 individuals who have written in recent weeks asking for a copy of the map.

At the same time, bulk shipments have gone out to tourist associations, chambers of commerce, hotels, oil companies, travel bureaus and others.

"The average Michigan motorist will drive nearly 10,000 miles this year--most of it on highways in this state," Mackie said. "The wise driver will have a copy of the new map handy because of the many changes that have occurred on the state's highway system during the last year."

Copies of the map are available to the public by writing: State Highway Department, 732-C Mason Bldg., Lansing.

Life Saving Explained

The tragedy of the thousands of persons who drowned last summer is that many lives could have been saved if a rescuer or bystander had known how to apply artificial respiration.

The important things about artificial respiration are: Know how to do it; start applying it immediately after the victim has been removed from the water. Don't wait for an ambulance or for help to arrive. It probably will be too late.

The American Red Cross offers courses in life saving that include artificial respiration. But, even without formal training, most people could manage to give assistance to the rescued swimmer.

There are two methods of artificial respiration currently being taught: Mouth-to-mouth, and back-pressure, arm-lift. Of the two, first aid experts usually agree that the mouth-to-mouth, or mouth-to-nose method is the most practical, in the absence of special equipment.

In the mouth-to-mouth method, first clear the air passages by drawing the tongue forward with your fingers. Place the victim halfway between a face-up and side position, tilt the head well back to insure a clear air passageway. Take a deep breath, place your mouth over the victim's nose or mouth, and breathe into his lungs until you see the chest rise and feel the lungs expand. In mouth-to-mouth, pinch victim's nostrils shut while breathing into his lungs. Remove your mouth and let the victim exhale. Place your hand between the ribs and navel and apply slight pressure to expel all air. Repeat the cycle 15 times a minute.

The manual method should be used if for any reason the mouth-to-mouth method cannot be used.

Place the victim in a face-up position. Place something under the victim's shoulders to raise them and allow the head to drop backward. Grasp victim's arms at the wrists, crossing and pressing victim's wrists against the lower chest. Immediately pull arms upward, outward and backward as far as possible.

New School For Village

The new Spartan Village school will open in the fall and will include the kindergarten and first grades, Wilbur C. Herbst, principal of the Red Cedar school, said.

Herbst will also be principal of the Spartan Village unit.

Herbst said four sections of kindergarten and two sections of the first grade will be taught. He believed enrollment would be around 150 students.

The purpose of the school is to take some pressure off the crowded conditions in the Red Cedar school and other buildings where classes are now being conducted, Herbst said.

The Spartan school is located on Middlevale rd., on the west side of Spartan Village.

Administratively, the new school will be a part of the Red Cedar school, Herbst added.

READY BY FALL-The Spartan Village School, now nearing completion, will be the first grade school for University student's children located west of Harrison Road. The new school will be attended chiefly by children of the villagers.

Theologian To Speak

Edward Heppenstall, professor of systematic theology, will be guest speaker at the 10:50 a.m. Sabbath worship service of the East Lansing Seventh-day Adventist Church, Saturday, June 30, said Pastor Roger W. Coon.

The local Adventist congregation is temporarily meeting at the University Lutheran Church, Division and Ann Streets.

Heppenstall is a professor at the S.D.A. Theological Seminary and at Andrews University, both in Berrien Springs. He received the Ph.D. in theology from the University of Southern California, Los Angeles.

Seventh-day Adventists in East Lansing will join fellow members of the other 162 churches in their Michigan Conference at the annual camp meeting convocation at Grand Ledge July 5 to July 14. No local services will be held during that time, said Pastor Coon.

Grads Play MA Concert

Two graduate piano recitals will be performed in the Music Auditorium Friday and Sunday.

Friday at 8:15 Olive Padgett will play for partial fulfillment of requirements for the degree of Masters of Music. She received her Bachelor's here in 1960.

Sunday at 4 p.m. Virginia Rice, Lawton Okla., will play for partial fulfillment of the Master of Music degree. She earned her Bachelor's at North Texas State College, Denton Tex., in 1961.

Other performances planned are the University Convocation, Summer School Band, 10 a.m. Monday in the University auditorium and a recital of chamber music as part of the Congress of Strings, 8:15 p.m. Monday, in the Music Auditorium.

Chemistry Prof Talks In Sweden

Carl H. Brubaker, Jr., professor of chemistry, is reporting on his research to the 7th International Conference on Coordination Chemistry, in Stockholm, Sweden this week.

He will present a paper he wrote with Calvin M. Love, graduate student and Lawrence P. Quinn, former graduate student now at the University of California at Los Angeles. It describes part of a study by Dr. Brubaker on electron transfer reaction.
