Minister Killed At Protest

Hit By Tractor At School Site

CLEVELAND (AP)—A young Presbyterian minister was crushed to death under the treads of a tractor Tuesday during a demonstration protesting construction of a new school opposed by integrationist groups.

The Rev. Bruce W. Klunder, 26, a white man with what his friends described as "strong feelings" for Negro civil rights, had flung himself face down in the dirt. The tread of a front-end loader tractor crushed his chest and neck.

His death stunned a crowd of about 500, mostly Negroes, who had gathered at the site of a new public elementary school at Lakeview Road on the city's east side. They were there to protest construction of the school in the Negro neighborhood on grounds it would perpetuate segregation instead of furthering classroom integration.

More than 50 demonstrators were hauled off in police paddy wagons, and others threw bricks, bottles and stones.

The Rev. Mr. Klunder, from Baker, Ore., was assistant executive secretary of the Student Christian Union, an interdenominational organization serving (continued on page 4)

WALLACE

Wallace Early Vote Surprises

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The earliest returns from Wisconsin indicated Tuesday night that Wisconsin Republicans were taking advantage of the open presidential primary to vote for Southern segregationist George C. Wallace in his challenge to administration Democrats.

The Alabama governor, who declared during the campaign that he would "shake the eye teeth of national leaders in both parties" if he attracted 25,000 votes, was hot on the heels of Wisconsin's Gov. John W. Reynolds, the Democratic favorite son pledged to and praised by President Lyndon B. Johnson.

The unopposed Republican favorite son, Rep. John W. Byrnes, was tailing the combined Democratic totals in most of the first precincts, which historically would be Republican in a general election.

At 9 p.m. in 168 of 3,552 precincts, the vote was: Reynolds (D), 7,681; Wallace (D), 3,137; Byrnes (R), 4,852.

Steel Giants Indicted On Anti-Trust Charges

NEW YORK (AP)—Eight of the nation's giant steel companies were indicted on federal anti-trust charges Tuesday--an outgrowth of the dramatic showdown over pricing two years ago this week between President John F. Kennedy and the industry.

The defendants, including the industry's no. 1 firm, U.S. Steel, were accused of conspiring in secret hotel room meetings to fix prices in the $3.6 billion carbon sheet steel business. Two steel executives also were named in the federal grand jury indictment.

The government claimed the price fixing in sheet steel increased the cost to consumers of such items as auto bodies, washing machines, kitchen cabinets, refrigerators, office furniture and other products widely in demand. About one-third of all finished steel mill products are made of sheet steel.

The anti-trust indictment was the latest in a long series of price fixing prosecutions brought by the government against U.S. Steel and other producers.

The firms and individuals indicted, with their standing as to size in the industry indicated in parenthesis, were:

U.S. Steel (1) and its assistant general manager for administrative services, James P. Barton.

Bethlehem Steel Co. (2) and its former assistant vice president of sales, W.J. Stephens, who now is president of Jones and Laughlin Steel Corp.

Republic Steel Corp. (3), Jones and Laughlin (4), National Steel Corp. (5), Armco Steel Corp. (6), Wheeling Steel Corp. (11), and Great Lakes Steel Corp.

Named as co-conspirators, but not defendants, and expected to testify against the others were Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co. (7), Pittsburgh Steel Co. (14) and Granite City Steel Co.

Rep. Phil M. Landrum, D-Ga., whose sponsorship of the bill is expected to bring it 40 or 50 Southern votes, challenged Aynes' statement.

Committee Approves Request

Ask $1 Million In Student Aid

From Our Wire Services

Michigan's 10 state supported colleges and universities passed their exams in the state senate appropriations committee Tuesday with flying colors.

The legislative committee voted to give the schools every dollar of the $131,352,836 Gov. Romney requested for their operation in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

As a bonus the committee also recommended appropriation of an unrequested sum of $1 million for the state higher education assistance authority.

The money would be divided equally into sums for loans and scholarships.

The committee's decision to stick to Governor Romney's higher education budget recommendations came as a surprise.

Republican Senate Caucus Chairman Stanley Thayer of Ann Arbor had predicted sharp cuts would be made in both the MSU and University of Michigan budgets.

Under the bill reported out by the appropriations committee, U-M would receive the largest budget of all the colleges and universities.

Michigan would receive $44,086,139 for its operation in the next fiscal year.

Ask RFK About Anti-Poverty Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy ran into increased Republican opposition to the administration's anti-poverty bill Tuesday.

The GOP members of the House education and labor subcommittee, who let other cabinet officers off fairly lightly in previous hearings on the program, peppered Kennedy with complaints about it.

Kennedy, deeply tanned from a spring skiing vacation, stood firmly by the bill and made it clear the idea of an all-out attack on poverty started with his brother, the late President John F. Kennedy.

Republicans expressed concern about the cost of the $962.5-million program and raised questions involving race and religion, apparently in an effort to shake the support of Southern Democrats.

Rep. William H. Ayres, R-Ohio, said because of the large numbers of negroes mired in poverty and the limited number

Summer Exchange With Nigeria Planned

A group of students will study this summer in one of the fastest growing nations in emergent Africa under a new student exchange program with the University of Nigeria at Nsukka.

The five-week international study program will begin Aug. 6, after the close of the first half of the summer term.

The exchange program will be the first non-Western overseas study project open to all students from freshmen to graduates.

Any student who will have been enrolled in the University for six months or more during 1964 is eligible to apply for the MINEX (Michigan State University/University of Nigeria Exchange Program) summer session at Nsukka.

Classes will begin on the Nigerian campus Aug. 10 and continue through Sept. 15. Students will take course work in the geography, sociology and government of Africa, according to MINEX coordinator Sheldon Cherney of the Nigerian Program office.

The courses will be offered at the junior and senior levels, with graduate credit available. Credits earned at the University of Nigeria will be accepted by MSU, Cherney said.

He added that field trips will be arranged to enhance the content of the academic program.

Some 25 students are expected to be in the initial group which travels to Nigeria this summer. All classes are taught in English, the official language of Nigeria.

Details on course content, field trips, travel arrangements and cost of the program can be obtained from Sheldon Cherney, associate coordinator of the University of Nigeria Program, Wells Hall A, Room 2.

All The Signs Say Spring's Arrived

The Publishing Imperative

"Publish or perish?" This is not the question which must be faced, as several faculty members have said in the State News series ending today.

The problem facing University instructors is whether or not to do original research in their fields, thus increasing the store of knowledge available and improving their own ability to teach the material. Publishing is merely the best way of aiding communications between members of separate faculties. The thought that professors who spend their time doing research and writing can not devote sufficient time to their teaching duties is not valid.

Without the opportunity to take part in the intellectual give-and-take in their own fields, faculty members are less able to help their students. Time for teaching is not the only factor.

Faculty members who do not publish do not "perish" in the sense that publication of original work keeps them "alive" in the University. Some may not feel the need to publish their work and will not lose their effectiveness as teachers because of this.

But all University professors who wish to keep abreast of the developments in their areas of specialization must either do research of their own or do extensive reading in the work of other researchers.

The University campus is not an educational factory as much as it is the center of the latest thought in all areas of interest to the members of the community it serves. Research and publication are merely two of the ways in which the University's leaders give it the character it must have as an intellectual center.

College Not An Orgy

This week's Newsweek magazine offers its readers a six-page spread on "The Moral Revolution on the U.S. Campus," guaranteed to panic parents and add to a degrading stereotype of the college student.

After questioning students across the country's campuses, Newsweek implied that college is one grand orgy.

Following in the steps of its circulation-rival Time magazine, which published a similar article last term, Newsweek implies that students spend more time in pursuit of a bad partner than an academic education.

The article quietly qualifies its accusations early in the story: "...chastity remains a virtue for most of today's 4 1/2 million college students..."

Then it adds a confidential "...but" and slips its readers six pages of colorful quips from psychiatrists, sociologists, and college administrators and students.

To quote a Newsweek quote: "It's a load off my mind losing my virginity," says one Vas-sar redhead. "Many girls feel inadequate because they're not having affairs."

This quote--the entire article--can easily distort the public's image of the moral standards of the majority of college students. Newsweek failed to make clear that the "new morality" standards it describes are the lower standards of a minority and are grossly unrepresentative of the great majority of college students.

In a letter to the State News, Newsweek bills the story as a "serious probe into a sociological phenomenon with consequences...in their own way, as great as a disarmament negotiations or a Presidential campaign."

To us it appears that Newsweek decided to boost its sales with an exaggerated and sensationalized "probe" trying to lure back readers it may have lost to Time magazine and Time's winter-time view of U.S. morality.

Riot Squad, Take Note

A short note to those who would preserve the present fall and winter term men's dress regulations, and to those who feel that better dress means better manners:

Spring term is here and with it the relaxed dress regulations for which we have been campaigning, and we haven't noticed any increase in the number of "mess hall" riots or in the barbarism which was supposedly held in check solely by the enforcement of dress rules.

Men's Hall Association may wish to keep this in mind when evaluating the results of its survey of men's opinions on dress regs taken last term.

Research Vital To Faculty

Do You Always Take The Courses With The Shortest Waiting Lines?

Editor's Note: This is the last of a three-part series on the professor and the publishing imperative.

By LINDA MILLER
State News Staff Writer

The scholar-teacher image--is this definition inherent in the University professor ideal?

Robert E. Brown, professor of history, believes that it is. "By very definition, the University implies that its faculty are both teachers and scholars, for this is where the research and publication are done."

Students should be trained to do research. It is better, said Brown, if the professor has his own method than to pass on others'.

Simeon E. Leland, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at Northwestern University, backs up Brown's statement: "Research is necessary for good teaching. The man who knows teaches best."

"The University professor should be a scholar of real standing," Russell B. Nye, professor of English, said. "Teaching and scholarly research must go together, but publishing is a separate question."

Nye defines teaching as a research function, for the professor does not solely transmit knowledge, but also hopes to discover it.

Marjorie E. Gesner, associate professor of history, recalls that the professors for whom she had a scholar-teacher image do not stand out in her mind because of their publishing.

"They published, but in a limited specialized area," she said. Laurence S. Cooke, associate professor of social science, observes that students seem to think that the good professors are the "tough" ones.

"The teacher's product is a well-enlightened student," he said. How can this be measured? "The best quantitative evidence of a professor's worth is his publishing."

If the scholar-teacher ideal is what University professors should strive for, then does it not mold to a large extent the reputation of the University?

Buford L. Steffire, professor of education, says that the larger the school, the more value placed on publishing.

"MSU was not as conscious of its public image 20 years ago as it is today," he said. "It is changing to a national University, and there tends to be a research transition."

Faculty members generally admit that publishing upgrades the University and determines, in part, its reputation. And the better the school's reputation, the more valuable is the student's degree.

"Over the past ten years anyone who came here should have realized that research and publication are part of his job," Brown said. "It is a deadly proposition not to publish here."

Brown pointed out that there are "plenty of places" where a man can make as much money and just teach. On this campus, there is the University College; off campus there are high schools, junior colleges, community colleges, teacher's colleges and small liberal arts colleges.

Steffire finds that although the University is attracting those who want to research, MSU is a state-supported land-grant school and "cannot be a Harvard or a Chicago" with exclusive emphasis on research.

"There is room here for different kinds of professors," Brown said that the real reputation of the University rests with not more than 250 of its members. These men do research and publish.

If the professor at Michigan State must research and publish his findings to avoid being crushed by the competition, and if the University's ideal and mild force is the scholar-teacher image, it is yet wise to consider the words of Miss Gesner: "Staying alive in your profession depends on how well you do what you are supposed to do."

Views Brazil Take-Over

To the Editor:

It will never be known whether or not the Brazilian military's ouster of President Joao Goulart represents the will of the people, as suggested in the interviews with Brazilian students at MSU reported April 3, since it took place without benefit of election.

It is no service to the cause of constitutionalism, however, to talk as the newspapers have been doing of Mazilli as the "constitutional" successor to a mandated unconstitutional.

It was sad that none of the students was quoted as expressing any reservations about military takeovers. Supposing Mazilli had not been acceptable to the generals? What then?

The excuse in this instance, as in many others, was that it was done "to prevent a Cuban-style takeover." I know this is meant to be an unanswerable argument and to silence all critics, but I wonder how much different the present take-over looks to the Latin-American people.

U-M View Is 'Sour Grapes'

To the Editor:

Regarding U of M's complaint about Michigan State's luring National Merit winners with scholarships.

"Sour grapes."

As a National Merit winner who has been given no financial assistance from Michigan State, I can assure you that money is not the reason that I am here. Quite the contrary. The high out-of-state tuition operates as a great deterrent to those like myself who must leave ample scholarship funds in his own state, and consequently, pay out of his own pocket just to come here. I know of several National Merit winners in the same straits.

Granted Michigan State's selling pitch is extensive and very effective, but money is not the lure. A National Merit winner balances the possibility of greater curriculum enrichment with that of prestige, flexibility and diversity against rigid course requirements and pre-requisites and cannot help but choose the former.

It is the Honors College and the faculty-student relationship that the Honors College inspires that attracts the National Merit winner, not the slim promise of money.

Of the 30 to 50 colleges that contact all National Merits with a selling pitch, many offer money in a more generous and promising manner than does MSU, but they do not receive the record numbers of National Merit winners.

If the University of Michigan wants to attract top scholars they will have to offer a program commensurate with the student's abilities and needs or they will continue to lose out to more forward looking universities.

National Merit winners have shown that they agree with the recent issue of "How to Find Your College": "Michigan State offers the superior student the finest under-graduate education in the United States."

Human Relations Meeting 'A Play'

To the Editor:

On the night of April 1, a very appropriate date indeed, the East Lansing Playhouse met under the title of the East Lansing Human Relations Board. A full house attended the performance, probably one of the best of the current season.

Although billed as a more serious play, in reality, it was more of a comedy. The cast, suave and intellectual, generally gave a poor performance. There were, however, adequate performances by one or two members of the cast, but this was not sufficient to offset the general poor quality of the cast.

The plot centered around an attempt to get the Human Relations Board to pass a resolution that there was evidence of housing discrimination in East Lansing. It was clear even before the end of the play that this attempt would fail.

That the Human Relations Board would not go on record as acknowledging the existence of housing discrimination in East Lansing was a farce and an insult to its very existence.

Little more need be said about the play, but I would encourage anyone who enjoys rare comedy to be sure to catch the next performance. It will undoubtedly be even more hilarious.

Prof Thanks Donors Of Blood For Son

Floyd Parker, associate professor of education, expressed his thanks Tuesday to all those who donated blood to his son Charles, who had a bleeding ulcer.

Nineteen persons responded to the article in Monday's State News calling for the needed blood, and 10 of them were MSU students, said Mrs. Carroll Borgman, blood program coordinator at the Ingham County Red Cross center.

Charles was losing a large amount of blood because of the ulcer, Mrs. Borgman said, but due to the donations, he spent an easy Monday night without need for further transfusions.

Parker is a senior at Lansing High School where the faculty began their own drive to obtain blood for him, she said.

Some donors were at the Red Cross doors at 8:30 a.m. Monday, but blood program hours are 12 noon to 6 p.m. Monday and 3 to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

High School Seniors Hear Mrs. Romney

Michigan's First Lady told over 1300 high school seniors on campus Tuesday that "we are not going to have a great age unless we have great kids, and we are not going to have great kids unless we recognize their skills as individuals."

Members of the Cooperative Club of Michigan heard Mrs. George W. Romney speak in the Auditorium.

She said that the most important decision for young people to make is to be "committed to our way of life."

"We have become so enamored with scientific advances that we forget what we are not doing with our commitment to brotherhood."

She also said that youth has not been given the necessary guidance. "It is time to give our young people what they need and want."

"The Lord is most angry when His servant hides his talents," she said.

Delta Phi Epsilon Spring Program

Internat'l Study Meetings Set

A series of spring term discussion meetings on international relations and business, open to all interested persons, has been announced by Delta Phi Epsilon, national professional foreign service fraternity.

The program begins Thursday with an examination of American foreign policy and presidential election year politics by Warren Cohen, assistant professor of history, and Joseph Schlesinger, professor of political science.

On April 16, the fraternity's advisor, Baljit Singh, assistant professor of political science, will consider guerrilla warfare as a lever for political change in the developing nations. Carroll Hawkins, professor of political science, is to discuss Latin American ideologies on April 23.

Victor Du Bois, specialist in West African affairs visiting MSU from the American Universities

Field Staff, will compare political systems of the new African nations on May 16.

The final program on June 4, will feature an examination of trade unionism in developing nations by Kenneth Robinson, regional director of the United Auto Workers - Congress of Industrial Organization. Opportunities for students to work and study abroad will be the theme of the fraternity's exhibit at the annual International Festival on May 9.

According to Robert Herr, Southgate senior, who was installed as fraternity president last Thursday, open rush coffee hours are scheduled for men interested in careers in international relations and business, at the April meetings at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Art Room.

New Course To Probe Sub-Saharan Africa

A study of sub-Saharan Africa from an interdisciplinary approach featuring lecturers from several departments is being offered this term.

"The course is designed to introduce the student to a study of Africa from a number of disciplines," Charles C. Hughes, director of the African Studies Center, said.

"We have felt that a course of this nature could develop student interest in the middle undergraduate years, so that they may pursue studies in the area through other departments."

The course catalogued as Geography 411, is being coordinated by Harm J. de Blij, associate professor of geography.

"Because of its interdisciplinary nature," Hughes said, "students may get credit for the course in geography, history, political science or sociology and anthropology."

The class is scheduled to meet from 7 to 9:30 Wednesday nights.

Eight professors are slated to deliver lectures.

De Blij will lecture on geography. Other lecturers include Hans Wolf, professor of sociology and anthropology; James R. Hooker, assistant professor of history; and William Hanna, assistant professor of political science.

Hughes, an associate professor of sociology and anthropology, will lecture on culture and personality. Linguistics and literature will be discussed by Jack Berry, professor of foreign languages.

"It is hoped that as guest lecturers visit the campus, they will be able to address the class," Hughes said. "We may use a panel of experts as a means of presentation, if this proves successful."

Litwhiler Tells Men's Club About Baseball Experiences

Danny Litwhiler, Michigan State's new baseball mentor, refrained from his coaching duties briefly to speak at the Men's Club luncheon Tuesday in the Union building.

But that didn't keep the 46-year-old skipper from talking about baseball as he related sev-

Cincinnati Reds and the former Boston Braves.

Litwhiler also demonstrated some of his special coaching innovations that have made him one of the most successful baseball pilots in the country.

Among those demonstrated was his famous one-sided bunting bat which is now used by at least four major league clubs.

The veteran coach concluded his speech with an invitation to those present and to the student body to come out and view as many Spartan baseball games as possible this spring.

State opens its season at 1 p.m. today, entertaining Albion College in a double header at Old College Field.

Intramural Softball got under way Monday with the help of Mother Nature. Several of the teams, after looking at the scores, need more than a little help from Mother Nature or Lady Luck. Windjammer smothered Wiquasset 32-3 in a game that lasted only two innings, probably just as well for Wiquasset. Other results were as follows: Casino 7 Cambridge 4; Cachet 4 Cabana 2; Bailey(3) 14 Bailey(1) 4; Brinkley 1 Brandy 0(fort); Six Pak 5 Bristol 0; Woodward 16 Worthington 6 Caravelle 9 Cache 6; Wolfgram 8 Worcester 6; Cameron 11 Casopolis 8; Bailey(5) 13 Bailey (7) 9; Brougham 11 Brannigan 9; Wooster 12 Woodbridge 5; Carleton 10; Caribbean 5; Winchester 12 Wildcats 11; Embassy 1 Emerald 0(fort); Embers 11 EMU 1.

Ex-gridders Aid Duffy At Practice

Spartan football Coach Duffy Daugherty may have his full professorship in Health, Physical Education and Recreation, but it doesn't prevent him from employing some of the disciplines of social science.

The jovial MSU head man is one who recognizes the value of peer influences, even if it appears a bit high-sounded for explaining the presence of several former Spartan gridders, now in the profession ranks, at spring training sessions.

Attracting the greatest attention from the handful of onlookers that assembled at the recent practice field have been George Saimes and Ernie Clark, stalwarts on the 1962 Spartan eleven.

Saimes, who plays for the Buffalo Bills of the American Football League, was all-American at the fullback slot while with State. He is presently enrolled here as a part-time student during the off-season.

Clark, still a local figure in his role as a Detroit Lion end is also taking course credits before the National Football League begins its pre-season workouts.

Another graduate of recent vintage lending a helping hand on the practice field is Ron Hatcher, a fullback on the 1961 Spartans.

On the side lines observing workouts was Herb Patera, a teammate of Saimes at Buffalo and also a former teammate of Saimes and Clark while at State.

Another whose appearance was readily observed was 1963 grid captain Sperm Lewis. Lewis, who gained all-American honors at his halfback spot, is currently in training for the outdoor track season on the cinder oval across from the football practice field.

Eighty gridders were on hand for State's second workout. It was another 60-plus Indian summer day much like the type the Spartans encountered in the stadium the early part of last fall.

Daugherty continued to stress fundamentals with running patterns once again the target of stress. Practice procedures call for brief sessions with the various assistant coaches until Daugherty toots a whistle at mid-field.

The team then assembles for demonstrations by selected lettermen of various play patterns to be run that afternoon.

This, in turn, is followed by a brief period of calisthenics after which the men return for more individual instruction.

Winding up each afternoon are five or ten minutes of continuous 50-yard sprints from scrimmage positions.

This afternoon's home opener baseball doubleheader between Michigan State and Albion College promises to be an interesting one, with both clubs entering the contest with entirely different problems. Game time is 1 p.m.

Although Albion Coach Morley Fraser openly predicts "a better than average season," he is plagued with the lack of players that can hit for the distance.

"The team has good speed and strong pitching," he said, "but a lack of depth in power hitters could give us trouble."

State, on the other hand, is blessed with a team that has hit 14 home runs in ten spring training games and has averaged better than two bases per hit, but has a relatively weak pitching staff.

Prominent among the Briton veterans are senior co-captains Bob Porritt, outstanding defensive shortstop, and Jerry Chandler, heavy-hitting outfielder. Chandler hit .328 last year and led the squad with seven home runs and 25 runs-batted-in.

Fraser also has infielder Jim Misner, a .355 hitter last season, and sophomore pitcher Larry Colburn. Southpaw Colburn was the leading Briton hurler last year, posting a 5-1 record to gain All-MIAA honors.

Gary Kretow, one of the top collegiate lefthanders in 1961, is back with the squad following a year's absence.

Fraser's opening season lineup includes Gene Muenchausen at first base, Gary Johnson at second, Porritt at shortstop and Misner at third base. Chandler is joined by Roger Mathews or Gary Jones in center and Larry Willis in right.

Pete Boroday will handle the catching chores, and Colburn and Kretow are expected to be the starting pitchers this afternoon.

State Coach Danny Litwhiler will counter with Southpaw John Krasnan in the first game and righthander John Ellward in the nightcap.

Michigan State students are admitted to all spring sports by presentation of ID cards. General admission seats for baseball are on sale at $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

TOM JAMIESON

Tom Jamieson has been elected captain of the Spartan tennis team for 1964.

A graduate of Lansing Eastern High School, Jamieson compiled an 8-7 record as number one man on last year's squad and is expected to hit his peak this season.

Tony O'Donnell teamed with Jamieson to reach the quarterfinals in doubles competition of the NCAA meet last spring.

Tigers Cut Team To 28

LAKELAND, Fla., (UPI)—The Detroit Tigers reduced their roster to the prescribed opening day limit of 28 players Tuesday by sending eight players to their Tigertown farm base for assignment.

They also asked waivers on one of their three first year players, Pete Craig, a 23-year-old right hander signed off the campus of the University of Detroit last June.

The Tigers also returned Bill Roman, a left handed hitting first baseman who had been working with them this spring, to the Syracuse farm club.

Ice Honors For Lackey

MSU hockey Captain Carl Lackey has been named to two post-season all star teams.

The Spartan defenseman was selected for first string honors in the all-American hockey team selected by Western Collegiate Hockey Association coaches.

Lackey was also named to the second team of the WCHA All Star squad according to votes compiled by the Denver Post.
