Open Housing Bill Vote Set

Hope Dim For Strong Ordinance

Relations Group To Meet Tonight

By SUE JACOBY
State News Staff Writer

Chances seem slim for passage of a strong open housing ordinance by the East Lansing Human Relations Commission tonight. The State News learned Tuesday that the proposed ordinance, calling for possible jail sentences or fines for violators, will probably be replaced by a mild resolution without criminal sanctions.

Two private meetings last weekend failed to produce agreement on provisions of the proposed ordinance which was introduced at the group's last public meeting in April.

The ordinance was developed by Robert L. Green, assistant professor of education; Mrs. Mahlon S. Sharp, an East Lansing housewife; and Dr. H. C. Tien, a psychiatrist, who has since resigned from the commission.

It would prohibit realtors, financial offices and private property owners from discriminating against potential customers on the basis of race, creed, color or national origin. The Human Relations Commission would be empowered to investigate complaints and turn over its findings to the city attorney for prosecution. Violators would be guilty of a criminal misdemeanor and subject to a maximum sentence of 30 days in jail or a $300 fine.

The resolution which will probably be introduced tonight is a watered-down version. It would empower the Human Relations Commission to investigate complaints but makes no provision for criminal prosecution.

The commission would aid persons in preparing suits for the state Civil Rights Commission if it established evidence of discrimination.

According to State News sources, the commission did not consider the original proposal in its private meetings but concentrated on the new resolution.

The report indicated there was opposition to the resolution by some committee members. However, sources indicated optimism.

Legislature Approves Top College Budget

A record $147.6 million higher education budget, providing $39,391,613 for Michigan State, was passed by the house and senate Tuesday and sent to Gov. Romney for signature.

The senate concurred on the budget bill with only one dissenting vote. The bill faced stiff opposition in the house, passing by a 58-33 majority.

The bill had been referred to a conference committee Friday when the senate failed to accept the house amendment.

Michigan State's appropriations included in Michigan State's budget is $2,195,281 slated for Oakland University.

The breakdown for Michigan State's other appropriations are:

- For agricultural extension services, $2,534,269.
- For agricultural experiment stations, including $191,000 for pesticide research program, $3,277,730.

The University of Michigan had its appropriations of $44,086,139 approved as passed earlier by the senate.

Both houses of the legislature also adopted reports of the conference committee which calls for restoring the state scholarship program to $500,000, where it stood before the house chopped it to $100,000.

Funds for the loan program, however, remain at $300,000 instead of the original $500,000.

The legislature also restored $190,000 to MSU's portion of the capital outlay budget. The amount is to be used for a power tie-in with the city of Lansing during the construction of the new power plant on south campus.

MSU received slightly over $8 million from the $58.2 million total capital outlay budget. The money will be used for construction of the Forestry-Conservation, food science and chemistry buildings and for preliminary planning on a classroom-office building and an engineering building at Oakland University.

Rep. James F. Warner, K-Ypsilanti, said, however, that University officials had indicated that they would proceed with the center in spite of the fact that $250,000 was not directly earmarked for that purpose.

Included in Michigan State's budget is $2,195,281 slated for Oakland University.

Student May Quit Bias Study

Morgan Seeks 'Positive Action'

Robert F. Morgan, the only student member of the East Lansing Human Relations Commission, will ask student congress tonight for permission to withdraw from the commission if it does not take "positive action" to combat racial discrimination.

Morgan, Buffalo, N.Y., graduate student, will appear before student congress at 7:30 p.m., directly preceding tonight's meeting of the East Lansing Human Relations Commission.

Morgan said he will tender his withdrawal within 24 hours after the commission meeting if it does not take "a positive stand" on discrimination in housing.

He was appointed to the commission by former All-University Government President Bob Kerr. He said he has received some assurances from AUSG President Bob Harris that Student Congress will agree to his request.

"I do not wish to resign from the commission if it does not take action tonight," he said. "I do wish to withdraw until the composition of the commission changes to facilitate positive action."

He said he would be perfectly willing to return at a future date if there were indications that the commission could be an effective force in combatting racial discrimination in East Lansing.

He said he was greatly disappointed at the commission's refusal at its April meeting to say that it had found conclusive evidence of racial discrimination in housing in East Lansing.

Legislature Passes $5,000 Exemption

The $5,000 personal property tax exemption for fraternities, sororities and student cooperatives was approved by the house and senate Tuesday.

The measure is now awaiting Gov. George Romney's signature. The provision, in the form of an amendment to a senate bill amending the Michigan general property tax act, provides for exemptions from personal property taxes on the first $5,000 of evaluation.

The bill would give student living units the same exemptions as now granted to private home owners.

The senate approved the bill by a 24-8 margin. In the house of representatives the measure was approved, 87-1.

The bill had earlier been referred to a conference committee to iron out house amendments to the bill.

"This is a triumph for a new lobby in the legislature--fraternities, sororities and co-operatives," William F. Gillis, chairman of the off-campus anti-tax committee, said.

The committee has been working to get this legislation through ever since East Lansing announced its plan to tax personal property in January.

"I'm pleased that the legislature has realized the financial plight of the students," Gillis said.

Construction was halted on the Bio-Chemistry Building, Chemistry Building, and Fee and Akers residence halls.

The dispute is over wages, Wesley Jeltema, secretary manager of the contractor's association, said.

He said that his organization is waiting for the bricklayers' union to call and request a meeting. "We are ready, willing and able to meet," he said.

May Add 'C' Plus To Scale

Move Requires Faculty Vote

The Academic Council passed several measures Tuesday which will make it easier for MSU students to get their degrees.

The decision will not be final, however, until it passes the Academic Senate, which will meet May 27. The four measures included:

--Addition of a "Cplus" grade to the present letter grading system. The present system now is a four-point scale with "A" having four points and "F" zero points. The only change is that a 2.5 grade would be added.

--Permission for the use of a "pass" grade in limited courses outside the student's major department. The council's subcommittee on grading practices thought that this addition would encourage more students to take courses outside their major area. The "P" grade would be for credit, but would not be included in the student's grade point average.

--Minimum of a 1.80 grade point average required for admission to the upper college. The requirement is now 2.0.

--Minimum of a 2.0 grade average in the student's major for him to graduate. This would be a tightening up of the requirements for graduation.

If the measures pass the Academic Senate, which is made up of all MSU faculty, they will probably go into effect sometime next year.

"Passage of the measures will

All Workers But Bricklayers Back At Jobs

Picketing at campus construction projects ceased Tuesday morning and all trades, except local bricklayers, have resumed work.

The strike began Friday when a contract ran out between the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers of America Local No. 31 and the Michigan chapter of Associated General Contractors of America.

Construction was halted on the Bio-Chemistry Building, Chemistry Building, and Fee and Akers residence halls.

The dispute is over wages, Wesley Jeltema, secretary manager of the contractor's association, said.

He said that his organization is waiting for the bricklayers' union to call and request a meeting. "We are ready, willing and able to meet," he said.

More Trouble Possible In Laos

TOKYO (AP)—The April coup in Laos sprang from rivalry among rightist generals and a clash between their forces still is possible, a well informed Laotian source said Tuesday.

The coup generally has been interpreted as aimed at neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma, who was put under house arrest for a while, and the pro-Communist Pathet Lao. These two factions and the rightists make up the coalition. The Pathet Lao has denounced the coup.

Castro Stronger, Says Rusk

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dean Rusk said Tuesday Fidel Castro's police state measures have become so effective that there is doubt the bearded Communist dictator can be overthrown in the near future.

But Cuban exile sources said they believe now is the time to strike against the Castro regime and hinted strongly that plans are afoot to do so.

Saigon Cabbies Threaten Demonstration

SAIGON, Viet Nam (AP)—U.S. authorities set maximum security precautions Tuesday against a threatened demonstration of Saigon cabbies angered by the fatal shooting of two taxi drivers that they blamed on Americans.

The demonstration—projected as a drive on the U.S. embassy, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge's residence and other Saigon installations—failed to materialize.

Sex Survey Causes Newspaper Suspension

ROCHESTER (UPI)—Inquiries by the student newspaper into the sex lives of men and women attending Oakland University had the campus of this normally quiet Michigan college town in a furor Tuesday.

Chancellor Durward B. Varner charged "irresponsible journalism," fired the editor of the Oakland Observer, suspended publication and ordered all copies of the last issue destroyed.

The ousted editor, Austrian-born Wolf Metzger, countered with a charge of "censorship" and called on the 12-man newspaper staff to resign en masse. At least five did.

Irate parents complained to Varner that publications of the answers to the questionnaires would scar the reputation of every girl attending the school.

A six-man committee of faculty members and students was named to take over publication of the campus newspaper and get it in line with administration thinking.

And the completed questionnaires remained in Metzger's apartment, with very little likelihood they ever would be printed.

Metzger, who was married last Thursday to an Oakland University freshman from Grove City, Pa., Mary Ann Armour, 18, didn't start the fuss, but he brought it to a head.

A month ago, another Observer editor gave out a two-page questionnaire about sex to the 288 students living in the university's three dormitories because he was alarmed by rumors that pregnancy was increasing on the campus.

The questionnaires asked about family background of students, their sexual experiences before attending Oakland and while at Oakland and whether the experience, if any, took place on campus.

About 80 per cent of the students completed the questionnaire and gave the returns to the Observer. Metzger, the newly-appointed editor, was in the process of tabulating results of the survey when the roof fell in.

Varner found out about the survey and Metzger's intention to publish it. Metzger said Varner ordered him to refrain from publishing the survey or face suspension from school.

Metzger responded by writing an editorial which blasted Varner for suppressing the story and said his order reflected "embarrassment and hypocrisy and the desire to keep 'O.U. kids' better informed about standards at Harvard and Radcliffe than at Oakland." He did not clear the editorial because the "paper has always operated under complete freedom and we have published survey findings before."

But Varner took a different view. He ordered all copies of the paper carrying the editorial destroyed. Varner called the Averill Press in nearby Birmingham last Friday and ordered destruction of the copies and even the type from which the story had been printed.

Last Monday, Varner's secretary handed Metzger a letter which told him that, "effective today, you are relieved of any association with the Oakland Observer and you are not to be a part of any publication on this campus while you are a student here."

Metzger, 20, who is attending the school on two scholarships, was bitter about being fired. The edition ordered destroyed was his first and last as editor.

"I took the position that we are not acting as a public relations medium for the university and should be free to publish news, even if it is not always in the university's interest," Metzger said.

Justice Goes Blind

Justice, with a sword in one hand and a balance in the other, has had free reign in handling students arrested at Shiawassee County grassers. But the blindfolded symbol of our legal processes has allowed her sword to take over, and has left her balance scale out of the issue.

Coeds arrested at the grassers for possession of liquor have been campused one weekend night for every 15 minutes they came in after the 1 a.m. closing hour. For some girls, this means staying in every weekend until the end of the term.

These girls in many instances had no control over the time they would return, and are being punished for circumstances somewhat beyond their control.

"Anyone who attended the grasser knew that he was taking a chance," John A. Fuzak, dean of students, said. "They know the rules of the University."

But Laurine Fitzgerald, assistant dean of students, said, "The disciplinary action taken against the women students was not a punishment for their attendance at the grasser. It is the responsibility of the coeds to return back to the dormitory on time."

Students should not have been at the grasser, according to Fuzak, and so are subject to whatever punishment they incur. But only the women should be punished, according to Miss Fitzgerald, because they are the ones with the closing hours.

The campused women may appeal, but their appeals will not be heeded unless they can prove they were not at the parties, as judged by an investigating committee's report.

There is no appeal for students who claim they were not drinking; none for those over 21; and none for those held three or four hours beyond closing, with no chance to call their dorms.

Justice, blindfolded and interested only in the letter of the law, has wielded her slightly rusty sword, but she has left the center of the issue untouched.

There has been no use of the balance scale, no weighing of the many complicated factors involved, and the women are suffering.

Fuzak said that in the case of so large a number of student, the majority must be considered in doling out punishment. But individuals must be taken into account, and extenuating factors in what has turned into a comedy of errors and misjudgments must be taken into account.

Blind examinations of half-facts will not do if true justice is to be served.

India's Education Problems

Editor's Note: This is the first of a three-part series on the MSU India Project, written as part of the Our Man Overseas series. It is by Frank S. Roop, Jr., instructor in mechanical engineering and chief of party for the India Project. He is working at the College of Engineering in Guindy, Madras.

After achieving independence in 1947, India adopted as its first goal the improvement of the living standard of its citizens. Working through democratic institutions it has organized co-ordinated economic and social development projects under its comprehensive Five-Year Programs, inaugurated in 1951.

The general objectives of these broad programs, which have now advanced beyond the mid-point (1953) of the Third Five-Year Plan, are the production of more food, the establishment of a broad industrial base, the creation of new employment opportunities, the improvement in health conditions, the creation and extension of educational opportunity, and the development of sound social institutions to promote the general welfare.

At India's request, the United States is assisting to achieve these goals. Since 1951, when organized United States aid to India began, the assistance effort has been administered through successive agencies designated as the International Cooperation Administration (ICA), later through the Technical Cooperation Mission (TCM) to India, and currently through the United States Agency for International Development (U.S.A.I.D.).

The United States aid plays a supporting role in many areas of development related to the general objectives of the Five-Year Plans. The forms of aid have changed with the changing needs of India, as well as changed in methods of administration of the U.S. foreign aid program.

One of the significant areas that has received continued support since 1953 as a part of the program of U.S. foreign aid assistance to India has been in the field of education.

The MSU India Project was brought into being through a contractual arrangement between the U.S. AID and the University.

This contract, entered into on August 11, 1960, provides for a program of assistance to the co-operating country by the establishment of a project group of technicians at the College of Engineering, Guindy, Madras, and at the College of Engineering, Poona, two of the older and leading Indian engineering colleges.

The Republic of India is comprised of 15 States and 11 centrally administered Union Territories. The population is estimated at 460 million, considerably more than twice that of the United States.

The population is made up of many racial strains and constitutes one-seventh of the human race, living in an area a little more than half of that of the United States.

A sociological upheaval is breaking over this huge sub-continent, due primarily to the population explosion which is not being controlled. The arable land is now almost completely occupied by 80 per cent of the people, with a human flood tide commencing to penetrate the urban scene. There is an annual increase in school age population of two and a half per cent compounded.

In the context of a constitutional requirement of free and compulsory education through age 14, there are 330 million Indians above six years of age who are not attending school, and are illiterate. This figure is rapidly increasing.

Only one in seven Indian children of secondary school age is attending school. The primary reason for this blighting circumstance is the enormous paucity of qualified high school teachers.

There are not enough teachers, nor are there sufficient qualified teachers of prospective teachers. In total numbers the production of trained teachers at this level has failed appreciably to keep pace with requirements.

Higher education, from which indigenous leadership in all fields must come, is woefully lacking in quality, despite determined efforts by Indian educational authorities to preserve high standards. Deterioration of quality has perhaps been the inevitable consequence of the increase in quantity.

The curve of attendance at institutions of higher learning has mounted steeply. Indeed, the Third Five Year Plan objectives have already been surpassed and may be expected to reach a figure some 30 per cent above that originally planned.

A phenomenal university and technical school expansion program is in progress.

Universities numbered 46 in 1961-62; there were 54 of them in 1962-63, the 1965-66 target was 58 but this figure has already been surpassed.

Technical institutes, both degree and diploma granting, have also had a rapid expansion in attendance and in plant construction. There were 111 engineering colleges and 209 polytechnics (technical junior colleges) in 1961; the 1963 figures were 118 and 270 respectively.

The shortages of teachers for institutions of technical education has raised certain problems in regard to the quality of education. The problems stemming from the shortages in library facilities, laboratory equipment, and qualified teachers are especially acute in the newly developed institutions.

In many instances the lack of qualified teachers ranges from 40 per cent upwards. Even in the older and well established colleges the average teaching load of faculty members is some three times that of their American counterparts. Research and other scholarly pursuits inevitably suffer in the face of this requirement.

Point Of View -----

Here's An Answer For 'Censorship'

----- By James Cash

James Cash, Grand Rapids senior, resigned recently as editor of Red Cedar Review, the University's student-run literary magazine.

When I was a kid, I once saw Sugar Ray Robinson cut Jake LaMotta to pieces for the middleweight boxing championship of the world. He used three major weapons: speed, power, and variation. No one was faster than Robinson; and for his size he had a punch comparable to Joe Louis's.

But variation was his major weapon, keeping his opponent completely off guard as to what combination of hooks, crosses, and jabs were coming next. Even Ray didn't know which combination he would use next: when the opening was there, the punches followed. This is why Robinson was one of the best who ever boxed; and it seems there is some sort of rather obvious lesson here.

Let's replace Robinson with the students on this campus who are serious about certain reforms. Let's give them Robinson's three weapons. Speed: I know many students who will leap at the chance to fight anything that seems an injustice to practically anyone; and while their anxiety sometimes fails to get all the facts straight, I'm glad to see this anxiety--apathy is no answer to anything.

Aroused From Apathy

Power: every once in a while--particularly in the spring--something arouses even the apathetic to follow the leaders of this campus in a campaign against actual repression; something constructive is done and the repression quite often removed. The banned communist speaker of two springs ago is an excellent example of this. So power is not impossible. Variation: but here something happens. It's as though every time Robinson saw an opening he would use a jab-left hook-right cross combination. If this had been true, he would have been completely impotent by the third round of every fight.

But this is what seems to happen on this campus. Using the example of the "censored" story (this is deliberately in quotes since no story was actually censored) that was submitted to the "Red Cedar Review", the first reaction was sincere and honest; if the staff considered the story good enough to print, someone in power should have supported it. No one did, and the students had a right to protest.

I support every protest made on this basis; but I'm afraid I cannot support the methods in which the protest has occurred. The line of attack has been completely impotent simply because it has been the same attack, with absolutely no variation, that has been used in every protest on this campus in the past three years.

Line Of Attack

The jab was a talk campaign, stirring up support; the left hook was a picket line set up in front of Morrill Hall, and the opponent, knowing the combination by heart, weaved and took the punch on his shoulder; and the right-cross, the knockout, was simply never thrown--it was to be that the story would be mimeographed and distributed, but the author, seeing the complete ineffectiveness of the combination, withdrew the story and declined being used as a boxing glove.

And so, I offer another combination. There is only one way to keep this situation from ever happening again, and that way is to start a literary magazine that is totally independent from the university. And there is only one way to do this--money, with a capital M, as they say in the business world. No sense kidding ourselves; money not art, makes this campus go around. Disgusting perhaps, but true.

Money Is The Answer

I'm not really excited about this combination because I don't think the students are capable of using it; I doubt very much that fifteen hundred dollars can be raised through contributions to support a literary magazine for the next year, and the year after, and on and on, because I doubt the sincerity and self-honesty of too many people around here. But I'm willing to try. And I'm willing to try in a big way.

There are 25,000 students on this campus, and to get $1500, only six cents would have to be contributed by each student. Six cents! Therefore, this is to announce a new committee to join the thousands of others, a committee called the Committee of Independent Expression, and the goal is to collect six cents from every student on this campus so a literary magazine can be independent next year.

You will be hearing from us, and if you decide the way to end this nonsense is not by giving six cents to the support of "Red Cedar Review", I would appreciate it if you don't go around screaming repression on our behalf. And if fifteen hundred dollars is not raised, all contributions will be refunded with a cheerful though bitter, smile.

Beating A Dead Horse

Demands that Michigan colleges and universities cut out-of-state enrollments rolled east along Michigan Avenue from the Capitol again last weekend.

An attempt to force a cut-back in "foreign student" enrollment failed by 46-46 vote.

Even though this particular amendment is dead, the issue is not.

These representatives are upset that MSU has a 20 per cent out-of-state enrollment and the University of Michigan has a 33 per cent enrollment from across the state line.

The legislators argue that: --These "foreigners" take the places of Michigan youths whose parents support the schools, and --That these "foreigners" do not pay the entire costs of their education, that Michigan taxpayers must foot the rest of the bill.

The first argument was answered long ago by University Secretary Jack Breslin: "Michigan State University has never denied admission to any qualified (Michigan) student."

The second argument is only partially valid--out-staters do in fact pay the full cost of their first two years of undergraduate study, according to University Comptroller Paul V. Rumpsa.

Michigan State, and other schools, also receive federal grants which close the gap between actual cost and tuition fees of juniors and seniors.

Another monetary factor many legislators fail to mention is that many Michigan youths seek educations in other states' publicly-supported schools.

The ratio of Michigan youth out-state to out-staters in Michigan is about two to three. Michigan is on the short end of the ratio but its taxpayers rank high in average personal income and are in a better position to provide better education for more students than many other states.

States which, in the opinion of the University, "aren't doing their part for higher education at home" have been limited already.

Beyond economics, Michigan students gain culturally by associating with students with varying backgrounds.

They are selected from the top scholars across the country and, in turn, attract other top students and faculty members, raising the University's standards.

We hope that when the issue of out-of-state students arises again, the legislators will look beyond their home districts and the state borders before attempting to bind state schools with an unnecessary law.

Michigan is not a separate island. Its welfare and wealth are dependent upon the education of youth in every state and in other nations.

Takes Stand Favoring 'Conscience' Editorial

To the Editor: Congratulations on your editorial of 4/27/64 concerning the newsletter "Conscience." It was heartening to see the State News take a definite stand against the MSU Conservative Club.

I wonder if perhaps the editors of "Conscience" have minds of their own? They seemed so apt at quoting from their illustrious leaders that hardly a word of their own was to be found. Now in Thursday's State News is the expected letter from the indignant followers. What do we find? More quotes!

Since the editors of "Conscience" and their followers seem to subscribe wholly or in part to the views of others, what I have been saying will not make much of an impression. (I've never had anything published in anything.) So, at the risk of being accused of using methods which I criticize, I hope that perhaps others more notable (and quotable) than myself can make an impression.

Barnett Says Rights Bill 'Impairs' Freedoms

BARNETT AT ALBION—Thwarting pickets by entering the Albion Chapel by the rear entrance, Gov. Ross Barnett of Mississippi addressed the college's civil rights seminar. Also speaking were William Buckley, editor of National Review Magazine, and Emil Mazey, head of the Michigan branch of the Civil Liberties Union. Barnett, above right, is noted for his segregationist stand in the southern state.

Former Mississippi Governor Ross Barnett was at Albion College in Albion Tuesday, and he said the Civil Rights Bill now in Congress impairs the property rights as well as the civil rights of all Americans.

The speech was given to a crowd of about one thousand, mostly students, assembled in the college's Goodrich Chapel.

Just prior to Barnett's speech, Negro civil rights pickets paraded in front of the chapel and sang several choruses of "We Shall Overcome."

In his speech, Barnett gave a Mississippi travelogue, repeated the statements made by J. Edgar Hoover and Joseph Alsop that Communists have infiltrated the civil rights movement, and made a scathing attack on the Civil Rights Bill.

"If the proposed legislation (Civil Rights Bill) should become law than this state and all other states of the American union would be little more than local governmental agencies and would be largely under the control of a central government in Washington."

"It would destroy local self-government and would result in a powerful federal government with unlimited authority to intervene in private affairs among men and to control and adjust property and business relationships in accordance with federal inspections," he said.

He called the bill "unconstitutional and obnoxious," and that "it impairs the property rights and civil rights of all Americans."

Barnett went on to say how the bill would specifically deprive and/or affect the rights of homeowners, realtors, banks, savings and loan associations, employers, labor unions, union members with seniority rights, the setting of voting qualifications and owners of hotels, motels, restaurants, and other privately owned businesses.

The ex-governor said the bill is absolutely unconstitutional pertaining to its public accommodations section because of two United States Supreme Court decisions—United States versus Nichols, and more recently, in 1959, Williams versus Howard Johnson Restaurants.

"In the latter case the courts held that the fact that a motel is located on an interstate highway, that a motel uses commodities it acquires from other states, and has customers from other states, does not mean that it is engaged in interstate commerce.

According to law, it is controlled and directed by the legislatures of the states where the restaurants, motels, barber shops or other businesses are located and not by the federal government."

Barnett attributed the big push for the Civil Rights Bill to the political expediency of the "selfish, mealy-mouthed, pussyfooting, fence-riding politicians."

He said that he felt if the Senate could vote on the bill in secrecy it would reject it.

Failure to comply with the various provisions of the Civil Rights Bill will bring punishment by the federal government through the greatly expanded powers of the attorney general's office, he said.

Barnett concluded by saying that the end result of all this would be irreparable, immeasurable damage to the Constitution and would be contrary to the legitimate function of the government which is to enforce rights rather than to coerce citizens.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), will speak at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Fairchild Theater.

Wilkins will speak on "Education and the Racial Crisis" at an anniversary symposium on school integration sponsored by the Colleges of Education and Social Science in cooperation with the Kellogg Center.

President John A. Hannah, chairman of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, will introduce Wilkins.

The two-day meeting will be held in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of the Supreme Court ruling on school integration.

New Yorkers Fail To Aid Rape Victim

NEW YORK 4—A nude, ravished girl fled screaming from her attacker to the very threshold of a Bronx office building, where she pleaded with onlookers to help her. But some 40 of them failed to aid her.

The slim, five-foot victim was overpowered in a second-floor office of a building on busy East Tremont Avenue in the Bronx. She was at work alone as a telephone operator.

About 40 persons were attracted by her cries. They rushed to the doorway of the building, but made no move to help the girl.

Finally Patrolman Norman Brown and Patrolman Edmond Woods, attracted by the girl's screams, arrived on the scene. Brown said, "forty people could have helped that girl Monday, but none of the jerks helped her."

Havana Links Arms Discovery To Subversive U.S. Scheme

HAVANA 4—Havana newspapers charged Tuesday an arms cache found by a fisherman near the town of Vinales is linked with a subversive scheme to spread terror across Cuba through attack on economic centers. They said the U.S. government is behind it.

The announcement of the find was printed here as a Washington dispatch reported rumors are flying once again among Cuban exiles in the United States that new efforts will be made soon to topple Prime Minister Fidel Castro.

Vinales is a cigar-making and lumbering center in Pinar Del Rio province 90 miles west of Havana and 175 miles southwest of Key West, Fla.

The published accounts, all in a similar vein, said the fisherman found nine metal boxes and eight drums in the water and that these yielded 15 rifles, 12 pistols, 84 packages of explosives, 22 mines and material for making other mines and ammunition.

The collection "was brought to Cuba by U.S. government agencies," said a typical dispatch, "for sabotage and the creation of bandit groups which, following the usual methods of guerrilla warfare, would create disorder, subversion and terrorist actions."

"Although these criminal activities have been systematically happening, the new fact has special importance as it has happened at a time when piratical, irresponsible actions of the U.S. government endanger the peace."

"After investigation it has been possible to prove that the arms and explosives were made and packed in the United States and brought to that place, using the usual methods in infiltration of American espionage agencies.

"It was also shown by its characteristics that a great part of this equipment is made in the United States exclusively by espionage and subversion agencies of the government and that they are available only to agents chosen by the United States to realize its aggressive plans."

"The fact that these weapons and materials are used for sabotage and terrorism as well as their unequivocal American origin... prove the direct responsibility and participation of the U.S. government in this new subversive act."

The reference to "piratical, irresponsible actions of the U.S. government" concerned the reconnaissance flights Americans have been making over Cuba periodically since the missile crisis of October 1962.

Castro has declared Cuba will use all means at its disposal to stop them. President Johnson's administration has announced they will continue as a precaution against another secret missile build-up and warned against armed interference.

The reaction in Washington was negative to both the new Cuban charges and to the rumors among the exiles that Castro's regime will become subject to attack soon from both within and without.

The U.S. State Department said it knew nothing about the alleged plan for terrorism. And U.S. officials appeared surprised when asked about the rumors. They said they had no information, though they said they recalled reading a recent statement by Manolo Ray, now living in Puerto Rico, that he and other exiled leaders would be fighting inside Cuba by May 20.

The reports among the exiles, persistent in both Washington and Miami, were that striking units would come from areas other than the United States and would operate in small bands rather than as a single expeditionary force, such as failed at the Bay of Pigs in 1961.

Nilsson Recital Brilliant, Exciting

By LEON WHEELER
State News Reviewer

Birgit Nilsson, one of the world's great divas and reigning Wagnerian soprano, appeared here Wednesday night ringing down the curtain on a great year for the Lecture-Concert Series.

In Wednesday night's recital Miss Nilsson began the program with songs of Wagner. Singing Elisabeth's aria "Dich, tieure Halle," from the opera "Tannhauser", Miss Nilsson's big and brilliant voice maintained a very good resonating quality. Her top vocal register was clear and projected a fine dramatic quality. Nilsson's middle voice at times seemed hollow because the tones were too far back in her mouth.

Miss Nilsson projected the excitement and power in her voice on a held note (sforzato followed immediately by piano), as in the culminating phrases of Wagner's "Traume (Dreams)," and "Schmerzen (Grief)."

Turning to German lieder of Hugo Wolf and Richard Strauss, Miss Nilsson's voice maintained its fullness throughout Wolf's "Gesang Weylas (Weyla's Song)," and "Anakreons Grab (Anacreon's Grave)," and even this fullness seemed to grow during the Wolf setting of Goethe's Mignon."

There seemed to be no end to what Miss Nilsson could do with her powerful voice. The brilliance of "Strauss' Zueignung (Devotion)" was matched by the breath control and lyricism exhibited in his "Freundliche Vision (Friendly Vision)."

After the intermission Miss Nilsson sang three Finnish songs of Sibelius, "Flickan kom ifran sin alsklings mote" (The Diamond on the March Snow), and "Varne flyktar (Spring is Flying)."

She also sang Norwegian songs of Grieg, which included the beautifully interpreted "Jeg elsker dig" (I Love Thee), an avowal of the composer's love for Nina, to whom he had just become engaged.

The last part of Miss Nilsson's program consisted of opera arias. From Puccini's opera "Tosca," Miss Nilsson sang a fine "Vissi d'arte." Her voice breathed life into the aria, but her highest tone was somewhat "white", a noticeable color differentiation of the voice quality.

Miss Nilsson sang magnificently Leonard's "Pace, pace, mio Dio," from Verdi's "La Forza del Destino."

'S' Diamond Win Streak Snapped

By DUANE LANCASTER
State News Sports Writer

SOUTH BEND, Ind.--The MSU baseball team's five-game winning streak came to an end here Tuesday afternoon, when Notre Dame edged the Spartans 9-8. State took the lead early in the game, but the Irish quickly went ahead. Singles by John Biedebach and Dick Billings and a sacrifice fly by captain Mal Chiljean put the Spartans into the lead in the top half of the second inning.

But Notre Dame hammered at State starter Dennis Erickson and came up with eight runs in the bottom half of the inning.

From there on in State tried to play "catch-up", but never quite succeeded. A home run by Notre Dame's Tex Shaugert in the sixth inning was the margin of victory.

A double by substitute second-baseman Jerry Walker scored Jerry Sutton and Billings in the third inning and a combination of three singles and a sacrifice fly gave State two more runs in the eighth.

In the ninth the Green and White notched two more scores, but stranded the winning run on base.

Coach Danny Litwhiler made use of five pitchers, with Erickson (0-1) taking the loss. Dick Holmes, Tom Phipps, Doug Dobrei and Fred Deveraux all had a chance on the mound.

State now has a 18-5 mark, while the Irish stand even at 10-10-1. Notre Dame already has beaten Big Ten leader Michigan. The Irish topped the Wolves 9-3 in an early season contest.

Second baseman Dennis Ketcham missed the game, but Litwhiler hopes to have him ready to play on Friday when State travels to Iowa City. Ketcham was injured in last Saturday's game against Purdue.

Outfielder Bob Maniere had the best at-bat mark for the Spartans against the Irish. Maniere was 2-4 and had a triple. State's touted home run attack never got off the ground. Notre Dame's Rick Gonski picked up the win, he's now 4-4 for the season.

The game lasted for a little over three hours and was played under clear skies.

After Friday's Big Ten game against Iowa the Spartans travel to Minneapolis for a two-game date with Minnesota. The Gophers and Spartans are currently deadlocked for the league's second spot with 5-1 marks. Leader Michigan (6-0) plays at Minnesota on Friday and Iowa on Saturday in a double header.

DIAMOND BITS--State News reporter Duane Lancaster missed the team bus going to South Bend. Lancaster decided that there was only one thing left to do. He hitchhiked the whole way and arrived in plenty of time to see the contest. He took the bus back, however.

Sail Club Takes 3rd In Regatta

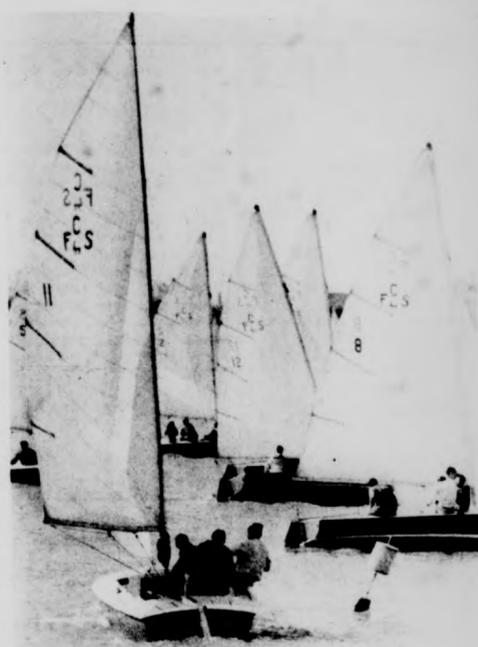

The MSU sailing club finished third in the twelve school Detroit Yacht Club Regatta over the weekend in the Motor City.

The Spartans tied with Wayne State for the number two spot, but moved down in the standings because the Tartars had defeated State in seven of twelve races. University of Detroit was the winner with 124 points. MSU and Wayne each had 120.

The two-day regatta was run on the Detroit River under sunny skies. Races were held Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning.

Next weekend the Spartans will again travel to Detroit. This time they'll take part in the Midwest Championships at the Crescent Boat Club.

The women's sailing squad also raced on Saturday finishing fourth in a six school race at Dartmouth College.

Net Team Loses To Tough Wolves

ANN ARBOR--Michigan State's tennis team ran into a stone wall here Tuesday afternoon and lost to Michigan's Wolverines 8-1.

Only the number three doubles team of sophomores Laird Warner and Mike Youngs were able to win their matches. Youngs and Warner defeated Bill Dickson and Jim Swift 6-4, 4-6, 6-3.

Number one man Spartan captain Tom Jamieson lost to Harry Fauquier 6-3, 6-4. Tony O'Donnell stretched his match to three sets, but was defeated by Karl Hedrick 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Brian Flood topped State's Dwight Shelton 7-5, 6-3, while Charley Wolff lost to Hal Lowe by the same scores. Dave Click was shut out by Dickson 6-0, 6-0 and number six singles man Warner lost his match to Swift 8-6, 6-3, 6-3.

The doubles team of Jamieson and Wolff was defeated by Hedrick and John Fraser 6-0, 4-6, 6-2. Shelton and O'Donnell lost to Lowe and Fauquier 6-4, 6-4.

The loss left State 10-4 for the season and 2-1 in Big Ten play.

Friday the Spartans return to the home courts to take part in a two-day quadrangular meet with Iowa, Illinois and Michigan. However State will not meet Michigan in the contest.

Michigan is now 3-2 in conference play and 6-3 overall.

Net Notice

Freshmen and transfer students wishing to try out for the MSU tennis squad are reminded to meet at 5 p.m. today, in 215, Men's IM Building.

Top Sprinter Still Injured

The Spartan track team will be without the services of its top sprinter when State takes on Notre Dame in a meet at South Bend Saturday.

Bob Moreland, still hampered by a muscle strain suffered at the Penn Relays, will be sidelined for the duel with the Irish. John Parker, 220 and 440 man, worked out for the first time Monday since suffering a slight muscle pull at Penn.

He missed the Ohio State meet but will run at Notre Dame if his performance this week proves that his leg has been fully mended.

State Crew Club Seeks Varsity Status, Equipment, Coach, Boat House

By MARGIE BAUMAN
State News Sports Writer

Crew, the only sport where you can sit down backwards and win, has returned to Michigan State, seeking varsity status.

Making up in enthusiasm what they lacked in finances, members of the MSU Rowing Club spent the fall of 1963 working out, getting in shape for the eight regattas scheduled for this spring.

Insufficient funds and lack of practice, which forced the Rowing Club to cancel its plans for competition in the spring of 1962, are the main reasons the club is anxious to receive varsity status.

Varsity status would enable the crew to modernize its equipment, some of which is quite old.

The two 62 foot shells, which hold eight rowers and one coxswain each, were well beyond the breaking in point when the club acquired them several years ago.

Two other advantages of varsity status would be funds to travel to other schools for competition and a more efficient rowing practice program.

"We need a full time coach and a full time boat repairman like the other schools," one member of the crew said.

Wayne State, like the Ivy League schools, provides its crew with facilities for sleeping and storing equipment at the rowing site, in addition to a coach and repairman.

Student coaches Dan Reid, Birmingham senior and John Burgess, East Lansing senior, both have heavy academic schedules competing with their coaching hours.

Practice sessions, at the Sailing Club's site on Lake Lansing, are held every day except Tuesday and Thursday, unless weather conditions prohibit practice one of the other five days.

The Rowing Club is presently sharing a quonset hut and small lot along Lake Lansing with the Sailing Club and Kayak Club. After working out on the lake, crew members often put in extra time working on shelters for the two eight-man shells and one four-man shell.

Before making arrangements with the Sailing Club, the shells had been stored on the lawn of an East Lansing home. While the frame for the shelters is being built, the shells are placed upside down on racks which offer no protection at all, after each session.

QUIET ON THE LAKE -- The crew rests on the still waters of Lake Lansing after a rugged practice session. Photo by Arlan Becker

The current trend in rowing one club member explained, is to take shorter strokes with the new stockier, wider oars. The blades of the oars are actually in the water one quarter of the time.

As soon as they are lifted from the water they are feathered back to their starting position, ready for the next count.

Feathering is the motion of bringing the blade parallel by pushing the wrist forward. It helps prevent wind resistance to the blades.

Orders are given by the coxswain, who beats out the time along the side of the shell with wooden blocks attached to the steering rope.

A small centerboard and rope-controlled rudder help keep the shell's course steady, while the coxswain barks out orders through a small megaphone.

Once the order is given the stroke sets the pace, his position, facing and directly in front of the coxswain, is the only one that can be observed by everyone in the shell without turning in their sliding seats.

During practice and racing sessions, the crew members, refer to one other by position. Starting with coxswain, the positions from stern to bow run as follows: stroke or right-man, seven-man and so on down to the first or bowman.

The Spartan crew roster is led by bowman Dan Reid, stroke Lance Webb, Lansing sophomore and coxswain Chuck Longfield, Grand Rapids freshman.

Behind Reid in the shell are Steve Holcomb, Paw Paw senior; Cork Strudwick, Muskegon freshman; Chuck Ougheltree, Mountain Lakes, N.J., junior; Bernie Nierl, Arlington, Va., sophomore; Jim Loso, Pinckney

State Capitol Reflects 85 Years Progress

Editor's Note: This is the first of a three-part series on Michigan government.

By MAURICE CRUM
State News Staff Writer

Eighty-five Januarys ago Michigan's $1.5 million capitol building in Lansing was dedicated.

The present Capitol is the third for the state. The first was built in Detroit in 1828 and was used until the Capitol was moved to Lansing in 1846. Two years later a two-story wooden structure was completed one block from where the Capitol is today at the cost of $22,513.

The third is by far the largest. It is over 345 feet long and four stories high with a dome perched majestically 175 feet above the inlaid glass block floor of the rotunda.

Building Contractor William Appleyard used horses for excavating and hauling. It took eight years to complete the classical Roman-style building.

During most of the eight years the ground floor was used as a stable for the work horses.

It is built of Ohio sandstone and has a roof covered with tin custom made in Wales. Inside, the new building had such luxuries as a steam-powered elevator, electrically controlled gas lights, and intra-office speaking tubes.

On the first floor two long corridors cross at the center of the building in the rotunda. The offices of the secretary of state, auditor general, state treasurer, attorney general, and the Superintendent of public instruction are on this floor.

The governor's office is off the east corridor on the second floor. The Hall of Representatives is at the end of the south corridor and the senate chambers at the end of the north corridor. The lieutenant governor's office is behind the senate.

Visitors galleries on three sides of both the house and senate are on the third floor. The Law Library and the Chamber of Justice are on that floor also.

The house and senate rooms are almost identical except the senate is shorter by 18 feet. The ceilings are made up of glass panels which bear impressions of the seals of 24 states.

Probably the most spectacular parts of the decor are the elaborate chandeliers. They were made in Czechoslovakia of pure crystal in 1878 and were valued at $1,500 at the time they were installed.

The lights were originally gas but were converted to electricity in 1905. Each one weighs several hundred pounds and hangs on chain falls so that it can be lowered to the floor once a year for polishing. Six hang in the house and four in the senate.

Much of Michigan's history is told by the huge murals along the corridors and by the museum displays in the basement. In the rotunda are displayed 123 bullet-ripped battle flags of Michigan from the Civil War.

Large portraits of the 40 past governors hand on the walls around the rotunda balconies and in the halls. But the one the guides seldom fail to call visitors' attention to hangs in the house.

It is the picture of Stevens T. Mason, who was the first elected governor of Michigan when he was only 19 years of age in 1835. Mason is buried at the head of Griswold Street in downtown Detroit on the site of the first Capitol and a monument stands there in his honor.

Among the reasons for moving the state Capitol were beliefs that: --Detroit should not wield too much influence over state affairs.

--Detroit was "within reach and would be at the mercy of an enemy's guns" from the Canadian territory.

--The governor would be finding it harder and harder to keep up with the high cost of living in the city since he only got $1,500 a year.

In the debate on relocating the capitol the first suggestion by a lawmaker to locate the Capitol in Lansing Township was good for a laugh.

At that time, according to Ellen C. Hathaway, author of a booklet on the Capitol, "Lansing was just a small settlement (two days from Detroit) in the unbroken forest known to some as Biddle City. Its main highway was an Indian trail leading to two small cabins and a sawmill."

85 YEARS OLD -- Michigan's State Capitol dome rises 175 feet above main floor, topping all but two of the Lansing area buildings despite the fact that it was erected over 85 years ago. Photo by George Junne

'Carlotta' First Song By Lansing Dietitian

A Lansing dietitian, who is both an expert rifleman and fisherman, has just had her first song released by a Hollywood publishing company.

Mrs. Ida A. Ott wrote both lyrics and music for three songs which have been accepted by the Nordyke Publishing Co. "The Legend of Carlotta," Mrs. Ott's first song, is an "autobiography" with a haunting melody which has just been released. Two other songs, "Reminiscing" and "Varsity Fashion" are soon to be released.

This talented woman claims she is "no musician," yet she plays the guitar, accordion, and piano.

The idea for her first song, "The Legend of Carlotta," came after the death of her husband William four years ago. At that time she decided to write of their life together, an idea which has been incorporated in both "Carlotta" and "Reminiscing." Mrs. Ott calls "Varsity Fashion" a "rah! rah!" college song depicting campus life.

Employed as a dietitian for the priests at St. John's Parish. Mrs. Ott is also a member of the Fishing Club of America and the National Rifleman Association.

"I'm no pro," Mrs. Ott said, "but I have a lot of wonderful memories and I love music." She lives at 1112 North Hayford St. with her youngest daughter. Two older daughters are married.

Hoosiers Pick Johnson Stand-In

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Democratic Gov. Matthew E. Welsh held the field for President Johnson Tuesday, winning Indiana's presidential primary while Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace apparently fell short of his showing in Wisconsin.

>Returns from 385 of Indiana's 4,416 precincts gave Welsh 28,117 and Wallace 11,261. And Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater grabbed Indiana's 32 GOP national convention votes despite a stronger-than-expected turnout for former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen.

Wallace backed an unpledged slate of 10 men who refused to promise the state's electoral college vote would be given to the party nominee if the Democrats carry Alabama in November. Party regulars supported a loyalist ticket.

In Indiana Wallace challenged President Johnson's stand-in, Gov. Matthew E. Welsh, whose sales tax program was expected to engender some protest votes. On the Republican ballot, Goldwater was an easy winner over former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen.

Florida voters crowded the polls to settle one of the hardest-fought Democratic campaigns ever waged for governor. The mayors of Miami and Jacksonville were in the six-way contest for the nomination, running against four former or present legislators. Major issues in addition to civil rights included legislative reapportionment and taxes.

sophomore and Mike Smolinski, Chicago freshman. Getting into the shell involves stepping on metal "feet" in front of each sliding seat. The weight of a crew member stepping directly into the bottom of the shell instead of putting his weight on the metal, slightly suspended "feet," could break a hole in the bottom of the delicate shell.

The rowing itself, which requires the use of almost every muscle in the body, is made easier by the sliding seats. Propelled by the motion of the rower, the seat swings with each stroke. The view from the coxswain's position in the stern (back end) of the shell, resembles something similar to the old slave galleys.

Enough energy is expended each time the crew takes a turn down the lake, to put most advertised slenderizing programs to shame.

"One race, I lost eight pounds in seven minutes," Lance Webb said. Before coming to State, he was on the crew team at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Dr. Maynard Miller, advisor to the Rowing Club, was on the crew team at Harvard during his undergraduate years there.

While rowing does do a lot for physique, losing can mean quite literally losing your shirt. Many Ivy League and prep school teams bet their brightly colored crew shirts on a race and the winning team may take home as many shirts per member as there are competing teams.

This tradition has not been taken up at Michigan State yet.

This spring the Rowing Club has already competed in several regattas at Wayne State University and Culver Military Academy.

The Dad Vail Regatta on the Schuylkill River in Philadelphia, Friday and Saturday is anxiously awaited by crew teams all over the country each year. Michigan State was first invited to this regatta in 1958.

City Clean-Up Weeks Proclaimed By Mayor

Mayor Gordon L. Thomas Monday proclaimed the weeks of May 3 through May 17, 1964, as "Keep East Lansing Beautiful Weeks."

The women's division of the Chamber of Commerce requested that the mayor make this declaration so the residents of East Lansing might take pride in their homes, yards, and property.

"These weeks will be clean-up, pick-up, paint-up weeks for East Lansing," Mrs. William D. Greer, a member of the "Keep East Lansing Beautiful" committee.

The proclamation claimed that "the city of East Lansing has been known for its beauty and cleanliness throughout the state of Michigan."

All residents of the community have an interest in preserving the appearance of our city and in keeping their own residences and businesses attractive, Thomas said.

"The city parks director, the police, the city engineer, the merchants, and the property owners all have a sense of pride in our community and do a good job of keeping the city neat and clean," Mrs. Greer said.

She said the city council was quick and efficient in passing measures to insure the beauty of the city.

"I encourage all citizens to do their part in this worthwhile effort," the mayor said.

Tragedy Averted On Red Cedar

A comical situation turned into near tragedy last week when two foreign students capsized their canoe in the Red Cedar.

John Van Steenis, Jr., Oxford junior, had paused on the bank of the Red Cedar near the canoe dock and was watching the students when the two were dumped in the water.

One of the unidentified students swam on to shore, thinking his friend could swim. Steenis noticed that the other student was in trouble.

He jumped into the water and rescued him from the middle of the river. Steenis said that he has been a life guard in the past but had never had to use his training before. He took a first aid course here last year.

Steenis had been on his way to class when he noticed the two trying to navigate their canoe to the dock. He said that several students had stopped to watch the comical situation.

One of the students dropped his paddle. When he reached to get the paddle he capsized the canoe. Steenis said.

Ordinance

not better than our grading problems will cease immediately, but this is an attempt at solving them," said Willard Warrington, chairman of the sub-committee on grading practices.

"The committee's position was to find some solution to our present college dropout rate of about 50 per cent.

"Our students are becoming better and we felt the present system is regaining against progress."

Warrington indicated there was considerable discussion both for and against the measures.

Housing

that the resolution would pass. Members of the commission who have voted for most anti-discrimination measures are Green, Mrs. Sharp, Robert F. Morgan, Buffalo, N.Y., graduate student, and the Rev. Wallace R. Robertson, pastor of the East Lansing People's Church.

Members who have voted against most anti-discrimination measures are Mrs. Stephanie H. Barch, research assistant in zoology; Albert Ehinger, a realtor; Dan C. Learned, an attorney; and Thomas B. Schepers, an official of the East Lansing State Bank.

The State News also learned that students and MSU associates are attempting to convince Mrs. Barch that she should take a more liberal stand on open housing for East Lansing.

Another question is whether the commission members who developed the original ordinance will be willing to accept a milder version.

Critic To Give Talk On Art Centralization

American art critic Clement Greenberg will discuss "The Centralization of Art" tonight at 8 in the Music auditorium.

Greenberg's appearance on the campus is sponsored by the Humanities Research Center and the department of art.

A leading exponent of American avant-garde painting, Greenberg is credited with gaining widespread acceptance of the experimental trends in modern art through his critical writings and studies of individual artists.

He has been an editor of the periodicals "Partisan Review" and "Commentary," and his art criticism has appeared in "The Nation," "Horizon" (British) and "Art News" as well as other publications devoted to the arts.

Greenberg is the author of monographs on Miro, Matisse and Hoffman; and of a book of critical essays published under the title "Art and Culture."
