

'Don't Tread Me,' Squiggly Friends Urge

By NECIA BROWN State News Staff Writer

April showers bring May flowers...so they say. But May showers bring worms. "The worms crawl in, the worms crawl out"...so they say. But even worms must breathe, and flooded earth is not conducive to survival.

So up pop their tiny heads to seek relief in a cold and unsympathetic world. "I lay awake at night thinking about the revolting creatures," a coed said, "and how to exterminate all of them from the earth."

While students splash and play in the muddy puddles caused by the unexpected torrents, they are careful to side step their slimy neighbors.

"I get hysterical when I see a worm on the sidewalk," a coed said. "They're so ugly and slimy, I just stand there and cry. I can't move."

It seems other, more psychological aspects are brought to mind when some students view the worm.

"It's a Freudian sign," a coed suggested. "You know, like snakes and pencils. That's why women are supposed to be afraid of them, but I'm not."

Apparently, the male population is not so cruel to our little friends.

"They make good pets," a junior said. "They're quiet and they are willing to give up their life for their master...at the end of a hook, you know."

Nonetheless, the consensus seems to be that worms are just rotten clear through. Yet there is always one staunch defender of the underdog.

"Have you ever petted a worm?" a coed asked. "They're not so bad, poor dears. And they have just as much right to live as anyone else. How would you like someone to step on you?"

MSU Prepares 4 Programs For Technical Aid Overseas

Graduates To Hear Carnegie Head

John W. Gardner, president of the Carnegie Corp. of New York, will be the speaker for spring commencement Sunday, June 14, President John A. Hannah has announced.

Gardner will address the University's graduating class at 4 p.m. in Spartan Stadium.

The noted educator, also president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, is the author of "Excellence: Can We Be Equal and Excellent Too," a book which has attracted nationwide attention.

In addition to his service with the Carnegie Corp, Gardner has been a consultant to two presidents, the U.S. delegation in the United Nations, the U.S. Air Force and the Department of Defense.

During the Eisenhower Administration, Gardner contributed to the President's Commission on National Goals. He was also a member of the Special Task Force on Education formed by the late President Kennedy, and edited "To Turn the Tide," a book by President Kennedy.

He is currently chairman of the U.S. Advisory Committee on International, Education and Cultural Affairs.

A native of Los Angeles, Gardner holds A.B. and M.A. degrees from Stanford University and a Ph.D. degree from the University of California. He also has honorary degrees from 12 colleges and universities in the U.S. and Canada.

Gardner joined the Carnegie Corp. in 1946 as executive associate and became president in 1955.

He is a trustee of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and a director of the Shell Oil Corp. and the New York Telephone Co.

BARRY GOLDWATER

NELSON ROCKEFELLER

Top GOP Candidates Eye Primary Contests

WASHINGTON (P)—Sen. Barry Goldwater and Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller seek votes today in two primary elections, but their eyes are on the test coming up Friday in Oregon.

Rockefeller, governor of New York, is the only entry in West Virginia's Republican presidential primary today.

And Goldwater, Senator from Arizona, is the only presidential contender on the ballot in Nebraska's GOP primary. But he could run into trouble since write-in vote campaigns have been waged for Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and, belatedly, for Rockefeller and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon. Write-in votes are not counted in West Virginia. With no opposition there, Rockefeller was busy campaigning in Oregon Monday. Goldwater, who cut down his Oregon campaigning last month, scheduled a one-day campaign swing in Nebraska Monday.

With no major contests between presidential hopefuls or candidates for other offices, Republican voter turnouts in both states are expected to be fairly light.

The 14 Republican convention delegates to be chosen in West Virginia's primary are not bound by the outcome of the preference vote, and they are not slated or pledged to any candidate.

Redistricting Idea Offered To Court

From Our Wire Services

Two Democratic members of the bipartisan state apportionment commission Monday asked the Michigan Supreme Court to consider an alternative to their one-man, one-vote plans now being considered by the court.

A Robert Kleiner of Grand Rapids and Richard Austin of Detroit filed a petition for consideration of the plan, claiming it is constitutionally acceptable for redistricting the Michigan House of Representatives and the Senate.

Kleiner said the decision to file the supplement came after unsuccessful attempts at reconvening the apportionment commission last week.

In an exchange of letters with former Gov. Wilbur Brucker, head of the Republicans on the commission, Austin asked for the reconvening of the commission at the request of the co-chairman, Austin and Brucker, because "the opinions of the Michigan Supreme Court on April 10 indicate a likelihood that none of the apportionment plans now before the court will meet constitutional requirements."

Brucker refused to call the meeting because the new Austin-Kleiner proposal still didn't follow the 80-20 formula for redistricting the state senate.

The high court inherited the job of deciding which of the several plans considered by the commission, before it dismissed itself Feb. 7, was most acceptable.

Plane Crashes In Philippines; 73 Lives Lost

CLARK AIR FORCE BASE, Philippine (P)—A U.S. jet transport carrying military personnel hit a taxicab, crashed and burned while landing here last night. The U.S. Air Force said 73 of 83 aboard the plane were killed. One man died and two were injured in the taxi.

The four-engine, C135, with 73 passengers and a crew of 10, was flying into this base after a stop at Hickam Air Force Base in Hawaii en route from Travis Air Base, Calif.

Some left the plane at Hickam near Honolulu, while others boarded there. The Air Force said no wives and children were aboard, but it was possible the plane carried some flight nurses.

The plane was not destined to go beyond Clark Air Force Base, but it was not known whether the eventual destination of some aboard was South Viet Nam.

LBJ Pledges Doubled Aid For Alliance

WASHINGTON (P)—President Johnson, announcing the signing of 12 new loan pacts and commitments for 13 Latin American countries, pledged Monday that the United States will double its assistance activities under the Alliance for Progress.

Johnson addressed the ambassadors from the Alliance for Progress countries and the Latin representatives to the Organization of American States, after an hour-long private conference with them at the White House. He told them the United States has begun its own "all-out war on poverty" because a just country "cannot permit a class of forsaken in the midst of the fortunate."

"We are also marching forward in our struggle to eliminate racial injustice to permit every man, of every race and color and belief, to share fully in our national life," Johnson said.

Grasser Decision Expected Soon

The Michigan Attorney General's office is reviewing the report of the arrests and court processing of students caught April 23 at grassers in Shiawassee County, Leo S. Cohen, deputy attorney general, said Monday.

A decision is expected later this week, he said.

World News at a Glance

Exiles See 'Zero Hour'

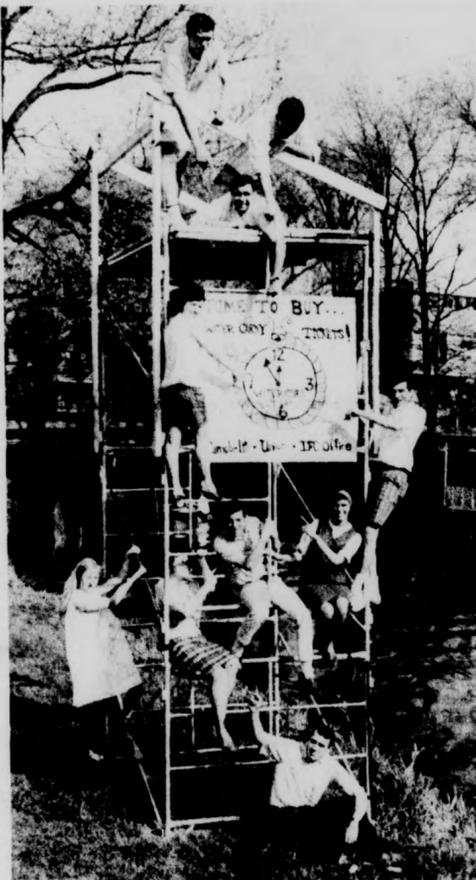

MIAMI, Fla. (P)—Cuban exiles said Monday they believe zero hour is near for beginning a long, hard-fought campaign of landings in Cuba by anti-Communist action groups seeking to overthrow Fidel Castro.

For months, various militant organizations of Cuban refugees, many with guerrilla experience under Castro or training in the U.S. Army, have been planning such attacks. On one thing, all seem agreed: if and when the attacks come it will be the beginning of a prolonged and soul-testing campaign.

Hoffa's Legal Fees Probed

WASHINGTON (P)—The Labor Department added Monday to the mounting troubles of embattled Teamsters Union President James R. Hoffa, launching an investigation of his huge union-paid legal fees.

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz announced the investigation into one of the labor world's most tightly guarded secrets—the amount of money paid to defend Hoffa in his long series of federal court battles.

Trustees Must Give Approval

Turkish Project Already Started

MSU is planning four technical assistance programs in Latin America, the Near East and Southeast Asia, but three of the programs await approval by the Board of Trustees and the U.S. State Department.

The College of Business is planning a five-year program to aid four business colleges in Turkey. The project has approval from the Agency for International Development of the U.S. State Department (AID) and the Turkish Government. It is already underway.

"All of the Turkish college presidents involved have been here to receive general orientation to our business programs," said Alfred L. Seelye, dean of the College of Business.

Eli Cox Jr., and John O'Donnell, both professors of business, will leave in June for two years of work at the colleges there. MSU may send as many as 10 faculty members later, Seelye added.

The College of Education is planning programs in Thailand and Guatemala.

In Thailand, MSU personnel would work with the Thai government in planning an educational system for the whole nation or in solving problems in secondary education.

"The Guatemalan project would be to develop an inter-university board in cooperation with the University of San Carlos," said Richard Niehoff, professor of education.

"To be staffed by both Americans and Central Americans, it would supply information with which they can do a more intelligent job of planning their educational programs."

The MSU program in Argentina would develop a land-grant agricultural college near Bal-

Security Tight For Arrival Of McNamara

SAIGON, Viet Nam (P)—Security was tightened Monday for the arrival of Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara after a Communist agent suspected of plotting to kill him tried to break away from police custody.

One of three Viet Cong terrorists arrested for mining a bridge over which McNamara passed Monday, Nguyen Van Troi leaped from a second floor window at police headquarters, police reported.

Troi landed on a jeep and was taken unconscious to a hospital. He suffered a broken leg in the fall.

JFK Library Fund Drive Starts Today

A student fund drive for the John F. Kennedy Memorial Library opens on campus today.

Funds will be collected at floor meetings this week in residence halls. They will be collected at house meetings next week in fraternities, sororities and student cooperatives.

Off-campus students can contribute next week in Berkeley and the Union.

President John A. Hannah Tuesday became the first contributor to the library fund.

Names of all who have contributed to the library fund will be publicly displayed in a special room devoted to students in the Kennedy Library when it is built on the Harvard campus.

Jamie Blanchard, Royal Oak senior and chairman of the drive, said full student participation is desired far more than money.

"Even if a student contributes one cent, he should sign his name on the list," Blanchard said.

Red Cedar's Struggles

The staff of Red Cedar Review, representing the best literary efforts of the University, has published a fine magazine. Their magazine has sold slowly, and is again running into the problem which makes University subsidy necessary.

Students do not buy Red Cedar Review and seem to think that a student magazine is either unnecessary or hopeless, if they think anything about it.

Those who have anything to do with publication of RCR remain convinced that a student literary journal is a good thing, but it does not sell on campus. So Red Cedar Review struggles on, subsidized by the University and tacitly censored.

Red Cedar Review editors have suggested several alternatives to their present situation.

One plan, the most promising but the least practical, involves an off-campus magazine, to be published entirely by students and with no official connection to the University.

Another idea is to institute a second publication similar to Red Cedar Review including articles of political and sociological comment.

It is unfortunate that in a University that claims to be growing intellectually as well as physically and financially students should have to be shamed into supporting Red Cedar Review or other student publications.

The staff of Red Cedar Review has asked students who are interested in expanding MSU's publication efforts to contact them. They have asked that some enthusiasm be shown for the plans outlined above or for some other strategy.

It is hoped they will receive some response to their request and will be able to dig themselves out of their chronic troubles.

JFK Library

A drive is being launched on campus to obtain student support for the Kennedy Library in Boston.

John F. Kennedy personally selected the site by the Charles River shortly before his death. He had planned to make his office there after he retired from the presidency.

Now the site has been selected by the Kennedy family as fitting for this memorial library.

Ostensibly the effort aims at collecting money for a special student room within the Library. This would house materials relating to the late President's involvement with youth.

But actually it is an attempt to make the Kennedy Library--one which will belong to Americans--a library which will also be made by them--many of them.

Perhaps in this way the cold awesome barrier which almost completely separates the individual from a feeling of participation in the great occurrences of the world can be breached.

If in a small way it can do this; then the Kennedy Library will not only be a depository of precious materials, but a symbol of people united in concern.

It only remains for persons, students in our case, to respond appropriately.

Times change. Madras shirts are guaranteed to do everything conventional shirts aren't.

I used to wonder why some students wore sunglasses at night, but now I see the light. If you dressed the way most of them do you'd want to conceal your identity too.

Letters To The Editor

'Foreigners' Help Business

To the Editor:

I wish that those legislators who would reduce the enrollment of out-of-staters for matters of good business would realize that the education of "foreigners" is itself good business.

While in Michigan, the out-of-stater eats Michigan food; he buys clothes from Michigan merchants, and he drinks at Michigan, if not East Lansing, bars. Not only does the state government collect taxes on these purchases, but the state as a whole gains hundreds of dollars per student per year as a contribution to the Michigan "balance of payments."

The out-of-state student industry should be worth at least the same investment as the more transient out-of-state tourist industry. If the University comes even near to splitting even on the cost of educating the out-of-stater, then the State of Michigan is making quite a bundle in the peripheral market for Michigan goods and services.

Let's hope that our legislators don't economize-away this already established market.

Eliot D. Litoff

Things Aren't Tough All Over

To the Editor:

Things are tough all over. There are wars and rumors of wars, there is the parking situation; there are mass arrests; there is always the legislature.

There are also occasional goodies and amenities to redress the balance. Those of us who looked out the east windows of Epley at 4:30 Wednesday afternoon were treated to an extraordinary sight: a quadruple rainbow.

It followed, by about an hour and a half, another unusual sight; the cloud formation known as mammato-cumulus, which has the appearance of an array of pendulous bags of water. This formation can be viewed only about twice a year in this area; it occurs along a squall line, indicating extreme turbulence.

The sight of it kept my attention on the sky, since it presages tornado weather sometimes. The reward for window watching in this case was the sight of the multiple rainbow, an incredible layercake of color over the trees around Owen Hall.

Things aren't all tough.

SQUISH - Dedicated To Helping Worms

To the Editor:

With the advent of the usual rains this spring, a problem of titanic magnitude has come to our attention. All have noticed, but few have voiced concern over, the MSU Anglemorm Slaughter.

After a recent rain of .43 inches, a survey was taken on the sidewalk between Giltner Hall and Physics-Math Building. The results showed that there were .863 anglemorms per foot, lying either limp and lifeless or slimily squished under a callous student's careless foot.

Multiply this number by our 30.2 miles of sidewalks and the 20.3 inches of rain which annually falls between April 10 and October 20 and we find that 6,391,000 anglemorms are massacred on the sidewalks of MSU in a single year; more than the number of lives Hitler managed to exterminate in 10 years!

All hope for the worms is not lost! A group of concerned students have raised their voices in protest and organized SQUISH-Society Questioning the Useless Injury of Squirring Hermaphrodites. Our study committee has come up with two alternate solutions.

One would be to erect one-half inch-high fences along the edges of our sidewalks to keep the worms off. The second angle of approach, appealing to the more aesthetically inclined, would be to install a wire at the edge of the walk which would be used as an electric fence during rains.

We feel fast action must be taken. Informed sources have revealed to us that if no solution is found, a food corporation plans to scrape up the worms after the sun has dried them, package them like potato chips, and sell them under the name of Krispee Krawleys.

The future of anglemorms at MSU depends on you, the students and faculty of this university, to support this noble cause. Remember: Don't Squirm, Save the Worm!

To all those who would like to demonstrate their support for the worms by joining SQUISH or wearing SQUISH T-shirts: Call ED 2-8635.

"We have received no commitment from AID," said Maurice F. Perkins, head of the College of Agriculture's foreign programs.

"The INTA, their government's research and extension organization, has been very receptive to our offers of assistance.

Perkins indicated MSU personnel would help plan buildings, develop a library, secure equipment and set up a curriculum. Later they would help with the research and extension program.

A decision by AID should be made sometime this year," he added.

Merit Program Here Completes First Year

Editor's Note: This is the first of a four-part series on Merit Scholars in the University.

By MIKE KINDMAN
State News Editorial Writer

Michigan State University's sponsorship this year of 149 scholarships through the National Merit Scholarship program has been a controversial move in higher education circles.

The National Merit program, which recently announced its ninth group of Merit Scholars among the nation's high school seniors, has become one of the most respected testing devices designed to seek out the most talented high school graduates in the nation.

MSU, through its unique honors program, is one of the most promising campuses in the country for the student in search of a flexible undergraduate program. The decision to sponsor Merit Scholarships was made in order to attract more top-level students to East Lansing.

The sponsorship program, said Gordon A. Sabine, vice president for special projects, is "a very good way to identify a top brain-power pool that's nationwide."

"It permitted us to take our out-of-state scholarships and distribute them through this brain-power pool," he said.

A new group of about 150 Michigan State-sponsored Merit Scholars has been named as part of next year's class of entering freshmen. In addition, about 60 Merit Scholars with scholarships sponsored by outside sources will be freshmen here.

This year, 149 Merit Scholars were MSU-sponsored, and 46 others entered here with "other-sponsored" scholarships.

With the end of the first year in MSU's extensive National Merit program approaching, it is fitting to measure the progress of this year's almost 200 Merit Scholars freshmen, and see how Michigan State has measured up to their expectations.

'Remarkable Record'

The group as a whole has shown a "remarkable record of success," Sabine said. He cited fall term grades as one measure of the group's performance.

Approximately three-fourths of the entire group had grade-point averages over 3.0 that term.

The University has made every effort to aid the Merit Scholar group in its academic advancement, but has done so primarily through the ordinary channels used for all beginning students: advance information on procedures for waiver and comprehensive examinations, explanations to students and parents of advancement opportunities at MSU, summer counseling clinics and other advisory programs.

Sabine explains, "The Merit Scholar gets treated just like everyone else at Michigan State, except that with his ability he is capable of taking greater advantage of the educational opportunities here."

Responsibility And Challenge

The key word in the faculty view of the program is "responsibility."

"It seems to me that a Merit Scholar bears some responsibility for his own education," Sabine said, "and should be alert to the opportunities open to him."

The second key word to consider is challenge. Stanley J. Idzerda, director of Honors College, said the University offers to all its honor students, including the Merit Scholars, "an interesting and challenging education, if they are willing."

The University catalogue reads: "The flexibility of the Honors College program has been provided to insure that Honors students are constantly challenged by the most advanced work for which each is ready."

Idzerda explains, "We promise something to students and, with a reasonable degree of cooperation from them in fulfilling the promise, we fulfill it, too."

Most of the students appear willing to take the challenge, and have found rewarding academic experiences here this year.

The entire group has participated in honors sections and courses, and a large number have taken waiver exams and other advancement offerings.

"There is an opportunity for the superior student to do work above the ordinary," Michael Hartman, Pontiac, Ill., freshman and a Merit Scholar, said, "But the responsibility rests with him rather than with the University. You can get a good education in any school, but it's up to the student."

'It's Up To Individual'

Barbara Eltzroth, Coloma freshman, "came to State because it could offer special opportunities." But Merit Scholar or not, she said, "it's all up to the individual to take the initiative. Nobody's going to hold your hand and tell you what to do."

Most of the students contacted in the Merit group are generally pleased with the opportunities offered them at MSU, and the University appears delighted with the students' over-all performance.

But some students do question the program: "I wonder whether Honors College in practice is all it is cracked up to be."

"I'm not too fond of the idea of basic courses."

"I wouldn't mind if the atmosphere were a little more intellectual."

"We should have been told more of the methods and procedure involved in getting advanced or accelerated courses."

Tomorrow: Merit Scholar's reactions to required and basic courses, and faculty views of honor student's general needs.

Faculty Woodwinders Star In Spring Concert Tonight

The Faculty Woodwind Quintet will feature contemporary French composers in a spring term concert at 8:15 tonight in the music auditorium.

The members of the quintet are Russell Friedewald, flute, Elsa Ludewig, clarinet, Daniel Stolper, oboe, Edgar Kirk, bassoon, and Douglas Campbell, horn.

Corliss Arnold, associate professor and director of music at the Peoples Church, will assist the quintet on the piano.

"The woodwind quintet is really a twentieth century idiom," Kirk said, "and in fact there were no quintet pieces written in the nineteenth century except in France and then after the Paris Conservatory was well established."

The form then spread to Germany, he said, and by the twentieth century was a well-established reading and performing style.

The woodwind quintet was late in developing, Kirk said, due to strictly physical reasons of acoustical research, development of technique sufficient to master the instruments and construction of wind instruments that would play in tune.

"The woodwind instruments before the industrial revolution and the improvement it brought to these instruments were strictly a hit-and-miss proposition," he said.

The quintet form also posed problems for the composers, the bassoonist said, as there is no homogeneity of sound, but five disparate sounds. Kirk noted that the first 12-tone row composition was Arnold Schonberg's "Quintette," for woodwind quintet.

The first number on the program will be Jean Francaix's "Quintette," described by Kirk as one of the most difficult in woodwind quintet repertoires. The number is colorful, he said, exploiting the technical facilities and unusual tonal qualities of each instrument.

The second, "Rhapsodie," by the Belgian composer Robert Casadesu, for piano and woodwinds, is impressionistic, showing the Debussy influence, and is nearly a piano concerto.

The third, Jean-Michel Damase's "Dix-Sept Variations," Kirk described as much like the Francaix piece, not as technically demanding, but employing difficult rhythms.

Miller Is Sigma Xi Award Winner

Elwyn R. Miller, associate professor of animal husbandry, received the junior award at the Sigma Xi scientific society banquet last week at Kellogg Center.

The junior award, a $150 prize, is made to men over 40. It is one of the highest honors conferred annually by the MSU chapters.

Certificates also were awarded to two graduate students and nine undergraduates in recognition of their research abilities.

Graduate winners are James V. Beck, mechanical engineering major from Everett, Mass., and Charles H. McGinnis, avian physiology major from Belleville, N.J.

Undergraduate winners, all seniors, are Robert E. Greene, Knoxville, Tenn.; Charles R.

Handy, Sodus; Ned R. Keltner, Lansing; Lenora Larson, Washington, D.C.; Lyle H. Linsemier, Mason; Frank E. Taylor, McLean, Va.; and Jean B. Buchanan, Birmingham.

The following new officers were installed: Donald J. Montgomery, professor of physics, president; John E. Cantlon, professor of botany, vice president; Lawrence E. Dawson, professor of food and science, secretary; and Elwyn R. Miller, associate professor of animal husbandry, treasurer.

Former Prof Dies At 70

Edward F. Eldridge, 1918 graduate and former professor of engineering research, died Saturday in Portland, Ore., at the age of 70.

The author of several technical articles and books, he was on the MSU faculty from 1928 to 1949.

Services will be held Wednesday morning in Portland. Burial will be in Olympia, Wash.

Archeology Film To Be Shown

A documentary film, "Archeology in Turkey," will be shown at a meeting of the Central Michigan Society of the Archeological Institute of America at 7:30 tonight in the Library auditorium.

Produced by the Turkish government, the film reviews recent excavations and archeological finds in Turkey. The meeting is open.

Two Grads Join Peace Corps

Two 1963 MSU graduates have volunteered to serve two years in the Peace Corps in Nigeria.

Katherine Clark and Evelyn Cloonan are among the 76 volunteers who left for Nigeria Sunday after a home leave.

They spent 11 weeks at Columbia Teacher's College in New York City studying the leading languages, culture and history of Nigeria.

Their group will teach in boarding schools, teacher training colleges and in the five Nigerian colleges.

J-Council Posts

J-Council chairmanship interviews will be held from 6 to 10 tonight in 311 Student Services.

J-Council petitions may be handed in at 317 Student Services from 9 to 11 a.m., and from 2 to 5 p.m. until Friday.

Interviews for council positions, to be held May 19 and 21, will be assigned at the time petitions are submitted. Students are chosen on the basis of petition and interview.

He will speak on "African Nationalism and American Foreign Policy." The meeting is open. Coffee will be served.

Frosh-Soph Jobs

Petitioning for Frosh-Soph Council starts today. Petitions are available at dorm desks, 317 Student Services, and in the Union.

They may be turned in at 317 Student Services from 2 to 5 p.m. until May 22.

Engineering Meet

Richard J. Dohrmann of the Babcock and Wilcox Co., Alliance, Ohio, will speak on "Application of Classical Elasticity to Industrial Problems" at 4 p.m. today in 284 Engineering Building.

He will be speaking as part of a Metallurgy, Mechanics and Materials Science Seminar.

Prof's Aid Confab

C.J. Mackson and B.F. Cargill, associate and assistant professors of engineering, were program chairman and public relations chairman for a tri-state meeting of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers Saturday.

The meeting was held in Ft. Wayne, Ind. More than 300 engineers and their guests attended from Michigan, Indiana and Ohio.

D.E. Wiant, professor of agricultural engineering, addressed the group on high energy electron and gamma radiation.

Term Party

A broken-down bus, 420 roasted half-chickens, 250 pounds of baked potatoes and 80 dozen cookies were the ingredients of the Butterfield-Emmons combined term party Saturday.

The party began at the Dells on Lake Lansing at 3 p.m. Dinner was followed by a hootenanny, led by Fritz Foerster, and a dance, with music by the State Bergman Combo.

A rented bus carrying partygoers back to their dorms broke down on the last trip. Passing motorists gave students rides.

Oral Sunday

A total of 7,359 persons received Type II Sabine Oral polio vaccine Sunday at Olin Memorial Health Center.

Dr. James Feurig, director of Olin, said this number represented 571 more than the number who took Type I April 12.

Make-up clinics for those who did not take the vaccine Sunday will be held Wednesday from 12 noon to 8 p.m. at Sparrow Hospital, St. Lawrence Hospital, Ingham County General Hospital and Lansing General Hospital.

Persons who have taken Type III vaccine but not Type I should take Type II at the next clinic, scheduled for June 7, Feurig said. Type I should then be made up at some future clinic.

Netmen Face Northwestern

Defeating Northwestern in recent years has been almost impossible, but that's the task the Spartans will be facing at 2:30 this afternoon on the MSU courts.

and placed third in the NCAA meet. They lost one dual meet in 25 last season, and this year their record has been blemished only by an early-season loss to Southern Illinois.

Marty Riessen, two-time conference singles champion and Davis Cup team member.

Riessen has been runner-up in NCAA singles play for the past two seasons and teamed with Jim Erickson and Clark Graebner to share the Big Ten doubles title for the past two years.

Graebner is on the squad this season to continue his role as number two man in one of the most feared 1-2 combinations in college tennis. He was number two singles division champion in last year's Big Ten meet and reached the fourth round of NCAA singles competition last season before being eliminated.

The Wildcats don't have as much depth as they had last year, but they'll still be favored in the loop meet next week at Champaign.

MSU will enter the meet in the wake of weekend victories over Illinois and Iowa. The Spartans stand 4-1 in league play and 12-4 overall.

Charlie Wolff remains on top in the Spartan singles standings with a 13-2 mark.

The Green and White will meet every conference rival before the conference meet. Their last meet before the Big Ten affair will be Friday and Saturday at Minneapolis where they'll face Minnesota, Indiana and Wisconsin.

One of the major reasons for the Northwestern success is

AUSG To Honor Coaches

All-University Student Government is initiating an annual honorary award to be given to the coach or assistant coach who has contributed the most to character-building among athletes during the year.

The award, approved by the Athletic Council, will be given to the coach selected by the captains of all varsity teams.

names of the winners throughout the years.

AUSG President Bob Harris, Bryan, Ohio, junior, said the reasoning behind the award is that the winning coaches usually receive acclaim, but others who don't win because they lack the material deserve some recognition.

Under present plans a trophy will be given to the selected coach and a plaque, to be placed in either Jenison or the Intramural Building, will contain the

Young Fund Nets $1,469

Gate receipts from Saturday's Green-White scrimmage in Spartan Stadium netted $1,469.50 for the Ralph H. Young scholarship fund, the athletic office announced Monday.

"This will more than take care of one full grant-in-aid for the coming year," said Robert E. Shackleton, fund director.

"It is undoubtedly a tremendous contribution to the fund," he said, "more than we had been hoping for."
