A lone man walks by carrying a bucket of paint. Two men are installing door-knobs. Lengths of pipe lie in the midst of an untiled section of floor. Boxes of pipe insulation stand in the middle of the floor, unopened. Nearby sits a container of bottled gas and some unused welding equipment. Pipe stubs protrude from the wall, waiting to be joined to heating equipment. Sinks stand nearly ready for use, lacking only a connecting trap underneath. Such is the scene in the new Center for International Programs. The center, which should have been occupied about a month ago, remains about 96 per cent complete, with little chance for the immediate completion of the remaining four per cent. The reason? The current plumbers strike, which is over one month old. Lou Kookan, project engineer for the center, said mostly finishing touches need to be done, but these cannot be completed until the plumbers return to work. Even such things as the laying of tile on the floor in front of the bookstore cannot be done until the strike is settled because some excess valves are in the way and cannot be moved. Kookan said these valves were moved early in June, and almost immediately a picket line which the other workers refused to cross sprang up. In fact, he said, the plumbers union has pictures of the valves as they now are, and if even one of them is moved, a picket line would probably result and all progress would stop. At present only a skeleton crew is working, finishing up the installation of hardware, painting and doing other comparably minor chores. Kookan estimated that these tasks could probably be completed within a week. The workers are not pushed as hard as usual because some workers must stay on the job, and they must also have something to do. In the cafeteria kitchen only drain connectors and cooling equipment for the storage of semi-perishable foodstuffs need to be installed, roughly a two-week job, but, without plumbers, it can't be done. The increased number of summer school students has created a desperate need for the dining facilities which this cafeteria can offer, Kookan said, yet, until the strike ends, it cannot be used. Plumber Strike Stalls Building

By MIKE KINDMAN
State News Staff Writer

A plumbing strike which is crippling progress on several campus building projects is now in its seventh week, and neither side in the dispute reports any significant success in negotiations.

Federal and state mediators have participated in the discussions, but no settlement has been reached, and at least one contractor accused the plumbers' union of intentionally avoiding a settlement by raising wage demands.

Donald R. Simons of Dard, Inc., one of the contractors handling campus projects, said the union negotiators "don't seem to want to negotiate."

"They've been adding to their demands," Simons said.

The plumbers union has asked for a total increase of $1.05 per hour over a three-year period. This would include a 25-cent hike retroactive to June 1, when the strike began, a 20-cent raise October 1, 30 cents more June 1, 1965, and a final 30 cents June 1, 1966.

Contractors have offered a 17-cent raise retroactive to June 1, 8 cents next January 1, and 20 cents more June 1, 1965, and June 1, 1966. This totals 65 cents over three years.

In addition, Simons said, the union has followed each offer made by the contractors with further demands. Currently at issue is a union proposal that plumbers be paid for a 40-hour work week while actually being obligated to work 39 hours. The actual work hours, he said, would go down to 38 and 37 hours June 1, 1965 and 1966, respectively, according to the plumbers' request.

This, Simons said, had the effect of raising the union's demands while giving the appearance of lowering them. Plumbers currently are paid $4 an hour, and their proposal would give them a net raise of $1.47 an hour for a 39-hour work week, rather than the $1.05 they claim to be asking.

Douglas Griffith, business agent for the plumbers union, said negotiations thus far have been "unsuccessful."

He said, "We would like to think there is some settlement" emerging from the negotiations. An all-day meeting last Wednesday produced no tangible results. Further negotiations are scheduled for today.

The University has had little direct contact with either the strikers or the contractors, according to Theodore B. Simon, director of physical plant, but a complete shut-down of the affected campus projects is feared.

Buildings whose progress has been slowed or halted by the strike include the Fee and Akers dormitories and the chemistry and biochemistry buildings, all set for fall openings.

Joseph T. Davis, Jr., assistant manager of Associated General Contractors, representing firms in charge of entire projects, and not necessarily their plumbing aspects, said Lansing area projects may shut down completely "very soon."

"If any jobs shut down now it will be because the other trades have gone as far as they can without the plumbers and the glaziers," Davis said.

Local glaziers have been on strike since June 10, and no settlement is reported in their strike either.

SEEKS STRIKE SOLUTION--With the International Center way behind schedule due to repeated workmen's strikes, Lou Kookan, building supervisor hopes for an immediate return to work by union employees.

Art, Films Top Day's Agenda

Artist Critic To Lecture

Lectures on art and motion pictures, and a chamber music recital highlight today's Fine Arts Festival program.

American painter and lecturer Philip Evergood will speak on "A Conversation with the Artist," at 10 a.m. in Kresge Art Center.

A widely collected artist and winner of many art awards, Evergood took his formal art training in London and Paris.

Also at 10 a.m., noted movie critic and historian Arthur Knight will speak on "Films as an Art Form" in Fairchild Theatre. He will lecture again at 8:15 p.m. in Fairchild, on "Film as an Art Resource."

Knight is film critic for the "Saturday Review" and motion picture curator for the Hollywood Museum. He is also associate professor of cinema at the University of Southern California.

A chamber music concert will be presented by faculty members of the Congress of Strings at 4 p.m. in Fairchild Theatre.

They will perform the "String Quartet in C Minor" by Anton Bruckner; the "Suite for Violin Solo" by Papineau-Couture; and the "Quintet in E-flat for Piano and Strings, Op. 44" by Robert Schumann.

Violinists Frank Hauser and Hyman Goodman, violist William Lincer and cellist Theodore Salzman will present the Bruckner work. Hyman Goodman will play the solo violin suite in its first performance in America.

Paul Oberg, dean of the Congress of Strings, will be the featured pianist in the Schumann Quintet. He will perform with Louis Krasner and Frank Hauser, violins; William Lincer, viola; and Robert Jamieson, cello.

A concert by Canadian folk singer Alan Mills will be a feature of Wednesday's program. Mills will present a program of "Canadians" at 8:15 p.m.

New Registration Tried At Clinics

Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part series on the registrar's office.

By SUSAN J. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

A new type of registration which eliminates class cards is undergoing a trial run on entering freshmen at counseling clinics this summer.

Some 5,000 freshmen will have pre-registered by the end of the summer in a model of the IM Building which is set up in Wilson Hall. They will go through the entire process of academic advising, enrollment and payment of fees and tuition.

Instead of stopping at each department table for a class card, students simply mark the schedule sequence number of their courses on a sheet similar to those used on mechanically scored tests.

Each sheet has 10 boxes. If a course has both lecture and lab sections, the student marks them in separate boxes. Also included in the data is the number of credits for each course and whether the course is being audited or repeated.

The data on the sheets will be processed and organized for distribution to appropriate departments on the University's IBM computers.

Horace C. King, registrar, said the new registration experiment is an attempt to "go as far as possible with the equipment already existing in the date processing division."

The University is constantly attempting to devise a more efficient way of registering students, King said. Experiments tried last year were early registration, academic advising during the term and early issuing of class cards.

"This year, we plan to incorporate the best of all we

University Television Bans Negro Play Due To Words

A play dealing with abuse of a Negro shoeshine man by a white customer was banned from appearing on MSU's educational television station WMSB Sunday. Armand L. Hunter, director of the station, objected to the use of the words "nigger" and "damn" in the play "Boy." The 12-minute drama was written by the Rev. Malcolm Boyd, Episcopal chaplain at Wayne State University.

It deals with a Negro shoeshine man who is told by a customer to "make it shine like your face, black boy." When the customer leaves, the shoeshine man puts on a white mask and abuses an imaginary customer. Then he treats the customer as he would wish to be treated. The Negro asks "Who am I?" after having assumed both identities.

A chorus answers "Boy. Boy. Boy. Boy." "I am not Boy," the man replies.

The term "Boy" is used by many whites in a derogatory sense when referring to Negroes, particularly in the South. A Southern Negro man is called "Boy" even though he may be 60 years old.

"Television stations are required by the Federal Communications Commission to avoid invective and profanity," Hunter said.

Although the words "damn" and "nigger" have been used on commercial stations, Hunter said the words were used consistently in "Boy."

"The decision not to broadcast this play was made months ago," Hunter said. "It was originally written for theatre, and you can't do the same kinds of things on television that you can in the theatre."

The hour-long program on WMSB Sunday included two other dramas of Boyd's which also dealt with racial issues. "Boy" was replaced by a commentary on drama by Maurice Crane, professor of humanities.

Hunter also objected to the context in which the words were used in "Boy." He said the play would have needed some editing even if the words had been taken out.

Robert Sherwood, producer-director of the play, said "Boy" was the strongest of Boyd's plays.

Boyd said the play "cuts very deeply and was written to make whites experience human pain." "I want to embarrass the whites. A lot of them must learn how the Negro suffers."

Canoes Disappear, Left 'Behind Bars'

Several MSU canoeists made a watery tour of the local night spots last weekend.

Three canoes reported lost or stolen were found tied up Saturday south of the Coral Gables and the Paul Revere Bar on the Red Cedar River.

The campus police began combing the area for the canoes at 1 a.m. Saturday after receiving a report of their disappearance from the MSU canoe shelter.

Shortly after the search began, canoe No. 30 was found languishing on the Red Cedar south of the Gables. Canoes 1 and 18 were missing until the following afternoon. A shelter employee discovered them at approximately 3 p.m. floating lazily south of Paul Revere's.

The canoes were all checked out by a student who presented an ID Activity card.

Richard O. Bennett, director of the public safety, said that no action would be taken against the student by the campus police since the canoes had been recovered.

John J. Kennedy, director of University concessions, said his department is "very happy" the canoes have been found.

Peace Corps Drive Here Successful

More than 20 persons, most of them experienced teachers, took Peace Corps placement tests last week.

The response was better than expected, according to Peace Corps recruiter Burt Swanson. Before leaving the Corps headquarters in Washington for the week-long recruiting drive, he said officials expected the drive to go extremely well if only 15 completed tests were brought back.

The experienced teachers who took the test are eligible for a new Peace Corps program aimed at getting more professional persons into overseas service. A unique aspect of the new plan allows teachers ample time to make the necessary arrangements prior to service.

Swanson, an ex-volunteer, formerly worked in the Famagusta area of Cyprus. He specialized in agricultural extension work and recreational programs.

Expressing his appreciation for the recruiting teams reception on campus, Swanson said that the cooperation of various departments of the University were excellent.

Open Housing And Closed Minds

Phantom fears regarding racially integrated neighborhoods have appeared again in a petition signed by more than 1,000 East Lansing residents who oppose any open occupancy law.

The petition, presented to the City Council last week, supports the "right" of any realtor or private owner to discriminate on the basis of race in selling property.

On the surface, the petition simply seems to be opposed to local government regulation of private real estate transactions.

However, a phone call received by the State News demonstrates that fears regarding open housing laws are much deeper than mere irritation at interference from "municipal bureaucrats" (as the petition puts it).

The lady who called the State News refused to identify either herself or the group which circulated the petition.

"It would be terrible for my husband's business if my name got in the paper" was her explanation.

She said the petitioners were not in favor of racial discrimination but were afraid that East Lansing home owners would be subjected to "tests" from Negroes who really did not want to purchase property.

She expressed the fear that these luckless "test case" property owners would have their names splashed across local papers if an open occupancy law were passed.

Then she added that the city residents who signed the petition think things are "moving too fast."

What a sadly misinformed, misguided, fearful philosophy!

The purpose of an open occupancy law is not to bandy about the names of local property owners. The only aim of such a law is to insure minority group members of equal treatment when they are trying to buy a house.

There will be no need for "test cases" if an effective law is passed to insure members of all races that they can purchase a home commensurate with their financial means.

Those who oppose open housing are not really afraid that the Negro is moving too fast. They are simply afraid that he is moving at all.

Of course, the unwritten but inherent fear in the petition is that property values will fall if Negroes move into a neighborhood.

As Mrs. Mahlon S. Sharp, a member of the East Lansing Human Relations Commission, points out, property values only fall when Negroes move in if whites move out.

That over 1,000 property owners in East Lansing fail to recognize this economic fact of life is a sad commentary on the state of public information.

That the group which circulated the petition is unwilling to identify itself is a sad commentary on the state of public responsibility.

Persons who will not publicly acknowledge their beliefs must either be ashamed of those beliefs or filled with unadmirable cowardice.

Goldwater Opponents Crumble

By SUSAN J. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

As Republicans prepare to choose a presidential candidate in San Francisco, opposition to Sen. Barry Goldwater has all but crumbled.

The Goldwater organization's dogged vote-cadging at the grass roots level of the party has nearly assured the Arizona conservative of the nomination.

Only three men could have strongly influenced the party against Goldwater, and it is too late now.

The first of these is Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower. Ike is not and never has been a political professional, but he happens to be the only Republican to occupy the White House in the last 32 years. Eisenhower could have spoken out against Goldwater with the voice of success, and the party would have listened.

However, the General has chosen to remain uncommitted on his

Barry's Whys Grist For New Approach

By HUGH J. LEACH
State News Staff Writer

By the end of this week Arizona's Barry Goldwater will probably be the official Republican party presidential candidate and many people will groan, shake their heads and vow to vote for Johnson.

The question is why.

There seems to be one simple answer to the question, and that is that they are afraid of what Goldwater might do if elected. Although they won't admit it to themselves, many may vote against him because they are afraid he's right.

The programs which Goldwater advocates are, to say the least, different from many of those presently in effect. For many people they are too different. But is that good criteria for saying that a man would not make a good president?

When the Berlin wall was built, Goldwater was one of the first to advocate tearing it down. The general reaction was that this was a terrible thing. Two weeks after he said it, the U.S. ambassador to Germany said the same thing, and now most people agree that the wall should come down. But his statement was different.

Goldwater was one of the first to advocate NATO and supplying its forces with modern weapons. Immediately the cry went up that he wanted nuclear war.

Terrible. Ghastly. Shocking. Yet today most people advocate similar policies.

Goldwater's celebrated advocacy of the use of the low-yield nuclear weapons in the rain forests of South Viet Nam proved to be only a conjecture on Goldwater's part that that was one way to solve a problem.

Immediately the cry went out that he wanted to use these weapons when that actually was not what he said at all.

And who can blame Goldwater for remaining skeptical of the chances of such a program as nuclear disarmament? It sounds nice. It could be a great step toward peace—if the Communists can be trusted.

War is not what Goldwater wants, but he does desire at least an ideological victory in the cold war and has said that he is willing to go to "the brink of war" to achieve it. But, in this day and age, what country would dare go to war and risk annihilation?

Notice Goldwater said he would go "to the brink of war," not into war. This is an effective way of telling the Communists to "put up or shut up."

Goldwater has also said that he does not want to give foreign economic aid. And why should he? The general attitude of many of the recipients seems to be "Thanks, and I'll let you know when I need more."

In addition, many of the people of these countries resent what we are doing for them and turn toward Communism because of it.

Goldwater's failure to vote in favor of the civil rights bill was termed by some as a move to gain votes in the South. Those who know him vehemently deny this, and I don't think that even

Gettysburg farm. Henry Cabot Lodge, who headed the forces which engineered Ike's nomination at the 1952 convention, was unable to persuade the General to place the name of Pennsylvania's Gov. William W. Scranton in nomination.

Why Eisenhower has remained neutral is a mystery. As president, he typified a moderate philosophy of Republicanism which Goldwater calls "me-tooism." Unless Ike has suddenly turned into a conservative, he has remained silent in the name of the party unity or out of sheer indifference to the political fortunes of the GOP.

The second man who could have swung some powerful weight against Goldwater is former vice-president Richard M. Nixon. Nixon is a moderate whose views lie to the right of New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller but far to the left of Goldwater. He is well-respected by the same party professionals who are supporting the Arizona Senator this year.

As a matter of fact, Nixon built up his political support from the same base and in much the same manner as Goldwater. As vice-president, Nixon was willing to travel any number of miles, make any number of speeches and do any number of mental chores for the party regulars. Goldwater, as chairman of the senatorial campaign committee, has earned his bread in much the same way.

If Nixon had openly opposed Goldwater, his opinions would have been listened to by the party professionals who owe him a debt for years of loyal service.

Nixon's stake in remaining uncommitted is fairly obvious. No one really believes that Nixon's hopes for the presidency are dead. His only chance of receiving the nomination this year lies in a potential role as a compromise candidate. By remaining neutral, Nixon has heightened his acceptability to the Goldwater forces if something should unexpectedly upset their man's drive for the nomination.

The third man who could have put a hitch in the Goldwater bandwagon is Everett McKinley Dirksen of Illinois, minority leader of the U.S. Senate.

However, Dirksen has supported Goldwater ever since the Arizona senator obtained pledges of support from 48 members of Illinois' 58-vote delegation. Dirksen, who was the chief architect of the civil rights act, is not ideologically oriented toward Goldwater, one of only six GOP senators who voted against the bill.

However, Dirksen is above all a pragmatic politician. As minority leader of the senate, Dirksen appreciates Goldwater's faithful work as chairman of the senatorial campaign committee. As a skillful manipulator of men, he appreciates and values the role of compromise in party unity.

And that seems to be that. The big guns in the party are not about to level any blasts at Goldwater.

Scranton May Prove Winner While Losing

Pennsylvania's Gov. William W. Scranton may walk away from San Francisco this week as the winningest loser in Republican history.

Although Scranton's eleventh-hour attempt to wrest his party's presidential nomination from Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater seems doomed, the Pennsylvania governor may be in a position to pick up all the GOP chips in 1968.

The odds against Goldwater, or any other Republican nominee, in the general election are almost overwhelming, and political parties are reluctant to nominate a defeated candidate twice. President Johnson could be voted out of office this November, but the possibility is almost as remote as that of Goldwater's losing the Republican nomination this week.

Most reliable estimates predict that Goldwater will receive more than 700 votes on the first ballot, well over the 655 needed to capture the nomination. Scranton has about 200 pledged delegates.

Too little, too late is the story of the Pennsylvanian's campaign. If Scranton had been able to obtain the support of every major party leader, the hard core of delegates might have been swayed away from Goldwater.

However, the wealthy Pennsylvania governor has stood almost alone in his campaign. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has remained strictly neutral. Sen. Everett M. Dirksen led 48 of Illinois' 58 delegates into the Goldwater fold. Throughout the country, popular governors are releasing their delegations to vote for Goldwater on the first ballot.

Scranton's only real support has come from New York's Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller, Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, brother of the former president.

This support has not been expensive for all in the fall. Nicholas C. Shurleff II 1531-G Spartan Village

Letter To The Editor

Bus, Driving Rules Assure Expense

To the Editor:

Every few weeks I read about some new innovation concerning the revamping of driving regulations and the operation of a bus line on our campus. As a result of the continual reshuffling of parking lots and redrafting of bus routes by those who know, I find myself totally and thoroughly perplexed. However, out of all this mumble-jumble and hocus-pocus, one thing does seem implicit. The cost for the looming privileges certainly will be greatly increased for those who own a car and/or ride the bus, not to mention the possible inconveniences and chaos that seem sure to ensue.

If the University plans on gaining additional revenues from this transportation dilemma, then the coming venture should be a success. On the other hand, if they truly want to find a remedy, maybe a few suggestions are in order.

1. All single, undergraduate students under 21 years of age should not be permitted to have automobiles, but all other students, except freshmen, should be allowed to drive under the existing provisions. This is designed to reduce the total number of cars while still providing for the use of a car if and when the need arises.

2. Fare should be paid each time a person uses the bus, not as a lump sum every term whether he rides once or a thousand times. If the University insists on charging a flat rate, then tax everyone by raising the tuition. At least this way, future students will have some idea of the cost of attending M.S.U. and not be suddenly swamped with hidden additional fees.

3. Bus routes should be direct to the academic campus with no transfers at some distant point, even if the routes overlap. Buses by their very nature are unreliable as is, so why should the chance of not making it to class on time be multiplied by having to change buses?

4. Parking fees for faculty members are absolutely ridiculous and should be abolished. Furthermore, all faculty members deserve the right to park near their respective buildings. The south campus parking facilities should instead be used by staff employees and students. If any parking areas remain after the faculty has been assured of space, then the staff should fill up the vacant spots on north campus in a manner decided amongst themselves. After all our faculty is this university's most valuable asset and must be respected as such. Maybe over a period of years students will be able to rationalize away the rising cost of education but never for loss of quality of that education.

The above thoughts may or may not have any substance in them whatsoever. At least they are an attempt at voicing a weak protest to some drastic measures taken by the administration in a highly secretive and dictatorial fashion. The present plans for this fall may indeed ease the transportation problems of some and also complicate them for others. No matter in which group you may be classified, one fact is ominous. It will be expensive for all in the fall.

U.S. Homes Teach Students

While most students spent the fourth of July weekend relaxing from their studies, 50 individual foreign students and eight families took the opportunity to learn more about the American way of life.

They were guests of families in the thumb area of Michigan and the Frankfort area.

The Rev. Warren J. Day of People's Church, one of the sponsors of the project, said the visits actually served a dual purpose.

Not only did the students learn about American life by living in American homes, but the families who invited them were given a chance to learn more about the students and their native countries.

Of the students participating in the project, the Rev. Mr. Day said, 32 were from the English Language Center and many of them had just arrived in the United States.

About 40 of the students attended a special orientation session prior to departure, the Rev. Mr. Day said. At this time the students were given an opportunity to raise questions about what to expect and what was expected of them during their stays in the homes.

The orientation is also a time to make the student more relaxed and to give him data on the family with which he will be living for the weekend.

One of the questions which is usually dealt with during this session, the Rev. Mr. Day said, is the religious question. The students are told that their hosts will probably invite them to attend church with them on Sunday, but the hosts are not trying to impose their religion on the student.

The students are told that they should not be afraid to say "no" to their hosts.

The program was initiated through the work of the Rev. William B. Lutz of the Mayville Methodist Church. The first such program was held during Thanksgiving vacation in 1961, with 21 University of Michigan foreign students going to Mayville.

From that beginning the project has expanded to include students from Michigan, MSU and Wayne State University, and about 300 families who are willing to house the students.

By giving 24 hours notice, Rev. Day said, any student desiring to spend the weekend with a family can do so.

In fact, he added, there is such a great number of families wanting students to stay with them that not all requests can be granted. Several families in the Traverse City area had to be denied a guest on the July Fourth weekend.

Pianist Displays Astounding Skill

By LEON WHEELER
State News Reviewer

Arthur Fennimore, pianist, appeared here Thursday night in Fairchild Theatre in an astounding display of technical virtuosity.

This young artist has the power, technique and the clarity of performance to make him one of America's truly great pianists. The only quality noticeably lacking in his performance was that "maturity of interpretation," which comes only with time and serious concentration.

Fennimore's interpretation of the Beethoven "Sonata No. 23 in F Minor" ("Appassionata") was good, but would have been better if the tempos had had more consideration. The second movement was a bit too fast, causing it to lose the deep inward peace of the composer's heart and the great contrast of the other two movements.

The second half of the program, Fennimore played magnificently. It included Barber's "Sonata, Opus 26, two Etude-Tableaux of Rachmaninoff, Opus 33, No. 2 in C Major and the Opus 39, No. 5 in E-Flat Minor and ending the program with the "Mephisto Waltz," of Liszt.

Fennimore played a brilliant encore, the perpetuum mobile "Toccatina" of Prokofiev, which was perhaps the finest show of virtuoso playing of the evening.

The Congress of Strings Orchestra under the baton of Alfred Wallenstein played a brilliant concert in the University Auditorium Wednesday night before an enthusiastic audience.

The tremendously clear, mature sounds of the orchestra were heard in the Vivaldi "Concerto for Two Violins and Orchestra," Bogdan Chruszcz, Miami, Fla. and Darla Da Deppo of Detroit were soloists. Mr. Chruszcz execution of embellishments were magnificent, but Miss Da Deppo's tone was better controlled and more deliberate.

Wallenstein led the orchestra through a fine interpretation of Britten's "Variations for String Orchestra on a Theme of Frank Bridge."

The introduction, theme and the first variation recalled the pathos of Mahler. The other variations were more like genre pieces. The pathos and the rhetoric returned in the Funeral March and Chant with the tensions that accumulated being resolved in a brilliant fugue.

Crop Projects Increase Production

Visitors to the University farms on last Wednesday saw a multitude of research projects aimed at increasing the production of Michigan grown agricultural crops.

The annual Crops and Soils Field Day, sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service and the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station, featured corn, forages and small grains this year. Crop and soil scientists were on hand to discuss the projects with the touring farmers.

A decade of research has demonstrated the possible injurious effects of placing fertilizer in contact with wheat seed, pointed out R. L. Cook. Yet, the damage with wheat was not as great as with oats.

"The research has shown that the best place to locate fertilizer is in a band one inch to the side and one inch below the seed," said Cook. He added that lower yields result when row spacings are greater than seven inches. Yields might even be increased as much as 25 per cent by having rows as close together as three and one-half inches.

S. C. Hildebrand and M.B. Tesar outlined recommendations based on three years of comparing thickly planted corn, Piper Sudangrass, corn for silage and a sorghum-Sudangrass hybrid for varying purposes.

Corn planted in the conventional 36-inch row and harvested in mid-September gave the maximum tonnage of any crop tested as a silage.

Thickly planted corn, some 100,000 plants per acre or sorghum-Sudangrass hybrids were the top choices for a green chop crop harvested between July 15 and August 15. Yields of 3.7 tons per acre on July 15 increased to 5.8 tons when cutting was deferred until August 15.

John Shickluna told farmers the best way to avoid nutrient deficiencies is to test soil. He pointed out that more than 75,000 soil samples are tested each year in Michigan and recommendations made by electronic computer which insures that adequate attention is given to both micro and major plant nutrients.

Reduced plantings of oats means more alfalfa seedlings will be made in the summer or spring with herbicides and no companion crops.

High fertilization rates may be practical when lodging and mildew resistant wheat varieties are available, according to L. S. Robertson, providing fertilizer is applied with a drill that separates the fertilizer from the seed.

Overall Hockey Effect Nil - Bessone

Set Quota On Canadians

More and more Canadians will be playing hockey for American colleges in the coming years. Spartan hockey coach Amo Bessone made the predictions while discussing the new rule changes in regarding Canadian eligibility in the Western Intercollegiate Hockey League.

"There may be fewer Canadians per team," Bessone said, "but hockey is rapidly gaining popularity and there will be many more teams."

"The end result will be more Canadian players." The rule changes, which went into effect June 1, have two major points -- both primarily aimed at giving American players a better chance against their Canadian rivals and teammates: -- anyone who competes in hockey after his 19th birthday, other than on a secondary or college level, will lose one year of eligibility for each year over 19, and

--anyone who plays or has played Junior A hockey is ineligible.

"A kid playing hockey in a Junior A league in Canada may play as many as 200 games before reaching college age," Bessone said.

"A comparable American boy's career between the ages of 16 and 19 would mean only about 60 games," he added.

At one time many American colleges were not recruiting Canadians until they were approaching their middle twenties and were matured players, Bessone said.

"When we were recruiting the older boys, the American boy didn't stand a chance," he said. "The rule should change the chances."

"The differences at the age of 19 between American and Canadian players would not be that different."

Bessone anticipated that the rule changes would be accepted on a national basis in the near future. The eastern schools are becoming concerned, he explained.

Many schools could not afford the cost of large scale recruiting of Canadian players in order to be able to field a good team, Bessone said. The rule change should throw the bulk of the responsibility to the American boy and give more incentive for more teams to spring up.

"The Canadian has been a big factor in American college hockey since World War II," Bessone said. "They are predominantly responsible for increasing the calibre of college hockey in the west."

"However, there is no popular feeling against Canadians by the coaches because they have done so much for the hockey program."

Bessone noted the increase in hockey playing on the high school level particularly in Minnesota and the eastern states.

"The Detroit Catholic schools had a league for the first time last year," he said. "This will probably spread."

The role of Canadians in hockey is something that is found in most other sports, Bessone noted.

Lushwell Trades Glove For Ring

Diamonds are a girl's best friend. Especially when the girl is Barb Bradley, photogenic outfielder for the Lushwell Athletic Club.

Miss Bradley, who last week became the first MSU coed to break the sex barrier in intramural softball, has found something more appealing than the baseball diamond.

It's called a diamond wedding band.

Beginning August 16, her new teammate will be Anthony B. Drake, Lansing graduate student.

In announcing her retirement from softball, Miss Bradley said:

"With less than a month to go before the wedding, it's impossible to enjoy the luxury of being a tomboy."

programs cannot be occupied until approximately four weeks after the settlement of the strike, he said. The area presently lacks some toilet installations and finned-tube radiators for heating. Even such tasks as moving furniture into the rooms cannot be done because it would take a beating while the radiators were being installed. The Center for International Programs is not the only building affected by the strike. Work on the chemistry and bio-chemistry buildings, Fee and Akers dormitories and even Dormitory Number Five, which has not yet risen above the ground, has been curtailed seriously by the strike. The upper floors in Fee and Akers have much of the plumbing equipment installed, but the lower ones are still without toilets, shower heads, lavatories and other necessary equipment.

Navy Seeks New Officers On Campus

A U.S. Navy Officer Programs team will visit the University campus on July 14, 15 and 16. The officers, who will be at the Union lobby from approximately 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., will give information about commissioned programs for college students and graduates.

Problems Few, Indians Do Well

There are 6,700 of them--Indian students in this country--and some get arrested, some run away, a few become mentally deranged and one even tried burning down a lab. However, the great majority, claims S. M. Chari of the Indian embassy, are making an excellent academic record. The mistakes of a few "do not really reflect on the condition of Indian students," he said.

Chari, assistant cultural attache (First Secretary) at the Washington embassy specializes in the affairs of Indian students. Addressing a gathering of the Indian Student Association Wednesday, he cited the great and growing influx of students to the U.S. Today 10 per cent of all foreign students are Indian. As a group they are second only to Canadians, he said.

Announcing Spots Open At WKAR

Auditions for announcing positions at WKAR radio will be conducted Thursday, July 16, at 7:00 p.m. in the station's studios, 3rd floor Auditorium, according to program director Gordon Gainer.

Barry

his accusers really believe it. Goldwater is a man of strong convictions, and his belief in the United States Constitution is one of these. And nowhere in it does it say that the government has a right to tell an employer that he can't hire whom he pleases. This is not to say that it is right for a factory owner to refuse to hire Negro help.

Scranton

earned respect from the large moderate spectrum of the party which may form the nucleus of a campaign organization in 1968. If he wanted to try for the nomination in another four years, Scranton would undoubtedly have an excellent chance.

Indians Will Buy Books On Gandhi

The MSU India Club has set aside $150 to buy books on the Gandhian philosophy to be donated to the library. David George, club president, reported at a recent meeting that R.C. Sachar, chairman of the committee to buy the books, will present them to the library shortly.
