

Plumbers Union Ends Long Strike

Contractor Optimistic On Work

Says New Dorms Will Be Ready

A plumbers' strike that crippled campus building for 50 days ended Saturday, when union members voted to accept an 87-1/2 cent wage increase over a three-year period. Work resumed Monday morning on the plumbing projects at various sites around campus.

The strike threatened completion of several buildings due for fall-term openings, and some doubts remain as to whether they can be completed in time. The new Fee and Akers residence halls are scheduled to house more than 1,200 students beginning in September.

Joseph Labbanz of Spitzley Corp., one of the plumbing contractors whose work had been held up, said he expected the student living areas of the dorms to be completed in time, and said that at least one kitchen area can be expected to be ready for use. The remaining kitchen, lounge and academic areas of the dorms will be completed during fall term, Labbanz predicted.

Spitzley Corp. is handling the plumbing work on both Fee and Akers, and on Dormitory No. 5, a new project still in the foundation stages.

Other projects whose work has been held up include the biochemistry and chemistry buildings. The International Center, already about a month beyond its projected completion date, should be open by the beginning of fall term.

Douglas Griffith, business agent for the plumbers local 388, expressed pleasure with the strike settlement. He called the wage increase a fair one, although it is somewhat below the union's original demands.

The union had asked a $1.05 increase over three years, to be divided into four parts, the first retroactive to June 1, when the old contract ran out.

The final settlement, which was proposed by labor and management negotiators last Tuesday with the help of federal and state mediators, provides for five raises over three years, totaling 87-1/2 cents. The first part, a 15-cent hike, will be effective retroactive to June 1.

Other raises will come Sept. 1, 15 cents; Jan. 1, 1965, 10 cents; June 1, 1965, 25 cents; and June

Homemakers Here For 'College' Study

More than 900 Michigan homemakers are expected to attend MSU's 37th annual "College Week for Women," to be held on campus today through Friday.

Registration for the homemaker's conference was scheduled to begin at 8:30 this morning in the Shaw Hall Terrace Lounge.

Speeches by Mrs. George Romney, wife of Michigan's governor, and Charles T. Vetter, Jr., of the United States Information Agency are expected to be high points in the program.

Mrs. Romney, recently returned from the Republican Convention in San Francisco, will speak on "Building Stronger Families" at 7:45 p.m. Thursday in the auditorium.

This year's College Week program will celebrate the 50th anniversary of one of its sponsors, the MSU Cooperative Extension Service.

Keynote speaker for the conference will be Margaret Browne, former member of the Extension Service and currently director of the division of home economics for the Federal Extension Service in Washington, D.C.

Her speech this afternoon will be on the topic "Modern Dimensions in Family Living Education."

Thursday afternoon a panel consisting of Eugene Pelsner, Carol Shaffer, Lennah Backus and Vera Borosage, members of the department of home management and child development, will "Take a Look at Teenage Marriage."

Also Thursday Walter Freeman, professor of sociology and anthropology, will discuss the question "After 40-What?"

The concluding speech of the conference will be a talk by Russell G. Mawby, assistant director of the Extension Service in charge of the 4-H club program, who will speak on "Education -- A Family Responsibility" Friday.

In addition to these general sessions, conference enrollees may attend two three-session classes selected from 28 topics. The classes will be taught by faculty members and authorities from such agencies as the Michigan State Police, the Michigan Department of Health and the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"College Week for Women" is designed to provide homemakers with knowledge that will improve the quality of living in the home, the community and the world. Ruth Peck, general chairman of the program and home economics extension program assistant, said.

that the NAACP would support Johnson.

The Lansing chapter has a standing voter registration committee which is always active before elections, but this would be the first year it has engaged in any partisan political activity.

Ray said that the Lansing NAACP chapter would be following the lead of the national organization in opposing Sen. Barry Goldwater. For the first time in its history, the NAACP took a stand against a political candidate at its national convention this summer.

"We cannot help but be disturbed at the individual (Goldwater) and perhaps more importantly at the people who surround him," Ray said. "How can he be expected to really enforce the civil rights act when he voted against it?"

Ray said he was not as disturbed over the Republican platform's lack of a strong civil rights plank as he is over the nomination of Goldwater.

"In a final analysis, platforms really don't mean too much. They are what a candidate and a president make of them, and it seems unlikely that Goldwater will aid the cause of civil rights."

Goldwater was a member of the NAACP until it decided to oppose him at its convention. He resigned immediately after

NAACP Leaders To Battle Goldwater

Linda M. Miller, secretary of the campus chapter and acting president this summer, said the NAACP will definitely campaign for Johnson.

"We haven't formulated specific plans yet, but we will certainly take part in the political campaign," she said.

Marvin S. Ray, president of the Greater Lansing chapter, said he was "practically positive" and his casual references to the use of nuclear weapons are equally disturbing.

"I believe this nomination has hurt the image of the United States in the eyes of other countries not only because of Goldwater's views on civil rights but because of many other positions he has taken."

Other projects whose work has been held up include the biochemistry and chemistry buildings. The International Center, already about a month beyond its projected completion date, should be open by the beginning of fall term.

Shaw Lane Closed Today

Shaw Lane adjoining the site for dormitory number five, will be closed to traffic today from 8 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. due to construction.

Campus police suggest using either Wilson Road or Grand River Ave. as alternate routes. Access to McDonel Hall from Shaw Lane will be maintained however.

Liberties Union Claims Ban On Negro Play 'Ludicrous'

The American Civil Liberties Union charged the head of the University's television station with "shocking lack of sensitivity in dealing with controversial issues" in refusing to televise the play "Boy."

The scheduled production of the play was canceled because of the use of such words as "nigger" and "damn" in the dialogue.

Bob Repas, chairman of the Greater Lansing branch of the American Civil Liberties Union, called the censoring of the play on these grounds "ludicrous" because the overall theme dealt with the master-servant relationship of Negro and white in segregated states.

"One of the original justifications for educational TV stations was the argument that intelligent and concerned citizens would be able to view more than just the conventional pap offered commercially," Repas said.

The ban imposed by the university was on flimsy grounds, Repas said, because the same words had been used in another production.

"We feel that Michigan State should judge the merits of this play by the same standards used for fine arts," he said.

"The works of Shakespeare as well as the Bible use language at least as objectionable but the overall context in which they are used makes them an important part of these works."

"An author or playwright has the right to see his works presented in the form that he feels best expresses his ideas. A great university should be particularly sensitive to this problem."

Catholics To Discuss Cursillo Movement

A report on the Cursillo Movement among America's Catholics will highlight a conference which will bring more than 1,000 Catholic bishops, priests and laymen from two nations to campus Aug. 19-22.

The event: the sixth annual national conference on Cursillos in Christianity.

Cursillo is the name for a three-day program of Christian education -- prayers, study, discussion and community living. It was taken from the Spanish "Cursillos de Cristiandad" or "Little Courses in Christianity."

The Cursillo Movement, started in Spain, was brought to America by Spanish flyers training in Texas. It spread swiftly to Spanish-speaking people in Texas and Arizona. The first Cursillo for English-speaking Americans was held in 1961. Since that time more than 50,000 Americans have "made" Cursillos, conference planners report.

The MSU Committee on Church Related Programs, the Catholic archdioceses of Detroit, Chicago and Cincinnati, and the dioceses of Lansing, Saginaw, and Grand Rapids are sponsoring the conference which will be held in Brody Dormitories. At least two bishops and other nationally known figures will take part.

Other type of coordinating body is expected to result from the conference.

Green And White Going On Buses

Spartan green and white colors are being painted on four used buses which will provide student transportation on campus this fall.

The paint job is being finished at the MSU garage at Spartan Stadium. The buses were formerly used by Denver Coach Lines.

Eight new buses purchased from the Denver Coach Lines are due to arrive by Sept. 1. Total cost of the bus system is approximately $250,000.

McHale's Zany Sailors Hit Town

By SUSAN J. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

The zany sailors of McHale's Navy put on a ship-shape show in East Lansing Friday for the world premiere of their first movie.

Joe Flynn, better known as Captain Binghamton; Tim Conway, who plays the bumbling Ensign Parker; and Carl Ballantine, alias torpedoman Lester Gruber, were all on hand for the opening of "McHale's Navy" at the Campus Theatre.

They were presented keys to the City of East Lansing, signed countless autographs for wide-eyed little boys, and put on a comedy routine for hundreds of youngsters at the theatre.

Then they took off by car for Saginaw, where they were scheduled to appear on the stage of a drive-in movie the same night.

Mayor Gordon L. Thomas presented the keys to the trio of comedians.

"I believe this nomination has hurt the image of the United States in the eyes of other countries not only because of Goldwater's views on civil rights but because of many other positions he has taken."

"I believe this nomination has hurt the image of the United States in the eyes of other countries not only because of Goldwater's views on civil rights but because of many other positions he has taken."

All three have appeared in the television series of the same name as the movie since it began in 1962. Flynn admitted with a grin that he sometimes gets awfully tired of wearing his navy uniform for eager fans.

"After all, we're all over 30. Sometimes we feel pretty silly in these uniforms."

Flynn has an unusual background which includes showbusiness and politics. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the Ohio legislature in 1950.

"Actually, I have a Democratic philosophy," said Captain Binghamton. "But I had to run on the GOP ticket because there wasn't any room for another Democratic candidate."

In their movie promotion tour, the three show business sailors are in a different city every night.

"The best thing about this touring," Ballantine said, "is that we get fed everywhere."

He was in the process of gobbling a corned beef sandwich at the time.

Wallace Quits Presidential Race

Alabama Gov. George Wallace announced Saturday he is withdrawing from the presidential race.

He said he had "made the point of his campaign," which was to "arouse some thought about the decline of states' rights."

Wallace said he would not decide whether to support the presidential candidate until after the Democratic civil rights plank is written in Atlantic City next month.

For The Sake Of Liberty

"Extremism in the defense of liberty is no vice, and moderation in the pursuit of justice is no virtue."

Sen. Barry Morris Goldwater, Republican nominee for the presidency of the United States, used these words in calling Americans to an Old Frontier last week.

They are typical of the glib, glittering campaign oratory which tarnishes quickly upon careful examination.

True dedication to the cause of liberty and justice is inseparable from moderation. Extremism destroys the very liberty it purports to defend.

If we abandon moderation in the pursuit of justice, we deny one of the basic American freedoms--freedom from fear.

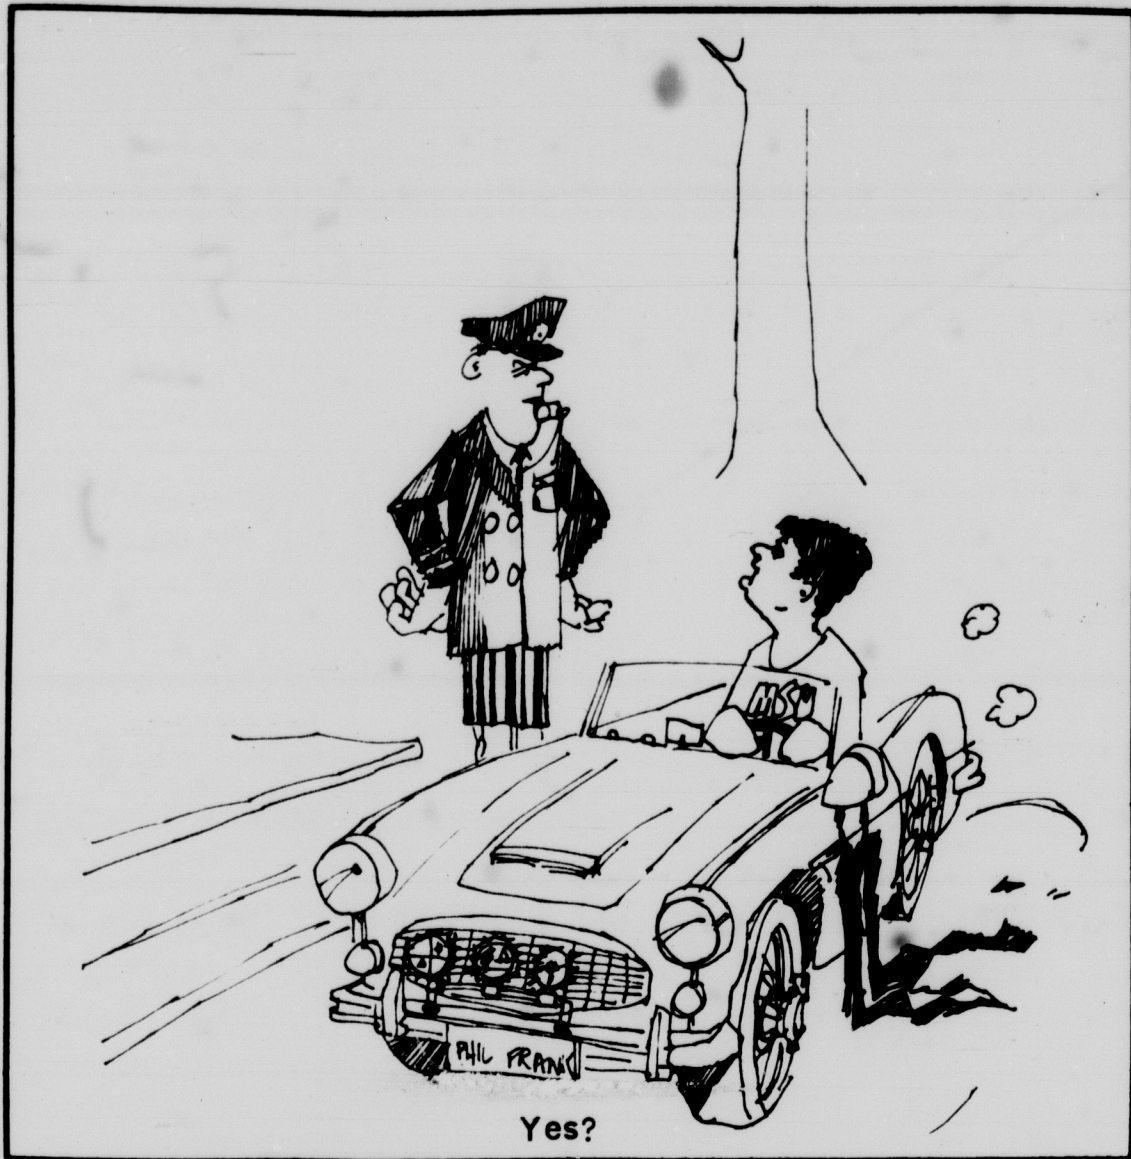

There must be limits to the methods used in pursuit of liberty, for a desirable end does not justify scurrilous means.

Little men will always defend extremism because they do not have the imagination and courage to fight for liberty by other methods.

A real Republican once told the nation the only true way to guard its freedom.

"With malice toward none, and charity for all..."

And he wasn't soft on communism, either.

Miller Seen In Tough Campaign

By SUSAN J. FILSON
State News Staff Writer

Rep. William E. Miller, chairman of the Republican National Committee since 1962, will be Sen. Barry Goldwater's running mate this fall.

Miller, a congressman from upstate New York for 14 years, is a conservative of the same stripe as Goldwater. He has a reputation as a hard-hitting campaigner and a relentless organizer.

As chairman of the national committee, he managed to transform a debt of several thousand dollars into a modest surplus. The GOP is undeniably in better shape at the local and state level than it was two years ago. (Some 300 new Republican state legislators were elected in 1962.)

However, Miller is basically an unknown in the best American tradition of bland vice-presidential candidates. He is a Roman Catholic, and as such was probably selected to provide a religious balance for the ticket.

The moderates in the party were not placated by the selection of Miller as vice-president, for he is nearly as conservative as Goldwater himself. Liberal Republicans in the northeastern states have expressed the belief that Miller will be no help at all on the ticket.

But he is Barry Goldwater's choice, and that is enough.

One of Miller's first statements after he was selected for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket does seem to indicate that he is a hard-hitting campaigner.

"Barry is a Jew and a Protestant and I am a Catholic," he said. "Anyone who doesn't like that ticket is a damn bigot."

Police Praised For Tackle Of Suspect

To the Editor:

Near the end of the previous term (Spring, 1964) I witnessed the capture of a suspected bicycle thief by the university police. I feel that the officer who made the actual capture deserves recognition for his bravery, and that both of the arresting officers should be complimented for their exemplary behavior both during and after the capture and arrest.

Let me grossly describe the scene. The capture of the suspect took place just east of the footbridge over the Red Cedar River, between Jenison Field House and Kellogg Center. The suspect was riding a light-weight bicycle westward, with a chasing police car a short distance behind. The officer who made the capture was standing in the middle of the walk, and accomplished the capture by tackling the suspect right off the moving bicycle.

At this point, I might add that the three or four witnesses standing nearby were as horrified as I was that the suspect made absolutely no effort to stop. Indeed, he made no effort even to miss the officer, who was on foot, despite the fact that he was probably travelling at about thirty miles per hour.

After the tackle, I feel that both officers showed marvelous restraint in their handling of their prisoner. I doubt that many people could resist the urge to get in a few licks of their own after being deliberately run into by some kook riding full speed on a bicycle.

I feel that the officers involved deserve some personal recognition, and that the entire Department of Public Safety has earned the respect of many for their marvelous job of maintaining order in our community of approximately 30,000.

Unfortunately, those who appreciate the efforts of law enforcement agencies too often fail to publicly express their feelings, while those who are occasionally mistreated are always ready to find fault with the police.

Barry Column Misunderstood

To the Editor:

In response to the article by Hugh J. Leach, concerning Senator B. Goldwater, these are our feelings and we hope the feelings of many others.

We are under the impression, and it may be, however, a fallacious one, that the responsibility of the press is to report political events of the day with clarity, objectivity, and with no degree of bias. However, in reading this article one must assume that the State News is favoring and even endorsing Senator Barry Goldwater as the Republican candidate for president in 1964.

Supposedly the State News represents the feelings and beliefs of the students at MSU. If these are indeed the political feelings and beliefs of the students, then Mr. Leach has drastically ignored the results of the presidential student election which was held this spring.

If the State News does represent the feelings and beliefs of those at MSU, then an article of this nature represents not objective news reporting, but is, rather, the personal opinion of one individual. As such it should be placed in its proper perspective--as an editorial.

Editor's Note: Hugh Leach's article, like all signed columns on the editorial page, reflects his personal opinion. Unsigned editorials only reflect the official positions of the State News. This is the difference between an editorial and a column.

Strike

1, 1966, 22-1/2 cents. The present contract will run until June 1, 1967.

Other provisions of the new contract include increased travel allowance from eight to ten cents per mile for workers driving to a job, seniority provisions and direct check-off of union fees, and better pay for show-up time, on days when work is called off. Plumbers who arrive at work and cannot work will be paid two hours time.

Any work done during a morning will provide four hours pay for them; any work done through the morning and into the afternoon will require full eight-hour pay for the day. The purpose is to prevent workers from being called to jobs where they are not needed, and to help lessen losses due to weather conditions.

Both labor and management leaders said they were pleased to be able to return to work. "We're glad the strike is over and we can get back to business," Labbanz said. He said the strike has "seriously affected construction here in Lansing; there's no question about that."

Work at many building sites, both on campus and in other parts of the Lansing area, came to a virtual standstill during the worst part of the strike.

Another strike which has affected building here, that of local glaziers, has come to a partial settlement. One contractor, Koertz Glass and Paint Co., Inc. of Flint, has agreed to pay glass workers the full demands made by the union, and has eight to ten men working on the chemistry and biochemistry buildings.

Other contractors are still bargaining with the union, which has been on strike since June 10, according to Ernie Fox, business agent for the union.

Film Industry Gets Spoofed By 'Boy Meets Girl' Quandry

"Boy Meets Girl" will be the fourth production of the University Theatre's Summer Circle. This amusing spoof of the Hollywood movie industry and its formula for successful productions will be presented Wednesday through Saturday, July 22-25 at 8:30 p.m. at Demonstration Hall.

The plot centers around Susie Seabrook, a studio waitress, played by Maureen Feder, Detroit freshman, who comes into the office of C.F., a big-shot producer played by Patrick Ford, producer-director at WKAR, and announces that she is expecting a baby.

Two script writers, portrayed by graduate students Lawrence R. Sexton and Leeds B. Bird, happen to be in the office at the time discussing plot ideas with C.F. They get the ingenious idea of starring Susie's as-yet-unborn infant with Larry Toms, cowboy film hero, played by Robert L. Smith, instructor of speech at M.S.U.

Complications arise as the writers are done out of the managing contract of the baby. Bent on revenge, they decide to discredit the infant by hiring someone to claim to be his father. This scheme is finally foiled when the mother married Rodney Beven, the son of an English lord, played by Anthony Heald, Massapequa Park, New York, sophomore, and eventually everything is worked out and everyone lives happily ever after.

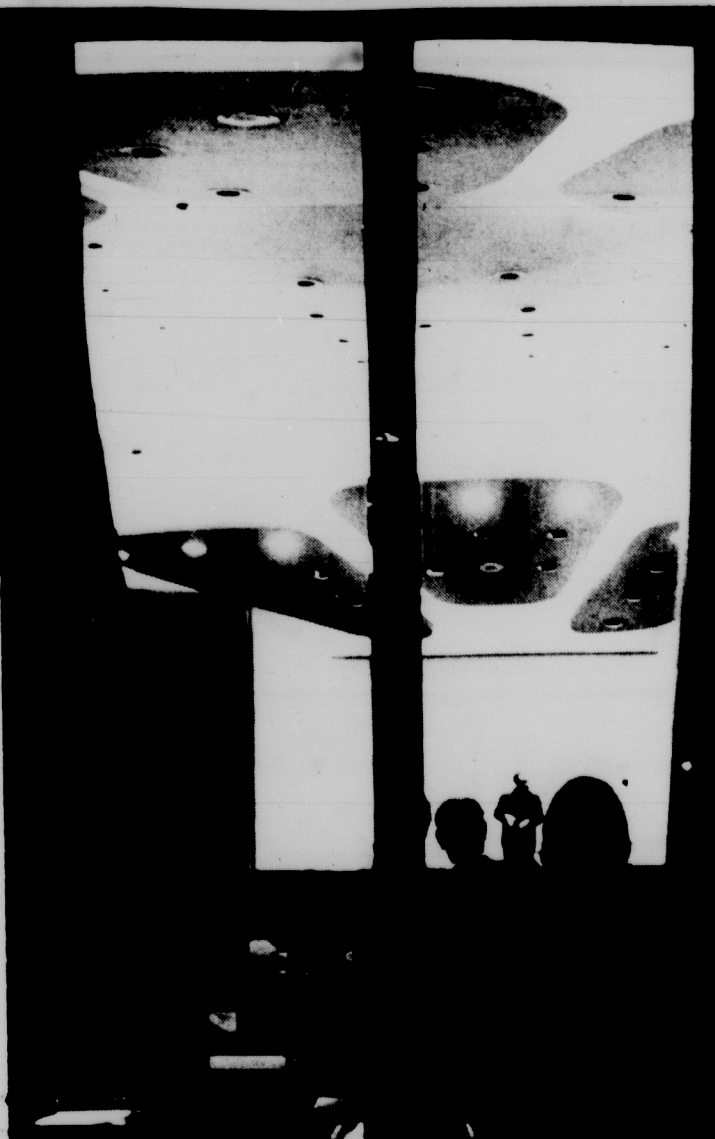

Others appearing in the cast are Karen Mathis, Bill Terry, John Clifford, Dan Fleischacker, Anthony Kadlec, Dr. E.C. Reynolds, H. Ted Busch, Mark Pensler, Marilyn Steegstra, Nan Herrick, and Pat Binge.

"Boy Meets Girl" is the fourth production of the season. The final play will be the musical comedy, "The Boy Friend," which will be presented next week, July 29 to Aug. 1. Tickets are available at the box office in front of Demonstration Hall, Monday through Saturday, 2 to 6 p.m. The number to call for phone reservations is 355-0148.

Expert Says Choice Crucial For Esthetics

Decision-making is the crucial element in developing a "richer, national life," according to noted American designer Charles Eames.

Eames spoke last week during MSU's fine arts festival.

He told a campus audience that the key to esthetics is the making of deliberate choices even in such small matters as how a postage stamp is placed on an envelope.

The California architect and designer pointed out that in the last 75 years "we have had the opportunity to shape our physical surroundings to suit ourselves," "But," he added, "much of what we have created and built is either trivial or revolting."

Eames said the ugliness surrounds men not because they "don't care," but "because we can no longer rely on the traditional restraints and rules of the past." This freedom, he said, forces men to make decisions that they did not have to make before, and they are not prepared to make them.

The transformation of ugliness into beauty, Eames believes, involves every person making conscious judgments about the simplest acts of everyday life.

"Since we can produce nearly anything we want today," he said, "we must now decide what is worth producing."

He also urged schools and teachers to take the lead "in putting a keen edge of sensibility on all the educational disciplines."

Eames is a designer for the Herman Miller Furniture Company of Zeeland, Mich. He signed the science pavilion for the Seattle World's Fair, and he has also executed design projects for IBM and the U.S. government.

Instructors Promote Long Library Delays

If you've had trouble obtaining assigned reading materials in the library, it may be because your instructor delayed in turning his reading lists to divisional librarians.

Social science librarian William S. Stoddard says that 60 per cent of the lists his division handled came in on or after the last day of registration. This allowed some students to check out the would-be reserved materials, necessitating the calling in of the books, and delays of 10 days or more in their availability.

Along with the College of Education, the social science and education divisions of the library face an especially intense and different summer.

Both divisional librarians, Catherine Muhlbach in education and Stoddard, cited the special challenges presented by the type of clientele on campus in the summer.

Miss Muhlbach found a striking change in the greater demand for personal help. "The great number of older people returning to school for the summer, she said, "are not at all reluctant in asking for help."

This she attributed to their general maturity and the frequent lack of familiarity with library workings.

And this was fine, she said, for the "entire staff looks forward to summer school and the stimulating work with people who've been out in the field."

Stoddard found the older students "more interested in what they're doing." They're also more serious than the regular students, he said.

Their problems are the same as those of the average fulltime undergraduate, he added, but there are more of them. He also felt that some older students encountered difficulties in having to ask the aid of the sometimes teen-aged library help.

Total enrollment in the College of Education for the first five week session stands at 3,175 graduate students and 1,200 undergraduates. Miss Muhlbach said that the second session should see this drop to only 1,000 graduates, with the undergraduate figure remaining the same.

At the present time, she said, her division's circulation has changed little from spring term, while assigned reading is up.

Those books most in demand are professional works on methods of teaching. The verticle file--miscellaneous pamphlets--is another area being heavily used.

One the other hand, the procurement of new books is little changed in summer. Miss Muhlbach noted that the monthly rate remains consistent, the year's total being approximately 6,000 titles for the division.

Circulation in the social science division, according to Stoddard, was lower than normal, although still highest in the building.

He described his staff's summer work as "almost a vacation."

As a result they are able to give more extended individual assistance.

Stoddard said that the new air conditioning system has boosted usage, especially that of the rooms.

In the past, he said, some professors had even refrained from assigning library work due to the building's extreme heat.

Due to the need to be back in school and to attend orientation sessions, he finds that most teachers leave after the first five weeks. This he said, leaves August as the ideal time to study at Michigan State. Circulation for the whole month in his division will probably only equal that for a regular week at busier times.

Miss Michigan Choice Nears

What could be more fun than a parade of the most beautiful girls in Michigan?

Ten finalists in the Miss Michigan State Pageant for the Miss America contest will compete for the title of Miss Michigan of 1964 on Friday, July 31, in the L. C. Walker Auditorium in Muskegon. The program will be telecast over WJIM from 9:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. The winner of the state finals competition will represent the state at the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City in September.

Nancy Anne Fleming, MSU graduate and Miss America of 1961, will be co-MC with Bob Johnson, a favorite radio-TV performer with Michigan audiences, who has MC'd the Miss Michigan Pageant for the past 15 years. Kathleen McLaughlin, Miss Michigan of 1963, will crown her successor, Donna Axum, the present Miss America, is a guest star on the telecast with Bruce Grant, local TV star, and Jan Somers Johnson, Miss Michigan of 1954. Jan Somers was first runner-up in the Miss America contest the year she reigned as Miss Michigan.

The ten finalists in the Miss Michigan Pageant are the girls who win in the competitions in the days preceding the finals. Fifty-four girls, winners of their local contests, compete in the preliminaries.

Prizes for Miss Michigan include a $1,000 scholarship, a $500 fashion award, a $500 jewel chest, and a $1,000 wardrobe, in addition to many other valuable prizes from Michigan businessmen and merchants. The opportunity to compete for the Miss America title is another prize for which the girls work very hard.

The Miss Michigan State Pageant is sponsored by the Greater Muskegon Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Grant Given Student Aids Butterfly Study

The Society of the Sigma Xi and its associated organization, The Scientific Research Society of America (RESA), recently announced an award to Julian P. Donahue, graduate student in entomology.

This award is to assist in his study of the taxonomy of Indian butterflies, their discrimination, distribution, variation and abundance.

In making this announcement an official stated "Sigma Xi and RESA each year make a number of grants to the most promising scientists at critical points in their research careers. We recognize that many needs are relatively too small for the large foundations to consider and it is to meet these needs that our research funds are maintained."

Founded in 1886, the Society now has 145 chapters and more than 127 clubs in the major colleges and universities in the United States and Canada. Its industrial counterpart, RESA, established in 1947, has 88 branches in major governmental and industrial laboratories. These two organizations with a combined active membership of 90,000 scientists jointly sponsor eight national lectureships, publish the American Scientist, and are currently making annual awards in support of research totaling $100,000.

Expert Seeks Tax Cut For Work Retraining

A New York tax expert proposes "a liberal tax credit" as an incentive for industry to undertake the task of retraining workers who have lost their jobs through automation.

Writing in "Business Topics," a publication of the MSU graduate school of business administration, attorney Gerald J. Robinson contends:

"Using the tax credit as a stimulant places the financial burden for retraining where it fairly belongs--on the entire nation. The credit also has the virtue of allowing industry to do the retraining itself. Thus it is twice blessed, by equity and by efficiency."

Robinson asserts that industry is far better equipped than government to retrain the growing force of workers who have been displaced by automation.

"It knows its own needs, has the essential know-how," he says, "and has many of the facilities needed."

Robinson notes the size of the tax credit would have to be "substantial" to induce industry to undertake the retraining program.

Robinson is an attorney with the firm of Chadburne, Parke, Whiteside & Wolf of New York. An author of tax articles, Robinson served as a special attorney in the office of the Chief Counsel of the Internal Revenue Service for four years.

Robinson says the Manpower Development and Training Act, which has been the most ambitious program for worker retraining to date, is a "disappointment."

Very few states have passed enabling legislation (Michigan is one which has), and the necessity for states to match federal funds in the future has not registered well in view of pressing state financial problems, Robinson says.

While a tax remedy might be open to criticism, it is the best way to get the retraining job done, Robinson said. It will cost the nation less because industry will use its existing facilities, eliminating the need for any expensive expansion of state facilities, he said.

Student Government Keeps On Working

By HUGH LEACH
State News Staff Writer

Most of the offices in the All-University Student Government wing of the Student Services Building are closed for the summer, but some of AUSG's work still goes on.

is the Student Government Services office. Students may go there to have mimeographing and thermofaxing done or to obtain a small loan.

Bob Harris, Bryan, Ohio, senior and president of AUSG, said students may obtain loans from that office up to $15, which are repayable in two weeks. All that's needed to obtain a loan is an ID card. No interest is charged.

Students failing to repay a loan within the specified time are charged an additional dollar for each week or part of a week thereafter. A student not paying by the end of the term may not be able to register for the next term.

Also in operation this summer is the Student Traffic Appeals Court, where students may appeal tickets for traffic violations on campus. Anyone who wishes to appeal may see Pat Carter in 101 Student Services to make arrangements for a hearing.

Harris said he and others are "working extensively on Homecoming." Arrangements being made include popular entertainment and preparations for the Homecoming dance, which will be handled by students for the first time in history. In recent years the Ingham County Alumni Association has handled the dance arrangements.

Members of Evaluation Services, the cabinet post established to study and evaluate student government and suggest necessary changes, are working on their project this summer. Rick Baugh, Crystal Lake, Ill., senior, has been meeting with the deans and assistant deans of the various colleges, Harris said, to get their ideas on how the students can better work with the faculty.

Evaluations Services Director Bruce Osterink, Grand Rapids senior, is spending the summer at Ohio State University, where his roommate is the president of Ohio State's student government. Harris said he hopes Osterink will gain some valuable ideas through the association.

Plans are also being made for holding student-faculty forums next year. Harris said the plan will be similar to that at the University of Minnesota in which different professors meet with groups of students and talk with them informally.

The only role AUSG will play in this, he explained, will be to provide a list of professors willing to participate in such a program to "responsible persons" such as the scholastic chairman of dormitories and houses within dormitories and encourage them to make use of the list. These units can then contact a speaker when they need one and make arrangements for his appearance. The list will also include the subjects which the professors would like to talk about.

Cathy Armstrong, director of the Student Insurance, is working at the G-M Underwriters office in Detroit, where, among other duties, she is helping with the mailing of information about the AUSG insurance program.

In the past there have been "many unsuccessful attempts" by various honoraries to provide a tutoring service for students, Harris said. But, he added, the students who most needed tutoring didn't ask for it.

Charles Stoddard, Chicago, Ill., sophomore, is currently working on fall term orientation. Stoddard, assistant director of AUSG's Organizations Bureau in charge of orientation, really has several jobs, Harris said.

First, he is working in cooperation with the Counseling Center on preparing the Welcome Week booklet which will be sent to all incoming freshmen and transfer students, and on coordinating the Welcome Week programs.

Second, he is working on two AUSG orientation projects. One is a "Meet Your Leaders" program which will move through the residence halls complexes. Harris said that student leaders, such as the presidents of major campus governing groups and class officers would participate in this.

The participants would form a panel for discussion on the values of student government, and the new students would at the same time be given an opportunity to meet these leaders.

The other orientation project which Stoddard is charged with is the preliminary planning of a "rush" for people interested in working on student government.

Gary Falkenstein, Sturgis Junior, and director of AUSG's Information Services division, is working on preparation of a booklet explaining all phases of AUSG and other major campus governing bodies. The booklet is to be sent to all incoming students.

Harris himself, in addition to "seeing that other people do their work" and conferring with faculty and administrators on matters pertaining to student government, is working as a resident assistant during the summer counseling clinics.

This gives him a chance to explain student government to incoming students so they are familiar with it before they begin classes in the fall.

Flatworms Aid Mind Study

When does a primitive organism cease to be mindless? Can thought be defined chemically?

Such questions are being evoked by a University researcher as he probes the being of tiny fresh-water flatworms.

William C. Corning, professor of biophysics, is currently sending the worms through training in a plastic "T" maze. Using a brush as the punishment in an instrumental learning setup, the planarians, as they're commonly called, are taught to prefer one arm of the T to the other.

With the aid of such experimentation, Corning hopes to further substantiate work previously done at the University of Michigan and work he himself did at the University of Rochester.

These efforts revolved around learning and giant organic molecules as suspected repositories of information.

It was found that molecules of DNA, the storers of genetic information, did not enter into the learning process. On the other hand, molecules of RNA did appear to play a role.

At Ann Arbor light was the agent in a classical conditioning situation. Planarians were taught to respond to the light.

Trained animals were then chopped in half and the two adults growing from the two halves were both found to perform equally well and far better than naive planarians. This was true even though the planarians' brain is in its head region.

More startling was the finding that when a 'smart' planarian was chopped up and fed to a naive one, the cannibal became smarter.

This seemed to indicate that learned information might be stored on the large molecules which apparently were not broken down in the planarian's digestion, being instead ingested whole and allowed to assume a functioning status in their new host's loose fluid interior.

Corning's work at Rochester also involved light. However, when he chopped 'smart' planarians in half he let the halves regenerate in water containing ribonuclease, an enzyme that specifically destroys RNA.

The heads—perhaps because they were denser and more complicated—were not affected, but the tails suffered. It was found, that tails from 'smart' planarians were now 'dumb', indicating that the enzyme had destroyed the learned information which presumably had been biochemically encoded along the nervous system.

It is in an effort to refute such doubt that Corning is currently training his charges on the 'T' maze. Such learning—using a punishment-reward choice—is far more substantial learned act than the light response.

So far the Michigan State planarians have successfully retained information through being

Two MSU Grads Seek Votes

Two MSU graduates last week announced that they were candidates for the Republican nomination for the office of state representative from the newly reapportioned 59th district.

Biophysics Expansion

Biophysics at Michigan State will continue to grow next year. According to Leroy Augenstein, chairman of the two year old department, there will be five senior staff members as of Jan. 1.

In addition there will be ten researchers engaged in postdoctoral work. Augenstein said that besides the United States, individuals will be coming from Germany, Egypt, Czechoslovakia, India, England and Sweden.

Studying beneath this echelon will be 20 graduate students, with 12 or 13 of them actually working for degrees in biophysics. This, he said, was in accordance with the department's encouragement of person's from other fields to partially engage in biophysics.

At the moment, he noted, there are people with backgrounds in physiology, chemistry, physics and even comparative literature actively doing research in the department.

The major stress on research is a combination of studying how certain molecules are put together and studying the organized molecular basis of the brain and nerves.

Among those undergraduates working in biophysics, Augenstein said many were merit scholarship recipients.

State Department Appoints Grad

The State Department recently announced the appointment of MSU graduate John Kornblum as a Vice Consul and Secretary in the Diplomatic Service.

Kornblum received his B.A. at State in 1964. Currently he is attending the Foreign Service Institute in Arlington, Virginia, in preparation for his overseas assignment.

Michigan and is past president of the Ingham County Farm Bureau.

Furseth was captain of the 1953 MSU varsity basketball team and is a member of the Alumni Varsity Club. He has been active in counseling youth activities for the State Corrections Department and in the Greater Lansing Youth Council.

He has also been active in other projects, such as the Michigan School for the Blind, March of Dimes, Community Chest, Lions Club and fund-raising drives for cystic fibrosis, cancer and muscular dystrophy.

"This district is one of the fastest growing suburban areas in the state," Furseth said, adding that he thought the district should "not only encourage, but also promote itself as a suburban area, and therefore should have suburban representation in the state legislature."

Farm Meet Discusses Poor Safety Habits

"Safer American Families Everywhere." That's the goal of the 21st annual National Farm Safety Week, this week, says a University extension safety engineer.

Increased machinery power coupled with poor safety habits is responsible for the major share of Michigan's farm and rural accidents, says Richard G. Pfister.

Farm safety is of prime importance in Michigan. Although the Michigan Rural Safety Council points out that the state's farm safety record has improved significantly in recent years, there are still more comparable accidental deaths in farming than in any other Michigan industry.

Pfister says farm accidents happen because people fail to take proper safety precautions. Farm folks need not sit by and watch accidents kill 8,700 and injure 800,000 farm residents yearly at a cost of $1.5 billion. They can do something through a good year-round accident prevention program conducted at the farm level by every member of the family.

Planning for farm safety is an important part of farm management, says Pfister. Today's Furseth, an East Lansing resident, added that youth is the greatest natural resource we have in this nation, state and district.

"I would like to apply my wealth of experience and contact with youth and youth activities to this position."

chopped in half, and some unsuccessfully when raised in the ribonuclease enzyme. Experiments remain to be done with planarian cannibalism.

Actual evidence of the planarians' learning presents wide implications. Not only does it suggest that the memory function in the brain might be chemical in nature, but more specifically relates this to the giant RNA molecules. These in turn are nucleic acids, merely long chains of simpler organic compounds from which we can relate to the simple proteins and amino acids.

It is clear, that to date the biochemical learning hypothesis of learning has been increasingly substantiated.

University To Show Pickle Picker

A newly designed once-over mechanical cucumber harvester -- especially developed to reduce time and expense of hand picking -- will be one of the highlights of "Pickle Field Day" today at the University's horticulture farm.

The experimental harvester, developed by MSU agricultural engineers, could put an end to present hand labor which costs cucumber growers one-half to three-fourths of their gross income per crop.

Also featured at the "Pickle Field Day" will be the latest research in cultural practices, pickle varieties and weed control.

The event, which will begin at 1:30 p.m., is being sponsored by the department of horticulture in cooperation with the Michigan pickle industry.

Carillon Concerts Campus Custom

The sound of carillon music is in the air again this summer. MSU carillonneur Wendell Westcott, assistant professor of music, presents three recitals weekly: Sundays at 4 p.m., and Tuesdays and Thursdays at 8 p.m.

The 45-minute programs, which will continue through July, include music ranging from the Baroque compositions of Bach to the Broadway show tunes of Jerome Kern.

Beaumont Tower, in the heart of north campus, houses the huge instrument which consists of a set of 47 bells with a sound range of four octaves.

The bells, imported from England and Holland, vary in size from 7-1/2 inches to five feet in diameter, and range in weight from 20 pounds to three tons. Total weight of the bells exceeds 13 tons.

The MSU Carillon is one of 99 in the United States, the largest being that in Riverside Church, New York City.

The instrument is played by means of a keyboard system of levers and pedals. When struck by the fists or feet, the mechanism pulls clappers against the bells.

Listeners are advised by Carillonneur Westcott to stay a few hundred feet from the tower to hear the music of the bells most effectively. An excellent listening spot, he says, is the area in front of the MSU Library.

After each recital visitors are allowed to tour the Beaumont Tower belfry to view the carillon.

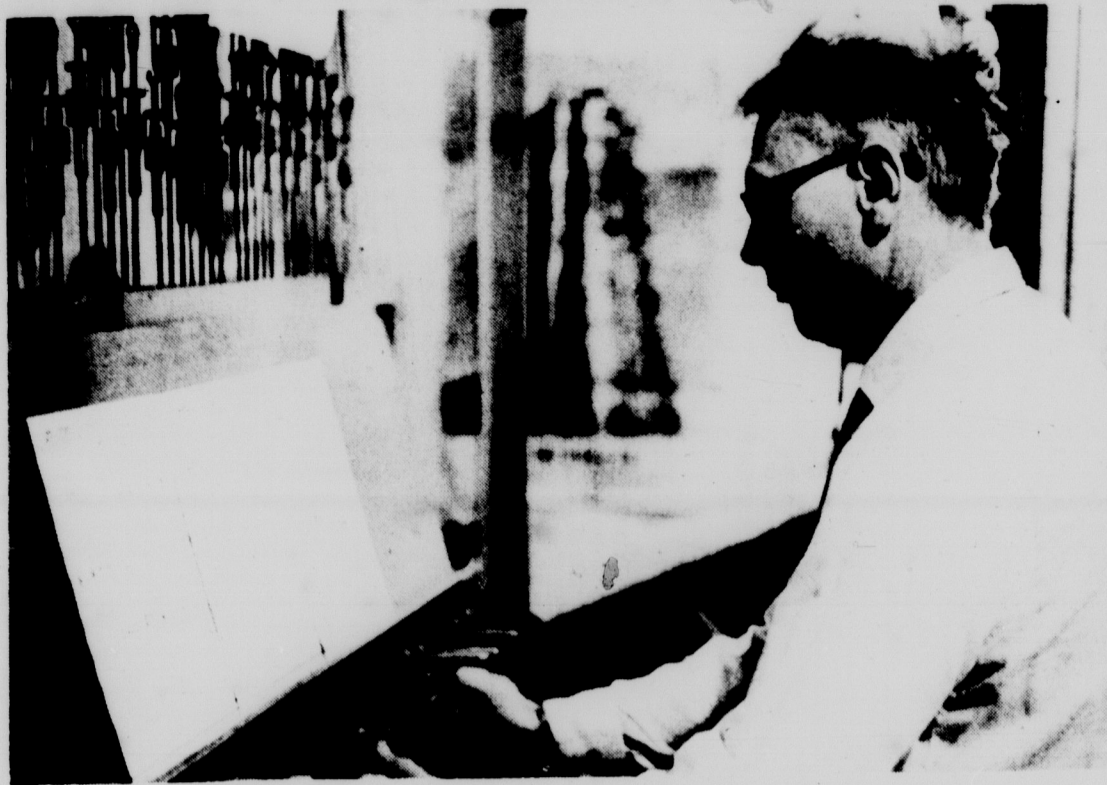

Beaumont Tower is located on a knoll overlooking Circle Drive, just across from the University Library. Erected in 1929 on the site of Old College Hall, the 100-foot tower was a gift of John W. Beaumont, an MSU alumnus.

Professor Westcott holds degrees from MSU and a diploma from the Carillon School of Mechelen, Belgium, receiving the highest rating ever awarded by that school.

Carillonneur at Michigan State since 1941, Professor Westcott has performed on many of the historical carillons of Europe and has performed on most of the major carillons in North America.

In 1954 he organized the Spartan Bell Ringers, a student group he directs in performances on English handbells.

Professor Westcott also introduced handbell ringing to the Netherlands in 1957.

McHale

Ballantine is a veteran comedian who was already a star when vaudeville was in its heyday.

Conway, a short, balding man with a merry grin, couldn't stop clowning even for the press.

One reporter at a luncheon dropped a piece of salad on her dress and stealthily tried to conceal her faux pas.

"I saw that--don't try to cover it up," said Conway as he pointed a finger at the offending journalist.

As the trio started to leave for their afternoon show at the theatre, they were already 15 minutes late. A little boy rushed up breathlessly with a paper to be autographed.

"Well boys, I guess we have time for one more," said Flynn as he whipped out his pen.

Painful Clocks Rouse Bed-Bound Spartans

By JIM STERBA
State News Staff Writer

What is the most painful sound in the world to an MSU student with an 8-o'clock class or job?

It is the 7 a.m. alarm clock. Frustrating doesn't fit. Unnatural isn't the word either. Regardless of what TV commercials say about pain, it sets on the table by your bed at 6:59 a.m. every morning waiting for a built-in signal to sacrifice you to the gods of the morning newspaper and black coffee.

Then with a buzz, or a clang, or a ding-ding, or the soft melodious sounds of the local radio station, it goes off, usually right in the middle of the greatest dream you've had to date.

In that millisecond of pandemonium, Zeus points his silver arrows toward your toothbrush, and you bury your head deeper into your pillow. Then with all the strength you can muster, you reach for that lever of relief, push it down, and sink back into the closest thing to paradise in the world, your warm bed.

Then the day ahead starts to haunt you. You dig deeper into your pillow but it doesn't help. You start to think about the assignments that are due in a couple of hours.

You remember that you forgot to get your clothes out last night for today. You think about the long walk to your first class. You dig deeper into your pillow.

Finally, with a grunt, a few hundred blinks, and a hy-o silver or two, you get up.

From that moment on thru the rest of the day, your brain will be working up to only 10 per cent of its capacity. At least five per cent is spent thinking of ways to destroy your alarm clock.
