

Problems Can Arise For Apartment Dwellers

Housing Director Offers Tips

By PHYLLIS HELPER
State News Staff Writer

Several problems concerning off-campus housing have arisen since the passage of the new off-campus housing regulations Thursday at the Board of Trustees meeting.

The rule concerning age limit for unapproved, unsupervised housing allows students to live off-campus who are either 21, have reached senior standing, or who will be 21 during the academic year.

Academic year is from September 15 to June 15.

Now that many more students will be eligible to live off-campus, apartment owners are taking advantage of the situation by placing 12-month leases on their apartments, and in some cases, increasing rents.

Although the University is concerned with students who will be living off-campus, the amount of rent or length of a lease is left up to the apartment owners.

Patrick B. Smith, director of off-campus housing, offered several tips to students who will be looking for apartments.

--Read the contract thoroughly and demand a copy.

--Find out if the apartment is jointly or severally leased. This means that if one person leaves, then the others are held responsible for filling the unit or paying the remaining portion of the contract.

--Make a list of any damages in the apartment before moving in. Have the manager and the students leasing the apartment sign it, and at the end of the year present it to him so there will not be an excess damage charge.

--Find out what arrangements have been made for damages, know the cost of repairing items, or ask to see a bill for repairs.

--Have at least one roommate present at the end of the year when the apartment is checked by the manager so there will be no excess damage charge.

--Know who to contact when a plumber, electrician, or other repairman is needed.

--Check the number of parking spaces or available alternate parking areas.

--If you have to sub-let an apartment for a term, try and use the facilities of the housing office.

--Beware of sub-leases, especially during the summer months. It may seem easy at first, but there are a smaller number of students here during the summer, and the original leasees could wind up paying for all 12 months.

--Look for trash and laundry facilities when renting.

In spite of these warnings, Smith said, "I think diversification in housing is important. I only hope that these students living off-campus will not be disillusioned."

Wraps Off Packaging Building

Representatives from some of the nation's largest business firms will meet here today to dedicate new headquarters of the nation's only four-year School of Packaging.

The ceremonies will include a noon luncheon in the Kellogg Center Red Cedar Room and a tour of the new half-million dollar building.

About 70 are expected to attend, including some 35 business executives who are trustees of the Packaging Foundation, Inc., a nonprofit organization that aids MSU's packaging program.

Donations from more than 100 firms to the foundation financed construction of the packaging facility, which is located on Wilson Road, south of the Engineering Building.

President John A. Hannah will speak at the luncheon, which will follow a morning meeting of the trustees of the Packaging Foundation.

The present structure is the first of four units planned to house the packaging school. Expansion of the building, also to be financed by donations, is planned for completion by the end of the decade.

Enrollment in the school is a record 280 students.

Johnson Praises Steel Negotiators

PITTSBURGH (AP)—President Johnson praised steel negotiators Tuesday for sparing the economy a crippling strike, while sources here emphasized many hard months of bargaining remain if a new steel labor crisis is to be averted next fall.

Johnson said in a Washington news conference that he was confident the Pittsburgh talks between the United Steelworkers Union and 10 major firms will result in a full settlement by the new deadline of Sept. 1.

Johnson reflected the confidence of top union and industry sources that the four-month strike postponement initiated Monday night will be ratified by

President Renews Peace Plea

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson, declaring the United States will not "yield to aggression" in Viet Nam, Tuesday renewed his offer to talk peace "with any government anywhere any time, without any conditions."

The President opened his news conference by saying that some people "may consider it a small war" in which the United States and South Viet Nam are engaged against the communists but "to the men who give their lives it is the last war."

He also declared it is a war of very great importance, "the stakes are high." "Our own freedom, our own welfare, would be in great danger," he said, if aggression were allowed to triumph.

Johnson also accused North Viet Nam of carrying on a campaign of terror and slaughter against military and civilian populations indiscriminately.

"Vietnamese and Americans have been targets of constant attacks of terror," he said. "Soldiers and civilians, men and women were murdered and crippled."

Johnson said the United States had shown great restraint in using its power and remained ready at any time to enter into unconditional talks on peace.

But the answer to restraint, he said, was murder, and the other side took that restraint as an indication of weakness and surrender.

the union's wage policy committee today.

The President said the strike postponement, in exchange for an 11.5-cent pay raise, showed a high degree of responsibility on the part of both management and labor.

While optimism about an eventual settlement was high, one union official cautioned "we haven't settled anything but the postponement."

The steel industry simply bought more bargaining time, and all thorny contract issues remain unsettled.

"They still have a big job," a government source said.

But federal officials breathed a sigh of relief after the agreement lifted the threat of a strike from the nation's economy. Steel stocks led a strong surge of the stock market.

Postponement of the strike deadline at 12:01 a.m. Saturday still awaits formal ratification by the 10 major steel firms and the union's wage policy committee, but this appeared a mere formality. The union committee meets at 2 p.m. today.

Negotiators, headed by Union President David J. McDonald and Ohio industry negotiator R. Conrad Cooper, met Tuesday to plan future talks.

They reportedly will take a rest of about two weeks and resume talks in mid-May.

Faculty, Alumni Club Seen

A faculty-alumni clubhouse will be built in the near future if the faculty supports the idea, Jack Breslin, secretary of the Board of Trustees, said Tuesday.

A site near the Forrest Akers Golf Course would be the probable location of the club.

"The project is ready to go forward, with the endorsement of the faculty," Breslin added.

"The club would probably be run by the University since the only such successful clubs in the Big Ten have been university operated."

For faculty and their families and alumni, the club would be financed by faculty and alumni funds. It would have eating and guest facilities along with a recreation area which might include a swimming pool.

Breslin also touched on the MSU-State Highway Department disagreement over running a road here Tuesday, after 18 months of delay.

A University committee studying four proposals for the road said only a proposal for bridges over Farm Lane, Bogue Street and Hagadorn Road would be acceptable.

The bridges are necessary so the north-south campus traffic won't be inhibited. Breslin said the traffic load during peak hours is tremendous now and will be even worse when the University expands.

Also, said the spokesman, a "teach-in" following an address by James Farmer, executive secretary of CORE, is being planned for May 13.

The older generation seems to agree with the younger generation for a change, at least as far as the MSU Library is concerned.

Several of the faculty here line up behind undergraduate and graduate students in criticizing library inadequacies. The main complaints center on poor cataloging and insufficient research facilities.

"The library is not adequate for a university of this size," an assistant professor of political science said. There are not enough copies of certain materials, he added, and "I must forego giving out many assignments because of this."

A graduate instructor showed me a list of half a dozen books he planned to buy himself, because they weren't in the library. He said the cost would come to about $40, but the books were necessary for his research.

Members of the Political Science and Sociology departments said they used their own money to assemble departmental libraries. While many would do this even if the library were considered adequate, their expenditures would not go above the amount of the departmental budget specifically allocated for this purpose.

Proposals for six new MSU structures, including a library addition and an Administration Building, are before the Michigan Legislature, Jack Breslin, secretary of the Board of Trustees, said Tuesday.

Breslin, speaking at a joint luncheon of the MSU Men's Club and Faculty Women's Club at the Union, said some money has been appropriated by the legislature for planning, but construction money has not been appropriated yet.

The library addition, hopefully ready by 1967, won't be as large as is necessary to accommodate every student, but will relieve somewhat the present space problem, Breslin said. The addition would be built where Wells Hall now stands.

First on the University priority list for buildings is a new Administration Building, which the University has been attempting to get for several years. The proposed site for the building is east of Spartan Stadium, just past Red Cedar Road.

Second is a $5 million classroom-office building which would accommodate about 40 classrooms and 100 to 200 faculty offices. The intersection of Bogue Street and Wilson Road is the tentative site of the building.

A $6 million Social Science Building is planned for Bogue Street, east of Kresge Art Center.

South of the Plant Science Research Building, now being built near the Biochemistry Building, is the site proposed for a planned $2 million Pesticide Research Building.

The Kedzie Chemistry Building will be renovated to take care of the overflow of students in the Natural Science Building. Labs and classrooms are planned for Kedzie.

EDWARD R. MURROW

Newsman Murrow Dies At 57

PAWLING, N.Y. (AP)—Edward R. Murrow, the CBS radio and television news craftsman and the former head of the U.S. Information Agency, died at his farm here Tuesday, after 18 months of cancer. He was 57 on Sunday.

Murrow built an international reputation from his World War II broadcasts from London. They were a vivid re-creation for American radio listeners of the courage and tenacity of the British in Hitler's air blitz.

"This is London," was the way Murrow began his blitz broadcasts. Some people compared his deep, resonant voice to a voice of doom.

Six weeks ago, Queen Elizabeth made Murrow an honorary Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire, in recognition of his furthering Anglo-American friendship and understanding. At the time, he was in a New York hospital in the terminal stage of long cancer.

During the war, Murrow recruited one of the best news-gathering organizations the radio industry had seen at that time.

After the war, he became a top telecaster for the Columbia Broadcasting System at better than $300,000 a year and served briefly as network vice president in charge of news.

Library Protest 'Steps Up'

About 50 students, mostly members of the Committee for Student Rights, demonstrated in front of the MSU Library Tuesday afternoon.

"We're not demanding anything new," Arnold Strasser, Great Neck, N.Y., senior said. "What we want is an acceleration of the Sullivan Report. We want the library to be top priority."

"We Want a Better Library Now," signs proclaimed. "MSU Buys 70,000 Books Yearly, U-M Buys 125,000."

"Ninth in the Big Ten," "We Need Books Not Dorms," read other signs.

Library Director Richard E. Chapin said the demonstrators were uninformed on what the library has already been working on and on the speed at which improvements can be made.

"I'm sympathetic to their ends, not their means," he said.

In a leaflet the committee members distributed to passers-by, they demanded an accelerated acquisition program, a doubled acquisition rate, reorganization of the library divisions and a doubled library staff.

"Progress is already being made on these," said Chapin. "I know we have recruited more than our fair share of the library people available."

Reorganization of the library to eliminate separate divisions has been underway for quite some time, he said.

CSR member Strasser emphasized that no personalities were involved.

"Chapin is in his way working for a better library also," he said.

Would the demonstration help or hurt the library's cause? Provost Howard R. Neville said:

"I think picketing will neither help nor hurt the library's cause as far as I personally am concerned. I can't speak for the trustees or the legislature."

Charles F. Wrigley, professor of psychology and chairman of the faculty Library Committee, met with the demonstrating students.

He asked them what ideas they had for improvements in the library. After trading ideas for a while, he told them he was disappointed with their lack of new ideas, though he was glad to see the interest shown.

Rights Groups Plan Bias Protests Here

Three campus civil rights organizations have announced they will picket the home of Mrs. Walter A. Gibson in East Lansing in an effort to pressure the City Council into passing an open housing ordinance.

Members of the Campus NAACP, the Committee for Student Rights, and the Action Committee said they will begin picketing Mrs. Gibson's home at 217 Beech St. at 10 a.m. and continue for nine hours.

Mrs. Gibson, after advertising rooms for rent with the University, allegedly refused to rent a room to Sandra Jenkins, Birmingham, Ala., junior, and Prudence Dickinson, East Grand Rapids junior, when she found that Miss Jenkins is a Negro.

The University removed Mrs. Gibson's name from its housing lists and a complaint was filed with the state Civil Rights Commission.

"The principle reason for this demonstration is not to attack Mrs. Gibson individually," said Action Committee chairman Brett J. Wakefield, Loudonville, N.Y., sophomore.

"We want to point up to the town that there is organized objection to discrimination in East Lansing," he said.

There will be civil disobedience with the intent of forcing police to jail demonstrators if any attempt is made to interfere with the picketing, said a spokesman for the groups.

In addition, Byron Peterson, NAACP President, and Robert L. Green, assistant professor of education, are expected to present a list of proposals to the East Lansing City Council next week calling for immediate passage of an open housing ordinance.

Also, said the spokesman, a "teach-in" following an address by James Farmer, executive secretary of CORE, is being planned for May 13.

Something Of Values

President John A. Hannah last Friday made what seemed a major pronouncement concerning the legitimacy of student involvement in social issues and the relationship of students with today's mammoth educational plants.

His statement is an interesting mixture of concepts he has frequently expressed before with some new concessions to the liberalizing effect of student and faculty dissent around the country.

Hannah, giving up a little ground, admitted there could be some value in listening to student-based criticism of universities. But he warned that the dissent must be principled and not "dissent for the sake of dissent itself," against which "we must be on guard, for those who revel in constant commotion cannot be permitted to disrupt the university in the important day-to-day work it carries on."

Even this is a concession from the man who last term told the Lansing Chamber of Commerce that administrators were keeping a close eye on student "rebels" here, and were hoping that no demonstrations against existing policies would be held.

Hannah discussed the type of students who are causing the controversy over students' rights and responsibilities. He said they are "brighter, keener, more alert, possessed of more information, better prepared academically, more sophisticated than the members of any previous generation," and should be treated accordingly. Students today, Hannah clearly must believe, are capable of making responsible criticisms of their universities and their society.

And yet, Hannah's speech deals at length with ideas which seem to clash with this view. He repeated the concern expressed in his State of the University address last January for a maintenance of "traditional values" in universities.

University administrators, Hannah said, should ask "whether our traditional value system is breaking down or being traded away without enough of us knowing, or caring."

He said it is the "primary responsibility" of a university to expose its students to "certain ethical standards."

"Is there not an obligation upon us to insure that there is included within the program of each of our students a repeated exposure to the basic tenets of the society of which all of us are a part?" Hannah believes there is.

"If the advantages and freedoms of our society are to endure, and if we are to continue making good its flaws, then at least a majority of our fellow citizens must cling with real conviction to certain fundamental beliefs."

He listed four such fundamental beliefs: in the dignity of man, in the need for truth and legal order, and in the existence of a God.

Hannah claims, in short, that a few specific, easily delineated principles are necessary to a sound society, but that students should have a right to question the values with which they have been brought up and a right, even if a limited one, to opt for a change in those values. The contradiction becomes obvious.

Hannah may not have intended it, but he has presented a dilemma which could be insoluble in the university as it now exists.

The struggle in universities today is between "established" powers and the "new" students who claim for themselves a bigger part in running their affairs.

On a rapidly-expanding campus such as Michigan State's, where students have at last begun criticizing in earnest the situation around them, there could be danger in the attitude that university regulations are meant to instill traditional social values and that college courses are meant to back these values up intellectually.

Hannah insists that university administrators must be willing to re-examine the methods they have used to educate their students. But such institutional open-mindedness could become meaningless unless the right of students to open criticism of their elders is guaranteed and unless the expression of students' social views is seen as necessary to a mature education.

POINT OF VIEW

Whither MSU's Athletic Program?

Editor's Note: This column was submitted by a professor in the Graduate School who wrote that he wanted no publicity for himself but that his ideas might provide "a thought and discussion-stimulator."

Now that the furor over the Fordy Anderson case has subsided, it may be appropriate to reconsider MSU's entire intercollegiate athletic program, and in particular, the matter of the emphasis to be placed on a winning football or basketball team in the light of 1965 realities.

It is the special thesis of this letter that the day of the major intercollegiate football team is drawing to a close, largely as a result of competition from the far superior professional product. While college football may never suffer the fate of college baseball, its ability to generate sizeable cash surpluses appears to be almost over.

This being the case (and there are, no doubt, many who would argue that such is not the case--but let them write their own letters) the logical conclusion is that Michigan State should emulate the University of Chicago and give up big-time intercollegiate football.

SUCH A STEP IS INEVITABLE! WHY NOT NOW?

If, in fact, college football attendance is destined to continue its decline as fans desert to the superior professional product, more and more universities are going to be forced to "de-emphasize" football because football will not only not generate surpluses with which to support other inter- and intra-collegiate sports but it will not even be any longer self-supporting.

In the case of public universities, in particular, it will hardly be possible to go to the legislature for funds to subsidize big time football!

(MSU students next fall will, in effect, be asked to help subsidize football in order for football to continue to subsidize other sports activities. It might be simpler and more straightforward to impose a student athletic charge and apply this subsidy directly to the intramural sports program.)

In short, if football is no longer to be a profit-making activity it will have to be de-emphasized. The argument of this letter is that by taking the step of de-emphasizing football now, instead of waiting until we are forced to do so five or ten years from now, MSU can create a national image for itself of a university well in the vanguard of its time, a school pre-eminently dedicated to the cause of academic excellence.

WHO NEEDS BIG-TIME FOOTBALL? NOT MSU.

While it may be true that football helped make MSU what it is today--a respected member of the Big Ten, it is no longer true that football, or even athletic membership in the Big Ten, has much more to offer the University.

We now have achieved a reputation for national excellence in non-athletic fields of endeavor. Our belated admission last year to the select society of major U.S. universities was only confirmation of what has already become common knowledge among educators and employing organizations across the country.

We have little to gain, and perhaps something to lose, by continuing to be known as a "football school." We no longer add much to our prestige by having winning football teams, nor do we lose prestige--any more than Harvard does--by having losing football teams. Our mathematics teams over the past few years have very probably done more for our national image than a series of winning football teams could ever have done.

EDUCATION NO LONGER HAS A "SISSY" IMAGE, FOOTBALL ISN'T NECESSARY.

There was a time when universities were looked on as ivory tower havens from the real world and when faculty and students had a "sissy" image that may have required the fielding of burly football teams to overcome.

But since Sputnik, education, brains, the pursuit of intellectual excellence have acquired public respectability. Professors, as consultants to business and government, have refuted the cliché that "he who can, does; he who cannot, teaches."

In short, education, as a whole, no longer needs big-time football.

HOW TO GO "ONE-UP" OVER ANN ARBOR.

Finally by acting now, by giving up football before we are forced to make such a move, we can go decisively "one-up" over our sister school at Ann Arbor.

As so often in the past, Michigan is falling to read the signs of the times. She is going all out to build her athletic teams in a misguided attempt to recapture the greatness she once had--not realizing that the public no longer rates schools on their football teams or general athletic prowess.

Is there any more fitting time, now that our student body has become increasingly concerned with education itself, now that MSU is no longer the "country club" it may once have been, and now that MSU is becoming a collection of colleges and living groups each with its own group spirit, to re-examine its need for big-time football or in fact for big time intercollegiate sports in general.

What a way it would be to go decisively "one-up" over our Ann Arbor friends, if we were to announce--somewhat regretfully perhaps--that we find the task of educating tomorrow's scientific, business and intellectual leaders to be too important to permit us to continue to worry about such rather adolescent concerns as the fielding of a major football team!

Rather than being forced by economic necessity into such a move 10 years from now or even sooner, we could by acting now capitalize on the distinction that would come from being the leader, behind Chicago, and that would arise from our joining such other centers of excellence as MIT and Cal Tech in a single-minded pursuit of academic excellence.

Note: Nothing in this proposal should be interpreted as a criticism of athletics, per se, or of intramural sports. In my judgment, these are vital to the physical development of students and should be encouraged and enlarged. It is costly, intercollegiate competition that is being challenged.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Library vs. Personality

To the Editor:

If you have the best interest of the State News and the University community in mind, it is difficult to understand why you choose to print such an unprincipled and inaccurate article as that of Mr. Robert Willis. It should be recorded that Mr. Willis has a long-standing grudge.

The first time his brief-case was checked at the library exit he growled "police-state mentality" and he was very excited. We have not been able to convince him that there is nothing personal in our procedure.

Since the State News knows that major changes for the reference areas have been planned and have been in the process of being implemented for the past 18 months for a July 1 deadline, I wonder at the purpose of the indignation in the editorial columns.

Many of the inaccuracies could have been corrected by checking with the library staff. The editor has confused many of his 30,000 readers and needlessly hurt capable and dedicated library staff members.

Editorial Mis-Judgment

To the Editor:

If Mr. Willis' "point of view" foreshadows the tenor of the forthcoming State News series on the library, nothing good can come from it. His complete lack of insight into library problems and his libelous attacks on Mr. Chapin are inexcusable for an aspiring professional scholar.

And while anger surges, let me ask whether the arrangement of the headlines and the report of the Board of Trustees meeting in Friday's State News reflect the relative importance of University business.

Perhaps the editor does believe that the appointment of a new "cage" coach is more important than the formation of a new college, the appointment of a new dean, the hiring of five new librarians, or the awarding of grants totaling almost $700,000 to the University.

Does He Or Doesn't He?

To the Editor:

The Anselmian ontological argument advanced by Mr. Lackey as a proof for existence of "Hannah" seems open to a type of rebuttal first suggested by Epicurus. This line of argument proceeds as follows:

- 1. "Hannah," as "a being greater than which nothing can be thought," is at the least omnipotent, omniscient, all-wise and benevolent.
- 2. Evil on campus is either existent or non-existent.
- 3. If evil exists on campus, then "Hannah" either is not cognizant of it and is therefore not omniscient, or is cognizant of it and is either not omnipotent, or if omnipotent is not benevolent since the evil does exist.
- 4. If evil does not exist on campus, then the campus police force is unnecessary and "Hannah" as that "greatest being" who instituted it cannot have been guided by perfect wisdom.
- 5. Either case thus has as its resultant the impossibility of the existence of a being greater than which nothing can be thought. Therefore, "Hannah" cannot exist.

This proof may appear valid, however, upon examination two lines of counter-refutation suggest themselves:

- 1. This may well be the "best of all possible universes" and the evil existent here may simply be that smallest increment of evil which if eliminated would, of necessity, be replaced by a greater increment of evil.
- 2. It may also be argued that the existence, or non-existence, of evil is irrelevant, since "Hannah," as the "most perfect being," could have only most perfect thoughts, thus limiting the sphere of his interest to only most perfect subjects, viz., himself.

Those of you who dismiss such metaphysical ramblings as clap-trap have as a guiding light G.E. Moore, perhaps the most literal-minded of all philosophers.

He, too, would have considered the above arguments nonsensical, arguing along the lines that they are neither necessary nor relevant as he saw "Hannah" out in back feeding the chickens only yesterday.

Censors Of The Week

To the Editor:

Because of what is rumored to be a deliberate oversight on the part of some members of Senior Council, one very outstanding senior has not been, and will not be, named Senior of the Week.

Her name is Susan Fry, a journalism major from Aurora, Ill. Sue has been sophomore and junior class secretary. She was a member of Union Board, Career Carnival Banquet Chairman, National Publicity Chairman for the Hawaiian Luau, and a member of Pan Hel.

She has also worked on Greek Week, Water Carnival programs and judges committees, Senior Swingout, and the Wolverine and State News staffs. She was a member of the Queen's Court of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity.

Sue is a member of Theta Sigma Phi, women's journalism honorary, and Student Publications Board; and has served as Corresponding Secretary for her sorority, Delta Gamma. Last year she received an outstanding junior award and, to top it off, is a member of Mortar Board, senior women's honorary.

Last summer Sue edited a weekly newspaper in her home town, but hopes to go into magazine journalism after graduation. Her hobbies include cooking, sewing and drama, although her main interest is in state and national politics.

We sincerely believe that Sue Fry is one of the most outstanding persons on this campus, and one who very much deserves to be a Senior of the Week.

PARIS--President Charles DeGaulle Tuesday expressed "severe disapproval" of the Vietnamese war by implication and advocated the independence and neutrality of the nations of Southeast Asia.

In a national radio and television address DeGaulle made only a passing reference to the conflict in Viet Nam, but this came after he had laid down what he said were the principles of French foreign policy:

Nye's volumes, "Life in the English-Speaking World" and "Literature in English," will include essays dealing with sociological and cultural movements in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Australia and India.

Financed by the State Department and the U.S. Information Service, the series is to be published by McGraw-Hill.

Greeks To Name 'Ugliest'

For the next few days some rather odd, weird and strange-looking specimens will be mulling around campus. The important thing to remember is not to panic--these ghastly looking creatures are simply contestants in the "Ugliest Greek" competition.

Twenty-one fraternities have entered contestants in the race for the title of "Ugliest Greek". Five finalists will be selected on the basis of the amount of money that they are able to squeeze out of campus voters.

Anyone can vote. Voting hours at the Union concourse are today and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Friday, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Votes will not be cast by ballot but by the amount of money each candidate accumulates. The fraternity men are not particular about the form of the money. Even checks are acceptable.

The five finalists will be named at the Sigma Chi Street Dance in the Sigma Chi parking lot Friday night.

At the Greek Feast scheduled for 4 p.m. Saturday in the field behind Jenison Fieldhouse, the finalists will be asked such intellectually stimulating questions as "How did you like the grasser in Shiawassee County last spring?"

Contenders will be judged on their ability to answer the questions in a witty, humorous manner. Miss MSU, Anne Lawrenz, will be on hand to draw questions.

Fraternity and sorority members will vote by a show of hands for the person that they think is the ugliest and funniest Greek. Louis Bender, last year's "Ugliest Greek", will present the trophy, an empty beer keg with "Ugliest Greek--1965", painted on the side.

Joel Higgins will serve as master of ceremonies at the Greek Feast.

Commission Meeting Set For Tonight

The new Campus Community Commission will meet Thursday night with all students interested in working in a Saturday afternoon recreation program for Lansing children.

The open meeting will be at 7 p.m. in 328 Student Services. The commission hopes to help socio-economically deprived children as the Student Education Corps helps educationally deprived students.

Thursday's meeting will be mainly to plan the type of program.

The board has been collecting data so far this term in cooperation with faculty and representatives from the Office of Student Affairs and Lansing.

CROWN CANDIDATES--These finalists in the Miss Lansing contest have high hopes of following in the footsteps of last year's Miss Lansing, Sally Jane Noble, who went on to become Miss Michigan. Standing, left to right, are Michele Buxton, Diane Doyle, Candi Coffman and Jackie Marion. Sitting are Julie Sudou, Sue Ellen Morris, Pamela Sue Hoxie, Susan Green, Joy McConnochie and Linda Vukin. 'Intern' Program Proposed To Recruit New Professors

Large universities should meet their pressing needs for teaching talent by establishing internship programs for their own promising graduate students and beginning instructors, an MSU authority on higher education proposed Tuesday.

Under such a plan, John X. Jamrich, associate dean of the College of Education, said, each university would be making a financial commitment "to accelerate the development of qualified teachers."

Jamrich made his proposal in a speech to the annual student honors convocation at Northern Michigan University.

He said that one of the most serious problems facing higher education in the next decade is that regarding "availability of competent and qualified college teachers."

He proposed that large universities place graduate teaching assistants, assistant instructors and beginning instructors into groups of eight or 10, with each group under the direction of a "master teacher."

Master teachers, he explained, would work with the beginning teachers, visit their classes and confer with them on problems of the classroom, department and college.

Once trained, said Jamrich, these teachers would move from place to place, rather than remaining at the university where they "interned."

Jamrich also pointed out that "more than any intellectual task, the learning of the ideas and implications of freedom and responsibility depend upon tangible contact with real-life situations."

"My observation," he added, "is that students on a campus, just as they were at home, will make errors in assuming these roles. The fact that they will make mistakes should not be the occasion for colleges and universities -- for parents as well -- to impose highly restrictive environments on our campuses."

Petitions Available

Petitions for Homecoming committees, ASMSU Judiciary, and a special committee to study student representation on student-faculty committees are available this week.

Homecoming committees petitions will be available Thursday at the Union desk and in 334 Student Services.

They should be returned to 334 Student Services by 4 p.m. May 9. Petitions for the ASMSU Judiciary will be available today and must be turned in by Tuesday. Positions are available for fall term for three sophomores and two seniors.

Prospective juniors are also encouraged to apply, in case a position opens for fall.

Petitions are available in 101 Student Services Building. Petitions for a special committee to study student representation on student-faculty committees will begin today.

"I would urge all students, regardless of class, to petition," said John McQuitty, chairman of the ASMSU Student Board.

Petitions are available in 308 Student Services from 1:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. and are due at 5 p.m. Thursday.

Holmes, Dobrei Team For 1-0 Win Over U-D

By DUANE LANCASTER
State News Sports Writer

The most important part of a double steal was successful enabling Michigan State to top the University of Detroit 1-0 for a baseball win at Old College Field Tuesday.

The game's only run came in the third inning after State's Bruce Pettibone walked, moved to second on a sacrifice and went to third on a wild pitch. John Biedenbach also walked and cut down trying to steal second. But on the throw down, Pettibone came in to score.

Dick Holmes, who doubles in basketball in the winter, was the winning pitcher but had to receive help in the seventh from Doug Dobrei when the Titans threatened to score with runners on first and second and two away.

Detroit had another threat in the ninth inning when leadoff hitter Tom Engel singled but Dobrei struck the next three batters out to give the Spartans their 17th win of the season against five defeats. Detroit is now 8-3.

It was a pitcher's battle all the way with Holmes allowing only four hits and no runs in 62.3 innings and Titan starter Lou Radomski giving up just five hits and one run. Detroit picked up their fifth hit against Dobrei.

The only man with more than one hit was Biedenbach with two singles. More surprising, there were no extra base blows in the contest.

The Titans never had a man past second and, except for Pettibone, the Spartans didn't either.

Centerfielder Bob Maniere, rightfielder Dick Billings and Holmes had the remaining hits for the Spartans. Cliff Rothrock, Harry Brinsen, Don Yeoman and Don Deptula singled for Detroit.

Detroit picked up its first hit in the second inning but was unable to get another until the sixth while the Spartans collected only two in the last four innings.

The win was the second of the year over Detroit for State. The Spartans will hit the road this weekend for a game Friday with the University of Illinois and a doubleheader Saturday at Purdue.

GAME OF MUSICAL CHAIRS?

Platoon Football For Coach

By JERRY MORTON
State News Sports Writer

It's hard to tell the players without a scorecard, but the same situation should apply to Spartan football coaches next fall.

For the first time in four seasons, MSU has made some changes in its coaching lineup and the revised staff is already getting down to business.

New backfield assistant Al Dorow has arrived from Hillsdale to take over the duties of Ed Rutherford, who was appointed freshman coach last week.

Rutherford has blended into the Spartan picture this spring after a successful tenure at Detroit Denby High School. He replaces Burt Smith who has accepted the post of assistant athletic director.

Smith came to MSU in 1954 as a member of Coach Duffy Daugherty's first staff. This will mark the first season that he has not coached.

"It's going to be rough for a while," he said, "but I'm looking forward to my new job. I'll also be scouting for the team so I won't be out of coaching entirely."

Although he never held a head coach's job on the college level, Smith is still one of the best-known members of the Spartan staff. The greatest tribute to his popularity was displayed last year when he received the "Coach of the Year" award from the

All University Student Government.

Smith considers the honor as one of his greatest thrills in coaching, but there have been others.

"I always have a sense of satisfaction when I think of the boys I've coached who are now in pro ball," he said, "and I'm especially proud of the boys who came back to school to earn their degrees. We have a good record in that respect."

Since his specialty is the defensive line, Smith said he has fond memories of many goal-line stands.

There have been opportunities for Smith to move elsewhere, but he has always chosen to remain at MSU.

"It's only natural for every coach to aspire to be a head coach," he said, "and I've talked to several schools from time to time. But it's always been hard for me to leave State. We have an organization here that's hard to find at other schools."

Drobac's Brand Of Play: Tennis Without A Racket

By RICK PIANIN
State News Sports Writer

Card-sharks and tennis players both must learn a valuable lesson early in their careers, if they ever hope to succeed: "Keep a poker-face at all times."

This bit of advice is often strongly emphasized by State tennis coach Stan Drobac, who insists that his players first master the control of their own emotions and tempers before stepping onto the courts.

"You can't fight both your opponent and yourself," he explained "and you must learn never to show your opponent that anything bothers you. A player's ability to hold his temper is a deciding factor in whether he'll make this team."

This doesn't mean that Drobac is interested in the "mild-mannered" type exclusively. "I like to see a guy with competitive spirit—who gets upset when he loses a match," added Drobac. "But I won't stand for any swearing or racket throwing on the courts."

Captain Charlie Wolff feels that concentration is the key to suppressing emotions during a match. "The way you approach concentration will determine how you play the game," he said. "I know -- I've got a temper problem."

Wolff said that outbursts of emotion are more in evidence in summer tournaments than in the Big Ten, where the emphasis is on self control.

"When you lose your temper, you start concentrating on previous mistakes instead of the game," added Vic Dhooge, State's powerful first doubles player. Dhooge, a sophomore, said that the problem of player self-control in the collegiate circuit differs little from high school competition. "You figure that by the time you've reached the age of 16, either you've got that control or you don't."

"I remember playing in a summer tournament against one man from the University of Michigan who had a terrible temper," Laird Warner said. "He finally blew up and threw down his racket and smashed it."

While the launching of racquets can't always be stopped by the decree of a coach, there is one factor -- it's power known to all of mankind -- that has a definite restraining effect: The buck. The racquets used by the players have a list price of $37, which discourages many from flinging them against a fence.

Golfers Drop Two, Now 0-5 For Year

MADISON, Wis.—The win column in the Big Ten golf standings is still an unfamiliar sight to State's golf team as it fell victim to the University of Wisconsin and Southern Illinois here Monday.

The Spartans lost to the Badgers 18 1/2-17 1/2 and again to Southern Illinois, 20-16. They are now 0-5 on the season, losing to Indiana, Purdue and Ohio State, April 17.

Low man for the Spartans was Ken Benson who shot 76-75-151, seven over par, and good enough for third place behind Wisconsin's John Hodgen who shot a 143 to lead all players.

He was followed by Fred Mackey with a card of 77-79-156, Butch Morrison with a 79-76-157 score and Doug Hankey with a 78-79-157 score.

A Honda needs a mere 3x6 feet of content. And that puts a spot, about a mile away from

There are other sides to Honda, too. Hondas are fiendishly frugal. A gallon of gas will carry you up to 200 mpg, depending on which of the 15 Honda models you're driving. And insurance bills shrink to practically nothing. As for upkeep, a Honda needs little.

Seniors Of The Week

They Choose History, Academics For Future

JEFF PURYEAR

Seniors of the Week Sue Lindsay, from Romeo, and Jeff Puryear, from Dimondale, are both Honors College students.

Sue, though she was engaged in many University activities, has learned that some were much more meaningful for her than others.

She is especially happy to belong to Mortar Board. This women's honorary initiates its members at May Morning sing, Saturday. The group sells calendar books, the profits going into a scholarship fund.

Mortar Board helps with many all-University functions. It often invites speakers to address the group and the girls attend some lectures together.

"Mortar Board has meant more to me than some of these activities," said Sue.

"A lot of people can feel more at home in a group that they can identify with," she said. "It is important to join a group where your participation can make a difference."

Other groups Sue has belonged to are Frosh-Soph Council, J-Council, AUSG public relations, and J-Hop, Homecoming and Greek Week committees.

She was 1963 chairman of Parents Weekend, co-chairman of Homecoming 1964, and assistant director of the John F. Kennedy memorial fund.

She is a history major who plans to teach a year before going on to graduate school in guidance and counselling.

Besides Mortar Board, Sue belongs to Kappa Delta Pi (education) honorary and Phi Alpha Theta (history) honorary.

A member of Alpha Phi sorority, she was elected secretary and treasurer of her house and was named outstanding junior.

Jeff, a social science major, hopes to do graduate work at Duke or Johns Hopkins Universities. He hopes eventually to work in the university community, either as a professor or as an administrator.

"I'm a strong advocate of liberal education," he said. "I think there is more to life than one's vocation."

Jeff hitchhiked around Europe one summer, often sleeping outside in a sleeping bag. Of the more than 11 countries he saw, he liked Spain best.

"Spain was cheapest as I didn't have much money," he said. "Also, it didn't rain when I slept outside. But really because the people were happy and friendly."

He has belonged to Frosh-Soph Council, Union Board, J-Council, and the AUSG Re-evaluation Committee.

He was chairman of Frosh-Soph Focus, the Council's newsletter, vice president of Omicron Delta Kappa (scholarship and leadership honorary), publicity chairman of 1963 Career Carnival and is an R.A. in Case this year.

In addition to Omicron Delta Kappa, Jeff has belonged to Blue Key, Green Helmet and Phi Eta Sigma, (freshman scholastic honorary).

Talk Given On Enterprise In India

Public enterprise, as opposed to private enterprise, was a practical and political necessity to India after her independence in 1948, S.K.R. Bhandari, chairman of the Department of Commerce at Banaras Hindu University, said here Monday.

Bhandari said there was no private group large enough or with the resources to take on a large enterprise. Thus public enterprises are partially financed by the government.

"The government leaves industry free to re-invest the funds," Bhandari said. "Three industries have been established in India from public enterprise's surplus earnings."

Three aspects of public enterprise are different from those of private enterprise, he said.

With public enterprise the government has entered into entirely new fields of industry, such as oil exploration and refining and the large machine industry.

Public industries are larger than those industries in the past. Within the last 10 years a large variety of industries had to be undertaken. This involved a large degree of experimentation in management.

"This uniqueness of economic development in India is due to the fact that it is being attempted in a free society," Bhandari said. "There was positive restraint from the government before. Political revolution was necessary before development."

Library

(continued from page 1) service, he advised. He also commented that students can fill out an order card for any book they want the library to buy. The library needs more technical staff people, he said.

One of the major problems of the library was pointed out by another professor. The library is classified as a service, like the planetarium. It should be given higher priority as a separate entity, he said.

What are the library's future plans? What is it doing to alleviate the various problems discussed in this series? These questions will be discussed tomorrow.

Crew Meeting

All persons interested in joining the MSU crew club should report to the physical fitness room, Men's IM Building, today at 7:30 p.m.

Pistol Teams Fourth In Collegiate Meet

The MSU Open and ROTC pistol teams finished fourth out of 52 teams competing in the NRA National Intercollegiate Pistol Matches in a combined effort.

Top men on the team were Gerald Yeiter, Haslett senior; Winfield Holmes, Lansing senior; Jim Mason, Walled Lake junior; Mike Golden, Highland Park, Ill., junior; and Phil Kiley, East Lansing freshman.

Others in the competition were John Cove, Charlotte sophomore; Ted Nuoffer, South Haven senior; Ed Hermoyan, Keego Harbor junior; and Norman Melby, Lakeland sophomore.

High shooter was Yeiter with a 290 score out of a possible 300.

The U.S. Military Academy captured team honors by firing 1,420 out of a perfect 1,500. Two Air Force Academy teams placed second and third with 300.

'No Pie In Sky' Deals With Hobo

There's more to the hobo than the popular characterization of a sad-eyed, unshaven panhandler.

In his recently published book, "No Pie in the Sky," Frederick Feied, instructor in American thought and language, deals with the hobo as an American cultural hero in the works of Jack London, John Dos Passos and Jack Kerouac.

To these well-known writers the hobo represents the economic contradictions of capitalism and the search for values in an age of disillusionment and widespread social pessimism, Feied said.

Feied, now in his second year at MSU, is working for his doctorate from Columbia University. He holds a bachelor's degree from the University of Denver and a master's degree from Columbia.

The 95-page book, published by the Citadel Press of New York, draws mainly from "Essays of Revolt" and "The Road" by London, "U.S.A." by Dos Passos, and "On the Road" and "The Iliad in Burma" by Kerouac.

The journal "American Literature" commented on "Pie in the Sky":

"Succinct in style and abounding in quotable passages, this paperback monograph provides indispensable parallel reading for such widely taught works as 'The Apostate,' 'U.S.A.,' and 'On the Road.'"

"In London's eyes hoboes were the inevitable accompaniments of capitalism and were necessary to its existence," Feied said. London wrote of the hobo's role in the struggle to preserve political freedom.

Kerouac's treatment of the hobo is romantic and allegorical, Feied commented. He cheerfully blends Catholicism and existentialism, Buddhism and bop.

Series Correction

The Radio Encore series will present a taped rebroadcast of Norman Corwin's "On a Note of Triumph" at 8 p.m. May 11 in Parlor C, Union.

It was originally reported that the program, which includes a recording of Sir Winston Churchill announcing V-E Day, would be presented Tuesday.
