LBJ REAFFIRMS VIET NAM PLEDGE,

Winter Term Tax To Cover Debt

By JOHN BEAUPARLANT
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU deliberately went into debt about $1,200 fall term, but expects to make up the deficit with the student tax increase which went into effect this term.

The exact amount of the deficit cannot be determined until the December fund ledger sheet is sent out by the University Business Office, said Richard P. Hollander, Wilmette, Ill., senior and vice president for finance and operations.

He expects to receive the ledger sheet either Friday or next week.

A number of unforeseen special projects were presented to ASMSU during fall term, Hollander said. The Student Board felt that several of them were too valuable to be passed up for lack of funds, since the income was expected to double winter term.

The student tax was raised from 25 cents to 50 cents, giving ASMSU a winter term budget of around $13,000, compared to a $6,800 budget fall term.

Hollander said he will recommend that a contingency fund of about 10 per cent of the total budget be established to cover such unexpected expenses during winter term.

These expenses included $350 to send delegates to the Fordham University Symposium in New York City Dec. 21-23, $100 for additional telephones, $350 for new stamps and stamp pads for the student tax referendum, $200 for legal aid, $100 for extra supplies and $100 for additional labor.

"The additional supplies and labor were needed mainly to plan for the Rose Bowl trip," Hollander said.

Part of the labor expenditures also went to keep the student loan office open during finals week, in order to make it more convenient for students to repay loans, he said.

One secretary stayed during finals week, when offices are normally closed, to answer questions about Rose Bowl trips.

The ASMSU-sponsored flights to New York City over the holidays lost approximately $100.

Hollander said the debts will be made up partially by $500 originally budgeted for an ASMSU bookstore which probably will not be established, $350 left over from the Human Relations Commission appropriations, and $200 included in the legal aid fund which has already been earmarked to cover this term's deficit in the fund.

ASMSU Says AWS Can't Quit

Associated Women Students cannot constitutionally resign from the ASMSU Student Board, the board ruled Tuesday night.

Jan Seidman, Brooklyn, N.Y., senior and president of AWS, had submitted the organization's resignation from the Student Board at the Dec. 7 meeting. The board postponed accepting or refusing the resignation until Tuesday's meeting.

The board ruled Tuesday that under the constitution adopted last winter term, AWS must remain on the Student Board as long as it is in existence.

Miss Seidman said Tuesday she resigned at the request of the AWS cabinet. The cabinet thought that her duties as a member of Student Board were keeping her from fulfilling all of her duties as president of AWS, she said.

"I am resigning at the request of my cabinet," Miss Seidman told the board Tuesday, "not because of personal feelings."

Because the board ruled that she may not resign, Miss Seidman said that she will attend as many board meetings as she can. At other meetings, a substitute member will represent AWS, but substitutes cannot vote under the ASMSU constitution.

"Since a substitute cannot vote, I will definitely attend meetings directly related to AWS," Miss Seidman said.

Issues expected to come before the board Tuesday night are:

PRESIDENT LYNDON B. JOHNSON

'Great Society' Still Goal Here

President Reports To Congress
In State Of Union Message

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Johnson promised Wednesday night to pursue peace but said that in Viet Nam "we will stay until aggression has stopped." He backed this pledge with a new, record $112.8-billion budget that did not call for a general tax boost.

Johnson reported to Congress in person and to the nation by radio and television on the state of the home front and the state of his worldwide continuing peace offensive.

He said his peace campaign so far has produced "no response to prove either success or failure."

Johnson sounded no threats or ultimatums. But he voiced and repeated pledges to protect the freedom of Viet Nam from aggression.

And he said too, that, "We do not intend to abandon Asia to conquest."

But at the end of his lengthy address, Johnson had a somewhat encouraging note: "I am hopeful, and I will try, to end this battle and return our sons to their homes," he said.

Johnson could give no slightest clue, however, as to when it might be possible to persuade the North Vietnamese to talk peace.

Nor did he say how long the United States might continue its pause in the bombing of North Viet Nam, now in its 20th day.

Viet Nam was the overriding item of interest and attention in the massive State of the Union address.

This address provided his first extended, detailed public analysis of the reasoning behind the U.S. war effort in Viet Nam.

But Johnson dealt also with the domestic scene and said that the war halfway around the world must not halt the drive toward what he calls the "Great Society."

In the new budget, however, the increased spending will go largely into military needs.

Officials said the defense budget will go up from about $54.4 billion this year to $58.3 billion in the next fiscal year starting July 1. The nonmilitary budget will increase by only $600 million, they said.

Johnson said he would not hesitate to ask for more appropriations and revenues "if the necessities of Viet Nam require it."

Without raising taxes or increasing the total tax bill, Johnson said the tax withholding system should be improved so Americans can more realistically pay as they go.

The White House interpreted this as designed to take a bigger bit out of paychecks through advance withholding of taxes but without increasing the amount of taxes the government would collect over-all.

The President proposed a speedup in corporate tax collection, and called for reimposing the cuts in auto and telephone taxes that took effect on Jan. 1 of this year.

The restoration of the two excise taxes would produce about $1 billion in extra revenue in the next fiscal year and the speedup in corporation tax collections about $3 billion, officials said. And a graduated system of withholding taxes would bring in another $300 million more.

On Viet Nam, Johnson said that Americans will stay there as they have stayed in other trouble spots.

"We will stay," he said, "because a just nation cannot leave to the cruelties of its enemies the people who have staked their lives and independence on our solemn promise—a pledge which

New Aid To Viets Planned

WASHINGTON (AP)—Aid officials outlined Wednesday a long-term plan aimed at permanently wiping out Communist control in the South Vietnamese countryside in coming years.

The new "rural reconstruction" or pacification program, as it was termed, is a successor to the ill-fated strategic hamlet program of the early 1960s.

Core of the new effort is to be the assignment of specially trained teams of 60 to 80 South Vietnamese to villages which have been freed from the threat of large-scale Viet Cong military attacks.

The teams are being trained to ferret out hidden Viet Cong cells remaining in the villages, nurture respected local governments based on the existing village council system, establish good police, health, schooling and other community facilities and maintain security.

About one-half of the team members are to be armed and the teams will be prepared to stay in each village a year or as long as necessary, it was stated.

This contrasts with the strategic hamlet concept which proved unable to withstand continued pressure and techniques of the Red guerrillas, the officials said.

They underlined this difference:

The strategic hamlet operation tended to destroy the existing village governmental system. Saigon government cadres would move people into a location, give pep talks and distribute a few pigs, see that limited fortifications were constructed, and then move on to another site. This failed to destroy underground Communist cells, and when Saigon military control weakened the Reds moved back in command.

Officials said the Saigon government has grown in strength and stability and methods for identifying key Viet Cong cell members remaining in the villages have greatly improved.

Eventual success of the new program hinges on the success of the South Vietnamese, U.S., and other government armed forces in their fight against Viet Cong military units. And even with victory on the battlefield, the rural reconstruction part of the campaign in the war would admittedly take years.

BACK AGAIN -- Shortly after 3 p.m. Wednesday, Paul Schiff entered the administration building to register for winter term. Schiff said he had not yet chosen his courses, but would probably carry nine credits.

DeGaulle To Visit Russia This Year

PARIS (UPI)—French President Charles de Gaulle will visit Russia this year, it was announced officially Wednesday.

The announcement at once aroused speculation among diplomatic observers that De Gaulle and the Soviets might make a renewed effort together to get Viet Nam peace talks started.

They agreed last February to try to do so. But their efforts failed because the Soviets insisted American bombing of Communist North Viet Nam must cease first. De Gaulle took a firm stand that no strings be attached to peace talks.

The announcement of De Gaulle's trip was made after a one-hour meeting between him and Soviet Ambassador Valerian Zorin at the Elysee Palace.

De Gaulle and his new second-term government, meanwhile, pledged Wednesday to end the seven-month French boycott of the European Common Market and to continue working for European unity.

Information Secretary Yvon Bourges confirmed after a cabinet meeting that Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville will attend the Common Market ministers meeting in Luxembourg Jan. 17-18.

"The French government intends to continue working for the union of Europe," Bourges said.

Zorin spoke to newsmen after meeting De Gaulle.

RFK, Lindsay Meet On N.Y. Transit Snarl

NEW YORK (AP)—Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., flew from Washington Wednesday afternoon for a meeting he requested with Lindsay at City Hall on the City's transit strike.

He urged the union as well as the Transit Authority to accept the findings of a three-man mediation board. "The strike simply cannot go on another day. There must be give and take," said Kennedy.

Mayor John V. Lindsay met with the mediators at City Hall and directed them to submit their views "as to the basis for a fair, equitable and responsible settlement."

In a Monday night speech, Lindsay vowed the city "will not capitulate before the lawless demands of a single power group."

The three-man Transit Authority was believed prepared to accept recommendations from mediators Nathan Feinsinger, Theodore Kheel and Sylvester Garrett.

However, the striking AFL-CIO Transport Workers Union went on record as opposed to a mediators' settlement immediately after Lindsay's Monday night castigation of the union.

Acting TWU strike leader Douglas MacMahon said upon learning of Lindsay's decree to the mediators for a settlement formula:

"The strike can be settled if the Transit Authority and the mayor put sufficient money on the table. When they are ready to do this, we'll be willing to settle this."

A moment's silence ... "May he rest in peace,"

IN HIGHWAY PATH

Credit Union To Lose Home

The new MSU Employees Credit Union building will have to be torn down to make way for the proposed M-43 relocation across the campus, according to the State Highway Department's present plans.

In addition, two service stations located near the intersection of Hagadorn and Trowbridge Roads lie in the highway's planned path, a spokesman for the highway department said Wednesday.

The Credit Union Building was opened Aug. 26, 1965, according to Frances Lesniewski, credit union manager. She estimated the value of the building and property at close to one-half million dollars.

"We were assured by both the highway department and the City of East Lansing before we acquired the property in 1961 that there were no plans for using this land in the foreseeable future," she said.

She added, "We were not aware of any change in the highway department's plans."

Mrs. Lesniewski said the Credit Union was told about the possibility of its having to give up the property by a third party. "We have had no direct contact with the highway department," she said.

The highway department plans to begin acquiring right of way for the highway by early 1967. It is expected owners of properties in the path of the new highway will have to move during fall of 1968.

No buildings on University property are affected by the highway route, University Secretary Jack Breslin said Wednesday.

"We knew about this (highway) several years ago, and haven't constructed any new buildings along the planned route," he said.

The MSU Employees Credit Union is a corporation, independent of the University, owned by MSU employees, Mrs. Lesniewski said.

The credit union provides investment opportunities, insurance and low interest loans to employees, she said. All proceeds from the credit union go back to the members in the form of dividends.

Cross-Campus Highway; Careful Planning Needed

THE PROPOSED CROSS-campus highway poses two serious problems to the University: division of the campus and student safety.

Today the problem appears distant, but already signs of future difficulties are present. The Grand Trunk Railroad line passes through the same general area as the proposed highway.

RATHER THAN WALK very long distances, students wishing to get to their cars in the reserved lots beyond the tracks are cutting holes in the fence along the railroad.

With this in mind, picture the plight of future generations: dormitories, classrooms, etc. will be built south of the tracks. Unless this area is a completely independent campus, which is very unlikely, students will have to cross not only railroad tracks, but also a six-lane highway.

Although the railroad will pose no tremendous problems, the present traffic-dodging on Grand River would seem like a Sunday outing when compared to the chaos created by the new road.

ORIGINAL PLANS DID NOT call for depressing the road, which entails added costs. State statutes require that East Lansing must help pay for the road. John M. Patriarche, East Lansing city manager, says that the city does not oppose either depressing the road or the University's charging right of way fees, as long as the University gives financial aid for the construction.

NOTHING DEFINITE has resulted from the financial controversy, but both the University and East Lansing must realize that the students' safety and campus unity are at stake. These issues far outweigh the additional costs of a depressed roadway.

Certainly traffic will increase in the future, so need for the road exists. We do not oppose the road through the campus. Instead, we advocate that the road be depressed.

IF THIS IS DONE, adequate overpasses must be erected or student safety and campus unity will be in grave peril.

VISA Benefits Students

SALES GOT UNDERWAY Monday for the VISA credit cards, an ASMSU-sponsored project designed to save students money and also bring participating businesses more volume.

From all indications, it appears that the new VISA program will be more effective and beneficial to students than the coupon books in the past. The credit cards, which can be purchased for $2.50 each, can be used over and over until next August.

THIS GIVES THE STUDENT plenty of time to more than pay for the initial cost of the credit card. At present some 14 East Lansing area businesses are connected with the VISA program. It is hoped that this number will be increased in future months, which will add to the attractiveness of the program.

Each participating business sets its own discount rate, which now ranges from 5 to 10 percent, averaging about 10 percent. This appears to be a fair system. It also appears that no necessary information pertaining to the credit cards and their use has been withheld from students.

AAUP Casts Light . . .

The brief filed by the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) in Grand Rapids Federal Court is a good example of an attempt to objectively clarify the issues and charges in the Paul Schiff case.

The brief, partially printed in this paper Wednesday, is no impassioned plea, but rather an extensive statement tempered by logic and reason. Agree with its conclusions or not, it dealt straightforwardly with the issues which have become fuzzed and many times distorted in recent months.

The only objection to the brief pertains to the substance of several conclusions, which may be overstated, since the AAUP had no access to the valuable testimony given in the closed hearing at the University.

Perhaps as important as the statements on the Schiff case, is the comment regarding the administration at MSU and the University atmosphere in general.

It read in part, "It is the opinion of the chapter's officers, and of the overwhelming majority of the faculty, that the Board of Trustees and the University's top administrators, particularly John A. Hannah, have assiduously and conscientiously endeavored to make the MSU campus a place of free expression of opinion."

This contrasts greatly from the absurd statement made in a student publication recently to the effect that MSU was the "Mississippi of the nation's universities." We wonder if those same campus zealots who regard MSU as a "dungeon" for free expression would agree with this statement made by the AAUP.

OUR READERS SPEAK

U.S. Is No War Monger

To the Editor:

This letter is intended mainly for those who constantly cry about U.S. "imperialism" in Viet Nam, namely Ho Chi Minh, Brian Keleher and his bearded brothers in the May Second Movement.

If the U.S. is really an imperialistic warmonger in Viet Nam, I would like to ask "why?" Are we trying to take over their country so we can extract some precious minerals from the soil which barely supports a low-grade rice crop? Or maybe we're fostering a "brain-drain" and stealing scientists from a country which doesn't even have enough mid-wives. Perhaps we are trying to extract a wealth of food supplies from a country to which we have to export grain in the first place. Or do we want to conquer this country with over 70 inches annual rainfall and turn it into a tourist resort?

Anyone who takes time enough to look at the facts can see that we don't want their country and are only trying to see that they can keep it without being forced to hand it over to Red China.

If the Vietnams don't approve of this country's policies, they should go find a country that suits them. If they are in doubt as to where this might be, I'm sure that almost any American would be more than happy to tell them where to go.

Style Gone In Our Architecture

To the Editor:

National attention is being focused on the crisis that faces our cities. They have become slum ghettos surrounded by bland faceless pillars of aluminum and glass, giving no life nor adding any beauty to the city. A large group of MSU students have just returned from such a city.

In L.A., which has had its greatest growth since World War II, you find mile after endless mile of tall, plain, bland, dead aluminum and glass walls lining the streets.

This urban crisis has led to intense investigations into the problems of the city and there has arisen a cry for trained personnel. Folk singers such as Pete Seeger have given us songs such as "Little Boxes" which reflects this trend of growth which leads to sameness.

This trend has even been reflected on our own campus. No more ivy covered buildings such as Wells, which is being torn down for the library addition. No more dorms with any style and landscaping such as the circle dorms or even dorms in which you need a map and professional guide to find your room such as Shaw.

We instead have been given such dorms as Holmes and classroom buildings such as Bessey, both sterile and unexciting.

But there was hope for the future, MSU was to have a new center for Urban Planning and Landscape Architecture. It was to be, I had hoped, a fine example of both disciplines. Last Monday it was announced that the building was complete. I was quickly impressed with the new building and its landscape. It was an example of modern design, a box fronted by three sickly looking pine trees.

It indeed reflected the problems of our urban areas. The administration seemed to be proud that it only took them three months to complete it, but I ask, what took them so long?

Is MSU On Student's Side?

To the Editor:

I have been at this institution for four years plus some. As I stay here longer and longer I wonder more and more: is the University really for the student?

I guess it has been a succession of events this year that has irked me -- the first football game ticket mix-up, the rise in the price of the dorm laundries. Now, I read that the prices in the campus grills are going up. Oh, yes, they are charging for hot water also.

What bothers me is that the reason given for the price increase was the desire to keep in step with off-campus restaurants. How much money does the University need to make from its housing facilities?

And now the charge for hot water. The manager of Owen Hall seemed outraged that mere students would be so presumptuous as to think that they could have some hot water for their tea bag.

Why can't the student bring in his own tea bag? There is a self-service system in Owen anyway, thereby entailing no added expense for the University. I pity the unfortunate graduate students housed at Owen who are unsuspecting lambs when they enroll here, having little or no knowledge of the area. The University gets them in a year contract and then soaks them. Some readers might go and look at the prices in Owen cafeteria.

Rationalizes Errors

To the Editor:

Regarding Mr. Beardsley's reflection in Monday's State News that "long lines are a sign of the times today."

People too many times fall into the depths of rationalization, Mr. Beardsley. This effort to protect misjudgment and inefficiency often leads to naive statements.

As far as we are concerned, efficiency, reliability and, above all, maturity in admitting mistakes are the real trends of our times. Not long lines.

Interaction Needed Here

Break out of the middle class cultural web! Chances are you fit this description: Joe Average was raised in one cultural environment. His friends share the same culture. Joe's high school teachers, Sunday School teachers, in short, the people who influence him, all come from the same culture.

Probably Joe will spend his adult years in suburbia, Bigcity or Smallburg, or wherever else he feels culturally a part. It naturally follows that he and his family will associate with people of similar values.

The college years are unique in that they afford the opportunity to associate with students of other lands -- different cultures and values -- thus greatly enriching one's life.

America is no isolated nation. Our position in the world makes it imperative that we understand people of other lands. Differences in values can be better understood by talking with someone of another culture than digging it out of a book.

Many foreign students complain that American magazines distort the truth about their countries. Although no source is without bias, it could be quite enlightening to hear all sides to the story.

Lack of communication hurts the foreign student too. He comes to America, has only classroom relationships with Americans, possibly gets false impressions about us (especially concerning morals and affluence). He returns to his country full of knowledge about building mechanical bridges, but remains unable to bridge the cultural gap.

The above picture isn't rosy, but it is true. Although over 1,000 foreign students attend MSU, little interaction takes place between Americans and foreigners. As the host it is up to the American students to take the initiative in meeting the foreigners. Most foreign students wish to meet Americans, but are shy about taking the initiative.

A foreign student not only can describe his own land, but he may even present a few insights into America that someone who has lived here all his life might never notice.

Many foreign-student organizations on campus give Joe the opportunity to meet students from other lands. If he would only realize how much more interesting his life could be...

New Indian Leader Faces Big Problems

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—The political formula evolved by the late Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri is likely to guide his successor in the months ahead.

Shastri's formula -- quiet conciliatory policies backed by a strong will -- may in fact be the only one that will work in India.

India's new leader, Prime Minister Gulzarilal Nanda, 67, is a much more forceful personality than was Shastri. A tough man, he delights in tough jobs.

But it is unlikely Nanda will be a tough leader. Shastri felt, and many of his critics agreed, that India needed unifying mediation more than a driving taskmaster.

Nanda is likely to follow this line, now that he must deal with India's many conflicting currents, such as different religions and languages. Supported by Nanda, Shastri smoothed over many domestic quarrels.

In foreign policy, Nanda appears to have little room for maneuver, even if he wanted to reverse trends.

Shastri committed India, 9 hours and 15 minutes before he died at Tashkent early Tuesday, to a search for peace with neighboring Pakistan.

Nanda announced India will honor the Tashkent declaration Shastri signed Monday with President Ayub Khan of Pakistan. India undoubtedly will stick to what it calls a nonaligned foreign policy. Nanda will permit the United States and the Soviet Union to continue aiding India's economy. But, as did Shastri, he will resist any attempt by either to influence India's policies.

A steady worsening of the economy and food position was one of Shastri's worst problems now inherited by Nanda.

The United States will be asked to continue its enormous aid to India, probably with stepped up shipments of wheat.

U.S. economic aid in India now totals more than $6 billion and wheat shipments average more than 20,000 tons a day. More will be requested.

It was Nanda who carried out the arrests of more than 1,100 Communists last year. He is likely to continue this firm policy.

A question mark is whether Nanda can do as well as his predecessor in holding together the ruling Congress party.

The party for years has been a unifying force in India but it has many factions.

At least three Congress leaders are known to aspire to India's leadership and if they do not give full support to Nanda there could be trouble.

They are Defense Minister Y.B. Chavan, rightist Morarji Desai and Information Minister Indira Gandhi, daughter of the late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru. At the moment there is no sign of a challenge from the three.

Official documents released refer to Nanda as "prime minister," a title he carried for weeks after Nehru died and before Shastri took over.

His willingness to step aside for Shastri gave him much prestige in Indian politics.

But some political leaders look with dismay at his fads. His entire diet, for example, consists of milk, fruit and half-cooked vegetables. They also do not care for his great attraction to astrology, which he says is scientific.

Peron Return Attempt Suspected

MADRID, Spain (AP)—Police at Barajas airport here have been told to watch outgoing flights because of rumors in Buenos Aires, Argentina, that exiled dictator Juan D. Peron may attempt a return to that country.

Police in Buenos Aires have been instructed to keep a watch at the airport there.

Peron, who is living in exile here, was seen Wednesday night in a Madrid cafe, sipping coffee. A reporter asked him about his wife, who is now in Argentina, and Peron replied: "I know she is doing well."

Hatfield Announces Senate Bid

SALEM, Ore. (UPI)—Oregon Republican Gov. Mark Hatfield, 43, declared Wednesday he is a candidate for the U.S. Senate seat being vacated by Democrat Maurine Neuberger.

The announcement came on his seventh anniversary as governor.

Hatfield, who has never been defeated in an election, entered politics in 1950 when he was elected a state representative. In 1958 he ousted Democrat incumbent Robert Holmes from the governorship. Hatfield was re-elected to a second four-year term in 1962. The Oregon constitution prohibits his seeking a third consecutive term as governor.

Thank You Notes Arrive

LANSING (UPI)—A flood of "thank you" letters—including one from Gen. William C. Westmoreland—is pouring into the executive office for the 7,500 Christmas packages sent to Michigan servicemen in Viet Nam.

Gov. George Romney said Westmoreland, commanding general of the United States Military Assistance Command, had written that "Operation Michigan Christmas in Viet Nam" had been a "tremendous success."

Shelepin Meets Cong King

MOSCOW (UPI)—Ace Kremlin diplomat Alexander N. Shelepin had a "comradely" meeting Wednesday with North Vietnamese leader Ho Chi Minh, the official Tass news agency reported. Tass, in a report from Hanoi, said the meeting was "cordial and comradely," but gave no hint of what was discussed.

Premier Pledges Strong Israel

JERUSALEM, Israeli Sector (AP)—Premier Levi Eshkol accuses the Arabs of trying to "change the map of the Middle East" and says Israel will continue to consolidate its military strength.

Presenting his new 18-member Cabinet to the Israeli Parliament today, Eshkol said: "A strong State of Israel is the first guarantee for the maintenance of peace in our area."

N.Y. Transit Tieup
Felt Across U.S.

NEW YORK (AP)—Thousands of businessmen across the nation who have never seen a New York subway are beginning to feel the economic squeeze of the city's 12-day-old transit strike.

In the nation's corporate headquarters here, letters to customers and branch offices lie untyped because secretaries can't get to work.

Goods lie on docks and in warehouses in this vast national distribution center.

A Denver trucker complains that it takes so long to get into Manhattan's traffic-clogged streets that businesses have already closed when his trucks arrive.

An Indianapolis freight handler says deliveries from New York are 48 hours late. A shipper in Richmond says ocean freight is being diverted to Hampton Roads from New York.

The garment industry, New York's largest, is hardest hit. "We don't have the people to get the shipments out of the warehouse," said an official of a national store chain.

More than 50,000 clothing workers in this fashion capital have been idle since the strike started New Year's Day. Garment industry officials estimate that only 40 per cent of clothes on order are being delivered to stores.

"If the strike goes into next week, it will threaten the big Easter clothing season," said Dick Leavy, manager of the New York Coat & Suit Association.

Many out-of-town customers can't deliver work to New York's 4,000 printing firms, which claim to handle about 20 per cent of the nation's commercial printing.

"We're losing $3 million a day," said a New York printing industry spokesman. "If it lasts much longer, a lot of people are going to be out of business."

The strike, following a string of other crises from the water shortage to the power blackout, is prompting some executives of national corporations to reconsider New York as a headquarters.

One official of a concern with yearly sales of billions of dollars says he is ready to propose that the corporation move its headquarters to Connecticut.

"One financial institution in the city is about to move 1,500 clerical workers out of the city," said Leonard Yaseen, a New York-based location consultant.

For New York itself, the impact of the strike already has been staggering—costing as much as $100 million a day, according to some estimates. Many workers, unable to get to work, have missed paydays. Many have exhausted their slim credit with neighborhood stores and landlords.

Not all business is bad. Bicycle sales in Manhattan have jumped sharply since the start of the strike.

Pakistan
Welcomes
New Pact

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP)—Pakistani papers generally welcomed today the Tashkent declaration signed by President Ayub Khan and the late Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri of India in an attempt to resolve their disputes. But an opposition politician called it a failure of Pakistani leadership.

Ayub briefed his Cabinet in a two-hour session on the final communiqué he signed with Shastri before the latter died of a heart attack Tuesday in the Soviet Asian city. Officials said the president informed the Cabinet of all aspects of his talks with Shastri.

In Karachi, Hasan A. Shaikh, an opposition member of the National Assembly, said the Tashkent agreement was "A total failure of Pakistan leadership and a triumph of the Indians."

India's refusal to discuss the question of a plebiscite in Kashmir or any other alternate plan "is an abject diplomatic failure of Pakistan," he said.

In Rawalpindi, the Daily Dawn said Ayub and Shastri "achieved as much as they could possibly be expected to do in the context of the existing state of Indo-Pakistan relations."

Yanks Seize Underground
Red War Room, Rice Cache

SAIGON (AP)—A massive U.S.-Australian drive northwest of Saigon began paying dividends Wednesday. New fighting brought guerrilla dead to 107 and Americans overrun what appeared to be an underground war room and seized a big rice cache.

U.S. officers showed satisfaction as the push against the Viet Cong Iron Triangle, 25 miles northeast of Saigon, entered its fifth day.

A U.S. military spokesman reported 23 additional Viet Cong were killed Tuesday in fighting on the rim of the triangle. Earlier fighting had killed 84 guerrillas.

There was little action elsewhere. But B52 heavy bombers from Guam plastered two areas in South Viet Nam, one 300 miles northeast of Saigon and the other west of Pleiku, 240 miles north of the capital, where the U.S. 1st Cavalry Airmobile Division is hunting the Viet Cong. The lull in the bombing of North Viet Nam continued into its 20th day.

The U.S. spokesman said 43 Americans were killed, 202 wounded and two missing or captured in the week. This was an increase over the 34 dead, 116 wounded and five missing reported last week. The Viet namese reported 118 of their soldiers killed and 73 missing. Viet Cong casualties were reported at 714 killed or captured.

Meanwhile, Saigon awaited the arrival of presidential envoy W. Averell Harriman for talks with Vietnamese leaders. He had been expected Wednesday but went from Australia to Bangkok, Thailand, instead.

In Bangkok, Harriman told reporters: "Everyone was impressed" by the fairness of Johnson's proposals.

While Radio Hanoi continues to assail Johnson's peace bid, the absence of any formal public rejection stirred some hope among congressmen in Washington that peace talks still might be held.

Also, on the diplomatic front, the United Arab Republic was reported pressing the drive of nonaligned nations to bring the Vietnamese war to the conference table.

Among messages sent out by President Gamal Abdel Nasser was one to Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia, but Ethiopian and U.A.R. sources declined to disclose its contents.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits and Rep. R. Ogden Reid, New York Republicans, arrived in Saigon on a congressional fact-finding mission.

Javits told a news conference Johnson's peace offensive was necessary because the American people demand the President "walk an extra mile" in search of peace in Viet Nam.

One of the points it noted were rules that provided among other things for a four-point scale of action—starting with telephoned threats of violence and ending with "extermination."

VISITING PROF CRITICAL

War Called Blunder

By BRAD SMITH
State News Staff Writer
"The war in Viet Nam is the most tragic blunder in recent American foreign policy. Every effort should be made to withdraw from this war at the soonest possible time."

This is what Foster Rhea Dulles, prominent historian and authority on American foreign policy, and cousin of former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, thinks of the current U.S.

stand in South East Asia. Dulles is a visiting professor this term from Ohio State University, where he is Professor of American History. He is now teaching History 836, "American Foreign Policy in East Asia from 1900." He is also writing a book on the history of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission of which MSU President John A. Hannah is chairman.

To explain why he was critical of the Viet Nam war, Dulles recalled the words of General Douglas MacArthur.

"General MacArthur once said that anybody who got bogged down in a land war in Asia was out of his head. That still holds true today."

"However, MacArthur also said that there was no substitute for victory, and I do believe that the present administration is involved in a very sincere effort to bring about negotiations."

Beckwith involved in Probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—The name of Byron De La Beckwith, accused of slaying a Mississippi civil rights leader, was injected Wednesday into a congressional investigation of the Ku Klux Klan.

Fuzzy Facial Flowers On Beatle Ringo

LONDON (AP)—Ringo Starr sported a beard Wednesday as he flew with his wife and another Beatle and wife for a 10-day Caribbean vacation.

"It's just that I haven't been working, and I haven't had time to shave," explained the one who plays the drums. "I hate shaving anyway. Now I'm on holiday and I don't have to shave. I shan't be shaving while I'm away."

The other Beatle was the song-writing one, John Lennon. He was clean-shaven.

"I tried it once," Lennon said. "That was in Tahiti, but the itching! It drove me mad."

The Story Of A MSU Idea That Became A Viet Reality

Coeds Spark Drive To Aid Small Village

By GEORGE TAYLOR
State News Staff Writer

Banners are flying today in the small South Vietnamese village of Long Yen, thanks to the efforts of two senior coeds who came up with an idea last spring—and worked on it.

The girls, Judith Rice of Greenville, and Karen Radom of Birmingham, told a story of bringing a market place and medical clinic to help the villagers through the MSU People to People Association.

People to People, formed last spring, has an identity of its own on campus and should not be confused with the national association under the same name.

The village of Long Yen was originally established some years ago as the central market place to serve the surrounding Tay Ninh Province. It is situated about 60 miles northwest of Saigon, 20 miles from the Cambodian border.

The girls said that the villagers were too poor to build a market place, which severely limited the amount of produce that could be handled from the surrounding villages.

But in the last several months, MSUPPA gathered funds totaling $1,000 to build the much-needed facilities.

The bulk of the fund-raising took place last spring during Vice President Hubert Humphrey's visit to campus.

The association raised an additional $499 by selling Rose Bowl programs to Pasadena-bound Spartan fans. Several campus organizations and individual students also contributed to the Viet Nam effort.

This project, initiated by MSU students, is the first of its kind on any campus.

"There is a possibility," said Miss Radom, "that the new marketplace, which was completed in October, will quadruple the economy of the village. So, it will help them in the future by providing everyone with a little more income."

Besides the market place, MSUPPA has sent two boys from the village to high school, and provided them with scholarships to cover the small tuition fee, books, lunches and transportation. The high school is located in Tay Ninh City, Miss Rice said.

She said, "For approximately $35 you can pay all the costs of attending high school in South Viet Nam. We are helping these boys to get through school, hoping that when they finish they will remain in the village and help others with their additional knowledge."

Presently, the association is completing a small medical center in the village. Until now, Long Yen has had only one small room for the ill, which is far from adequate to meet the needs of the peasants, Miss Rice said.

"The room was very small, only eight by eight, and it had only one bed," she explained.

"There was only one midwife to handle the maternity cases, but she did not know how to care for the seriously ill."

"Religious attitudes," continued Miss Rice, "keep many from leaving the village to obtain treatment, because they believe that if they die away from home they will not go to heaven. So, for lack of local medical facilities, many people go untreated."

The project began last winter when several students, including Miss Radom and Miss Rice, decided they could do something economically for the peoples of underdeveloped countries. South Viet Nam was chosen because of the great hardships on the people brought about by the war.

In the fall of 1964, before they decided to go ahead with their plans, Wesley Fisher, professor of political science, went to South Viet Nam to study the people's needs. When he returned, according to Miss Radom, he brought back a list from several villages of what the people felt they needed most.

Long Yen was chosen and the association began to raise funds for the market place, scholarships for high school students and the medical center.

MSUPPA then sent an invitation to Vice President Humphrey and Carl Rowan, former head of the U.S. Information Agency, to come to the campus and launch a kickoff campaign.

Although South Viet Nam was selected for this operation, MSUPPA is not assisting the United States military role in Southeast Asia, Miss Rice said.

"The organization is not political," said Miss Radom. "It never takes an organizational stand on the war. We have members in our organization who are for the administration, against the administration and neutral."

"Also," said Miss Radom, "the purpose of MSUPPA is to help the Vietnamese people themselves. It is to help them build their life for themselves. We are not contributing to the war effort."

What is in the future for MSUPPA? If the current project is a complete success in this village another building program will probably be started in another village, according to Miss Radom.

"We hope to finish up our work in this village and move somewhere else after they have reached the point where they can build their own economy," she said. "Whether this will be to another village in Viet Nam or a village somewhere in South America or Africa, we don't know right now."

"HEY, WHO'S THE YANK?" -- Dale Pfeiffer, Riverside, N.J. graduate student, in the midst of Long Yen, MSU's adopted Vietnamese hamlet. Pfeiffer visited the village on his rounds for the United States Overseas Mission.

EXCHANGE PROFESSOR

Rumanian Likes MSU

Dimitru Chitoran, visiting professor from the University of Bucharest, Rumania, is teaching at MSU through spring term under a cultural exchange program sponsored jointly by Rumania and the United States.

"I taught English at the University of Bucharest," Chitoran said, "and it was thought advisable to send someone familiar with your language to participate in this program."

Chitoran will teach two classes in Rumanian language and literature this term. "I was surprised that there was any interest in the Rumanian language here," he said. "Michigan State can be proud of its record in promoting international studies."

Chitoran said he could excellent facilities for instruction and study on the campus. "There are also many good facilities for research, and I think the library here is good."

Rumanian college campuses differ radically from their counterparts in America, he said, with most students commuting to classes and a good percentage receiving financial aid from scholarships.

"Students from the provinces live in 'student hostels'," he said, "which are very similar to your dormitories, though not as large."

"In Rumania, lectures are held on the same basis as they are here, but language classes number only about 10 students," he said.

Chitoran said that there is a growing demand for English instruction in foreign schools. "The English instruction department has grown large at the University of Bucharest," he said.

"East Lansing is different than the stereotyped American image we have in Europe," he said. "We imagine cities to be noisy, smoky places where things are always in turmoil."

"But here it is relatively quiet and a good atmosphere to study," he said.

"I haven't seen many demonstrations or protests," he said, "but it is natural for students to have their own activities."

"They are a vital part of society and contribute greatly to the social life of the community," he said.

Fertility Enzyme Discovered Here

Problems of infertility may be closer to a solution due to a recent discovery by two MSU scientists.

Harold D. Hafs, dairy scientist, and Kenneth Kirton, graduate student in reproduction physiology, believe they have isolated the enzyme which activates a sperm cell, making it capable of fertilization. Working with rabbits, the pair were able to activate a sperm for the first time in a test tube.

The sperm is normally unable to fertilize until after it has been in the reproductive tract of a rabbit for from six to eight hours. By collecting secretions from a rabbit uterus, Hafs and Kirton activated the sperm after incubating it in the fluid. The capacitated sperm was then put into the female rabbit's reproductive tract where it fertilized the egg.

This basic research may eventually be applied to human problems of infertility or contraception, Kirton said. An infertile couple may be helped to have children through addition of the enzyme, while an overly fertile couple may desire to have the enzyme removed from the reproductive tract.

Hafs and Kirton are currently using dairy cows to test their theories.

"We have found that only 70 to 72 per cent of all dairy cows conceive on the first artificial insemination," Kirton explained. "Since an egg must be fertilized within about a 12-hour period, we are hoping that addition of the enzyme might capacitate the bull's semen and have it ready for fertilization in a much shorter period of time."

Sparrow Hospital officials said Miss Huber is regaining consciousness after a four-day coma but is still unable to communicate clearly.

India's New Chief May Face Foes

NEW DELHI, India (AP)—India's leaders began preparations for a new political era hours after a sacred fire of Hindu cremation consumed the body Wednesday of Lal Bahadur Shastri before the eyes of a mourning mass of countrymen.

New Delhi buzzed with reports of political maneuvering, and Shastri's immediate successor as prime minister, Gulzarilal Nanda, conferred with political advisers, Nanda faced possible challenges to his leadership.

A crowd estimated to number a million or more jammed the funeral route and the side of the holy Jumna River to witness Shastri's cremation. The funeral appeared as large as that of Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru in May 1964.

At a vantage point near the pyre stood U.S. Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

"The world mourns the loss of a statesman who died serving the statesman's noblest cause—the cause of world peace," Humphrey said in a eulogy later at a ceremony conducted by foreign dignitaries in New Delhi.

Kosygin came to New Delhi from Tashkent, in Soviet Asia, where Shastri died, apparently of a heart attack, early Tuesday. Kosygin had presided over a conference aimed at restoring peace between India and neighboring Pakistan.

President Kumaraswami Kamaraj of the ruling Congress party scheduled a meeting for Thursday to pay Shastri respect. And this will give him an opportunity to assess the political maneuvering.

Shastri, who answered the question, "After Nehru Who?" never clearly indicated who his political heir should be.

But Nanda was Shastri's workhorse and, probably, one of his closest collaborators. Nanda is expected to benefit from this.

There was talk that a challenge might come from Defense Minister Y.B. Chavan, a professional politician strong in the important Bombay area and a known aspirant for power.

Information Minister Indira Gandhi, Nehru's daughter, was being watched for signs that she might be gathering support for a power bid from the party's left wing.

Morarji Desai, former finance minister and a member of the party's right wing, was considered a dark horse candidate. He was the first to publicly express hope for a smooth transition period.

At stake immediately is Shastri's seat as leader of his party's huge majority in Parliament. The majority leader is asked to form a new government.

Nanda, as senior Cabinet member, automatically took over as prime minister under the constitution. But no law guarantees him the party leadership also.

There appeared to be considerable sentiment, however, that Nanda, 67, has earned a term as prime minister, at least until next year's general elections.

There was fear, also, that open political warfare would destroy what perhaps was Shastri's most important legacy to his party and nation: a new unity and stability.

Although there was political shuffling, there appeared little chance of any major change in Shastri's basic foreign or economic policies.

Shastri probably was most successful, however, as a mediator of India's many internal quarrels and a middle-roader who could at least mend his party's many splits.

The farewell given him indicated this 5-foot-2, 110-pound man also won India's heart.

At one point, the surging crowd moved in front of Humphrey's car, preventing it from following the gun carriage bearing Shastri's body.

A bare, dusty flatland on a bank of the holy Jumna River was the destination of the cortege. There, near the cremation sites of Nehru and India's beloved Mohandas K. Gandhi, Shastri was cremated in accordance with his religion, Hinduism.

MSU Cited For Overseas AID Program

MSU has been selected by the Education and World Affairs, an international education organization, as one of the leading American universities in service programs overseas.

The EWA said that the international activities at MSU have helped make MSU a university of national stature and worldwide recognition. Among the activities offered have been its African, Asian and Latin American Studies Center and its work with the U.S. Agency for International Development and other foundations to help educational institutions in various countries.

In addition, MSU has created international institutes in various fields of study to promote research and aid curriculum development in these fields. Presently, MSU is a member of the Midwest Universities Consortium for International Activities, an organization which initiates projects in Peru and Thailand.

MSU's Office of International Programs, created in 1956, was the first attempt by an American university to formally organize development of its international activities.

Shastri probably was most successful, however, as a mediator of India's many internal quarrels and a middle-roader who could at least mend his party's many splits.

Following Spartan Track: Coach's Decision Rockets Curtis

See How They Run, Run... Unselfish Play Hurt Captain In Pre-Season

By ROBERTA YAFIE
State News Sports Writer

The Spartan trackmen rancidles around State's cage squad Wednesday afternoon in Jenison Field House.

It's nothing new for the cindermen, who are getting set for the start of their indoor season. The '66 opener is Jan. 29 at Ohio State.

It doesn't look like much work, being a trackman. They just sort of jog around and around the stands, with a few off to the side, tossing the shot or vaulting easily into a foam rubber bed.

As the afternoon progresses,

Gene Washington will set up his hurdles and go through his paces while Coach Fran Ditttrich walks around with clipboard in hand and Jim Gibbard, his assistant, keeps punching his stop watch as he bellows runners' times.

Pretty average.

A few fellows like Washington and Dwight Lee and Jess Phillips, who've been in top shape all fall, being occupied with football, may have some easier going. The same can be said for the corps of cross-country runners that form a solid nucleus in the distance department.

Hardly.

Compared to other sports, track can be one of the most grueling on mind and body alike. One wonders what they think about as they run quarter after quarter.

"Conditioning," said Jim Garrett, Big Ten outdoor long jump champ. "I jog around a couple of times and think about what I'm going to do," Washington said. "In hurdling, the whole thing goes so fast that you don't have much time to really think about anything. You just sort of think to win.

"Being able to come to State and play football and run track is so great, as far as I'm concerned, that winning is the thing. And so I concentrate on that," he said, as he went through some easy sit-ups.

Gene made way for Keith Anderson transferred to Michigan State from NCAA champion Iowa State last winter, he had great expectations about his future at his new school. He did not, however, count on being a near-permanent fixture in the office of team physician, Dr. James Feurig.

Anderson, who first became eligible for varsity competition this term, suffered one more discouraging injury last week, when a bone spur in his arm was broken during practice.

Coach Grady Peninger is crossing his fingers in hopes of Anderson's recovery in time for this Saturday's meet against Ohio State. Anderson has the doctor's permission to work out, but if the pain does not let up, Pen-inger may have to wait still another week to debut his star 137-pounder.

Anderson's potential value to the Spartan lineup was shown in the Midlands tourney, Dec. 29-30, when he wrestled unattached and finished second to teammate Don Behm at 130. Shortly afterwards, Peninger moved sophomore Dale Carr from 137 to 147, to make room for Anderson on the State team.

It was Anderson's former school, Iowa State, that won that Midlands Tournament, and Anderson was quick to point out his many reasons for transferring from the national championship wrestling team to Michigan State.

"MSU offers me much better educational opportunities," he explained. "I'm interested in political science and history, and

Before the Big Ten season opened, MSU basketball coach John Benington told Bill Curtis, "Shoot or you don't play."

Well, Bill Curtis is shooting now and it is quite obvious that he is playing. The 6-4 captain has scored 23 and 27 points, respectively, in State's first two conference games and has taken over as a leader.

Usually a player is told that he is shooting too much, but in pre-league games Curtis was passing up too many shots. Benington knew that this had to stop.

"He is the best shot on the team and we need him shooting at least 15 times a game," Benington said. Curtis has hit a phenomenal 57 per cent of his shots this year.

Benington said Curtis' high percentage comes from his fine touch and good judgment. "He doesn't shoot beyond his jump shot range (20-22 feet) and that he didn't want to upset the offensive patterns.

Curtis offered a lack of confidence force bad shots. He also uses the backboard real well as all great shooters do.

The coach figured Curtis' lack of shooting could have been just from the fact that he was in a rut, or maybe Curtis felt he should pass more since he was captain. Or it could have been confidence as the main reason for his decreased shooting. "Last year I played center and I could rely on speed to get my shots away. Now, at forward, I am against quicker defenders and it took a while for me to adjust."

"It also takes a while to get warmed up, but now I feel confident and am taking the shots when I get them," he said. "My shots will level out to about 18 a game."

(Curtis hit 10 of 19 against Minnesota and 12 of 17 against Purdue.)

Regardless of the reason, Benington had Curtis working all of last week on his shooting and his one-on-one moves. And the results of this effort are showing.

The senior from Grand Rapids likes to think that defense is the best part of his game. Benington said that Curtis' defense has improved, but that he is still only good—not great.

"He is too cautious on defense and doesn't like to let his man get by him, so he doesn't gamble as much as he should," he said. "But he is a good, strong jumper which makes him tough on the defensive boards."

Since the beginning of the year, Curtis has emerged as the team leader, Benington said. "He has had a tough job since there are so many new players this year, but they all respect him. If I'm late for practice, Bill starts them on warm-up drills anyway."

Commenting on the Big Ten race, Curtis feels that State has as good a chance as any team.

"The team has a strong desire to win. We feel we should win, and want to prove we're not a last place team," he said. Last year the Spartans finished in the conference cellar with a 1-13 mark.

"The team is comparable to the football team in its hustle and desire," Curtis said. "And in the pride in its defense, too. Because everyone is so aggressive on defense, if we gamble and miss, we can expect help from someone else."

When it comes to pro ball, Curtis has no desire to play in the National Basketball Assn. "I couldn't get prepared mentally for all the games when playing becomes a job."

"In the pros they just throw the ball up at the basket every day. But many games are won before they are played—in mental preparation."

A biochemistry major, Bill plans to get a job in his major field after graduation, possibly teaching.

Bill Curtis—"a gentleman in everything he does and everywhere he goes," says his coach --and a fabulous shooter.

ROMAN IN THE GLOAMIN'

Now as the end of the first semester draws near, one fact emerges clearly: you are all going to flunk out of school.

There are two things you can do about it. First, you can marry money. (I don't mean you marry the money itself; I mean you marry a person who has money. Weddings between people and currency have not been legal anywhere in the United States since the Smoot-Hawley Act. Personna Stainless Steel Blades, on the other hand, are legal everywhere and are, indeed, used with great pleasure and satisfaction in all fifty states of the Union and Duluth. I bring up Personna Stainless Steel Blades because this column is sponsored by the makers of Personna Stainless Steel Blades, and they are inclined to get edgy if I omit to mention their product. Some of them get edgy and some get double-edgy because Personna Blades come both in Injector style and Double Edge style.)

But I digress. I was saying you can marry money but, of course, you will not because you are a high-minded, clean-living, pure-hearted, freckle-faced American kid. Therefore, to keep from flunking, you must try the second method: you must learn how to take lecture notes.

According to a recent survey, eleven out of ten American undergraduates do not know the proper way to take lecture notes. To illustrate this appalling statistic, let us suppose you are taking a course in history. Let us further suppose the lecturer is lecturing on the ruling houses of England. You listen intently. You write diligently in your notebook, making a topic outline as you have been taught. Like this:

- I. House of Plantagenet.
- II. House of Lancaster.
- III. House of York.

Then you stop. You put aside your pen. You blink back a tear, for you cannot go on. Oh, yes, you know very well that the next ruling house is the House of Tudor. The trouble is you don't know the Roman numeral that comes after III.

It may, incidentally, be of some comfort to learn that you are not the only people who don't know Roman numerals. The fact is, the Romans never knew them either. Oh, I suppose they could tell you how much V or X were or like that, but when it came to real zingers like LXI or MMC, they just flung away their styluses and went downtown to have a bath or take in a circus or maybe stab Caesar a few times.

You may wonder why Rome stuck with these ridiculous numerals when the Arabs had such a nice, simple system. Well, sir, the fact is that Emperor Vespasian tried like crazy to buy the Arabic numerals from Suleiman The Magnificent, but Suleiman wouldn't do business—not even when Vespasian raised his bid to 100,000 gold piastres, plus he offered to throw in the Colosseum, the Appian Way, and Technicolor.

So Rome stuck with Roman numerals—to its sorrow, as it turned out. One day in the Forum, Cicero and Pliny got to arguing about how much is CDL times MVIX. Well, sir, pretty soon everyone in town came around to join the hassle. In all the excitement, nobody remembered to lock the north gate and—wham! before you could say ars longa—in rushed the Goths, the Visigoths, and the Green Bay Packers!

Well, sir, that's the way the empire crumbles, and I digress. Let's get back to lecture notes. Let's also say a word about Burma Shave. Why? Because Burma Shave is made by the makers of Personna Blades who, it will be recalled, are the sponsors of this column. They are also the sponsors of the ultimate in shaving luxury. First coat your kisser with Burma Shave, regular or menthol—or, if you are the devil-may-care sort, some of each. Then whisk off your stubble with an incredibly sharp, unbelievably durable Personna Blade, Injector or Double Edge—remembering first to put the blade in a razor. The result: facial felicity, cutaneous cheer, epidermal elysium. Whether you shave every day, every III days, or every VII, you'll always find Personna and Burma Shave a winning combination.

Personnam amo, Tom Personnam amat, Dick Personnam amat, Harry Personnam amat, quique Personnam amat—et quoque amabit.

Opportunity comes early at Ford Motor Company. Graduates who join us are often surprised at how quickly they receive personal assignments involving major responsibilities. This chance to demonstrate individual skills contrasts sharply with the experience of many young people entering the business world for the first time. At Ford Motor Company, for example, a graduate may initiate a project and carry it through to its final development. One who knows is David Tenniswood, of our research staff.

Dave joined Ford Motor Company in July, 1961.

Assigned to our steering and controls section, he helped develop a revolutionary steering system that will facilitate driving in future Ford-built cars. Currently a design engineer working on suspension design and analysis, Dave has been impressed by the extent to which management encourages personal initiative among recent graduates like himself. Here, management looks immediately to young engineers, like Dave, for fresh concepts that reflect their academic training and special abilities. Moreover, when the idea is accepted for development, the initiator is frequently given the opportunity to see the job through—from drawing board to production line!

The experience of Dave Tenniswood is not unusual. Ford Motor Company believes that early incentive is fundamental to individual growth and a successful career. If you are interested in a job that challenges your abilities and rewards enterprise, we urge you to contact our representative when he visits your campus.

S-T-R-E-T-C-H -- Spartan netminder Jerry Fischer does the splits in efforts to stop a shot on goal. Fischer takes turns with Gaye Cooley and Larry Roche in filling the hockey "hot-spot."

Goal-Tending Threesome 'Saves The Day' For State

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

It is generally conceded in most hockey circles around the country that the success of any team greatly hinges on the quality of its goal-tender.

Here, too, on the MSU hockey scene, such a belief is held to be true. Even though his team presently has a 4-7 record and a 3-5 mark in the Western Collegiate Hockey League, Coach Amo Bessone relates the Spartans' recent winning surge back to the performances of his goalies.

"We've gotten good work from all of our goalies," said Bessone following the Spartans' four wins in their last seven games after having dropped their first four games of the year.

Nearing the mid-way point of the skaters' 25-game schedule, Bessone has split the net duties between two of his three goalies. Junior Jerry Fischer and sophomore Gaye Cooley have been sharing the goalie spot on alternating nights, while another sophomore, Larry Roche, has appeared in two games.

Fischer presently leads the Spartans' goalie staff with an average of 3.6 goals per game. In four games, Fischer has allowed 14 goals, but he has put a stop to 135 shots, fifth highest in the league.

Not far behind is Cooley, who has compiled a 3.8 average in five games. He has given up 19 goals and has prevented 131 shots from entering the Spartan net.

The NEWS In

SPORTS

Cooley gained an extra game over Fischer when he entered the Colorado College game after Fischer was hit in the forehead by a puck in the overtime period. Cooley was only in the nets a few minutes before he gave up Colorado's winning goal by John Genz.

"It was not Cooley's fault," commented Bessone. "He did a good job. The blame really goes to our defense for not clearing the puck."

State's goalie squad will be back intact this weekend when they face Minnesota here at the Ice Arena Friday and Saturday night.

Roche, who only this week was declared eligible after clearing up some credit difficulties, will also be ready in case either Fischer or Cooley can't play.

Last weekend against Colorado, the situation almost arose where State found itself without a goalie. Cooley was knocked out of the game after stopping a shot in the abdomen and it looked as if the Spartans would have all three of their goalies riding the bench.

"If need be, I could have pressed into service one of our defensemen," said Bessone. "But Fischer was feeling all right, so I put him in."

'UNFAIR TO HEAD RAMS'

Bears Sue To Keep Coach

CHICAGO (UPI) -- Football Coach George Allen contended in court Wednesday his skills were not so "unique" that the Chicago Bears could not obtain a replacement for him or that he would have an unfair advantage as coach of the Los Angeles Rams.

His answer was filed before Circuit Court Judge Cornelius J. Harrington on a suit by the Bears for a temporary injunction to force him to complete the two years remaining on his contract with the Bears.

Allen had agreed to coach the Rams at a salary estimated to be at least twice the $19,000 paid him by the Bears.

Part of the Bears suit was based upon two clauses in his contract, one describing the "unique" talents which he holds and another authorizing immediate injunction in any court of law to prevent him from taking those talents elsewhere.

Allen's attorney, Albert E. Jenner, who was a member of the Warren Commission and is a vice president of the American Bar Association, declared that both of these clauses should be declared void as a matter of public policy in the court.

"He was not in any position to negotiate," Jenner told Harrington.

The Bears attorney, Charles Short, declared that Allen would furnish unfair competition to the Bears as coach of the Rams because of his knowledge of Bears game plans, formations, and defenses.

"Let us turn to this red herring of football defense manuals," Jenner said. "Allen doesn't want them and the Bears can have them. What Allen has in his head, he has and he's going to be able to get it out."

Harrington questioned whether these would come under the category of trade secrets and Jenner replied: "There is no trade secret in this game."

Jenner cited the National Football League constitution and by-laws as well as paragraphs from Allen's Bears contract which provided expressly that disputes under the contract shall be submitted to the NFL commissioner as the sole and exclusive arbitrator.

He contended the dispute between Allen and the Bears should be decided by Commissioner Peter Rozelle of the NFL before either party should take legal recourse. He pointed out the constitution says the commissioner's decision shall be final, binding and unappealable. Jenner said that Halas had given permission to Allen to negotiate with the Rams for the head coaching job and said "Then Mr. Halas wretched."

"Once he obtained the job," he said, "Halas sought to retract."

The Rams announced two days ago that Allen had been signed as head coach, but they haven't talked since. Allen flew back to Chicago for the hearing and said he was "stunned" to learn of Halas' action.

One-Platoon Football Rejected By NCAA

WASHINGTON (UPI)--The National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) firmly turned thumbs down Wednesday on a proposal that football go back to the one-platoon system.

With only a minimum of discussion, delegates to the 60th annual NCAA convention voted to table a resolution by the University of New Mexico that limited substitution be written into the college rules.

The tabling motion by Michigan Athletic Director Fritz Crisler was adopted by voice vote

Technically, the NCAA Rules Committee, which meets in New Orleans this weekend, could consider the one-platoon proposal but the overwhelming vote of the convention made it clear that the move was doomed.

In addition, the rules committee of the American Football Coaches Association voted 23-1 this week against any major rule change for next season.

Earlier the NCAA voted to impose a minimum average of C-minus on athletic scholarship recipients, thereby alienating the academically pure Ivy League.

MSU Tuition Tops Average

MSU held the line on tuition last year but still tops the average of state universities and land grant colleges by $13 for in-state and $136 for out-of-state students.

According to an Office of Institutional Research survey of members of the National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, median in-state tuition at these institutions has risen 5.4 per cent this year, from $295 to $311. Out-of-state tuition is up 19.9 per cent, from a median of $612 to $734.

MSU in-state tuition remained unchanged at $324, for in-state and $870 for out-state students per year.

Tuition at MSU was raised from $279 to the present $324 in 1963. The increase was made because the Michigan legislature made a short appropriation for that year. The deficit was made up by increasing tuition.

The budget for MSU has been adjusted to compensate for the 1963 tuition hike, and no tuition increase has been proposed by the Board of Trustees to date.

Among the 25 state and land grant universities which have kept charges steady this year in addition to MSU are Indiana University, Purdue University, University of Minnesota, Rutgers University and Ohio University, according to the survey.

A few member universities actually lowered tuition this year. At Pennsylvania State University in-state tuition fees were reduced to $150 per term beginning winter term.

The University of Hawaii also lowered fees. A $14 reduction was effected by substituting a flat $36 general fee for a series of specific fees.

Highest in-state tuition fees are charged mostly by Eastern schools. They include University of Vermont, Cornell, Rutgers University, University of Virginia, and Kent State University.

Seven universities are now charging more than $1,000 out-of-state tuition fees. They are the University of Michigan, University of Virginia, University of Wisconsin, University of Colorado, University of New Hampshire, Pennsylvania State University and the University of Vermont.

AMONG GRAD STUDENTS

More Mental Health Cases

By PAT BOGER
State News Staff Writer

There has been a 50 per cent increase in the number of graduate students with mental health problems in the last few years. "Most of the cases at the mental hygiene clinic of the health center are graduate students," said Barbara E. Boger, a psychiatric social worker at Olin Health Center.

Miss Boger, speaking at a luncheon of the Faculty Women Association, said cases range from the mild neurosis to psychosis.

"Fifty per cent of our cases are referred from doctors on the staff at the health center," Miss Boger said. "More of our cases are psychosomatic and organic which need mental help other than the student services mental health clinic."

Students who come to the center looking for help with roommate, family or scholastic problems make up about 35 per cent of the cases.

"Fifteen per cent of the students are referred from departments on campus, especially the dean of students," she said. "These are usually behavioral or disciplinary problems."

The clinic deals with problems such as unwed mothers, tranquilizers and suicides.

Many girls who are unwed mothers are referred to the mental clinic.

"The exact number of girls who are pregnant is not known," Miss Boger said, "but on the whole we are getting more than in the past."

Tranquilizers are a big problem on campus. Many students get these drugs from their parents, she said.

"Michigan State does not have a great number of suicides, but there are some attempts and threats," she said.

The clinic is on call 24 hours, but students do not stay there very long.

Treatment has to be voluntary by the student or else any attempt by the staff will not help.

Mansfield Says No Tax Increase

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield predicted Wednesday that the United States will be able to finance both the administration's domestic programs and Viet Nam War without a tax increase.

The Montanan also voiced hope that, "with some belt tightening," the federal budget deficit may even be reduced.

He was asked in an interview to comment on speculation that President Johnson will recommend tax increases in his budget to be submitted late this month and that Congress will authorize the hikes.

"My best belief is that there will be no tax increase," Mansfield said. "I anticipate - in view of the sound nature of the nation's economy and of production increases due in part to the war in Viet Nam - that the tax intake of the government will increase to such an extent that there should be no need for new taxes this year."

"I anticipate that, as of now - and I stress as of now - there is a good possibility with some belt tightening the national budget deficit this year will be less than last year," Mansfield said.

With reference to statements by Republicans that funds for parts of the administration's "Great Society" program will have to be tapped to finance the war, Mansfield said: "I believe that we can have both. However, I do not think that we should go beyond the President's recommended appropriations as we did in the past year."

Mansfield noted that for some programs Congress appropriated more money than was requested by Johnson last year.

"Where we did this," Mansfield said, "I hope that the President, in his wisdom, will see fit not to use the extra funds."

Local SNCC Asks Clothing For Needy

MSU students are being asked to send clothes to needy Mississippi Delta tenant farmers. The MSU chapter of the Student Non-violent co-ordinating Committee (SNCC) is sponsoring the drive in an effort to aid Negroes seeking voter registration in Mississippi, said Sandra Jenkins, MSU chapter president and Birmingham, Ala., junior.

Students wishing to donate clothes should call 337-1587 for pickup or deliver in person at 534 Albert Ave.

"The need for clothing is urgent," Miss Jenkins said, "because many people have lost their jobs during SNCC voter registration drives and have been forced into a situation where they must be helped immediately or suffer greatly for seeking the basic right to vote."

New Zeitgeist An 'Improvement'

By ANDY MAREIN
State News Staff Writer

Zeitgeist's second edition is generally an improvement over its first. Except for the editorial, most of the contributions range from readable to enjoyable.

The editorial is smug and arrogant, tries to offend everyone, and is successful. With a few deft sweeps of a mimeograph machine it obliterates everything and then states the position of the editors: "Nihil est bonum." Unfortunately, much of the content is worthwhile, despite the editors' protests that nothing is worthwhile.

"Earthlier Happy" by Chris Antonides deals with the tragedy of a lonely tenement dweller. It is a well written, powerful story that moves in a straight line, building quickly to a shocking climax.

"Truth, Goodness, Pre-marital Sex, and the Bomb, or How I came to college and learned how to worry..." by Jane Adams, is an effectively written narrative.

It tells the story of a coed who becomes aware of the world around her. She becomes intellectually enlightened in spite of the protests of her narrow-minded parents, tests and her own pessimism and concludes:

"...to be alive means to be able to understand many things, and that although, at first, only the bizarre seems to stare out, it is just that we have not yet grown to know the joy of this new beauty, this facing truthfulness: this all of life."

"The Laugh Inside" by Susan Ruth Reese is more a series of images than a short story. The piece, about the "awakening" of a girl, fails to move fast enough to hold the readers' attention. The story seems overworked, though it has some beautiful lines.

For example: "Then it was us in the now of forever lying under the willow back from the dock, looking at the boat tied and unfurled and waiting to catch breath for another trip."

The poetry in this edition is spotty in quality. Some of it is quite good. Some, not worth reading.

The first poem in the book, by Alan J. McBeth successfully carries through a single meaningful image and gets the point across. Carrying out of a single image is done less successfully in the rest of McBeth's poetry.

Blind Students Lead Near-Normal Lives

There are currently 15 blind students enrolled at MSU and nearly all of them are maintaining a 3.0 average or better.

Contrary to the opinion that a person without sight is severely limited in choosing a career, blind people are known to be working in a wide variety of occupations, including those requiring a college degree.

There are blind lawyers, schoolteachers, social workers, engineers, factory employees and radio announcers. There is even one unusual case of a blind physicist.

Of course, for professions such as law, which require a college education, the sightless person may find college life a little more challenging than those with sight. But, he is usually aware of this problem and will in most instances work harder in college to compensate.

The added hours a blind student must spend on his studies are necessary because his textbooks are almost always read aloud to him by members of various organizations on campus. The reading is, therefore, slower because the reader must pronounce each word as opposed to silent reading where the student often scans the pages to reduce the reading time.

Close observation of a sightless person reveals that he has many of the same problems common to everyone. Like his sighted counterpart, for example, a blind man is concerned about the clothes he wears and how he is seen by others. Although he cannot make a distinction between black and white, he will usually ask a friend to tell him if a shirt blends in with a pair of pants or a tie.

Although he sees with his senses of smell, touch, taste and hearing what others see with their eyes, a blind person has many characteristics in common with others. He will often go to movies, football games, attend dances and other social functions, and often has an assortment of hobbies, including amateur radio and auto mechanics.

He will frequently take part in sports such as bowling, swimming, water skiing, track events and wrestling. In fact, the Michigan School for the Blind in Lansing has an athletic program which includes wrestling, bowling, swimming and track. The wrestling team at MSB competes with other high schools throughout the state and has won several state team championships.

Many of the blind students who have enrolled at MSU will sign up for courses in wrestling, bowling and swimming.

It would be a mistake to assume that a blind person does not have any problems which are unique to other members of society. However, in most cases he has found ways of solving, in part at least, nearly all difficulties which confront him.

Strange as it may seem, one of the greatest problems facing a blind man is that so many people do not understand what he is capable of doing for himself.

Many sighted observers are amazed when they see blind people walking along the sidewalk. The question is asked: "How does he keep from running into things? How does he know where he is going?"

The method used by most blind people when traveling is called obstacle perception. This means the sound created from shoes striking the sidewalk bounces off objects such as trees and parked automobiles, back to his ears.

It can be compared to an echo of sound bouncing off the walls of a cave when a person yells. A similar effect can be created by holding a large piece of cardboard a few inches away at face level, and making a clicking noise with the mouth. Then, by making the same sound with the cardboard moved away, there should be a difference in the sound.

All people have the hearing capability for picking out these sound differences, doctors say. But a blind person, because he must depend heavily on his hearing to make up for the absence of sight, has trained his hearing to detect these differences more easily. In fact, a blind person can detect the sound bouncing off a wall up to 50 feet away.

The added number of buses and automobiles on campus would seem to pose a serious problem for blind people when crossing streets. However, just as hearing is important while walking, it is equally helpful at busy intersections. A person without sight listens to the flow of traffic. When he hears the cars moving in the direction in which he is facing, this tells him the light is in his favor for crossing the street.

Where there is no traffic light, he listens for a pause in the sound made by the passing vehicles before crossing.

Hearing is perhaps the most important of the senses to a blind person.

Those without sight spend their free time in much the same manner as others. They read magazines printed in braille, a systematic arrangement of raised dots to form the letters of the alphabet.

Other activities include playing card games with brailled decks, checkers and chess.

They also depend heavily on the radio and television to keep pace with world events.

COMPUTER GOOFS

British Brewer Boo-Booze

BURTON UPON TRENT, England — Burton, home of British brewing, is suffering a shortage of beer.

What's a shortage? It's a combination of shortage and surfeit, which is what's hit Burton now that computers have taken over from people.

Half the town's pubs have run dry, while its biggest brewery is busily pouring barrels of beer by the thousand into the public drains.

The trouble started with a computer employed to estimate demand for the Christmas and New Year trade.

The oracle guessed wrong to the tune of two million imperial pints, worth $700,000 at bar prices. All has to be poured away.

The brewery — Bass — started at the operation in sorrowful silence. For awhile it denied it was happening. But its spokesman said Wednesday: "I'm afraid it is absolutely true. Nearly 10,000 casks have to be disposed of."

"Most of the beer was stockpiled from late November so it would mature for the Christmas rush. But it wasn't needed and we decided to get rid of it because some of it might have gone off," he said.

"The error was caused by the group's computer. The clerks who previously forecast the year-end trade were far more accurate."

The computer escaped blame for the beer shortage. This, said the brewery, is due to an exceptional surge in demand during what is normally an unthirsty month.

Benedictine monks started Burton's brewing industry in the Middle Ages.

Burton's most celebrated brew is a light sparkling beer, sweet to the tongue but nonetheless known in the bars as bitter.

It can be bottled or canned, in which case it lasts indefinitely, but the true connoisseur demands his bitter drawn from wooden casks, and in these its life is limited.

Transfers Confer At Kellogg

Community college transfer students who enrolled last fall at Michigan State University are invited to meet today with their former counselors at the 10th annual Community College Follow-Up Conference.

Representatives of 19 community colleges will be in specially designated rooms in the Kellogg Center for Continuing Education, from 10 a.m. to 11:45 a.m. and from 1:30 p.m. to 5 p.m., to talk with 900 former students.

The aim of the conference is to ease the transition of present and future transfer students from their home-community college to the University campus.

Edward B. Blackman, assistant dean, University College, will discuss "Student Activist Movements and Their Relationship to Higher Education" at a luncheon meeting of the community college representatives. The community colleges have been assigned the following Kellogg Center rooms for student interviews:

Alpena Community College, Room 102; Bay de Noc Community College, Faculty Lounge; Lake Michigan Community College (Benton Harbor), Room 109; Delta College, Room 210; Flint Junior College, Lincoln Room B1; Grand Rapids Junior College, Lincoln Room A2; Henry Ford Community College, Lincoln Room B2 and Highland Park College, Room 103.

Also: Jackson County Community College, Room 110; Kellogg Community College, Room 109; Lansing Community College, Lincoln Room A1; Macomb County Community College, Vista Room; Muskegon Community College, Room 107; North Central Michigan College, Room 5; Northwestern Michigan College, Faculty Lounge; Port Huron Junior College, Heritage Room; Schoolcraft College, Room 102 and Northwood Institute, Aud.

Sure we have desk jobs.

Desk jobs at Cape Kennedy, helping check out the Apollo moon rocket. Desk jobs at an air base, testing the world's most powerful jet engines. Desk jobs in Samoa, setting up a TV network to help teach schoolchildren. The most interesting desk jobs in the world are at General Electric.

(Have a seat.)

First, why not sit down with the man from G.E. when he visits campus. Talk with him about your goals. He'll talk with you about the hundred different avenues available at G.E. to help you reach those goals.

You may be working anywhere in the world, doing anything in the world. From marketing appliances like a new oven that cleans itself electrically... to designing a computer that's no bigger than a suitcase.

Interesting problems. Important challenges. Real rewards, in money and opportunity. They're all part of holding down a desk job at G.E. Come to General Electric, where the young men are important men.
