Students throng outside the Auditorium Thursday, waiting to get in to see George Lincoln Rockwell. A loudspeaker was set up for the overflow crowd.

AUDIENCE SUBDUED

Rockwell blames news media for suppressing Nazi 'truths'

By TRINKA CLINE
State News Staff Writer

"What about people burning?" an MSU student shouted. And George Lincoln Rockwell, American Nazi leader, replied only, "I'm agin it. Next question?"

Before an overflow and somewhat subdued crowd at the Auditorium Rockwell admitted that college campuses were the only place where he could speak without violence erupting.

Rockwell, who said during a press conference he hopes to be President in 1972, then told his audience the American people are being deprived of information. "You people are the navigators of the ship of state and you need facts to keep from guiding it on the rocks. You are being deprived of success due to managed, phony, suppressed and manufactured news," he said.

Vietnam is the most insane situation in existence, according to Rockwell. "I want to tell you what they are doing with our boys over there. They're giving them a pistol and a flashlight and sending them down tunnels to get shot at."

"If they used tear gas the world opinion would be upset," he said, adding that it is reserved for coeds on Southern campuses.

Rockwell charged that he was misquoted as saying, "Gas is best for niggers," and that he actually said, "Gas is the only cure for black crime and red treason."

The American Nazi leader said he had not come to convert anyone, but to show the startling and staggering facts and documents that had changed him from an almost liberal to the "proud head of the American Nazi party."

Rockwell said he himself could hardly believe the facts, adding that photostatic copies of his documents are available on request. "Just address it George Lincoln Rockwell, Arlington, Va.," he said, "They know where I am."

Amid alternate laughter and applause Rockwell outlined what he called the Jewish involvement in the Russian Revolution, and American leaders' support of Mao Tse-tung and Castro before they became open Communists.

"I'm not saying this is bad," Rockwell said. "Maybe the Jews should take over Russia. I just think you should know all this and be able to make your decisions."

Rockwell commented extensively on the suppression of his and other controversial views. He said people came to the Auditorium ready to hate him because they had been told to hate him.

"In short form, that is prejudice. I can't say that I blame you. That's all you hear," he said.

He said he has been accused by the press of attacking everyone from Negroes to Hitler.

"I'm not here to eat a baby," Rockwell said, "but your stars show that you came here prejudiced against me because all you hear is that I'm a bigot and a liar."

Rockwell said he is called a bigot and liar just because he wants the American people to know the truth. He also offered a $1,000 award to anyone who could prove his documents false, and said if proved a liar he would fold up the Nazi party and work free for Martin Luther King.

GEORGE LINCOLN ROCKWELL

Never so many to see so little

By MIKE BROGAN
State News Staff Writer

The Auditorium was under maximum security guard Thursday.

At 3:15 University police cleared reporters and cameramen from backstage of the main Auditorium.

By 3:30, no one could enter or leave the Auditorium. Police guarded every entrance. Every seat, and all standing room was taken.

Students had gathered in front of the building as early as 2:00 p.m. Thursday and there they waited. About 1,500 covered the steps and flowed onto the drive in front. At 3:45 he would speak.

Members of the University Christian Movement and the Ad Hoc Committee on Rockwell passed out Stars of David made from yellow construction paper.

Inside, in the foyer, more of them gathered and two anonymous students came in a side door wearing swastikas made from black construction paper.

"We're not Nazis," one of them said. "We just don't go for kids protesting by wearing these stars."

One student stood alone by the cement ramp leading to the elevated stage door. He said he was going to listen because there were some things the man said that he agreed with.

"It doesn't matter what they are," he said, almost sheepishly.

The doors had opened at 2:45 and they flowed into the building and covered the seats. Backstage three campus policemen arrived. One stood in front of the door in his crash helmet, folded his arms across his chest. The others went out in front by the steps leading to the platform.

A stagehand wearing a felt hat sat next to the bank of theatre lights and shook his head slowly.

"There are almost 4,500 seats out there," he said. "I never saw so many people in here."

The crowd in the Auditorium was quiet. Paper airplanes began floating down from the balcony and applause broke out after a particularly long flight.

Hannah accepts invitation to speak at commencement

President John A. Hannah has accepted the senior class invitation to speak at commencement June 11.

Thursday afternoon Hannah ended three weeks of speculation over whether he would accept the unprecedented invitation.

In asking Hannah to deliver the commencement address, rather than an outside speaker such as Hubert Humphrey or Earl Warren, the senior council declared:

"We take great pride in attending one of the outstanding universities of the world. We believe that Michigan State University has attained this position of eminence largely because of the dedicated efforts of John A. Hannah."

"In recognition of your 25 years as president of Michigan State University, we, representing the Senior Class of 1967, would be honored to have you deliver the commencement address."

At 3:58 it was time. They had seen Timothy Leary and Stokely Carmichael and Allan Ginsberg and Mark Lane and now . . .

George Lincoln Rockwell walked onto the stage.

He didn't rant or rave. But often he sounded like a carnival barker calling for his audience to read the enlightening literature he held in his hand.

He drew laughter at times and at times they heckled him and then he was done and again they applauded mildly and he left.

They had come to see him out of curiosity and perhaps many had expected him, as he said during his 60-minute speech, "to come out here and eat a baby." He didn't.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Cheering students and an angry faculty closed down Catholic University Thursday to protest the dismissal of a young theology teacher by the school's board of trustees.

Dr. Malcolm Henderson, a history professor representing the 600-member faculty, told a cheering crowd of some 2,500 that "we cannot and will not function" until the Rev. Charles E. Curran is reinstated.

BORDER TENSIONS RISE

U.S troops shifted north to meet N. Viet buildup

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) -- North Vietnam's increased troop commitment on and south of the 17th Parallel has forced the U.S. Command to shift thousands of U.S. Army Infantrymen north to help reverse the deteriorating situation.

The Communist military threat to the five northern provinces looks worse than it has been at any time since the Vietnam war was nearly lost in 1965.

The northern 1st Army Corps was closest to collapse then and the first U.S. ground units were committed here.

Before Lt. Gen. Lewis W. Walt's 3rd Marine Amphibious Force came ashore, Vietnamese intelligence reported that about 13,000 Communist troops were in the area. Now the estimate is about 40,000 with 35,000 more poised north of the demilitarized line.

Reinforcements ultimately may total as much as one division but the prospects in the corps area are for long, bloody campaigns before the Communist tide can be pushed back as it largely has been in the other corps areas.

Before the Army began moving in, Walt's combat troops were stretched to the breaking point. Fighting men in reserve had fallen to virtually zero. When the Communists overran part of Quang Tri's province capital in early April, it was a week before the Marines could spare even two companies to stiffen the city's defenses.

The Communist success in Quang Tri was their best since U.S. troops have been fully operational in Vietnam. Delay in relieving Quang Tri City cost the allied side heavily in terms of civilian confidence. Shock waves rocked Saigon 410 miles away.

Until the reinforcing began, Walt had

Jets strike power plants at Haiphong

SAIGON (AP) -- Scores of U.S. Navy jets plunged Haiphong into the fury of the air war Thursday. They blasted an electric power plant within the port city and another on its outskirts and left that part of North Vietnam darkened in the night.

The attacks, launched from the carriers Kitty Hawk and Ticonderoga, were described by the Navy pilots as tremendously successful. They estimated, on the basis of reconnaissance photographs, that their bombs destroyed or damaged 80 per cent of the two targets.

The strike within Haiphong, on a power plant inside a cement factory officially described as 1.1 miles northwest of the port's commercial center, was the first deliberately aimed within the limits of a major North Vietnamese city.

Rear Adm. David C. Richardson, commander of Task Force 77, told reporters the planes hit within Haiphong, "which we had not done before."

Pilots said some of the bombs fell outside the target area, but none landed more than 50 feet away and the closest that any fell to houses was 150 to 300 feet.

The other plant, which supplied power for the port and adjacent communities, was on the south bank of the Cau Cam River. The spokesman described it as 2.1 miles northeast of Haiphong's commercial center and outside the city limits.

Pilots returning after dark from reconnaissance missions reported "there are no lights tonight in Haiphong or Hon Gai," a sister city 27 miles to the northeast. Hanoi's Communist news agency denounced the attacks as "a new, extremely serious step of war escalation."

The North Vietnamese claimed five planes were shot down, U.S. officers said some were damaged by ground fire but none was lost.

19 infantry battalions, some 14,000 men, at his disposal. The rest of the 75,000-man Marine force is made up of artillery, aviation and support units.

A Korean marine brigade and two understrength government divisions completed the regular force guarding the five northern provinces.

It was apparent for months that the force was far from adequate, but 1st Corps was at the end of the line. Vietnamese officials especially tend to forget the northern provinces in their concern for the Communist threat around Saigon.

The 325 U.S. and government casualties during the series of attacks around Quang Tri could not be ignored.

Besides the reinforcing, Marines and government engineers are clearing a strip 220 yards wide below the demilitarized zone for 12 miles. In the first three miles, Marine infantrymen and engineers averaged one casualty for every 70 yards cleared.

Trustees OK resolution warning of conflict rule

By KYLE C. KERBAWY
State News Editor-in-Chief

A resolution alerting University administrators to possible criticism of their outside activities was passed Wednesday night by the MSU Board of Trustees.

The resolution brought with it varying interpretations among the trustees as to its meaning.

Although a copy could not be obtained, the resolution was understood to state that the University could be subject to criticism because of its administrators' outside board memberships and that such officials should be alert to protect the University from such criticism.

A final provision in the resolution warned University administrators that directives from the trustees are to be carried out.

The resolution's meaning was subject to different interpretations because it left open the question of what course should be taken by University officials with outside investments or membership on outside boards.

Depending on interpretation, three officials could be affected. The three are MSU president John A. Hannah, Vice-President for Business and Finance Philip J. May, and Oakland University Chancellor Durward B. Varner.

Interpretation Thursday by the trustees varied widely. Clair White, D-Bay City, interpreted the resolution as taking a tough position and said he expected the three administrators to resign their outside board memberships.

"These men are paid as much as the highest public officials in the country and they should devote full-time to their jobs," he said.

JOHNNY RETURNS

NEW YORK (AP) -- NBC announced Thursday that all disputes with Johnny Carson have been settled and he will return as star of the "Tonight" show next Monday.

A statement from the National Broadcasting Co. made no mention of the terms on which Carson will return. Industry rumors had been that he was demanding that his $750,000 a year salary be doubled.

RESIDENCE COLLEGES

Dutton, Garfinkel named new deans

By BEVERLEY TWITCHELL
State News Executive Reporter

The two new residence colleges now have deans.

The appointments of Frederic B. Dutton as dean of Lyman Briggs College (LBC) and Herbert Garfinkel as dean of James Madison College (JAM) were approved Thursday by the MSU Board of Trustees.

Both appointments become effective July 1, 1967. The colleges will be open to their first freshman classes in September.

Both colleges are styled after Justin Morrill College as semi-autonomous residence colleges. JAM, which will be housed in Case Hall, will be affiliated with the College of Social Science and will concentrate in the "policy sciences," such as anthropology, political science, economics, social science and psychology.

LBC, located in Holmes Hall, will offer a program in the natural sciences, emphasizing the relationship of science and society and the philosophy of science.

Freshman classes are expected to be limited to about 400 students for both colleges. Three years of high school math and two years of science will probably be required for admission to LBC.

Dutton said LBC would have "co-curricular programs, so we can satisfy the desires of students and contribute to educational and professional interests."

DUTTON

GARFINKEL

Garfinkel said JAM will "find a subject focus which can engage students in the curriculum rather than psychologically separating them from it." This will include six months of field work in the junior and senior years.

Dutton has been at MSU for 20 years, serving as a professor of chemistry until 1950, and as professor and director of the Science and Mathematics Teaching Center since 1957.

He is past president of the National Assn. for Research in Science Teaching and of the Michigan Science Teachers Assn. He has also directed a number of National Science Foundation Institutes and served on several educational committees of the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science.

Garfinkel has been at MSU since 1959. He served as consultant to the Michigan Constitutional Convention Preparatory Commission, and was NATO visiting professor at the Institute of Social Science in The Hague, Netherlands, in 1965-66.

He is the co-author of a textbook on American government, "The Democratic Republic," and a book on civil rights politics, "When Negroes March."

In other action, the trustees approved the resignation of Dean Louis L. McQuitty of the College of Social Science.

McQuitty will start Sept. 1 as the Dean of Science and Arts at the University of Miami in Florida.

Student feedback the first step

One of the sections of the Academic Freedom Report which met with almost universal approval was the proposal for student recommendations which would be accepted formally by the various departments and colleges within the university.

The College of Arts and Letters has become the first to implement this goal with the approval Monday night of a student advisory committee for each department in the college and for the college itself.

The action was taken after a term of consultation and coordination between the Academic Coordinating Committee of ASMSU and Dean Paul A. Varg of the College of Arts and Letters.

The committees will relay student grievances and suggestions to the department chairman. In turn the department chairman will be able to call meetings of the committee to inform and discuss with it proceedings in the department. The college wide committee will perform similar functions with respect to the Dean.

The task of selecting the committees will present the first challenge to the plan. In order for the committees to develop into a meaningful part of the academic structure, student members must be chosen with corresponding intelligence and care.

Initially, students will be elected to positions on the committees by votes cast at meetings for majors in each department, next week. The department groups will each select one of their number to be on the college committee.

The establishment of the student advisory bodies is part of the whole movement toward greater student participation in academic affairs which has characterized this year.

While the establishment of this first committee is an important step, there remains the possibility that it might not lead far enough. Hopefully, these new committees will assume an active role, and not degenerate into tired and lackluster, subservient advisory bodies.

But the enthusiastic cooperation by the faculty thus far is a good omen for progress in the future. With more and more colleges and departments establishing such committees, more and more student participation in academic affairs will lead to a greater involvement in the educational process for many.

Ideally, education is said to consist of a log with a student on one end and a teacher on the other. While it may be impossible to reach this ideal, the student advisory committee is on the way toward an approximation.

OUR READERS' MINDS

SDS: courage over obedience

To the Editor:

I find it necessary to respond to Mr. Eckenrode's "I'm Afraid to Go" letter of April 17, despite the fact that the infantile nature of his reasoning hardly merits attention. However, I respond because I feel that in a crude way he has expressed some common myths which could have grave implications for the future of our society.

He states that those SDS members who issued the "We Won't Go" statement are a group of yellow, unpatriotic parasites, who enjoy the benefits of American society, but are unwilling to assume the responsibility for its maintenance. Although it is completely ludicrous to say that SDS type individuals are concerned about sacrificing "a few money-making years," it is even more regrettable that Mr. Eckenrode and many like him, have such a circumscribed understanding of patriotism.

To be patriotic, I think, is to believe in one's country and assume responsibility for its on-going life. However, a nation is not defined by the particular policy of a particular administration, in power at a particular point in time. Rather, the genius of a nation is expressed in those lofty ideals and broad spiritual currents which have threaded their way through the fabric of its history. In our country these ideals are embodied in concepts like: distributive justice, limited government; individual freedom of speech, assembly and worship; and the rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. These concepts find expression in the sentiments of the Declaration of Independence, in the vision of Jefferson, in the spirit of Jackson, and the moral stature of the Gettysburg address. They are the product of much struggle and sacrifice and have been the animating spirit of the American tradition at its best. Today, many of us feel that American intervention in Vietnam runs contrary to the spirit of this historical tradition. Therefore, our commitment to the real core values and ideals that have made this nation great, demands that we oppose the war.

There have been many expressions of this opposition. One of them being the SDS anti-draft union. Rather than displaying a lack of courage and responsibility as Mr. Eckenrode seems to imply, I think the action of many of those who signed the "We Won't Go" pledge, is motivated by a broader courage than simple, blind obedience, and by a sense of responsibility to values higher than the shallow rhetoric of the present administration.

Mr. Eckenrode alludes to a second and even more frightening kind of myth with the statement, "One who is associated with this group knows that it is his turn to serve America (militarily) and he doesn't have the spirit to face the situation. I heard another version of this myth recently by a World War I veteran who said, "We went in 1917, there is no reason why you can't go today when it is your turn." These statements and others like them seem to indicate an acceptance of war as a way of life. Or put differently, they seem to give at least implicit support to the notion that international problems can only be solved by military engagement or threat. This is a sad commentary on the moral vision and sensitivity of American society. We seem to have forgotten the values of our political tradition, the teachings of our religion and the humanistic ethics of Western civilization. Perhaps, this is the outgrowth of the anti-communist hysteria that has poisoned our society in the last decade. Too, it is surely grounded in the post World War II surge of affluence and powers. In any case, it must be recognized as a dangerous trend, which is being further consolidated by the Vietnam war and by the general posture of our foreign policy stance vis a vis the international political scene.

Finally, then, I wish to say that Mr. Eckenrode's letter was unfortunate, both because it was probably embarrassing to him personally after he "cooled down," and also, more importantly, it reveals the growing presence in our society of a narrow patriotism and emotional reaction not really too far removed from the spectre which rose in Europe 30 years ago.

Cowards or not?

To the Editor:

I really don't know where to begin to reply to the letter from ex U.S. Marine, Jerome W. Eckenrode, but a reply is certainly called for. I am not a member of the Students for a Democratic Society and knew nothing whatsoever about their statement in the paper, but I agree with them wholeheartedly.

"I'm Afraid to Go," Jerome says. Does one join a group and have his name published because he is a coward? Is it really a coward who can take the rebukes, insults, and ridicule (sometimes violent) of non-thinking "patriots" like you, Jerome? Is it brave to say, "I'm an American--right or wrong"? Is it so brave to carry a gun and go out to kill your fellow man when you have no grievance against him? Is there a grievance so great that one has the right to kill for it? Is it cowardice to agree with Christ who said, "thou shalt not kill," "love your enemies," "do good to those who persecute you"? If you can honestly believe in your heart, Mr. Eckenrode, that Christ would give his wholehearted support and carry a gun and murder right along side of you, then perhaps you are justified in your thinking (although you have missed completely the entire mission of Christ on earth).

Mr. Eckenrode is so wrapped up in himself that he doesn't realize that personal conscience and God come way before duty to a country. For Mr. Eckenrode President Johnson is God.

Or maybe Jerome just delights in killing innocent people -- converting by the sword rather than charity. He forgets that "he who lives by the sword shall die by the sword." His letter was, indeed, the best example of a most sickeningly immature and unthinking piece of grade-school boy nationalism that I have seen in a long time.

I can't say all I'd like to--I can't believe he could say what he did to a group of adults interested enough in their country NOT to fight for it. If Mr. Eckenrode had been born in China and been fighting against the U.S., perhaps the Chinese would have won the war by now.

At any rate, I can not imagine why he doesn't re-enlist... To throw his own rubbish back at him, maybe he is too busy "chasing girls" around the campus, or more realistically, perhaps he is waiting to carry the flag in the next Fourth of July parade? Whatever is so important, however, Mr. Eckenrode, that it keeps you from your duty of wiping out the Vietnamese neighbors you hate so vehemently?

JIM GRAHAM

Bleeding green and white

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jim Graham, former chairman of the ASMSU Student Board, today recounts some of his privileged observations of the MSU freshman orientation programs.

There has to be a change in Michigan State University's freshman orientation programs.

This is the conclusion I reached after having had the opportunity to see one night of the summer clinics, and after having read one newsletter sent out to the members of the class of 1970.

Last year, the orientation resembled the welcome program of the Williamston Rotary for the new members of the community. You don't sell a university the same way you would sell insurance, and hope to maintain an atmosphere of academic integrity.

Although the "two-plus" day program is taken up with registration, discussions with professors and testing, there is a time set aside for social orientation to MSU.

It was this "Activity Night" program that, with special written permission from the Vice President for Special Projects, I was allowed to see. (Incidentally, in case you have forgotten, the orientation dormitory--in this case, Wonders Hall--is "off-limits" to anyone not directly involved in the program.)

I had visited the hall to see the ASMSU poster display last August and was asked to leave when I couldn't produce proper identification.

The rationale the administration gives for this policy of isolation is that the program is so strenuous, the time so limited, that no interference can be tolerated. One wonders, however, whether or not it is because propaganda best flourishes in a closed situation.)

Anyway, the Activity Night program began by a filmed speech by Dean Blackman, who spoke as if he were on a mountain looking down on a blurred landscape. The speech was indefinite and out of focus; the sort of thing that could have been written for the 1959 graduating class at Okemos High School. It included comments such as, "university days are golden days . . . but less golden than yesterday!"

Upon the conclusion of one film, several "Spartan Guides" (that's the summer version of resident assistant) came galloping down the aisles of Wilson Auditorium looking like they had just walked out of Ray Leffler's window.

Then commenced a barrage of "Hi, Jack," "Hi, Suzie," "What's going on at MSU tonight (or today)." Before one could recover from this Barnum and Bailey routine, the same "Spartan Guides" were narrating a slide show which transported high school graduates into a tour of MSU, season to season, football, classes, Phil Frank cartoons, Homecoming, midterms and so on, every slide followed by brisk statements evoking laughter from the crowd.

The whole thing looked so good, I had to think for a moment whether I was visiting the right university.

As the last slide faded out, Mr. Wentworth, a member of the orientation staff, was introduced with the comment that he bleeds "green and white."

Just as I was about to pass out, Mr. Wentworth entered the auditorium as a phonograph boomed out the MSU Fight Song. Before I knew it, I was on my feet ready to start automatically singing, but I shortly realized I was one of the few who knew it. Mr. Wentworth bled for about a half an hour, and the program closed on his stirring presentation of what MSU really was all about.

I left the Wilson Auditorium in a daze feeling as though I had been following Alice through Wonderland for the past two hours. I was convinced that more student participation was needed in the program's planning.

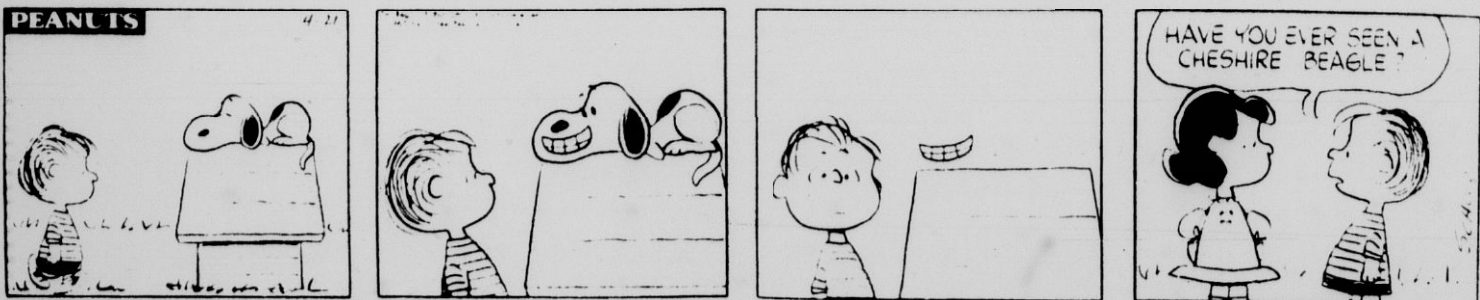

Never throughout the evening I witnessed were the problems of alienation and de-personalization of a multi-university discussed. It was all the type of glitter that would fade for more entering freshmen after one week of classes.

One of the newsletters to the Class of 1970, which again I examined by special permission, ended with: "by this time you know all of us here think State's great."

There has to be a change in freshman orientation at least in deleting dishonesty, if not forging honesty into the programs.

U.S. can resume nuclear ban talks

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The United States notified the Soviet Union Thursday that it is prepared to resume talks immediately on a treaty to block the spread of nuclear weapons.

U.S. officials said they hope for full agreement by May 9, when the Geneva disarmament talks are to be resumed.

The notification to Russia followed a round of U.S. consultations in Paris earlier Thursday with its North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies. Disarmament negotiator William C. Foster attended the meeting of the NATO Council where allied agreement was finally reached to go into the new phase.

The United States and other allied governments were described by State Department officials as having reached an understanding on the kind of non-proliferation treaty they would like to have, but without being committed to any particular formula of words.

The major issue has been over whether the proposed treaty would prevent West Germany from having an effective voice in the nuclear strategy and organization of the Atlantic alliance.

There have been other questions such as the treaty's effect on the nuclear power development and other peaceful uses in countries that have no nuclear resources.

The United States and Russia have already made substantial progress trying to work out the draft of the treaty during negotiations at Geneva. The disarmament talks there were recessed six weeks ago to give the United States time to consult its allies.

Foster is going to Geneva this weekend and hopes to meet there with Soviet disarmament negotiator Alexei Rochin.

Robert J. McCloskey, State Department press officer, said that whatever the United States and Russia might work out would be subject to further negotiation in the 17-nation Geneva conference.

4-day funeral services set for Adenauer

BONN, Germany (AP) -- West Germany prepared Thursday the biggest and most impressive state funeral in a generation for Konrad Adenauer, its first chancellor and a founding spirit of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Official Bonn made ready for four days of ceremonies that will precede Adenauer's burial in a family plot at Rhodendorf, the village on the Rhine where Adenauer lived since before World War II. It will be the largest funeral since President Paul von Hindenburg was buried in Berlin in 1934.

President Johnson, President Charles de Gaulle of France and Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain will head the list of political leaders who plan to come to pay their respects.

DETROIT (AP) -- United Auto Workers President Walter P. Reuther told the opening session of his union's goal-setting convention Thursday that it should give "the highest priority and the greatest urgency to a substantial wage increase" in 1967 contract bargaining.

"I emphasize this in terms of economic necessity," Reuther said.

The UAW chief previously had stated he would sign no contract without a guaranteed annual income enabling a worker to know from the beginning what his yearly income would be, regardless of any lay-offs.

In staking out a substantial wage increase as the No. 1 goal, Reuther mentioned no percentage increase, but emphasized the word "substantial."

He also asserted that a major 1967 goal should be equal pay for U.S. and Canadian auto workers. Leonard Woodcock, UAW vice president, estimates that pay of workers in Canadian General Motors plants averages 41 cents an hour less than the wage paid GM workers in the United States.

An omnibus, 46-page resolution also gives "top priority" to wage increase for all UAW members. The resolution, which also includes Canadian party and a guaranteed annual income, will be voted on later by some 3,000 convention delegates.

As the convention met, at least one group was demanding a wage and fringe benefits package of 30 per cent over the next three years.

The 30 per cent "package" was proposed in leaflets outlining a four-point program and bearing the names of 10 local union presidents and at least one member of eight other locals. There are 1,405 local unions within the UAW.

There was little doubt delegates would shunt aside the four-point program as such, in favor of a broader, more flexible approach proposed by Reuther.

U.S. berates Britain for sale to China

LONDON (AP) -- The United States and Britain were reported in dispute Thursday over sale to Red China of two British computers worth $1.4 million.

The Americans have complained they see the sale as a breach of the interallied system for preventing goods with a military potential reaching Communist countries.

British Foreign Office and Board of Trade officials, however, defend the transaction on the ground the computers have only a civilian value for the Chinese.

The two computers, manufactured by International Computers and Tabulators, already have been supplied.

Informants said the U.S. government, through its embassy in London, had long exchanges with the British in an attempt to block the sale. These followed successful American pressure last year which prevented export of a computer built by English Electric to a Chinese scientific research center in Peking.

The American argument on that occasion was that the English Electric computer, bigger and more advanced than the ICT machines, could have been used to speed Chinese development of an H-bomb.

A Foreign Office spokesman said British authorities do not regard the two medium-sized ICT computers as falling within the category of strategic goods.

Board of Trade officials went further. They said each allied government has discretionary powers over the way to interpret the strategic embargo list.

IN FOUR-TEAM MEET

SEATO tough on Hanoi

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The SEATO Foreign Ministers Council minus France and with Pakistan silent-declared Thursday that any reduction in allied fighting in Vietnam would have to be matched by a similar scaledown of enemy forces.

In a communique marking the end of the 12th council meeting of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, the six foreign ministers thus strongly endorsed the U.S. policy of requiring some reciprocal action from Hanoi before halting the bombing of North Vietnam.

Representatives of Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand, Britain and the United States "reaffirmed their determination to maintain, and where possible to increase, their efforts in support of Vietnam in accordance with their respective constitutional" procedures, the communique said.

It left the door open for any decisions that might later be made to step up the number of troops sent to assist South Vietnam.

With only a small shifting of gears, the SEATO meeting which ended at midday moved into a second conference of the seven nations contributing troops to the defense of Vietnam.

Britain and Pakistan were out of the lineup for the troop contributors, but South Korea and South Vietnam were full participants. The others included Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines and Thailand.

The SEATO communique wound up a three-day meeting marked by some blunt talk aimed at France, Pakistan and, to a lesser extent, Britain for not doing more in Vietnam.

The communique concluded:

"The threat in the South-east Asia Treaty area cannot be considered an isolation from global problems of peace and security. The outcome of the struggle now going on against aggression, both overt and by subversion, would have profound effects not only in Asia but throughout the world."

"It was therefore of the utmost importance that these aggressions should not succeed."

SEATO Secretary-General Jesus Vargas told a news conference that increased attempts at subversion are being made in Thailand and the Philippines.

McKissick charged that newspapers ignored attempts by CORE last year to give warnings of where trouble was brewing.

Floyd McKissick, national director of the Congress of Racial Equality, delivered his analysis to the annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

"The newspapers today have no lines into the ghetto and have no inkling of what is going on there-- what the mood of the black man is, his hopes and his plans and dreams."

"The Los Angeles Times last year won a Pulitzer Prize for coverage of the Watts riots. But it is notable that prior to those riots, it gave no inkling to the public of the trouble that was

CMU batsmen hot

By GAYEL WESCH
State News Sports Writer

Red-hot Central Michigan, a team with a nine-game winning streak to protect, will be the foe for MSU's baseball team Saturday in a doubleheader at Old College Field. The games will start at 1:30 p.m.

Central has a 13-1 record, and impressive statistics in both pitching and batting.

With 17 lettermen returning from a 20-12 squad in 1966, the Chippewas have been hitting .349 as a team while maintaining a 1.85 team earned run average.

Central's last four victories have come over small colleges, Hope and Ferris, both double header sweeps.

Seven of Central's regulars are hitting over .300 coming into the game, with third baseman Pat O'Keefe and center-fielder Al Stevens leading the way. O'Keefe is hitting .520 and Stevens .437.

A pair of righthanders will probably be the starting pitchers for the Chippewas.

Jim Bourbeau is the probable starter in the opener, while either Tom Krawczyk or Kim Hillstrom will start the nightcap.

Hillstrom is not unfamiliar to Spartan Coach Danny Litwhiler. Hillstrom struck out seven Spartans in three innings before MSU eventually beat him last year.

The Spartans won a pair from Central last year at Mount Pleasant, 10-4 and 4-0.

While Central is flying high, MSU will be shooting to better the break-even .500 mark. The Spartans are currently 12-12-1, but had to beat a weak Albion team twice Wednesday in order to reach that mark.

MSU's hitting has just begun to come alive after a long period of inconsistency. The Spartans have scored 39 runs in their last six games.

First baseman Tom Binkowski, third baseman Bill Steckley, centerfielder Tom Hummel and left fielder John Walters have been doing most of the hitting for MSU.

Binkowski has hit two-run home runs in two of the last six games and leads the team in homers.

Steckley is the team's leading hitter with a .360 average. Hummel, who was the leader after the Spring trip has slipped to second. Walters, MSU's most consistent hitter throughout the season is third.

Steve Rymal, Tom Ellis and Harry Kendrick will take their regular positions at second, shortstop and catcher respectively, but Litwhiler is planning to platoon in right field.

Richie Jordan and Paul Smieska are likely to share right-field duties although Jordan could take over completely if his hitting improves.

Sophomores Zana Easton and Mel Behney are likely starters for MSU.

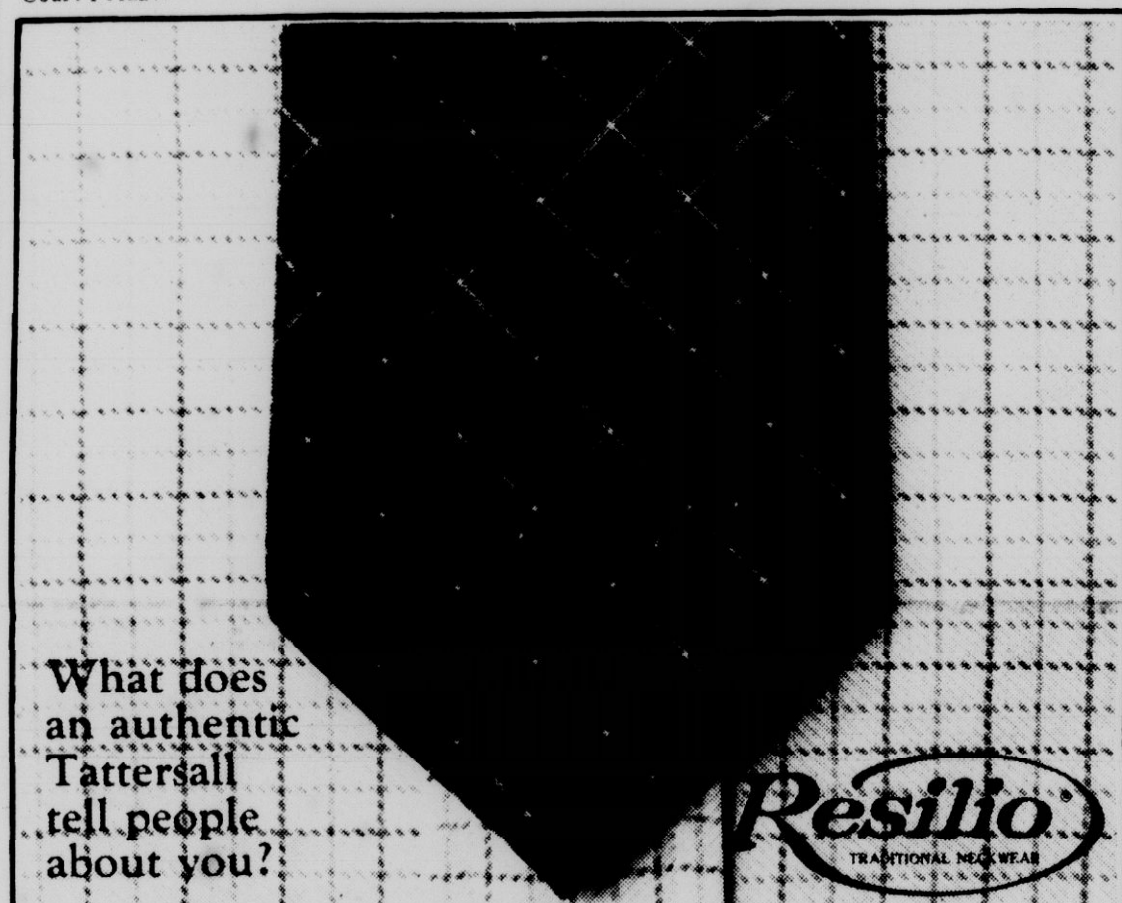

Clay in last attempt to avoid Uncle Sam

LOUISVILLE, KY. (UPI)—A troubled Cassius Clay left his hometown Thursday to prepare for his "big trial" — a date with Uncle Sam April 28 in Houston.

The heavyweight champion told a news conference. "I am not going into the army under any circumstances, no matter what it costs me."

He said he would appear for induction in Houston next week, "But I won't take the oath."

Clay's attorneys have been contesting his induction on grounds he is a Black Muslim minister. The U.S. Supreme Court turned down his appeal, but Attorney Hayden Covington said in Cincinnati Thursday he would file for a rehearing before the High Court Friday.

MSU cagers lose Baylor to family

By NORM SAARI
State News Sports Writer

Art Baylor, starting forward on the MSU basketball team, has dropped out of school. Baylor's wife presented him with twins at the end of winter term.

He was not available for comment at his Washington, D.C., home but his mother said, "He will have to give school up. They have four children now: the twins, a three-year-old and one-year-old child."

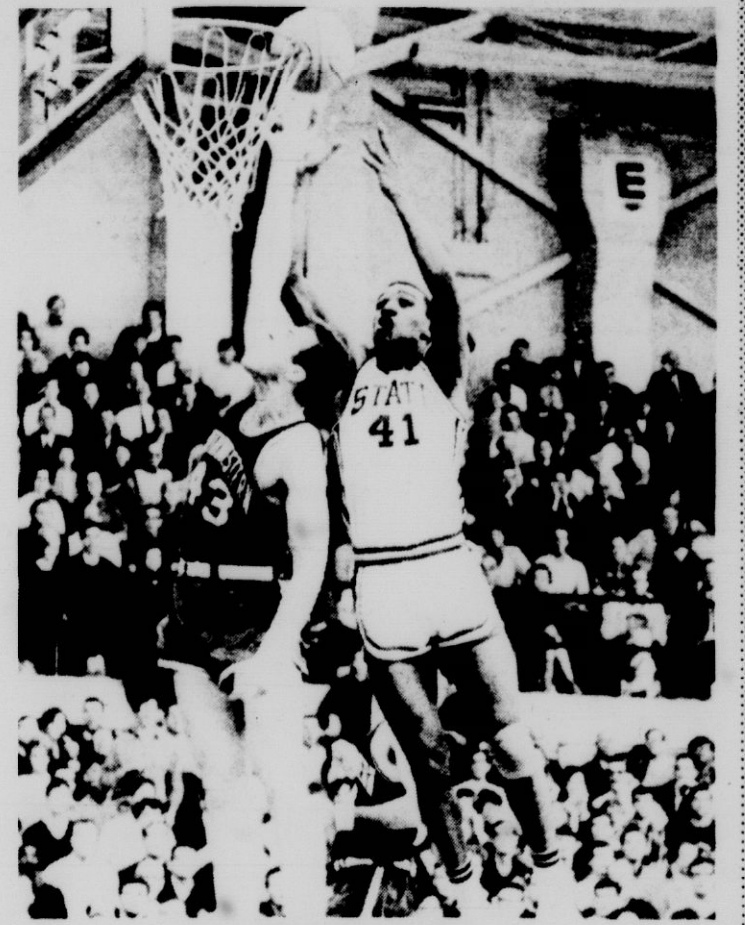

She also said Baylor had applied for several job opportunities in the Washington area, but as yet is unemployed. Art, the nephew of Los Angeles Laker basketball star Elgin Baylor, was a front line substitute at forward his sophomore year, but injured his ankle after 15 games. He scored 67 points for a 4.5 average that season.

Surgery corrected his injury during the off-season. He ended up playing in 19 games, scoring 98 points for a 4.1 average.

"If he chooses to return to school, he could do one of two things," Basketball Coach John Benington said. "First, he could come back for summer term and regain his eligibility for the fall or else return for fall term and become eligible for winter semester."

Assistant Athletic Director Burt Smith said Baylor's grade point was above 2.0 and was in no scholastic trouble. Smith made it clear to the 6-6 junior that he would have to attend a semester of classes before his athletic eligibility could be restored.

Baylor was on an athletic tender at MSU and was not allowed to work during the academic year.

Baylor gone

MSU basketball starter Art Baylor (41) may not have the opportunity to rebound for the Spartans anymore since he dropped out of school at the end of winter term. His wife had twins, making four children in the family, and Baylor is seeking employment in his hometown of Washington, D.C.

Big Ten conference opens; tennis team in doubleheader

By DENNIS CHASE
Associate Sports Editor

It would be trite to say that this weekend's tennis matches with Northwestern and Wisconsin here are "big ones." All coaches say it about all their team's matches. Each match is a big one, in one way or another.

On Friday, the Spartan tennis team will play Northwestern. On Saturday, it's Wisconsin. The matches mark the opening of the Big Ten season for MSU, after a 9-0 walloping of Wayne State University last Tuesday, and a 4-4 record on the spring trip.

"Northwestern is an improved team," Mickey Szilagyi, MSU's No. 3 singles player, said. "And the first match is always a big one for any team."

Northwestern finished sixth in the Big Ten last season, and it was the first time in five seasons that the Wildcats did not have a player of Davis Cup caliber on the team. Marty Riessen and Clark Graebner have graduated.

But the Wildcats won their first two matches, 9-0 against Purdue, and 5-4 over Illinois, and they have a doubleheader of their own to play. They'll be at Michigan on Saturday.

Wisconsin, a fifth place team in the Big Ten last season, opens its conference season Friday at Michigan. The Badgers were 6-1 on their spring trip.

Tennis Coach Stan Drobnac calls this one a "big one." "Northwestern has its No. 1 player of last year at No. 3," Drobnac said.

Tom Mansfield is the Wildcat player that was shifted, as sophomore Tom Rice took over the top spot.

"Also, the weather could be a factor," Drobnac said. "If it rains, and we move the match indoors, it will be a big change for our boys."

"And, even if we win this one, I'll have to watch and see that the boys don't get overconfident for the Wisconsin match the following day," he said.

And then Drobnac made a rather curious statement for a coach. "This," he said, "is the big one."

Spartan foes 'in shape' for Ohio track relays

In competition to some of the 40 other schools represented, MSU's track team may seem somewhat out of condition at the Ohio Relays in Columbus this weekend.

It will be the first regular scheduled meet for the Spartans, but many of the teams competing have already finished early spring schedule at southern schools.

"We haven't gone south like many of the other competing teams, but we will be able to hold our own in most of the events," Assistant Coach Jim Gibbard said.

Gibbard and Head Track Coach Fran Dittrich have not definitely selected two of their relay teams but will choose from Gene Washington, Bob Steele, Charles Pollard, Steve Derby and Al Maibach in the shuttle hurdle; Steele, Don Crawford, Das Campbell, John Spain, Rick Dunn and Pat Wilson in the mile relay.

Washington, Crawford, Steele and Campbell will run the 440-yard relay and Dunn, Roger Merchant, Dean Rosenberg and Eric Zemper will compete in the distance medley relay. Also, a top entry of Crawford, Dunn, Campbell and Spain is figured to be among the best in the sprint medley.

In individual events, Pollard and Washington are entered in the 120-yard high hurdles; Steele in the 440-yard intermediate hurdles; Wilson in the half mile; Stanley, Link, Merchant and Rosenberg in the mile; Sharkey and George Balthrop in the three-mile and Eric Zemper, Link, Sharkey and Balthrop in the 3000-meter steeplechase.

Field event entries have Crawford in both the triple jump and long jump; Joe Auffrey and Dennis Lamb in the discus and shot put; Roland Carter, Jim Stewart and John Wilcox in the pole vault and Mike Bowers and Maibach in the high jump.

Giants end losing streak

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Willie Mays, back in the lineup after being sidelined by a pulled muscle, opened a five-run inning Thursday with a hot single that started the San Francisco giants toward a 7-5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

It ended a six-game losing streak and also marked the first defeat of the season for the Cards who had launched the national league campaign with six wins. Mays' single, his first of two during the afternoon, was a shot to left field.

Daugherty looks for kicker to fill Dick Kenney's shoes

By JOE MITCH
State News Sports Writer

One shoe the Spartan football coaching staff will have to replace next fall is the right one Dick Kenney rarely wore.

The Spartans are in need of a kicking specialist, and Kenney, who starred three years as MSU's punter, kickoff man, and barefoot extra point kicker, won't be around to help them.

Coach Duffy Daugherty has been seeking a capable replacement for Kenney this week during spring practice.

He'll take a look at his available kickers under game conditions Saturday when the Spartans engage in their second intra-squad scrimmage.

"We have Dick Berlinski and Jack Pitts as our punters and George Chatlos and Steve Garvey as place kickers," Daugherty said.

Replacing Kenney is a major task, since Kenney held the kicking position for the past three years.

Last season he had 50 punts for 1830 yards and averaged 36.6 yards per punt.

Chatlos, a senior who plays the right defensive end, is the only player returning with kicking experience in a game.

He started kicking off at the beginning of his sophomore year but gave way to Kenney at the end of the season.

Berlinski was on the varsity last season as a sophomore, backing up Kenney as a punter.

Pitts and Garvey are freshmen this spring and showed their kicking talents in two freshman games last fall.

Spartan coaches contend that kicking is an important part of their game, and the presence of an adept kicker and punter can change a team's strategy.

One example was the MSU-Notre Dame game last fall that ended in a 10-10 tie. Irish Coach Ara Parseghian defended his stalling tactic late in the game, contending that had MSU gotten control of the ball, Kenney could have attempted a field goal.

"We think so much of kicking," said Offensive Line Coach Gordie Serr, "that we have carried two specialists on the team—a center to snap the ball and the kicker."

Serr said the new rule change preventing interior linemen from going down-field until after the ball has been kicked will change punting formations and defenses on the punt return.

"It's likely you'll see fourth down defenses that you haven't seen before—something original," he said. "The ideal way is to hold up people who can cover eligible receivers—the ends and halfbacks."

"You may even get a situation where you have one man over the center and everyone else converge on the eligible receivers."

The Spartan coaching staff has been experimenting with varied types of punting formation. One new problem is determining how the ball should be punted to get maximum coverage and prevent the long punt return.

One way is to punt high, allowing the linemen more time to cover the kick.

Another is to punt out-of-bounds.

Serr said the new punting rule could result in more injuries to players since there are likely to be more returns and fewer fair catches than in the past.

'EQUAL PEACE TERMS'

Golfers face Purdue

MSU's golfers seek to upset the powerful Purdue Boilermakers in Saturday's six-team meet at Columbus, Ohio.

Besides Purdue, the Spartans will face Indiana, Marshall, Notre Dame and home team Ohio State.

Playing against the Boilermakers is not a coach's dream—at least it is not Golf Coach Bruce Fossum's.

MSU has already played the Purdue golfers and finished 14 strokes behind.

Under the direction of Sam Volnoff Purdue has finished out of the Big Ten first division only once. Purdue has won eight Big Ten golf championships in 16 years and has been runner-up four times.

Purdue's winning average in dual meets is .831-.293 victories against 57 losses and six ties.

For Indiana, Saturday's meet will be its opener. The Hoosiers will have to battle inexperience and "staleness."

Besides four of the seven-man traveling squad being sophomores, Indiana also hasn't played a match in more than three weeks, since the Hoosiers returned from their southern trip.

Home team Ohio State is expected to be less than a threat.

"Ohio State won't be as strong as last year, they lost two players who eventually turned pro," Fossum said, obviously relieved.

Notre Dame has three returning letterman from last year's 23-7 squad.

The Irish team gained an eleventh place finish in the meet and was the top Midwestern team.

Fossum was forced to juggle his starting lineup when Troy Campbell came up with ulcer problems.

"We don't know when Troy will be back with us or even if he will be back," Fossum said.

Replacing Campbell will be sophomore Dennis Hankey. In another change, Fossum will start George Butch in the sixth position in place of Al Thies who started last Saturday.

Injured ruggers to battle new Windsor club Sunday

A battered MSU rugby team will face the Windsor Boarders this Sunday at 4 p.m. on Old College Field.

Fullback Curt Conrad broke his nose in last week's loss at Notre Dame and definitely will not be playing. Three other front line players were injured in an automobile accident on the way home to add to the ruggers' injuries. Head Coach Neville Doherty had not yet decided on his starting lineup.

The Boarders' club was organized last season, and they have not yet established themselves in Midwest play. Most of their players, however, have experience with other Canadian and Detroit area teams.

The Spartan ruggers also have a "B" game scheduled against Blackrock on Saturday. Doherty said all members of the rugby club here would be able to play in at least one of the games this weekend.

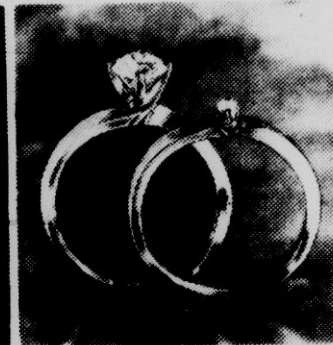

The MSU "A" team has a 2-1 record for the year.

NON-PARTISAN SUPPORT

Trustees urge tax reform

Members of the MSU Board of Trustees Thursday called for non-partisan action in urging tax reform for Michigan. President Hannah indicated that the future for reform is not promising.

"We are getting discouraged that what seemed to be nearly attainable doesn't seem so now," he said.

Hannah and the presidents of 10 other Michigan colleges and universities met Tuesday with the State Board of Education. They jointly resolved to do whatever needs to be done to get tax reform.

Hannah has often stressed the need for tax reform so the state can continue to pay increasing costs of higher education.

"It's going to have to be labor, business, and all the people of the state to get at it," he said, "or we'll go through the wringer again."

Two Republican members of the Board of Trustees Thursday urged Governor Romney to take strong leadership in a non-partisan fight for tax reform.

"We should urge the governor to provide leadership with a non-political approach, and to do it now," Stephen S. Nisbet, R-Fremont, said. "We haven't got time to wait."

Trustee Clair White, D-Bay City, pointed out that this is the first time in 18 years that Michigan has had one party in control of both the legislature and the executive branch. The best chance for tax reform, then, is for the governor to persuade his party to support his program.

"I think there is some substance to the charge that he is deliberately encouraging an austerity budget in order to enhance his chances for nomination with the more conservative delegates at the Republican National Convention by out-Reaganing Reagan," White said, referring to Romney's possible presidential nomination.

"I feel that if Governor Romney assumes the responsibility of the governorship of Michigan, he ought to prove he can produce an adequate program of state services, or he has failed to demonstrate the qualification necessary for the presidency," White said.

Nisbet stressed that the reform should have first priority in the legislature, but that it be handled on a non-partisan basis.

"Students aren't interested in politics; they're interested in education," he said. "It would be tragic if our Michigan legislature doesn't come up with some program of tax reform for Michigan education."

The governor's proposed budget for higher education falls $3 million short of what MSU needs to maintain its operations.

MSU now charges more tuition for both in- and out-of-state students than any other university in Michigan. In the Big Ten, MSU ranks third in in-state tuition and second in out-of-state tuition.

A $75 hike per student would be necessary to make up the $3 million not provided for by the governor's proposed budget. Hannah said Thursday that if this $75 were handled across the board, for in- and out-of-state students alike, MSU would be second in the Big Ten for both in- and out-of-state tuition, with out-of-state students paying some $1,100 a year.

Trustees approve new 'U' projects

The MSU Board of Trustees approved Thursday five construction and maintenance projects to cost approximately $250,000.

Owen Hall will be the first residence hall to have air conditioning. Its unit will serve the dining room, grill and public areas. The $70,000 project will be completed by the United Piping and Erecting Co. of Lansing.

The east upper deck of Spartan Stadium will be painted by the City Window Cleaning and Painting Co. of Detroit at a cost of $36,960. The west upper deck was painted last spring.

A salvage stores building will be built behind the present University General Stores Building on Harrison Road. Foster-Schermerhorn-Barnes of Lansing anticipate completion of the $100,000 project in 90 days.

The 17,453 square-foot structure, which will contain nine 24-foot bays, will permit relocation of the old salvage yard facility now on Farm Lane. A new graduate residence hall is planned on this site.

Mary Mayo Hall will have its electrical system rejuvenated by Fox Electric Co. of Lansing at a cost of $27,000. Mayo, built in 1931, is the oldest existing residence hall on campus.

As soon as weather permits, parking facilities will be installed at the new 18-hole golf course on South Harrison and Mt. Hope roads. The contractor for the $14,795 project is Spartan Asphalt Paving Co.

The blacktop parking lot for 40 cars will be located across South Harrison Road from the entrance to the Course. The first nine holes of the new course are expected to open by the first week in June.

Gift fruit farm research site for pesticides

A gift of a 80-acre farm to be used for research on fruit production and insect control was officially accepted Thursday by MSU's Board of Trustees.

The farm, located near Fennville, was given to the University by its owner, Trevor Nichols, prior to his death April 12. The gift includes orchards of apple, pear, cherry and plum trees, storage facilities and fruit handling equipment.

Research at the farm, which becomes MSU's 12th outstate experiment station, will be coordinated by Gordon Guyer, chairman of the Dept. of Entomology.

"The Nichols' farm will serve as a nucleus for pest and pesticides research in western Michigan," he said. Special attention will be given the first year to the control of mites, the number one fruit pest problem in Michigan.

Total value of the gift is estimated at about $100,000.

WOMEN IN BLUE

MSU's Angel Flight girls offer service with a smile

When coeds pledge Angel Flight they get something special ... a big brother.

A cadet from Arnold Air Society, an honorary which sponsors Angel Flight, adopts a pledge as his "little sister." The two groups frequently work together on service projects and social events.

Angel Flight rushes twice a year. In order to pledge, women must have a 2.00 all-University average. They pledge for 10 weeks before going active, during which time the women work on pledge service projects and fund-raising projects.

Every month Angel Flight visits the veterans' hospital in Battle Creek. The coeds visit with patients and entertain them with skits.

Angel Flight helps support the Suwon Central Orphanage in Korea with funds from various projects, and the group has adopted a Cherokee Indian girl from Oklahoma.

The women are active in a number of service projects on campus. After every home football game, they help members of the Arnold Air Society clean Spartan Stadium.

In the spring, Angel Flight assists the Air Force ROTC with its blood drive.

A Coronation Ball held every fall and the Commissioning Day Dinner-Dance in the spring highlight their social calendar. This year, the dinner-dance, held in honor of the commissioned cadets, will be at Kellogg Center, June 3, and is an all-University function.

During spring term the coeds of Angel Flight wear their uniforms every Tuesday for the Air Force ROTC change of command. They can be spotted sitting in the bleachers in their navy blazers and skirts giving moral support to the ROTC cadets. Later in the term they may be marching with the cadets from the I.M. to Demonstration Hall.

Brody features cheese made at MSU dairy

Brody residents had a chance to enjoy the customary European dessert of cheese at special tables set up Tuesday and Wednesday nights.

Thomas A. Dutch, Brody Hall manager, said that the cheeses offered were Swiss, gouda, cheddar, Edam, bleu cheese and dagnano, an original created at MSU. The cheeses, all made at the MSU Dairy, were served with French bread. Brochures describing the cheeses and their history were also offered.

Dutch said that the reaction was favorable and that more special events might be planned in the future.

STEP seeks $2,000 raise from board

The Student Education Project (STEP) said Wednesday it would ask ASMSU for an additional $2,000 for its summer project in Mississippi. The student board pledged $1,000 last January.

Larry Klein, student director of STEP, said the total request of $3,000 would cover the expenses of the 27 volunteers for a five-week period. ASMSU appropriated $2,800 for STEP last year.

He said STEP has raised nearly $8,000 of the $19,000 it needs by May 22. STEP plans to make its request to the board Tuesday night.

Quartet to play Bartok selection

Performance of one of the most difficult works in string quartet literature will highlight the program of the Beaumont String Quartet at 4 Sunday in the Kresge Art Gallery.

The selection, "Quartet No. 4" by Bela Bartok, is one of a set of six quartets which is hailed as the most significant output by a single composer in the area of chamber music since the time of Beethoven.

The quartet, performing in the 36th concert of the season, includes Romeo Tata, violin; Theodore Johnson, violin; Lyman Bodman, viola; and Louis Potter, cello.

The quartet will be joined by Daniel Stolper, oboe, for their second selection, "Quintet for Oboe and Strings" by Arthur Bliss.

Athletic fellowship

Committee chairmen of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes meet with Rev. Don Ward, their adviser, to discuss plans for activities and discussions.

Don Ward aids students

By DAYLE SCHWARZLER
State News Staff Writer

Tall, dark and handsome—with gray-tinged black hair and blue eyes—his appearance is so striking that at first you don't realize he's a minister.

And Don Ward, United Campus Christian Fellowship (UCCF) campus minister, is no ordinary preacher. His background includes degrees in psychology and sociology, as well as training in counseling and administration.

Ward is formally in charge of experimental ministries for UCCF. Recently, this has meant working with MSU to develop residence hall programs in sexuality and interpersonal relationships.

Ward emphasizes the development of moral relationships, those conducive to trust, integrity, self respect and fulfillment. The interpersonal ethic, "thou shalt not exploit another person's sexuality," deals with the context and consequences of an act, not just with the act itself.

Ward became involved with sexuality problems while he was serving as a director of the Indianapolis Social Health Organization, where prostitution, venereal disease and other sexuality-related problems are daily occurrences.

He came to UCCF two years ago, having been ordained as a minister in the Disciples of Christ Church two years before that. He describes his role as that of a non-denominational resource person.

UCCF itself is now a part of a new organization called United Ministries in Higher Education (UMHE). There are three other staff members: Warren Day (war and peace, conscientious objection), Terry Black (community action and ecumenical dialogue) and John Duly (now on sabbatical leave in Taiwan).

"Our organization sees itself as having the same goals in higher education as does the University itself," Ward says. "We seek to work through existing authentic channels of communication."

A campus ministry should involve all responsible, qualified people, regardless of denomination, he adds.

Last year Ward lectured on urban planning, but this year he hasn't time. His many activities include acting as chaplain to the varsity football team and adviser to the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

He also serves as adviser to community action projects on cultural deprivation and is currently working with a group of department heads on the possibility of co-sponsoring premarriage seminars fall term.

Folk music at mass

Folk music will be incorporated in Sunday's mass at St. John's Catholic Student Center.

The four songs, accompanied by guitar, will give students an opportunity to participate in singing familiar folk tunes, Sister Daniel Marlam, S.L., said.

Lyrics will include Old Testament psalms set to music by Father Gelineau, a French priest. Some of the melodies were composed twenty or thirty years ago.

Father Rivers, a Negro priest from Cincinnati who has studied in Paris, and Ray Repp, seminarian, who has been active in the work of the Young People's Mass Liturgy will also be present.

Eight seminarians from St. John's Seminary in Plymouth, Michigan, will help in the celebration of the folk mass.

More folk songs will be presented at a Hootenanny, Sunday night, at the student center.

"The whole idea is to present the many areas of folk music besides that of 1967," Sister Daniel said.

DISCUSSIONS PLANNED

Dorms get sex talk topics

By DAYLE SCHWARZLER
State News Staff Writer

An index of suggested topics and resources for residence hall programs on sexuality and interpersonal relationships has been distributed to MSU head resident advisers.

Developments in hall programming are now up to the staff and students living in the residence halls, said Don Ward, United Campus Christian Fellowship (UCCF) campus minister.

Ward has been working with the residence hall programs office and other University offices for several weeks to develop trial programs and draw up the report.

The index is intended to "minimize duplication of time and effort in researching topics and resources" and "make readily available information which is often obscure or fragmentary to those peripheral to professional services."

It is also expected to help residence hall staff become acquainted with the University resources and social service agencies, aid in comprehensive program planning and be a starting point for continuing programs.

Included in the index are such topics as "sex knowledge and attitude inventory," "sex facts and fallacies," "premarital interpersonal relationships" and "premarital pregnancy."

"Other topics deal with interfaith and interracial dating and marriage, marriage itself, the role of college women, birth control, abortion, alcohol, drugs, venereal disease and sexual deviation."

With each topic are the names of qualified persons from both the community and the MSU faculty and staff who are willing to participate in a program on the topic.

"One of the real strengths, it seems to me, is that this is a program that makes available people of all professions and all services and all religions," Ward said.

He emphasized that a program doesn't have to follow any specific format. It can be tailored to the needs or desires of the students involved.

The report says, however, that basic sex information has been assigned a high priority in the index itself because students are not as sophisticated about such basic knowledge as is often assumed.

Recently coeds in Mason and East Fee, and men in Emmons took a sex knowledge inventory. (Women outscored men in four of the five areas—everything but venereal disease.)

Mason and East Fee have had an enthusiastic response to a series of experimental programs on various topics. Commenting on the Fee program, Jill R. Potter, Harrisville sophomore and citizenship chairman, said:

"Basically, all those who heard the lectures were very impressed by Mr. Ward as a person. And they learned things they didn't even know they didn't know."

Interest in topics like childbirth, post-natal care and sexual adjustment in marriage was high at Fee. "You could see that it wasn't running to sensationalism," Miss Potter noted.

Suggested programs range from those suited for very small groups to large groups, or both. Two hours or more are generally needed.

A residence hall, or a group within it, which wants to plan a program may contact Ward, Dr. James Feurig of Olin Health Center or Gwendolyn Norrell of the Counseling Center. The group may also contact the persons listed under the individual topics in which they are interested.

The report suggests that a series of well-planned programs is best, because a one-shot program may create a sensational image rather than leading to meaningful exploration of attitudes.

"Ideally, a series of from three to seven topics would build, program by program, to an increased awareness of self and confrontation with vital life issues," the report says.

If enough interest is shown, it is possible that pre-marriage seminars may be available to all students next fall on a basis similar to the Free University, he added.

INDIAN PROTESTS

Hindus salute their God in many manifestations

(The March 24, 1967, issue of Time magazine contained a note on India which said in part,

"Though Indians revere many gods, they raise their right hand to none, nor swear by any book or document." Doctoral student G. Sukumaran Nair of Kerala State, India, protests that this is a "baseless remark" and explains why in the following condensed article.

Indians are Hindus who inhabit the land called Hindustan from 5,000 B.C. In the march of history, Muslims, Christians, Jews and Parsis have become denizens of Hindustan and made India a composite land of diverse faiths.

The Christians rightly revere a single personal God and Jesus Christ, while the Jews have their Jehovah...

Gods cannot be many; there can only be one God. (But) one true God is conceived by finite man in different forms as revealed to him in different stages of history.

As Hindus were the first people blessed to get their revelations from God, they had their conceptions of God in a different historic age.

In the Vedic age they discovered the forces of nature as personifications of the Divinity. At the Vedanta stage (end of the Vedas or the books of wisdom) or the state of Upanishads (sacred books), they found these personifications were not ultimate and that God himself is impersonal...

So at no point in their history did Hindus worship many gods. They propitiated many manifestations of God.

In the course of their chequered history, Hindus found that Sree Rama was one manifestation of God. . . . at a later stage they found Lord Krishna as another incarnation of God. His advice to Arjuna in the great Mahabharata war is the sacred book of all times, "Bhagavad Gita."

Hindus added Lord Shiva as another manifestation of God. Shaktism in Kashmir, Kerala, Madras and other parts of India are convinced devotees of this god.

So it is ignorant to say that Indians raise their right hand to no God. In fact, they raise their right hand to Rama or Krishna or Shiva and raise their heart and head to the Impersonal Absolute (Brahman).

It is also preposterous to charge that Indians do not swear by any book or document. They have Bhagavad Gita or Ramayana (the story of Rama) to swear by and reinstate their faith.

Ultimate reality cannot be a personal God. The concept of a personal God is for the finite mind to stick to. . . . (Man) is a spirit or a whole being whose whole reaction puts him in touch with the whole universe.

This human spirit gets identified with the Impersonal Absolute (Brahman) whose manifestation is the spatio-temporal universe.

Hinduism has no organized church or mosque; it is the most universalistic of all faiths. It grew from 5,000 B.C. by the faith of intuition.

Intuition is integral experience available to the spirit in man. It includes a desire for the acquisition of Hinduism demands from an individual and a readiness to be rid of all prejudices regarding the nature and destiny of man.

Hinduism as a religion preaches and practices tolerance as a virtue. Individualism is another point emphasized by Hinduism at all times.

India has her destiny to fulfill in this country, to be the Light of the World so long as the question of upholding a tolerant and individualistic religion of spirit is concerned.

Holy Week begins in Eastern Church

This Sunday is Palm Sunday which begins Holy Week for the 150 million members of the Eastern Orthodox church.

Orthodox Easter, on April 30, comes late this year, explains the Very Rev. Archbishop Photius F. M. Donahue of St. Andrew's Eastern Orthodox Parish in East Lansing, because the Canon Law of the church requires the observance of Easter before the Jewish passover.

Because the Jewish lunar calendar has an extra month this year (to make up for shorter years) the Passover will begin on the evening of April 24.

At St. Andrew's Orthodox Church, 1216 Greencrest St., the week will begin on Saturday with 7:30 p.m. Vespers.

On Palm Sunday Liturgy will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. On Wednesday the Sacrament of Holy Unction for the healing of the sick will be held at 7:30 p.m., while Liturgy will be celebrated at 9:30 a.m. Holy Thursday.

Thursday evening the Orthodox Church traditionally chants the twelve Gospels retelling the Passion story. On Friday there is a solemn procession and service. On Holy Saturday there will be a Liturgy at 9:30 a.m. and other services at midnight.

Socialist Norman Thomas to debate social issues

Norman Thomas, six-time Socialist Party candidate for the Presidency of the United States, will speak at 8 tonight in the East Lansing High School Auditorium.

Thomas and Karl Prussion, lecturer-writer on communism, will participate in "A Dialogue on Social Controversy," part of the Michigan Council for the Social Studies' annual Spring Conference.

Thomas joined the Socialist Party after taking an anti-war stand during World War I. He thought the Socialist Party was the only organization realistically facing the problems of war and the need for economic change.

As a constant supporter of free speech and the rights of workers to organize, Thomas won several court cases and was one of the organizers of the Civil Liberties Bureau, later to become the American Civil Liberties Union.

Thomas helped organize the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union and was a leader in action against the Ku Klux Klan.

During World War II, Thomas actively fought for a peace based on cooperation of free peoples and rejection of vengeance and imperialism.

He is chairman of the Post War World Council and co-chairman of Turn Toward Peace. He has run for several offices on the Socialist party ticket, including Mayor of New York City, Governor of New York and President of the United States.

Prussion has served as an agent for the Federal Bureau of Investigation for 12 years and has testified publicly in cases and hearings on communism.

He is in the process of publishing the testimony on communism that he gave at the House Committee on Un-American Activities hearings in 1960.

A widely known lecturer, Prussion recently completed a 30,000-mile speaking tour.

Admission to the speeches will be $1.50.
