asst. professor of psychology, said Thursday he will resign at the end of the school year if he is not granted tenure by his department.

Lawrence I. O'Kelly, chairman of the Psychology Dept., said the department has recommended that Garskof be reappointed asst. professor outside the tenure system pending formal approval from the Board of Trustees.

Garskof's name was not on the list of tenure recommendations approved by the Board of Trustees Thursday morning. The trustees' November meeting includes all tenure recommendations for the coming school year.

"My impression is that I've been fired," Garskof said. "They're asking me to leave—it's a punitive appointment in terms of my career."

He said the department's decision will make it impossible for him to remain at MSU and that he already has employment possibilities with another institution.

Garskof, who has been an asst. professor for six years, said, "This appointment would make me a very, very old asst. professor."

He said his teaching, research and public service records should make him highly sought after by the University but that instead he has reached an "end-of-the-road appointment."

"There are a lot of questions," he said, "that students should be asking regarding the criteria the department used for me in this punitive appointment which is tantamount to a dismissal."

Garskof said he would remain at MSU if the department had taken a less harsh stance by granting him reappointment as an asst. professor within the tenure system.

Garskof said the department apparently didn't want to consider his interest in undergraduate education and the fact that he had a psychology department.

O'Kelly said the psychology department is "really interested" in Garskof and therefore wanted to study his progress as a teacher further by reappointing him for two more years.

He said the procedure for determining promotions and tenure is largely

Board approves request; May kept as consultant

By RON INGRAM
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Board of Trustees approved the early retirement request of Philip J. May, MSU treasurer and vice-president for business and finance, at their Thursday morning meeting.

May requested the retirement through President Hannah. May had submitted his resignation effective June 30, 1969, but he will now step down Nov. 30.

In voting to accept May's resignation the board also approved a recommendation by Hannah to employ May on a day to day basis in December as a financial consultant. May will cooperate with the firm of Ernst & Ernst, management consultants of Cleveland, Ohio, who are doing a study of the organization of the business and financial functions of the University.

Roger E. Wilkinson, presently asst. vice-president for business and finance, will become acting treasurer at a salary of $21,000 a year. May presently receives $37,000.

May salvaged an estimated $100,000 in retirement benefits by his early retirement. This is the amount that he had accrued in retirement annuities during his years at MSU. Had he been fired, as it was likely he could have been had he waited until after Jan. 1 when the Democratic trustees-elect Warren Huff and Blanche Martin take their seats on the board, he would have lost all benefits.

The vote to both accept May's resignation and to have him continue as a consultant was five to three with Democratic trustees C. Allen Harlan, Clair White and Frant Hartman dissenting.

Both White and Harlan expressed strong feelings after the meeting.

"He should be fired," Harlan said, "this is a whitewash. John Hannah has dug his grave with this recommendation. To let him (May) choose his own retirement and to get all his benefits should not have been allowed."

"I don't like the way this thing was manipulated," White said. Hannah wants the board to be a rubber stamp for him. He wasn't sure he could get his way after Jan. 1 when Huff and Martin take their seats."

Both men expressed displeasure with board chairman Don Stevens for voting with the majority. They claimed that had Stevens wanted to fire May Thursday, his influence would have provided enough

MSU remains uncommitted in grape battle

By FRED SHERWOOD
State News Staff Writer

The decision to purchase or not purchase a lowly bunch of table grapes may go far beyond the usual pinching and tasting as the controversy concerning a boycott of California grapes continues to grow.

The United Farm Workers Organizing Committee has asked the consuming public to boycott California grapes in the markets in support of striking field workers in California. Mayors John Lindsay of New York City and Jerome Cavanaugh of Detroit have requested that their cities refrain from purchasing California grapes for use in city operated institutions such as hospitals and schools.

MSU does not presently have any policy concerning the purchase of grapes. Emery Foster, manager of dormitory food services, said that buyers "pay attention to quality and price, not where they come from."

Foster readily admits that "at least some" of the 438 cases of grapes purchased by the University during the months of July through October "must have come from California." A single case consists of 28 pounds of grapes, but 152 of the cases were concord grapes which would very likely be local produce.

"I'm not sure we should be placing ourselves in a position of taking sides," Foster said. "If the Administration told us not to buy grapes, we would not. It would be very difficult for us to know if they were picked by union workers or not. I don't take the position that to be fit to eat it has to be a union product."

Chairman of the MSU Board of Trustees, Don Stevens, D-Okemos, said that he would attend a discussion of the issue at St. John Student Parish Sunday night, but declined to comment on whether the trustees would make any move towards participating in the boycott. Bernie Offerman, a labor and industrial relations expert, plans to introduce Venustiano Olguin, a migrant California migrant farm worker organizer, at the discussion.

Sam Stark, an aid to The United Farm Workers' Lupe Anguino, who has spearheaded boycott movements in Detroit, said that MSU joining the boycott could have a significant effect of its chance of success.

Wilkinson named to succeed May

With the retirement of Philip J. May on Nov. 30, Roger E. Wilkinson, budget officer in the business office of MSU, will become the acting vice-president for business and finance.

While May was on sabbatical leave from March 1 to Sept. 20, Wilkinson was the acting vice-president.

Wilkinson was graduated from MSU in 1957. He had more than two years of experience in public accounting before joining the University staff in 1960 as an assistant auditor. He qualified for and received his C.P.A. certificate in 1960.

While at MSU he has been assigned to the internal audit division, and jointly to the Provost's Office. His responsibilities include the preparation of the annual budget and requests to the legislature for appropriations. He has also worked on the preparation of the new business accounting manual.

White blasts partisan use of MSU Alumni Association

By CHRIS MEAD
State News Staff Writer

Trustee Clair White, D-Bay City, blasted the head of the Committee for Better MSU Trustees Thursday for using the MSU Alumni Assoc. to get votes for Republican candidates.

In an interview following Thursday's Board of Trustees meeting, White accused Walter F. Patenge of "using the Alumni assoc. service as a Republican showcase."

Patenge is a member of the executive board of the MSU Alumni

Assoc. and also heads the Committee for Better MSU Trustees which endorsed several Republicans for trustee seats.

Patenge was not available for comment Thursday regarding the charges made by White.

White charged that "Republican candidates are selected from the alumni assn. executive board and that their campaign committee is made up of executive board and MSU Development Board members."

"Every time we have an election these people go into orbit," White said.

He said they "don't have the nerve" to call themselves Republicans so they resort to hiding behind the auspices of the official alumni association.

During the campaign, the Committee for Better MSU Trustees mailed circulars to MSU alumni endorsing Republican candidates David Diehl of Dansville and Richard Ernst of Bloomfield Hills a conservative platform. They were defeated Nov. 5 by Democrats Warren Huff of Plymouth and Blanche Martin of East Lansing.

"Over the past several years," White said, "my mailbox has been stuffed at election time with propaganda which attempts to show that a group of high-minded alumni are rushing to the battlements to stand off the 'black hats' who are trying to take over OUR UNIVERSITY by some nefarious scheme."

In a letter sent to Patenge Tuesday, White urged Patenge to resign his official position on the executive board of the Alumni Assn.

White contended that it was harmful

Exam deadline

Today is the deadline for permission to repeat final examinations for University College courses.

Permission may be obtained from the University College office, 170 Bessey Hall, or at the Student Affairs Office, 109 Brody, S33 Wonders or G36 Hubbard Halls.

Last chance to contribute to blood drive

Today from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. is the last chance for students and faculty to contribute to the MSU annual fall blood drive at Demonstration Hall.

Though Norm Elwood, the drive's general chairman, said that it would be difficult to reach the goal of 2,001 pints without a special effort from both students and faculty, publicity chairman Bob Freehan noted that a heavy turnout is usually experienced on the last day of the drive.

West McDonel Hall leads all other units in the drive's competition among living units. As of Thursday afternoon residents there had contributed 52 pints of blood.

Freehan noted that in the women's residence hall category "it is neck and neck between West Wilson and West Holmes halls with Wilson ahead by 3 pints."

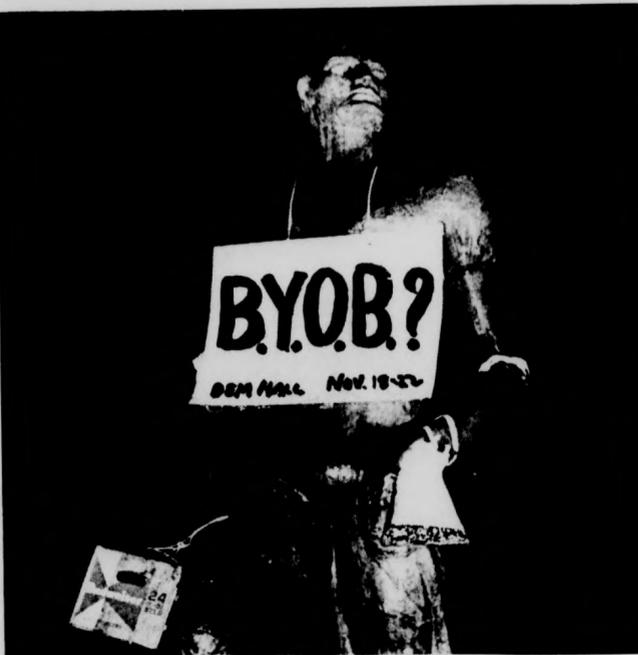

Farm House leads the fraternities with pints. "Every year they do an outstanding job," Freehan said.

Deading in the cooperative living unit category is Ulrey House with nine pints of donated blood.

"All the sororities combined have given less than the faculty, which normally does not participate much," Freehan said.

Winners of the competition will receive plaques of appreciation.

Donors are eligible for individual prizes donated by local merchants.

'U' Senate focuses on equal opportunity

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Senate focused its semi-annual meeting Wednesday on equal opportunity at MSU.

The Senate members—including all regular (full-time, tenured) associate professors and professors—heard reports on the history and future of MSU's equal opportunity programs from Provost Howard R. Neville, Gordon A. Sabine, vice-president for Special Projects and Asst. Provost Ronald Lee.

"The land grant institution of the future will prosper in proportion to its ability to serve all classes and kinds in keeping with its aims," Neville said. "To do so means, as in the past, pioneering in new directions."

In response to this need, Neville said, the trustees created an administrative position, now filled by Lee, for the coordination of the University's efforts in the area of equal opportunity.

Lee submitted to the Senate his plans for equal opportunity programs at MSU as reported in the State News Nov. 5.

Sabine outlined the University's past and future efforts at recruiting more black students through the Detroit Project, an Upward Bound program, the Boys Club of Lansing and the Human Relations Commission of Highland Park.

Sabine noted that major problems of the search for black students are finding well-prepared black high school graduates, financing these students, getting the able black students to attend MSU and knowing how to choose the apparently unsuccessful students who will succeed at MSU.

The Senate took no formal action.

Mine fire foils rescue effort

MANNINGTON, Pa. (AP) — A miner's young wife sobbed that the "only hope now is that God will work a miracle" and bring to safety the 78 men still trapped Thursday in the inferno of a blast in the mine. Officials and search directors could offer little comfort and dampened any outlook the men would be rescued soon—if at all—since the intense heat reduced. "All attempts to reduce the heat have failed," executive vice president William Poundstone, of Consolidation Coal Co., told a news conference.

But he said, "We feel there is a chance to reduce and contain the fire, we will not give up hope."

But the gas and air fed flames refused to yield and little hope was held for the 78 who have been pinned deep in the mine since an explosion rocked the complex of tunnels in Mountaineer Coal Co. No. 9 mine Wednesday morning.

There were 21 fortunate ones, those who managed to escape or were pulled from deep ventilation shafts by a giant crane which removed eight miners in a scoop bucket a few at a time.

The eight spent hours huddled in a freezing air shaft near a ventilation fan.

Company officials also said efforts were being made to seal air vents in an effort to control air flow into the mine. One of the entrances sealed Wednesday was blown open late that night by a gas buildup.

Asst. Secretary of the Interior J. Cordell Moore and Bureau of Mines director Jack O'Leary flew into the Mannington area at mid-afternoon Thursday to inspect the damage. They scheduled a news conference later in the afternoon.

Poised rescue teams, on the alert since the fire broke out following the chain of explosions, were helpless. The scorching heat and billowing smoke prevented their entering the shafts in an effort to get to the missing men.

"The fire has definitely spread during the night,"

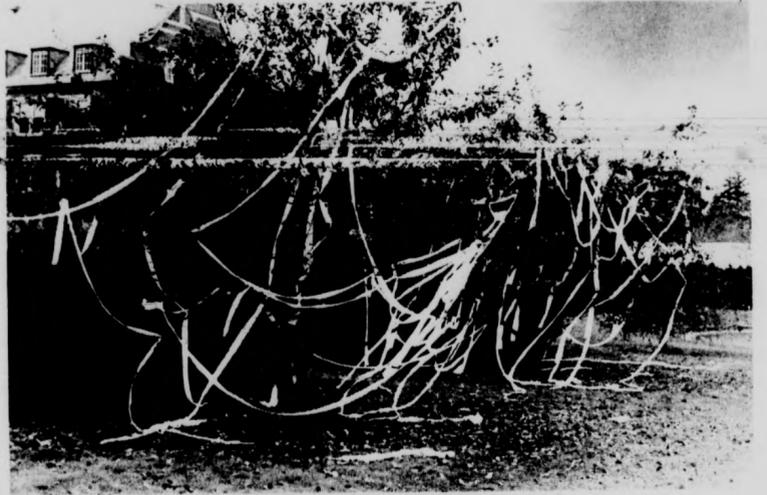

Poundstone said. "The smoke was pouring from two shafts, instead of one, when daybreak came Thursday."

"We cannot endanger the lives of rescue teams until we are certain the fire is contained and there will be no additional explosions," Poundstone said.

W. A. Tony Boyle, president of the United Mine Workers, came from Washington to survey the situation and said "it looks very dark to me."

"But I will be the last person in this room to give up hope," he said at the news conference.

Mannington is a town of about 3,000 near the Pennsylvania state line. Many of the trapped men have homes in nearby Farmington, whose less than 1,000 residents still are recovering from a million-dollar fire which took four lives at a furniture store 10 days ago.

Conference deadlocked over world money crisis

BONN, Germany (AP) — Treasury and central bank officials of the world's 10 richest nations met in emergency sessions until after midnight but adjourned in a deadlock over how to ease the crisis menacing the French franc and perhaps other Western currencies.

After hearing West German proposals to curb pressure on the franc by adjusting export and import tariffs, the conferees scheduled another day of meetings Thursday.

A West German spokesman said the only substantive discussion had been on Germany's offer to use the leverage of its current economic superiority to help France. Germany proposed limiting its exports to France by raising duties and encouraging imports by lowering them.

Sources said the planned German move would cut West Germany's export surplus by about $1.25 billion over 15 months.

Conference sources said no other proposals had come up in sessions that lasted until after 1 a.m. local time.

About a dozen German students forced their way into the entrance of the meeting hall Wednesday night with signs reading "Hands off the mark," "No mark revaluation" and "Franc crisis—fault of French nationalism."

They were demonstrating concern that Bonn might reevaluate its currency upward to foil trading based on speculation that it would rise. The German government has said repeatedly that it planned no revaluation.

Ministers and bankers of European Common Market countries—France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg—met in separate gatherings but there was no sign they were able to agree among themselves.

YALE, U-M

Law profs protest draft

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

A group of professors at Yale and University of Michigan Law Schools are protesting that the Selective Service System is not correctly interpreting the draft law regarding graduate students.

The controversy centers around Regulation 1622.15b which grants 2-S deferments to undergraduate students.

Under this regulation, two separate divisions provide for a status of 2-S for undergraduate and graduate students.

The regulation provides a 2-S deferment for first year law students, but fails to provide deferment for second and third year students.

Professors are protesting the classification of 1-A now being given to second and third year students and are arguing for a 1-S deferment if called during the middle of the academic year 1968-69.

The Selective Service System maintains that graduate students are not entitled to any deferment if they were previously classified 2-S.

More than just the 1-S deferment hinges on the professors interpretation of the law.

The section of the law that provides that graduate students are not entitled to a 1-S deferment if they have been previously classified 2-S, also provides that they shall have no right to a 3-A deferment for fatherhood.

The professors maintain that if their interpretation of the regulation is correct, then a graduate student who was classified 2-S last year is qualified for a 3-A deferment this year.

The professors are also challenging the right of the Selective Service System to place the names of graduate students at the top of the draft list when they become twenty-six years of age.

Inconsistency in the interpretation of the regulation by the Selective Service Board is the basis for the professors protest.

The protesting professors urge all graduate students, including law students, who are called for induction in the middle of a term to immediately request their Selective Service Board to defer them until the end of the term.

At the same time, these students, if they have not had a deferment since June, 1967, should also request as a matter of statutory right a 1-S deferment until the end of the academic year.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Charles Donahue, professor of law, Room 950, Legal Research building, U of M Law School, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Group aids interests of married students

An organization to promote the interests of married students will meet Sunday to discuss past and future action.

Married Students Associated intends to represent the students in their protests of University married housing conditions. Some of these complaints are heating of the units, condition of playground equipment and general safety conditions in married housing areas.

Henry Risley, East Lansing graduate student and founder of the club, said that he has received cooperation from University officials in the work he has done to date. A preliminary support survey showed many married students interested in the organization's goals.

The group will meet at 8:30 p.m. Sunday in the Union Ballroom. Louis F. Hekhuis, director of student activities, will speak.

WHO'S WHO

37 MSU students named for annual national honor

Thirty-seven MSU students have been selected and approved for inclusion in the 1968-69 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges."

The 37 juniors and seniors were selected on Nov. 5 by a committee consisting of five students selected by the members of Blue Key and four faculty members who were chosen by these five men.

Blue Key President Larry Berger, Wayne, Pa., senior, who served as the non-voting chairman of the selection committee said, "Basically the committee stressed an overall balance between academic and extracurricular activities including athletics, student government, special achievements and projects."

Berger added that each individual on the committee used his own criteria for selecting students because the voting was done by secret ballot.

"Who's Who," published by H. Pettus Randall of Tuscaloosa, Ala., is issued annually to honor students who have distinguished themselves in the areas of grades and extra-curricular activities within the college community.

Any junior or senior was eligible to petition his name or the name of any other junior or senior.

The students named this year are:

- Mike Anderson, Bozeman, Mont., senior; Ron Bailey, Claxton, Ga., senior; Don Bangart, Okemos, senior; Larry Berger, Wayne, Pa., senior; Allen Brenner, Niles, senior; Ed Brill, Merrick, N.Y., senior; Leigh Burstein, Mediran, Miss., senior; David Campbell, Chester, N.J., senior; Scott Christman, Iliou, N.Y., senior; Harvey Dzodin, Oak Park, senior; Larry Ellsworth, Ypsilanti, senior; Peter Ellsworth, East Lansing, senior; Bill Feraco, Irwin, Pa., senior; Dave Gilbert, Cincinnati, Ohio, senior and Rolf Groseth, Sarasota, Fla. senior.
- Also named were Michael Grot, Lansing senior; Brian Hawkins, Perioria, Ill., junior; Donna Hill, Simpsonville, Md., senior; Greg Hopkins, East Lansing senior; Thomas Hummel, Dallas, Tex., senior; Doug Laycock, Wood River, Ill., junior; Sue Landers, Stockbridge senior; John Lindquist, Deerfield, Ill., junior; Bob McCormick, Detroit senior; Ann Michaels, Detroit senior; Pierce Myers, Moline, Ill., senior; Dale Oliver, Alexandria, Va., senior; Thomas Samet, Shaker Heights, Ohio, junior; Theta Skocpol, East Lansing senior; Norm Sperling, East Lansing junior; Lamarr Thomas, Markham Ill., junior; Toby Towson, Blue Bound, Ill., senior; Roseann Umana, Bradenton, Fla., senior; Larry Werner, Bay City senior; Jim White, St. Joseph junior; Roger Williams, East Lansing senior and Jeff Zeig, Hicksville, N.Y., senior.

Shelling continues near Da Nang

SAIGON (AP)-- Enemy rockets landed at U.S. Marine Division headquarters near Da Nang Thursday in the second straight day of shelling around that second largest city in South Vietnam.

Damage and casualties were light, a U.S. spokesman said.

About an hour after the last rocket exploded, Marines landed by helicopter at the rocket sites to the southwest and found 20 firing ramps fashioned from dirt.

In a sweep of the area, the bodies of six North Vietnamese army soldiers were found that had been killed by U.S. counterartillery fire, said a spokesman.

The area south of Da Nang has been the scene of several major engagements this week, and the U.S. Command Wednesday in which 46 North Vietnamese soldiers were killed.

In one action, troops of the U.S. 196th Light Infantry Brigade battled about 300 North Vietnamese entrenched 33 miles southwest of Da Nang. The fight raged throughout the day. The U.S. Command said at least 20 enemy troops were killed along with four Americans. Ten other Americans were wounded.

In the other action, U.S. Marine patrols spotted 90 enemy soldiers nearby and at least 20 enemy support Headquarters said an enemy was slightly wounded.

These actions are part of what the U.S. Command's chief of public information said was an allied "all-out effort to attack the entire North Vietnamese-Viet Cong system in South Vietnam."

"We've got literally hundreds of patrols out," Brig. Gen. Winant Sidle said, "we're keeping the pressure on all the time. On top of the large contacts, we have literally dozens of small unit contacts each day."

The U.S. Command said 127 Americans were killed in action last week and 1,031 wounded. This compared with 166 killed and 1,253 wounded the week before.

South Vietnamese casualties were listed as 128 killed, 644 wounded and 21 missing or captured, compared with 200 killed, 798 wounded and 9 missing the week before.

Czechs end sit-in, leave university

PRAGUE (AP)-- A four-day student sit-in strike that showed a split between Czechoslovak Communist leaders and a younger generation concerned about freedom ended peacefully today.

Thousands of red-eyed students carrying bedrolls, books and guitars poured wearily but happily out of university buildings throughout Prague at noon, satisfied that they had done something to keep alive the spirit of freedom curtailed since the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia in August.

"It was more successful than we dreamed," a bearded engineering student said as boys and girls filed out of the electro-technical complex of Greater Czech Technical University.

"It was so successful and we had so much support that the students themselves decided to end the strike before the popular enthusiasm got out of control," he added.

About 100,000 students had occupied college classrooms, corridors and laboratories since Sunday throughout Bohemia and Moravia in support of a 10-point resolution reminding national leaders of the reforms launched last spring and gradually abandoned under Soviet pressure since the invasion.

There were also scattered strikes of secondary schools in Prague and universities in Slovakia, mostly ending Wednesday night. A number of factories held sympathy work stoppages Wednesday.

This produced a strong joint appeal and warning from the government, Communist party, National Assembly Presidium and trade union headquarters accusing student elements of trying to split the working class. Students reported there was great tension in their occupied classrooms and labs all night as they speculated whether the authorities would move against them after the sit-in was prolonged.

But no police reinforcements appeared as the large "strike" banners were removed from college buildings and the students emerged.

Equity and appropriations

Inequalities and inadequacies present in the Michigan system of funding higher education have recently undergone scrutiny by the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP). The points the association brings up are well worth consideration for eliminating those inadequacies.

But elimination means a vast overhaul of present policy. To begin with, the current figure used to compute appropriations, FYE (dollars per fiscal year equated) student, should be replaced with a more equitable instrument. In its report, the AAUP suggested a possible plan. This includes the idea that the cost of instruction increases from the freshman level on up. In any new policy something similar to this notion must be represented fully.

In other recommendations, the AAUP proposed that the state make a determined effort to bring every institution up to a position of excellence by first abandoning its acceptance of institutions of varying quality.

But for this to come into being there must be agreement on a guarantee for a minimum standard of equity for all schools of higher learning. As has been pointed out, under the present fiscal system some institutions receive funds equal to or greater than their calculated minimum. However, last year, MSU and some other schools received less than the minimum under the present standard. It is clear that if the idea of varying quality continues, then MSU and other state institutions in Michigan will probably fall further behind those institutions already receiving funds greater than their minimums.

Faculty compensation is another area of extreme importance. Since compensation of faculty members is a large part of appropriations for institutions, then the quality of the faculty and of the school itself is greatly dependent on the funds available. In fact, the AAUP has pointed out that faculty compensation in Michigan institutions is consistently below that of a comparable five-state average.

With inadequate compensation for Michigan faculty members in general, quality education may be hindered. If minimum funds were allocated to all Michigan institutions below equity the increased salaries resulting would attract better faculties. The advantages of increased salaries are many and should be considered carefully. Obviously, however, increased salaries will be to no avail if not coupled with adequate programs and facilities.

Underlying this whole program of achieving equity in education is the practical aspect. Can the state supply the money needed?

This is uncertain. But what is certain is the need for a change in the present system. Accepting the present appropriations is admitting failure—a failure greatly affecting higher education in the state.

The bridges are coming down in Europe, and the walls are being reinforced. If you put together the Soviet action in Czechoslovakia and the Western reaction, as shown by the NATO communique, you get the beginnings of what may become another cold war over the power structure of Europe.

The much heralded bridge-building phase of U.S. policy toward Eastern Europe is over. Looking back at it, one wonders whether it ever had a real chance to succeed, because it depended so completely on Soviet good will. The withdrawal of that good will was signaled by the invasion of Czechoslovakia and the escalation of Soviet naval strength in the Mediterranean.

But while these events were the signals of the new Soviet policy, they were not its source. The source is a crisis of the Soviet leadership—inept, confused, divided, locked in a sharp inner struggle in which the civilian Hawks and the generals seem to have seized the whip hand.

We have been accustomed to stressing the disarray in the Western alliance. But the fact is that the disarray within NATO has been pretty well muted. The real disarray is within Eastern Europe, the Soviet Union, Communist China and the world Communist parties. Compared with this, the Western power cluster, whose leadership Lyndon Johnson will be handing over to Richard Nixon, is in tolerably good shape.

The reports are that the Soviet leaders were persuaded to risk the Czech adventure by Walter Ulbricht's argument that the defense of East Germany required it. But to stress Ulbricht's role misses the real point, which is that the argument was a military one and that the final arbiters were the generals. What probably counted with the civilian leaders was the growing conviction that internal control of dangerous thoughts within Communist countries is more important to Soviet power than world opinion.

The result in any event was the doctrine—not new, but given a new sharpness—that the Communist countries form a Socialist Commonwealth, and that the Soviet Union has the right to intervene if any of them is threatened by a challenge from within to Soviet power.

It is this doctrine of Soviet intervention, as well as the Czech invasion, that the NATO nations have now answered with a counterdoctrine. They have warned the Soviets that any attempt to interfere with uncommitted Communist countries—Romania and Yugoslavia—will have the indirect effect of altering the power balance in Europe and will be counted a threat to the integrity of Europe. This means that NATO is now committed to a doctrine of indirect as well as direct defense.

By building a wall around Czechoslovakia, the Russians have given the West a chance to build a counterwall around Yugoslavia, Romania and perhaps neutralized Austria as well. The bridges are down, the walls are rising.

Obviously, this has its dangers, since it increases the number of trouble zones in Europe where a wrong move by either camp would flare into a war. Defense Secretary Clark Clifford emphasized that the NATO meeting the array of strategic and tactical missiles at the command of the Western power cluster. He was reassuring the Germans and others and signaling a firm warning to the Russians.

For Europeans, and for Americans, too the best defense assurance for the future of Europe lies in further steps toward integrating Europe itself. Hence the renewed talk about overcoming the present impasse in the Common Market over

Great Britain and—when Charles de Gaulle relents or goes—about moving toward some political integration. There is a paradox here worth noting:

A stronger Europe will be one without national-sovereignty walls. But for the present, when NATO talks of throwing a wall around the power balance in Europe, the test of Soviet aggression is the violation of national sovereignty.

The United States faces the problem, also, of where to build a wall, where to build a bridge. On Western Europe it has decided to build a temporary NATO wall. But on the Paris peace talks, on the Middle East and especially on nuclear disarmament and control, she needs a dialogue with the Soviet Union, and those walls must come down.

Five years ago today

"With a good conscience our only sure reward, with history the final judge of our deeds, let us go forth to lead the land we love, asking His blessing and His help, but knowing that here on earth God's work must truly be His own."

--John F. Kennedy

35th President of the United States

Jan. 20, 1961

It was a cool, sunny day. New York children were happy because it was the end of the school week. The date was Friday, Nov. 22, 1963.

I walked to school with three or four of my friends. We followed our usual route and arrived promptly at 9:00 a.m. The kids were noisy as they ran to get to their section classes on time.

After section was over, I proceeded to my classes for the day. I had social science, math and French in the morning. A quick lunch followed with Science and English remaining in the afternoon.

My science class was from 1:28 p.m. to 2:16 p.m. Mr. Resnick, my teacher, looked a little upset when we walked in the room. He told us to sit down (I didn't like him very much).

Then he said something I'll never forget: "President Kennedy's been shot in the chest in Dallas." As he calmly stated these words, the class froze. A girl in the middle of the room stood up and said "No, I heard that he was shot in the head!" I don't think it matters anymore," my teacher responded.

No one could get any more news so we just sat there and listened to his lecture. I don't think he said anything worthwhile.

I'm sure it was exactly at 2 p.m. when a voice came over the loudspeaker. "Will everyone please rise for a minute of silent prayer. The President is dead."

There was silence for a few seconds. A little crying followed. My hands moistened and I felt sick. The tears didn't come, but my mind pleaded for reason. We sat down.

My English class went by very quickly and at 3 p.m., I left for home. A few people were laughing outside the building and I felt angry at them. I hurried home and walked in the house.

Our housekeeper smiled and said "Hi." I blurted out that President Kennedy was dead. She didn't believe me.

We sat and watched television together for about one half hour. She kept repeating how unbelievable it was. Then she went back to work and I continued to watch television.

When my parents and sisters came home we ate dinner. Then, we all watched television for awhile.

I had to get ready for a Bas Mitzvah that I was invited to so I quickly got dressed. I went with a good friend of mine and we got to the temple a few minutes late.

During the sermon, the rabbi kept pointing out how good it was that President Kennedy was no longer with us. I kept looking at my friend. We sat in disbelief.

When the services and the party for the girl were over, my friend and I started to walk home. We stopped at a luncheonette and I picked up a copy of the New York World-Telegram and Sun. The headline read: "President Shot Dead."

When I got home, I went up to my room and put the headline away for safe-keeping. I went to sleep and Nov. 22, 1963 vanished forever.

Today, five years later, I don't remember very much of President John F. Kennedy. I know that he was a good and decent man who was an inspiring leader to our country. But, my memory fails me on what he meant to me while he was alive.

I have only one wish today. Think of President Kennedy. Think of what his life means to you. Above all, read his inaugural address. Only then can you learn from his teachings.

For, if anyone's life was a "profile in courage," then it was the one belonging to John F. Kennedy, 35th President of the United States.

DAVE SHORT

A legacy to remember

Five years have passed since the assassination of John F. Kennedy, the 35th President of the United States. Five years. One half a decade.

During that time, the immediate effect that John F. Kennedy had on the American people and their way of life has also passed.

Gone from the American scene is the image of youth, vigor, and charisma that JFK gave the President's office.

Gone are the people who were once his people and his way of life. The Kennedy Cabinet of top governmental and administrative officials and intellectuals has long since dissolved. The young President's companion and adviser, his brother Robert, has also died at the hands of an assassin. John Kennedy's young widow has now disassociated herself with the burden of his name and his legend.

Gone are the plans and policies that he once forwarded. Although they have been passed by Congress and indoctrinated into the American society, Kennedy's original policies will go down in history as the passed legislation of the man who succeeded him.

Gone are the memorial tokens which followed the death of the Man from Massachusetts. The books, pictures, and the recorded passages of JFK have dropped out of the best selling lists and faded into the storage rooms of America.

But, there is one thing that John F. Kennedy left behind that has not passed from the American life.

Although it was unfinished and unpolished, President Kennedy left a legacy of what America should be and could be for the American people.

Through out his campaign for the Presidency and his term of office, Kennedy stressed that America could not stand still; in a time of burden and sacrifice, America must move forward.

His assassination brought an end to his drive forward.

Because he left no book of ideologies for the achievement of his goal, it is impossible to pinpoint his plans for America. But, through the things that he did do and did say, JFK set the guidelines for the way in which he wanted America to move.

John Kennedy sought first to unite America in preparation for its drive forward. Wanting more than just "written rights," he sought through clear and far-reaching legislation the equality of civil rights for blacks and other minority groups in this country.

Poverty and the problems of old age, in his eyes, were immediate dangers in America that had to be corrected. In an attempt to overcome them, he pushed for the passage of his anti-poverty and medicare programs in Congress.

Feeling that the growth and expansion of America was crucial in the future, he wanted vast, liberal economic policies instituted for this advancement.

America, in JFK's views, had to play a foremost role in the security and maintenance of world peace.

An assassin's bullets cut short these plans for America but they did not dissolve them. John Kennedy made the American people aware of what was possible in the future of America. As typified in the unrest and turbulence of the people today, America has not forgotten what he showed it.

That grown men would break down and cry in the days after his assassination and in the years afterwards (the 1964 Democratic Convention) is a tribute to what John Kennedy sought and stood for in America.

One cannot help but recall the eulogy given in memory of JFK by his brother Robert during the 1964 Democratic convention because it represented the way in which Americans, both Republican and Democratic, thought of him. Quoting Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," Robert Kennedy said:

... when he shall die
Take him and cut him out in little stars,
And he will make the face of heaven
so fine
That all of the world will be in love with the night
And pay no worship to the garish Sun."

It would be folly to try and determine the success of the Kennedy Administration at this time. But, it is possible to speculate as to the effect that John Kennedy had upon the American people.

John F. Kennedy was no Lincoln, Wilson, or Roosevelt. John F. Kennedy was John F. Kennedy.

POINT OF VIEW

Law and order today

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following Point of View was written by Lester Ginsberg, resident assistant at North Wonders Hall.

The responsible citizen's dream --law and order. "Hippies!" we were called. Well, I can vouch for the fact that the average length of each hair on our heads was considerably less than that of a sheep dog.

My son told me what group you punks were in!

Why is it deemed wrong for students to protest over the form and content of their educational system but deemed right for adults to go as far as physical action against people who interfere with their wish to boogie it up?

I further invite any interested students to join me in pursuing this end. Anyone with similar problems please contact me at 489-0934 or 353-5152.

First, there is a major difference in meaning between the statements: 1. "Most firings in the business world are a consequence of personality traits rather than of ability and this is likely true of the academic world as well" and 2. "Firings of nontenured faculty are based on personal reasons rather than academic freedom."

But I'm sure the citizens' actions were defensible. After all, we took such violent action as to hand out copies of Ordinance 22.00 and explain to people that they were violating it.

Yes sir. You see we are trying to point up an inequity in the system. We are not out to get you--we aren't going to file any complaints.

This must be hypocrisy of the highest order. It's too bad. We were just getting psyched up about giving our all for motherhood, the flag and Richard Nixon because we thought the adults were sincere and just in their wish for law and order.

We are concerned that the recent actions taken by other hall governing groups which in our opinion are in direct conflict with the ideals of student responsibility and hall autonomy, might sway your forthcoming decisions on proposed open house and freshmen hours policies.

'New breed' tag characterizes class of '72

By GREG SCHROEDER
The freshmen in the class of 1972 are a "new breed" to enter MSU. They have been described by many as an interested class with many of their own ideas, who are ready to give their opinions on just about anything. But not all of the 9,670 freshmen at MSU are here solely to get an education. Some come just to get a degree which offers them status and a better paying job.

While others search for potential husbands or an expanded social life. "I can't understand how students can get busted for having liquor in their rooms while alumni can guzzle booze on campus and get away with it," Scott McKenzie, Butte, Mon., freshman, said.

Chris Veremakis, Belleville, Ill., freshman, felt that a student taking an 18 credit load is faced with a great deal of academic responsibility—much more responsibility than the administration will allow a student in his social life.

Student teaching times vary

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

range from full-time teaching assignments to only two or three hours per day.

In student teaching at MSU, the student has the opportunity to receive the instruction and experience necessary to help him become the best possible beginning teacher according to the brochure from the Student Teaching Office. Participation in the program leads the student to a "realistic self concept" of his teaching competence and his place in the teaching program.

Students at MSU apply for student teaching two terms prior to their enrollment in Education 436 student teaching. Normally the teaching is done during the senior year, but second term juniors who have earned at least 105 credits qualify for the course. Students teach for a full eight-hour day for one complete quarter, earning 15 credits. No other courses are accepted toward the student teaching credit.

The College of Education recommends that student teaching be done in the fall term. Student teaching in the fall earns a student 17 credits. The two extra credits are awarded because the fall term allows for three extra weeks of teaching.

It is preferable that students do not live at home during the term they do their student teaching. The brochure stated that the student teachers of very valuable experiences available only to those who student teach in a new community.

When students apply for the student teaching program, they are given the choice of three off-campus centers at which to do their work. Because of the competition from other students who may desire the same centers, there is no guarantee that a student will be placed in a center of his choice.

Students are recommended to select a community which will offer the greatest number of new experiences. The choice of centers should be made upon consideration of which experiences can add the most to the student's professional aspirations as a teacher.

At the University of Illinois in Champaign-Urbana the objective of the student teaching program is to prepare a functioning classroom teacher equipped for full-time employment. The director of secondary education student teaching said, Student teaching is usually done during the course of the second semester of the senior year. One third of the students do their student teaching in Champaign-Urbana schools within a 20 mile radius of the campus. One-half teach in schools in the city of Chicago and the surrounding suburbs. The others go to schools beyond the 20 mile radius from the campus and outside of Chicago and its suburbs.

Students are discouraged from doing their student teaching in their home towns and are prevented from returning to their own high schools to student teach.

Students in secondary education teach for six or seven weeks full-time during the student teaching semester and take other courses at the university during the remaining weeks in the semester. The same is true for elementary education majors who, however, student teach for eight weeks.

Innovations in the student teaching program at University of Illinois include "micro-teaching" and the use of local schools for observation.

"Micro-teaching" is actually laboratory teaching in which the student teacher works with four to six pupils to test teaching methods and prepare for his actual student teaching experience.

Syracuse University has a different program for its secondary education and elementary education majors.

Students in the elementary education program teach all day for a total semester whereas secondary education majors spend only two or three class periods a day in the classroom.

Most of the participants in the student teaching program are placed in schools in Syracuse and within a 35 mile radius

During the summer a co-operative workshop was held for teachers in elementary education to try to improve the student teaching program. This research study with student teachers was designed to study whether or not it makes a difference for students in elementary education to teach at two different grade levels.

If this study after evaluation proves, for example, that teaching both first and second grades during the student teaching period is more effective in the preparation of teachers than teaching only first grade, a change could be made in the present student teaching program.

At Rust College, as small school in Holly Springs, Miss., the student teacher program aims to prepare the student to teach in all areas including rural and disadvantaged areas.

Student teachers are placed in schools in Tennessee, Arkansas and Mississippi within a 200 mile radius of Rust. Not many students are assigned to schools in their hometowns except in certain cases where it is believed that living away from home will cause severe financial problems.

At one time the period of student teaching was limited to only six weeks. Recently it was extended to full time teaching for an entire semester during the student's senior year.

The Dept. of Education at Rust is trying to involve students in actual classroom teaching earlier.

Starting in the sophomore year, education majors spend sometime as teacher aides in the classroom to find out whether they really can and want to work with children.

The director of student teaching at Rust noted that a number of students find that they are actually unable to work with children and it is still early enough for them to change their majors.

'U' prof accepts top hotel position

Donald A. Taylor, a MSU marketing specialist with extensive experience in Latin America, was named chairman of the Department of Marketing and Transportation Administration by the Board of Trustees Thursday.

Taylor has been a professor of marketing and transportation in the Graduate School of Business at MSU since 1961. He will step into his new position Jan. 1 where he succeeds Thomas A. Staudt.

Taylor is presently traveling frequently between Colombia, South America, and East Lansing as codirector of the Latin American Market Planning Center. The Center, under contracts with the Agency for International Development (AID), is studying food marketing systems and their role in economic development.

Other Latin American experience includes teaching at the School of Business Administration in Sao Paulo, Brazil from 1956 to 1958, and serving as chief of the Brazil Business Administration Project from 1962-64.

He is coauthor of a widely used text, "A Managerial Introduction to Marketing," which has been translated into Spanish, and author of "Institution Building in Business Administration - The Brazilian Experience."

Trustees appoint department head

Henry Ogden Barbour, who has headed the School of Hotel Restaurant and Institutional Management at MSU for the past five years, has accepted a top management position with Inter-Continental Hotels Corp. in New York City.

He will be vice president of manpower development and director of research for the 43-hotel corporation, a subsidiary of Pan American World Airways.

The board of trustees accepted his resignation, effective Jan. 5.

In his position with Inter-Continental, Barbour will be chiefly involved with the expansion of the hotel chain to 100 hotels throughout the world by 1972.

He joined the MSU faculty in 1963 after 10 years as general manager of the Houston Club in Houston, Tex.

He is president of the Council on Hotel, Restaurant and Institutional Education; past chairman of the State of Michigan's Wage Deviation Board; past president of the Texas Lone Star Chapter of the Club Managers Assn. of America; and former director of the Houston Restaurant Assn.

He has also served as Conseiller Matrimonial of the USA to Paris headquarters of the 720-year-old gourmet organization, La Confrerie de la Chaine des Rôtisseurs.

Among his numerous culinary honors, he prizes the d'Honneur of the French National Wine Committee.

TRUSTEES MEET

Staff changes approved

MSU's Board of Trustees Thursday approved seven appointments, 20 leaves, 19 transfers, assignments and miscellaneous actions, 10 resignations and terminations, and five retirements.

The retirements included that of Philip J. May, vice president for business and finance, who requested that the effective date be Nov. 30. The Board also designated Roger E. Wilkinson as acting vice president for business and finance, effective Dec. 1.

Transfer of assignments included the naming of Donald A. Taylor, professor of marketing and transportation administration, as chairman of the department. He succeeds Thomas A. Staudt, who was appointed to a newly created marketing position with Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors Corp.

Appointments approved were: Robert C. Miley, specialist in agricultural economics, Dec. 1, 1968; Joseph M. Vargas, Jr., asst. professor of botany and plant pathology, Nov. 1, 1968; and Leland F. Velicher, asst. professor in microbiology and public health, July 1, 1969.

Other appointments included Jenny A. Lind, librarian, Jan. 2, 1969; Gary D. MacNellan, librarian, Nov. 15, 1968; Bernice Z. Wallace, librarian, Nov. 18, 1968; and LaVonne E. Kriesel, secretary-accountant to the MSU Tanzania Project, Nov. 1, 1968.

The board approved sabbatical leaves for: Norman R. Thompson, professor of crop science, Dec. 15, 1968-June 15, 1969, to study in western U.S., Hawaii, the Philippines and Australia; Jonathan W. Wright, professor of forestry, April 1-30, 1969, to travel in the Far East; C. David Moad, professor of English, April 1-June 30, 1969, to study at home; and William Whalton, associate professor of English, Sept. 1, 1969-Aug. 31, 1970, to study in Greece.

Also given sabbatical leaves were: James R. Hooker, associate professor of history and the African Studies Center, Jan. 1-March 31, 1969, to study in Trinidad and Tobago; R. Keith Stein, professor of music, Sept. 1, 1969-Aug. 31, 1970, writing in Mexico, Spain, England and Ireland; Craig A. Staudenbaur, associate professor of philosophy, April 1-June 30, 1969, to study at home; and Drab B. Unwalla, associate professor of management, April 1-June 30, 1969, to study in the U.S. and India.

Sabbatical leaves were granted for: Jack W. Bain, dean of communication arts, June 16-Sept. 15, 1969, to study in Michigan and travel in the United States; John M. Parsey, associate professor of advanced studies in education and administration and higher education, Jan. 1-June 30, 1969, to conduct research and for writing at home; Buford L. Steffire, professor of counseling, personnel services and educational psychology, Jan. 1-March 31, 1970; and Cole S. Brembeck, associate dean of education and director of the Institute for International Studies in Education, April 1-June 30, 1969, to study and write at MSU.

Also given sabbatical leaves were: Z. George Barnett, professor of secondary education and curriculum, Sept. 1, 1969-Aug. 31, 1970, to study at the University of California at Santa Barbara; Charles W. Barr, professor of urban planning and landscape architecture, Oct. 1-Dec. 31, 1969, to study in Australia, Southeast Asia and Europe; D. Newton Glick, professor of urban planning and landscape architecture, April 1-Sept. 30, 1969, to study in Africa and Europe; and Philipp Gerhardt, professor and chairman of micro-medicine and public health, Jan. 20-April 19, 1969, to study at Stanford University.

Leaves were also approved for: Lowell F. Rothert, program asst. in 4-H Youth, Nov. 1, 1968-June 15, 1969, to study at MSU; Harold G. Marcus, associate professor of history and the African Studies Center, March 21-Aug. 31, 1969, to study in Ethiopia; Harn J. de Blij, professor of geography and the African Studies Center, Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1969, to teach at University of Miami in Florida; and Norman N. Miller, asst. professor of political science and the African Studies Center, Jan. 1, 1969-Dec. 31, 1970, to work with the American Universities Field Staff.

The board approved transfers and changes in assignments for: Eldon A. Behr, from professor of forest products to professor of forestry, Oct. 1, 1968; Henry A. Huber, from associate professor of forest products to associate professor of forestry, Oct. 1, 1968; William B. Lloyd, from professor of forest products to professor of forestry, Oct. 1, 1968; Alan Sliker, from associate professor of forest products to associate professor of forestry, Oct. 1, 1968.

Other changes approved were: Robert L. Green, associate professor of counseling, personnel services and educational psychology, and James Madison College with additional assignment in the MSU Equal Opportunities Program, Nov. 1, 1968; and Harry G. Hedges, associate professor of electrical engineering with additional assignment as asst. dean of the College of Engineering, Jan. 1, 1969.

Also given changes were: James V. Higgins, associate professor of human development with additional assignment in zoology, Nov. 1, 1968; Mary M. Leitchy, from associate professor of psychology and the MSU Counseling Center to associate professor of psychology and the MSU Counseling Center, Sept. 1, 1968; and Marvin D. Solomon, professor of natural science, Sept. 1, 1968.

Other changes approved by the board were: Dale L. Clayton, from instructor in psychology to asst. professor of psychology and acting director of the Human Biology Laboratories, Oct. 1, 1968; Horace R. Brock, professor with assignment as advisor to the MSU Turkey Project, Jan. 31, 1969; and Garland P. Wood, professor of agricultural economics with assignment as chief of party for the MSU Argentine Project, Dec. 1, 1968.

Also granted changes in assignments were: Richard E. Miller, from research associate in chemistry to laboratory manager in chemistry, Nov. 1, 1968; and Keki Mistry, from senior glassblower to supervisor of the chemistry glass shop, Oct. 1, 1968.

Harrington, associate professor of agricultural engineering, Aug. 31, 1969; Joanne M. Landis, specialist in dairy science, Nov. 20, 1968; Henry O. Barbour, professor and director of hotel, restaurant and institutional management, Jan. 5, 1969; and Walter M. Burnett, associate professor of hotel, restaurant and institutional management, and medicine, Jan. 8, 1969.

Other resignations and terminations approved were: Thomas A. Staudt, professor and chairman of marketing and transportation administration, Dec. 31, 1968; Glenda Lappan, asst. professor of mathematics, Dec. 31, 1968; Clark A. Akathfi, asst. professor of geography, Aug. 31, 1969; Lucy Landon, associate professor of social work, Dec. 31, 1968; and Brian Sanders, library bibliographer, Dec. 20, 1968.

The following retirements were approved by the board (first year of MSU employment in parentheses): Leonard H. Blakeslee, associate professor of animal husbandry, Jan. 1, 1970 (1929), will serve a one-year consultancy from Jan. 1-Dec. 31, 1969; Robert M. Herbst, professor of chemistry, July 1, 1970 (1947), will serve a one-year consultancy from July 1, 1969-June 30, 1970; Robert P. Kruger, asst. building maintenance supervisor in Shaw Hall, July 1, 1969 (1954); and John H. Jordan, custodian in dormitories and food services, July 1, 1969 (1950).

Given additional assignments in MSU's Justin Morrill College were: N. Frances Fletcher, asst. professor of natural science, Sept. 1, 1968; James L. Gostley, associate professor of natural science, Sept. 1, 1968; and Marvin D. Solomon, professor of natural science, Sept. 1, 1968.

Paris boycott reflects allied feud

News Analysis

By MICHAEL WELLS
Executive Reporter

Many people who have expressed surprise and dismay at South Vietnam's refusal, up until now, to participate in the Paris peace talks. However, Wesley Fishel, MSU professor of political science, said Wednesday, that the refusal was merely a manifestation of differences between Saigon and Washington that have been developing for some time.

The bombing halt, Fishel said, was a unilateral move by the U.S. which left President Thieu no alternative but to boycott the talks to prove his independence.

The original proposals for the talks called for only two sides to be present, a Communist side and our side, with representatives attending from each party to the conflict.

But the talks are developing with the appearance of four sides and the Third, the people who have never could not go to Paris without a major governmental crisis on the one hand, and the impression around the world of being totally under the thumb of the U.S. on the other.

"There is a basic contradiction in U.S. policy towards Saigon," Fishel pointed out. "We want a strong, representative, and independent government, and at the same time we want one that we can manipulate when we think it necessary."

The South Vietnamese are not naive, and are very aware of the effect that U.S. and world politics have on their future. Their proposal that since South and North Vietnam are the major combatants they should be the major partners in negotiations was very adroit, Fishel said.

They are much more aware of how other Asian nations will react to any possible moves, and much more familiar than their allies to deal with the northerners as Vietnamese, and as Communists.

"By reaching the conference table, the North Vietnamese have won a victory in the eyes of most of Asia."

"In this kind of war," Fishel said, "if you don't completely win, you lose. If they don't completely lose, they win."

However, he noted, there is no question but that the North Vietnamese agreed to come to Paris because of the punishment they have been taking.

"The casualties have been enormous, so they are planning to talk and slow down the fighting somewhat. But their strategy has always been one of fighting while they are talking, and talking while they are fighting."

The bombing shelling by the Communists is seen by the Southeast Asian authority as a taunt or test of the U.S.

"They want to see how far the U.S. can be pushed. If we don't bomb them in retaliation, we will be viewed as weak. And if we resume bombing, they will claim we violated the agreements which led to the talks."

The problem will be one of convincing Hanoi that the allies will not permit continued shelling, without giving the North the opportunity to make political capital of a resumption of full-scale military activity.

Fishel feels that this dilemma reflects a basic difference in the views of the struggle as seen by the U.S. and the Communists.

The U.S., he feels, is trying to minimize the gaps between the two sides and bring the war to a quick end, while Hanoi is trying to maximize its gains.

But what finally will be the outcome of the talks? Will the South Vietnamese accept a solution imposed by the U.S.?

If they do not, will we encourage, or allow, as Fishel put it, the government to be overthrown?

If the South Vietnamese government does change, he declared, "All through Asia people will ask how much the U.S. is willing to pay for peace."

"The South will not accept a coalition government. For one thing, they have seen the Viet Cong assassinate thousands of non-Communist nationalist leaders. Are we asking them to commit political and possibly physical suicide?"

And if there are to be new elections in Vietnam, after we said the ones last year were fair, where does that lead the U.S.?"

As far as the future of the talks, and of peace in Asia, Fishel could only offer questions.

"Will the talks expand to include 14 or 15 major countries, like those at Geneva in 1954? Will the UN provide a multinational force to police the agreement? Will the Viet Cong be slaughtered after they lay down their arms? Will they lay down their arms? What will the Laotians do about the 40,000 North Vietnamese troops on their territory? Or the Cambodians about those in Cambodia?"

And most important, Fishel declared, is the question of what Washington intends to do about these problems.

Road rally trophies

These trophies will soon be in the hands of road rally fans as Snyder Hall sponsors its "Safari" road rally to begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in Lot Y. John Shoemaker, executive asst. of Snyder Hall, views the set of trophies with a rather wistful look. Registration for the event is $3 with any and all welcome to join in the fun. ## Frats to honor housemothers

Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity is holding a dinner honoring all fraternity housemothers at 5:30 tonight in their fraternity house.

The idea of such a dinner was conceived by Lambda Chi Alpha brothers who felt that the housemothers were not getting enough recognition for their services.

Each housemother will be escorted by a member of Lambda Chi Alpha.

Snyder Hall group sponsors road rally

Snyder Hall Men's Assn. will sponsor "Snyder Safari," a road rally, beginning 9 a.m. Saturday in Lot Y.

The rally will be open to everyone and cost $3 per car with no limit to the number of passengers.

Each car will be given a set of instructions in the form of clues. The object is to reach designated check points at an exact time. Though most participants will estimate their time, some cars are equipped with small computers.

The course will cover approximately 100 miles of Ingham County and is expected to take three hours to complete. A trophy will be presented to each of the top three finishers in both the expert and novice classes.

Rod Slutsky, president of Snyder Hall, said the directions will include some jokes and there will be lots of fun.

Now for the first time at popular prices. Direct from its reserved-seat engagement.

LIVE ENTERTAINMENT LIGHT

No escape in campus films

By JIM YOUSLING
State News Reviewer

This weekend may separate the men from the mice in the selection of entertainment, for the live events are light and the movies are very heavy.

Live, we have The New Folk, a singing group sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ. Specializing in the pop idiom with songs like "Cherish," "The Sounds of Silence" and others of that ilk, they will be lifting spirits at 8:30 tonight in the Men's IM Bldg.

Also light and live is The Joint, the coffeehouse located in the Student Services basement. This showcase for local and imported talent provides an intimate atmosphere for poetry readings, folk music, comedy or whatever else seems surf-

The three on-campus films, each of which is excellent in its own particular way, offer nothing approaching sheer escapism.

The most popular, but certainly the least thought-provoking, of these, "Closely Watched Trains," is a sort of "The Graduate Goes Czech." Like the Nichols film, "Trains" begins as a comedy about a young man's floundering attempts at seduction and then pulls out the stops and meanders into tragedy.

Since the Czech film industry is obsessed by the Nazi occupation, "Trains" slips into its comments on heroism and war quite naturally, adding a large number of unjustified artsy-craftsy camera angles, and resulting in a film that does nothing very original or unusual but manages to be both amusing and touching in a low-key manner. At 7:30 tonight in the Auditorium.

Even less amusing, but far more thought-provoking, is Mark Lane's documentary, "Rush to Judgment," a direct attack on the Warren Commission Report on the assassination of J.F.K. Basically a series of interviews with officials and witnesses, the film will disrupt any pat solutions you might have believed. At 7 and 9:30 tonight in 109 Anthony Hall.

And finally we have "The Threepenny Opera." Since this classic film is so old (1932) and in vested, it may please the masses less than anything else on campus, but its enduring qualities should, I hope, overcome any hesitations you might have about plunging into a veritable sewer of humanity.

Based on Kurt Weill's masterpiece, "Die Dreigroschenoper," this film version retains everything that made the stage production a monumental success, and it premiered in Germany under the shadow of Hitler and again at its off-Broadway revival in 1957. It has all the great songs, including "Mack the Knife" and "Jenny Song (The Black Freighter)," plus the presence of Weill's widow Lotte Lenya in her now-legendary role as the cockney girl who loves Mackie. This is strong stuff. Bertolt Brecht's political satire maintains its bite. Weill's harsh music still seems avant-garde, and the cynicism that oozes from the characters is anything but fun. But it is not to be missed. At 7 and 9 tonight and Saturday in 108 Wells.

Education study continues

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Institute for International Studies is beginning its sixth year of research in international and comparative education.

The Institute is primarily concerned with increasing knowledge of the role of education in cross-cultural and international settings and relating this knowledge to campus teaching, research and graduate programs.

Two purposes of the Institute were cited by David K. Hennan, associate director of the International Studies Institute and professor in the College of Education.

--to help support faculty and graduate student research activities in international and comparative educational research, and

--to help educational systems and governments develop their manpower needs.

Utilizing resources from the entire University, the Institute works with officials to set up educational programs to meet manpower needs in such countries as Thailand, the Philippines and Japan.

Currently the Institute has a faculty member and a graduate student working on research projects in Taiwan and other areas in Asia making arrangements for a research project which is expected to take three years and will involve a number of faculty members and graduate students from the College of Education.

All research projects are related to professional education, but faculty members from the entire University participate in the international projects.

The research projects are designed to be beneficial in both the developing countries in which the study is made and the faculty or graduate student in research. The Institute extends the opportunity for faculty and graduate students to do research resulting in more knowledgeable faculty members. We want to learn as much as we can about education in Thailand, Vietnam, Cambodia and other areas. Vietnam faculty members have been sent to Central America to work with the bilingual schools.

The Thailand Project was the Institute's major research project last year. Studies were made on school district planning, improvement and extension in nursing education, setting regulations for the establishment of private colleges, training of personnel from the various offices in computer programming and a start analysis at all the universities in Thailand.

The technical assistance program in Turkey, the current research projects in Asia and Africa and other projects being planned will provide opportunities for a number of faculty members and graduate students to have overseas experience.

strong, honest and most importantly, believable.

Included in the cast are Lee J. Cobb, Susan Clark, Don Stroud and Tisha Sterling.

Lee J. Cobb plays a New York constable who is hassled by Coogan's police techniques. As one of Hollywood's best method actors, Cobb offers his usual fine performance.

Miss Clark as a probation officer, and Stroud as the hippie killer, present convincing performances. They react well to the problem of being mere pawns to the flick's drift.

The best performance was Tisha Sterling as the sweet drug-freak who is as trustworthy as Matti Hari, and as virgin as Barbarella, and as motherly as Ma Barker. Her performance is true and professional.

Technically, "Coogan's Bluff" includes some excellent camera shots. Of particular note is the mad motorcycle race through the grounds of The Cloisters in New York. The film very effectively extended the speed and danger of the scene.

"Coogan's Bluff" is now showing at the Spartan Twin West Theatre. If you can ride out the script, the acting is worth viewing. However, if bad melodrama is not your thing, let Coogan ride on by.

Coogan even wears a white hat. Clearly, this story rates a super yawn!

In spite of the script, the acting and technical presentations of "Coogan's Bluff" are good.

Clint Eastwood stars as Coogan. He is all the part demands. Eastwood is as prepared as a Boy Scout, as smooth as Patton's armor divisions, and as cocksure of himself as the Bald Eagle.

Eastwood skyrocketed to top billing with the success of three Italian-made westerns, all showing the real set in the absurd. In "Coogan's Bluff" Eastwood displays the absurd in the real. He is sort of going from a William S. Hart to a John Wayne prototype.

Regardless of Coogan's character, Eastwood's portrayal is

Panel on drug use

Four who voiced facts and opinions at the Drug Symposium Wednesday night are (left to right) Benjamin Gibson, lawyer from the American Civil Liberties Union; Roy Swortfeger of the Michigan State Police; William Barr, residence hall programs; and Lee M. Upcraft, director of student relations, JMC.

Attorney raps drug laws

By KATHY MORAN
State News Staff Writer

Atty. Benjamin Gibson, of the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU), called the present drug laws "harsh" and the penalties "quite severe" in a symposium on the legal aspects of drugs in Erickson Kiva Wednesday night.

The program was sponsored by Associated Women Students (AWS).

Gibson discussed drug usage along with Lt. Dave Stormer, of the campus police, William Barr, residence hall program officer, and M. Lee Upcraft, director of student relations of Justin Morrill College, before an audience of about 100 students.

Most of Michigan's drug laws were made in the 1930s before there was the research that we have now, Gibson said. They were imposed as a reaction against the "social undesirables" and to stamp out drugs, as a result, the courts are stuck with these drastic laws, he said.

Gibson said Michigan is at the top in the severity of drug penalties except for some of the Southern states including Georgia where second conviction for selling drugs is a capital offense, subject to capital punishment.

Conviction for sale of drugs carries a minimum of 20 years in prison; conviction for possession of drugs carries penalties up to 10 years imprisonment in Michigan.

Stormer said that he felt most of the criticism in drug cases was directed against the investigatory methods the police used rather than the penalties for conviction on drug charges.

He said that most of the information leading to arrests is gained from relatives, friends and acquaintances of the user. These people are never compensated for giving this information contrary to many beliefs, he said.

Gibson felt that there should be rigid laws governing the production and sale of drugs, and that people engaging in illegal sale of drugs should be drastically dealt with.

"However, there should be no legal prohibition to use of drugs," he said.

He felt there was not a just law in response to use or possession of marijuana. He favored treating marijuana in the same way the law treats alcohol—a person is not subject to arrest for use of it but rather for abuse of the use, such as drunken driving.

The use of marijuana would not be illegal then except when it infringed on the rights of others, he said.

He said that in Ingham County many people are arguing that the law pertaining to marijuana is unconstitutional because marijuana cannot arbitrarily be placed in the narcotics class.

Partisan politics brought into focus

The Independent Majority may be instrumental in bringing the issue of partisan politics in local government to public attention, Thomas Helma, Democratic representative to the Ingham County Board of Supervisors, told that group Tuesday night.

Helma, who was supported by the Independent Majority in the Nov. 5 election, said his chances of serving effectively on the committees of health, education and welfare may be hampered by partisan politics.

He said a move by the Republican representatives to reduce the number of committees will give them a more distinct ruling advantage because they outnumber the Democrats 18 to 3 on the board.

Helma said he had been contacting individual Republican supervisors with the proposal that the committee positions be filled according to the representative's qualifications to serve in specific areas rather than according to party affiliations.

"I've been getting mixed reactions on this proposal," Helma said.

"I don't think it's going to be impossible but its going to be difficult," he said in reference to getting Republican agreement on the proposal.

Helma said as a member of the board he would be devoted to representing a liberal philosophy and putting it into practice in local programs.

He specifically noted expansion of the county juvenile home and greater emphasis on welfare programs as part of his intended reforms.

In thanking the organization for its support Helma mentioned several names and said "these people were probably responsible for giving me the largest margin of victory for any Democrat in Ingham County."

The Independent Majority describes itself as non-partisan student organization dedicated to keeping the public informed on political issues. This includes researching candidates for public office and supporting them according to their political ideals rather than their political party.

Organ transplants termed vital

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

KENNETH KANTZER

Bible topic of seminar

"The Authority of the Bible" is the topic of an all-day student theological conference to be held in Ericson Kiva at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

Kenneth Kantzer, dean of Trinity Evangelical Divinity School, Deerfield, Ill., will be the principal speaker. Kantzer, who for years was associated with Wheaton College in Illinois, is considered a leading figure in the field of evangelical Christian theology.

Panelists for the conference are William Brownson of Western Theological Seminary, Holland; John Gerstner of Pittsburgh Theological Seminary; and Leslie Keylock of St. Norbert College, Green Bay, Wis.

Registration will be $3 at the door.

which was sponsored by the Evangelical Ministers of Lansing.

On the program will be Blair of Ingham County General Hospital, who spoke from the physician's point of view; Tom Brown, an attorney who viewed the legal aspects of transplants, and Palms, a Baptist minister presenting theological aspects.

Palms said that every Christian should be a donor and that this should be done prayerfully.

Palms, citing the theological aspects of organ transplants, encouraged Christians to support this medical advancement.

"Christians ought to encourage healing and better medical care. We ought to be pushing for all the healing we can," he said.

One's duty

"It is a Christian's duty to his Lord to keep as fit as possible and to live as long as possible," he said.

"Through medical science, man has the right and the opportunity to live perhaps up to 15 more years—maybe because God wants him to have it for some service to Him," Palms said.

"Man is not only dust of the ground, but he has got something else, a breathed-in part—or a soul," Palms said. "You cannot separate the soul from the body, but these operations do not affect my soul, but me."

"If I am sick emotionally, this also affects me physically and spiritually," he said.

"A doctor doesn't treat a broken leg, rather, he treats the man with a broken leg," he said.

Total healing

The minister also said that when Jesus healed, he healed all of the man.

He offered the example of a man who, being offered a transplant, refused it with the excuse that if God had intended him to live, he would have kept his heart more durable.

"This is silly, for we don't take this attitude about penicillin and colds, poor eyesight and glasses, blood transfusions and RH factor babies," Palms said.

"Our bodies are the temples of God and now God has given us new ways to keep the temple going," he said.

Brown said that lawyers had been studying the problem of organ transplants for nearly a decade.

Legal Question

"The first problem we run into is determining the time of death—that's something we can't define legally," he said.

Brown said that when the heart stops, or when the brain ceases to function?

He stressed that this question poses a real problem to the law, and cited an example of what happens because of the loose definition.

"One of the first heart transplants in Texas was from a person who was murdered but whose heart was kept alive. At the trial the defendant claimed that it was not him but the hospital that had killed the man when they took his heart from him."

"The main problem is that this law is not uniform with those of other states," he said.

"You might will your heart to science in the state of Michigan, but what if you die outside of the state, say in Brown said that in future cases the organ recipient would be innocent because it is the one who killed the person.

The question of priority is also a difficult problem for the law to handle.

"If the situation were to arise that both a young engineering student and a mother of five children, both needed a heart transplant, who would be able to decide which of them would receive it," Brown asked.

"The possibility of artificial parts would solve these problems," Brown said, "but medical science says that it is not advanced enough to perfect these yet."

Brown said that the problem of donating body parts posed a problem.

There are existing laws in the state of Michigan's law-books stating that a person may will his heart, or any organ, to science when he dies, the attorney said.

"The donor has nothing to lose, while the recipient has everything to gain," he said.

Blair said that from a medical standpoint this type of operation is not different from any other, but it involves the previous consent of the donor.

"The donor must have all that can be done for him administered," Blair said.

Ohio, where the laws are different concerning the willing donor.

Brown said that the existing laws were drawn up over ten years ago and were meant for cornea transplants and are not out of date.

The laws for immediate transplants need to be more consistent with medical advances," he said.

Blair said that he was confused over the apparent controversy on organ transplants.

"The donor has nothing to lose, while the recipient has everything to gain," he said.

Blair said that from a medical standpoint this type of operation is not different from any other, but it involves the previous consent of the donor.

"The donor must have all that can be done for him administered," Blair said.

Vatican recognizes marriage between former priest, nun

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP)—A former Catholic priest who married a former nun and later was accorded recognition by the Vatican, hopes the church will act without delay in similar cases in the future.

"I would like to interpret the speed and graciousness of the dispensation as an indication that Rome is willing to move with more haste in similar cases," George Frein said. He added that he referred to cases involving both laymen and priests.

Bishop Leo F. Dworschak of the Fargo, N.D., Diocese announced Monday that the Fiens' marriage had been formalized before a priest after special permission was obtained from the Vatican. He said the marriage now is recognized by the church.

Calderon was befriended in Rome when he was unknown by Canon Charles Shreve, now of St. Andrew's. The Spanish painter has come to New Providence to do two gift murals for the church.

Moslems begin fast

Moslems the world over begin a month of fasting in observation of the Holy Month of Ramadan with the advent of the new moon tonight.

"It was on the 27th night of Ramadan that the Korah was revealed to Mohammed while he was in meditation," Sami Abdelhamid, president of the Muslim Student Association at MSU, said.

"From two hours before dawn until after sunset every day during Ramadan, we are required to fast," explained Abdelhamid.

"With the exception of liquor and pork, which we always are forbidden to consume, we are free to eat everything we desire after sunset."

"Fasting provides a means of exercising self-control for the believer, as well as answering the will of God," Abdelhamid said. "When one fasts, the feeling of hunger lets him know the feeling of a poor man."

"If a person is unable to observe the prescribed fasting because of sickness or other good reasons, he can be excused," Abdelhamid said.

Ramadan, the ninth month of the year on the Islamic calendar, runs for the entire lunar month, which ends with another new moon on Dec. 21.

Religious leader asserts moral law essential to man

"Moral law is the best system for mankind," Jim Serego, director of Campus Action at the University of Michigan said at a meeting of Chi Alpha Tuesday night.

Serego said that many people are today calling the moral laws laid down by God in the Bible and commandments impractical and unnecessary in the modern world.

"Moral law is the most important area of law," he said. "We have to have laws in a world of more than one person. Otherwise there is chaos."

Serego said that moral laws must be practical, fit, and expedient. He said that if a law did not benefit man he had the right to break it.

"But God's laws are for the happiness of mankind and they are practical, fit, and expedient to accomplish this end," Serego said.

"There was one causation in all of creation. God created us for happiness. The goal of creation is for men to work in harmony."

Serego said to achieve this harmony man must love other men.

"Love is willing the highest good to other people," Serego said. "There is no love in the actions of the hippies. They talk of love and throw flowers around but they steal each other's pocket change and argue who's going to wash the dishes."

Serego said that man has had the moral laws written in his heart since the fall of Adam but that he has free choice.

He said that man has built feelings for what he has done but that he pushes the blame on society and its institutions.

"It is not just environment and heredity that shape a man's life," Serego said. "We know wrong. The guilt feelings come from choosing only for number one."

Serego said that all of man's problems come from a selfish heart.

Ole! Chico

Northwestern halfback Chico Kurzawski set up a Wildcat touchdown with this run versus MSU last year. Kurzawski returns as Northwestern's top offensive threat.

FACE SPARTANS SATURDAY

Wildcats hungry for final win

MSU and Northwestern close out their 1968 seasons Saturday as they meet in a 'Frustration Bowl' battle for seventh place in the Big Ten.

The two teams, each sporting a 1-5 conference mark, will meet in the Wildcat's Dyche Stadium at 1:30 p.m., CST.

Unlike MSU, the Wildcat's woes this year have not been of their own making. The schedule-makers several years ago put together a 1968 slate that gave Northwestern successive games with Miami (Fla.), USC, Purdue, Notre Dame, Ohio State, and then threw in Michigan, Iowa and MSU for good measure.

The Wildcats have staggered through that schedule with just one win (13-10 over Wisconsin) but they gave some of those powerhouse opponents a tough afternoon.

Coach Alex Agase's Wildcats should be in their best practice shape in the game of their season finale.

Halfback Chico Kurzawski, who has missed much of the season with an injury will be back for Saturday's clash. "We keep hearing that each new foe will be in their best shape of the season when they meet us and it always proves to be true," MSU Coach Duffy Daugherty said. "We anticipate nothing other than a very difficult season opener."

Kurzawski, one of the league's best runners, has ground out 260 yards in 85 carries, and is three of four on the halfback pass.

Without Kurzawski, the Wildcats have been forced to take to the air most of the year.

Quarterback Dave Shelbourne has thrown 233 passes and completed 98 for 1,245 yards and six touchdowns. He has been intercepted 16 times, however.

Split end Bruce Hubbard has been Shelbourne's favorite target, latching on to 32 aerials pass. Fullback Bob Olson has been about the Wildcat's only other offensive weapon rushing for a team-leading 330 yards.

The Northwestern defense has been punctured for an average of slightly over 400 yards per game. The Wildcats have had the most trouble against opponents running game, giving up 2,429 rushing yards in nine games.

Northwestern's success in recovering one out of their opponent's 16 fumbles and intercepting just nine passes.

The top players on the Wildcat anti-touchdown platoon include defensive end John Cornell, linebacker, Ray Forsthofer and halfback, Dennis White.

On paper, MSU would seem to have an easy game on tap, but this has been far from a predictable year in college football. Northwestern may be have something out of a poor season, while the Spartans might suffer a letdown after fumbling away what could have been a highly successful year.

A loss or tie against the Wildcats would hand Daugherty a second successive losing season for the first time in his coaching career.

MSU has won the last nine games in the series including a 41-27 season-ending victory last year at Spartan Stadium.

Women's swim meet here

MSU hosts the 1968 National Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Champions for Women this Saturday at the Men's IM Pool. About 250 women from 34 colleges and universities will compete in 17 events.

Several nationally recognized swimmers will be competing in the meet. Penny Estes of Arizona State was the U.S. Champion in 1965; Lynn Allsup of Central Michigan was a member of the 1964 Olympic team; Indiana's Judy Hamberger was the U.S. backstroke champion in 1965; and Barb Kilgour, who set last year's IM record, from Westchester.

Joan Carr, HPR swimming instructor and coach of the MSU Women's Swimming team, predicted that MSU should place at least fourth in team scoring.

"Either Arizona State or Westchester (Pa.) will probably win the title with University of Michigan finishing third," Miss Carr said.

Arizona State is the defending champion while Westchester was runner-up last year.

MSU will be represented in the meet. Senior captain Ann Weathersby, juniors Marsha Brenner and Judy Dillion and sophomore Ellen Garrison are returning swimmers from last year's team, and will figure prominently in the team's showing Saturday.

Freshmen swimmers Martha Coward, Sue Culver and Mary Lou Waldie also hold much hope.

"Mary Lou Waldie should place first in both the 50 and 100-yard backstroke," Miss Carr said. "Ellen Garrison should do well in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle and the team should do very well in all the relays."

She said that with Martha Coward and Judy Dillion, MSU should win the diving competition.

The championship preliminaries begin at 8:30 a.m. and the finals are scheduled for 2:30 p.m.

Admission is free for MSU students with ID cards and 50 cents for the general public.

'S'-Akron on radio

The MSU Network, WMSN, will broadcast the soccer game with Akron at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

After last week's disastrous 2-3 record, fearless Tom Brown has decided to retire quietly from the prediction racket. Michigan and Ohio State will be the feature attraction on this final weekend, and after thinking for a while, I can see why he wanted out.

IOWA (4-5) at ILLINOIS (1-8)—The Hawks have shown all season that they can score and the Illini have shown a rather porous defense. Should be fitting end for the boys from Champaign. Pick: Iowa by 17.

MINNESOTA (5-4) at WISCONSIN (0-9)—Look for the Badgers to complete a perfect season. Things are so bad in Madison that if they even score, it's a moral victory. Pick: Gophers by 24.

INDIANA (6-3) at PURDUE (7-2)—This one is for the championship of Indiana. Leroy Keyes should run wild here in his last college game which means trouble for the Hoosiers. Indiana was beaten soundly last week, and they've been lucky all season. Boiler-makers will be up for this one. Pick: Purdue by 2 TD's.

MICHIGAN (8-1) at OHIO STATE (8-0)—The Big Ten Championship and the Rose Bowl are on the line in Columbus. The Wolves will have the best player on the field in Ron Johnson and if the Bucks want that trip to Pasadena, they are going to have to find a way to stop him. It can be done though. OSU has too much speed and depth for Bump's charges. I picked 'em by 6 yesterday so there's no backing out now. Pick: Woody to spend Christmas in California.

MSU (4-5) at NORTHWESTERN (1-8)—If the Spartans can hang on to the pigskin (no small feat), they should have no trouble beating the Wildcats. NU is not the most exciting team on the Spartan schedule this year, but they could be tough if given too many breaks. Duffy should see his boys put it all together Saturday. Pick: MSU by 20.

BROWN'S RECORD: 2-3 LAST WEEK, 37-13 FOR THE YEAR.

Soccer to me!

MSU's Alex Skotarek goes over a Chicago Circle player in an attempt to get the ball during their recent meeting. Skotarek will play against Akron Saturday but will not be in top physical shape.

Booters seek revenge

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer

The MSU soccer team got into Akron with hopes of ending their losing streak this season.

Akron, seeded first in the Midwest, broke the Spartans 33-game undefeated streak four weeks ago by downing them 4-1 in regular season play.

MSU meets Akron in their second game of the NCAA tournament Saturday after shutting out North Carolina 5-0. MSU is seeded third in the Midwest, while St. Louis is seeded second.

MSU enters this weekend with a 9-1 record, tying St. Louis one week after their loss to Akron. They have succeeded in shutting out 10 of their 11 opponents this season.

Akron enters the game with an 11-0 record. The only 1968 opponent Akron and MSU had in common was Ohio, which the Zips defeated by 5-3. The Spartans whitewashed Ohio 5-0.

The Zips have outscored MSU while MSU has dented the opposition's nets 65 times, while allowing only four goals—all to Akron.

Akron's leading scorer is Jim Malcolm, a senior from Dundee, Scotland, who has 19 goals and 3 assists to his credit. Another threat to the Spartans is John Kissner, who has nine goals and five assists this season.

Steve Christiansen tends the goal for the Zips.

One question mark for the Zips is Fritz Schier, Akron's defensive leader this season. Schier injured his ankle two weeks ago and may not be ready to play. The Zips will depend upon John Lewand and Wally Dawyd to come through for them on defense.

"Our game with North Carolina last weekend was a very good team effort," Kenney said.

Kenney said defensive star Buzz Demling was unable to play the second half against North Carolina because he was knocked out in the first half.

Ernie Tuchscherer will be playing against Akron. Tuchscherer, an All-American last year, played for the first time in a month last weekend and assisted in one of the goals. Alex Skotarek, who has been recovering from an injured ankle, is only playing up to 75 per cent capability, Kenney said.

HOST SPARTANS TONIGHT

Sioux skaters on warpath

By PAM BOYCE
State News Sports Writer

Fresh from a shocking pair of victories over defending NCAA champion Denver, North Dakota's Skating Sioux promise to give the MSU hockey team all it can handle in the Spartans' season opener in Grand Forks.

The Spartans and the Nodaks tangle tonight and Saturday evening in what Spartan Coach Amo Bessone calls one of the toughest openers in his MSU career.

North Dakota, 1967 NCAA finalist, finished third in the Western Collegiate Hockey Association (WCHA) last year with a 13-8-1 slate in the league. The Sioux were 20-13-3 overall last year.

MSU, 11-16-2 in the 1967-68 season, finished sixth in the WCHA with a 6-13-1 record in the league.

North Dakota lost to Denver in the 1967-68 NCAA finals, but the Sioux got their revenge last weekend as they defeated Denver twice last weekend, 4-3 and 7-5.

The Spartans lost to the Sioux twice last year, 6-2 and 5-2 and tied them once at the beginning of the season, 2-2.

North Dakota is the only WCHA team this year to have two All-America players returning on the squad, center Bob Munro and defenseman Terry Abram.

Tending goal for the Sioux will be junior Gary Severenson, a 1967 letterman. Other candidates for the goaltending duties include Brian Blanchard, a red-shirt last year, and sophomore Jim Nelson.

On defense will be junior John Marks and Abram, a senior this year. Another defensive pair is composed of Mike Baumgartner and Tim O'Keefe, both sophomores.

right wing Doug Johnston and left wing Roger Bamburak. Hudson and Johnston are both juniors, Bamburak a senior.

In North Dakota's first game with Denver last Friday, Kartio scored all four goals in the Sioux victory. On the following night, Bamburak scored three of seven goals in the 7-5 win.

Coach Bessone referred to the Sioux as virtually veteran and said that the defense composed of Abram and John Marks is perhaps the toughest in the league.

To-ski-or-not-to-ski-weekends.

You don't have to know a schuss from a slalom to love a ski weekend. There are plenty of other fun things to do like tramping around the mountains... racing toboggans... riding the lifts... and ganging up for snowball fights. And whether you've been knocking 'em dead on the slopes all day the apres ski stuff... hot buttered things, log fires, parties... and people who like the things you do. If you're a TWA 50/50 Club member, you fly half-fare in the U.S. We also arrange other very reduced rates. You can save plenty in places like Aspen and Vail. Only TWA can take you to the best skiing in both the U.S. and Europe. Call your travel agent, your TWA Campus Rep, or TWA.
