Youth shoots

at cosmonaut during parade

MOSCOW (AP) -- A youth described by the Foreign Ministry as mentally deranged fired several pistol shots Wednesday at a motorcade honoring the four newest space heroes and carrying two Soviet leaders.

A chauffeur and an escort riding a motorcycle were wounded. Cosmonaut Georgy Beregovoy, whose flight in Soyuz 3 last October blazed the way for the four's successful space linkup last week, was cut on the neck by flying glass as a bullet struck the driver of his limousine.

There was speculation that the youth was aiming at Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and President Nikolai V. Podgorny, riding in a closed car behind. But the Foreign Ministry Thursday in announcing the incident nearly 24 hours after it happened refused to comfirm this.

The youth was grabbed by spectators and immediately arrested by the police. The Foreign Ministry refused to identify him or give a possible motive. It seemed clear, however, that the youth was not aiming at the cosmonauts who rode Soyuz 4 and Soyuz 5 into orbit and achieved the world's first men from one spaceship to the other.

The four, Vladimir Shatalov, Boris Volynov, Alexei Yeliseyev and Yevgeny Khrunov, were standing in the back of an open car. The closed limousine carrying Beregovoy was the second car behind that of the four, who would have been easy targets.

The reluctance of the Foreign Ministry and other official channels to elaborate on the case gave rise to speculation that there was more to the incident than was immediately made public.

The shooting incident was kept secret for in early 24 hours despite the presence of more than 1,000 spectators at this climactic point in the parade near the Kremlin's Borovitsky

Gate.
The news came to light when ar unofficial Soviet source with close government contacts told some Western reporters about it Thursday.

Atty. Gen. Frank Kelly blasted outlaw motorcycle gangs by saying their activities center around sex, alcohol and drugs, with "motorcycle riding being almost secondary."

In speaking to local law enforcement agencies Thursday, Kelly said, "New clubs are springing up and there is an unending trial of prospective members in the petty hoodlum category."

The margin of defeat on the daylight savings time issue continued to narrow Thursday as the recount turned up only a 300-vote difference. Bernard Apol, state elections director, said the recount should be complete by the first of next week.

The police and fire chief of Oakland University have resigned because of a "change in philosophy" by school officials in handling law enforcement among the students.

The "change in philosophy" involves the recent ruling that police officers dress in gray slacks and blazers. Also they do not carry firearms.

University of Michigan President Robert W. Flemming declared Thursday it would be worse "to make academic decisions in response to force" than to undergo a disruptive sit-in threatened by students.

Flemming, writing in the student newspaper, said students do not have "the exclusive right to determine the content of their own educations," but they deserve to be heard.

The Nixon years begin

The best comment I heard about Richard Nixon's inaugural came not from the experts but from a waitress in a coffee shop. "He didn't promise anything," she said, "that he can't carry out." The fact is there were no promises at all in the speech, except the promise to try hard. There was nothing about programs. There was no talk about priorities, except the vague one of peace. It was a speech of exhortation to unity and of dedication to high moral purpose and, as such, a fitting sequel to Dr. Billy Graham's rousing performance and those of all the other divines of every persuasion who seemed to dominate

By candidly telling us that he has been studying the past inaugurals, Mr. Nixon invites a comparison of his own with them. It was not as long or windy as William Henry Harrison's, nor as short and earthy as Andrew Jackson's, not as brilliant and philosophical as Jefferson's, not as prosaic as those of Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Eisenhower, not as rhythmic and sophisticated as Wilson and Kennedy's, not as buoyant as Franklin Roosevelt's, not as tragically profound as Lincoln's.

While it was not, either in ideas or phrasing, a speech that will rank anywhere near the immortal ones, it was in its own way a good speech, projecting Nixon's self-image faithfully, prudent in not boxing Nixon in and thus reducing his options when he will have to act. It said little and said it passably well. But mainly it fitted in with the mood of the people--far better than most wishful Democrats would agree.

The capacity to sense the emerging mood of the large middle class of America and the cruel refusal to be swept along by the current "waves of the future" may be the chief quality that Richard Nixon will bring to the first year of his Presidency.

It won't be the quality of a great legislator or an inspiring, imaginative leader, but don't underestimate it. When Calvin Coolidge came into office Justice Holmes wrote to a friend, "I don't expect very much from the President, and I don't want very much." I suspect that this expresses the mood of many Americans today. Nixon paid his obeisance to the restless young and to the anguished suffering poor, black and white, but mainly he talked to middleclass Americans. They didn't expect deathless prose from him. What they want most after all the confrontations and anger and hate, is a quieter breathing spell in which America can catch up with the gains registered on its statute books and its con-

Will the new President achieve this? He will try. That, along with all the embellishments of rhetoric, is what I take to be the essential message of his inaugural. One notes that Mr. Nixon stayed clear of giving his coming Administration any key phrase, except the drab the the Forward Together." Other P 'sic nts have tried, from Theodore Roo eve is New Nationalism and Wilson's New Freedom, through F.D.R.'s New Deal and Farry Truman's Square Deal, to Kennedy's New Frontier and Johnson's Great Scriety. It has its drawbacks by making the resident vulnerable on the score of performance, but it also gives focus and discition to an Administration.

What hints are there Nixon's speech from which a slogar for an Administration might emerge? He asks nericans to "lower our voices." but Society would hardly do. Neith would the Relaxed Society, although he does ask in effect for a breathing will from all the tensions and turmoil. In inotable sentence he asked his fellow sitizens to "surmount what divides us and ce Fent what unites

But there is another sectence with more promise: "The decent order that makes progress possible and life secure." I trust that Nixon didn't mean his in the "law and order" sense, which would be selfdefeating, but in the same of a social order in which we aim at decent living standards and a decent quality of life for all and which must be both orderly and dynamic at the same time. In this sense I can imagine his continuing in later speeches a plea not for any Great Society but for something nore modest and compassable--The Decer Society.

MSU and the budget

Mixed feelings must surround the budget request of Gov. Milliken. Finally, a governor has lent his prestige to the idea of a four-year medical school at MSU, but the total request is little more than adequate, and will surely face legislative cuts.

Milliken's $200,000 recommendation for medical school planning is an accomplishment indeed. For several years now there has been a steadily increasing need for physicians in Michigan while, until now former Gov. Romney and the legislature could not or would not come to terms on support for a four-year, degree-granting school.

Now, with a four-year program proposed by the governor and a prospective $1.5 million for a Life Sciences Bldg. to house the College of Human Medicine, health services and health care in Michigan could be greatly improved.

But, in many other respects, the proposed MSU appropriations fall short of what was hoped.

The original moderate request by the trustees was $7 million more than the governor's recommendation. Before legislative approval the budget will almost certainly be scaled down even further. This could threaten the funds for the medical school and other well-deserving projects.

budget could take care of the high inflationary trend which has caused increases in salaries, cost of services, and other costs. But it is that same inflation which has caused the lack of additional funds that could have been used for new facilities and programs important to the continued progress of the University. Again, there seems little money for expansion.

The request of $22.2 million, by MSU, for the construction of new buildings and acquisition of new lands which was scaled down to $4.8 million President Hannah has point- is an example of the problems the University must face. When a cut of close to $18 million is made before the legislature is to take final action, then there So it seems that the proposed will be some long faces in the

Cynicism abounds at inauguration

Inauguration Day, 1969, was a lot of things to a lot of people. It was a day of chilly winds and leaden skies, the atmosphere of restraint and somberness, punctuated by the thousands of army troops and military police, complemented the Washington weather perfectly.

On this Jan. 20, as every four years at this time, the capital had decked itself out in its finest to pay tribute to the new President.

But there was a difference this time and everyone who stood before the inaugural platform to watch Richard Nixon sworn in as the 37th President knew it. The new President was not himself ebullient, a marked departure from the feelings displayed by his two Democratic predecessors, one of whom had called his ceremony a "celebration of freedom." The celebration was present all right but it was muted, testimony to the nerve-shattering events of the last year, to two political assassinations, to unrest in the cities and on the campuses, and above all, to the fact that the nation was still embroiled in a bitterly divisive war in Asia

This last fact accounted for the presence of thousands of anti-inaugural demonstrations who staged a massive parade down Pennsylvania Avenue on Sunday. They had come to show their contempt for the system represented by the ceremony. One of them, when asked if he was prepared to give the new President a chance, said pointedly,

'No. We've had it.' The three of us arrived in Washington Sunday evening. We parked our car at the Lincoln Memorial, then walked the half mile or so to the Washington Momument where the demonstrators had been permitted to set up a huge tent for an anti-inaugural ball. We learned there had been some scuffling with the police earlier in the evening but, considering the magnitude of the crowd, we thought it surprising that nothing more serious had developed.

Before we collapsed from hunger, we decided to see if we could find some place to eat. We found a restaurant open just a few blocks north of the White House. There was a mixture of demonstrators and Young Republican types quenued up in a long line.

One hippie couple with a small baby stood off to one side making loud comments about the "lousy service around here." The manager walked up to seat them, remarking that they wouldn't have had such a hard day if they had stayed home. He elaborated at length about how he had lost a son defending their right to be here but that he hated their guts, adding with a smile, "I happen to be a pretty nasty fella."

The morning of the inauguration, we drove from our motel in the Maryland suburbs, to Arlington Cemetery where we had planned to park our car and walk to the Capitol. Just before we reached Memorial Bridge we saw a taxi and hailed it. The driver was taking his passenger to the Senate Office Bldg, which was about as close as we could expect to get to the Capitol grounds without passes. Like all cab drivers, he told us he had strong opinions and took no pains to conceal

As we passed the Rayburn Bldg. where officers for the House of Representatives are located, he commented that the building looked like a huge mausoleum inside, that it had cost more than the Pentagon itself and that "of course it had to be the Democrats who built it." We told him we were representing the Michigan State News and he said he thought Romney was really a great guy--"He ought to be up there today.

The State News had not been able to obtain passes for admission to the Capitol grounds. We had been issued press passes but we quickly found them useless. The military cordon had been given strict orders to admit no one without the proper credentials, a list of which was posted at each of the four

We grabbed a seat on the steps of the Supreme Court, reconciled to being left out in the cold (literally). All of a sudden, what can only be described as an incredible stroke of luck appeared in the form of two girls who stopped in front of us and offered us two tickets of admission. We couldn't believe that they could possible be on the level. They were genuine, however, and got two of us onto the grounds. There, Mike took Larry's pass, went back outside and handed it to John who

We all had the impression watching Richard Nixon take the oath of office, that we had somehow come full circle again. It was difficult to believe that the man who was defeated by John F. Kennedy and who sat on this same platform eight years ago as part of an outgoing administration had come back again as President. Even the distant shouts of protesters along Constitution Avenue, reminding us that it was 1969 and not 1960, could not entirely dispel the feeling.

followed him back inside

The greatest applause during the Inaugural Address was for Nixon's observation that "We cannot hope to make everyone our friend, but we can try to make no one our enemy." It was not a rousing speech at all, but a plea for unity delivered in a deliberately low-keyed manner.

Most of the people around us said that this was their first inauguration. One gentleman said that the last time he had been here had been March 1933 for the inauguration of Franklin Roosevelt. Another, who carried a photographer's permit for the parade, told us he was a historian who worked for the National Archives. He stressed the continuity symbolized by the ceremony-the orderly transfer of enormous power

The parade was about an hour late getting started. From or vantage point across from the Jus e Dept. we watched the President Flimousine go by, top down, the Prijdent smiling from behind the bul -proof windshield. Next came the sambers of the cabinet and several other dignitaries

We moved on up Perinsylvania. As we got closer to the White House, the concentration of demonstrators became greater, until, at the point where the avenue makes its sudde swing to the right, the crowd was plidly hostile. They kept up a continu is barrage of obscene chants about lixon, Agnew and the police and tro os lining the street in front of them. Wen we reached the curve, the car bearin Gov. Maddox of Georgia was very farly mobbed,

Up ahead we heard yelling and saw the Marines double-timing toward the trouble. We asked on police officer what the trouble was and he replied, "Just a lot of commonon up there." Another officer said that the Yippies had just thrown two fireb mbs.

We learned late that some objects. including some 'smo ebombs' had been thrown at the P sidential car. The scene was bedtam for some time while the side streets of Pennsylvania and around the White House were

Near the end of the grade Georgia float which, like Gov Maddox, was loudly booed at several points, turned onto 20th Street where a low-hanging tree limb knocked the "Georgia" sign onto the street and almost decapitated the poor girl at the to of the float. We felt like saying "F tter luck next

The pageantry of tradition and the discord of the street demonstrations; contrasting faces of our nation's 46th inauguration.

Whether Mr. Nixof's renure of office will be successful if dealing with the "crisis of spirit" he salked about is only a matter of speculation now. But the problems he con routs as he takes office will not easily land themselves to solution.

The frustration of palcks in the ghettoes and their expressed indifference or distrust of the new President. the anger of the anti-it ugural demons rators who are in mood to be reasonable, all contribute to a "showme, I'm from Missouri" attitude. Cynicism will yield only to solid achievement.

The future is by no means certain, but we left Washington wishing the new aeministration all the luk in the world. Wall all need it.

Regaining the trust

Nixon has had time to get the feel of the leather chair in the executive office, it is time for him to establish his priorities and designate to the Sena and the nation his position c those urgent matters now awaiting congressional action.

Among his top priorities should be the long debated nuclear non-proliferation treaty. Although encouragement from the President's office for a goahead will not insure ease of passage through the Senate, Capitol Hill is nonetheless, awaiting executive response before proceeding with further deliberations.

Nixon supported the non-proliferation treaty until the Czechoslovakia invasion. He then expressed desire to indefinitely postpone the treaty to show our indignation over the incident. That was August, and our postponement has had no impact on the crisis, nor does it appear that delaying it further will be to any avail. Roadblocks placed in the path of international understanding have accomplished nothing. We must now show our intentions by building bridges.

The spread of nuclear weapons to presently non-nuclear nations is too important an issue to be in stponed any longer. Nixon's support of the treaty will show to both our ales, and the rest of the world that he is interested in cooperation, and is willing to work toward that end. Any gesture toward that geal, especially at this early date when Nixon's course is largely unclear, will demonstrate the desire for peace he stated so strongly in his inaugural address.

The spread of nuclear weapons poses a threat not only to our physical security, but to our diplomatic relations as well. If we are to become known as a peace-seeking nation, every effort for cooperation will have to be made.

Nixon's desire for peace was stated Monday, but that does not make the image reality. We, as a nation, must make every gesture for peace possible to regain the trust of a doubtful world. An immediate step would be the approval of the nuclear non-proliferation

Women still struggle

Since the days of Adam and Eve, man has pointed his finger at woman and said, "I didn't do it, she did it". And since those days, women have struggled, struggled for acceptance, struggled for equality, struggled for freedom and liberty that man assumes.

Today, at this great institution of learning, where we have at hand the record of human existance, we still fail to recognize the equality, (perhaps the superiority?) of women. Women are demanding no hours, like that of man, and yet our distinguished administrators keep perpetuating the ancient myth that women are feeble, and inferior.Mr. Dickerson insists they need a transition period from high school to college (whatever that means and if it does mean anything, why aren't men included in freshman hours, if they are equal?).

And if a portion of the public insists that women are inferior, unequal and should be locked up for transition, why doesn't Mr. Dickerson write back, as a distinguished educator, and help stamp out myths and explain that women shall no longer be enslaved for transition and are

It should be realized that all this is difficult to accomplish within an institution which prolongs adolescence, and perhaps women should wait another thousand years. But somehow, I can't help but believe that Mr. Dickerson is an understanding man who recognizes the equality of women, and that hope still remains.

> D. Pete Marciniak Harper Woods junior

I have been compelled to write not only to point out the utter baselessness of Mrs. Nwabara's thesis, but also to emphasize that contrary to Ibo propaganda, the minorities in Eastern Nigeria have more at stake in the present effort to crush this rebellion, than any other section of Nigeria. The creation of 12 states which is the real reason for Ibo rebellion represents, for these minorities, the only path to progress and self-determination. They are, therefore, naturally determined to ensure complete victory. This is our stand as the so-called minorities. Their differences are important: Genet revels in the beauty he sees in prison life--there is glory in horror. He elevates the depravities, while Cleaver rises above them. Cleaver follows the prison Establishment in order to survive; he is primarily a writer and a participant observer in prison life, he prefers to write quietly in his cell. Genet is prison life.

I recently read an advertisement for a Soul Cookbook. The ad emphasized the chance to experience the joy of partaking of the Real Stuff, of being one of the lucky who enjoy "Soul Food." My reaction was close to Cleaver's essay: ". . . the ghetto blacks eat chitterlings from necessity while the black bourgeoisie and the whites. I think, have turned it into a mocking slogan.

Eating chitterlings is like about Soul Food. The people man and a teacher. But his aim

Jazz, rock top weekend fun

The upcoming weekend offers an unusually well-balanced selection of entertainment, both live and canned. While the oncampus films are all excellent, at least we have some alternatives to them for a change.

Theatre buffs are reminded that the PAC production of "Oh, What a Lovely War" will receive its final performances sary. tonight and Saturday in McDonel Kiva. Coffeehouse people will find business as usual in The Joint's cozy set-up in the basement of the Student Services Bldg.

Most live-entertainment enthusiasts, however, will probably head for this week's two special events: the Neil Diamond-Bob Seger Concert, and the Big Band Jazz Festival.

What begins as a horrific tale of a general who turns from "legalized murder" in the army to the 'private murder' of prostitutes eventually turns into a dramatic study of the criminal mind. Like Hitchcock's "Vertigo" the film gains its suspense from character-study, not from a carefully concealed answer to the question, "Who is the murderer?" Directed by Hollywood expatriate Anatole Litvak, "Generals" sports an excellent cast, including Peter O'Toole, Omar Sharif, Tom Courtenay and

SPANISH-SPEAKING GROUP

Workshop studies U.S. culture

By CYNTHIA LEE

State News Staff Writer One class at MSU is so appealing, that two students drive all the way from Toledo, Ohio, every Saturday to attend it. It is not part of the regular curriculum, but is rather an MSU-sponsored experimental workshop offered to interested people of Mexican, Cuban or arily as independent faculty Puerto Rican descent.

Sesario Durand and his brother, Sylvester, are hoping that their participation in this workshop will help lead to the start of similar classes in their home town, Toledo.

Initiated by a request for guidance from a Mexican-American group, the Ad Hoc Committee, the workshop aims at giving Spanish-speaking people a basic understanding of the make-up of politics, religion, the educational system and socio-economic forces in American society.

Coming from all walks of life, the 30 participants who attend the 10 weekly sessions come primarily from Lansing and include truck drivers, factory workers and high school teachers.

This is the first time the classroom approach has been used in meetings between MSU and city government councils and commissions and minority groups, Robert Anderson, codirector, said.

Commenting on the estimated 1,300 Spanish-speaking families in Lansing, Anderson said,

"The Spanish speaking have a lot of urgent needs. Given an understanding of the system, they can grapple with these problems themselves, influencing the community in a more positive light, than by using any negative or destructive action.'

The instructor, acting primmembers, devoted free time to the workshop. They include Gafton Trout and Harvey Choldin, associate professors of sociology; Duane Gibson and Robert Anderson, director and asst. director, respectively, of the Institute for Community Development; and Albert Levak, director of the Office of Human Relations.

"We hope to give them an understanding of the nature of something they want to improve --the community," Anderson

"This is not an activist movement. We are making no plans of action or strategy, but we are creating more knowledgable individuals and developing alternatives for power flows."

Anderson said he hopes there will be a transfer and exchange of ideas. "We expect to learn something from these people.'

He expressed enthusiasm over the different levels of community involvement with which the people attending the workshop were associated. While several in the group

Pollard lost for 'S' winter track

By DON KOPRIVA

State News Sports Writer MSU track coach Fran Dittrich has lost the services of star hurdler Charlie Pollard for the entire winter season as his squad opens the 1969 season Saturday at the Michigan Relays in Ann Arbor.

Hurdler Pollard, who won his second MSU Relays high hurdles title last year, placed second in the Big Ten and fourth in the indoor NCAA meets, had been counted on to provide much of the Spartans' punch this season.

But a foot injury suffered last year kept him out of the Big Ten outdoor meet and has hindered him so far in practice. Trainers determined that it would be best for Pollard not to risk further injury by running now, although the possibility of the Spartan cocaptain running outside remains

So the three strong legs in the Spartan attack break down into distance men, middle distance men, and Bill Wehrwein.

Wehrwein, Roseville junior, dashed a 48.3 quarter mile and a 31.5 300 yard dash in last weekend's time trials to further enhance his 1969 possibilities.

Wehrwein placed second inside in the league meet in 1968 in the 300 in 30.8, an MSU record, and anchored the Spartans' champion mile relay team.

Ken Leonowicz and Kim Hartman, distance men who led MSU to the cross country title in the fall, are expected to be Dittrich's top entrants in the two mile tomorrow at U-M.

Leonowicz charged through 1 1/2 miles in 6:50 last week, on pace for a 9:05 two mile, while soph Hartman led the milers with a 3:06 3/4 mile and

Editorial controversy delays 'The Paper'

By DAVID GLADFELTER State News Staff Writer

People concerned about "The Paper." underground newspaper of MSU and vicinity which has not published yet this term, met Wednesday night at the Union to find out "what's happening," or why things haven't been happening.

One of the main issues facing The Paper was determining future editorial policy. Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) had been closely alligned with The Paper, both economically (partial subsidizing) and physically (same office in the Student Services Bldg.).

But recently the issue of what to publish and how to publish it has come to a head.

Two factions have evolved on the editorial issues.

One faction is strongly in favor of a more politically oriented publichation, and wants the newspaper printed as such, dropping the emphasis on poetry, posters, etc. as a means of getting the news across to concerns. the student. This group of SDS

Special Request Group Activity: There is a request for a group of volunteers to assist an inner-city resident to paint the inside of her house (walls, ceilings and woodwork of the living room and dining room). The MSU Volunteer Bureau received two requests for house painting shortly before Christmas and was unable at that time to locate a group of willing students. Anticipating more requests like this in the future, the Volunteer Bureau would like to accept some of these requests on an on-call basis. This type of activity could provide excellent volunteer opportunities and projects for living units both on and off campus.

Greater East Lansing Chamber of Commerce: The East Lansing Chamber of Commerce, in conjunction with the East Lansing City Council, has appointed a joint committee to effect the redevelopment of the downtown business district. The Chamber of Commerce has requested student volunteers to work as staff assistants to the joint committee.
