Editors protest censure, demand free press

EDITORIAL

I had an interesting time this weekend in Washington. I talked with Roy Innis and Karl Deutsch and Anthony Wiener and Kenneth Boulding and Marion Lery and Mike Zweig and Eric Friendenburg and Louis Kelso and William Grier about "The Economics of Social Disorder."

Five hundred student editors from all over the country and these people and others--we talked about the future of our universities, the future of our nation, and the future of

Then I talked to Anne Garrison, chairman of the Advisory Board for the State News and the Wolverine, who politely informed me that, in the meantime, I had been censured.

How does a newspaper defend itself against an Advisory Board which was originally envisioned as a protection from the very pressures which have now, quite apparently, moved that board to act?

How does a newspaper respond to veiled accusations and euphemistic charges? How does a black man respond to the white who has "nothing against niggers" but just wants to choose his own friends and neighbors?

Defending "editorial judgment" is like trying to catch a whirlwind--it's some illusory quality that can be simply and without substantiation attacked any time it seems convenient.

Standing on a firm base of ignorance and secrecy, the Advisory Board can strike out against "biased reporting of a series of news events" and when questioned about their action-why, whom they talked to, what they know about the situation on campus or within the State News-they can retreat just as swiftly as they struck behind their vacuous resolution. They can retreat, they can remain silent--but this news-

Without being drawn into the futile task of responding to such vague charges at this point--let's look at what was behind that resolution. It was, and this surely will not be denied--one paragraph. One paragraph, a few words, a quote, which in the opinion of the editors and reporters WHO WERE PRESENT AT THE TIME, was of key significance to the tone and course of a very important demonstration. Why wasn't the use of that word, then mentioned in the censure resolution? Surely the answer is obvious. The advisory board is not going to come out in favor of such a nasty thing as censorship. And yet indirectly this is precisely what they have done.

The insidious analogy to the man shouting fire in a theater can only lead to one conclusion. They would have us use the State News as a damper--to suppress the fire or hide the smoke, while an unsuspecting audience remains in the smoldering

We have not, do not, and never will "forward the disruption . . . of this academic community." Our editorials of the past two weeks speak for themselves on this point. But neither are we creating this "time of unease and great tension" --we are simply reporting it to the best of our collective abilities, exactly the way WE SEE IT.

Our coverage is not above criticism. We have made several mistakes, and have corrected them as best we could. But to imply that this campus is in an uproar because we mistakenly identified a speaker as a student--is reminiscent of the old Civil Rights cry of "northern agitator." We made a mistake in identification, but the significance of that speaker's remarks remained, and those who heard him were moved by his words, not his ID card.

We have spent hours with people from all sides who have been concerned about or involved in this series of demonstrations. We have accepted criticism, evaluated it, and in many instances, corrected or adjusted our coverage.

We have spent hours both on the scene and in the office evaluating the situation--deciding whom to contact and trying to find space for yet another document or statement. We have held our deadlines, and have yet to take the easy way out.

What has the Advisory Board done? Whom have they talked to? When was the last time any single member of that board so much as bothered to step foot inside our office, or even contact an editor about their continuing displeasure?

And just what has this self-righteous body done about the complaints which the editors have patiently passed on to them

What have they done about our complaints concerning the vicious attacks made by Louis Berman, the staff adviser, on several of the editors' personal, not professional, integrity?

What have they done about our complaints that Louis Berman has interfered with the staff of the paper, and with staff

What have they done about our complaints that Louis Berman has repeatedly blocked the purchase of a telex wire system of the College Press Service.

And what have they done about our complaints concerning Louis Berman's efforts to impede our aid to a community newspaper project in West Lansing?

The answer to all these questions, sadly, is nothing.

How can we be expected to hold any more respect for the statements or actions of such a body? They have ignored a slowly brewing crisis within the newspaper, and at the same time coldly perpetrated their own.

Why do we cry out? Why do we protest? Because we refuse to be the editors of a castrated newspaper--one that has lost, out of fear or repressive actions the potency to do what it wants and say what it has to say.

To do so would be the grossest sort of deception, not only to the writers on our own staff, but to every member of a supposedly free academic community.

We demand that the Advisory Board reconsider their motion of censure, that they hold open discussions with all the people involved.

We demand that the Advisory Board take immediate and appropriate action against Louis J. Berman, staff adviser to the State News, for his interference with our freedoms and his vicious personal attacks, as previously charged.

If these demands are not met, if the motion of censure is not immediately withdrawn, then we have no other choice but to withdraw from the Advisory Board, as quickly and as intelligently, as we possibly can.

Legislators rap SN use of obscenity

By ED HUTCHISON State News Staff Writer

Two state legislators expressed concern Sunday over obscenities in a front page story in Wednesday's State News, but at the same time hoped that external control by the legislature or administration would not be necessary.

Rep. William P. Hampton (R-Bloomfield Hills), said he would "very much hate to see the administration take over the paper

"But if this continues to happen," Hampton said, referring to the story, "by either reporters or editors not willing to delete this material, they will be faced by some type of action.

"I hope the matter can be handled internally and the editors realize their mistake and correct it." Hampton said.

Raymond J. Smit. (R-Ann Arbor), expressed displeasure about "things said under guise of freedom of the press on campuses.

'Campus papers are printing things that

Some student editors expressed fear that "if such a ridiculous thing could happen at MSU, think of the possibilities for the rest of us," referring to such things as a Michigan state legislator's suggestion that the current editors be fired and alumni be installed for an interim period. Christopher Trump, asst. dean of the Columbia Graduate School of Journalism, who participated in the USSPA conference, said he was not upset by the use of the controversial quote.

When Trump learned the State News-Wolverine Advisory Board had censured editor-in-chief Edward Brill while Brill and two others editors were out of town, without attempting to contact him prior to the censure motion, Trump said, "I feel it was very irresponsible action on the part of the advisory board.'

The Advisory Board said the editorial judgment in the "biased reporting of a series of news events at a time of great tension on campus" was "deplorable" and that the editor should have ascertained the information that the quoted remarks were not spoken by a student but by an outsider.

The latter refers to a front page story on counter demonstrators which appeared Wednesday, the board said.

'The correction in the next day's paper, printed without apology, does not exonerate Mr. Brill," the Advisory Board's statement said. PARIS (AP)--Diplomatic sources speculated Sunday that the next two sessions of the Vietnam peace talks can have special meaning for long-term chances

Nobody familiar with the over-all situation expects success of any kind within the near future. But they point out that the four-way peace talks session Thursday comes within the period of Tet, the lunar new year, and the session the following Thursday comes on the eve of President Nixon's arrival in Paris on his European tour.

Tet in Vietnam is a time for omens and portents and this year it is a time for jittery watchful waiting on the part of the Americans and South Vietnamese for indications of the other side's in. tentions. Last year, Tet brought a violent Communist offensive in South Vietnam which dealt a severe blow to the allied cause.

The real outside agitators

Police raids on plays, nudity in classrooms, "dirty words" in college newspapers, and other "scandals" have received much attention from news media and legislative circles recently. At odd intervals our own State News has been the center of controversy as Certain Words have been discovered in our hallowed columns.

The forces of righteousness and public chastity are on our backs this week about a quote in a front page article last Wednesday, and before the ridiculous excitement becomes sublime we have some words to offer about words and scandals.

In both the current "dirty word" controversy and the one last fall, objections were made to expressions quoted in particular articles. The State News does not use "dirty words" or other emotionally loaded expressions habitually or frivolously. Occasionally such expressions are quoted when their actual content is directly relevant to the subject of the article.

When such a story is published, campus reaction is usually rather mild. Isolated individuals on campus and in the area feel strongly enough that the use of such words is inexcusable to call or write the newspaper office. We respect the opinions of such people, but do not share them.

Most students, faculty, and administrators either are not at all shocked or at least do not consider our use of the "dirty" expressions important enough to express their objection. We believe that most of our readers will agree with us that people who are easily upset by words regardless of their context should stick to the Reader's Digest.

The most important factor in so-called "filthy word" scandals both at MSU and at other colleges has been sensational-radio stations in every community which speak loudly of responsible journalism and in their day to day news coverage blatantly play on the fears and prejudices of their public. Those which are most indignant about "filth" in the State News once or twice a year are not ashamed of the tasteless and suggestive advertising they feature daily instead of "dirty words." Those who trumpet their concern for objective reporting most loudly are the ones who seldom hesitate to slant political articles or malign minority groups when they think they can get away with it.

The plight of the big city

"The plight of the big city is dim, at this moment. The local governments and the people in the big cities know that they are in trouble; but, they seem unable to solve the crises that exist.

America is sick, they say

And you need not look any further than the country's largest cities to find its "sickness." Detroit, New York, Washington, D.C....they're all in trouble and Although each city's problems are different, they are similar in many ways. Education. Housing. Transportation. Racial tension. Crime. Almost every large American city has had its own individual problems concerning these issues.

The plight of the big city is dim, at this moment. The governments and the people in the big cities know that they are in trouble; but, they seem unable to solve the crises that exist. Nor, could they. in some instances.

To understand the crisis that envelopes the American big city, one has to study a city such as Detroit. Detroit is one big "Pandora's Box' that has had its lid open, to let out its evils, for a long time.

When you talk about the problems of Detroit, it is hard to determine where to start. Detroit has been making national headlines with several education, housing, transportation, racial and criminal problems for several months. Yet, in the end all these problems inter-link to form one evolving "vicious circle."

Detroit's biggest problem is that it is two cities in many aspects. There is a black Detroit and a white Detroit. Life in the inner core of the city is very different from that of the surburbs. And life in the slums is different than that in the other sections of the city.

As in several other big cities, Detroit's inner-city school system, particularly on the school level, is in a critical state. The city's schools are overcrowded, understaffed and sometimes poorly staffed, and are under constant community harassment for improvements.

Racial tension is also involved in the city's school problem. With Detroit fastly moving towards a black majority, the black people want more power and responsibility in determining school policies. They also want better education for their

Although the core of Detroit has almost 100 per cent blacks in its schools, the percentage of black students declines as one moves outward towards the suburbs.

In order to make improvements in its school system. Detroit needs money. Yet, the money situation for the city is not very promising, because the city is almost beyond the point of any further city taxation through property ownership. Detroit officials are looking elsewhere for funds.

Many people in Detroit feel that the state has been lax in aiding the city.

Others look to the federal government for further help. Of the two agencies, the state seems to be the most promising. If the state can eventually be forced to give more money, problems such as those in viated somewhat Housing in Detroit represents another problem. As of now, the only thoroughly integrated section in the city is in northwestern Detorit. Another problem is that members of the black community seldom own the property that they inhabit.

the school systems Detroit could be alie-

The situation is changing due to urban renewal and other housing programs: although, it still is not bringing about rapid integration.

'Urban renewal means colored removal in Detroit," as a city policeman effectively stated it. Under the name of "urban renewal." programs designed to get higher class white people into the inner core of Detroit are being carried on.

Because urban renewal gives lower class blacks in the inner city no displacement housing, a game of "leap frog" takes place.

Poor blacks, who are displaced, move out' into the areas occupied by upper class blacks: and the upper class blacks subsequently move out farther into the once predominantly white suburbs of Detroit. The same situation occurs in the movement of white families.

The rapid population growth out into the suburbs is creating another problem for Detroit. As it is now, the inner core of the city is being abandoned. Evidence of this can be found in the number of unrented offices in the area and in the lack of good entertainment creating places there.

Transportation will gradually become a critical issue as the move to the suburbs continues.

Detroit has no parking problems in its inner core because there is no longer sufficient urban activity to fully utilize the space developed by the new municipal parking garages.

Traveling in the inner core of Detroit is easy now. There is difficulty when one reaches the suburbs, however. Leaving no means of easy or quick access from one to the other. Detroit's freeways by-pass the city's inner core by going directly to the suburbs.

Unless there is a major "remaking" of the city, a subway system from the suburbs to the inner city or something similar, will have to be developed to alleviate the problem. However, no immediate plans for any type of streamline transportation are being formulated in Detroit. The city is seemingly content to rely on buses and automobiles for its transportation.

The most menacing crisis in Detroit involves the racial situation. Although it is not as outwardly prevalent as during the days leading up to the 1967 summer riots in the city, the black-white relationship in Detroit is again in a dangerous state.

Police-black community relations are at a very low standing, presently. The phrase "police brutality" is a common

The relationship between the city officials and the black community have been far from harmonious. Detroit's mayor, Jerome Cavanaugh, seemingly has reached an all-time low in popularity in the city. The black community has vowed that it will run someone against him in this year's election.

As for the people, the static that has been aroused in both the black and white communities towards each other has reached an uneasy stage.

Detroit has to solve its problems in the immediate future. If it is to solve them, it must salvage and revamp its current city programs and implement new ones.

But, there are many who feel that it is too late for the city to solve its pressing problems. Many feel that another flare-up like the 1967 riots is in the immediate offings for Detroit.

The situation in the city of Detroit has not only failed to change since the 1967 riots, in many cases, it has become worse. The city is tense and ripe for a city-wide explosion.

As one Detroit civic leader said, "It's not a question of whether or not Detroit will erupt again like it did in the 1967 riots, it's only a question of when it will."

But, there are still some grounds for the belief that such a confrontation won't happen again in Detroit or any other

Even after Pandora let out all the evils into the world, one thing remained in the Hope.

Beyond cultural differences

I wish to commend you and the State

News staff on an outstanding critique in last Thursday's editorial concerning the present strife between the students and the administration. If only these two factions of people would look beyond their cultural differences: if only they would recognize that it is neither the motives nor the objectives of either party which have alienated them from one another, but rather a misinterpretation of these within the communicative process (which, being very artificial in nature, is inevitably subject to change and variation). As you have suggested, these stereotypes must be over ridden. Being a member of The Movement,

To the Editor:

I support not only the two well-known "demands" made on the University, but also a revision of the entire education system as it now stands. From the above analysis, however, I agree that the best way to accomplish these necessary changes is to consider a common set of communicative channels between the students and the administration. Such considerations must come from within each of the conflicting groups. The question remains: Who will be first?

Therefore, I not only propose that negotiations be forwarded immediately, but I also challenge the uninvolved majority of students to investigate the controversy for themselves and contribute as they may.

To the Editor: We as students note with interest your paper's apparent willingness to overemphasize with seeming unobjectivity the protest movement now sweeping

Apparently Chris Mead and James Dukarm, State News staff writers who covered the demonstrations which developed Tuesday at the Administration Bldg. have never heard of the timeless and honored concept of journalism which we call objectivity.

Unfortunately, the State News, both in many articles and many editorials, has failed to give the average student of MSU the real picture of what is happen-

The editorial board has instead seen fit not to lash out at those who would disrupt the ordinary functions of this Univeristy but concentrated its attack on the administration, which is far from perfect but is trying hard as it might to give students their just rughts.

And what more are students rights than going to class and getting a solid education which will benefit them later in life? Do student rights mean disupting the lives of ordinary hard-working students by demonstrations and the like? We think not. However, the State News editors evidently do not realize this. One would think on reading the State News that it is more closely allied with the

Add the natural shortage of personnel involved in the ASMSU Tutor Service.

Result: a tutor shortage. The tutor program, a division of the ASMSU Cabinet. serves as a non-profit clearinghouse to bring students and student tutors together.

WMSB presents Spanish program

By ROSA MORALES

The Revista Latina is a semiweekly WMSB 30-minute program taped completely in Spanish at the WMSB-TV studio. 600 Kalamazoo St.

The Revista Latina is a program for the Spanish-speaking population in the Lansing area. The program is televised at 7 p.m. Thursday and 1 p.m. Satu-

The program currently in its 12th week, includes national and international news, cultural features, music and a children's story. The format is variable, depending on the resources and workers available.

Charles E. Demery, New Rochelle, N.Y. graduate student, is the associate producer of Revista Latina. He said that past shows were the first kind of sented at a regularly scheduled time on channel 10.

Demery took over the associate producer position at the beginning of fall term when the idea of a Spanish language television program began. Demery said that program-planning was initiated in the first part of September and the pilot devevista Latina program was broadcast in November.

James C. Lau, WMSB producer-director of the production for the past four weeks, said that the main problem in producing the show is having a to tal broadcast time of only 28

"So we try to spread our material as much as possible." Lau said. "Whatever we include in the show has to be of major importance to take up more than five minutes' time.

We are not a teaching show. Lau said. "We want to provide a Spanish-speaking show that can inform and entertain.

The show is taped in segments Once a week these segments are put together into a 28-minute broadcast. Three-fourths of the show is taped in advance every Tuesday with the excep-, tion of the weekly news which is taped just before the show.

Revista Latina is financed, as are other WMSB shows, through the general station fund allocated to WMSB from MSU

'Royal Ballet' pancakes in flat, classical rendition

Ballet fans got an opportunity to see the classics in action on Thursday night. The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, an internationally acclaimed Canadian company, did four dances all in the classic trapition. And an audience of a few thousand did not seem too impressed by this evening of high culture.

That raises a case against the Royal Winnipeg, which is a remarkably skilled company of 25 dancers. Their repertoire is chosen on perpetuate old Russian and English strains

Complexes slate ski fever' outings

Ski fever has hit MSU and MSU has hit the slopes. Ski skiing stunts and acrobatics on enthusiasts are anxious to put in their time before the winter weather fades.

Complex sponsored ski outings are "in" this winter term. South complex ventured north on the weekend of Feb. 1 with over 340 students and friends.

Pat Daniels, Birmingham sophomore and manager for the trip, said that the "student reaction to the trip was really good."

The entire trip cost each individual $22 including transporation, motel, one meal and ski tows. The group also had a discount on ski rentals and people without equipment could rent theirs for $4 a day.

This weekend a group will be leaving for two days of skiing at Timberlee. There are a few openings left for this excur-

Group sets investigation of food prices at Owen

By JIM CRATE State News Staff Writer

The House Affairs Committee of Owen Hall, responding to the results of a recent food survey taken among hall residents, last week, voted to investigate the food-price policy of the Owen Hall management.

The survey, prepared and released by the House Affairs Committee, questioned dorm residents on the price, quality and quantity of food being sold in the cafeteria. Of 567 students who responded, 84.6 per cent indicated that the price of food was Siegel feels that despite the residents not being bound by a food contract, the management enjoys a "captive market." "We have to eat somewhere," he said, "and if not here, then at one of the other cafeterias on campus. · General student criticism was also directed at what most feel to be an excessive profit being made by the hall cafeteria.

George Van Buren, Owen Hall general manager, stated the management would have to talk "subsidy" to lower the pricelevel, due to the part cafeteria profits play in paying off loans on the building.

'The operational realities of life are there to consider," he said. "we simply must generate sufficient surplus to pay off loans on the building. Van Buren indicated his reluctance to initiate price reductions "lest we eat into the monies owed on our bond debt.

"The only money we can count on comes through our cash register," he continued, "we have little leeway with profits.'

Van Buren conceded, however, that given a substantially larquested of the Advisory Board in the last two or three weeks,' The reprimand was issued Brill said.

The statement

The Advisory Board for the State News and the Wolverine has voted to censure Edward A. Brill, Editor-in-Chief of the State News. The censure bears upon two points: deplorable lack of editorial judgment in the biased reporting of a series of news events at a time of great tension on campus, and the inaccuracy of the attribution of inflammatory remarks to a student when the remarks were actually those of an outsider, a fact which the editor should certainly have ascertained. This second instance refers to the front page story on counter-demonstrators on Wednesday, February 12, 1969. The correction in the next day's paper, printed without apology, does not exonerate Mr. Brill. The shouter of "Fire" in a crowded theater, or the man across the aisle who shouts "That man shouted 'Fire' " are not exonerated by next day's sotto-voce remark, "I guess I was mistaken." To our minds, 60-point 4-column banner headlines on a front-page 4-column article constitute a shout. We advise Mr. Brill of his grave responsibility to the entire university at a time of great unease. We remind him that his editorial freedom, defined in the Academic Freedom Report, is ultimately a freedom to serve this academic community and not to forward its disruption.

Kosygin's downfall speculated

By SUSAN MYLES

State News Staff Writer When Soviet Premier Alekxei Kosygin made no public appearance for almost two months, rumors that he was finished politically began to circulate.

Even though Kosygin finally made a public appearance Feb. 6, he is still in political trouble, according to Arthur Adams, trends in sexual standards the chairman of the Russian and East European programs.

Adams said that Kosygin is on his way out, but he cannot back up his hunch with facts.

DOWNTOWN LANSING

There are lots of big companies. What's so good about yours?" Here's what: at IH you won't have to stand in line waiting for responsibility. You'll get it.

Right from the start.

And you won't be pushed into a job that leads to nowhere.

You'll move up on your merits. The sooner you can cut it, the quicker you'll move.

You see, we're looking for the thinker. The innovator. The type of guy who has lots of imagination and plenty of guts. (It takes guts to make decisions and stand up for your ideas.)

You'll have to be on the ball all right. But we'll give you plenty in return.

For one thing, we're diversified. You'll find all kinds of action in steelmaking, motor trucks, construction or farm equipment. And lots of things in research and development. (We've got some far-out ideas on laser beam construction equipment, solar energy and nuclear power.)

In other words, we're working on things that should shape the future. Yours and ours.

So talk to your campus placement officer about us. He'll give you the word on the jobs we have in engineering, accounting, production management and sales.

Sure, we're a big company. But we're big in a lot more ways than just size. INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER
