Academic Council approves, but amends selection report

By MARILYN PATTERSON State News Staff Writer

The Academic Council moved quickly Wednesday to give final approval to the Taylor Report on procedures for selecting a president to succeed John A. Hannah.

The council adopted several amendments to the report.

The Taylor report lists the recommendations of the ad hoc committee on procedures for selecting the chief academic by the council include:

officers of the University. The committee is chaired by John F.A. Taylor, professor of philosophy.

The report, which calls for establishment of an all-University committee for search and selection of the President, awaits approval by the Academic Senate before it can be implemented. The Senate meets March 10.

Amendments to the report approved

--Three separate amendments establishing alternates to the undergraduate. graduate and alumni representatives on the committee. The feeling of the council was that students having an obligation to their studies and alumni having full-time job obligations may not be able to attend all of the committee's meetings. Thus, an alternate representative would ensure that the student and alumni voices would always be -- A statement that the search and selection committee "be responsive" to recommendations from Oakland University on its concept of its future needs. This amendment pertains to a section of the Taylor report which calls for the search and selection committee to analyze the requirements of the next president's role.

-- Deletion of a section requiring the Committee on Committees to meet with the Steering Committee before it publishes its nominations for faculty representatives to the committee.

-- Naming the chairman of the steering committee to serve as chairman pro tem of the committee until such time as the committee shall choose its own chairman. The Taylor report called for the chairman of the Steering Committee to appoint the chairman of the search and selection committee.

As outlined by the Taylor report, the search and selection committee is to consist of four faculty representatives, one undergraduate, one graduate student, one black student, one black faculty member, one administrator at or above the level of dean, one member of the Oakland University faculty, one alumnus, and the

Death of prime minister throws Israel in turmoil

JERUSALEM (AP) -- The death of Prime Minister Levi Eshkol has thrown Israe! into an internal power struggle at one of the most critical times in the 20-year history of the state. Some Arabs fear the passing of Eshkol will turn loose

As border incidents have recently escalated to alarming proportions. Eshkol's death from a heart attack Wednesday was expected to open the flood-gates to a tide of political infighting. Eshkol was 73.

For the time being--until the official period of mourning ends after at least seven days--Deupty Prime Minister Yigal Allon, an Oxford-educated former major general, is in charge.

But the Knesset, Israel's parliament, must elect a new government to run the country until the national elections in November. Obviously, whoever holds the premiership over these months will be heavily favored to stay in power for a full term of four years.

BONN, Germany (AP) -- President Nixon said Wednesday he hopes that future arms control talks between the United States and the Soviet Union will also cover political differences.

West Germany's leaders requested that German reunification be part of any such agenda, but White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the President indicated no preconditions would be raised.

In an unprecedented appearance before the Bundestag, West Germany's parliament, Nixon said the power of the Atlantic alliance must be preserved.

American officials expect the negotiations with the Russians to start within about six months.

Nixon flew from foggy London to foggier Bonn with a pledge of continuing U.S. dedication to the goal of a united Germany. He told Chancellor Kurt George Kissinger that the United States will support whatever course West Germany chooses to pursue in the current Berlin dispute with the Communist East.

He stopped well short, however, of any commitment to his German hosts to put reunification and the futures of divided Berlin on the table at U.S. talks with the Russians.

Nixon has stressed from the beginning of his European tour Sunday that U.S.-Soviet negotiations will be preceded and accompanied by consultation with the allies of the United States.

concerning the selection of a new University president.

ASMSU, at its weekly meeting mandated its representative on the Academic Council to work for several changes in the proposed establishment of a committee and of committee procedure for the selection of a new University president.

Due to the board's recommendations, Jeff Zeig, senior member-at-large and AS-MSU representative to the Academic Council, was given several suggestions for Wednesday's council meeting.

The major concern of the board is that the original proposal for the selection committee's structure included only one student representative for the entire student body.

In a "straw" vote of board opinions, none of the thirteen voting ASMSU members favored having only one student and one vote on the selection committee. Most members wanted two or more students on the committee, with each student having

Black representation

One of the contentions of the Taylor report is that a new president must be chosen in light of the major problems this institution will face in the next ten vears of its history.

Perhaps the most important problem a new president will face will be giving the black community its proper role in the community its proper role in the University. This means increasing black enrollment from the present level of less than three per cent to a more representative number and upping the number of black faculty members. At present black faculty members total only about 20.

Since this momentous problem will face the new president, it is appropriate that black representation be a part of the search and selection committee.

The Taylor report had originally provided that the chairman of the board of trustees be a member of the Search Committee, but at the request of the trustees, their seat was replaced at Tuesday's Academic Council meeting by a black student representative and a black faculty member.

Some objections to the provision were raised, however. It has been pointed out that this could provide a bad precedent for other minority groups who may suddenly decide they also deserve a representative. After all, what if twenty Quakers from Isle Roval decide their best interests are not being protected? Then an Isle Royal Quaker would have to be instated on the committee.

The point has also been made that blacks can be represented through the normal procedures. The regular student representative could as well be black or green or orange or white. And couldn't one of the regular faculty representatives be a black?

The reality, however, is that blacks are not represented through the regular channels. nor will they be until such a time as black enrollment equals the percentage of blacks in the outside community.

Ideally, blacks would be a large enough group on campus so they would be represented through regular channels, but the reality of the situation demands that temporary special provisions be enacted so the University can carry through its commitment to the black community and society in general.

In the past we have reluctantly accepted the argument that advertising. national and professional sports and varsity sports were so great that no space was available for either men's or women's intramural activities. We have no conflict with varsity sport coverage-that is obviously a student activity also.

To attempt to fill the void perpetuated by the News and to serve student interests in this phase of University life. we have developed weekly bulletins and other devices to get the information to the students. Other alternatives that have been tried include weekly salaries to writers to cover events, typed and mimeographed schedules, stories and features sent over weekly--even the suggestion that we buy advertising space was considered.

In the Monday, Jan. 13, and Friday, Jan. 17 issues, are beautiful examples of how valuable space is used for the amusement of one or two of the State News writers rather than to cover items of interest for the students. I would like to weigh student interest in Mike Manley's exposition on the fact that his fitness is not adequate to participate enjoyably in an intramural basketball game, and his last discussion of a Detroit comic strip against coverage of the some 330 basketball, 115 bowling teams. not to mention the other 22 men's and women's sports this term or the approximately 2,000 students involved in the 21 sports clubs. If you rely on the State News for information concerning student activities. vou would never know that approximately 5,000 men and women participate every week in scheduled activities of their choosing. If the purpose of the State News is to serve the student, perhaps a News-run survey of student interests--of what the student would like to see covered--would be appropriate. More than appropriate, it would seem obligatory that the editors and writers serve the student interest since the student is forced to buy the State News whether he wants it or not.

It does seem ironic that the "champion?" of student rights gives the stu dents no choice in this decision.

Every year I am tempted to inquire from the organization that issues the yearly awards to the State News to attempt to determine upon what criteria. the awards are made. Coverage of student sport activities cannot be one of

ADS purpose not grasped

To the Editor

Last week I attended the ADS competition. That first afternoon we were greeted at the Auditorium by several students passing out literature. The piece that most impressed me was the letter from a fellow ADS student: It was the most emotional, least logical writing I have ever read from a student of this calibre. The girl who wrote it did not grasp the purpose of her visit to MSU, or recognize the designs of those people who invited her there, or of those students she chose to support. I am not arguing whether or not she had the "right" to make such an announcement, or to attend such a meeting. (I personally feel that any who were interested would have heard without her aid of the meeting, and that if'the students wished to make that announcement they should have asked permission themselves ahead of time.) I am simply questioning her ability to judge people. She claimed-on the basis of one incident-that all of the people responsible for ADS were completely insincere and only interested in brainwashing us as to the glories of MSU. If they were that bad it is not likely they would have gone to so much trouble for us: there are easier ways of influencing thought than by giving 10 scholarships worth $8600 apiece and giving a fancy banquet. And of course. Dr. Sabine only allowed Dr. Augenstein to, speak to us because he knew we would be impressed with his humanity and then equate him with MSU forever and ever in our poor, childish minds. Hardly.

(The writer must have found something good--she's going to MSU in the

I also wonder why the SDS kids tried to gain our interest and sympathy in the first place. We have no prior information (or precious little) about their cause celebre, and are probably very susceptible to a little bit of persuasive emotional intellectualisms or some flattering generalities. Are they (just maybe) trying to get us emotionally involved in their affairs? Could they be hoping ) for the support of these soon-to-be freshmen? I don't know. But I do doubt a lack of mendacity.

Nuts in the grove of academe

The prospect of losing one's mind always looms forebodingly somewhere in the cloudy future. James Thurber cleverly portraved men on the periphery of sanity who occasionally slipped from the well-ordered and distinct, into the Thurber's men were a persecuted race. driven by overbearing women and the stultifying humdrum of daily affairs to inward retreat and seeing unicorns in gardens.

I have lost my mind on several occasion on weekends. only to find its considerably misshapen form down around my ankles the next morning or in several small pieces scattered about the room. These can be picked up and, if nurtured carefully with cokes and aspirin, will be ready to function again on

Minds are not usually lost in one fell swoop, however. Being a complex and many-faceted thing, the human mind usually runs into the woods only after a gradual chipping-away process over an extended period of time. Anvone who suffers to endure the task of gaining a higher education knows only too well the littel chisels that take their toll in a protracted frontal lobotomy over four years. How many students, for instance, have dragged themselves out of bed and crawled across campus for their only morning class, only to find when they arrive that the class has been called off? Or how many have gone without sleep for an entire weekend to do a term paper, only to discover everyone else is handing theirs in late and the prof doesn't really care? The list goes on and on: Being turned down for a date because the girl says she is going to the Harvard-Yale football game -- in April. Buying $50 worth of books at the MSU bookstore. dropping them into the Red Cedar and watching them being eaten by ducks with a literary appetite. Getting a blind date who has the mind of Goldie Hahn and the looks of Howard Gabe. Taking a wrong turn at Frandor on the way to a term party at the Jack Tar Hotel and waking up Sunday morning in a load lugger behind the Boom Boom Room.

This is only scratching the surface. Students wander through a maze of buildings, classrooms and bureaucratic hassles, sprain their cerebrums to learn enough to stumble through midterms and finals, only to endure the traumatic ordeal of registration and emerge financially weaker, limp, armpits soaked and about to start the whole process in motion again.

Eventually some of the stays begin to give. Things get too unbearable, and the books and walls close in. Some one sees a student strolling naked down Grand River. Literary minded ducks disappear in the night. A man in black appears at Case Hall and warns that the Swiss steak be given a proper burial.

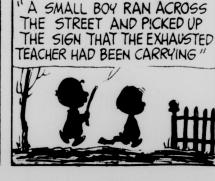

What is needed, is escape. Small frustrations and hostilities should be vented on a small scale to prevent their growing into large, unnamable, inner monsters. You can kick your rommmate or destroy some of his favorite empty wine bottles, when the world seems to be a little too much to

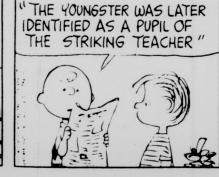

If your roommate is large or quicktempered, however, his reaction may also prove a little too much to bear. In this case you might do better to walk down the hall until you find someone who is not large and has no large friends and kick him.

Another great escape is to cut a few classes and spend the time wearing your sun glasses or looking out the window or trip out on Lavoris. Run into your English class wearing boots and a Macintosh, scream "Fire," and chop up all the desks. Put on warpaint and shoot flaming arrows into Bessey Hall from a rented canoe. Wrap your garbage in a copy of the National Review. Feign insanity on Mondays and

I would take none of this advice, of course, because I need no such frivolous and absurd means to vent my frustrations. I employ what I think is a more mature and sophisticated means of mediating repressed drives by rolling three ball bearings in my hand as I walk to classes. I find this works quite well, and the ball bearings come in handy for crashing inter-fraternity marble shootings or dropping on roaches in the johns of Berkey Hall.

Beer drinkers rank on John Paul Revere's circular bar.

As "I'm on the Road Again" thumped out of the juke box for the 97th time Tuesday night, the word passed around

"John Benington is a jerk," someone growled.

"Yeah, he took out Rudy Benjamin when he had a hot hand," another seconded. "Benington knows defense, alright," a third remarked,

'but what does he know about offense? "That's just it," the first fellow said, "Benington wouldn't

Although John Benington wasn't on hand to defend himself Tuesday night, he discussed all three situations Wed-

Who's to blame for the five-point play? Benington explained he was upset by an official's decision which gave the ball to Purdue after the Boilermakers' Rick Mount knocked it out of bounds. In the manner of all coaches, Benington called the errant official's attention to the miscall. When the ball went out of bounds a second time, the official then made the same the same call. It's an emotional game. With Mount moving into the key for a jumper, an official called a foul on the Spartans.

"By this time you're really worked up," Benington said "and then this official who can't even see the play-he was looking through the players-sends Mount to the line for a foul shot.' And what caused the technical?

"It was the right call," Benington said, "I threw a towe on the floor. I didn't say anything but throwing the towe was a demonstration.

I suggested he bring his famous yoyo out of hiding.

Benington shrugged.

For all the official knew, I could have been throwing the towel at a cockroach--he doesn't know Jenison like

'Either the official is to blame for the five-point play or I am," Benington said. "And since the official is never wrong, then I suppose I'm to blame for it.'

Moving on, he said the Spartans could have used Benjamin's scoring ability. "We needed him out there for his scoring but our guards have special defensive responsibilities." Benington explained, "and a man that scores four but gives up six-not that Rudy did--isn't going to help us.'

As for the last play, Benington said the Spartans didn't

The Union Board sponsors flights to London and I was wondering why they don't let University of Michigan students take them. Robert Crane, Southfield junior.

The Civil Aeronautics Board sets up rules and regulations for charter flights on the bases of "afinity groups." In this case the "afinity group" consists of MSU students and faculty, not U-M students.

Can you settle an argument for me? A recent article concerning the new 747 jet left my roommate with the impression that tires on a plane landing at such high speed need servicing after every landing. I disagree but don't know exactly how often they are changed. Who's right? Tom Kundinger, Holly

Your friend is not. According to Metropolitan Airport's maintenance crew, tires on commercial airline jets are serviced every 100 hours, regardless of the number of landings. Tires on bigger, faster jets such as the 747 model, undergo more extensive abuse and are inspected after every flight.

I've noticed that everything owned by MSU--chairs, desks, etc.-has a number on it. Who is responsible for the listing of these items and how many items are there on the list? Dave Montgomery, Holt, senior.

The Inventory Dept. keeps a listing of approximately 250,000-300,000 such items.

Campus players to present Neil Simon play

The Campus Players will present "The Star-Spangled Girl" by Neil Simon at 8:15 p.m. Thursday through Sunday at Mc-Donel Kiva.

Simon has produced several comedies in the past including "The Odd Couple," Barefoot in the Park," "Sweet Charity," and his present one on Broadway, "Plaza Suite." "Star -Spangled Girl' follows in his tradition of fast-moving comedy.

The cast, all members of the theatre Dept., are David Kennedy as Andrew Hobart, Eric Tull as Norman Cornell and Kathie Hewett as Sophie Rauschmeyer. The play is being produced and directed by Ves Spindler, who was at the helm of the production of "The Fantasticks" last winter term: his
