Sirhan awaits sentence for first degree murder

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sirhan Bishara Sirhan was convicted of first-degree murder Thursday for the assassination of Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, whose bid for the presidency of the United States was ended by a bullet to the brain.

The same jury of seven men and five women who judged the 25-year-old Arab guilty as charged now must determine whether he goes to prison for life or dies in the gas chamber at San Quentin. This second phase of a trial already in its 15th week begins Monday.

"I think the jury will reflect the conscience and the reactions of the community for this type of crime," said the chief deputy district attorney, Lynn D. Compton. He said the prosecution will not insist on the death penalty but will "give them the factors weighing for and against death."

Sirhan, dark-haired, 5 feet 4 and 110 pounds, heard the verdict with no display of emotion. Afterwards he was hustled out to his windowless 13th-floor cell, five floors above the courtroom.

None of Sirhan's family was in court for the verdict.

His mother, Mary, 56, a faithful attendant during nearly every day of the long trial, heard the news over the air at her home in Pasadena.

"She's almost out," Sirhan's brother, Adel, 29, told newsmen by telephone. "She's too depressed to talk. We all feel terrible. She's gone to bed."

The defense had hoped for a second-degree verdict, and had not asked less of the jury for the June 5, 1968 shooting of the 42-year-old New York senator.

Second degree carries an automatic penalty of five years to life imprisonment.

At one point in the deliberations, members of the jury discussed second degree--to the extent that they came back to court in the midafternoon Wednesday to hear Superior Court Judge Herbert V. Walker review the ingredients of the lesser findings.

The next time the jury entered the courtroom was with the first-degree verdict. They were unsympathetic. Not one looked at Sirhan some 30 feet away at the far end of the counsel table.

Sirhan, a native of Jordan and vigorously pro-Arab, shot Kennedy in a kitchen area of the Ambassador Hotel, because he considered the senator a supporter of the Israeli cause in the Middle East.

Sirhan testified he remembered nothing of the shooting.

The defense pleaded that his mental capacity was so diminished he couldn't meaningfully and maturely have planned the crime.

There was testimony that Sirhan was in a self-induced trance when he fired the fatal shot and uttering from schizophrenia—a split personality with the good and evil sides vying for control of his emotions. His lawyers called him a "poor, sick wretch."

The jury received the case at 2:55 p.m.

Candles start $1,000 blaze in Mayo room

By RICH BERNARD
State News Staff Writer

A second floor blaze late Wednesday caused $1,000 worth of damage in a Mayo Hall room and turned 300 of the dormitory's coeds out into the slightly drizzly night.

Just before 11 p.m., one coed discovered the conflagration on the second floor and pulled the fire alarm.

The room's occupants, Wendy S. Worden, Traverse City freshman, and Michelle R. Robbins, Spring Lake freshman, were not in the room at the time.

Mayo residence who evacuated the building were joined by curious spectators as East Lansing firemen arrived on the scene and quickly put out the blaze.

When the halls finally cleared of smoke, the Mayo women were allowed back into the building and into their rooms. The burned-out coeds spent the night at Olin Health Center.

Sam Gringrich, fire inspector for the MSU Dept. of Public Safety, said that the fire was started by three candles which the two roommates had left burning when they left the room.

"The cost of repainting the walls, repairing tile, replacing woodwork and other parts of the room will come to about $600," Gringrich said. "The destruction of beds, desks, chairs, etc. adds another $262."

"When the damage to the girls' personal property is added on to the other property, the total assessment of fire damage comes to $1,000," he said.

Dzodin begins process to end ROTC credits

By ROSANNE BAIME
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU representatives to the Academic Council were instructed Tuesday night to ask that the ROTC program be removed from academic status and financial support in the final act of the fourth session of ASMSU.

Col. Robert G. Platt, chairman of the Dept. of Military Science, had no comment Thursday on the mandate.

Harv Dzodin, outgoing board vice chairman, introduced the mandate "as a symbolic gesture from the fourth to the fifth session to stop reacting to situations and take the initiative on important campus issues."

Dzodin asked that ROTC be removed from its association with MSU because he sees its purposes as "alien and diametrically opposed to the purposes of the University."

He cited the Thomas-Roth case, tried by the Student-Faculty Judiciary last spring, as an example of the purpose conflicts.

In that case James R. Thomas, East Lansing special student, was dropped from a basic ROTC class on the grounds of irregularities in registration. Thomas charged that he was dropped for his political views.

Thomas was enrolled in the course as a visitor.

The judiciary ruled that evidence for Thomas' charges of political bias was inconclusive.

"ROTC is a relevant issue across the country," Dzodin said Wednesday.

"Unfortunately, on many campuses the problem is being handled through violence and confrontation. We want reason and discussion to prevail."

On April 15 the State News and over 25 other college newspapers called for the abolition of ROTC programs in a simultaneous editorial. The current student strike at Harvard is centered around such an abolition.

Dzodin fears that violence will erupt at the annual ROTC field day scheduled for May 15. He hoped that by passing his resolution, the board could start discussion now that might avert any possible confrontation.

Chuck Mostov, newly-elected vice chairman and sophomore member-at-large from the fourth session, objected to the resolution on the grounds that it would deny those students wishing to take ROTC their right to do so.

"If academic status is removed from ROTC it will leave MSU," Mostov said.

Board selects Graf Cabinet president

By SUE BELNIAK
State News Staff Writer

Paul Graf, Muskegon senior and ASMSU vice president of public relations, was selected by the ASMSU Board Wednesday from a field of four candidates to serve as Cabinet president.

Prior to the selection, the candidates for president presented their plans for next year's Cabinet.

In addition to Graf's, presentations were made by Stu Cohen, Detroit junior, Michael Hudson, Inkster freshman, and Steve Sawyer, Grand Rapids junior.

Graf's proposed structure for the Cabinet eliminated the office of vice president of semi-autonomous groups and cut the number of directorships from 31 to 16.

U.S., N. Korean envoys to debate shot-down plane

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced Thursday American military officers will sit down with North Korean representatives at Panmunjom at 9 p.m. EST, Washington time, to discuss the shooting down of an American intelligence plane off the North Korean coast.

The announcement came only in response to an inquiry made to press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler at a routine afternoon news briefing.

Reminded that North Korea had called for a Panmunjom meeting of the Mixed Armistice Commission that has gotten together periodically there since the Korean War, Ziegler said:

"The North Koreans proposed a meeting which would be held at 11 a.m. Friday, North Korean time—9 p.m. our time tonight. The United States will be at that meeting."

Earlier today, the Pentagon said the bodies of two crewmen from the shot down plane have been found in the Sea of Japan and there are grave doubts that any of the other 29 aboard survived.

Ziegler was asked whether the senior American representative at the session, Air Force Maj. Gen. James P. Knapp, would present a formal protest against North Korea's attack on the plane, and replied:

"I wouldn't have any further information to give you."

North Korea had requested the Panmunjom meeting shortly after announcing its planes had shot down the unarmed naval intelligence aircraft Monday. North Korea charged the plane had intruded on its territorial airspace.

Ziegler's announcement, which seemed to come almost as an afterthought toward the end of a briefing which concerned other matters, was the first significant announcement of any kind from the White House since the new overseas crisis erupted.

The Pentagon announced early in the day that the bodies of one officer and one enlisted man from the Navy reconnaissance craft had been recovered in the Sea of Japan by the U.S. destroyer Tucker.

The bodies—and lifejackets and numerous pieces of shrapnel, torn airplane fuselage, were spotted roughly 100 miles off the North Korean coastline.

This is far outside the 12-mile territorial limit claimed by Korean Communists. But they contend the slow-flying, propellered U.S. plane laden with electronic eavesdropping gear intruded "deeply" into their airspace.

CHAMBERLAIN ISSUE

Recall petition drafted

Action on a petition for the recall of Rep. Charles E. Chamberlain, R-Mich., has begun, James Harrison, Democratic Chairman of Ingham County and Chamberlain's opponent in the 1968 6th Congressional race, said Thursday.

Plans for circulating the recall petition were formulated after the Washington, D.C. Corporation Council decided not to bring charges against Chamberlain after listening to two hours of testimony Tuesday.

The hit-and-run accident in which Chamberlain was reportedly involved, concerned a Washington policeman.

Chamberlain is the congressional representative from Ingham, Clinton and Jackson counties.

Thomas H. Johnson, asst. chief of the law enforcement division, said that none of the facts of the case were contested—that Chamberlain was in a right turn lane; that the officer, Frank J. Ward, gave him a lawful order to turn right; that Chamberlain drove straight ahead and struck the policeman; and that the congressman was stopped four blocks from the scene of the accident.

Johnson said that the government believes it is not appropriate to prosecute Chamberlain for his failure to obey the officer, since the officer was at fault in not letting Chamberlain's car, which had Congressional tags, go through the intersection.

Trustees consider giving financial aid to disadvantaged

By GEORGE BULLARD
State News Staff Writer

Financial aid to disadvantaged youth may again become an issue at the MSU Board of Trustees meeting today.

Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said Tuesday that he would again ask trustees to consider his proposal to lend financial support to aid up to 1,000 additional disadvantaged youth to study at MSU.

Action on the proposal, jointly sponsored by Huff and Dr. Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing, was deferred by the board in February to obtain a faculty recommendation.

John E. Dietrich, asst. provost and chairman of the committee studying the proposal, said his committee is active but not yet ready to make a progress report to trustees.

U.S., S. Viets ask Hanoi to halt stepped-up attacks

PARIS (AP) — The United States and South Vietnam called on Hanoi Thursday to put an end to "illusions of military victory" and to halt the stepped-up attacks that have been going on since February.

They spoke at the 13th full-scale session of the Vietnam Peace talks. Both sides repeated their conflicting stands on troop withdrawal.

The consensus: No progress. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge declared that the continued pursuit of victory by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong can only lead to additional loss of life and destruction.

"Peace will not come to Vietnam as a result of military operations such as those you have been conducting since the end of February," he said. "Indeed, it must inevitably be hindered thereby."

South Vietnam's Pham Dang Lam urged his adversaries "not to waste your time expecting to attain a position of strength through a military victory." The other side, he said, must call a halt to "terrorist and sabotage activities as well as reduce the level of the conflict."

Their statements came as the latest casualty figures released in Saigon showed battle deaths during the past week the lowest since the enemy offensive began Feb. 23. But the number of U.S. wounded rose sharply, presumably because of rocket and mortar shelling of bases.

North Vietnamese and the Viet Cong continued to push their demands for an immediate withdrawal of U.S. troops from South Vietnam. Both refused to discuss U.S. proposals for a mutual withdrawal of U.S. and North Vietnamese except to say the idea was absurd.

The United States feels that the main obstacle to serious peace talks is the belief of the other side that the Nixon administration will be forced to make concessions later on.

North Vietnam representative Xuan Thuy said President Nixon's policy is strongly opposed by the American people and that former President Lyndon B. Johnson already had been forced "to leave the political area" because of his policy. He asserted that Nixon had failed to carry out a campaign promise to "promptly seek peace."

Tran Buu Kien, representative of the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front, said the United States was stalling the peace talks to gain time to prepare South Vietnamese military units to take over from U.S. contingents as part of the "Vietnamization" of the war.

"The American people and the world's people demand that U.S. and satellite troops be rapidly withdrawn from South Vietnam," Kien said.

Job Corps' study indicates success

WASHINGTON (AP) — A massive new study of the Job Corps shows that it has substantially increased wages and reduced unemployment among youths who complete their training, Congress was told Thursday.

Louis A. Harris, who conducted the study for the Office of Economic Opportunity, said it was the most extensive study ever made of disadvantaged young people.

He presented his findings to the House Education and Labor Committee only a day after turning the study over to the government.

Although Harris said he was not taking sides in the dispute over the administration's decision to close 59 Job Corps centers and merge the program into other manpower training programs, critics of his decision praised his testimony.

Rep. Carl D. Perkins, D-Ky., committee chairman, said he hoped the administration would study the Harris report carefully before carrying out its plan.

"This buttresses all the arguments against closing them," said Perkins.

Harris said the study, based on interviews with 9,463 former Job Corpsmen and 1,851 persons associated with them, led to two conclusions he termed inescapable:

"The Job Corps has had a positive impact on its enrollees in terms of decreasing unemployment and increasing earnings."

"The achievements of black youths 'can make it' in society if given an equal opportunity with white."

Harris said any evaluation of the Job Corps must take into consideration the kind of person it is dealing with.

"We're clearly at the bottom of the barrel here," he said. Harris said the average hourly and annual wage for the enrollees increased markedly after their Job Corps experience, with those who completed their training showing the best results.

Chairman of Advertising Dept accepts post as Oregon dean

John W. Crawford, professor and chairman of the Dept. of Advertising, has been named dean of the School of Journalism at the University of Oregon. His appointment will become effective in early June.

Jack M. Bain, dean of the College of Communication Arts said Crawford's resignation was his own decision. "He told me it was just too good of an opportunity to pass up," Bain said.

Crawford served as manager of the copy department of Lee Burnett Co. and vice president of Kenyon-Eckhardt, Inc., before he was appointed chairman of MSU's Dept. of Advertising in 1958.

The author of a text on advertising communication and management, Crawford is president of the American Academy of Advertising and is associated with the American Marketing Assoc. and the Assoc. for Education in Journalism.

A successor to Crawford has not yet been named.

INTEREST, TRUST KEY

Board strives to arouse students

By DEBORAH FITCH
Associate Campus Editor
Students

How to build their interest. How to get them "involved." And the crucial point, how to win their trust.

New and old ASMSU Board members agree that students, not just those in ASMSU, not just those on faculty committees, not just those who rally for change, but all students, should be the motivating factor for the ASMSU fifth session.

Members think that ASMSU can reach a sizable segment of the student body, citing the relatively large student participation in the board of trustees suspension resolution issue fall term.

But many fifth session members, including newly-elected chairman Tom Samet, believe that arousing large numbers of students was not a regular accomplishment of the fourth session.

Samet said he thinks the solution lies in the issues that face the student body.

Create issues

"We must create issues, not wait for them to happen," he said. "That's what happened with the board of trustees' resolution; the students showed their support for ASMSU."

Samet's ideas on issue orientation are seconded by fourth session cabinet President Don Banghart.

"I think one of the new board's main responsibilities is to see that it is far ahead of a crisis; it should have a pro-active, rather than a reactive, orientation," Banghart said.

"It is unfortunate that the fifth session does not have a black representative. It will be difficult for them to relate to the blacks, and more difficult in that area," he said.

Banghart, Samet and fourth session Chairman Peter Ellsworth do not consider ASMSU a "student government" but rather a "student lobby."

"We must shift the notion of student government to that of a group dealing with students, not one acting as a link between the administration and the students," Samet said.

Ellsworth, looking backward, said he thought the fourth session had been "too moderate and too dependent on the existing channels when they haven't been as responsive as they should have been."

He said that the fourth session's biggest failure was its inability to bring student together and to generate the issues necessary to make the student body able to exert pressure.

Build Student Feeling

"The fifth session must spend more time building student feeling, but it can't afford to ignore other things like internal problems and relations with outside groups," Ellsworth said.

He said he thought the fifth session should be more militant because "it can be effective if coupled with responsibility."

Ellsworth and Banghart stressed that MSU students were not apathetic.

"Students are interested in things that are unrelated to being a student," Ellsworth said. "Therefore the fifth session's challenge is redirecting student interest."

He expressed distrust of the relationship between students and faculty, issuing a warning to the new board.

"I've met too many faculty people who are afraid to come to grips with real problems; they run instead."

"The fifth session should realize that some University circles are more interested in maintaining peace than being progressive; they want to avoid issues and do things so that the problems won't come up," he said.

"The fifth session must never forget what the faculty motives are. They are not as much our friends as they profess to be."

An angry crowd of 300 persons barred Scotland Yard agents from landing Thursday on St. Maarten, an island in the West Indies, in search of a group of youths suspected of shipping arms to Anguilla.

The British agents took the next boat back to Anguilla, occupied by Scotland Yard agents and British paratroopers since March 19.

Reflecting a battlefield lull, U.S., South Vietnamese and enemy combat deaths dropped last week to the lowest level since the Communist command launched its offensive in February.

The U.S. and South Vietnam commands Thursday reported 204 American, 244 South Vietnamese, and 2,890 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong were killed in the week that ended midnight Saturday.

National News

Convicts and other volunteers participated in the battle against high waters Thursday in the broad Midwestern flood zone.

Conditions worsened in some areas, and improved in others in a five-state area where more than 15,000 persons had been routed from their homes. Property damage has already amounted to $5 million while protective works added more than $3 million to the bill.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader, calling for a thorough reform of the American food industry, said Thursday that life expectancy in the United States has declined since 1962.

Nader charged the food industry with "deepening malaise, deception, and indifference to the responsible exercise of very considerable power."

Three men held up an armored car on the outskirts of Dallas Thursday and one of the two men in the truck was found dead shortly thereafter, police reported. The second man was suffering from serious wounds.

The amount of money in the truck was not immediately known.

Campus News

A group of 250 Columbia University students took over a five-story campus building Thursday, demanding that the school end military programs on campus and increase the number of black students.

The University ordered the students to leave. A spokesman said if they did not vacate the building the University would "Take appropriate measures to clear the building."

'U' station wins fight to ban DDT

MSU's Agricultural Experiment Station pointed the way Wednesday for the cancellation of the sale of DDT in the state by the State Agriculture Commission.

The Agricultural Experiment Station submitted a recommendation to the Commission Tuesday concerning the chemical's adverse side effects on the biological environment -- especially fish life -- and the fact that other chemicals have been developed which can effectively replace DDT without producing such harmful side effects.

The commission banned the registration of the chemical in the state on Wednesday, an action which makes the sale of DDT illegal, although its use is not prohibited.

Along with the Experiment Station's recommendation, fears expressed by the Federal Food and Drug Administration that pesticide drain-offs into Lake Michigan might damage commercial and sports fishing for Coho salmon led the commission's action.

John Calkins, Chief Deputy Director of the Dept. of Agriculture, said that DDT was widely used for insect control before its harmful side effects were known.

Calkins said that Michigan is the first state to ban the sale of the chemical, and that other states may follow suit.

Calkins said that the Agriculture Dept. stopped using DDT in 1962, but that other departments might still be using the pesticide.

Dubcek ousted from party; pro-Moscow chief to lead

PRAGUE (AP)--Alexander Dubcek, the popular leader whose drive for more freedom brought Soviet tanks to Prague, was ousted Thursday as chief of the Czechoslovak Communist party.

The party's 190-member Central Committee, meeting in crisis session, named Gustav Husak, the tough pro-Moscow Slovakian party chief, to succeed Dubcek as first secretary.

Amid tension over the power shuffle, Prague radio announced a nationwide police crackdown on "criminal and antisocial elements" was carried out Wednesday night.

More than 3,000 persons were questioned, it said, and 111 detained for "various criminal deeds."

Dubcek, 47, became party chief 13 1/2 months ago and led the country on a course of political and economic reforms that aroused Moscow's suspicions, anger and finally its armed invasion last August.

Prague radio and television, announcing the change in leadership, said Dubcek was relieved at his own request.

President Ludvik Svoboda then addressed the nation and appealed to all Czechoslovaks to support the changes. He was followed on the television screen by Husak.

Though he spent six years in prison -- 1954-1960 -- during Czechoslovakia's Stalinist era, the 55-year-old Husak is not regarded as a liberal. He has been outspoken in his opposition to anti-Soviet protests which had angered Moscow in recent weeks.

The white-haired, bespectacled Husak told the Czechoslovaks, "I beg you to keep calm and support the new leadership."

"We are not going to give up anything of the great ideas which in the past year have come into our public life," he pledged. But, he added, "it will be necessary to determine how, when and in what order we can implement those ideas."

Husak said, "The whole state machine has disintegrated and to a certain extent some people imagine that liberty is something without limits, but the rules must be overserved."

He emphasized what he termed was the need "to consolidate relations with the Soviet Union." That was the closest the new party chief came to mentioning the August invasion and the Soviet-Bloc occupation.

The Central Committee gathering was the first full-dress session since the March 28-29 anti-Soviet demonstrations throughout the country plunged Czechoslovakia into a new crisis with Moscow and sharpened the internal struggle between the reformers and the old-guard Communists.

There was no immediate word whether Dubcek would retain any other party posts.

Some informants had reported earlier that Dubcek might be given a lesser post-possibly president of the federal Parliament--to keep him from complete removal from the party hierarchy.

The Bulgarian news agency BTA reported that Dubcek would remain a member of the ruling 11-member Presidium and that Josef Smrkovsky, vice president of Parliament, would be dropped from the Presidium.

Prague radio merely said: "We are awaiting news from the Central Committee session any moment."

Samet slips up on preliminaries

By ROSANNE BAIME
State News Staff Writer
Wednesday night's session of the ASMSU Board was the first for Tom Samet in the role of board chairman.

He didn't do too badly--for the first few hours, anyway.

He immediately moved into a period of presentations and watched as his board listened to a report on the National Student Assn. (NSA) regional conference coming up soon and a request for approval on a Popular Entertainment concert.

Everything went smoothly. Then came election of the Cabinet president, which took until 5:30 a.m. last year. With Samet in control, the new cabinet president was picked on the second ballot, at 11:30 p.m.

Very good. Just before the end of the meeting Chairman Samet was presented with a petition from his board. It read:

"We, the undersigned members of the fifth session of the ASMSU Board, do hereby declare this meeting and all actions taken therein, null and void, due to the fact that it was never called to order."

Samet called the meeting to order retroactively and then declared it adjourned.

Bond: 'machinery' destroying nation

By ED HUTCHISON
State News Staff Writer

ST. LOUIS, Mo.--Government and institutional machinery that is purported to protect us is, in fact, destroying us, Julian Bond said here Wednesday.

Citing reasons for dissatisfaction among the nation's youth, Bond discussed the Vietnam war, the Czechoslovakian crisis and what he termed the "warfare state."

"It took a few hours in Chicago and Czechoslovakia to see that the machinery will crush liberty."

"Our leaders condemn Russia for their interference in Czechoslovakia while we are doing essentially the same thing in Vietnam," Bond said.

The Georgia legislator questioned congressional defense appropriations of $80 billion that "guarantees an annual income for the makers of munitions, but will not guarantee an income for the nation's poor."

Blacks are in a peculiar position, Bond noted. They are better off now than 30 years ago but are worse off in every way compared to whites.

"More blacks are out of work compared to white people, more are fighting and dying in the armed services and housing is worse compared to whites than it has ever been before."

Questioning the emergence of the country as a "warfare state," Bond said 80 per cent of the nation's income goes to the Pentagon while only 10 per cent is diverted to health, education and welfare areas.

"The nation has strengthened rather than relinquished claims of racism and imperialism."

Considering these areas, Bond said, it ought to be easy to discover why the "nation's young people are behaving the way they do."

He minimized the so-called "generation gap" and those who advocate the gap is wider than has ever been before.

"I don't believe this generation is any different than young people before, except in one way. Young people between 12 and 30 have lived through something no one has before."

"Young people now are an eye witness to a new era, we were the conclusion of the passing generation that sat in at the lunch counter at Woolworth's."

Bond said young people now -- the reformists and revolutionists -- are against the forces that control the lives of the world's people. "They are moving to improve human conditions."

Noting that "power conceded nothing without a demand," Bond urged discovery of the limits of tyrants so hope and freedom can cease being empty rhetoric.

"We must first discover the limits of tyrants. When this is done, hope, justice and freedom will stop being empty rhetoric and become reality. If this is not done, we will all perish together."

GNP DISCOURAGING

Statistics indicate U.S. deep in inflationary trend

WASHINGTON (AP)--A fresh round of economic statistics indicated Thursday inflation still is deeply imbedded in the flesh of the U.S. economy despite government efforts to root it out.

Forecasts made by economic policy makers as recently as the first of the year are "completely out the window now," one government economist said.

The Commerce Department released the first quarterly report of 1969 on the Gross National Product--the market value of all of the nation's goods and services--and most economic spokesmen termed the figures discouraging.

The report showed first-quarter economic expansion was almost as vigorous as that in the latter half of 1968.

Following close on Wednesday reports that in March the nation's industrial output and personal incomes both rose strongly, the GNP data underscored the administration's position that if inflation is to be licked it will have to be a wearing-down process.

Barnett Rosenberg, professor of biophysics, will present a paper, "Platinum Compounds--A New Class of Potent Anti-Tumor Agents," which will be published April 26 in "Nature," a scientific journal.

A Dept. of Biophysics spokesman said the drug was not a cure for cancer, but a compound that "inhibits cancer very well in mice."

The drug has never been tried in human beings, and is a long way from that stage of research, he added.

He confirmed that the drug was a metallic compound, a class of chemicals that has not been widely tried against cancer.

If the drug is successful, it could open a new area of research. However, hundreds of drugs have been found to have anti-cancer properties, but few turn out to be useful in actual treatment of people.

Rosenberg was not available Thursday for comment on the discovery.

Wang to talk on math by mind, computers

How the human mind and the computer think mathematically will be the problem considered tonight by Hao Wang, professor at Rockefeller University and a leading figure in the philosophy of mathematics.

Wang, the second speaker in this term's Isenberg Lecture Series, will discuss "Mathematics by Mind and by Machine" at 8 p.m. in Conrad Auditorium.

Wang is considered an authority in the field of artificial intelligence and is especially noted for his work in theorem proving by machines.

Following the lecture, Wang will answer questions from the audience. The discussions tonight will be continued in an informal seminar at 10 a.m. Saturday in Old College Hall of the Union. Both lecture and seminar are open to the public.

Samet: student government must focus on key issues

By WHIT SIBLEY
State News Staff Writer

The fourth session of the ASMSU Board will terminate its year in office Tuesday and the fifth session will simultaneously take over as the heads of student government at MSU.

Tom Samet, new chairman of the fifth session forsee a redefinition of student government and a sincere effort to achieve true and meaningful student involvement with student government.

"Some things that the fourth session did were significant, but the problem was that most students were removed from direct involvement," Samet said.

"The major task of the new board will be to get direct student involvement and to demonstrate what students can collectively bring about," he said.

"Instead of envisioning ourselves as a government, which we are not, we will have to envision ourselves as an organization lobby," Samet said.

"We must strive to organize the entire student body to get the changes wanted," he said.

Samet said that ASMSU is not merely a link between students and the administration, and that the strength of a student government lies with its students.

"From that point only can we begin to deal with the legal elements within the University to get change," Samet said.

Samet said that the new board will have to realize its limitations, that is made up of students and cannot spread its efforts over a wide base but must seek out the major areas that need change.

"We have to focus on key issues that the students as a whole are concerned with and resolve them completely within our term of office," he said.

Samet also said that it is the position of the board to wait to see what problems the students bring to its attention and it will be those issues that will be acted upon. Speaking only for himself and not for the board as a whole, Samet cited several major issues that he hopes will come to the board's attention.

"I think that the bookstore situation is one which is worthy of prompt consideration," Samet said.

"Under President Adams we have an administration which is equally concerned as the students, and our chances for meaningful change are here now," he said.

Samet said that he hopes that the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC) program will be considered as one of the more important questions before the board.

A motion was passed by the student board in last Tuesday's meeting to mandate ASMSU representatives to the Academic Council to discuss removal of ROTC from academic status at MSU. This would ultimately mean that ROTC would no longer be an academic department, offer courses for MSU credit or receive University funding for its purposes.

The employment prospects

With graduation a few months away, I scanned the Placement Bureau notice, writing down all prospective employers, signing a number of interview slips.

As usual I read the note at the top (I read it over again. I read it many times before), it stung me. Up to the point of the actual interview, the little notice carried only some vague warning. The meaning finally came through.

What it says in effect is that your draft status is an important factor when being considered for employment. The note explains that whether you have a deferment or not you should interview with companies anyway. It's good practice and if they're interested in you, they might even wait until you complete your military obligation.

Well, as a true non-believer in ROTC and military service altogether, I went to my interview undaunted, with hope springing eternally.

A rotten experience. Especially the part when the man says, "I see that you have a student deferment, will you be deferred after you graduate?"

Well, I hadn't planned to join any of the services; the reserves are a remote possibility: I've got a tattoo on my back that says USDA choice prime grade A beef."

"You see, our policy is such that you are considered unemployable. You see, it would not be in our best interest to hire anyone who could be drafted within the next six months. I'm sorry."

Well, I'm sorry, too. After 16 years of school (including four years of college oriented toward a specific field and a large output of income), I now find that I am not qualified to get a job.

I have been relegated to the level of the ex-convict, the dope addict and the alcoholic, when attempting to get a job.

But then, they won't get drafted.

My main problem seems to be that I am a perfectly normal male with perfect vision and hearing, sound physically and mentally.

What it boils down to is that there has to be something wrong with you in order to get a job.

At least I know the Army will give me a job. My two years as an engineering major and two years of advertising will be extremely useful when my commanding officer makes me a truck driver or munitions carrier.

One question comes to mind. What happens if I hang around after graduating and never get drafted, will I have to wait till I'm 26 to get a job in my chosen field?

experience, Pusey tied the package together neatly and gave the SDS pretty much what it needed—a score of bruised heads and the convenient cry about the cops.

And the Harvard faculty? They, too, have had to learn bitterly from their own blunders. They are the happy few, the elite of elites, who have reached the Valhalla to which all aspire. They have the ablest crop of students in the nation, and most of them talk to some of their students. In the Robert McNamara melee, the Dow Chemical Co. fracas and one or two black-power episodes they lost some of their innocence about the roots and fruits of student "radicalism." They were beginning to grasp some of the facts of life and were ready for a real dialog with the administration about how to meet a disruption of university life. They might well have agreed in advance to calling the police as a final measure. If Pusey was not sure whether they would, it made his solitary venture the more risky and adventurous.

The nub of the matter is not whether police are called in. Surely by now, after Berkeley and Columbia and San Francisco State, we should have eaten of the fruits of the garden and learned that the simple cry of "No police on any campus under any circumstances!" is an invitation to the other cry of "Anything goes!" because it means no one dares back up authority by necessary power.

The real question is how the decision of whether or not to use police force, made, and by whom, and what other universities' decisions have first been made. The faculty is the key, linked with the largest student body group with which faculty ought to be in touch and in touch. The Harvard Board of Overseers has not only told the faculty and students another seizure will close the university, I am convinced that when a small student group decides on a naked confrontation of force, the university must be open, even by police action. But the confrontation tactic will be futile if administration joins with the faculty students to make it futile. When far student groups learn this, the disruption will end.

A final word about the "restructuring of Harvard. I doubt whether any lac democracy at Harvard was the "cause" of the SDS action. The SDS probably its own motives. They have less to do democratizing the university than radicalizing the students for vent beyond the university. But I know universities that don't need some restructuring so that they can meet or better and so that students can feel part of the action in the house of mind without having to break all the laws to breathe.

Co-ops: rewards aplenty

I'd like to invite the men and women of MSU to join an experiment in living together co-operatively.

Now, before I'm accused of both immorality and obscenity, let me clarify. I'm not advocating free love but the free life style of cooperative living units.

Cooperative life is an experience in freedom and independence that is not quickly forgotten (and that is not meant sarcastically).

Very few of the 25 women who moved into Urey House last fall when I did knew what co-op living meant. I myself had joined somewhat on whim and had the vague idea that co-ops were off-campus and cheap but that was all I knew about them.

I learned, and learned fast, that there is much more to cooperative living than just economics and geography—it is a way of life and a philosophy.

I arrived early, before the term started and before many people had moved in. The first thing I noticed was that no one was there to tell me what to do.

No one welcomed me at the door with a key in one hand and a list of rules in the other. No one told me what room number I had been assigned to—well, the rooms were not even numbered, let alone assigned.

In short, no one told me anything; I was on my own.

I was perplexed. Never before had so many aspects of my day-to-day life been left up to me. There was no one around to hold my hand and show me the way—I'd have to find it for myself or not find it at all.

I suddenly began to realize that I was free but not in the wild, carefree way I always had conceived of freedom. I was free but I was also responsible. I had only myself to depend on.

So, at first hesitantly but with increasing confidence, I made a big decision and moved into a room.

I was proud of myself. I had made a decision and apparently it was right (at least I wasn't kicked out of the room that night).

In the following days I became more and more aware of my ability to make decisions.

A roommate moved in, and as she and I investigated the house, we found a lot to be desired. The walls needed washing and painting, the ceilings ought to be plastered, the stove needed cleaning and the freezer just had to be defrosted.

We talked at length with the other girls in the house about the bad conditions and how we wished things were better. Finally all of us realized that unless we did something about the conditions nothing would ever get done.

So we bought a bottle of Lysol, some scrub brushes and a bucket and got to work. We scrubbed walls and floors and woodwork, plastered ceilings, sanded cabinets and painted just about everything in sight.

Our house began to look like a home and we became more confident of our ability to get things done. We realized that we could change our living conditions on our own, that we could determine how we would live. It was almost too good to be true.

'Getting any bites?'

The Reserve Office Training Corps (ROTC) has occasioned much comment recently in universities. Several colleges have removed credit from ROTC courses, and the controversy has caused the recent upheaval at Harvard. An editorial which ran in this and 29 other college papers around the nation on April 15 has spurred the comments on this page.

POINT OF VIEW

The whipping boy problem

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following point of view was written by Thomas Greene, asst. professor of political science.

I join the debate on campus ROTC with grave misgivings. The issue is already a shibboleth, and a person's position in the argument is likely to classify him either as a fuzz-faced soft-on-Communism hippie-radical-revolutionary with bleeding heart or a stone-headed Neanderthal pig-lover baby-burning fascist reactionary.

This is the style of disputation suggested by the nationally distributed editorial against campus ROTC reprinted in the State News Tuesday: reasoned argument and common sense observation should convince all enlightened humanity that ROTC has no place in the academic environment, and while it is there it indeed is a pernicious influence.

I am won to the suggestion that we should rid ourselves of empty-headed instructors and irrelevant courses. However, there is no immediate reason for drawing the line at ROTC, and the application of such criteria across the board would constitute a veritable campus revolution. But in the face of such an improbability, I can think of a few reasons for retaining campus ROTC, and these reasons at least ought to have their day in the court of enraged students and faculty.

I suppose first I should make it clear that I take second-place to only a very few who vehemently oppose prevailing American foreign policy in general and the Vietnam war in particular, and that my outspoken position on these matters was in the public record long before the more alert of our student bodies hit on the secrets of campus mobilization. And few of the many students who have taken my courses are likely to have misread my active sympathies for the shut-out millions of contemporary American society, confronted by a system with a built-in bias for conservative minority rule. So much for trying to head off any misunderstanding of my fundamental values.

I admit the questions do not have any simple answers, but the questions ought to be asked. Should the officer cadres of the military establishment be drawn entirely from the service academies, or should they be drawn in substantial numbers from the relatively more liberal environment of the university and college campuses? Should ROTC cadets be exposed only to instructors from the military profession, or should they also be exposed to non-military (perhaps even anti-military) instructors and course material?

Should all the textbooks in a future military officer read at college be selected by one of the most provincial and narrow-minded professions of a modern industrial society, or should his text assignments also be drawn from the wider horizons of the humanities and social sciences, staffed by at least a few men who have a fairly broad vision of where our society is now and where it should go in the future?

If future officer cadres are chased from the liberal arts campus into the cloisters of the service academy, how many black students will the cadet encounter there, how many student protest groups will have the chance of affecting his sensitivities, how many will have the opportunity to read a student newspaper that is frequently critical of American society and its military ethos?

The military establishment in any society is dangerous enough, and there is no reason for maximizing the probability that it will reflect the backward politics that invariably derive from social isolation and intellectual uniformity. The history of 19th and 20th Century Europe is littered with the dreadful results of a military caste system which was so incestuous in its socialization patterns that it had no idea of the realities of the world around it—and the characteristics of Prussia and Germany are sufficient and dramatic illustrations of the point.

Of course, the blatant propaganda of ROTC manuals and the occasional inanities of ROTC instructors cry out for some kind of remedial action (if only remedial reading). But pushing them off the liberal arts campus is likely only to reinforce their authority. As an undergraduate a dozen years ago at a state-supported university, I was forced to take two years of ROTC—it was both compulsory and stupid. We have come a long way since then, at least in terms of the element of compulsion, but I doubt that we should much farther.

A few weeks ago I spent more than two hours with Air ROTC students and their instructors at MSU discussing Soviet foreign policy and the characteristics of contemporary Communism, and I am sufficiently presumptuous to think that some of them now are a little more tolerant of diversity in the contemporary world than they were before. More recently these same students, as part of their course work, were shown a National Educational Television program on the military-industrial complex, and it was not my country-right-or-wrong propaganda, either. I doubt very much that the cadets at West Point, Annapolis, or Colorado Springs have had similar opportunities.

So how far do we want to press the issue, making a whipping boy of a clearly visible problem child who instead should have the chance of surpassing in wisdom the adult world of his parents? Of course, the frequent fate of radical reform movements has been to back themselves unthinkingly into a hole deeper than the one from which they started their climb. This indeed may be the case if we require our military officers to grow up in an environment populated only by their own kind.

tend to emphasize rote learning and deference to authority. The editors state that "critical thinking has never been a highly prized military virtue, and that consequently the ROTC program is geared to produce intellectually stunted martinet." Granted, anyone who does not place a high value on critical thinking, who does not attempt very hard to understand and relate to the people around him and his environment, and who relies on rote memorization and deference to authority in making and carrying out decisions is an intellectually stunted martinet. If that martinet, however, thinks he can coordinate the efforts of 43 men of different backgrounds, races, and intellectual development (what a newly commissioned second lieutenant will be doing), he is kidding himself. The writer's experiences in ROTC at MSU leads him to believe that in this regard the editors were speaking out of ignorance. His military science courses have not been marked by intimidation or lack of spontaneity and have been as difficult and relevant as any other courses he has taken at MSU.

Probably the most central issue in this controversy, however, is the fear that the academic community is succumbing to the brutal militarism of the outside world. It is the liberally educated college graduate, however, commissioned through the ROTC program, that is bringing new, liberal ideas to the services and helping to non-tralize the effect of "Lemays" and "Hersheys." With the realization that the draft is an abortion of American justice, our society is preparing to move to an all-volunteer army. As a nation, we cannot afford to have that army polluted with indoctrinated academy minds. To place ROTC out of the reach of the college student is to breed officers in academies with lower educational standards and intense indoctrination, free from the critical scrutiny of the civilian populace. The long range effects of such a move could be disastrous.

It is time educated individuals, like the editors of the article printed Tuesday, used their critical minds to attack causes rather than symptoms. The problem of industrialized nations becoming addicted to the production of war material to insure their prosperity is the disease that has bred ROTC. To eliminate ROTC from the academic community won't cure the disease nor will it lower the manpower of the services. What elimination will do is to alter the kind of officer available to the services. The question in this context should then become, "Should the United States sanction the military?" If so, what kind of military service do we want 10 years from today?

OUR READERS' MIND

ROTC: dreadfully non-academic

To the Editor:

As a member of the ROTC detachment at MSU, I would like to express my attitude about the granting of credit to ROTC courses, based on my own experiences.

ROTC classes promote no creative atmosphere conducive to free thought and discussion as do courses in even the most technical fields. The prospective officer is simply expected to accept the instruction of his superior officers, and the rigidity of the class structure itself inhibits any kind of free discussion. The only student I have ever known to deplore during an ROTC class the senselessness of the war in Vietnam was verbally struck down before he could finish his thought. The answer to his comment?—It is every person's duty to unquestioningly support the policy of his government. One must wonder in this context why anyone would bother writing to his congressman.

ROTC is in the greatest sense non-academic, with classroom grades dependent on 100 per cent required attendance and participation in strictly extra-curricular activities.

It were as if a civil engineering student could improve his grade-point by working on a road-building project.

Certainly MSU is not going to be readily willing to forego the substantial amount of subsidization that I understand the federal government provides for offering ROTC training, indeed ROTC provides a very desirable alternative for fulfilling one's military obligation. But hopefully our financially hard-pressed administration will find the courage to strike from the academic curriculum course work that is characterized by ROTC memorization and dependent upon blind acceptance of information, and thus is dreadfully non-academic.

Protecting the critics

To the Editor:

In response to your editorial on Tuesday entitled "University Should Not Sanction ROTC" I wish to present another side of the issue. I am a cadet in the Air Force ROTC program on campus. Through my curricular and extra-curricular activities in this program, I have come to believe most strongly that military training has a definite place in an academic institution.

Along with the privilege of living in America, a person has responsibilities defined by our government. One of these is military service for all eligible males. I consider this responsibility—not a burden—but something that I take on easily with a clear conscience.

Students on campus who are opposed to ROTC declare that it infringes on their academic freedom. I can, in no way, see how, unless they are intimidated by a uniform. These people are no longer required to enroll in ROTC. I feel strongly that these students are infringing on my academic freedom by threatening my right to enroll in ROTC if I so desire.

Finally, let me say that I am proud to fight for my country. I am only saddened that I must fight to protect those who evade military service to criticize the policies, especially the military policies, of a country whose military is designed to protect their right to criticize.

POINT OF VIEW

Attack cause, not symptom

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following "point of view" was written by William Clack, Arlington, Va., junior.

The growth of a war economy in the United States during the last decade with the corresponding increase of influence from the "military-industrial complex," has become a frightening manifestation of the paranoia through which our country has viewed its neighbors in this century. With the rise of militarism in our culture, should the university take steps to eliminate officer training programs from its curriculum? Are there any philosophical as well as pragmatic reasons for retaining ROTC? As an advanced cadet in the Army ROTC program at MSU, this writer submits that not only is there philosophical and pragmatic justification for retaining ROTC, but that the most unwise course of action the university can take, in the face of increasing militarism, is the abolition of ROTC from the academic community.

The editorial of Tuesday asserted that "Academia's traditional function is to inspire critical thinking about man and his society aloof from partisan or superficial considerations." The editors were concerned with the "trade directedness" of the ROTC program and with the university's subsidization of "the brutal militarism of the outside world." Philosophically, they believed ROTC and academia present a conflict in terms.

Certainly, an important function of academia, embodied by the university, is to inspire critical thinking about man and his society aloof from prejudice and trivia. Another important function, however, is to avail the student of a variety of career paths and employment options. This function of academia at MSU has led to such courses of study as music, packaging, agriculture, and engineering. Since military service is one career path or employment option in our culture, military science courses can be justified under this function if they are intellectually worthy.

The contention is made in the editorial that ROTC courses tend to emphasize rote learning and deference to authority. The editors state that "critical thinking has never been a highly prized military virtue, and that consequently the ROTC program is geared to produce intellectually stunted martinet." Granted, anyone who does not place a high value on critical thinking, who does not attempt very hard to understand and relate to the people around him and his environment, and who relies on rote memorization and deference to authority in making and carrying out decisions is an intellectually stunted martinet. If that martinet, however, thinks he can coordinate the efforts of 43 men of different backgrounds, races, and intellectual development (what a newly commissioned second lieutenant will be doing), he is kidding himself. The writer's experiences in ROTC at MSU leads him to believe that in this regard the editors were speaking out of ignorance. His military science courses have not been marked by intimidation or lack of spontaneity and have been as difficult and relevant as any other courses he has taken at MSU.

Probably the most central issue in this controversy, however, is the fear that the academic community is succumbing to the brutal militarism of the outside world. It is the liberally educated college graduate, however, commissioned through the ROTC program, that is bringing new, liberal ideas to the services and helping to nontritalize the effect of "Lemays" and "Hersheys." With the realization that the draft is an abortion of American justice, our society is preparing to move to an all-volunteer army. # Asian entrepreneurs studied

The opportunities to become a self-made entrepreneur in Asia are greater than in America, but the obstacles are also harder to overcome, a representative of the American Universities Field Staff said Wednesday.

Alfred Ravenholt, an expert on Asian affairs, has lived in Asian societies for 30 years. He spends nine months out of every three years speaking to groups from the member universities of his organization. The remainder of his time is spent in Asia, where Manila is his home base.

Ravenholt has been studying Asian self-made entrepreneurs for the past few years. He spoke at the third annual meeting of the Community Committee for International Programs, on some conclusions he has been able to make from the numerous case studies he has researched.

"Substantial economic progress is possible in the traditions of a free and open society only to the extent that you have self-made entrepreneurs," Ravenholt said.

"You must have these kinds of people in these countries if the economy is to move very fast or very far."

Healthy system

"This phenomenon is among crucial means of building a healthy political system," he said.

The extent to which these self-made men can move ahead is governed by the extent to which they are influenced by outside entities as U.S. organizations, foreign business firms and the American universities and their programs overseas.

Ravenholt pointed out that many of these self-made men have attended school in the United States and their ideas come not only from the text books they studied here and at home, but from their social contacts made while studying in the United States, and many times from part-time jobs they held while going to school here.

Ravenholt presented several case studies as examples of self-made entrepreneurs.

Case of 'Jeepneys'

Leonardo Sarao of the Philippines worked as a welder with the U.S. Navy during World War II. In 1953 he borrowed 750 pesos (approximately $190) to buy some welding equipment and went into business for himself.

He bought old, beat-up Army Jeeps and began to make the "cars" famous on the islands called Jeepneys. The Jeepneys is made by extending the body of the Jeep, putting seats along the sides and steps at the rear of the vehicle. A metal top is put on the Jeep and equipped with curtains that can be rolled down.

Social upheaval

Some general conclusions Ravenholt has been able to make are that "when we think in terms of where this is happening in Asia, we find it where there has been the greatest social upheaval. Turmoil, as destructive as it is, also can become a kind of social yeast when the old, rigid patterns of things are broken down."

The phenomenon is found either in emerging cities or on the physical frontiers of the Asian countries, Ravenholt said.

Break with religion

The entrepreneurs usually are those who have broken with the past religious patterns, as this has to do with the breaking of the tradition of letting the family elders make all the decisions, he said. Finally, in Philippine society, the woman of the family more often than not takes care of the family's finances and the husband hands his check over to her. Ravenholt has found that this is usually not the case with the self-made entrepreneur.

IFC questions ruffle 'U' students

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

A questionnaire initiated by Inter-Fraternity Council in an effort to evaluate the fraternity system has generated response from participants who thought some of the questions were too personal.

Edwin Reuling, IFC adviser, said the most static came from people who objected to signing their name to the questionnaire.

Reuling said that because so many objections were voiced, the committee conducting the survey would no longer consider the name of the participant as a necessary part of the questionnaire.

"The real attempt is to gather information, the names are meaningless," the adviser said.

"The main idea is to compile as many ideas as possible."

Reuling admitted that some questions on the inquiry were personal but added, "We are only looking for their answers from a collective standpoint."

He added that the committee needs the information for the evaluation on the fraternity system and urged that the questionnaire be filled out and returned signed or unsigned.

"What we're after is to check the effects that joining a fraternity has on a person," he said. "For instance, what are the effects on that person's grades before and after joining the fraternity?"

Reuling said that the unique factor of this questionnaire is that it was compiled by 14 undergraduates who have spent the past two terms evaluating the Greek system.

"Last fall, for the first time, fraternities were granted permission to rush freshmen, with the stipulation that this new procedure be under investigation," Reuling said.

A class was formed under Reulings direction to investigate the problems of the Greek system.

"The students have spent over 500 hours developing this questionnaire, this includes time spent making up the questions and seeking out advice for the project," he said.

Reuling said that over 6,000 questionnaires were sent to a random sampling of students throughout the campus.

'Marat' actors observe patients

How do you make order out of sheer chaos? Well, you can write it down and call it insanity.

Or call it "The Persecution and Assassination of Jean Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of Asylum at Charenton under the direction of the Marquis de Sade."

But that has been done. And it was more than just a mouthful to Peter Weiss, the playwright who molded a blazing theater piece out of the violence of supposed revolution.

violent insanity. And that was more than educational for the actors, who will perform the play next week.

Insanity is just the surface of "Marat Sade." The play incorporates its own audience who watch and applaud caged lunatics as their violence is abused.

That violence is revolution, which Weiss sees as being sterilized. Below the surface are the trampled ideals and emotions of human beings.

Weiss is a German playwright whose work found major success with the Royal Shakespeare Co. Their production was strikingly staged in New York a few seasons ago by Peter Brook. A successful tour, a film version and another New York production followed and succeeded in establishing the play as one of the most popular and controversial dramatic works of the decade.

Dramatic aspects of "Marat Sade" are welded into a startling portrait of humanity - or inhumanity. A hard-hitting musical score by Ronald Peasley is woven throughout, reflecting feelings of action and frustration and despair.

Political debates between characters are carried to manic extremes, fitting the surroundings at Charenton. So Weiss's revolution becomes the turbulence of an insane asylum.

"Marat Sade" is quite an undertaking, even for an accomplished group like the PAC. Berger claims that this is one of the most challenging and interesting projects he

Vetavisit wonders

The MSU Vet Clinic sponsored the annual Vetavisit Saturday as area high school students, junior college students and the general public discovered the involved processes of the veterinary practice. These area children were acquainted with the Vet Science program.

Vetavisit offers perspective

By IRENE PINCKES
State News Staff Writer

Arthritis, diabetes, cancer, emphysema, pneumonia, brain damage—sound like only human diseases? Well, animals can have them too.

The public was given a better understanding of these and other problems involving veterinary medicine at the sixth annual open house of the College of Veterinary Medicine last week.

An estimated 6,500 people viewed exhibits including MSU's famous cow with a window in its stomach and watched demonstrations including what a physical examination is like for a dog at Vetavisit-69.

This year's theme, "Perspectives in Veterinary Medicine," offered the visitor meaningful exhibits which were understandable and at the same time gave an intimate view of the veterinary profession.

"The veterinary students do all this," Christian C. Miller, chairman of Vetavisit, said, referring to the exhibits at the open house.

"We try to give the public what they are interested in," Miller, East Lansing graduate student in veterinary medicine, said. For this reason some of the exhibits featured problems common to family pets such as dogs and cats.

Parasites of the tapeworm variety are common in cats and the parasitology exhibit displayed several tapeworms—one was three feet long. A problem common to dogs in Southern states is heartworms and a dog heart afflicted with worms was on display. The exhibit also pointed out that internal parasites are found in all animals, including man.

Using examples from cows that were raised for slaughter, the reproduction process of a cow was followed in all stages of pregnancy. Also featured was the embryology of the lamb, tracing the development of the embryo. In the same exhibit was a chart which gave the visitor a chance to test himself on the gestation periods of several animals, including the elephant.

Live exhibits featured such things as an electrocardiograph which showed the actual heart-beat of an anesthetized dog as it would appear during surgery and an anesthetized horse on an operating table. Also part of the live exhibits was a young dog whose foreleg and hindleg were broken and set in casts after being hit by a car and several zoo animals from Potter Park Zoo.

Planning for this year's Vetavisit began in the fall. "It is worth the effort if it helps young people decide about a career in veterinary medicine," Theron Downey, facilities manager for the Veterinary Clinic, said. He also said that this year the open house drew more people than last year or the previous year.

Information was also available for those interested in pursuing a career in veterinary medicine. The college admits 50 students in the fall and 50 students in the spring to its 11-term professional program.

STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

Office space inadequate

By G. J. WOJCHIOSKY
State News Staff Writer

ASMSU has its own space program. Office space, that is.

The student government procedure allocating available office space is plagued by a number of problems.

The main problem at the present time is a lack of space and a lack of control in allocating that space.

Louis F. Hekus, director of student activities, explained that of the 175 to 180 student organizations, many are departmentally connected and can work out arrangements with their department to provide space for meetings and functions.

The director said that there is some space in the Union that is now being utilized by about 10 organizations.

Further attempts
"We ought to make a further attempt to provide space," Hekus said. "This will mean a shuffling of available space or building new space for these organizations."

"There still may be space on campus though," he said. "Alterations and renovations might provide it."

ASMSU Cabinet President Don Banghart feels strongly that because the Student Services Bldg. was constructed from student funds, it belongs to the students and should be run by the students.

Full term ASMSU passed a motion forming a committee consisting of two representatives from the student board and two from the office of the Dean of Students to allocate available space.

Banghart said that Milton B. Dickerson, vice president for student affairs,

"totally ignored" the committee, and went ahead with a plan to form a publications room to eliminate wasted space, mainly the Wolverine room.

On March 4, ASMSU passed another motion resolving that the ASMSU Board "assumes full authority for office space allocation within the Student Services Bldg. for offices that are currently occupied by or reserved for student organizations, including the offices of ASMSU, the State News, the Wolverine, the Volunteer Bureau and WMSN."

The motion further states that "any request for extension of office space be decided by an ad hoc committee consisting of two representatives from the Dean of Students' office and two representatives of the Student Board," thereby reiterating the committee idea.

"Token" allocation
"But, at present, allocation is strictly token," Banghart said. "We want total power about this building."

When Rep. James Brown, R-Okemos, during a WJIM interview questioned the allocation of office space to The Paper and discussed "preferential treatment" to "SDS-type organizations," Banghart replied in a letter to the legislator defending the action.

"First, The Paper is a registered student organization. As such, it has all the privileges accorded to other student groups. Second, there is not a single member of SDS on the staff. Third, when allocating the very limited office space we have available, we look primarily to the size of the group which the organization serves," Banghart said. "We had no choice but to give The Paper space."

No political distinction
"We make no political distinction in the granting of office space," Banghart added. "To deny one politically oriented group space would mean we would have to deny all. It is our feeling that all of these groups, SDS included, have meaningful activities and programs and that whenever possible we should give space to all."

Former ASMSU Chairman Pete Ellsworth contends that the office space should be allocated by the students, since they are the ones whose interests are served and can best decide their own needs, rather than some office of the administration.

"SDS (Students for a Democratic Society) was one of the first to get office space in the Student Services Bldg. The reason we gave them space is mainly because they couldn't get space anywhere else," Ellsworth said. "They were kicked out of every office they rented in East Lansing."

No strict criteria
"If an organization can't rent space or if the payment of rent is detrimental to their functioning, we're going to sanction them by giving them office space," Ellsworth said, "regardless of what they are doing or what they are saying."

The criteria used in determining space requirements are the number of students in the organization, the number of students served and need for free space.

Of the 35 groups applying for space through open petitioning, from athletic to political in nature, nine of them are presently housed in the building.

Students need I.D.s for game

MSU students will need their I.D.'s in order to gain admittance to today's baseball game with Michigan and for all remaining games at Kobs Field. Faculty will need their green athletic cards.

Tickets for the general public are 50 cents for students and $1 for adults.

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

The MSU baseball team will open the 1969 Big Ten season against Michigan here today with a team that Coach Danny Litwhiler calls "just as strong" as last year's second place finishers.

Game time is 3:30 p.m. at John Kobs Field.

The two teams move to Ann Arbor for another nine-inning game on Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

In 1968, the Spartans finished 13-4 in the Big Ten and a game-and-a-half behind champion Minnesota.

"We're a better defensive club than last year," Litwhiler said. "Our hitting is close to being as good as last year's and our pitching should be as good or better. Overall we should be at least as strong as last season."

The Spartans championship hopes received a severe blow last season when they dropped both games of the season-opening series with U-M, 4-2 and 4-1.

"We can't afford the same kind of start this season," Litwhiler said. "We can't expect to win 13 games in a row like we did last year to put us into the race. After you've lost more than three or four games you're probably out of the race."

Litwhiler will send ace right-hander Mickey Knight to the mound today in an effort to get this season off on the right foot.

Knight, the Spartans' relief ace last year, has a 3-1 record this season. He's given up only six earned runs in five appearances this year for a 1.90 E.R.A.

The hard-throwing senior pitched a two-hitter in beating Detroit, 2-1, in his last outing.

Knight's pitching foe will be sophomore lefthander Jim Burton, the top thrower on the Wolverine staff. Burton is 2-2 on the season.

On Saturday, Dan Bielski will pitch for the Spartans with lefthander Gerry Christman as his likely opponent.

Bielski is 2-2 this season with a 2.53 E.R.A. The senior right-hander looked especially sharp in hurling two scoreless innings against Albion Wednesday after having control problems against U-D last Saturday.

Michigan will field a veteran club. Every position but pitcher is handled by a letter-winner.

First baseman James Hosler is the team's top returning hitter. He batted at a .324 clip last season and drove in 13 runs.

Michigan's season mark is 3-12 as compared to the Spartans' 12-5, but U-M should be a factor in the conference race again, Litwhiler said.

"Almost all of U-M's games on their spring trip were against Arizona and Arizona State—two teams that had already played a lot of games before they met Michigan," Litwhiler commented. "If we had played all our spring games against Miami, we would have had the same type of record on our spring tour."

Michigan was only 4-10 on the eve of the conference season last year, but finished with a 9-5 mark for league play.

U-M and MSU are getting a head start on the rest of the Big Ten, which won't open conference play until next weekend. The Wolverines have semester finals next week and had their season-opening series moved up one week.

WEHRWEIN, LEONWICZ READY

Trackmen in Ohio relays

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

Spring football may be starting but Ohio State's great horseshoe stadium will show no signs of it Saturday as the Bucks host a gathering of top Midwest track talent in the Ohio Relays.

The Spartans, hoping to rebound from a thrashing by Wisconsin and Illinois last week, will likely enter five relay events along with a number of individual performers.

MSU coach Fran Dittrich said that Ohio is really nothing more than a good tuneup for the Drake Relays a week from now in Des Moines.

"At the time of these first two meets, we can't really expect to be in spectacular shape but that all changes quickly because with the competition at Drake we've got to be ready for top efforts," Dittrich said.

About the only Spartans considered somewhat in "shape" last week by their head coach were juniors Ken Leonowicz and Bill Wehrwein.

Leonowicz won the three mile at Illinois in 13:55.7, setting a varsity mark in the process and stamping himself as one of the Midwest's brighter distance prospects this spring.

Wehrwein, national titlist at 600 yards inside, continued his winning ways outdoors as he switched to the quarter-mile and won it handsily in 46.7. The time tied varsity mark set last spring by Don Crawford.

Wehrwein will likely be entered on the distance medley and mile relays, the two quartets which Dittrich feels have the best shots at winning relays, while Leonowicz will try his hand in the three mile and the steeplechase.

Other runners on the distance medley are expected to be John Mock in the 880, Roger Merchant in the 3/4 mile and Kim Hartman on the anchor mile.

The mile relay figures to include Pat Wilson, Mock and Merchant along with Wehrwein. Dittrich also expects to enter a shuttle hurdle relay squad composed of Dick Elsser, Rich Paul, Steve Derby and Wayne Hartwick.

Drobac shuffles his card; netters host Wildcats today

Rick Raines is a man on the move.

Slated to start at the No. 5 singles spot at the beginning of the season, the Okemos senior has steadily improved and will start against Northwestern today at No. 4 in the Spartan's home opener at 3 p.m.

In MSU tennis coach Stan Drobac's new alignment, John Bufo will drop down to No. 3 doubles with Wes Ichescio. Raines will start with Andy Vollweiler at second doubles. The No. 1 doubles team of Tom Gray and John Good remains unchanged.

Drobac is not sure of which lineup he'll use against Wisconsin here tomorrow, but plans to see how the new one works out today.

"I look for both matches to be real tough; especially Northwestern," Drobac said. "I think the league is really strong this year."

Last year MSU beat the Wildcats, 7-2, but will certainly have their hands full this time. Back from the 1968 Northwestern team which finished fourth in the Big Ten are five men including No. 1 singles titlist Don Lutz.

Wisconsin will not exactly be a pushover either.

The Badgers finished seventh in the conference in 1968, but only three points out of fifth place. They are led by Junior Chris Burr, a Canadian Davis Cupper.

Saturday's match will start at 1 p.m. Admission is free.

'S' bouncers aim high in trampoline tourney

Spartan trampolinists travel to Ann Arbor this weekend where they will compete in the NCAA Trampoline Championships.

The championships on Saturday will include preliminaries for teams and individuals at 2 p.m., and the finals at 7:30 p.m.—both in Michigan's Events Bldg.

The evening competition will feature the top three teams battling it out and the top eight individuals seeking individual titles.

"We've got a good chance to get in the top three nationally," MSU Coach George Szypula said. "Michigan has it sewn up for first place."

Michigan's team includes Dave Jacobs who won the world trampoline title this year.

Szy pula said that Rich Murahata, Randy Campbell and Norm Jolin have a chance to make the top ten nationally.

The Spartans will compete against the Big Ten Schools and such outside competition as New Mexico, Colorado State, Denver, Southern Illinois, and Indiana State.

"The Big Ten might have some advantage in that they have contested trampoline in dual meets, whereas schools outside the conference have not," Szy pula said.

Prep gymnasts here Saturday

The Michigan state gymnastics championships featuring some of the finest gymnasts in the country of high school age and below will be held tomorrow at 10 a.m., third floor Jenison Fieldhouse. Admission is 50 cents for students and children, and $1 for adults.

'S' golfers hit Big Ten road

The MSU golf team left Thursday for a weekend of Big Ten action in which they will face all the contenders for the conference championships to be held here May 16-17.

The golfers will compete in the 13-team Illinois Invitational Saturday and continue on to Madison, Wis., for a 36-hole quadrangular Monday with Wisconsin, Northwestern and Northern Illinois.

Competing for the Spartans will be Captain Larry Murphy, Lynn Janson, Rick Woulfe, Lee Edmundson and Denny Vass.

QB Triplett main man in new 'S' offense

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

The key man in Coach Duffy Daugherty's decision to switch his offensive tactics for the coming season is swift junior quarterback Bill Triplett.

Whether this new attack is successful or whether it will be committed to the gridiron graveyard depends largely on Triplett's ability to read and react to the defensive tackle and end.

Under this system, the quarterback has about a second as he sprints down the line of scrimmage to make one of three options. He can keep the ball himself, slip it to the fullback or he can pitch it back to his trailing halfback.

Daugherty says the man running this system must have quick reflexes—both mentally and physically—plus quick hands. He feels he has this type of ballplayer in Triplett.

"We think that Bill is going to be an outstanding quarterback," Daugherty said. "He's probably the finest running quarterback in the country. He is the key to our offensive change."

Triplett broke into the Spartan lineup last year against Minnesota after Bill Feraco was injured. Although erratic at times, Triplett showed his coaches and the MSU fans that he had the ability to become an outstanding roll-out quarterback.

In his first season Triplett compiled an impressive 1,012 yards in total offense, passing for 714 and adding a net 298 on the ground. His rushing total would have been much higher but he was snowed under often by oncoming defensive linemen while trying to pass. That tends to put a dent in the net yardage statistics.

Triplett and his offensive sidekicks will get a great deal of work this spring on reading the defensive charge and learning to react to different situations. In fact Triplett may see so much of this offense during the next five weeks that he may have nightmares about hard charging defensive ends.

The first full scrimmage will be held Saturday at Spartan Stadium and the offense will undoubtedly be the focus of attention. And Bill Triplett, at the helm, will get his first combat duty under the new system.

Tigers edge Tribe; Horton leads way

CLEVELAND (UPI)—Willie Horton drove in three runs with a double and his third home run of the season and the Detroit Tigers pushed across three runs in the ninth inning off reliever Vicent Romo to defeat the Cleveland Indians 7-6 Thursday.

Tony Horton, who drove in four runs for the Indians, hit a two-run homer in the ninth off reliever Pat Dobson to narrow the final score.

With the score tied 4-4 in the ninth, Gates Brown batted for pitcher Mickey Lolich and singled to left. Dick McAuliffe walked. Mickey Stanley laid

15TH STRAIGHT WIN

Stickmen top Michigan

By DAVE WEST
State News Sports Writer

The MSU lacrosse club continued a tradition Wednesday, by tromping Michigan, 11-8, in a game played on Old College Field.

The Spartans rolled up their all-time club record to 15 wins without a defeat against this Big Ten opponent.

The Spartans, now 3-4 on the season, were coming from behind all the way. The Wolverines jumped to an early 2-0 lead only to have the game tied going into the second half.

The Spartans found themselves down by two goals early in the fourth quarter, 8-6, and then came up with five quick goals to put away the victory.

The leading scorer for the Spartans was Don Fouracre with four goals. Ron Winter and Dan De-senior each contributed two goals, while Larry Berger checked in with four big assists. "Michigan is much improved over past years," MSU Coach Turt Kauffman said, "but they ran into one of our big problems, they lacked depth."

MSU ruggers face Notre Dame Sunday

MSU's rugby squad returns to action Sunday when they travel to South Bend to face the Notre Dame ruggers.

Game time is set for 1:30 p.m.

The Spartans, 1-3 for the year, will seek to rebound from two tough losses last weekend in the Big Ten Tournament.

The Spartan ruggers will be without the service of half-back Bill Ihlen for the rest of the season. The Sunfield senior suffered a shoulder dislocation in the win over Illinois. Steve Cole, Suffolk England, graduate assistant, received a mild head concussion in the same game but is expected to be ready for Sunday's game.

Green Splash presents show

"Scent: A Mental Journey" is the theme of the 1969 Green Splash Annual Water Sprite Show being held this weekend.

The synchronized swimming honorary, composed of 33 girls, has based its theme on the various makes of perfume.

The MSU diving team will also combine with Green Splash in presenting the show. Tonight and Saturday's performance on Sunday will be held at 8 p.m. Tickets are $1 and can be purchased at the Union ticket office or at the door prior to the performance.

Former mayor, councilman retires from public service

By MARK EICHER
State News Staff Writer

East Lansing's former mayor and councilman Max R. Strother is retiring after over 20 years of public service to the community.

Strother was first elected councilman in 1947. He remained on the council until 1953 when he was elected mayor. He was mayor for six years.

"I have no regrets," Strother said of his public life.

Strother said that among his greatest accomplishments were the initiation of a downtown parking plan, the approval of annexation, the improvement of the water treatment plant, and the central location of East Lansing High School.

The parking plan was initiated during Strother's first year as councilman in 1947. The job is not yet complete, he said.

"There have to be continuous studies due to the fact that there are more automobiles every year," the 60-year-old councilman said.

During Strother's tenure East Lansing's physical size doubled through annexation.

"I didn't do any of this alone," Strother said. "It's the council as a whole that did it."

Strother, an assistant purchasing agent for MSU, first came to East Lansing in 1918.

After serving in the armed forces, he bought a grocery and meat store at 210 Abbott Road, about where Jacobson's is today.

"We were the largest distributor in mid-Michigan," Strother said.

He said MSU was one of his biggest customers. He remembers delivering groceries to old Wells Hall, the health center, the Home Economics Bldg. and many departments.

As asst. purchasing agent at MSU, Strother first came to the University in 1945.

"Students in general are a lot like those of other years," he said. "We've tried to make them feel as much at home as we can."

"Students are the back bone of East Lansing and MSU is really its only industry," Strother added.

He said he sees no real validity in the complaints of students that East Lansing prices are out of line with those of other cities.

The future will bring a tremendous change in the growth and redevelopment of the downtown business district, Strother said.

"If you were to come back in ten years you would see wonderful improvements," he said, "including larger buildings and more new buildings."

Though he has retired from public life, Strother said he plans to remain at the University for several more years.

"If I do retire," the grandfather of eight said, "I'll just look for more work."

Mad Hatter plans midway visit to 'U'

By SUE REBECK
State News Staff Writer

The Mad Hatter will bypass Alice and visit East Lansing in May.

Union Board will sponsor the 1969 Mad Hatter's Midway offering 30 game booths and a half dozen breath-taking carnival rides from May 22 to May 24.

The Midway will be held in the parking lot on the south-east corner of Shaw Road and Farm Lane.

The idea of such a carnival was explored several years ago for Union Board Week in February. That year the theme for the week was Alice in Wonderland, hence the name Mad Hatter's Midway. The carnival idea was not successful until last year, and even then damp weather and an out-of-the-way location limited participation.

Bob May, Sioux Falls, S.D., junior and midway chairman, said that he expects a better turnout this year. May feels that the more centrally located site will draw more students.

Greek and residential living units, as well as University organizations are operating games for the carnival. Head of the game committee, Zarie Sarkisian, Birmingham sophomore, said that participating groups are entitled to any profits they make. Games have been rented from the Advance Novelty Co. for the price of the prizes awarded.

The Union Board will make some profit from the rides rented from the B. J. McDonagh Co. Joe Hall, Pittsburgh sophomore, is in charge of midway rides.

Original plans to hold the Midway in conjunction with ASMSU's Water Carnival were abandoned when ride and bleacher availabilities conflicted. Water Carnival will be held the weekend of May 16.

NSF awards 30 fellowships

National Science Foundation (NSF) Fellowships were awarded to 30 MSU students for 1969-70.

MSU's increase of six fellowships from last year ranks MSU with Columbia University.

NSF fellowships are awarded to students qualified because of academic ability and promise in mathematics, engineering, the natural sciences and social sciences.

The fellowships pay tuition and fees plus a stipend to graduate students. Fellowships are awarded for one and two-year periods.

Those awarded an NSF for the 1969-70 year are: Bruce A. Averill, Plainville, Conn.; Allen J. Beadle, Mt. Morris, Ill.; Larry K. Benninger, Orchard Lake; Karl R. Blasius, East Lansing; William A. ## LEGAL DEFENSE

ASMSU offers counsel to students in 'U' cases

By DENISE FORTNER
State News Staff Writer

A hush fills the room as the defense makes the last deliberating remarks.

Summer reruns of the Perry Mason show?

Hardly. In this room there are no camera or lights. There are no "good guys" and "bad guys."

The room-the meeting place of the Student Judiciary. The defense-Student Defenders.

The Student Defenders Assoc. (SDA), a division of ASMSU Cabinet Student Services, provide counsel for MSU students brought before the Student-Faculty Judiciary.

Created October 22, 1968 SDA services two purposes. It provides legal information and counseling and it represents any student in trials concerning University policies or regulations.

Joe R. Szczesny, Detroit sophomore and director of SDA, said that the Defenders can give legal advice but they are not lawyers and are not qualified to give legal advice to matters outside the University.

The future objective to the association is to have one person representing SDA in each resident hall. The representatives sole purpose would be to defend residents of a specific dormitory before their own judiciary. The hall representative would serve as an intermediary step to SDA.

SDA is not a policy-making body. It only helps students prepare their cases, Szczesny said.

Campus canoes set for launching; all ducks beware

Ducks beware!

The MSU canoe shelter is open for canoe rental and traffic on the Red Cedar River will be picking up with the approach of nice weather.

The canoe shelter, located on the river near Bessey Hall, is open for rentals on weekdays from 2 p.m. to midnight and on Saturday and Sunday from noon until midnight.

The shelter's 30 canoes rent for 70 cents an hour; a minimum of one hour usage is required. Persons who wish to rent canoes must present a valid student I.D. or a driver's license and be over 16 years old.

In the past the association has brought the women's hours case before the University judiciary, prepared cases on the State News censorship cases and prepared a brief on the Library stacks.

Szczesny said that the long range goals include improving competence of lower level judiciaries and trying to effect non-redundant communication between major governing bodies, ASMSU committees and autonomous groups. Another future objective will be the establishment of contacts with various legal agencies.

Student Defenders also advise and counsel students before they see a lawyer. The student is advised about what pertinent documents and information should be presented before meeting with a lawyer. Although a conference with the lawyer is $3 for 15 minutes, many students find that they do not need to talk to a lawyer after obtaining advice from SDA.

Petitioning for the SDA will be open through Friday while petitioning for the dorm representatives will be open until April 26. Applications may be obtained in 335 Student Services Bldg.

Dorm committee reviews changes for campus living

By JANE SCHOLZ
State News Staff Writer

How can MSU avoid the penalty of impersonality as a result of "bigness"?

The Ad Hoc Committee on Residence Halls is trying to answer this question.

The committee, composed of ten faculty members and two students, is investigating all aspects of the living experience on campus.

Miss Anne Garrison, associate professor of business administration and committee chairman, said that the student often feels disenfranchised by the size of the University.

The committee sent out questionnaires to the 18,500 students living in residence halls in an effort to find out how students are responding to the multiversity living experience.

The question which received the most varied response asked what change students would make in their living conditions if they had the chance to change them.

Miss Garrison said that answers ranged from wanting more toilet paper to thicker walls.

"What students want most is a sense of security," she said. "A desire to feel that their territory is their own."

This wish for security was expressed in ways such as a various wish for more privacy and quiet to asking for complete freedom from hours and open house restrictions.

When asked what improvements could be made in student-faculty relationships, the nine to one choice was for smaller classes. There was also great demand for closer contact with the faculty.

"I think that much student discontent is a function of the large size of the university. We haven't had to meet this problem until recently," Miss Garrison said.

From the generally favorable reaction to living situations such as that in Van Hoesen Hall where a small number of women live in an "apartment type" atmosphere and the result of a similar experiment at the University of Michigan, she said that a possible solution to the "bigness" problem is to break physical facilities into smaller units.

"It is hard to make any permanent judgments now on the conditions in residence halls. We are in a period of quick transition now."

The Academic Freedom Report, the revolution in hours policies, the change in open house regulations-I think these will tend to make students enforce discipline on themselves," Miss Garrison said.

The committee is currently sending a questionnaire to MSU dropouts to find out why they left school and to see if anyone from the University tried to contact them and convince them to return to school.

Contrasting art styles shown in dual exhibit

A MSU faculty member and a MSU graduate will combine to present a striking contrast in artistic styles in their dual exhibit at the Lansing Public Library.

The two artists are Hermann Kosak, instructor in advertising, and Mrs. Selma D. Hollander, East Lansing graduate student.

A native of Vienna, Kosak expresses his artistry in a strong representational style.

Kosak holds a bachelor of science degree from the University of Michigan and a masters of art degree in art practices from MSU.

Mrs. Hollander is displaying a group of silkscreen prints which she describes as decorative rather than thematic. Although her prints have titles, the artist says they are for identification rather than description.

Mrs. Hollander holds B.A. and M.A. degrees in art from MSU. She has also studied at the California College of Arts and Crafts.

The Kosak-Hollander exhibit is sponsored by the Lansing Art Guild and will continue through April 26. The exhibit is on display Wednesdays and Saturdays from 11:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m. in the downstairs gallery of the Lansing Public Library.

Operation Outrage sponsors fast

By G. J. WOJCZIKOSKY
State News Staff Writer

Students in residence halls can provide relief funds for the plight of the Biafran and Nigerian people May 7.

An all-University fast sponsored by Operation Outrage in cooperation with MSU food services will give students the chance to donate money for relief flights to the affected areas of both countries.

Although giving up a dormitory meal might not seem a real sacrifice, some students consider it a symbolic representation of their concern.

At the candlelighting ceremony Wednesday sponsored by Operation Outrage, one student expressed concern for the food service donation of only 50 cents since the charge for a meal ticket is $1.50.

Graham Kerr, co-chairman of the organization, said that the figure was only an estimate of the cost of the food not considering the overhead costs.

Overhead cost

He further said that if only one student wanted a meal, the whole cafeteria, employees and machinery would have to be used thus causing a fixed overhead cost.

"The food services are in the process of figuring the exact cost of the food alone," Kerr said. "If there is a difference between it and the 50 cents figure, we will get that difference, too."

The main problem is that this has never been done before," the co-chairman said.

"This is a unique situation," Kerr, Bristol, England graduate student in communications, lived in Nigeria and Biafra for four years prior to the conflict.

As part of an MSU-AID diffusion research project, Kerr became familiar with people of both countries but he and his wife had to be evacuated as a result of the conflict.

Situation disaster

Kerr considers the situation a disaster but can see no clear cut decision or solution.

"The only hope is for a cease-fire," he said. "Some compromise will have to be reached."

"The Report of the Biafra Study Mission," the most recent and extensive study of the situation presented by Sen. Charles E. Goodell, R-N.Y., states in its summary, "The population of 'free' Biafra was estimated at between eight and nine million as of February 10, 1969. Deaths from famine appear to have been on the order of 1.5 million with a minimum of one million in 1968 alone."

Deficient food

The report states that the food supply is "extremely deficient" in protein and that a large deficit in the calorie supply "looms very close."

"The committee urges strong action to bring about a cease fire," the report said.

Fraternity spring rush sees high pledge rate

Spring rush netted over 280 pledges for MSU's fraternities.

Ted Dziak, president of Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC), said that it was an extremely good rush, better than winter term when fraternities pledged under 270 men.

The number of rushees was smaller this term than it was winter term but the pledging rate was much higher.

Dziak said that possible reasons for the success of this term's rush might be that the weather was good and that rush was not as restricted as it was winter term.

For spring rush, IFC lifted the restriction that a rushee was required to visit at least five houses before he could pledge.

Dziak said also that because rush was delayed a week by Easter weekend, potential rushees were more settled in their classes and did not have to worry about "missing that first class."

Another way in which rush this term was different was that individual houses were allowed to contact rushees outside of formal rush.

In spite of the encouraging rush, Dziak said that he kind of agrees with the Greek critics that the fraternity system is dying.

"If the fraternity system continues to exist with the same image and organization as it has now, it will become archaic," Dziak said.

But he thinks that there are some houses that are changing to meet the progressive demands of today's students.

He predicts that in future years the number of houses at MSU might be fewer but those remaining would be very strong.

Dziak said some houses are in the process of changing to a different type of living. He added that those that do not change might be hurt in the future.

Illness forces replacement of string group

The Beaux Arts Quartet, scheduled to perform at MSU at 8:15 tonight, will be replaced by another group because of illness.

The Hungarian-trained Vaghy String Quartet will play in place of the Beaux Arts group. The Vaghy Quartet is presently quartet-in-residence at Queens College in Kingston, Ontario.

Friday's chamber music concert is the final event in MSU's Arts and Letters Recital Series for this season.

Tickets are available at the Union Ticket Office or at the door. MSU students can purchase tickets at reduced rates.

Legislators in 25 states air controversial abortion bills

By BILL CUMMINGS
State News Staff Writer

Abortion is a major issue facing legislators and church leaders across the nation with 48 bills submitted in 25 states already this year.

Many extremely liberal bills have been introduced recently. Efforts to legalize abortion previously involved cases where the mother's health would be in danger (both physically or mentally), where pregnancy was the result of rape or incest and where the child would probably be defective.

Among the most radical proposals are those which would simply repeal abortion laws altogether.

Immediate Repeal
Russell Shaw, in an article on the abortion controversy in "Eastern Catholic Life," said that those favoring abortion can be classified into three groups: (1) those who favor reform legislation limited to "hard" cases; (2) those willing to settle for reform legislation as a step toward eventual abortion on demand; and (3) those who will accept nothing less than immediate repeal of abortion laws.

The National Assn. for Repeal of Abortion Laws was formed in February by advocates who favor eliminating abortion laws. They believe it is the woman's right to have an abortion performed without legal red tape.

Others, including Juan J. Ryan, president of the National Right-to-Life Committee, criticized this viewpoint and pointed out that other rights were involved: those of the child, the father, the medical profession and society.

Michigan now has two abortion bills before the Senate Committee of Health, Social Service and Retirement.

Written Request
Bill 287, introduced by Sen. Gilbert E. Bursley (R-Ann Arbor), allows any physician (M.D. or osteopath) to perform an abortion in a licensed hospital by the patient's written request and the written certification of three doctors. If the reason for abortion is based on mental condition, one of these three doctors must be a psychiatrist.

Under this bill, abortions could be performed to prevent physical or mental damage to the patient in cases of incest or rape) and if there was a good possibility that the child would be either physically or mentally defective.

Bill 288, introduced by Sen. John E. McCauley (D-Wyandotte) will permit any doctor (M.D. or osteopath) to perform an abortion in a licensed hospital. In this bill, the question of whether the abortion should be performed is a personal matter between the patient and the doctor.

MCC Reaction
The Michigan Catholic Conference (MCC) has reacted to these proposals by urging citizens to oppose efforts to amend the state's abortion laws.

In a statement issued by the MCC's board of directors, they said, "Every person has a solemn obligation to maintain respect and reverence for human life from the time it is conceived until the time that God calls it back to a new life in death."

The statement continued by saying, "human life has a sacredness far beyond material things and that sacredness touches every phase of its development. To lessen our regard for any phase of human life is to lessen our regard for human life itself."

The MCC said that if the legislature adopted a liberal abortion law, it could result in the beginning of "an erosion which could gradually work its way to undermine the value of the life of an incurable ill person, of persons with severe mental or physical defects and even of persons who have lived longer than is thought justified in terms of the good of society."

In other areas of the country, legislation on abortion has met with mixed results.

Utah is the only state that has conclusively defeated abortion reform. Iowa and Washington have encountered repeated criticism. In Maryland and Colorado, two states which adopted liberalized abortion laws in previous years, the state legislatures are attempting to "tighten up" the laws.

'LIFELINE FOR BIAFRA'

Candles glow in concern

Light from a hundred candles glowed at the base of Beaumont Tower Wednesday night at the end of a solemn procession expressing concern for the tragic difficulties facing the Biafran-Nigerian people.

The ceremony was part of "Lifeline for Biafra," sponsored by Operation Outrage to raise money for relief of Biafran and Nigerian peoples.

A small group of students stood near posters of suffering children and sang, "Oh what a lovely thing, if the children of mankind could live together in peace."

Graham Kerr, co-chairman of Operation Outrage, said that the flow of relief to Biafra has reduced the death rate from about 6,000 people, mostly children, daily to between 70 and 400 per day.

The organization plans another lifeline around May 30, the second anniversary of Biafran independence.

A hundred candles glow

Students planted candles at the base of Beaumont Tower Wednesday night as part of Operation Outrage's "Lifeline for Biafra." The candle-planting ceremony took place after a procession from the Union to Beaumont.

Hearing planned on legislation

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

A hearing on two bills pending in the Senate to liberalize Michigan's abortion laws will be held in Detroit Monday. Over 100 persons heard speakers on both sides of the issue at a similar hearing held in Lansing Tuesday.

A female member of Britain's Parliament told the emotion-charged Lansing session that passage of an easy abortion law could be a step toward legalizing mercy-killing.

"Once the principle has been accepted that innocent human life may be destroyed, there is nothing to prevent its extension to euthanasia, mercy killing, infanticide and perhaps other cases as well," Mrs. Jill Knight said.

The senate committee on Health, Social Services and Retirement also heard a University of Michigan coed testify that every woman has a right to an abortion for family planning, and admit that she sought an illegal abortion because of Michigan's restrictive laws.

"The emphasis should be on contraception," Mrs. Marina Wotton, mother of a 3-year old daughter said. "But people do have slippups. It's not a question of whether abortions should occur or not. It must be realized that they do occur."

Dr. Jack Stack, of Alma and the vice president of the Michigan Council to Study Abortion, said abortion law reform is an "excellent" idea.

One proposal "puts the delicate problem where it belongs, in the traditional physician-patient relationship," he said.

But theirs was a minority view as persons against abortion turned out in force to make their views known to the committee.

One of the bills, introduced by Sen. Gilbert Bursley (R-Ann Arbor) would make abortions legal under certain circumstances, such as rape, incest or the possibility the child would be born with a serious physical or mental defect.

The second bill, sponsored by Sen. John McCauley, (D-Wyandotte) would make abortions purely private matters between the physician and his patient.

But most of those testifying said the bills ignore the rights of the unborn child and the dangers of the abortion operation.

"I speak for the defenseless minority—the unborn child," Kathleen Sommers of East Lansing and mother of nine children said. "The right to life is the most basic civil right. The murder of the innocent is not a humane solution to our problems."

Dr. Richard V. Jaynes, vice chief of staff at Wayne's Annapolis Hospital, said, "The decision to abort or not to abort depends pretty largely on what society thinks about the human fetus. If the unborn child is considered as nothing, then what happens to the fetus is of no concern."

"But if it is human, then it deserves protection under the law the same as you and I," he said.

Jaynes also charged that the contention that legal abortion is a simple, safe procedure is the worst deception of all.

"As a matter of practical statistics, legal abortion in Sweden is accompanied by a higher death rate than is child birth," he said.

Braun lambastes sex rules

By JANE TOPPS
State News Staff Writer

"I'm fed up with all you hear about new morality, about sexual liberation. It's a lie. There's no such thing as free love, free sex. There's no such thing as a free relationship."

Inaccurate phraseology is not all that exasperates Jon Braun. Delivering a three-part series on "Love, Sex and Marriage," the former North American field coordinator for Campus Crusade for Christ International lambasted the sexual "rules program" and the utilization of environment as a scapegoat.

"I didn't come to give rules and regulations," Braun said. "We've had enough of those."

"And I'm sick of hearing this culture garbage," he added. "If you're loaded up with a pile of guilt, you feel it whether you blame it on culture or not. I don't want to adjust to my environment. I want my environment to adjust to me."

Braun stressed that individual value judgments alone could determine the sexual behavior of a couple. Braun listed his top eight values, beginning with God and then naming his wife and five children.

The question is not what you do, but who is in control, Braun said.

"The big deal is this: Was man made for sex or was sex made for man? I've had enough of this emancipation talk. I don't think it's emancipation—I think it's surrender," he said.

God made man to be in control, to have dominion over himself and over the Earth, Braun said.

"That's God's purpose for man: to be in charge. We are slaves of sex," he said. "And I wish I could find a more graphic word than 'slave.' But if you're a slave, you're in trouble."

Too many people have fear in the midst of their love, feeling constantly threatened that something will break into the relationship and destroy the trust and strength of it, Braun said.

He described love as the absence of fear, the acceptance of a person without demanding a single change in him. He said love is the greatest creative force on Earth today.

To be free, to be able to love, to be in control, man must go personally and directly to the source of love, Braun said.

"Love, real love, comes only from God," he said. "You can have it unless He gives it to you. And He gives it freely, to anyone who will accept it."

"God has given us His self as His love. If we shut Him off, we shut love off," Braun said.

God loves and forgives infinitely with no strings attached, Braun said. He described sex as missing what God has planned.

Sirhan awaits sentence

Sirhan's full-dress trial was the first to grow out of a trio of assassinations that rocked the nation and the world in less than five years.

The first was that of President John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy's brother, shot during a Dallas motorcade in 1963. His accused slayer, Lee Harvey Oswald, was killed two days later by the late Jack Ruby.

Then came Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., Nobel Prize winner and Negro civil rights champion. He was shot to death in Memphis April 4, 1968. James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the murder. He has begun serving 99 years in prison, although he is seeking now to reopen his case.

Then, two months after King was killed, Robert Kennedy was shot as his brother had been by a gunman who stationed himself along the path of his victim.

A defense investigator, Michael McCowan, who talked to Sirhan after the verdict, said of the assassin's reaction: "I think disappointed is the best word." He declined to elaborate.

Chief defender Cooper said he was disappointed, but thought the case had been "fully and fairly presented" and the jury apparently was "convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that Sirhan could meaningfully and maturely premeditate and deliberate."

Prosecutor Compton called the case "unique and without precedent" and termed the verdict appropriate. He said, "The trial demonstrated to the world our system can work and did work."

Sirhan was sitting in his cell.

Cabinet president

His proposal eliminated directorships for tutoring, draft counseling, organization and the discount program while restructuring the Dept. for Public Relations.

While eliminating the directorship for discount programs, Graf proposed to continue the service by including it under the direction of the Consumer Relations Bureau.

Graf's restructuring of the Dept. of Public Relations introduced a directorship for information services.

Graf considered the continuance of the recently established office of vice president for black affairs essential for bettering campus relations.

"We've got to get across to the white community the problems blacks face," he said.

Tom Samet, chairman of the ASMSU Board, said that Hudson, candidate for sophomore-member-at-large, who protested election proceedings in a letter to the State News printed April 14, appeared before the board more in hope of generally expressing his views concerning ASMSU than in expressing a desire for the Cabinet presidency.

An Elections Review Board composed of Peter Ellsworth, outgoing ASMSU Board chairman, Sandy Fenster, elections commissioner, and Glenn Loney, acting chief justice of the All-University Student Judiciary, has conducted an investigation of all complaints and will release its findings today.

Fenster explained that if inconsistencies in voting are shown in the report to possibly affect voting results, a revote will be taken.

Chamberlain

Harrison said that although he has not contacted an attorney to determine petitioning procedure, he has spoken to the secretary of state about what is necessary to legitimize the recall petition.

Harrison must have the signatures of 25 per cent of the registered voters who voted for governor in the last election, a total of over 32,500 names.

If this many sign, a recall election will be held to determine whether or not Chamberlain remains in office.

If the vote is to recall him, a special election will then be held to fill his position, an election in which Chamberlain is ineligible to run.

Harrison said that the outcome of the closed-door hearing in Washington concerning Chamberlain's involvement in the accident "undermines people's faith in the electoral process."

"This represents a double standard in the application of our traffic laws," the county Democratic chairman said. "The question is, what would have happened if he (Chamberlain) had been a black or any other citizen and not a member of Congress?"

He said that he had talked to a number of Republicans, some of them highly placed in the party in Michigan, who were dismayed by the incident and would not actively oppose the recall petition.

A committee of any interested citizens, regardless of political affiliation will be formed to circulate the recall petition.

Financial aid

"We are aiming for a report to the board at the May meeting," he said. "The questions appear to be simple on the surface, but in digging for data, it becomes a complex task."

Trustee Clair White, D-Bay City, said that he fully supports the aid proposal.

"Funds for the aid are worth going out and fighting the legislature for," he said. If Huff and Martin decide to do that, "I'll drive them downtown."

Martin said Thursday that he and Huff would discuss the proposal before the meeting today. He and Huff originally presented the aid plan to former Gov. George Romney in December 1968, but no action was taken.

Huff said he would also present to the board for approval a statement in answer to "news-paper allegations" that the new president might be selected under the "spoils system."

The statement states that board members will act on the basis of their "conscience and conviction" in selecting University officials.

Lee

Black Students' Alliance (BSA) issued a statement April 1 supporting Robert L. Green, associate director of the center, to replace Lee.

The two other men nominated for asst. postmaster's jobs were Frank J. Nunlist, former president of Studebaker-Worthington Inc., and Henry Lehne, senior vice president of Sylvania Electronics Products.

Researchers' delight

Researches in the Physics Dept. received a new sensitive instrument to help them in their studies of metals. The machine is one of the most advanced of its kind to be found in Michigan.

'U' researchers in physics use sensitive instruments

The Dept. of Physics has received a highly sensitive instrument to achieve a better understanding of metals and alloys.

The new instrument, or Superconducting Solenoid, will be used to further research by Frank J. Blatt, professor of physics, and Peter Schroeder, associate professor of physics.

Blatt, Schroeder and a team of research students are making an intense study on the motion of electrons in metals and alloys when subjected to high magnetic fields.

Purchased through a National Science Foundation Grant for $30,000, the new device produces magnetic fields up to 100 kilogauss. (The United States magnetic field equals one gauss.)

The department already possesses an electromagnet but it only produces fields of 20 kilogauss.

"The interesting comparison between these two instruments is that the electromagnet weighs nine tons and requires 20 kilowatts of power for operation," Schroeder said, "and the Superconducting Solenoid weighs 40 pounds and requires only two watts for operation."

The Solenoid is probably the most advanced of its kind in Michigan, Schroeder said.
