Academic Senate OK's 'U' faculty appointments

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Senate approved Wednesday appointments of three faculty to the Athletic Council and the election of three to the Steering Committee of the Faculties.

Irvin E. Vance, asst. professor of mathematics, was named to the Athletic Council, and Leo A. Martin, chairman of Radio and TV, and Charles F. Reed, associate dean of veterinary medicine, were reappointed to positions on the council.

Walter F. Johnson, professor of administration and higher education, and Richard Sullivan, chairman of history, were elected to the Steering Committee of the Faculties while Hideya Kumata, professor of communications, was re-elected for a second term of service.

There were reports on campus that Allan B. Mandelstamm, professor of economics, would introduce a motion to the Senate to censure Acting President Adams for his actions during the BSA take-over of the Wilson Hall cafeteria three weeks ago.

Mandelstamm said Wednesday, however, that "there is no truth to that."

He said he had intended to move for a plebiscite of the faculty for a statement "clearly rejecting the methods the students used" and imploring the administration not to meet the demands of students taking over a building until they left that building.

"But at this time this (the Wilson Hall issue) has receded so much into the background that I decided not to make the motion," Mandelstamm said.

The time for the motion, he said, was at the special Academic Senate meeting last week. However, at that time he was told by Senate officials that because of the special nature of the meeting no motions would be taken from the floor.

At that meeting Adams made a speech asking for a redefinition of the land grant philosophy to meet the crisis of the cities.

Mandelstamm said that he still feels strongly about the Wilson Hall issue.

"I predict that a time will come when buildings on this campus will again be taken over by students," he said. "I hope that then administrators will not deal with those students until they have left. This is not to say that their demands will not be met, but simply that they cannot be in possession of a building while negotiating those demands."

The Senate approved a statement by the Faculty Tenure Committee that administrative judgments on the professional competence of non-tenured faculty and decisions for or against reappointment should be made known to all members of the school or department.

Lawmaker raps trustees' secret tactics

The MSU Board of Trustees, previously criticized by the Michigan Legislature when it adopted its sliding scale tuition plan, has come under fire from a lawmaker for the secret meeting in which the plan was dropped.

Rep. Philip O. Pittenger, R-Lansing, said he was "disturbed by the actions of the Board of Trustees at a secret meeting held last Saturday" when the sliding scale tuition plan was scrapped.

"I am certainly in full agreement with their decision to drop the sliding scale tuition plan, but I feel that the public has the right to know how the board members voted on this critical issue," he said.

Pittenger said he wants to know if any elected public board can legally hold a secret meeting.

"I fully believe that the actions of that board and others should be made public to those who pay for the operations of these institutions and elect the members of the board," he said.

He complained that he could "see no good reason for their action, unless they have something to hide."

Apollo duo views landing site during hazardous moon orbit

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -- Two Apollo 10 astronauts saved their fragile spacecraft from a "wild gyration" that suddenly occurred Thursday as the moon ship whipped over the lunar surface.

Air Force Col. Thomas P. Stafford said the lunar module "just took off on us" as he jettisoned the lower stage of the craft.

Stafford, flying in the small craft with Navy Cmdr. Eugene A. Cernan, said he was able to bring the craft under control and fly it on toward a rocket burn critical to its rejoining the mother ship, orbiting the moon at 69 miles and manned by Navy Cmdr. John W. Young.

The landing craft--radio named "Snoopy"--hurtled at 3,700 miles an hour on an elliptical orbit that carried it lower than some airlines fly on earth.

"There's enough boulders around here to fill up Galveston Bay," Stafford called excitedly as the spacecraft flashed over the craggy surface.

The triumphant dip toward the lunar surface came only 90 minutes after it appeared for a time that the mission might fail in its major purpose.

A docking collar where the lunar lander and the main spaceship were connected slipped away by about 3.5 degrees. The astronauts were instructed that if it slipped three more degrees they were not to undock.

see related story p. 11

The astronauts--while back of the moon and cut off from earth--decided there was no problem and broke the link between the two crafts. Young was left to man the command ship.

"Snoopy," the little landing craft, and "Charlie Brown," the command ship, separated. For a while they flew formation. Then the lander's rocket was triggered.

When it streaked over the site where Americans hope to walk in two months, Cernan radioed to earth. "We're right there. We're right over it. I'm telling you. We are low. We're close, babe. This is it!"

Stafford called off landmarks appearing below the spacecraft as its orbital loop carried it over the planned landing site of Apollo 11.

"Okay," he said. "We are coming up over the site. There's plenty of holes there. The surface is actually very smooth, like a very wet clay . . . with the exception of the bigger craters."

"You know, this Goddamn . . ." Cernan began. He stopped abruptly and began again.

"Boy, I'll tell you, babe. This is something."

After some six minutes at the low point over the moon, the astronauts fired their rocket engine again. This burn started a series of firings needed to bring the craft into a rendezvous area with the command ship.

"Okay," Cernan said. "We're burning. John, we're burning."

Stafford reported minutes later that so many photographs were made by the cameras used to take pictures of the moon surface that "the batteries went dead." Stafford chuckled. "Oh, well."

When the spacecraft separated earlier, Young trained the command ship's color television camera on the lunar module, giving TV viewers a look at a spacecraft in flight about the moon.

Young fired rockets on the command module and a distance began opening between the vehicles.

FIVE HOUR SESSION

Peace talks hit snag as rivals debate plans

PARIS (AP) -- The United States said Thursday "a basis now exists for productive discussions of key issues" and the negotiators at the Paris peace talks opened debate on rival plans. But both sides acknowledged they were unable to make progress.

The 18th full-scale session of the talks lasted four hours and 50 minutes, but afterward, Xuan Thuy, North Vietnam's chief negotiator, said: "Today the conference made no progress at all."

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge was asked by reporters whether he saw any willingness of the other side to negotiate and replied: "Well, it is rather obscure."

Inside the meeting hall, Tran Buu Kiem, the chief delegate of the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front (NLF), accused the United States of "rejecting 'the most essential and fundamental points' in the NLF's 10-point plan."

He referred to the question of troop withdrawals and demands for a coalition government in South Vietnam. He indicated he would refuse to talk about any questions as long as the United States stuck to demands for a mutual troop withdrawal and opposed a coalition.

Lodge conceded these two issues, plus international supervision of troop withdrawals, were three areas of major disagreement in the Viet Cong's plan and the eight-point program of President Nixon.

But he called for efforts to find a solution to these problems and said both sides "seem to be taking a common approach" on three other questions.

He listed these as reunification of North and South Vietnam, restoration of the demilitarized zone and the issue of war prisoners--all parts of both Nixon's and the Viet Cong's plan. The prisoner of war issue, however, provoked a flareup. This issue has been developing for several days as a result of a U.S. request for a list of American prisoners of war.

VIOLENCE CONDEMNED

State-aid scholarships under attack by House

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Another attempt will be made in the Michigan House today to pass legislation removing a student's scholarship if he is found guilty of violence on his campus.

Rep. Joyce Symons, D-Allen Park, will introduce amendments to the state-aid scholarship bill that are nearly identical to those introduced in Wednesday's session by Rep. Tom Anderson, D-Southgate.

Anderson had withdrawn his amendments Wednesday after a spirited debate in which the passage of the basic scholarship bill was threatened. He said he did not want to jeopardize approval of that legislation.

He did say that he would speak in favor of Mrs. Symons' amendments but if they failed, Anderson said there were still options left.

"I could introduce them when the appropriations bills come on the floor," he said. "And farther down on the calendar, I have a bill of my own."

The appropriations bills will probably come out of committee next week.

"I am not against dissent," Anderson said. "I'm all for it. But what I am against is when that right of dissent violates the rights of others."

Under his proposals, a student could be found guilty of "violent or rebellious activity" by courts or administrative bodies

"Some persons have criticized it because it would relegate to a tribunal the authority to take away a scholarship," he said. "But a student can already be expelled by a tribunal and we want the same provisions applied to scholarship approval."

"I regret that the bill only affects those who are poor enough to need a scholarship, but we are working on the guy who can get along without a scholarship," Anderson said.

Jackie Vaughan, D-Detroit, objected to the proposed law.

"Let's encourage students to protest," he said. "Perhaps it is the only legitimate movement of dissent."

"I don't see why they don't come down and visit us," Vaughan added.

Rep. Jack Faxon, D-Detroit, said it is class discrimination.

"Poor people are the only people who are really hurt and can afford it least," he said.

Faxon also objected to having the University or the scholarship authority judge the merits of whether a scholarship should be revoked.

Rep. Tom Brown, R-Lansing, also voiced his dissent.

"It is bad enough to talk of rebel activity without also talking of finding them guilty and not know who by," he said. "We ought to have due process of law injected. That's why I objected to the Wilson Hall incident--it lacked due process of law."

"We are not going to take away a student's scholarship if there is not due process of law," he added.

Mazola candidate oils campaign

By WHIT SIBLEY
State News Staff Writer

Louie Bender, the Mazola party's candidate for the MSU presidency launched his shot for the top campaign Thursday on the crest of an apparent campus groundswell in his behalf.

Bender, a slim, moustachioed war veteran, has been working diligently on his noncandidate campaign. Sources from behind the bar at the Coral Gables, his campaign headquarters, reported Thursday that Bender has thousands of lapel buttons, bumper stickers, posters and even a limousine to boost him to the throne in the MSU Administration Bldg. He has also enlisted the services of "Bender Girls" to add lustre to his drive for the presidency.

Sports bodyguards

Rich Saul, co-captain of next year's Spartan football team, and Eddie McLeod, 1969 Spartan center and a Dallas Cowboy rookie, have been enlisted to guard Bender's body in case of any mishaps.

Bender conferred with Acting President Adams recently and held an official cigar exchange. Bender prefers Antonio & Cleopatra grenadiers (wrapped in dark leaf), while Adams prefers to draw on Dutch Masters presidents.

The results of a Plante (as in Hank Plante, 1968 senior class president) Polling Enterprises poll Thursday showed Bender having six per cent of the campus votes for president. Hubert Humphrey held 33 per cent; Adams, 31; G. Mennen Williams, 21; and 10 per cent were undecided.

When asked about his dwindling constituency, Bender replied, confidently from under a table at the Gables, "A poll at this time is not valid because all these men have had extensive exposure in the press. We will see who comes out on top in the end."

After struggling to his feet, intended to avoid all scandal in his campaign and after digging into his pockets, revealed his entire financial holdings: $2.48 and a reserved seat ticket to the 1970 Water Carnival.

When asked exactly what he supported, Bender dejectedly replied, "Three illegitimate children."

Announces platform

Bender, a progressive politician, announced that during his presidential reign, he would create one-way sidewalks along Farm Lane.

He will also press for all secret board of trustees meetings to be held in Spartan Stadium," he said.

"I would like to see Tartan Turf in all lavatories in Berkeley Hall," Bender mused.

He said he thought that the Swine Research Center should be relocated at Mayo Hall. "I think it would give both swine and coeds a real living-learning experience," Bender chortled.

When asked about ROTC, Bender said, "I am militantly opposed to ROTC and intend to marshal all the forces at my command to bring about the complete annihilation of the program."

Bender also supports opening of the Library graduate stacks to touring junior high school students; the re-routing of the Red Cedar into a moat stacked with campus police around the Administration Bldg. and the filling of the I.M. pool with Mazola Oil.

Lists endorsers

Bender had been officially endorsed by the ASMSU Student Board; the Student Assn. for Extracurricular Activities; Off-Campus Council; Interfraternity Council; and Men's Hall Assn.

Bender plans public appearances at Union Board's Mad Hatter's Midway Saturday afternoon. He will give a major policy address at 3 p.m. Wednesday on the banks of the Red Cedar by the Auditorium and will hold an open press conference at 2 p.m. Monday at the Coral Gables Show Bar.

He will be appearing all over campus beginning today.

'VIETNAMIZE' WAR EFFORT

U.S. prepares withdrawal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird indicated Thursday the United States is giving increased priority to preparing the South Vietnamese for assuming more of the Vietnam fighting if the Paris peace talks should fall.

At the same time, Laird told a meeting of business and civic leaders that "while the enemy has been talking peace, he has during recent weeks been stepping up his offensive military operations."

The tone of Laird's remarks seemed more pessimistic than those by U.S. Ambassador Henry cabot Lodge, who said in Paris that "we think a basis now exists for productive discussion of the key issues" between the warring parties in the Vietnam war.

"As a defense planner, I must be prepared for the possibility that negotiations in Paris will remain stalled and that the enemy may not respond to the President's proposals for peace in Vietnam—the highest priority of this administration," Laird said.

"That is why we are giving increased emphasis to the program to modernize the fighting forces of the Republic of Vietnam. "We are moving forward with increased priority on our collective efforts to Vietnamize the war, should the Paris talks fail."

Laird coined the term "Vietnamize the war" in the past to describe the administration's effort to turn over the major burden of the war to the South Vietnamese as soon as possible.

The Nixon administration has been reported planning to start withdrawing some troops as U.S. military authorities in Vietnam judge the South Vietnamese fighting forces are ready.

Authorities have said this is the critical condition preparatory to beginning an American troop withdrawal, and that a pullback could begin even if the Paris talks were stalemated and the level of fighting in Vietnam had not subsided.

Laird forecast that Vietnamizing of the war "will be an important item on the agenda for the talks at Midway" June 8 between Nixon and President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam.

The defense secretary, in accusing the North Vietnamese of raising the intensity of fighting even as the Viet Cong offered a 10-point peace plan, noted that the latest casualty summaries show 430 Americans killed last week.

'U' police deny drug raid rumor

The MSU Dept. of Public Safety Wednesday denied that any drug arrests have been made on campus in the past few days.

The State News has received reports from several sources that from 10 to 15 students were arrested in their residence halls for possession of drugs.

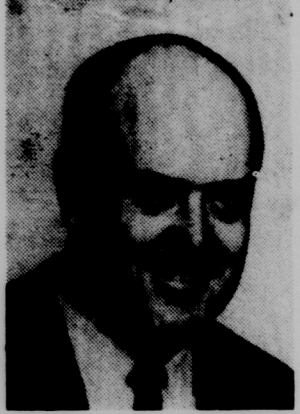

"If any arrests have been made, I don't know anything about it," Capt. Adam Zutaut, of the campus Police Dept., said.

The Michigan State Police and East Lansing City Police also denied that any arrests have been made by their respective departments.

International News

The commander of the 101st Airborne Division said Thursday he fought the battle of Ap Bia Mountain because the North Vietnamese were there and his mission was to "destroy the enemy forces and installations."

People are still acting like this was a catastrophe for U.S. troops," Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais told a news conference. "This was a tremendous, gallant victory and we decimated a large North Vietnamese unit."

Deaths for U.S. troops after the battle were 46 with 308 wounded.

Egypt claimed six Israeli Mirage jets attempted to fly into Egyptian airspace about 300 miles southeast of Cairo Thursday. One was shot down and the others were driven off.

There was no immediate reply from Israel.

In other action in the Mideast, Israel claimed to down three Egyptian MIG 21s, Soviet-built jets, in action at two points over the Suez Canal Wednesday. The Egyptians denied this.

The Army took control of Argentina's second largest city Thursday in the wake of student-police battles which left one youth dead and a number of other persons injured.

Martial law was declared in Rosario after a wave of police and student clashes Wednesday night.

The disturbances in the city of 800,000 were an outgrowth of the killing of a medical student on the campus National University. The 21-year-old student was killed by police during a protest against dining room food prices at the university in Corrientes.

National News

President Nixon said Thursday he will never nominate a personal or political friend for the Supreme Court and will not consider race, religion or geography in making such selections.

Nixon said he feels particularly strongly about this because of the unprecedented instance in which Abe Fortas resigned from the court under fire.

Fortas held what has been regarded as the "Jewish seat" on the court.

The first public school strike in Chicago's history began Thursday while both sides continued efforts for an early settlement.

The walkout idled 600,000 pupils in 523 schools. Superintendent James F. Redmond ordered schools closed Thursday and today except for teachers willing to cross picket lines.

Lt. Gen. Durward C. Crow, comptroller of the Air Force, conceded Thursday the controversial, multibillion-dollar contract for the C5A super jet transport has backfired and its pattern will not be used again.

The eight-year contract was an innovation because it placed total responsibility for all elements on Lockheed, the prime contractor.

The major flaw in the contract arrangement was that the Air Force did not take a yearly look at the costs which have increased by nearly 50 per cent since Lockheed received the three-billion dollar contract.

Campus News

Snipers and police exchanged gunfire at North Carolina A&T University Thursday. A student was found shot to death in a dormitory with a wound in the back of the head.

A coroner said the student was shot with a small caliber firearm.

The Greenboro police chief, in charge of the police line around the 4,000-student campus, said his men fired only when fired upon, and did not go on the campus.

No police were injured, but one bullet hit a car with policemen inside.

Treaty proposed to protect seabed

GENEVA (AP) -- The United States, injecting a note of urgency, presented to the 17-nation disarmament conference Thursday a draft treaty banning nuclear arms and other weapons of mass destruction from the world's ocean floors.

The draft, which contrasts with a Soviet proposal for complete demilitarization of the seabed, was described by American delegate Adrian S. Fisher as aiming a "realistic and important first step toward more comprehensive disarmament."

Agreement to prevent the au-clear arms race from spreading to the seabed must be reached quickly, Fisher told the delegates.

"It might be much more difficult, and perhaps not possible, to reach agreement once deployments have started," he asserted.

Alexei A. Roshchin, the chief Soviet representative told newsmen after the one-hour meeting he was "in a way," disappointed that the American draft did not draw closer to the sweeping Moscow concept submitted two months ago and labeled unworkable by the United States.

But he emphasized it was too soon to say whether this, in Moscow's view, has dimmed the prospect of an East-West agreement on seabed disarmament. Most conference observers remained optimistic that such an accord will come before next fall.

Although some passages of the United States and Soviet drafts were identical even in wording, there were key differences beside the scope of prohibition.

The American draft would apply to areas of the seabed beyond a three-mile coastal limit, while the Russians' have suggested a 12-mile limit.

Seabed temptation
Fisher said this would add about two million square miles of seabed to the area of prohibition, explaining this area, because of its proximity to shore, offered particular "temptation to extend the nuclear arms race."

Roshchin, in his talk to reporters, said this was a "comparatively small extension" and said the area in question was not so important as the key issue of which weapons would be involved.

The United States, in addition, wants verification to be done by "observation and consultation." The Soviet proposal, calling for "reciprocity" in inspection, is viewed by American officials as lacking clearness.

Fisher reiterated that the Soviet proposal, requiring verification of all installations and structures on the seabed, would pose immense technical problems.

OBSCENITY BILL PASSED

House nips pornography

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan House gave quick passage Wednesday to a stern measure that would attempt to stem the "rising tide" of pornography and obscene materials.

With only four dissenting votes, the bill of Rep. James O'Neill, D-Saginaw, won the support of 96 legislators.

O'Neill said the bill would try to remove obscene materials from public stores where they might fall into the hands of minors.

He has been studying the problem for some time, and has found that much of the material "makes Playboy comparable to the Lady's Home Journal."

"We're trying to take an honest approach to a cancer spreading through this nation," he said.

One of those who voted against the bill, Rep. Daniel Cooper, D-Oak Park, said "The only problem with this kind of bill is it must be based on subjective judgment."

"No matter how tight you draw the line, it still comes down to what the individual thinks is obscene," he said.

Musical chairs and academic loyalty

Spring is in the air and once again it's time to play that old game: academic musical chairs.

Noting the "mass migration" of high level administrators from MSU this spring, one might wonder if the university has become an administrative training ground for other institutions.

However, looking beyond the narrow limits of just this university, one sees that MSU's losses are merely a reflection of the trends of the national academic community as a whole.

The turnover in faculty and administrators at major universities each spring -- shown by the large number of presently "acting" department heads, deans and presidents -- is amazing.

Competition for talented teachers and administrators seems to grow stiffer and more ruthless each year as "raided" colleges, in need of faculty, use the same tactics they so bitterly denounced when used on them.

And so we sit at MSU wondering how we can save our better administrators and faculty from being pulled under in the annual "brain drain." Why are they leaving? How can we keep our talented men here?

The problem really isn't one that can be solved by single universities. Its solution lies in the restoration of balance in the values of academia.

A professor or administrator, offered a higher position with more pay and prestige at another university, certainly cannot be blamed for wanting to advance his career. Yet he should give some consideration to his loyalty to the university.

Recently the loyalty to the institution has been overshadowed by the desire for professional advancement. The balance between the values of loyalty and personal success seems to have been tipped in favor of the latter.

Third universities can combat this imbalance by providing both challenging jobs and adequate financial and prestige rewards. Fostering institutional loyalty would add stability to academic circles.

The problem isn't that change and exchange in the university community are undesirable. It is the volume of that change that is alarming.

Equally alarming is the university's inability to fill vacant positions permanently. Large numbers of "acting" administrators only compound the problems of change.

Massive turnover and frequent changing of jobs could create an atmosphere in which it would be easier to run away from problems than to solve them, resulting in decline and stagnation in all universities.

It's hard to be concerned with reform on campus when you know you'll be gone in a year or two. And it's even harder to keep continuity and quality in courses when faculty and staff are in constant flux.

The problems presented by the annual game of academic musical chairs are many and they can't be solved by one institution or one group of professors. However, to do nothing is not the answer.

Efforts by individual institutions to foster dedication in their faculty and staff coupled with a rebalancing of professional values and institutional dedication would be a big first step toward restoring order and stability to the nation's universities.

Official doubts, public assurances

There is a certain irony in a liberal university president delivering an address to graduating ROTC cadets and admonishing them to stay within established channels to effect change.

Not that there was any doubt in Acting President Adams' mind that they would stray from the paths of righteousness and legality as guardians of those channels. ROTC cadets at MSU, said Adams, are molded into well-rounded officers who would not stoop to seize state power. Presumably Adams was referring to the danger of an uncultured elitist army resulting if the campaign to kick the military off campus succeeds.

Maybe there is no doubt in Adams' mind about ROTC's place on MSU's campus. But the committee he has appointed to investigate the question represents, we hope, no special conviction such as Adams' and will be speaking to the considerable doubts of many when it makes its recommendations on the fate of ROTC at MSU.

POINT OF VIEW

Extend a reformed citizen army

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following "point of view" was written by Robert J. Morris, Lansing graduate student.

Perhaps the most difficult task facing contemporary college men is that of sorting out their anti-Vietnam feelings and their anti-draft feelings. The relationship between this particular war and the draft as a feature of American society is not a simple one and it is very dangerous to transfer feelings about one to the other. For this reason I should like to offer some comments in response to the arguments reported by Susan Myles in the May 1 issue of the State News, arguments which do not so much meet, as evade and distort, the objections to a volunteer army.

First, Sen. Mark Hatfield draws upon a very selective memory in his attempt to answer the charge that a professional army would be inflexible. He cites the Korean war call-up of reserves "while 1.6 million potential draftees were ignored." The fact is that Korea confronted the Pentagon with the immediate need for large numbers of quickly deployable, already trained troops. More recently (Vietnam, now a larger war than Korea was, seems to have slipped the Senator's mind), the Pentagon has taken advantage of the escalatory nature of the new warfare to rely on draftees, "ignoring" a million and a half reservists.

One reason for this, of course, was that it is more prudent to fight such a dubious war with a relatively powerless group of men-reservists are very influential in Congress and have a strong sense of their own comfort. Just as important, however, is the fact that Korea, the Berlin build-up and the Cuban missile crisis displayed an appalling unpreparedness for combat in the so-called "ready reserves." They were little more "ready," it turned out, than recruits, but their John Wayne pretensions and the tender sensibilities of their commanders made dealing with their deficiencies an almost impossible embarrassment to the Pentagon. So much for flexibility.

As to the likely number and kind of volunteers, the proponents contradict one another. Professor Oi quite correctly sees unemployment in the civilian sector as the primary stimulus to enlistment (given a system without a draft). This being so, the protest of the authors of How to End the Draft, that "national pride and love of country" are separable from "personal avarice and love of money," is absurd. Unemployment is no stimulus to love of country, and the weaknesses of the mercenary army exist whatever its pay scale. Nor are the potential volunteers for such service likely to exercise Milton Friedman's "public referendum." The popularity or unpopularity of the "activities" for which the armed forces are used could conceivably depend upon one's moral tenets, but pacifists need not take heart. Men will tend to volunteer, as always, for the situation in which they enjoy the most comfort with the least likelihood of being kicked. The Navy and Air Force currently turn away thousands of volunteers while the Army and Marine Corps draft thousands. The difference lies in their risk comfort coefficients, not in any moral superiority of their "activities" in Asia.

Confronted with President Nixon's statement, one can only wonder where he has been all these years. There is no question whether "better pay and better conditions would obviously make military service more attractive to black and white alike." The problem is that whites have more options than blacks and may be expected to continue to exercise them. Further, those whites who do volunteer are certain to be those who are like blacks, in that they are members of the under class. This presents a double-edged problem. First, given a more comfortable military alternative for these men, society would feel less obligation and less pressure to alter the civilian inequities which made it attractive.

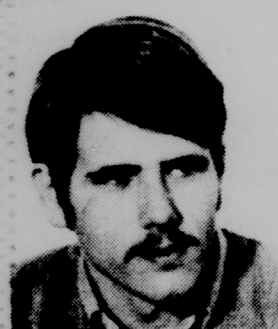

Second, men from this class would tend to evolve stronger ties to the organization (their benefactor) than to the general society (their persecutor in many cases). Such a group could easily be welded into a solid political block whose votes and lobbies would support positions like those of the American Legion and the U.S. Army Assn.--read these some exam night when you run out of No-Doz.

Which brings us to the question of civil liberties. The value of "citizen soldiers," particularly in a nation as heavily garrisoned as ours, is that they are first and basically citizens. Their experience represents the experience of the whole people, their values and allegiances are a cross section of those of the society as a whole. Since they are only temporarily soldiers, they are not so likely to behave in ways detrimental to the people and institutions so much a part of their former and future lives. There are important lessons in the fact that troops of the Illinois National Guard were both unbrutal and far more effective at crowd control last August than were the Chicago police; in the fact that troops of the 82nd Airborne Division were able to calm Detroit's East Side while the police helped turn the rest of the city into a colossal O.K. Corral in 1967. The Detroit police claim that the Army had the easier job, of course, and they're quite right. Under the circumstances the local population felt far less threatened by the Army (since the troops were more nearly like themselves and more mindful of their sensibilities) and consequently behaved differently toward them. Similarly, Illinois guardsmen were more like the young demonstrators in Chicago than were the Chicago police. Far from being assaulted, the guardsmen were actually applauded there. It is important to note that the Michigan National Guard behaved badly in the Detroit situation. The reason again is that in the ghetto context, they were as alien as the police. The lesson of all these instances is that alienation breeds fear, mistrust, resentment and aggression, while familiarity promotes a sense of security and allays suspicion.

The only way to avoid alienation of the military is to ensure a high rate of personnel turnover and heterogeneous composition. An Army whose troops represent a national cross-section is both safer at home and more effective in the event of a genuine threat to national security. The recent development of an underground GI press suggests also that, if the need should arise, a civilian army is more likely to invoke the Nuremberg ethic than is a professional one.

Finally, it should be emphasized that voluntary enlistment per se is not to be feared. It is the careerism which must follow it that presents the threat. We have before us a thousand examples of what happens when we make society's dirty jobs the business of careerists. I refer to the nation's police forces, which are in large part socially homogenous, politically reactionary, professionally unreliable and so full of esprit de corps as to border on the paranoid.

Indeed, we should be looking not to professionalize the Army, but to extend a reformed draft so that it provides not only citizen soldiers, but citizen cops as well.

Sliding out with sliding scale

Some of us may not be back to old MSU next year.

Our thanks to the highly respectable Board of Trustees which managed to take many of us royally at their last closed meeting.

Ways to finance the education of desperately underprivileged students will undoubtedly be found. The University has already made a commitment to recruit black, third-world students and you cannot now renege on that commitment.

We cannot help but wonder, however, how extensive any program might be that the trustees come up with. Consider the number of students who have been receiving the benefits of the fee reduction plan. Consider what has lately been happening to financial aid funds (like how much appropriations for National Defense Loans were cut this year as well as Equal Opportunity Grants). Consider what the trustees have told us this whole land grant affair is all about (like providing higher educational benefits for people in the state at as low a cost as possible). Consider what has been happening to higher educational costs in general in the last few years.

There are more than 11600 of us who qualified for reduced tuition under the sliding scale plan. Of these, 7,895 of us were receiving the maximum benefits of $61 per quarter for a possible $244 per year. The rest averaged $30 a quarter. Be realistic for a minute. Do you trustees really expect to institute a new scholarship program which will be that inclusive? Add it all up. It's a lot of money and even more administrative bookwork and bureaucratic red tape.

Where will the aid come from, Mr. Trustee? We really aren't socialist pinkos trying to sap money from the state; we just want to get an education so that we, in turn, may benefit the state.

It certainly looks like we are being caught in the middle. It is the middle-income students--students whose parents make over $3,000 but considerably less than $16,000 annually, who are really getting had. We don't qualify for full scholarships, and the fee reduction was the only assistance we received. Now we are faced not only with increased housing costs and increased tuition rates, but also the loss of the one redeeming factor we had--our fee reduction. Perhaps it doesn't sound like much, but our tuition just jumped from $123 per term to at least $187 and probably more, considering that a tuition hike is inevitable. When you start the year and don't even know where the initial $123 is coming from, that's a significant jump.

Your methods are amazing, Mr. Trustee. Whoever put the word "trust" in your name didn't know you very well, did he? Come on, it's all a joke about the University's business being public business, isn't it? Certainly it's your prerogative to run into a closed session the day after a regular board meeting and secretly hoodwink the students. We students have got a lot to learn about the way the University really operates, haven't we? If this whole affair had been discussed for two months, why was it rammed through a special closed session? Students really don't have a right to know how the University's decisions are being made, do they? Did you, in your warped logic, conclude that there would be fewer repercussions if the change were passed in secrecy?

What is hard to figure out is why you timed the change so poorly. Wouldn't it have made more sense, from your point of view, to have waited until after spring term? Then there would have been even less debate over the decision.

You have set up another classical committee to study ways of making financial aid possible to lower income students. It's a great way to get someone off your back, isn't it?

We can understand the state legislature's gape (for a change it's legitimate). Why should they give scholarship money to the University when the recipients of the aid have their tuition jacked up? Consequently, part of the scholarship must pay for this increase. It's a ridiculous, bureaucratic setup. Why give someone aid and then take part of it away? It's the penalty for being a scholarship recipient.

We can understand their reasoning, but we can't understand yours. The state bill said the funds would be withheld if the University adjusted a student's tuition according to his scholarship. This seems like a hint from the legislature to eliminate the discrimination against scholarship recipients than a demand to destroy the sliding-scale tuition plan. Was this alternative considered? But then, we'll never know, will we, since the decision was cloaked in secrecy.

Just one more question on closed sessions: Why do you have any open sessions? Is it merely to pacify the student community into believing that the trustees' business is public business? After all, the last regular board meeting lasted less than an hour with nothing accomplished except a few appointments. All a matter of pomp and ceremony, maybe?

Congratulations, trustees. As usual it's the student who has been had by your questionable decision. Only this time you've hit us where it really hurts. Oh well, maybe you'll weed a few of us out this way. It'll make more room for the students who do have the bread to maintain your beautiful megaversity. My old man never would have donated a dormitory to the University anyway.

THE NATIONS PRESS

Huber makes Playboy

Late last year, a 21-year old student at Oakland University gave a lecture on poet William Butler Yeats' concept of freedom; he stripped naked to dramatize Yeats' meaning. As a result of this event (and of the current unrest on a number of state-collapse campuses), the Michigan senate, led by State senator Robert J. Huber, decided to undertake a HUAC-like probe into education in Michigan.

An editorial then appeared in the LaPeer County Press, addressed to the investigation in general and to Senator Huber in particular. The conclusion of that editorial is quoted below:

"It's a disgrace to tolerate something like this," he (Senator Huber) said. "I can't understand why the community is tolerating it and not standing up in open indignation. There are so many protesters in the area who are quick to stand up with open-housing placards, but they're silent on a real moral issue like this."

Yeah, take that you stupid priests. You're wasting time demanding such silly things as an end to discrimination in housing. Who cares if a black man's money won't buy the same house a white man's money will buy? Forget it and join with Senator Huber in debating this real moral issue.

But seriously, folks, Senator Huber obviously wouldn't recognize a real moral issue if he woke up in bed with it.

OUR READERS' MIND

Familiarity and Kadirga

To the Editor:

"What is your impression of the word KADIRGA?"

Last month this question was asked of hundreds of MSU and University of Michigan students and faculty members. The people interested in the answer are Dr. Robert B. Zajonc and myself of the Research Center for Group Dynamics at the University of Michigan.

Recent experimental findings at the Center have provided strong evidence that there is a relationship between the number of times one is merely exposed to a stimulus (a word, an object, a photograph) and one's attitude toward that stimulus. All else equal, the more frequent the appearance of a stimulus, the more one likes it. For example, undergraduate participants were shown a series of non-English words. Some words were displayed only once; others 2, 5, 10, and 25 times. At the end of the exposure sequence the subjects were asked to indicate whether a particular word meant something "good" or something "bad." The words that were seen at high frequencies were consistently rated as better than those seen at lesser frequencies.

Virtually identical findings were obtained in several replications of the experiment. Because of the reliability of the effect in the laboratory we were eager to learn if the phenomenon could be demonstrated in the real world. Accordingly, a field out of times certain words were to be exposed to large numbers of people. In order to do this we purchased a series of display advertisements in The Michigan State News and The Michigan Daily.

During a 25-day period the word KADIRGA appeared twenty-five times; SARICIK, ten times; BIWOJNI, five times; NANSOMA, twice; and IKTI-TAF, once. The assignment of words to frequency categories was reversed in The Michigan Daily. Upon completion of each series some 1,000 questionnaires were distributed by mail and in classrooms. All respondents were given an opportunity to rate each of the above words on a good-bad, seven-point scale. Additionally, participants were asked to indicate if they had seen the words before, and where.

Is there a link between frequency of appearance (mere exposure) and positive attitude? The tentative answer: yes. Those respondents that identified the newspapers as the source of exposure assigned the 25-frequency words a high rating on the good-bad continuum; the 10-5- and 2-frequencies moderate ratings; and the 1-frequency a low rating.

The results of this research serve to cast doubt on the adage that familiarity breeds contempt—something of the opposite seems to be true.

We wish to express our thanks to the faculty and students of the University and the staff of the Michigan State News.

Bring white kids to ghetto

To the Editor:

On Friday, April 11th, Dr. Leroy Augenstein, chairman of the Bio-Physics Department, spoke on "Mind Manipulation" to the Lyman Briggs College students and faculty. I feel that the aspect of his appraisal concerning the value of "Operation Get-Acquainted" was in error and that the operation is certainly very harmful, if not destructive, to the deprived blacks who take part in it.

When "Operation Get-Acquainted" was originally initiated, I was invited to a meeting of blacks who were very much interested in sabotaging it (not by physical violence) for the above-mentioned reason.

We feel that taking ghetto blacks out of their environment into the East Lansing and Okemos type white homes is not significantly educational to them, because blacks are keenly aware of how whites live (T.V., movies), and their values, etc. I would, therefore, in view of this disparity, strongly suggest that the white founders and workers of this operation, if they are genuinely interested in bridging this chasm of cultural ignorance, bring their white children to black ghetto homes.

One might wonder why I did not speak out during the discussion. The fact that I am neither a student nor faculty member of Lyman Briggs College, for whom the discussions are held, led me to conclude that my uninvited comments would have been unethical. I have, however, since the discussion talked to Dr. Augenstein and presented my views, several upon which we agreed.

From what I have said one might get the impression that I consider the operation to be insincere. This is not true; I do not condemn Dr. Augenstein and those involved of trying to maliciously further frustrate our black youth. I believe the plan is a sincere one, but that it is sincerely wrong and the effect of this wrong, sincere or not, is the same.

Sell stadium sod

To the Editor:

From the talk that I have heard around campus there seems to be a good chance that next year the stadium field will be replaced with artificial turf. When I asked the Stadium Grounds Department what would be done with the old sod they informed me that the best of it would probably be used around campus, while the rest of it would be thrown away.

A proposal: why not cut up the old sod into, say, one foot squares and sell it for $1.00 a piece? It could be a big hit with the many collectors of MSU memorabilia, and the profits could be given to some good charity. The monies raised from the nostalgic value of the grass would, undoubtedly, be able to cover any loss incurred by the Grounds Department, and still have quite a bit left over.

Appreciative

To the Editor:

I would like to publicly thank the members of Delta Chi fraternity and Kappa Delta sorority who enthusiastically participated in the recent "Community Pride Day" activities. Their efforts, in assisting the elderly of East Lansing with yardwork chores, were greatly appreciated. It is the actions of these students, and the actions of all of the MSU Volunteers, that are a true credit to MSU.

Wolverine '69: MSU as art

Usually I don't do reviews of 464-page books. Even those with pictures. And of a college yearbook? Unheard of!

And then I saw the advance copy for the 1969 Wolverine. Little things like:

That summer I thought the whole world lived in Wonders Hall; and I searched for a key that would unlock the great secret of the university and make me a student, a philosopher, a doctor, a scientist, an engineer-- or at any rate--an educated person.

I asked editor-in-chief Phil Stofan if it was a poem for submission in Collage. He said no, it was an experiment he wanted to try with the yearbook. He saw no reason why some of the poetry of the University experience should be excluded. I told him I'd be interested in seeing the final result.

The 1969 Wolverine is here. It is a prodigious effort, as usual, with the customary listing of activities, groups, pictures. But along with the habitual, there is the unusual: the story of baseball--And the Spartans, keyed for a victory celebration.

tumble from the glory of a first place finish to the anonymity of second."

Of track: "... the runner must psychologically prepare himself for each time he competes. And if he wins, the vomit that trickles down his cheek may be the only indication of victory."

To be sure, clichés abound: Services are the things MSU does for you that don't appear on a transcript.

and the repetitious headlines are funny. But the "Family of Man" could have used material like Competition has become a way of life.

We run a good race but it's better to win, we've heard.

Slowly we learn. We want to be first because it hurts less. There is some real campus humor, too--"After Journalism 201, you give up the idea of taking over MSU and decide to take over the State News instead."

The key to the whole production is perhaps, in a very strange and unique way, the key to the most significant University experience:

EDUCATION incidents hung on a promise, a collection of experiences haphazardly designed to mold the individual. It is in the molding of ourselves that we begin to emerge.

Alumni chapel installs 'new' bronze ringer

The Alumni Memorial Chapel has a "new, old" bell which will ring out for weddings and other services when requested.

The bronze bell was purchased last December. It formerly "inhabited" the Kincaid School and was cast in 1886 by Henry McShane Co. of Baltimore, Md.

Whether we protest or acquiesce or are tangential to the life going on around us, in some subtle way--haphazardly--we are molded and changed.

The 1969 Wolverine is no great work of art. And yet it strives for greatness in an unabashed and significant way, like a budding poet who has been touched by the Muse and is still unaccustomed to the tools of his craft. Wolverine 1969 has attempted to produce an art form, and has succeeded in giving the University and those leaving it more than the usual collection of nostalgia and gooey trivia.

It has attempted to capture some of the depth of our surface lives, at those rare moments when we stepped out of schedule and walked within ourselves; when the Draft made us recognize the power of death; when losing meant you were lonelier than your girl could reach to; when love said, this girl I will not sleep with; when graduation made you feel you weren't a second-class citizen.

Wolverine captures truth in its best moments; almost always it captures people:

All the freshmen were at one end of the dorm and there was always a paper due in

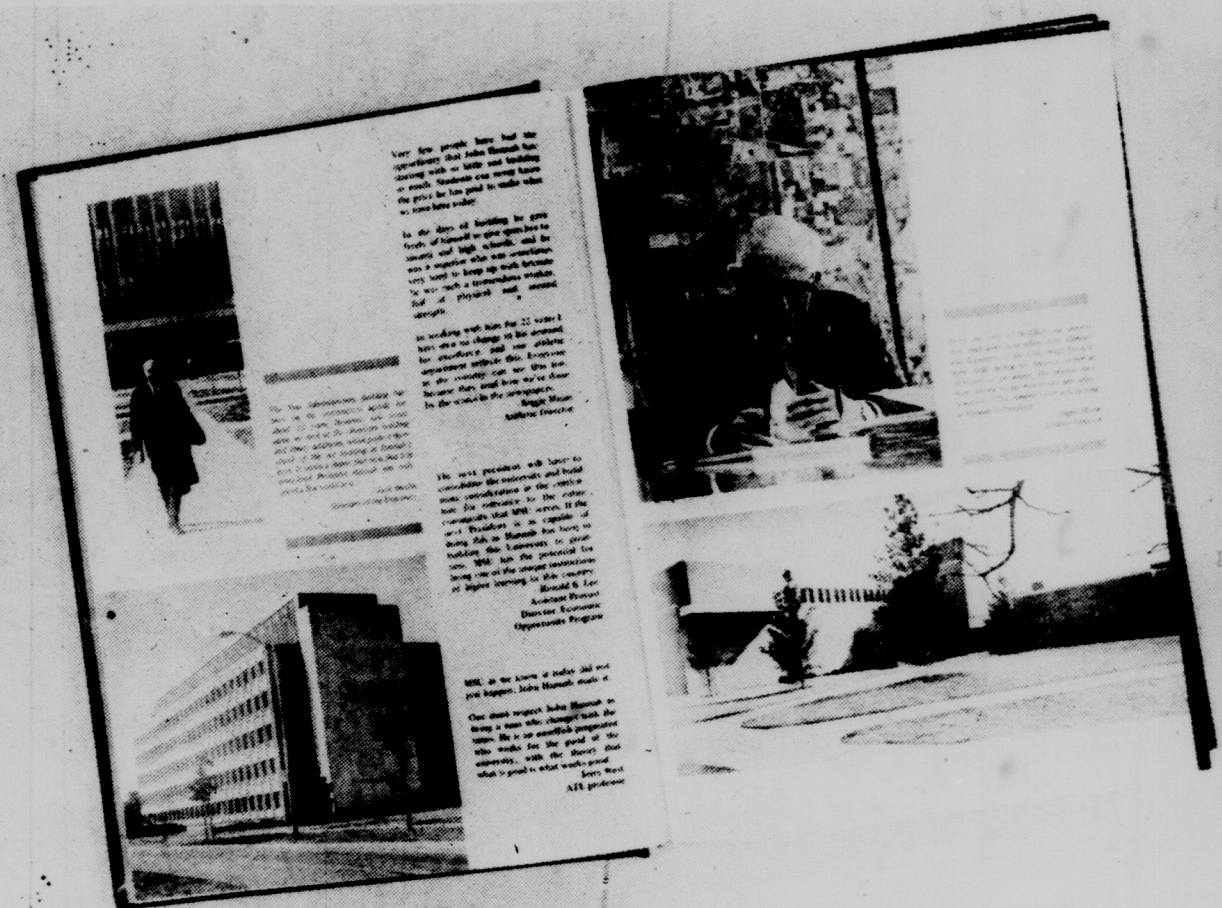

ATL. I never learned so much from a course but I always thought we should have signed our papers "Incorporated."

There are two kinds of people in this world, those who cried at the end of "Phaedra" and those who didn't even finish it.

Simply going through Registration should Excuse you from HPR for the rest of the term.

I don't suppose I'd buy Wolverine in place of a good novel, or even several. And the "Family of Man" is more professional. But if I went to MSU, ever, I think I'd pick up a copy. For with all its flaws and flops (which aren't worth enumerating) Wolverine has succeeded. It has captured a great deal of the body of life here, and more importantly, the essence that made so many of us who are constant critics stay around for all four years. And maybe even feel a little sorry about leaving.

Past president praised

The 1969 Wolverine yearbook pays tribute to John Hannah, president of MSU for 28 years, for his work in building it into one of the great universities of the country.

FLEXIBILITY URGED

Communicators set goals

Major curriculum changes have been completed by students and faculty members of the Dept. of Communications.

The curriculum changes, which will be formally implemented in the fall, are a result of joint action by the faculty and students of the Dept. of Communications, with the Student Advisory Board playing a key role. David C. Ralph, professor of communications, said.

The faculty, Student Advisory Committee and other participating students were guided by four major criteria in making their changes. The criteria were:

1. creating a new program that would be innovative in putting the speech and rhetoric parts of the old Speech Dept. together with the Dept. of Communications.
2. intertwining humanistic concerns with scientific knowledge and performance ability.
3. tightly organizing the curriculum by concentrating on fewer courses and fewer overall credits.

4. emphasizing both special treatment for majors and service to the University.

As a result, the number of fixed credit courses was reduced from 21 to 15 and the number of fixed credits from 93 to 51.

The department will now emphasize four principle areas in which communication plays a major role. These areas are: education, management, media and marketing. Also, courses have been combined to carry out the goals which helped structure the curriculum changes, Ralph said.

Changes in the department's curriculum include: introducing independent study and student research at the underclassman level, combining courses in persuasion and argumentation, offering a leadership class geared to leadership problems which will include parliamentary procedure and offering courses of central relevance to communications.

Campus laughs vie with screams

This is a weekend for laughers and screamers, but if you do not fit into either category, you can still go to any of the following events. Several deserve a "Don't-miss-this" tag.

Foremost among these is the Performing Arts Company's production of "Little Mary Sunshine," a hilarious musical parody of those schmaltzy operettas that Nelson and Jeanette used to stumble through. The fun starts at 8 p.m. tonight through Sunday in Fairchild Theatre . . . if you can get tickets.

Those of you who have drifted past the corner of Shaw and Farm Lanes may have noticed some peculiar constructions in the parking lot. It is the annual Mad Hatter's Midway, bringing a bit of circus atmosphere to MSU—ferris wheel and all (today and Saturday).

Music lovers should note that the MSU Chamber Orchestra will present a concert at 8:15 Sunday in the Auditorium.

And this weekend is your last chance to catch the Graduate Art Exhibit at Kresge Art Center. Representing the best paintings and sculpture by the more advanced art students, the show takes its final bow on Sunday. (Gallery open from 9-12 a.m. and 1-5 today; from 2-5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday).

Movie fare is light in content but heavy on entertainment. Charlie Chaplin actually talks in "The Great Dictator," a brilliant lampoon of Hitler's politics that did not seem so funny in 1940. But now it looks not only funny, but a bit profound as well, despite a closing lecture on "What Democracy Means To Me" which will have you either waving your flag or tossing your cookies. (At 7 and 9:30 tonight and Saturday in 106 Wells).

"Wait Until Dark" is a clever and chilly Hitchcock-imitation which asks us to accept Audrey Hepburn as a terrified blind woman and Alan Arkin as just about everything else, served up with lots of Hollywood gloss and goosebumps galore. (At 7 and 9 tonight and Saturday in 100 Vet Clinic).

In "Cartouche," director Philippe de Broca has created a colorful, vivacious comedy tribute to the swashbuckling days when Fairbanks and Flynn rode the high Hollywood seas. Jean-Paul Belmondo can swash a buckle better than either of them, in French yet. And Captain Blood never had a first-mate like Claudia Cardinale. (At 7 and 9 tonight and Saturday in 100 Vet Clinic).

Following "Cartouche" both nights, the Film Society will present its last quarter creepie of the season. "A Comedy of Terrors" once again gives us Poe played for laughs, and this one not only has that great trio—Karloff, Lorre and Price—but Basil Rathbone as well.

(At 11 tonight and Saturday in 100 Vet Clinic).

"Time Lost—Time Remembered" was itself lost and remembered, turning up here after winning first prize at the San Sebastian Film Festival, without doing too much in between. Starring Sarah Miles and Cyril Cusack, it surrounds a simple love story with lush photography and the emerald hills of Ireland. (At 7 and 9 tonight and Saturday in 104 Wells).

NEW RECORD-OLD SOUND

Beatles era ever-changing

By MARK McPHERSON
State News Reviewer

I remember, I guess it was a couple of years ago now, the arrival of Sergeant Pepper and the summer, simultaneously.

"Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" was an album which somewhere inhabits a hall of fame. Whether you look deeply into its double-intent meanings, or just accept the songs for fun, we've long known this disc to be a gem of its kind.

Since that time, that era of "Lovely Rita," the Beatles have taken new directions.

The Indian melodies are continuing; here Krishna, and the advent of the Guru Maharishi. John, Paul, especially George, and tag-a-long Ringo go East for meditation. They return, bringing with them a new taste for Buddha, a craze for the sitar, and a brief promotion for their favorite yogi.

Then we began to hear some funky, familiar sounds from across the Atlantic. A special Smothers Brothers sequence wowed American audiences, showing the Beatles doing "live" a version of something called "Hey, Jude." This was followed up by the Beatlefic response to the Rolling Stones' anarchic "Street Fighting Man," call "Revolution." In the latter, flower children and Leftists the world over were told, "when you talk about destruction, don't you know, you can count me out. We want some peace . . . all right . . ." Thus spake the four-some, politically, if you like.

A new frankness seemed to arrive in the plain-white jacket embellished with only the raised title, "The Beatles." In some circles, the album wrapper, featuring John and Yoko in their birthday suits, was more in demand than the music. Yet inside we had a satirical collection of original force unknown since the "Lonely Hearts" days. True, not as good as the earlier album, but still the Beatles, ever in flux. Just as in their song, "Ob-La-Di, Ob-La-Da," life goes on for this group, and the faithful fans they've maintained for years now.

The latest Beatles cut is called

"Get Back," and "Don't Let Me Down." Echoing earlier, pre-psychedelia sounds, we are hearing more of what it all began as. A few country-western rhythms are here, as well as the throaty vocals by Lennon and McCartney.

The Beatles? Well, I guess like diamonds, they're forever.

T-group stresses appeal to senses

In times past, mothers have soothed the crushed feelings of their hurt youngsters with, "Don't be so sensitive," or "Don't be so thin-skinned."

The advice was apparently so convincing that people now feel the need to re-sensitize themselves through sensitivity training groups.

A sensitivity training group is a small number of people, (15-15) who meet regularly to develop self-awareness through involvement and interaction with other group members under the direction of a trainer.

A survey recently conducted on campus by Robert M. Carlton, East Lansing junior, revealed that there is a high degree of interest among students to participate in T-groups.

The survey showed what we had already assumed: that there is a great deal of interest on campus, but that very few students know where to get information about such groups," Carlton said.

The questionnaire revealed that one out of six students had already participated in sensitivity training groups and 34 per cent were interested in joining one, he said.

Most of those who had previously participated in sensitivity groups found them to have a very significant effect on their behavior and an overwhelming majority rated them as being very beneficial.

Batsmen meet Iowa, Gophers

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

With Minnesota almost assured of the Big Ten baseball championship, most conference teams will be merely going through the motions of closing out the 1969 season this weekend.

But for MSU, this weekend's doubleheaders against Iowa and Minnesota represents a chance to prove they're a better team than their 5-7 conference record indicates.

The Spartans meet Iowa at 2 p.m. Friday at Kobs Field and play the Gophers at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Nothing could now better cap the Spartans' season than at least one victory over the powerful Gophers on Saturday.

Minnesota is rated second in the latest collegiate baseball rankings behind Texas.

Early in the season, the Gophers split a pair of games with the top-ranked Longhorns.

Minnesota has dropped only a pair of one-run decisions in 14 conference games this season and has an overall record of 32-9.

Coach Dick Siebert's Gophers

Probable line-ups

Spartans

C Harry Kendrick	.254
1B Joe Gavel	.281
2B Mike Olson	.214
SS George Petroff	.299
3B Phil Rasheed	.256
LF Gary Boyce	.287
CF Rick Miller	.333
RF Rich Jordan	.285

Gophers

C Scott Stein	.281
1B Mike Walseth	.439
2B Bob Schmitz	.364
SS Al Kaminski	.308
3B Bill Kendall	.309
LF Chris Farni	.317
CF Bob Neilsen	.354
RF Noel Jenke	.412

need only one win this weekend against either Michigan or MSU to clinch their ninth Big Ten title.

"On paper at least, Minnesota is the best Big Ten team since I've been at MSU," Coach Danny Litwhiler, Spartan coach for six years, said.

"We'd like nothing better than to take at least one game from them."

Litwhiler also called Minnesota "about the hardest hitting team I've ever seen," and statistics back him up.

The Gophers have ripped 59 home runs in their 41 games and have given up only 10.

While MSU has only one regular hitting above .300, Minnesota can field a lineup with only one hitter below .300 and with a pair of .400 hitters.

Rightfielder Noel Jenke, another .400 hitter at .412 leads the team in home runs with 12 and in total bases with 95.

The runs batted in have been fairly well distributed throughout the lineup.

Outfielder Bob Neilsen leads the club with 40 RBIs, while Walseth has 39. Jenke has 31 and four other players have over 20.

The Gophers, however, do not live by hitting alone. Minnesota's pitching staff has an impressive ERA of 2.29.

Gopher pitchers have completed 20 of the 41 games they've started and nine different hurlers have at least two wins.

Dave McGrover, the Gophers top starter, will likely work against Michigan on Friday.

Pitchers that the Spartans are likely to see include Gary Petrich (.60, 1.76 ERA), Jack Palmer (.32, 2.30 ERA) and Steve Chapman (.30, 2.63 ERA).

Iowa, MSU's Friday opponent, also has a strong pitching staff.

"Iowa pitching is almost as strong as Minnesota's," Litwhiler said.

Bruce Reid will likely work Friday's opener.

The Hawkeye righthander is the ace of the staff with a 6-4 record and a 1.68 ERA.

Second baseman Gary Brashers leads Iowa's hitting attack with a .361 average and 21 RBIs.

Iowa, 7-7 in the conference, handed Minnesota one of its two conference setbacks last weekend.

Litwhiler said he would reverse his usual starting rotation for the weekend series.

Senior Mickey Knight and sophomore Kirk Maas will pitch

Friday's twinbill, while right-handers Dan Bielski and Phil Fulton will pitch Saturday.

Maas pitched his best game of the season last Saturday, beating Purdue 6-1. The victory ran Maas' record to 4-0 and lowered his ERA to 2.57.

Knight and Bielski top the Spartan staff in victories with five apiece, while Fulton has a 3-3 mark.

Spartan catcher Harry Kendrick has been sick the past two days and may miss the weekend games.

If he is unable to play, Litwhiler indicated that Bill Linne would most likely replace him behind the plate.

FACE CHICAGO SUNDAY

Rugbers in season finale

Michigan State's Rugby Club wraps up its season Sunday when it hosts the University of Chicago Club on Old College Field. Kickoff time is 2 p.m.

The Spartans will be seeking their fifth win of the year against four defeats. Since their opening game loss to a tough Michigan Club, the ruggers have shown steady improvement throughout the season.

They lost to Ohio State the Big Ten Champion, in the quarter-finals of the conference meet held earlier this year and dropped a one point decision to Indiana in what was agreed before the game to be a "friendly" match because of the numerous injuries both clubs were suffering from.

Since the tournament, the Spartans have won three of four matches, losing only to Ohio State, whom they defeated a week later on Old College Field.

Coach Mike Auer said that the Spartans could very well have won the Big Ten Tournament had it been held later in the season.

Next fall, when the ruggers open their fall season, seven of this year's club members will be missing, either graduating or transferring schools.

Probably the most sorely missed will be Auer. The Flint grad asst. in education is moving to San Fernando College where he will continue teaching and playing rugby. The Broken Telyis, Mo., native has played 16 consecutive years of rugby, four at Harvard before transferring to MSU. He was elected president of the MSU Rugby Club in 1967 and last fall became captain.

Kent Harder, Steve Cole and Mickey Cherney will miss Sunday's finale due to injuries and will not be returning next year.

All-'U' softball final scheduled for Sunday

The All-University Softball Championship will be battled out at 6 p.m. Sunday between dorm champion 6-Pak of Bryan Hall and the Impressions, an independent team.

6-Pak advanced to the finals with a 4-2 victory over independent league champions Poncho's Boys, who had defeated Hubbard 2, 11-0, to advance to the semi-finals. The Impressions pulled an impressive 7-3 victory out from under the ATO team, winners of the fraternity league title, to get to the finals.

This year marks one of the first times that a dormitory team had advanced to the finals. 6-Pak, 12-0 on the season, will pitch Carl Kieser.

The Impressions, 11-0, will send their ace Jim Shaddy to the mound. This will be the third straight year that the Impressions have advanced to the university finals.

LAST GAME AS CLUB

'S' stickmen meet Chicago

By DAVE WEST
State News Sports Writer

The MSU Lacrosse squad travels to Chicago Saturday to meet the Chicago Lacrosse Club in what should be their last game as a club team. The Spartans will be moving on to varsity competition next spring.

The Spartans are 6-5 on the season, and hope to finish the year on a winning note.

"Chicago won't have the team depth that a college team would have," MSU Coach Turf Kauffman said. "They won't have the conditioning either."

Kauffman expressed concern with the fact that several of Chicago's players are of all-American calibre.

"They will be great in one-on-one competition," the newest varsity head coach said, "but I doubt if they can run with us."

"We have lost some boys ourselves, and I may have to move Ron Winter to midfield, and switch Mike Jolly to the attack to compensate for the lack of depth at midfield."

The Spartans topped the windy city squad 9-6 in a rough game earlier this season. It was the only conference outing for Chicago up to this point in the season.

The Midwest Lacrosse Assn. will also be meeting this weekend with the possibility of ruling ing to negate MSU's forfeit to Notre Dame, which would put the Spartans in the running for the division championship.

At the conference meeting, coaches will also be choosing the all-conference team for this year. Larry Berger, Ron Winter, Rick Bays and Bill Herrmann are the Spartans' best hopes for a spot on the all-conference squad.

Andretti on the road after fiery Indy crash

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. -- Mario Andretti, unruffled by a close brush with death in a spectacular practice crash, was in a new car today as three-time winner A.J. Foyt became the speedway's swiftest driver in a 500-mile race practice.

Andretti's Lotus Ford, which had been the fastest car on the track until Foyt's run moments earlier, had the right rear wheel hub snap as he came through the fourth turn. As a result, officials grounded similar cars assigned to former race winner Graham Hill of England and Jochen Rindt of Austria, pending a check of their hubs.

Andretti's fire engine red racer, one of Andy Granatelli's 11 team cars, disintegrated after spinning into the wall with full force. The car spun 1 1/2 times within 320 feet, crashed backward into the wall for 60 feet, spun again for 250 feet and burst into flames.

Art Pollard, who was following his teammate by 200 yards, put his car into a 28-foot spin to avoid Andretti's car.

"It looked like his wheel tucked in and then pieces went everywhere," Pollard said. "It looked like three cars were in the wreck. There were parts and pieces everywhere."

Andretti escaped from the crash, which was described by veteran Indianapolis observers as one of the worst in the track's history, with only burns on his face. He was pronounced fit to drive by the speedway's medical staff, but loss of his number one machine was a bitter blow to his speedway race plans.

"This was an awful blow," Andretti said. "This was our (Andy Granatelli) best car. We have the same engine in our Brawn-Hawk and another backup Lotus. I'll have to see which is the best one."

Andretti, from Nazareth, Pa., was the top candidate for the pole position he was won twice until Foyt turned in an unofficial speed of 172.315 miles per hour Wednesday in his Coyote Racer. Foyt, the first man to exceed 172 miles an hour on the 2 1/2-mile course, will be seeking an unprecedented fourth victory in the "500" Memorial Day.

Twenty-nine cars made practice runs Wednesday, none of which approached Foyt's record run.

Black manifesto demands redress

In a 25,000 word "Black Manifesto" a group of blacks vowed church seizures, disruptions, and demonstrations and demanded half a billion dollars in reparations Jewish community.

"To win our demands we will have to declare war on the white Christian churches and synagogues and this means we may have to fight the total government structure of the country," the manifesto said.

The initial confrontation came May 4 when James Forman, reported author of the manifesto, stopped a Sunday-morning worship service at New York's fashionable Riverside Church. Forman stood in the altar area after the opening hymn and began to read a series of demands. The Rev. Ernest T. Campbell led the choir out, and the service did not resume.

The same day, the manifesto's demands were read during a similar disruption by blacks at the First United Presbyterian Church of San Francisco.

Two days earlier, Forman had appeared before the General Board of the National Council of Churches (NCC) to air the manifesto. The board had expressed its thanks to Forman and agreed to send the document to its constituent denominations for study.

The NCC General Secretary was instructed to submit recommendations to a June 23 meeting of the council's executive committee.

The Black Manifesto came out of a National Black Economic Development Conference held on the campus of Wayne

State University April 25-27. The conference was sponsored by several agencies, including the NCC. A United Presbyterian Office of Information employee reportedly was in charge of the press room. All white reporters were barred.

Forman's manifesto was adopted by a vote of 187-63.

Forman has been the director of international affairs for the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee.

In an introduction, he called the United States "the most barbaric country in the world." The introduction declared that "our fight is against racism, capitalism and imperialism and we are dedicated to building a socialist society inside the United States where the total means of production and distribution are in the hands of the state."

"We work the chief industries of this country and we could cripple the economy while the brothers fought guerrilla warfare in the streets," the introduction said.

The manifesto itself dealt only with churches. The $500 million demand from the churches is budgeted.

$200 million goes to a Southern land bank to establish cooperative farms. $10 million each is designated to set up publishing industries in four major cities.

Another $10 million would go to set up "audio-visual networks" in four large cities.

$30 million is budgeted for a black research skills center. $10 million would go to a communications training center.

A Black labor strike fund would get $20 million, and an International Black Appeal would get $20 million to produce more capital.

The already existing National Welfare Rights Organization is designated for $10 million, and a Black university would be set up with the remaining $130 million.

The money is demanded as "only a beginning or the reparations due us as a people who have been exploited and degraded, brutalized, killed, and persecuted."

To force payment of the funds the manifesto calls for total disruption of selected church sponsored agencies.

"Black workers, Black women, Black students, and the Black unemployed are encouraged and urged to seize the offices, telephones, and printing apparatus of all church-sponsored agencies and to hold these in trusteeship until our demands are met."

The manifesto set May 4 as a tentative date to begin the disruption of the "racist churches and synagogues throughout the United States."

The manifesto concluded: "Our objective in issuing this manifesto is to force racist white Christian churches to begin the payment of reparations which are due to all black people, not only by the church but also by private business and the U.S. government."

"We see this focus on the Christian church as an effort around which all black people can unite. Our demands are negotiable, but they cannot be minimized."

At the headquarters of the Lutheran Church in America in New York, Forman posted the demands on the front door. He said he did so "in the spirit of Martin Luther."

Presbyterians sympathize with black, brown militants

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The United Presbyterian Church has ended its annual meeting with adoption of a report sympathizing with the aspirations of church-assaulting black and brown militants.

The report won strong approval Wednesday at the closing session of the week-long gathering of 840 clergy and elders.

Ghetto life shown

Nicky Cruz, ex-leader of New York City's Mau Mau gang, will speak of his personal experience with ghetto life at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in 108B Wells Hall.

Cruz is the founder of Outreach for Youth, a center designed to give aid and counseling to boys from all situations of urban life.

Cruz' appearance is being sponsored by Spartan Christian Fellowship, MSU's chapter of Spartan Christian Fellowship.

James Forman, whose month-old Conference has been calling on many Christian denominations to give up part of their wealth as compensation to slavery-descended blacks was invited to speak to the assembly last Thursday.

Forman's group was occupying United Presbyterian offices in New York City during the very hour he presented here his demands for $80 million in cash, annual payments from church investments and rural church-owned land.

Church leaders and selected delegates put out a 600-word statement listing what the United Presbyterian Church was already committed to for the sale of minority poor, some of it in programs that the assembly admitted got new speed and more generous fundings because of Forman.

A campaign to raise $50 million for deprived persons and areas will be started sometime in 1970. Some Church lands will be sold or given or opened up to Southern blacks and Southwestern Spanish-speaking groups. Four outlays of money totaling $250,000 will go the various new projects to aid blacks, Mexican-Americans and Indians.

The assembly-approved report says love rather than fear was the motivating factor behind these actions, while adding that not all the methods and ideas of the militants find favor with the Presbyterian assembly.

Christian magazine raps GOP legislator

A well-known Christian magazine has severely criticized Congressman Charles E. Chamberlain, R-Mich., over the recent incident in which Chamberlain allegedly struck a Washington policeman with his car.

"The American ideals of equality before the law and justice for all are made a laughing stock when national leaders blatantly disregard the law," "Christianity Today" said in an editorial.

The magazine asserted that Congress has no conceivable justification for protecting its own members from the legal consequences of their actions as private citizens.

"This is the grossest kind of hypocrisy," the editorial said, referring to the hearing at which it was decided Chamberlain would not be charged.

"Employment of a double standard strikes a blow at the very foundation of American democracy," the editorial said. "Is it any wonder that young and old alike are disillusioned with the establishment?"

The incident involving Chamberlain and the policeman took place in Washington on March 31.

"This church must be the headquarters from which great social concern can be exercised," he said.

The new building will be financed by a bond issue. The church recently issued a $650,000, 7 per cent sinking fund bond series. Over $100,000 has been subscribed up to this time.

The new church will have a sanctuary seating from 500 to 600, a student center with study facilities, and an educational unit.

Community service goal of new Luthern center

University Lutheran Church proposes its new building to be a center for community service to Spartan Village, University Village and Cherry Lane Apartments.

The $900,000 unit will be located on Harrison Road near the Shaw Lane intersection. The building will contain study and lounge facilities as well as facilities for a day nursery.

The Lutheran constituency has grown as fast as the university, making the present building far too small, said the Rev. Walter R. Wietzke, a pastor at University Lutheran Church.

The church originally planned to operate on two sides of campus. With construction costs soaring, however, it became necessary to sell the present building in order to meet anticipated expenses for the new one.

"We anticipate better cooperation with the Missouri Synod church," Wietzke said. "Our move to the south part of campus will complement the work of Martin Luther Chapel."

Martin Luther Chapel, associated with the Lutheran Church - Missouri Synod, is located on the north end of campus. University Lutheran is associated with both the Lutheran Church in America and the American Lutheran Church.

With the new building we hope to intensify our Christian ministry, Wietzke said.

"Christianity is not just a Sunday proposition," Wietzke said. "We want to fit into the total social structure of the community."

"The church is the redemptive agency in the social structure," he said.

The intensified community ministry will center on local married housing. Wietzke called married housing a poverty pocket and a neglected area.

"This church must be the headquarters from which great social concern can be exercised," he said.

The new building will be financed by a bond issue. The church recently issued a $650,000, 7 per cent sinking fund bond series. Over $100,000 has been subscribed up to this time.

The new church will have a sanctuary seating from 500 to 600, a student center with study facilities, and an educational unit.

GREATER INTERACTION

Pentecost rally to feature songs, Biblical readings

Ten Christian student organizations have united in support of the Pentecost rally scheduled for 3 p.m. Sunday at Beaumont Tower.

Christian folk songs will be sung with guitar accompaniment. The Rev. Tom Stark, pastor of University Reformed Church, will read the story of the first Pentecost from the second chapter of Acts.

More interaction
"We felt the need for greater interaction among Christians, both in organizations and as individuals," Dave Clumard, Bangor junior and a coordinator of the rally, said. "We want to emphasize similarities rather than differences. We need to recognize that there are other people around with whom we can work."

SOARING PRICES

Cost of living highest in years

WASHINGTON (AP)—The swiftest rise in living costs in 18 years continued in April with another hefty hike of six-tenths of one per cent, the government reported Thursday.

Price hikes for food, clothing, transportation, medical care and recreation pushed the Labor Dept.'s consumer price index to 126.4.

This means it cost $12.64 last month for the typical family purchases that cost $10 in the 1957-59 period on which the index is based.

The soaring price spiral was exceeded only in the Korean War and World War I eras. The April hike alone in living costs chipped away half a cent and cost some 45 million workers nearly 50 cents a week in lost purchasing power.

Summer readers needed for blind

Blind students are in need of readers for summer term. Interested volunteers may call Diana Williams at 353-6553. Students needing readers may call the same number.

The New University Conference (NUC) will meet from 12-1 p.m. today in 355 Baker Hall. Meet outside if the weather is nice. The national convention will be discussed.

There will be an all-University mixer from 9-12 tonight in Holmes Hall. "The Rationals" will be featured. Admission is 75 cents.

The UCM presents The Scene: Act II Coffeehouse from 8-12 tonight at 1118 S. Harrison Rd., just north of Trowbridge Road. The super folk duo, "The Every Other Monday Evening News," will be featured.

The Akers Social Committee will present a mixer from 9-12 tonight at the loading dock of Akers Hall. Featured will be "The Spice."

The Spartan Christian Fellowship will meet at 9 tonight at Bethel Manor, 803 E. Grand River. Dr. Norman Bell, in the field of educational psychology, will speak on "Learning as a Christian Imperative."

The MSU Film Society will present "Cartouche," starring Jean-Paul Belmondo and Claudia Cardinale at 7 and 9 tonight and Saturday in 109 Anthony. As an added feature at 11 p.m., "Comedy of Tears," starring Boris Karloff, Peter Lorre, Vincent Price and Basil Rathbone, will be shown.

The Beal Film Group will sponsor Charlie Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" at 7 and 9:30 tonight and Saturday in 106B Wells. Also "Time Lost-Time Remembered," starring Shia Mills will be shown at 7 and 9:40 tonight along with a sneak preview at 8:30 tonight in 104B Wells. Admission is 50 cents and IDs are not required.

A free weekend at The Joint will be held at 8 each night this weekend in the basement of the Student Services Bldg. Friday features Ron England, Bob McCallen and Dick Jennings and Saturday stars Marc Bristol, Jim Ebert and Bill Graham. A meeting of the MSU Folklore Society will be held at 7:30 Monday in the basement of the Student Services Bldg.

The Organization of Arab Students at MSU will meet at 2 p.m. Saturday in 35 Union. Election of new officers will take place. All members are urged to attend.

MSU Trustee Warren Hull will answer the questions of student panelists and "Forum" listeners at 8 p.m. Sunday on WKAR-FM and WMSN.

The Alcoholics Anonymous Study Group will meet at 8 p.m. Sunday in the basement of St. Thomas Aquinas Church. These regular Sunday evenings will run through the summer. Students with drinking problems are invited to attend.

The Hill Foundation will sponsor a supper and social entitled "Empty The Ice Box" at 6 p.m. Sunday at Hill House, 319 Hillcrest. An open council meeting will be held.

The Students' International Meditation Society will meet at 5:30 p.m. Sunday in 35 Union. This will be the final meeting of the term.

The Music Dept. announces a free concert at 8:15 p.m. Sunday in the Music auditorium. Three MSU composers, David Maslanka, Loriso Chobanian and William Matheson, will present "New Music For The Theatre," two operas and a ballet.

Apollo 11 landing site OK'd

SPACE CENTER. Houston (AP)—The Apollo 11 astronauts said Thursday a close look at the spot on the moon where Americans plan to land July 20 shows the area is "a little bit rugged," but fills a prime requirement of being easy to find.

"The rills, the low ridges are very distinguishable approaching the landing sites," observed moon-circling Apollo 10 pilot Eugene A. Cernan. "The area now being uncovered by light in the Landing Site 2 area looks a little bit rugged," he reported.

Located near the lunar equator on the moon's Sea of Tranquility near the crater Moltke, Landing Site 2 was chosen as the spot for the Apollo 11 touchdown, more for operational and crew safety reasons than in the interest of science.

To pave the way for Apollo 11, flight planners asked Apollo 10 pilots Cernan and Thomas P. Stafford to swoop in their lunar module, LEM, landing craft 9.3 miles over that specific spot on the moon, and along with orbiting astronaut John W. Young—also take pictures of the area from the Apollo 10 command ship's normal circular orbit, 69 miles above the surface.

More than two years of study by a blue ribbon panel of experts identified five specific sites near the moon's equator which appeared safe for astronauts to land.

The most easterly spot, on the right half of the moon as seen from earth, is called Landing Site 1. The Apollo 8 astronauts last Christmas time got excellent photos of that area also located in the Sea of Tranquility, but Site 2 and other landing areas further west were in darkness.

Men's Glee Club concert to present secular works

The MSU Men's Glee Club will hold a concert at 8:15 tonight, not Sunday, as previously reported, in the University Methodist Church.

Robert A. Harris, Detroit graduate student, will conduct the concert of sacred and secular literature from the 17th through the 20th century. The program will include music of three University composers.

Harris will conduct his own composition, "Psalms for Soprano, Horn and Piano." The choir will be accompanied by soprano Suzanne Karby, Detroit junior; pianist will be Marilyn Garst, East Lansing graduate student; and the hornist will be Philip Stanton, East Lansing senior.

"The Battle" by Adolphus C. Hailstork III, Albany, N.Y., graduate student, will be performed for the first time. "Michigan Morn" by H. Owen Reed, professor of musical composition, will also be sung.

Braham's "Rhapsody for Contralto and Male Chorus, Opus 53," will be sung, featuring as soloist, Cora Enman, East Lansing graduate student.

Migrant aid group to hire 18 students

By ROSA MORALES

The migrant who comes to Michigan this summer does not come to vacation in the water-wonderland—he comes to labor in the fields.

During his stay he is often misunderstood by the service agencies in the state and fails to receive the social services he needs. George E. Johnson, of the United Migrant Opportunity, Inc. (UMO) in Mount Pleasant, said.

To fight the misunderstanding between the migrant worker and the agencies, Johnson is hiring 18 university students to work with six coordinators in Michigan. Their job will be to assist and improve agency services to migrant families during the harvest season by:

- providing migrants with accurate information on the types of services available to them
- referring migrants to services

- providing a follow-up study to evaluate services received by migrants

- gathering information on the socio-economic characteristics of the migrant population

- providing accurate information on the unmet needs of the migrant population so that the appropriate programs can be implemented.

Johnson said that the students will be hired under the "University Affiliated Information and Services Program" which was started this year and is funded by the UMOI.

The students will be paid $70 per week, $30 per week travel expenses and will receive college credit for the work experience.

"We're looking for university students who speak some Spanish," Johnson said. "Since the salary is only $70 it is preferable if the students can save money by living at home if they work in their own hometown."

Three students would be assigned to each of the six major migrant labor regions of Adrian, Benton Harbor, Lansing, Muskegon, Saginaw and Traverse City.

Johnson said that student concern with the black and Indian problem across the country has been monumental, but that it is now time that the student was exposed to the neglected migrant worker.

"It is no secret that the migrants are treated much more differently than the indigenous people of this state," Johnson said.

Johnson urged any interested MSU student to contact his office by writing to:

Let's talk it over

Rep. Dale Warner, R-Eaton Rapids, speaks to students and faculty at the second meeting of the Forum. Warner headed the recent House committee investigating drugs. Rep. Michael Dively, R-Traverse City, looks on.

Students must voice opinion, Warner says

By DAVE SHORT
State News Staff Writer

Students sit around and complain about present drug laws but they put very little input into efforts to have the laws changed, Rep. Dale Warner, R-Eaton Rapids, said Wednesday.

"If you want us to think about these things, you've got to make us aware of your thoughts, and not by picketing in front of the capitol either," he added.

Warner, who recently headed a special House committee investigating drugs and narcotics, made his remarks during a legislators-student forum in the International Center.

Six other legislators participated in the forum: Rep. Michael Dively, R-Traverse City; Rep. Richard Allen, R-Ithaca; Rep. Charles Brannum, R-Manistiquie; Rep. Dennis Cawthorne, R-Mannistee; Rep. Ray Smith, R-Ann Arbor; and Rep. Loren Anderson, R-Pontiac.

All the legislators urged students to actively promote their viewpoints on drugs and drug laws.

"Our constituents are opposed to what students think about drugs. They're against drugs," Smith said.

"I think we are in the process of a transition from old mores in which drugs are taboo, to new shifting viewpoints on the matter; but it is going to take a lot of selling to convince people about the need for a shift."

Cawthorne urged students to remember that some legislators are trying to bring about a shift in thought, but that they have to be cautious not to get too far ahead of their constituents. He said that if a legislator gets too far ahead in thoughts, there is a good chance that the legislator will not be voted into office again.

Cawthorne cautioned students to stay within the limits of the law in their attempts to bring about changes in drug laws.

Warner, citing his committee's study, said that college students should take an active interest in drug laws because drug arrests and the amount of group orientation to drugs are higher in the young circle, especially radical youth groups.

He said, however, that colleges students do not use drugs as frequently as college-age blue collar workers or members of the military.

The legislators defended the role that police play, the apprehension of people who use and sell drugs, in the drug issue.

"It is off target to lay the problems in the drug issue at the feet of the police; they are not the issue at hand," Smith said.

Although he said that there have been cases of police using wiretapping in the apprehension of drug violators, Warner argued that there have been no discovered cases in Michigan of police deliberately planting drugs in rooms or cars to insure arrests of political active students.

Allen also defended police and narcotic agents who work under cover in an attempt to catch drug violators. He said that he saw no difference in police dressing up to catch prostitutes, homosexuals, muggers or drug pushers.

in the meeting by Dharendra Sharma, associate professor of philosophy. Sharma was one of 75 students and faculty members who had come for the dialogue with the seven legislators.

"One of the results of not having had any real information on the drug for all these years has been the development of a vicious circle in which administrators of scientific and government institutions feel that marijuana is dangerous," Sharma quoted from the New York Times Magazine. "Because it is dangerous, they are reluctant to allow work to be done on it. Because no work is done on it, people think of it as dangerous."

Allen said he is concerned about the possibility of damage to subjects in experiments who would use the drug if research was made legal.

"We only know the short-term effects with evidence so far," he said.

'NO VICTIM, NO CRIME'

Allen supports liberal drug laws

By CHARLES FLOWERS

Rep. Richard J. Allen, R-Ithaca, said that he is opposed to laws which protect the individual from himself rather than those which protect the public from each other, but he did not classify existing laws governing marijuana usage in either of these two categories.

Johnson urged any interested MSU student to contact his office by writing to:

United Migrants for Opportunity, Inc.
111 S. Lansing St.
Mount Pleasant, Michigan 48858

Allen said he was not well enough informed to make a judgment about marijuana at the second meeting of the Forum at the International Center Wednesday.

"In humans, whether the evidence is medical or mental, we have no right to outlaw a simple, harmless plant," Allen, who has a degree in veterinary medicine, said. "The question is how harmless it has to be before it is declared legal."

Allen co-sponsored three bills introduced by Dale Warner, R-Eaton Rapids, to modernize Michigan's drug statutes. Two of the bills failed to clear committee, but the third, which would abolish the mandatory 20 year sentences in cases of sale of the drug, did get through committee.

"If the police have to go to clandestine means to get convictions, this points out the possibility that the use of marijuana is not detrimental to society," he answered to several charges of unethical police practices.

"If there is no victim, there is no crime. I have a hard time seeing it as a crime."

Allen said the group in Warner's opinion poll, which indicated a preference for liberalizing marijuana, "deserves more attention than it is getting." The group comprised about one-third of 1,369 high school seniors polled.

He said he was aware of the "vicious circle" pointed out

Volunteers help foreign students acculturate

By BILL CUMMINGS
State News Staff Writer

What does a newly arrived foreign student do when he and his family begin housekeeping in the Lansing area? He calls on the Lending Center located in the basement of one of the faculty apartment buildings in Cherry Lane.

The Lending Center is only a small part of the services available through the Community Committee for International Programs, an organization that aids foreign students as they cope with the problems involved in adjusting to a new community, culture and language.

The committee also provides transportation for the foreign student upon his arrival at the International Center. In addition, the hospitality committee calls on his wife and helps her become oriented to the community. She can participate in English classes and homemaking classes offered by the committee.

From the moment the foreign student and his family arrive in Lansing until they pack their luggage for home, the committee is available and ready to serve them.

The committee began as a lending center where students needing winter clothing could borrow warm coats. Mrs. Hideya Kumata, chairman of the organization from 1967-69, said. As the Lending Center grew, more and more domestic items were acquired until it reached its present dimensions.

Students can borrow anything from muffin tins to curtains, toasters to egg beaters every Friday afternoon. When the student arrives, he may borrow items necessary for setting up housekeeping such as silverware, table settings, dish towels and cooking utensils. Mrs. Kumata said, and he may keep them as long as he is a student at MSU.

Nominal fees are charged for rental of items. Domestic necessities, winter coats, highchairs and playpens rent for $1. Electrical appliances rent for 50 cents per item and baby cribs with new plastic mattress covers for each new renter.

These items are obtained largely through donations of useful household items from civic and church groups, individuals and the University which gives them any useful articles left behind in the married housing units.

"We don't want to lend anything that we ourselves wouldn't use under similar circumstances," Mrs. Lynn Robertson, chairman of the Lending Center during 1968-69, said.

The students are also very good about returning borrowed items," she continued. "Often they return the borrowed items and in addition contribute domestic goods they have acquired and are unable to take back home."

The hospitality committee makes the first contact with the wives of foreign students by phone and then meets with them. The wives are given two booklets, one from the committee explaining their programs and the other from the Greater East Lansing Chamber of Commerce describing the community.

Arrangements are often made for a second visit when the wife is taken on a tour of the Lansing area.

In conjunction with the University, the committee offers an English class which aids the wives in their mastery of the language. There is a $7.50 per term course fee for the class which covers the cost of the text and part of the teacher's salary.

The homemaking class is offered during fall term with demonstration and lessons on preparing American foods, cooking economical meals, shopping in supermarkets, purchase of clothing and planned parenthood.

During winter and spring and groups from different countries present programs or interesting aspects of their culture.

$15,400 FOR BIAFRA

Relief drive reaches goal

Contributions from the May 7 fast for Biafran-Nigerian relief totaling over $6,800 brought Operation Outrage $400 over its $15,000 target. Pat Price, fast co-ordinator, said Thursday.

To date, the local Operation Outrage chapter has collected $15,400 in funds since its establishment on campus late in January.

Donations from MSU Food Services and 12,520 participating students on campus added $6,260 to the total. In addition, three fraternities, nine sororities, two co-ops and the Home Management House together added $260. Dominoes Pizza donated $150 and personal student contributions in the dormitories were $150.

Operation Outrage also sent three petitions, each containing 900 names, to President Nixon, Sen. Robert Griffin, R-Mich., and Sen. Philip Hart, D-Mich., urging them to increase relief efforts and to work for a cease-fire.

Operation Outrage, setting a new target of $25,000 for the year, will put forth new efforts, including fund raising in downtown Lansing Saturday. Volunteers should gather at the UN lounge in the Union at 9:30 a.m. or at Lansing Community College at 10 a.m.

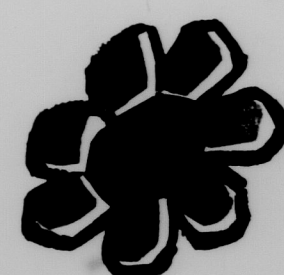

The operation will also sponsor a dance featuring the Woolies and a light show, 9 p.m. Tuesday in Hubbard Hall.

A second "Hotline for Biafra Relief" will be presented the following Wednesday in the Union.

Grand Opening

Meadowbrook Trace is the most exciting apartment community to come to Lansing. Only 3 minutes from the MSU campus. Meadowbrook has furnished and unfurnished apartments.

Meadowbrook is set amidst 130 acres of gently rolling hills and countryside. But with all the facilities and comforts of urban living.

For recreation Meadowbrook offers swimming pool, picnic areas with barbecue grills, playgrounds, tennis courts, even a modern game and recreation building. And there are completely equipped playgrounds. All the areas are landscaped and maintained for your use.

All the buildings at Meadowbrook Trace have fully carpeted main corridors, bright modern laundry rooms with plenty of washers and dryers. A master TV antenna and private storage lockers. Individual private parking areas are fully lighted.

You'll enjoy entertaining friends at Meadowbrook. Every apartment has a balcony or terrace patio, reached through sliding glass doors.

For walks in the moonlight what could be more romantic than our gas lighted strolling paths.

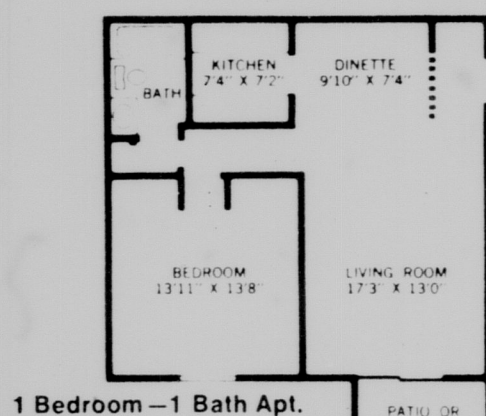

All apartments at Meadowbrook have wall-to-wall carpeting, draperies, and individually controlled heating. Kitchens have walnut cabinets, color-coordinated appliances including a sink with disposal, and refrigerator/freezer. You have to see Meadowbrook Trace to really know how fine apartment living can be, or how reason able. Come on out.

THE CARPOOL CRABS

These are the guys who were friends in the morning. But after a long working day, a hot ride home makes them like tigers at mealtime. Here's how you can make summer commuting a breeze!

Install a smooth, quiet Thermo King auto air conditioner in your car. It cools faster, and costs far less than a factory installed system. Dehumidifies the air, filters out dust and pollen, too. And it looks great under your dash. For future savings you can have it switched to your next car when you trade.

Aid for hungry draws criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George S. McGovern's widely publicized hunger hearings drew criticism Thursday from the Senate Agriculture Committee amid strong indications that it will approve far less help for the hungry than McGovern asks.

Specifically, the committee began hearings on a bill for a hefty increase in food-stamp funds. But in the process it became apparent there is scant committee support for the South Dakota Democrat's appeal for a $1.5-billion boost in the $340-million stamp program.

Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., a member of the Agriculture Committee and of McGovern's special hunger panel, urged the addition of $185 million to the stamp program considerably below the $275-million addition being backed by the Nixon administration.

Talmadge said he would favor a further extension to bring the funds to $900 million in fiscal 1971.

Such a program, Talmadge said, "can be supported by even an economy-minded Congress."

"To my mind," he went on, "on obvious reference to McGovern's bill, 'it is an exercise in futility to clamor for the passage of a program which would cost untold billions of dollars at a time when the Congress is primarily concerned with cutting the budget.'"

Project Now 'shelters' children

By IRENE PINCKES
State News Staff Writer

News Background

The renovation of a vacant building to serve as a shelter home for neglected children is the goal of Project Now.

Project Now is an attempt by concerned citizens to do something for the young victims of parental abuse and neglect.

The adults recognized the need for a place with a home-like atmosphere to act as a way station for children who have been removed from their homes by the court.

These children need someone to take care of them and comfort them. Through the work of a psychological staff in the home, they can be observed and placed in proper foster homes.

The city of Lansing has leased a building that is thought to be ideal for this purpose.

Leshar Place, a three story building constructed in 1934, is in excellent condition and needs only to be converted to fit its new function.

Cost of renovation has been estimated at $38,000, but workdays at the home and volunteers have reduced the amount to $20,000.

An undisclosed source has contributed $10,000, the Greater Lansing Foundation has donated $5,000 and other donations have amounted to $2,000.

In addition to this, Project Now is sponsoring a dinner at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Lansing Civil Auditorium. The main speaker will be Spartan football coach Duffy Daugherty. Tickets at $25 a plate are available at the MSU Bookstore and Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

"This and other monies we have received puts us over the top," David Mills, asst. children's director of Probate Court, said.

The renovation consists of installing plumbing facilities and constructing an apartment for the superintendents, in addition to painting furniture and offices.

The living facilities will be large enough to accommodate 20 children, the majority varying in age from 10 years and younger, he said.

There will be a diagnostic clinic consisting of the psychological services of the court, three supervisors, caseworkers and some MSU students who are working on doctoral degrees in psychology.

The children are expected to remain in the home no longer than 10 days.

It is not an orphanage or home, in the sense that this is where the children will be living," Mills said. "It is a diagnostic tool and nothing more."

Mills said that some of the children to be helped are already in foster homes but are not adjusting and the court wants to know why. The others will be new cases brought to the attention of the court because of parental neglect or abandonment.

While the child is undergoing observation in the shelter home, a case worker will visit the home and evaluate the conditions, Mills said.

The staff of the court will then decide if the child should be placed in a foster home or returned to the parents.

"Whenever possible the goal of the Court is to return the child to its parents," Mills said. "Only one child in six is placed in a foster home."

At the present time there are about 380 children in area foster homes that have suffered from parental neglect, he said.

Leshar Place will not be able to accommodate all the children who need help. Because of the amount of diagnostic time needed for each child, the home will not be able to efficiently deal with more, Mills said.

The home is expected to open in July and the money for this year's operation has come from Ingham County funds that have been matched by the State of Michigan, totaling $56,000.

Saturday, the third workday will be conducted at Leshar

Place. Three MSU fraternities and one sorority will join the court staff, the Lansing Junior Chamber of Commerce and students from local high schools and junior highs. Between 50 and 60 people are expected to donate their services toward giving Leshar Place the home-like atmosphere the neglected children need.

Kennedy film honoring late senator shown

A memorial program for the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy will be held at 3 p.m. Monday in the Conrad Auditorium.

The memorial, sponsored by the Early Movement for Kennedy, will consist of the film "Robert F. Kennedy Remembered", which was originally shown at the 1968 Democratic Convention in Chicago.

The memorial will also offer a recording of the eulogy delivered by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy at his brother's funeral in June, 1968.

Apollo

"Adios And we'll see you back in about six hours," Young called to his comrades.

"Have a good time while we're gone," Cernan replied.

The mission seemed in doubt momentarily even after the spacecraft moved apart.

Stafford, checking the rendezvous radar needed for a rejoining of the craft, found he could get no signal from the housing beacon of the mother ship.

He anxiously asked Young to try to fix it since otherwise it was a "no go" for the near-pass of the moon.

"How about trying to re-cycle the power switch," the capsule communicator in Houston, astronaut Charles Duke, suggested.

"Hey," Young shouted happily, "That did it! It's on."

"John," Cernan said, "I could kiss you."

Clack corrects Min-A-Mart error

Dale Clack, ASMSU consumer relations bureau director, has retracted a statement on the East Lansing Min-A-Mart store, quoted in the State News May 15.

In the May 15 story, Clack said, "Finding this price discrepancy opens the door for similar price situations in the same store."

Clack said that he meant to say, "Finding this price discrepancy opens the door for similar price situations in other Lansing area stores."
