East Lansing, Michigan

ANN ARBOR --Officials braced for another troubled night Wednesday after hippie leaders called for a second confrontation with police to follow a headcracking ruckus that left 22 injured

Ignoring a shout-down of their demands at a rally on the University of Michigan campus Wednesday noon, leaders of the White Panther and Trans-Love Energies Organizations urged another try at making part of South University Street a "liberated people's street."

While the rally, attended by some 700 persons, went on, U-M and city officials huddled to map plans for a possible third straight night of trouble on the street, which borders the U-M campus. Those at the rally--predominately high school - aged youngsters with a sprinkling of students and adults--shouted proposals that a one-block segment of the street be permanently closed off and turned into a people's park. But hippie leaders and 85 followers took their demands to City Hall anyway and called for a 9:30 p.m. (EST) confrontation with police. The weather bureau predicted a 50 per cent chance of rain.

Though U-M President Robben W. Flemming claimed most of the 1,500 youngsters involved in a wild melee Tuesday night were not university students, he appealed Wednesday to young people in the community to stay calm and stay home to avoid further trouble. Local officials flatly warned they would not permit a takeover of South University Street, where the confrontation occurred Tuesday night following a trouble-free beer bust demonstration the night before.

An estimated 500 officers from the State Police and five local agencies swept through the taunting, rock-hurling crowd, arresting 52 young persons, 24; of them on the felony charge of rioting. Others were charged with creating a distrubance and malicious destruction of police property.

Officers swung rifle butts and night sticks and fired smoke bombs and tear gas guns. Fifteen policemen were known to have been injured by flying objects, and at least seven of the demonstrators also were hurt.

All were treated at local hospitals and released.

Mayor Robert J. Harris quickly flew in from Pittsburgh, Pa., where he was attending a meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors. After assessing the situation, he issued a statement blaming the ruckus on the youngsters.

The sad events of last night were not a police riot," he said. "They were not Chicago all over again.'

Authorities said they had been tipplanned to make it a "liberated people's street" and were ready to clear away the crowd, sprinkled heavily with hippies and motorcycle gangs from Detroit, 45 miles to the east. The order to break up the crowds came shortly before 9 p.m., EST, after one officer was reportedly struck on the helmet by a bottle. Then helmeted police carrying night sticks and long guns swept down South University.

"Everyone had been congregating and were blocking the streets like Monday night," Joyce Portnoy, a junior from New York, said. "There were about 15 police there at the beginning and the kids started calling them names."

The young people had been drinking and were staging motorcycle and car races and were blocking the street, pol-

Lines of helmeted police moved up South University toward the campus, clearing the street and the sidewalks.

Reporters at the scene said police first used smoke bombs, but later switched to tear gas.

Many students, ending an evening of studying in the undergraduate library, were trapped in the building by police and ordered to stay there until the area was cleared. Monday night, police stood by and allowed a three-hour beer bust and party-like demonstration to continue on (Please turn to page 9)

PLANT PATHOLOGY PROFESSOR

Cantlon to face board as provost nominee

By BARB PARNESS State News Staff Writer

John E. Cantlon, professor of ecology in botany and plant pathology, will be nominated as provost at the board of trustees meeting Friday, informed sources said Wednesday.

Cantlon, who has been on the MSU faculty since 1953, was the first choice of the faculty-student committee to aid in selecting the new provost, the sources said. If approved by the trustees, Cantlon will replace Howard R. Neville, who will be leaving office at the end of August.

Cantlon said that he was contacted late last week by Acting President Adams about accepting the position. He said that Adams urged him to accept the nomination.

Cantlon said that Adams indicated that he thought it would be a good idea for MSU to have a provost who had not had any previous administrative experience.

After talking to Adams, Cantlon received formal notification of his selection by the committee and an invitation to attend Friday's trustees meeting. · However Cantlon will not attend the meeting due to a previous appointment.

Cantlon, a stranger to administrative processes, received his Bachelor Science from the University of Nevada in 1947 and his PHD from Rutgers University in 1950. He received the Distinguished Faculty Award in 1964. He has served on both the Educational Policies Committee and the Graduate Council of the University.

Cantlon expressed some regret that if he is approved as provost he will not be able to spend much time on a research project he has been working on. He has a research grant from the National Science Foundation to do some work in ecological studies.

Cantlon sees the role of the provost as "the senior academic officer" dealing with the "problems of scholarship" and the "problems of the inter-relationship between departments and faculty."

Adams said that he believes any provost must have "unquestioned academic credentials as a teacher and as a scholar.

"He has to be an individual of the highest personal integrity who would command broad support from the faculty.'

Adams continued. Warren M. Huff, D-Plymouth, said that he would have to wait and consult with his collegues on the board of trustees before reacting to Cantlon's nomination.

"I don't want to do anything that would create some inflexibility for the new president," he said.

Some faculty members want to know more about the inner workings and thoughts of the all-University committee looking for a new MSU president.

Two professors sent a letter to Dale Hathaway, chairman of the All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC) May 29 asking the committee to publish its tentative statement of desired aims for the University.

AUSSC presented the statement to the board of trustees in May, but decided not to publish it because it is not a polished, completely--agreed--upon document, Hathaway has said.

See text of letter p.4

The professors who wrote the letter are Edgar A. Schuler, professor of sociology and Russell J. Kleis, associate professor of continuing education.

"We commend your committee for developing such a statement as a basis for your work and sharing it, while still tentative, with the Trustees," the letter read.

"We believe that it should also be shared, while still tentative, with the entire university community and a very interested public," it continued.

Hathaway's June 3rd reply to the professors' letter stated what he has said no useful purpose to publish the document as it stands now

The opposition was divided between the centrist Fine Gael -- Irish party--led by Liam Cosgrave and deriving from the men who accepted partition, and the union-backed Laborites led by Brendan Corish.

The Vatican, one of Italy's largest stockholders, was reported Wednesday as trying to unload its interests in Italian companies to Americans, including the Rockefellers.

The double aim was said to be to avoid paying $2 million a year in Italian taxes and to expand Vatican holdings abroad.

The Italian government estimates the Vatican's total holdings at $160 million.

Enemy troops hit two American installations near Laos and Cambodia Wednesday, but were hurled back at both points with heavy losses. U.S. officials said captured documents indicated the Communist command had ordered its troops to step up attacks on U.S. bases.

American losses were 10 killed and 12 wounded.

In Saigon President Nguyen Van Thieu said Wednesday South Vietnam is preparing to 'shift to a lesser degree of fighting and move to the political phase of the struggle for peace."

Thieu said the Communist forces will soon see that they cannot maintain their agression for a dozen more years.

They cannot win over South Vietnam with weapons and cruelty," he said on the eve of South Vietnamese Armed Forces Day.

An investigation board excused a key American witness Wednesday from testifying about the collision of the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans and the Australian carrier Melbourne and went ahead with its effort to find the cause of the crash.

Lt. J.G. Ronald C. Ramsey, deck officer of the destroyer at the time of the disaster, said that his lawyer had not been granted certain rights that would remove his constitutional protections.

The House voted Wednesday to prevent federal regulatory agencies from restricting cigarette advertising until July 1, 1975. A bill proposing a waiting period until 1972 was defeated by a standing vote of 114 to 87.

The House also refused to require that cigarette advertising include a statement that smoking may be injurious to health.

A positive identification of the body of 10-year-old Mary Mount was made Wednesday in New Canaan, Conn, bringing to an end the massive three-week hunt for the daughter of an IBM executive.

Police said she received a skull fracture serious enough to cause death, but they were not certain what caused the wound.

New Canaan police Chief Henry E. Keller said the death definitely resulted from foul play, and the investigation is proceeding as if it were a homicide.

The State of Wisconsin served a cease and desist order Wednesday on the captain of a damaged river barge, which was leaking oil into the Mississippi River.

The oil was spreading a thin film 15 or more miles down the river along the Minnesota-Wisconsin border.

The order will give the state authority to fine the captain $500 a day if the oil continues to seep into the river after a deadline Wednesday night.

More federal repression on campus

Another chapter in the continuing struggle for law and order the American Way is about to be written by the Nixon administration.

The newest chapter is a bill introduced Tuesday to the House Education and Labor Committee that would give college officials a new weapon against campus disorders--court injunctions backed by the full force of the federal government. And that means, yours truly the Army, Air Force, Marines, Navy, Merchant Marine, Boy Scouts of America and maybe even Mrs. Nixon's bridge club--if a college president decides they might be useful in keeping his classrooms open.

All this after repeated statements by administration officials that they wanted no new legislation from Congress. But it's the old story of How you gonna keep 'em down on the farm when . . .

Or in this case, How you gonna keep 'em in the classroom when they discover the inconsistencies that exist in America, none of which are being attended to-the rotting and disease that is infesting our cities, and all the promises we've heard about erradicating poverty and getting out of Vietnam that have produced only tokenism and Hamburger Hills.

Presently it takes a request from the governor of a state to employ federal troops into any part of a state, including a campus. This new bill, sponsored by the White House, Justice Dept. and HEW, would authorize college officials to directly seek court injunctions from federal courts to force the opening of campuses closed by dissidents.

There are more goodies involved. This measure would also amend the bill passed earlier this year that requires a withholding of federal financial aid from students who are convicted of rioting by a court when the decision is upheld by a college hearing. This new bill would erase the need for a court conviction. It would also extend the time that aid is withheld from two to five years.

The question here is whether an institution that suspends a student can be depended upon to give him a fair hearing. It's rather like the university playing judge, jury and executer. It could even be a breach of the fifth and sixth amendments of the constitution. Trial by the institution that is also the prosecutor would be neither fair nor impartial.

Allowing college officials to call in federal troops only increases the depth to which the federal government has become submerged in campus affairs. All too often federal measures have been entirely repressive and not reformative. We have already seen that campus disruptions are best handled at the local level, hopefully without any outside intervention. If and when that intervention means troops, this too must also be handled locally. Anything of a magnitude that would require federal troops (and it is doubtful that this would ever occur) should go through the governor of the state.

'Vith federal intervention, the fu games are over, kiddies. The s new bill would mean repression from the worst source --a far removed, heavily centralized office which has already shown it understands little of what is happening on campuses today.

We can only hope that our elected representatives in Washington have a little more sense than to pass such a hard line, authoritarian measure.

Vietnam withdrawal . . . ?"

GEORGE BULLARD

If bad movies get you down

Volunteerism, the donation of time and talent to others, seems vanishing in this dorm-delivered pizza. Everyone, by the time he flunks an ATL exam, has left the do-a-good-turn stage and joined the where's-the-TG ranks of revelers. Volunteerism in this latter rank consists of an annual nickel in the Salvation Army Christmas bucket.

Counterbalances to this attitude seem like phenomena of the future: the Peace Co.ps. VISTA and similar programs that contract for a year or two of time.

At MSU, however, altruism lives. It is not as healthy as it could be, but then it's officially only an infant. It's subsistence on campus is provided by the Office of Volunteer Programs and through the bureau, students can match their time an talents with need and neglect. The by eau refers student and faculty volunters to individual programs or people who whom they can work toward a com-

Volunteer programs began in 1962 as the Student Education Corps. In 1967, trustees established a full-time volunteer program under the direction of James R Tanck. Tanck, incidentally, is considered an expert on volunteer programs. He will leave MSU July 1 for a six-month post as staff-consultant on President Nixon's Cabinet Committee for Volunteer Action.

"The philosophy behind volunteerism, according to Tanck, "is that government or industry cannot solve all the problems facing a society. Today's problems are everyone's problems; each man has a role to play in their solution.

Tanck's solution is the effective coordination of over 30 programs ranging from tutoring delinquents to playing "big brother" to blind children. Tanck sees the bureau as one that meets "conflicting" needs: the need of the student ("for practical experience . . a need to 'do good' ") and the need of the community ("Additional manpower to assist in solving community problems, etc."). The volunteer bureau, headed by John Cauley, shuns the image of the superefficient, omniscient charity worker who swoops down unwanted, flaps his wings for a while and flies away leaving little accomplishment. The bureau's philosophy described by Tanck as "operational, could well include the quip by Thomas L. Masson that "professional charity is the milk of human blindness.

The bureau's brand of volunteerism uses qualified amateurs and operates on a people-to-people, not an institution-topeople, basis. Over 3,000 students now work in volunteer programs And Cauley. who succeeds Tanck July 1 will be glad to hear from anyone else who wishes to donate a few hours each week in an area of interest. His office is in Room 26. Student Services Bldg.

If TGs, bad movies and mandatory lectures are beginning to wear on your mind, take a break, stop by the volunteer bureau and volunteer some time.

Hell, you might even find that accomplishment is an experience unique to your four-year stay on campus.

PUT END TO SILENCE

Report should be published

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the text of a letter sent to Dale Hathaway, Chairman, All-University Search and Selection Committee, from Edgar A. Schuler, professor of Sociology and Russel J. Kleis, Associate professor of Education.

We were very pleased to learn, through the State News, that the All-University Search and Selection Committee has transmitted to the board of trustees a statement of "desired aims of the University" as a first step toward fulfilling its responsibilities. We understand from one of your comments before the Faculty Senate that the statement is still in tentative form.

We commend your committee for developing such a statement as a basis for your work and for sharing it, while still tentative, with the trustees. We believe that it should also be shared; while still tentative, with the entire university community and a very interested public

In a meeting of College of Education faculty members Dr. Robert Ebel. a member of your committee, informed us that there is concensus among members of your committee that the prime role of the University is concern with knowledge -- its discovery, teaching, and preservation. Agreed. But knowledge for whom and for what? This question, though controversial, is unavoidable in a society committed to the rights of freedom, information, and non-violent dissent.

Your committee can set a worthy and very much needed example by publishing your statement now before firm positions are taken by your committee, the trustees, or the many others who are legitimately concerned. If you fail to do so, the informed and informative public dialog essential to the functioning of a free society will be precluded in this important case. Heaven forbid so serious an error at so crucial a period!

Accordingly, we urge your committee to reconsider its present policy of collective silence toward the University community and the public, and to promptly publish its tentative statement of desired aims for the University. Doing so should aid in focusing public discussion on the most important issue in the presidential search and selection process. Furthermore, it would help to counter a tendency on the part of some to doubt the University's respect and candor in dealing with its vitally concerned pub-we sould like doubting Thomases, but we cannot help but wonder why Hamburger Hill has once again become so damned important. Maybe strategic positions in Vietnam shift from week to week. This week it's important, but who knows, perhaps it won't be next week. At any rate we can always go after it again, can't we? Have you constructed estimated casualty list yet, your optimum killratio? Last month it cost us 50 young American boys and over 310 wounded. How many more this month, General? And the month after that?

But Maj. Gen. Melvin L. Zaid (last month's commander of your glorious troop) has already informed us that your job is to attack and destroy the enemy wherever they are. That might not be a bad way to fight all the Viet Cong in one place. Surrender the hill after you've "attacked and destroyed" all the enemy who were holding it and a new batch is bound to take it again. Then you can destroy that batch. Before long the entire Viet Cong army will have passed over Hamburger Hill and hopefully will have been destroyed in the process. But there's the minor difficulty of how many American lives will be lost in the pro-

OUR READER'S MIND

Mobilizing the students' resources

Luring the last few quarters the State News has published a number of articles on the necessity of providing a university education for the members of the lower income strata of our society. While these articles have often proven thought provoking, they have, to the best of my knowledge, produced few appreciable results.

While the reasons for this failure are varied, the most significant are the inability of the university to allocase sufficient funds to implement the programs so far suggested and the failure of these programs to take this situation into account. Consequently, I would like to suggest an alternative program of action which would circurivent this problem by mobilizing the resources which lie exclusively within he student body.

The primary aspect of this program, which is based upon the BSA's idea of a voluntary scholarship fund for black students, is the levying of a $1.00 pe; quarter tax by the student body upon itself. The proceeds from this tir, which would be levied on all studeats regardless of standing and, consequently, yield over $100,000 per year, weuld be used to establish a scholarship fund to aid students from Michigiri's ghettoes.

The scholarships would be of sufficant size to enable the student to meet al of his basic expenses (i.e., tuiticn, room, board, books, clothes, etc.,) and would be guaranteed to the student as long as he makes satisfactory progress toward a degree at Michigan State. Setisfactory progress in this instance is best defined as the maintainance of the GPA necessary for obtaining the degree for which the student is working (i.e., 2.0 for undergraduates and a 3.0 for graduate students). Since graduate students can usually find other sources of support, the first priority should be given to undergraduates whose families earn less than $5,000 per year. Race should not be a consideration in the selection process.

The fund would be administered by a board of student trustees, containing at least one representative each from the all university student governing bodies, interested student groups, the scholarship recipients, and at least two at large representatives elected from the student body. This board would administer the fund and govern the selection process. While faculty and administrative advisors would be desirable, they should if possible, serve only in an advisory capacity.

The above outline is by no means definitive and it should be treated as a tentative proposal intended to open discussion on a proposal which appears to be both feasible and useful. This project if adopted would by no means solve the problem but it would be an initial step in the right direction.

Establish college of peace

To the Editor:

Open letter to the present and future Presidents and Boards of Trustees of Michigan State University:

There have been heard three primary purposes of the University:

1) To offer to the student all he might desire for his education, 2) To offer training in service to society, 3) To provide a center for various interests where people (and money) can come together to effect more than if they were to work separately. Under these purposes, ROTC should be retained on campus, no matter how repugnant its philosophies of patriotism ment of such a school.

and militarism may be. But, also under the same purposes, the ideas of peace deserve a special place on campus. I would like the University to study the establishment of a Non-Violence Training School and a peace major, specifically to serve: 1) To offer a philosophy to balance those of ROTC, 2) To train in the peaceful means of solving conflicts in a society and world desperately trying to avoid violence, 3) To provide a center for the study of peace. For nothing could the nation and the world be more grateful to MSU than a strong might be of interest in terms of understanding Byron.

The premise of this book is essentially a series of personal recollections made by the poet shortly before his death. We come to these revelations by reading through the "manuscript" composed by Byron in Greece, and then supposedly lost for well over a hundred

I think Byron, judging from what Prokosch shows him to feel, would not seem far removed from our present world of 1969. Regarded as a libertine in his own day, the revolutionary fervor, both political and sexual, of this Englishman are comparable to the likes of late Senor Guevara (El Che) or even the flower-children of the deadly Waterloo" might well have been meant, for certain Southeast Asian frontiers almost a century and a half later.

Lord Byron was an enigma, even to himself. His descriptions of the "place of skulls

Perhaps these are the true fascinations we see in Byron. He is barely, if at all, removed from certain current ideals.

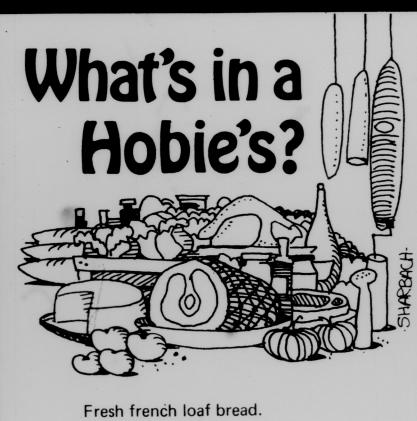

His conquests, in the boudoir as well as on the foolscap, have earned this chap a mammoth reputation. Don Juan, a product of Byron's later work probably characterized the romantic side of the poet as did Childe Harold suggest other

Beaumont Tower's chimes will be ringing when the summer series of carillon concerts begins at 4 p.m. Sunday

The concerts, played by MSU carillonneur, Wendell Westcott, to be presented through July 31, will begin at 4 p.m. each Sunday and at 8 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Westcott, asst. professor of music, has been playing the 47bell carillon in Beaumont Tower since World War II.

'Visitors to the campus can hear a variety of music played on the bells while strolling or sitting on the lawn surrounding the tower." Westcott said.

Concerts will feature classical and modern music, hits from musicals and movie themes

Visitors are permitted inside the tower during the concerts to see how the carillon is played. After each concert, Westcott will conduct a tour of the tower bel-

In announcing his coalition effort to remain in City Hall, Lindsay issued a general warning to Republican leaders that anyone who supports Marchi in the general election campaign 'had better look very careful-

New York's two Republican senators, Jacob K. Javits and Charles E. Goodell, have both said they will support Lindsay regardless of the primary outcome. But Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller said he would support the primary winner.

Asked if his warning referred to the Republican governor, Lindsay said that if it fits, "Well, that's the case.

'The forces of reaction and backwardness," Lindsaw continued, "have captured the Repubfican party. But it is a temporary victory, a murky victory, a Frank Pinner, professor of political science, said he could see no reason why such a tentative document would have to be kept secret. If it were made public, Pinner thought there would not be much debate or criticism of it.

'The faculty at MSU is lethargic," Pinner said.

Albert Rabin, professor of psychology and president of MSU's chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) said it "would be nice if the document were made public, but it's not crucial."

Schuler and Kleis are in the process of responding to Hathaway's reply, but have informally indicated that they "consider the position of the committee to be unsatisfactory.'

Schuler said he had not talked to that many other faculty members about the document and so-called secrecy of AUSSC. He said he felt that other faculty members "think they can't do anything about it.

Kleis said he assumed there were a number of others who felt as he did, and that this was one reason why he wrote the letter to Hathaway.

"It is precisely because they (AUSSC) have not firmed up this document that they should let the rest of the community see it," Kleis said. Schuler and Kleis said in their letter that publishing the list of desired aims of the university would help to focus public discussion on the search for a new MSU president.

"It would help to counter a tendency on the part of some to doubt the University's respect and candor in dealing with its vitally concerned publics." they said.
