Nixon hopes to better Clifford withdrawal plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon said Thursday night that in withdrawing troops from Vietnam, "I would hope we could beat" a timetable calling for removal of 100,000 troops by the end of this year.

Nixon stated his hope for increased U.S. troops withdrawals—beyond the 25,000 he has already announced—in responding to a question about a proposal by Clark M. Clifford, secretary of defense in the Johnson administration.

Clifford called for 100,000 troops to be pulled out of Vietnam by the end of this year with removal of all remaining U.S. combat troops by the end of next year. That would leave only U.S. logistic support for South Vietnamese forces after 1970.

"We have withdrawn forces," Nixon said in evident reference to his announcement of June 8 of 25,000 to be pulled out by the end of August. "We will withdraw more."

"As far as how many will be withdrawn, I would hope we would beat Mr. Clifford's timetable."

Nixon began his comment by saying that for five years under the previous administration there was continued escalation of the war. He also said in the year during which Clifford was secretary of defense, U.S. casualties reached their highest annual level.

"This is not to say that Mr. Clifford's present judgment is not to be considered," Nixon added.

Of the Paris peace talks Nixon reported under questioning that there is no substantial public evidence of progress in getting down to "substantive negotiations."

In a later question on Clifford's timetable Nixon said, "I hope we will not be in Vietnam as long as he suggested we will have to be there."

Nixon was speaking out at his first news conference in two months and his sixth since he entered the White House.

Asked about a report by a score of GOP congressmen on campus unrest, he said "it was a very thoughtful report," and "they gave me a lot of information" which he needs to help him deal with campus unrest.

"I cannot support the legislative proposals in the House of Representatives which would cut off funds to any college or University in which there was a demonstration."

"This would be cutting off our noses to spite our faces," Nixon said.

The responsibility for containing campus unrest should be on the shoulders of college administrators, Nixon said.

As for his Safeguard antiballistic missile system and its prospects in the Senate, Nixon said polls indicate 51 Senators in favor and 46 against. "We will win the fight on Safeguard. It will not be necessary to compromise," he added, although there might be some changes in detail in the legislation.

He said new information on Soviet tests of multiple targeted re-entry vehicles has convinced him that Safeguard is most important.

Vietnam cropped up several times. Nixon said the United States has had no response from the North Vietnamese either on the battlefield or at the Paris peace talks on the announced withdrawal of 25,000 American troops.

"Our casualties are in direct ratio to the level of the enemy attack," the President said at another point. "We have not escalated our attack. We have only responded to what the enemy has done."

"If the enemy now will withdraw one-tenth of its forces as we have withdrawn one-tenth of our combat forces, the level of fighting would decline."

He added: "However, I would make this suggestion: President Thieu has authorized internationally supervised elections to see whether the people of Vietnam want his government or some other government."

"As far as the United States is concerned we would accept any government chosen by the people of South Vietnam."

Trustees face hectic agenda at Oakland

By MARILYN PATTERSON

The board of trustees will consider a student-faculty recommendation for provost, salary increase, labor negotiations and other budget items at its monthly meeting today at Oakland University.

John E. Cantlon, professor of ecology and plant pathology, was the first recommendation of the student-faculty committee choosing a new provost.

His name will be presented to the trustees as the committee's nominee to replace Provost Howard Neville, who will leave at the end of August to assume the presidency of Claremont Men's College, Claremont, Calif.

The trustees will also hear a labor contract for nonacademic employees, according to Clair White, D-Bay City. Several contracts and 223 appointments and personnel changes will be considered.

White said the trustees will also discuss the condition of the Journalism Bldg. Four trustees toured the building last month and heard requests for improvements from journalism and advertising students.

The proposed Life Science Building is also scheduled for discussion.

Thursday the board heard a report from Chancellor Durward B. Varner on the state of Oakland University and met with the All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC).

BLACK COALITION

SDS convention split on working class issue

By DENISE FORTNER
State News Staff Writer

CHICAGO—A growing struggle for control of the radical youth group shaped up Thursday as the national convention of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) entered its second day.

Workshops, caucuses and speeches from the Black Panther Party and Chicago's Young Lords Organization, a radical Puerto Rican group, were on Thursday's agenda.

Most of the 1,500 SDS members in the Coliseum annex on South Wabash spent the day in "rap sessions" discussing the ideological fight and power struggle between the Progressive Labor Party (PL) faction and Workers Student Alliance (WSA).

The PL was narrowly defeated in the first test vote over whether to permit an 18-year-old San Franciscoan and former member of China's Red Guard to address the convention late Thursday.

PL members, indoctrinated Maoists, argued Wednesday that the scheduled speaker, Chris Milton, was expelled from the Red Guard.

Early Wednesday evening, several thousand young people gathered in a plaza in front of the University administration building for a rock concert.

More than 300 police with riot helmets and clubs had lined the street for four hours during the evening, and at least five busloads of reserve police were on hand.

A police helicopter continually circled the area scanning rooftops with a spotlight and directing police operations.

Wednesday night, U-M President Robben W. Fleming roamed the campus urging students to "keep your cool." When Fleming spoke at the concert Wednesday night, he was both cheered and jeered by different elements of the large crowd that had gathered.

Fleming, attempting to play a moderating role, received a generally favorable response from the crowd.

"Force will not accomplish anything," he said. "The best thing we all can do is to cool it down."

While Fleming spoke, two White Panther flags waved in the breeze. Ann Arbor is the location of the national headquarters of the White Panthers, a militant white group patterned after the Black Panthers.

Also speaking at the concert was Ann Arbor Mayor Robert J. Harris. Harris was shouted down several times by youths who demanded that he "do something about" Washtenaw County Sheriff Douglas J. Harvey.

Several long-haired youths said that they were harassed by Harvey because of their appearance.

"I don't know of a thing I can do," Harris said. "I share your concern about Sheriff Harvey. I don't think this country has seen a police force that everyone here could be proud of."

Harris later declined to sign a petition to recall Harvey, stating, "I have to work with him every day."

The State and Ann Arbor Police Dept. decided to remove their men after the crowd began to leave the concert.

Following the departure of the police, a somewhat reduced crowd swarmed into the street, blocking off the flow of traffic.

Occupation of the street was urged by the White Panthers. They demanded that a section of the street be cordoned off and made into a "liberated People's Street."

The crowd was composed of high school age youths, members of several Detroit motorcycle gangs, college students, and non-students.

The police returned to the area at 12:45 a.m. Two groups of 200 policemen each moved in on the occupied section.

This was the third consecutive night of street gatherings and the second of violence between police and youths.

Several injuries were reported and over 20 were arrested. Only a handful of those arrested were known to be students at U-M which borders the street.

Local apartment blazes cause $20,000 damage

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

Fire struck two East Lansing apartment complexes Wednesday afternoon, causing approximately $20,000 worth of damage to the buildings and their contents.

Firemen answered an alarm at 1:45 p.m. to combat a blaze in Cedar Village apartments. Extensive smoke and flames were found in the area of the incinerator room servicing the third and fourth floors.

Apartment manager T.J. Pulte said that the cause of the blaze was a plugged incinerator chute. Normal down-drafts were eliminated, causing the flames to shoot upward.

Damage, which was estimated at $2,000 was confined primarily to the public areas in the immediate vicinity of the incinerator.

The East Lansing fire department was also summoned to the scene of a fire at Capitol Villa apartments at 5:55 p.m. Wednesday. Six pieces of equipment, including the emergency rescue unit, were involved in extinguishing the blaze.

Much of the interior of the building was damaged by smoke and water.

East Lansing Fire Inspector Jack Gregg said that there was "no apparent reason for the fire starting." Preliminary estimates of damage range from $18,000 to $20,000.

The storage room and laundry areas, which contained the personal belongings of many of the building's occupants, was reduced to rubble. Windows were broken, and both the inner and outer areas of the building were coated with smoke deposits. Residents of the ground floor of the building were relocated in other buildings of the complex.

Two East Lansing firemen were injured when a cable connected to a fire department vehicle being towed from a muddy area, snapped. One of the men received severe bruises on his legs, but did not require hospitalization.

On the march

Wednesday night's hotspot was Capital Villa, where fire blazed through two apartments and smoke damaged others. Police diverted traffic on E. Grand River Avenue, while firemen frisked the flames.

ANN ARBOR—The University of Michigan (U-M) area was quiet Thursday afternoon following a second early-morning confrontation between youths and heavily-armed police.

Thieu: 'cog in wheel' to peaceful settlement

PARIS (AP)—A leader of the Hanoi regime said Thursday no peaceful solution is possible in Vietnam as long as Nguyen Van Thieu's government remains in power in Saigon.

Le Duc Tho, ranking member of the North Vietnamese politbureau, told newsmen. "If President Nixon obstinately clings to the Thieu Administration, it will be the biggest political error of his life."

Tho, who supervises Hanoi's delegation at the Paris peace talks, was in an expansive mood at a reception given by the Viet Cong's new provisional revolutionary government. Tho freely answered questions at the party after a fruitless 6 1/4-hour session of the talks which produced little more than propaganda exchanges between the two sides.

"There is absolutely no hope in dealing with the regime of Thieu. Nguyen Cao Ky and Tran Van Huong," Tho said.

"Before there can be any progress, there must be a completely new regime in Saigon, or the present regime can be reformed. But these three people must

Rockefeller tour rerouted

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP)—Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller held meetings with Brazilian industrialists in an exclusive Sao Paulo club Thursday, while the building was surrounded by the tightest security guard of his Latin-American tour.

While the group met, American officials changed the governor's tour plans to avoid the possibility of student demonstrations in Uruguay, where Rockefeller had been scheduled to arrive Friday.

His visit to Paraguay was extended until Saturday, and he was rescheduled to arrive in the Uruguayan beach resort of Punta del Este instead of the capital of Montevideo.

Heavily armed soldiers and an armored water cannon stood guard in front of the New York governor's Sao Paulo hotel as he held talks there before attending the private club luncheon.

This leg of Rockefeller's trip has found him confronted with massive requests for foreign aid.

In the past two days, Brazilian leaders have presented their case in a clear-cut dollars-and-cents fashion. In Sao Paulo alone, Brazil's largest and richest city, he has been asked for assistance in obtaining $165 million for public works.

Other leaders were more concerned about the rest of the country, and before his visit to Sao Paulo, Rockefeller was told of the country's need for $230 million to aid Brazilian agriculture, health and education. Most of this aid would go to the country's poverty-stricken northeast.

There have been no disturbances during Rockefeller's Brazil visit, despite official fears that if anything happened during the trip, it would occur in Sao Paulo, a restless city of six million.

Despite the efforts of Paraguay's military government to give Rockefeller a warm welcome, student opposition to his visit cropped up.

A declaration signed by 28 university organizations asserted that Rockefeller was not welcome in Paraguay because his mission is "U.S. imperialism with a new face."

Collision witnesses differ over lights on Melbourne

SUBIC BAY, Philippines (AP)—Witnesses before the board investigating the collision of the Australian carrier Melbourne with the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans disagreed Thursday about whether the carrier had her navigation lights on at the time of the crash. They also continued to disagree about the relative positions of the two ships.

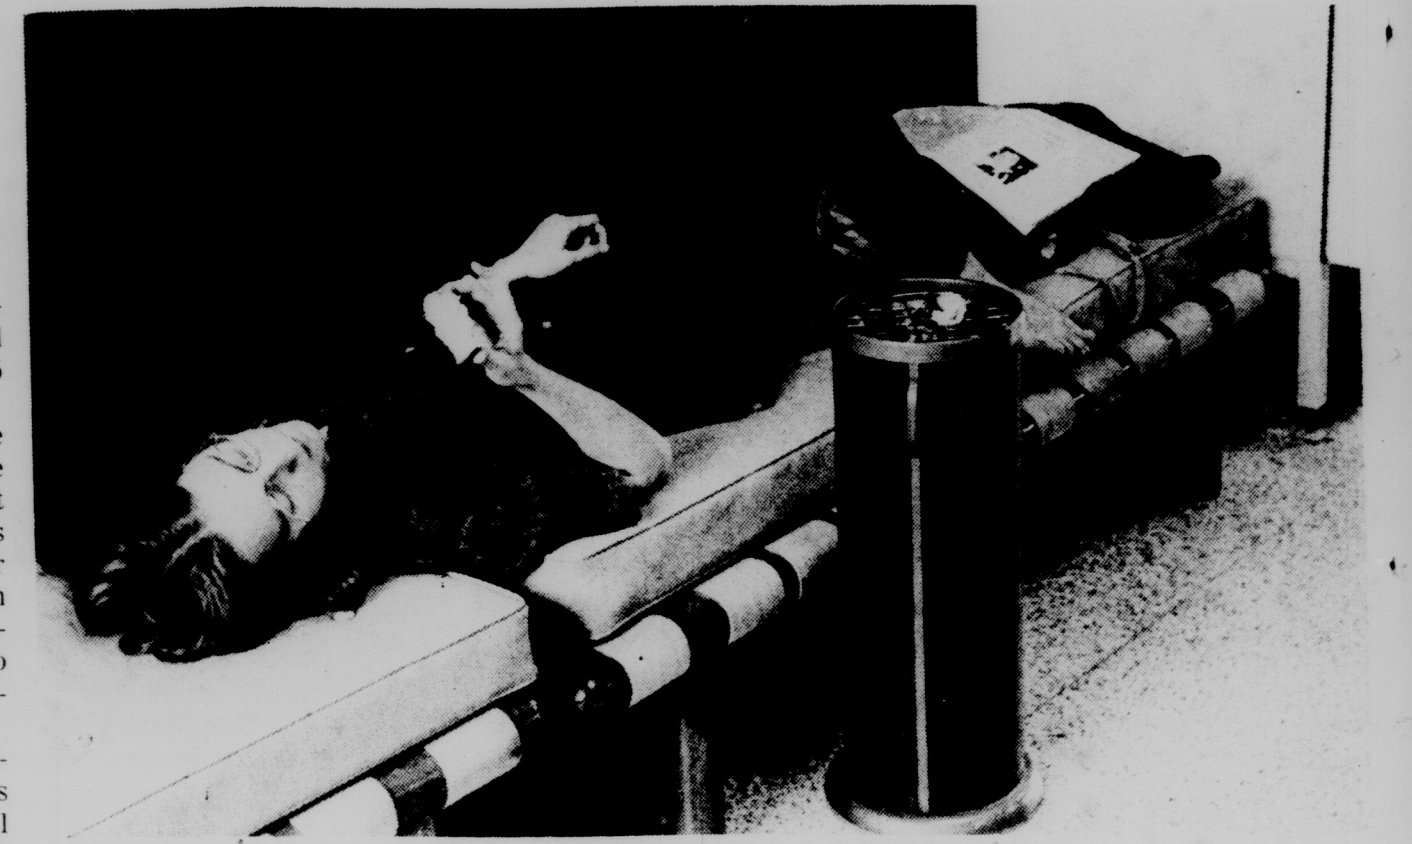

An Australian sublieutenant aboard the carrier told the board he turned on his ship's red and green navigational lights about eight minutes before the collision in which 74 crewmen from the Evans were killed.

A British navy lieutenant who saw the collision from about two miles away testified, however, that he saw no navigating lights on the Melbourne. This supports testimony given earlier by Lt. (j.g.) James A. Hopson, the junior officer on the Evans' deck at the time of the collision.

The Australian trainee officer, Sublieutenant Viacheslav Vorobieff, 20, said he had been instructed to turn the lights to "full brilliance" 10 minutes before the collision occurred. After throwing the light switches, Vorobieff said he walked out on the wing of the bridge and saw the lights burning "brightly."

The British officer who saw the crash was Lt. Thomas Mawson, 36, of Plymouth.

Viets slash Tay Ninh

SAIGON (AP)—The Communist command launched the biggest assault of its summer campaign with six slashing attacks on Tay Ninh and its host of satellite villages Thursday. A 300-man enemy force broke through in one sector and fought allied troops in village streets.

A U.S. report from Tay Ninh, 50 miles northwest of Saigon, said about 1,000 South Vietnamese civilians fled their homes.

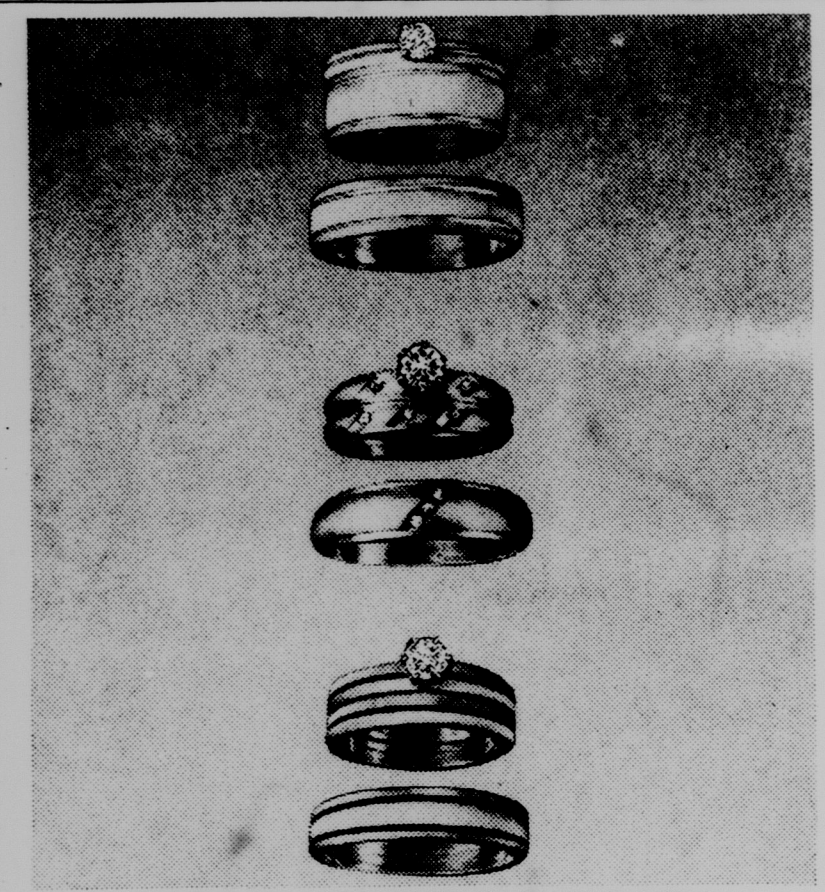

The fighting, preceded by rocket attacks, began in daylight and continued far into the night.

A U.S. advisor reported the fighting was under way in a complete circle around the city.

Tay Ninh, 12 miles east of Cambodia, is the capital of Tay Ninh Province. The city proper is small but it is encircled by a host of villages, known as Phu Kuong district. The over-all population is 180,000.

Another development of the day was a report that battle deaths of Americans rose last week to 36,378 since Jan. 1, 1961, while the enemy dead climbed to 516,087. These figures came from the U.S. Command.

Israeli and Egyptian artillery duelled along the Suez Canal front Thursday, and Jordan reported another Israeli air attack inside its territory.

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv issued a terse "no comment" on the Jordanian report.

A Cairo dispatch said the shelling along the canal lasted five hours, but Israel claimed it continued for only an hour and a half.

First returns from the Irish Republic's elections Thursday night showed Prime Minister Jack Lynch running well in his fight for a parliamentary majority. No sign emerged of the widely forecast swing to the left.

A pair of East German youths escaped to West Berlin Thursday amid a hail of gunfire from East German border guards. Police said the guards fired 30 to 40 shots from automatic weapons, but the youths, described only as 19 and 20 years old, reached freedom uninjured.

National News

A young man apparently shot himself Thursday after he climbed to the top of a bridge in downtown Pittsburgh and sent hundreds of people scattering into doorways and behind parked cars with fire from a small pistol.

The youth, identified as Robert Michniak, 22, failed to wound or kill any persons on the waterfront. Police were under orders not to return the fire.

The nation's air traffic controllers began a fresh campaign Thursday for more help and equipment by what amounts to a strike. The controllers are protesting the overloading of the nation's air facilities by calling in sick to major city airports.

Secretary of the Treasury David M. Kennedy refused Thursday to move against the banks to force a lowering of interest rates or to employ other selective governmental intervention because "where does one draw the line?"

Councilwoman Mary Beck, the latest entry into Detroit's race for mayor, appears to be the "law and order" candidate who will be backed by conservative forces.

"If elected mayor, my primary goal will be to sweep this city clean of crime and corruption and every form of pollution and to make our streets, our homes, and our businesses places safe and wholesome once again," Miss Beck, 61, announced when she filed for the post Wednesday.

Gov. William G. Milliken said Thursday he is "disappointed" that New York Republican Mayor John V. Lindsay was defeated in the primary election Tuesday.

Asked if he would encourage New York Republican Governor Nelson Rockefeller to back Lindsay against the new GOP candidate, John J. Marchi, Milliken said, "I may have occasion to do so. He has a good man in John Lindsay."

U.S. Sen. Philip A. Hart said Thursday night all generations and all segments of society share a common frustration that "individuality is being diminished by unresponsive institutions."

Speaking before the graduating class of Macomb County Community College, Hart said, "Much of the discontent in our land can be traced to that frustration."

Hart cautioned that individuality is not restored by "dissent which destroys rather than reforms," or by the failure to recognize that established channels separate "the rhetoric of the nation from reality."

Tanck plans volunteer boost

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

James R. Tanck, director of the MSU Office of Volunteer Programs and recently appointed staff consultant to the Cabinet Committee on Volunteer Action in Washington, said Thursday that his first job would be to help establish volunteer programs in colleges and universities around the nation.

The committee hopes to have programs in 100 schools by this fall, Tanck said. MSU is now the only university-based volunteer office in the U.S.

President Richard Nixon and George Romney, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development and chairman of the cabinet committee, were both aware of the operation of the MSU Office of Volunteer Programs and its success, Tanck said.

Tanck travelled to Washington several times during the past months to discuss implementing volunteer programs elsewhere in the nation.

It was then decided that he should be staff consultant to the cabinet committee. Tanck is in Washington, now on vacation. His official leave from the University begins July 1.

The committee consists of Romney, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert H. Finch, Secretary of Labor George P. Schultz, Secretary of Commerce Maurice Stans, Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin and Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Office of Economic Opportunity.

During Tanck's six-month leave of absence, John Cauley will be acting director of the MSU Office of Volunteer Programs. He was the co-ordinator of the MSU Volunteer Bureau.

Cauley said Thursday that he did not have any specific new plans for volunteer programs yet. He is just getting acquainted with his new job and responsibilities.

"I plan to maintain most of what we were doing before Jim (Tanck) left," he said. "He and I worked closely to plan volunteer programs and I will adhere to what we have done so far."

Cauley said he is not sure "where I stand" until the budget allocations come through later this summer.

"We had anticipated our first big summer this year, but we're not sure what will happen with students on both five-week and 10-week class schedules."

'U' president profile poll set for release next week

By LINDA GORTMAKER
Executive Reporter

A profile of the type of president MSU students want will be released early next week.

ASMSU's Presidential Selection Board (PSB) is organizing results from the 1,900 questionnaires distributed to a sampling of students at the end of spring term.

"The biggest thing now is to get the whole thing done and released to whomever wants it," said Marcia Thompson, chairman of PSB's steering committee.

The questionnaire consisted of 60 items, including 11 "identifiers" or background data, such as class, sex, grade point, age, race, home, marital status, parents' income and military status.

"So far we have only correlated identifiers with identifiers," Miss Thompson said.

The next step will be to match identifiers with desired qualifications for the next president.

PSB also has "marginals" ready, the raw scores and percentages. These marginals tell what percentage of all 1,900 students responded to certain questions. For example, one marginal could show what percentage of students answering the questionnaire said that MSU's next president should have a major experience in college teaching.

PSB will not release these marginals until results can be broken down by groups. Straight percentages would not be that helpful, Miss Thompson said, it would be more meaningful to show what freshmen wanted, what out-of-state students wanted, and so on.

Sue Gebelein, undergraduate representative to the search and selection committee, was scheduled to present the marginal results to the board of trustees Thursday when the search and selection committee met with the board at Oakland University.

PSB had originally aimed for a return of 3,000 questionnaires

A natural blindness to a senseless war

"Sooner or later the test must be whether the South Vietnamese will serve their own country sufficiently well to guarantee its national survival."

Thus another American enters the ranks of those dissatisfied with this country's involvement in the Vietnam war.

As with McNamara before him, former Sec. of Defense Clark Clifford now becomes one of those people who too late realizes that the Vietnam war is exactly that--Vietnam's war. As Clifford put it, "if they (the South Vietnamese) lack a sense or a sufficiency of national purpose, we can never force it on them. . . . No military strength we can bring to bear can give popular acceptance."

Perhaps Clifford's most startling statement was not his appeal to withdraw 100,000 troops by the end of this year, but rather his acknowledgement that "as the Saigon authorities saw it, the longer the war went on, with the large-scale American involvement, the more stable was their regime and the fewer concessions they would have to make to other political groupings."

What is now needed is an expansion of the Clifford McNamara type sentiment to the present administration. And that could be a long time coming. It is difficult to imagine Melvin Laird admitting that U.S. involvement in Vietnam is a mistake that will have to be acknowledged.

The question naturally arises "What took so long?" Perhaps a blindness or a mental block occurs while in power that prohibits the concerned party from considering possible alternatives. Thus, while sentiment outside the administration, and from past administrative officials, is increasingly anti-Vietnam, this sentiment will not be shared by those officials presently in office.

Thus it seems that we can expect little ready response from the Nixon Administration to the increasing evidence that 35,500 American lives have been lost in vain.

Warning of subversion

Looking for a reputable, tax-deductible charity to donate to?

Why not try the Church League of America? Originally established as a research project, its purpose is to "warn church people, both clergy and laymen, in regard to those forces seeking to destroy American society by infiltration into all phases of society," according to Maj. Edgar C. Bundy, executive secretary.

Lately however, the Church League has extended the scope of its investigations. Consequently the noble members have been working overtime. Bundy explained why. "This is the outgrowth, he said, of plans of Students for a Democratic Society for invasion of industry with express instructions that once they got in the plant they would spread disaffection among the workers."

Unfortunately, the Leaguers have not been able to keep up with all the cards and letters they have been receiving. "We've been so inundated with requests for information on subversion that the staff is running several weeks behind," Bundy explained. Nevertheless, the staff is "working night and day" doing research to meet requests from business and industry, "law enforcement agencies from coast to coast," college presidents and boards of regents, and agencies of the federal government.

Thank God there are a few patriotic citizens left who are interested in preserving our liberty and rooting out "subversives."

Since the League was founded in 1937, Bundy boasted, it has

"built up files second only to the Federal Bureau of Investigation in size, scientific arrangement, and carding of names of individuals, organizations, publications, movements and subjects."

And that means "over 100 tons of files of original documents including publications of all the worldwide network of Communists, Socialist, Nazi and Fascist groups," including 50,000 bound volumes.

The league, Bundy maintains, is "sustained wholly by tax deductible gifts" from individuals, churches which include the League in their missionary budget, foundations and corporations.

With a little luck and a few more tax deductible gifts, the League may be Number One before long. Even the FBI couldn't be as devoted to preserving the American Way as the League.

Chances are they've got a card on you. Their file includes over seven million cards on students for use by employers who hire students for summer work. If you got a summer job, you probably cleared the security check.

Isn't it nice to know the Church League of America is watching you?

POINT OF VIEW

Saving the U from Mr. Charlie

EDITORS' NOTE: The following "point of view" was written by James Moriarty, graduate assistant in Psychology. He entitles it "A Look Back in Anger; the Garskof Affair Re-visited."

"Students are niggers. When you get that straight, our schools begin to make sense. . . . the faculty and administrators decide what courses will be offered; the students get to choose their own Homecoming Queen."

Jerry Farber in "Student as Nigger" I am a graduate from a small liberal arts college where in four years I saw two multiple choice exams. When I came to MSU as a grad assistant I was told that multiple choice exams were the only way examining could be done reliably and validly. What done reliably and validly? Set up a normal distribution. Oh, a normal distribution of what? Students. (What are students? Niggers or human beings?) I accepted that belief for we had no alternative to "teaching" the some 7,000 students who take Psy. 151 in the course of a year. Like a plantation nigger, I accepted Mr. Charlie's beliefs.

But then I started to work with Garskof. I was hesitant to sign up to work for him because it was rumored around the department that working for him entailed more work than other teaching assistantships. He wanted his grad assistants to attend his lectures, grade essay exams, come to weekly meetings to discuss how to improve our own teaching. We wanted to improve the course from just a place where 600 students were shuffled in and out with multiple choice exams. We provided outside seminars for students who were interested in psychology-psych is actually a very stimulating and often relevant subject albeit the average Psy 151 students rarely finds that out. There of course is an inherent danger in doing the above things. You might become involved. Students, not closed mouth niggers, will do that to you. They ask questions you can't answer well and demand better answers. They come up with answers. Often it borders on the exciting. Yes, school type things exciting. If you have never felt that you are either a nigger or Mr. Charlie. The danger inherent in getting involved with students is that it detracts from your research. And worse to the ego, students may show you up.

The new director of Psy 151 recently told me, "Yes, I'd be willing to hold meetings to improve Psy 151, but I doubt that there is much that can be done. I mean its like spending extra hours on your lectures, it just doesn't improve them that much and the time is probably better on your research."

Garskof wouldn't have accepted that answer. I would have at one time. I did for a long time. But not anymore. I want to change things for myself and for my children. But as Hemingway said, "One man alone stands no chance." And that's the question that the Garskof affair has raised for me.

Looking around Spartan Stadium

I just wanted to look around. After all it isn't every day that they put Tartan Turf in your stadium. So when I heard that work had begun to remove the old sod on the football field Wednesday, I decided I would venture over and get a last look at the grass that such Spartan standouts as George Webster, Clint Jones and Bubba Smith used to roam on.

When I got over to the stadium there was a man and his wife taking pictures of each other under the goal post and two trucks and two workers at the other end of the field. About a third of the grass had already been stripped and several more layers were cut and ready to be hauled away. I thought nothing of it as the big truck passed me with the two workers and went out the gate.

I looked around for a little while more and decided, oh well, it's not too exciting right now but just wait till they start pouring the asphalt base and laying the new covering itself.

As I turned to leave the massive but so empty stadium, I noticed that the big gate where the truck went out was closed and locked. Hmm, must be that either those workers don't want anybody in here or they're through for the day -- probably the latter.

Well, guess I had better find another way out, I said. So I started walking around, looking for the gate which was going to free me. However, after journeying half-way around there was no gate.

passage-way or even a little opening I could squeeze through.

At first it seemed kind of funny, being locked in. Then it became rather discouraging and pretty dumb when I stopped to think about it. Soon it was just downright maddening, like being trapped inside a large prison by yourself.

After yelling at some of the guys playing tennis proved useless, I remembered seeing a couple of phone booths. As I hurriedly made my way to them, I suddenly stopped short, realizing that I had changed my pants before I came and had forgot to get any change or my wallet from my other pants. It was a good thought--the phone booth--although I wasn't sure just who I was going to call for help.

I came to a fuse box and got a wild idea that if I was still here until dark, I would start pulling switches and see what happened, hoping to draw someone's attention. But I couldn't see sitting here for two hours doing nothing but looking at some 76,000 plus empty seats. Besides, I had a date with the Gables at 8 that night.

I decided to go down to the gate where the truck went out, remembering there was a foot and a half opening at the top. As I climbed up the fence and squeezed through, I vowed to myself that I would, for sure, take off some of my excess accumulation lying in my mid-section, in case I ever got in this situation again.

Once over that fence, however, I looked up to see yet another fence staring at me. That's when I really felt trapped. I wasn't sure I could make it back over the first one.

I walked over to the second gateway only to discover that the opening at the top was almost half the size of the one I had just crawled through. Discouraged and out of any other "bright" ideas, I decided to just stand there until I saw someone.

Lo and behold, there was my man two minutes later. He wore a green janitor's uniform and with a jangling set of keys hanging at his side, I knew I was about to escape from my captivity. But it didn't prove quite that easy.

First he wanted to know what I was doing in there. When I told him my sad story and that I was sports editor for the State News, he said, O.K., let's see your press card. I just kind of let my jaw hang. I couldn't even show him a nickel. I was pocketless.

After assuring him I was going to write this article and that I would include him, he opened the gate. And as J.P. McCarthy's loser-of-the-day, I regrettably nominate myself.

At least MSU fans and followers can rest assure that nobody is going to break into Spartan Stadium very easily. Let's hope next year's Spartans can contain their opponents as well as the stadium contained me Wednesday.

OUR READERS' MIND

Stop political interference

To the Editor:

It seems quite apparent that Professor Sharma lost his HEW grant due to his political views and not because of the technical reason of his not having "a continuing relationship with the University."

If the University fights this issue on technical grounds alone, we believe that they will have the best chance of having Professor Sharma's grant reinstated. We feel however that while tactically this may be the best method of handling this particular situation, it would be a strategic mistake for several reasons. First of all it would perpetuate the fiction that the reasons for the denial

Sensationalism

To the Editor:

In your issue of Tuesday, May 27, there appeared an article written by Chris Mead and Denise Fortner in which they purported to evaluate the situation as they found it at Ferris State College.

This article is a very good example of sensational and irresponsible reporting where information is reported as fact, when indeed it represents merely the opinion of certain individuals. If one accepts the statements of the students interviewed by your reporters without your journalistic interpretation, then any rational person would come to quite a different conclusion than your prejudiced reporters would. It is quite apparent that the sole purpose of this article was to fan the fires of racism, rather than to carefully evaluate a most unfortunate situation.

of the grant were made on legitimate grounds and thereby place the University in a defensive posture. Second, the perpetuation of this fiction would encourage greater political interference inside the University by outside political forces due to the fact that the HEW regulations are broadly written and it would always be possible to find some technical ground to disguise the political reasons.

We would suggest that both the University Administration and the heads of the various programs such as the African and Asian Studies programs should publicly demand an end to outside political interference and the immediate reinstatement of Dr. Sharma's grant.

2 Spartan hurlers to pitch in Europe

Two pitchers from this year's MSU baseball team will be traveling overseas this weekend and could very easily face each other on the mound. Dan Bielski, Wyandotte senior, and Rick Kreuger, Grand Rapids junior, will take part in the International Tournament to be held in the Netherlands June 24-29. Bielski, top pitcher for the Spartans this spring, will be a member of the Dutch team. The Dutchmen needed a good hurler for their club and approached MSU Head Coach Danny Litwhiler for help. Litwhiler promptly picked his ace right-hander to make the trip. Bielski will probably pitch the last game of the series on the 29th. Kreuger, a junior college transfer student, was injured part of the season's end to help the Spartans. He will go with the Sullivans, a Grand Rapids team which goes to Rome and the Netherlands each year. The Sullivans have captured the tournament several times.

$200,000 EXPECTED

Med School awaits funds

Rep. William R. Copeland, chairman of the House Appropriations Subcommittee, said Thursday he anticipated his committee would restore the $200,000 appropriation for initial expansion of the MSU Medical School into a full four-year, degree-granting program.

Copeland also said there exists a possibility that an alliance may develop between the MSU Medical School and the newly-established Michigan College of Osteopathic Medicine.

A bill to provide $200,000 for the osteopathic medical school is also before the House Appropriations Committee.

Backers of the osteopathic college are seeking to connect it with a degree-granting state university in order to insure passage of its initial appropriation. A two-thirds vote is needed to appropriate money for a private school. State institutions require majority approval of their appropriations.

Copeland said he discussed the possibility of a connection with MSU with a spokesman for the osteopaths, who indicated they would have no objection to the affiliation.

Traffic Safety Center offers driving course

A non-credit driver education course is being offered by the Highway Traffic Safety Center of the College of Continuing Education.

The course, beginning Monday, is designed to provide students in the College of Continuing Education, who are learning to be driver education teachers, with students to teach.

The student who enrolls in the course will be trained by a person who is learning to be a driving instructor, under the supervision of a trained driver education instructor.

The class will meet from 12:40-2:40 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays or from 12:40-2:40 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays.

It will be taught at the driver education teacher preparation facility, by the power plant across from the married housing administration office.

The cost of the course is $15. All students must be 18-years-old or older.

Students desiring further information should call 353-1790.

committee is also considering recommending that the House write specific language into the bill authorizing MSU to have a full, degree-granting medical school.

This authorization was advocated by MSU administrators, Montgomery said, because the legislature's commitment to the full medical school would aid attempts to gain private and foundation support for the college.

Andrew D. Hunt, Dean of the College of Human Medicine, said Thursday the issue of affiliation with the osteopathic college would have to be decided by the board of trustees.

Hunt said he was pleased with the attitudes displayed by members of the House higher education appropriations subcommittee during a recent session in which he discussed MSU's Medical School plans.

"I think they understand the special contributions this school could make," he said.

Appel named consultant to Smithsonian curators

How do the stereotypes of blacks differ from past pictures of ethnic groups in America?

John J. Appel, associate professor in James Madison College and American Thought and Language, will look into this question as a Museum Research Associate at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

Appel will be on leave from the University for the 1969-70 year. During that time, he will pursue his own research and act as consultant for the Institution curators.

His present research concerns the picture of immigrant groups presented in the cartoons and photographs of the 19th century press. He hopes to collect several hundred slides illustrating the caricatures and stereotypes presented through pictures.

The Smithsonian Institution is interested in telling the story of the immigrant in America, as well as preparing exhibits on black history. Appel will serve as a source of information and ideas for the curators.

Appel's first paper concerns the stereotypes of the lower-class Irish in the 1830-90 span. He found the traits ascribed to the Irish remarkably similar to those given the Negro 60 years later.

STUDY SHOWS Typical collegiate differs from dad

By BARB PARNES
State News Staff Writer

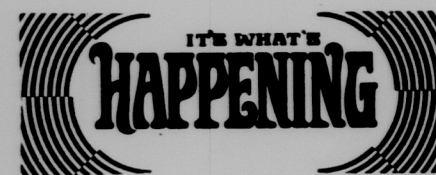

The phrase "like father, like son" is becoming more and more inaccurate lately in terms of getting a college education. Thirty per cent of the students in college come from families whose head never finished high school, a new Census Bureau study revealed.

The study, entitled "Characteristics of College Students and their Colleges," is based on the almost six million students who were enrolled in colleges throughout the United States in October 1966.

The study indicates that opportunities for American youth in higher education are increasing. It revealed that 12.4 per cent of college students dependent on parental support came from families with incomes under $5,000 a year. A different Census Bureau report released earlier this year stated that 25.3 per cent of the nation's families were in this lowest income bracket.

In addition, the recent study reported that six per cent of the students, including both family and self-supported individuals, were non-white. The earlier study showed that 10.1 per cent of American families in 1967 were non-white.

Opportunities are advancing for youth in other categories

Today is the last day of registration for an enrichment program sponsored by the Red Cedar schools. Those interested may go between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. to the Red Cedar School. The program, which will be conducted from June 23 to July 25, will be held at Spartan Village.

"Under the Yum Yum Tree," starring Jack Lemmon, will be presented by the Beal Film Group at 7 and 9 tonight and Saturday in 108 B Wells. Admission is 50 cents and IDs are not required.

The University of Man will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. Sunday in 328 Student Services Bldg. The implementation of new and expanded cooperative endeavors will be discussed.

The East Lansing chapter of the Biatra Assn. will sponsor a dance at 8 Saturday evening. Chief Koko and the "Ambassadors" Highlife Guitar Band from Biatra will be featured.

The MSU Veteran's Assn. will hold a get-together at 7:30 tonight in King Arthur's Court located at 114 Lancer Lane. Dates are welcome. For further information or directions call 487-3512.

The MSU Parachuting Club will be jumping Saturday and Sunday at Eaton Rapids. Call Bob Olson at 355-8019 for information or transportation.

The College of Education and the College of Continuing Education will sponsor a non-credit driver training course beginning Monday. Classes are scheduled from 12:40 to 2:40 on Monday and Wednesday afternoons and at the same times on Tuesdays and Thursdays. The cost of the five week program is $15; those participating must be at least 18 years of age or older. For additional information call 353-1790.

Faculty to hear retirement talk

John N. Windburne, assistant dean of student affairs for University College, will address the faculty club at a noon luncheon Tuesday in the Faculty Room of the Union.

Windburne, president of the MSU Services Cooperative Program, will talk about the present benefits for retirees and the possibility of increased benefits in the future.

besides the poor and non-whites. Sixty-three per cent of the over four million family-supported students came from families whose head never had even one year of college. This includes the 30 per cent without four years of high school.

The study went on to rate the nation's colleges on the basis of freshman aptitude scores. High ranking colleges were said to have nearly 23 per cent of the students enrolled: medium-ranked schools, 43 per cent; low-ranked schools, 16 per cent and unranked schools, 19 per cent.

Of the black students enrolled, the report said that not quite nine per cent were attending high ranked schools, 24 per cent medium ranked schools, 32 per cent low-ranked schools and 35 per cent unranked.

Besides "Shindig" and the Sixth Street Theatre, there is

Theatre group performs Sunday

Summer term has started, and people are looking for weekend excitement. Those offerings available, although not necessarily far reaching, do show possibilities.

The Sixth Street Theatre, a sort of traveling living-theatre group, will be doing its thing at various times and places this weekend around campus. The only scheduled performance of its repertoire of political plays is for 1:00 p.m. Sunday in the park behind the East Lansing Bus Depot. All performances are free, and sound as though they may be well worth seeing.

A "Summer Shindig" has been planned for Saturday, beginning at 10:30 a.m. with guided bus tours of the campus. This event is open only to freshmen living in Snyder-Phillips Halls. Peace talks have been staged with American connivance.

 "Only with a peace Cabinet can we have serious talks leading to a peaceful solution." Tho said. "Whoever replaced the Thieu Administration must be prepared to negotiate peace. If the new government continues the same oppressive dictatorial and warlike policies, then that would not represent any change at all."
 Some American and South Vietnamese officials believe Hanoi's only real objective at the peace talks is the overthrow of the Thieu regime and that the repeated demands for "immediate unconditional withdrawal" of American forces are made largely for propaganda purposes.

But he denied Hanoi was stalling in the present four-way conference because of the presence of the Saigon delegation. "Our presence here does not mean that we recognize the Saigon administration," he said. "But we agreed to a four-sided conference and we remain ready to negotiate a peaceful solution in that framework."
 He told a questioner that the Viet Cong never would accept United Nations or other international control of free elections in South Vietnam.
 "Obviously the provisional revolutionary government will never accept elections run by the present Saigon administration," he said, "nor by the United Nations or any other international body. The elections are an internal affair to be settled by Vietnamese among themselves."
 In the conference session, the United States pressed North Vietnam repeatedly and fruitlessly for a direct commitment to withdraw its troops from South Vietnam.

Clifford

 article in the quarterly Foreign Affairs and calling for removal of all U.S. troops from the war zone by the end of 1970.
 Clifford says that policy means heavy U.S. casualties, Nixon Administration leaders say casualties would be higher if the enemy was allowed to seize the initiative and mount offensives unimpeded.
 There is reason to believe Clifford did not back President Lyndon B. Johnson's decision last fall ordering Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, the U.S. commander, to maintain ground operations against the enemy, including "spoiling" actions aimed at derailing enemy offensive preparations.
 Johnson issued these instructions even as he ended the U.S. bombing of North Vietnam.
 Clifford was anxious, above all else, to get the bombing stopped and productive peace negotiations moving.

Ann Arbor

 Early Wednesday, protest leaders attending an afternoon rally called for a confrontation with the police, but their demands were shouted down at the rally on the campus.
 Gov. Milliken said in reference to the Ann Arbor disturbances, "I think the law should be upheld and if it is violated, it should not be allowed."
 He said he is pleased that the main university student body is taking a "negative" view of the demonstrations.
 "It's very clearly an effort on the part of a small number of individuals to bring about a confrontation," he added.
 A charge of unfair police treatment was made by Nicholas Bertoni, 28, who was arrested Tuesday night on a rioting charge.
 Bertoni said his bond was posted Wednesday but deputies at the Washtenaw County jail refused to release him until they had shaved off his beard and most of his hair.

AWARDED REDUCTIONS

Tenants Union wins case

By DELORES MAJOR
 State News Staff Writer
 A U.S. Court of Appeals decision has resulted in a minor victory for the Tenants Union strike near the U-M campus in Ann Arbor, where 80 out of 90 tenants facing eviction suits were awarded reductions in back rent payments by District Judge Pieter G.V. Thomassen.
 Fred Arnstein, member of the rent strike steering committee, said that the Tenants Union was generally satisfied with the court's decision.
 "We almost always got reductions, although they were not always what the tenants had hoped for," he said.
 "In cases where there was a basis for the tenants' complaints, there were reductions. And in cases where the complaints were spurious, there were no reductions," Arnstein continued.
 The appeals court ruling gives broad protection to a Washington, D.C., rent strike, and tactics disputed by tenants and landlords there.
 "The decision deals directly with a point (William) Barese (attorney for the landlords) has made in his two arguments—that because there is a multiplicity of suits, damages would not be collectable," Dale Berry, a member of the rent strike steering committee, said.
 "This takes care of his multiplicity argument."
 Barese has refused to comment.
 The Appeals Court ruling implies that the solution is for the landlords to bring suits against the individual tenants.

He said that most of the striking tenants complained of violations of city building codes.
 "The most common of these are insufficient garbage facilities, inadequate heating, sewage difficulties, lack of fire escapes and inadequate fireproofing in the furnace rooms," he said.
 Schragger said that since the four-month strike began, many of the landlords have improved maintenance responsibilities for their tenants.
 He attributed this to city officials who sent notices to the landlords telling them to correct building code violations.
 "The landlords just sit there until they are forced to do something by the city," Schragger said.
 "A lot of this involves the political ideas of the strike. Many of the landlords try to dissuade their tenants from striking by making the needed repairs," he said.
 Schragger said that settling the problems of the Ann Arbor strike will not dissolve the Tenants Union there.
 "Hopefully we can help organize other strikes, in other places that have the same problems we do," he said.

Cantlon publishes ecological views

The implication of man's tendency to allow environmental degradation to poison natural systems is discussed by an MSU ecologist in the latest issue of MSU's Centennial Review.
 "An Ecologist looks at His Environment," by John E. Cantlon, professor of botany and plant pathology, is the first article in the spring issue of the quarterly publication.
 Cantlon said the ecologist's training and research nurture a profound respect for the elegance and complexity of the complex systems of plants, animals and their energy sources.
 "A stressed life-support system for man," Cantlon said, "is surely bound to be a lethal state for some of the earth's more defenseless and delicate species."
 The safety margin in such a system ought to be as great as in any other system.

SDS convention split

 About one-third of the audience applauded as Rossen asked the SDS members to follow the tradition of such revolutionary war heroes as Thomas Paine, while the rest of the SDS members booed.
 "SDS is the only real hope of gathering American radicals together to change this sick and corrupt society. You are our only hope for a world of socialism, humanism and freedom," Rossen said.
 "Avoid the mistakes of the old left, and there were many, or we will wind up where they wound up—nowhere."
 The opposition to Rossen's speech came from the PL party, which is engaged in a power struggle with members who have less militant ideas within the SDS.
 Although these so-called new left and Old Left want to organize the working class, and both say they are Marxists-Leninists and backers of Mao, there remain key differences.
 Several of these differences include how to approach the working class, the women's liberation question, and the radical issue.
 "I feel a definite polarization coming between the PL and the WSA on several issues," Tim McCarthy, convention chairman, said.
 PL, with large contingents from Harvard University and the University of California at Berkeley, feels that the working class question supercedes all others.
 The opposition to the PL led by the national office in Chicago feels that women's and black liberation issues are of key importance.

Members of other factions, including the Black Panthers, are also involved in the convention, which is the largest annual convention in the seven-year history of SDS.
 Black Panther-SDS coalition Cantus Winston, Black Panther organizer, said he sees a total coalition coming between the Black Panther party and the SDS.
 "At this convention, we're gonna get our thing together (Black Panthers and SDS) and we're gonna let the people know that we're together," Winston said.
 "We're here to help our brothers regardless of the color of their skin. We're not here looking for trouble, but if the pigs harass us, we'll follow through, brother."
 Tighter security measures have been taken because of several bomb scares at the headquarters on Madison Street on Chicago's South side.
 Other police with night-powered photographic equipment were stationed in the third floor of Haven Elementary School, across the street from the Coliseum. Policemen interviewed by reporters took "know-nothing" attitudes.
