Californians extend credit for foodstuffs

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) -- Budgetless state officials scratched around Wednesday for ways to acquire supplies while California assemblymen voted to honor any state debts incurred during the legislature's budget deadlock.

The assembly, without opposition, sent a resolution to the Senate stating that the legislature intends:

"By whatever means may be necessary, to ensure that the government of the State of California honors all valid claims against the state, performs all contracts and fulfills any other obligations, and to ensure that the salaries of all officers and employees of the state will not be reduced by reason of any delay in the passage of the budget act of 1969."

The resolution was adopted a few hours after state mental hospitals were given orders to spend no more money during the fiscal deadlock, but to rely on the expectation merchants will accept the state on good faith so an estimated 28,000 patients can be cared for.

Officials estimated nonperishable food supplies would last up to a month, and that stocks of some fresh foods would last a week.

But one spokesman said, "We have children who, if they don't have milk, don't live... that's all the food they take."

Dr. James V. Lowry, state Mental Hygiene director, promised, "we will do everything within our authority to see that our patients are cared for."

But the budget crisis left Lowry and other department heads without the power to approve new expenses for such things as food and medicine.

Democrats blocked passage of Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan's proposed $6.37 billion state budget, holding out for an increased school aid. The state began the new fiscal year at 12:01 a.m. Tuesday with no authority to pay its bills. While Republicans have a 41-39 edge, a two-third vote is needed for budget passage.

Andrew G. Robertson, Lowry's chief deputy, advised the 13 state hospital superintendents "to hire no people, enter no new contracts and expend no additional funds."

GRAND RAPIDS (AP)--Incidents of firebombing and rock-throwing erupted again in Grand Rapids Tuesday night, and police reported that 12 cases of arson caused more than $22,000 damage.

Police said the disturbances spread from the predominantly Negro Southeast Side, scene of violence on Monday night, into portions of the city's Southwestern sector.

Twenty-eight persons were arrested. The worst fire damage occurred at the Furniture City Dowel Co., which had $6,000 damage done to its building and $2,000 to its contents.

Several homes were fire-bombed in the Southeast sector and two of those blazes caused nearly $3,700 damage each, firemen said.

Bargaining progress slow in MSU union local talks

By MARION NOWAK State News Staff Writer

Mediation between MSU's local 1585 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) and University management ended again Tuesday with little progress.

The University's contract with the union expired at midnight Monday. Monday afternoon bargaining attempts resulted only in a labor-management agreement to extend the old contract for 15 days while talks continued.

"Nothing noticeable happened during the mediation session," Clair Otis of the AFSCME said. "We will meet again next Tuesday with mediation, and committees on both sides are meeting today separately in conferences."

"Some progress was made," Leonard H. Glander, director of the personnel center and MSU management negotiator, stated, "but I'm sure much more will probably be made next Tuesday."

"Their demands are unrealistic," he added. "I just don't see any way we could meet those demands for wage increases."

"The University has offered what amounts to 20 cents per hour," Robert C. Grosvenor, president of local 1585 said of management statements, "and we want an average of 75 cents per hour across the board. The management offers are, he said, "totally inadequate."

Eight other colleges in Michigan are similarly embroiled in labor-management disputes over expired AFSCME contracts.

Senate authorizes osteopathic school; affiliation pending

By STEVE WATERBURY State News Staff Writer

The Senate passed a bill Tuesday night authorizing the creation of a Michigan college of osteopathic medicine and sent the measure to the House for concurrence.

The bill provides for the State Board of Education to determine which state institution of higher education the college will be affiliated with, but does not authorize the board to determine the location of the school, as previously considered bills provided.

State Sen. Raymond D. Dzendel, D-Detroit, said the location of the college has already been determined.

"The college is in Pontiac, where it was started," Dzendel said.

Construction has already begun on a privately financed osteopathic college in Pontiac, where classes are scheduled to begin in the fall.

Consideration had previously been given to the possibility of an osteopathic school being located at whichever state institution it becomes affiliated with.

ABANDONED SCALE

Trustee cites legislature in forcing tuition shuffle

By MARILYN PATTERSON State News Staff Writer

Don Stevens, chairman of the board of trustees, said Wednesday that the trustees abandoned the sliding scale tuition program in May "under pressure from the state legislature."

Just before the May trustees meeting, he said, the Senate reduced the MSU budget by $500,000; a bill was introduced into the House which would prohibit the granting of scholarships to students of universities using the sliding scale if the amount of the scholarship was used in determining the amount of the tuition charged.

What this means, Stevens said, is that the legislature would pay only the minimum tuition for state-supported scholarships.

Under the sliding scale, students of families with incomes of $18,400 paid the maximum tuition, $552 per year. Students of families with lower incomes could apply for a tuition reduction of up to $181.

The House bill, Stevens said, would have the state pay $369, or the minimum tuition for full-tuition, state-supported scholarships.

"We thought," he said, "that they should pay the average tuition, which is $492. The $123 discrepancy between the minimum and the average tuition would have to be made up by the University. Multiply that by the 3,500 students here and at Oakland who are on full-tuition scholarships and it runs into a lot of money."

Rep. Vincent Pettipren, D-Westland, chairman of the House Committee on Colleges and Universities, said that the legislators "were not opposed to the sliding scale plan but to the fact that children who got state scholarships were eliminated from getting any breaks on the scale."

COMMUNIST BLOC VIEWED

State Dept. examines U.S. trading policies

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The whole question of trade with Communist nations is coming under new State Dept. scrutiny in the light of President Nixon's forthcoming visit to Romania.

For one question the President will surely be asked in Bucharest is: "What will you do to allow us to sell more to you and buy more from you in the future?"

If Nixon wants them, there are two suggestions percolating through the working ranks of the State Dept., although the attitude of Secretary William P. Rogers remains, so far, unknown.

--Resurrection of some form of the Johnson administration's East-West Trade Act, authorizing the President to grant most-favored-nation tariff treatment to eastern European countries, including Romania.

--Reversal of the National Security Council's (NSC) May 21 decision--reached before Nixon decided to become the first U.S. president to cross through the Iron Curtain since World War II--to ask Congress to continue the restrictions of the Export Control Act, which limits exports to Communist countries.

If Nixon agrees to either or both of these recommendations, he would at least be in a position to tell Romanian leaders that his administration will attempt to build new trade bridges with that country.

Most officials regard the May 21 Security Council decision as unfortunate. It is no secret that the State Dept. proposed that cold war limitations of exports to the European Communist countries be relaxed, but representatives of the department found themselves alone in the council.

The Defense Dept. was against relaxation and Commerce and Treasury were luke-warm--but the decisive factor was the marked disinterest shown by the White House, despite the argument that this country's principal allies trade much more freely with Eastern Europe than does the United States.

The NSC meeting dealt with the issue because the act expired on June 30, and some recommendations to Congress had to be made. All other questions of trade with Communist countries were discussed briefly at the same meeting, including the most important the granting of low tariffs to imports from such countries. It was agreed to shelve all of them.

No justice for whitey when Hate throws brick

By DAVID BASSETT State News Staff Writer

He was black. His hair was natural, and it seemed to glisten in the light from a nearby street lamp. I guess he was about 19 or 20, but his age really didn't matter at the time. The wire-rimmed glasses he was wearing were cocked on the bridge of his ebony nose.

At the instant his mouth emitted the first syllable, I noticed that his left hand was dangling in back of him. His wrist appeared to be tilted upward, but my stare was interrupted when I heard him saying, "You're on the wrong side of the street, man."

What side?

I thought for a moment. The phrase "I'm on your side, brother" immediately popped into my head from nowhere. I started to say it, but stopped, was I really on his side, or was I just a bored college newspaper reporter lusty for a story?

By this time, my walking had taken me about 10 yards down the street. I started thinking again, but suddenly noticed that the passerby's footsteps had stopped.

Hate weapon

I turned around and immediately my eyes were drawn to the object he was holding in his left hand: a brick.

He was tall, broad-shouldered and clutching a brick.

I couldn't see anyone in front of me, and the next street lamp was only a short distance away.

I walked away from him.

News Commentary

A little further on, I noticed a house with a light on. The light was rather dim, but I could make out the outline of a rectangular object pressed against the glass. As I approached, I could discern the words "Soul Brother" scrawled crudely on a piece of white poster-board.

Wrong side

It then occurred to me what the stranger who had passed me had meant when he said that I was on the wrong side of the street. Suddenly I realized what guitarist Mike Bloomfield had meant when he said, "Hell, man, I'm Jewish, I'm no Son House. I'm a blues man, but I'm still a white blues man."

Before being aware of where I was, I noticed a group of black people sitting and standing on a curb. I tried to keep my eyes looking straight ahead, but I couldn't help noticing a few members of the group. Most appeared to be in their late teens or early 20's, but I think some were a bit older.

No kind word

"Git outa here, honkey," came hurtling towards me in what turned out to be an endless torrent of obscene epithets.

I wanted to say something, but nothing would come out. I again wanted to say "I'm on your side" but I couldn't. I wanted to tell them that I was only interested in reporting the truth to the public. I knew that they couldn't dig the hassle the cops were always laying on them much longer, and I wanted to tell them that I was in sympathy with their cause.

But how do you explain that to someone with hate in his eyes and a brick in his hands, someone who has been discriminated against, spat on, laughed at, called "lazy" because whites provided him with an education of inferior quality, called "boy" when he was a man of 30, called "monkey" because he was created with a tail and a long hair?

"Where ya goin', man?" a black youth with closely-cropped hair demanded. "Ya know, we can't dig no whiteys here. You gotta be crazy comin' down here and messin' with us."

"I only wanna find out what's happenin' here," I said. "If the cops are messin' on ya, I want people to know about it."

"Man," he shouted. "You just wanna come down here an' cause some trouble and have everybody say that us black people done it."

"You white honkeys are all the same. You pay my old man $70 for washin' dishes seven days a week. You make my mamma scrub floors until her knuckles and knees bleed, and then toss a couple dollars at her."

Crank calls upset missing girl's kin

By MARION NOWAK
State News Staff Writer

About the only concrete thing to turn up in the disappearance of an East Lansing girl from an Ann Arbor mental hospital has been a profusion of crank calls.

The calls have been made to the home of the parents of Carolyn Louise Foote, 16, who was reported missing to the Washtenaw County Sheriff's Office from Mercy Wood Hospital June 9.

"Some want to pray for your soul," William D. Foote, the girl's father, said. "Some want to warn us that the funeral home will take us if we don't watch out, and some tell us you can't always find the bodies."

"This is the worst thing that's happened to us. I don't know how many people go through this type of thing," he added. "People think they're being helpful, but they should call the authorities—and stop torturing the parents."

"Nothing concrete," in the way of useful clues, "has turned up at all," Detective Stanley Bordin, commanding officer of the detective bureau of Washtenaw County, said Wednesday.

"We've heard nothing new," Foote agreed. "There's no sign of her."

Miss Foote is 5 feet 2 inches tall, 103 pounds, with blue eyes and shoulder-length brown hair.

Dr. Richard D. Watkins, her physician at Mercy Wood Hospital, believes she "eloped" from the hospital with a second person.

Dr. Watkins received a postcard from the girl two weeks after her disappearance, post-marked from Flint.

"I checked that out," Foote said. "I spent several days in Flint, and followed other tips the police have received, but there's been no indication of her presence anywhere."

Miss Foote was at the privately operated hospital in Ann Arbor for observation and testing, her mother said. Mrs. Foote is an MSU sophomore. Foote is an MSU graduate working in the Lansing area.

A local bulletin concerning the disappearance was issued on June 9 in Washtenaw County. A statewide bulletin was issued by the State Police on June 21 after the Footes visited the hospital and notified the state police.

Police doubt there is any connection between Miss Foote's "elopement" and the recent rash of coed murders in the Ann Arbor area.

Welsh girls swoon over Bonny Charlie

FISHGUARD, Wales (AP)—Prince Charles charmed his way through wildest Wales Wednesday amid bomb scares—but no bombs.

Sheep were left to fend for themselves in the lush green hills while farmers and their families flocked into mountain villages to cheer the new Prince of Wales, invested Tuesday at Caernarvon.

It was the first day of a meet-the-people tour which took the prince from the royal yacht Britannia, anchored off the Isle of Anglesey, through the most scenically beautiful parts of his domain.

There were plenty of cheers and few signs of any hostility along the way.

The letters FWA—Free Wales Army—registered mute protest in painted signs on roadside rocks and walls. But there was no personal reference to Charles.

One sign read: "Caution, revolution in progress."

Welsh nationalists want separation from Britain.

A bomb scare closed a lonely mountain road in the Gwydor Forest near the famed beauty spot of Betws-Y-Coed minutes before the prince was due to drive past.

Wires had been spotted leading from a telegraph pole to a manhole in the road. Bomb disposal experts were summoned, but no bomb was there.

"We saw lots of wires but no device," an officer said.

Further along the road a biscuit tin caused another scare. Security men found it filled with pebbles.

What really hampered the royal progress through Wales was the huge build-up of summer vacation traffic. Jams stretched all the way from Caernarvon to Llandudno, the first town the prince visited.

Mixed choirs struck up a rousing chorus each time the prince appeared. They sang "Men of Harlech," "Land of My Fathers," and "God Bless the Prince of Wales."

Several times the prince broke from his security guard to make handshaking forays into the crowd.

The girls like him.

"I think he's gorgeous," was the verdict of 22-year-old Laurwena Davies of the slate-quarrying town of Blaenau Ffestiniog.

"He's a smasher. I was overwhelmed," echoed 18-year-old Meryl Parry. At Llanrwst, the prince chatted with girls from the Young Farmer's Club.

"You don't look like farmers to me," he told dark-haired Elizabeth Jones, 19, and red-haired Anwen Hughes, 25.

"You look like very charming dairy maids."

Economist criticizes red alliance

VIENNA (AP)—In an unusually sharp attack on the Communist bloc Council of Mutual Economic Assistance - COMECON—a Hungarian economist called Wednesday for greater liberalization within the alliance.

He described the East European economic group as outdated and inefficient.

Finance Minister Peter Valye in a speech before the Hungarian Parliament reported by the Hungarian news agency MTI, declared:

"As we Hungarians see it, the methods, forms of organization and measures taken so far no longer meet present day needs."

He said "this is the reason why cooperation has slowed down and the growth rate between member countries has not reached the desired level."

Valye declared: "Between Socialist countries the barriers should be removed which exist due to the clearance and currency system that can no longer be called up to date."

"Liberalization of trade," he said, "should be achieved through more flexible methods."

SENATE SEAT SOUGHT? Finch resignation rumored

WASHINGTON (AP)—Robert H. Finch's vigorous insistence that he has a "four-year commitment" as secretary of health, education and welfare has been unable to squelch speculation that he will resign to run for the Senate from California.

Rumors to that effect were widespread before Finch's dramatic defeat last week in his fight to get White House backing for his choice of Dr. John H. Knowles as the nation's top health officer.

With that political setback, in itself enough to start or give impetus to rumors that an official is on his way out, came an indication that Finch has active opposition inside the White House.

In a front-page story over the weekend, the Detroit Free Press reported from Washington that a "White House source" had said flatly that Finch would resign. Leaks like that usually mean someone at the White House wants Finch to resign and may be working hard to see that he does.

"It kind of gives you the impression that someone over there doesn't like us very much, doesn't it?" said a Finch aide when asked about the report.

Finch himself was asked several times during a weekend news conference if he planned to resign and run for the Senate.

"This is a four-year commitment I have made here," he said, repeating a phrase he has used a number of times to counter speculation about his future.

But at the same time, he never really got around to flatly denying that he might have an eye on the seat now held by Republican George Murphy.

Murphy, Finch said, "has announced he is going to be a candidate and I am going to support him and that is my position."

The question is, will Murphy change his mind about seeking re-election next year? There's a widespread belief on Capitol Hill that he might. Those who think so point to his age—67 on Friday—and to his inability to speak in little more than a hoarse whisper as a result of an operation to remove a tumor from his larynx.

These sources believe that Murphy may step aside for Finch, who has observed that a Senate seat is "the best job in the world." Among other things, Finch managed the senator's 1964 campaign and the two are close personal friends.

Finch came to Washington with the reputation of being President Nixon's closest confidant and friend in the Cabinet. That reputation suffered substantially when Finch, twice a campaign manager for Nixon, couldn't beat down the opposition of Senate minority leader Everett M. Dirksen and the American Medical Association to his selection of Knowles as an assistant HEW secretary is beyond question.

Demonstrations blamed for low alumni donations

By THOMAS PETERS

The MSU Alumni Association and students indirectly are being hurt by protests and demonstrations on campus, an association official warned Tuesday.

Robert E. Shackleton, director of development, said that adverse reaction from some of the alumni is resulting in reduced or suspended contributions.

"By not contributing to the fund," Shackleton explained, "alumni only hurt the greater portion of students who are here to gain an education."

He said that alumni donations provide student scholarships, faculty awards and educational facilities for various colleges within the university.

Over 17,000 alumni contributed $936,000 to MSU in 1968. This was 20 per cent less than the record $1.37 million given in 1967. Shackleton said that although gifts in 1967 included a single donation of $350,000, the 1968 total was still down 6 per cent due to alumni reaction to the ability-to-pay tuition plan. The SDS convention here, the black athletes' protest and other demonstrations on campus.

"Funding so far this year has matched totals for the same periods in 1968," Shackleton said.

"In the first few weeks following such events as the SDS convention and the Wilson Hall cafeteria take-over, we were receiving about 50 letters a day from irate alumni," he noted. "But while we were receiving about 50 we have had set-backs in our funding due to events on campus, we have only lost 800 members from the 17,000 member association."

Shackleton said that the small reduction in contributions and membership was due partly to the younger age of the average alumnus.

"Because more of our alumni are younger, they are more involved, aware and understanding of the problems of today's campus," he said.

Residents tremble as 9 earthquakes rip Italian coast

ROME (AP)—Nine quakes shook a coastal area north of Rome Wednesday and hundreds of residents were spending the night outdoors fearing new shocks. Light damage was reported.

The quakes ripped through the rolling countryside from ancient Civitavecchia on the Tyrrhenian Sea to Lake Bracciano, 15 miles east of the sea.

Residents of Civitavecchia streamed from their homes in panic and fled to the beaches. There they encamped alongside bikini sun bathers.

Hardest hit was the town of Tolfa, midway between the sea and the lake. Its entire population of 5,000 fled to the countryside as the quakes rattled walls and sent cracks up old buildings.

A 670-year-old castle in Tolfa was badly cracked. Rescuers entered the castle and carried out the Marchioness Maria Pia Lepri, who had been sick in bed.

Tremors were felt within 17 miles of Rome.

Communist sources said Wednesday the Soviet Union plans to launch an unmanned moon probe July 10 that will attempt to scoop up a sample of moon soil and return it to earth.

The experiment, if successful, would precede by six days the American Apollo shot designed to land two men on the moon.

The report came as Col. Frank Borman, the first astronaut to visit the Soviet Union, arrived in Moscow and was met by three Soviet cosmonauts--German Titov, Konstantin Feoktistov and Georgi Beregevoi.

Israeli and Egyptian jets battled over the Gulf of Suez Wednesday hours after Israeli commandos raided three Egyptian shore installations. The two sides also traded heavy artillery fire along the Suez Canal.

Israeli military spokesmen claimed four Soviet-made MIG 21s were destroyed in the dogfight and Egypt said two Israeli French-built Mirage jets were downed. Neither side admitted losses in the heaviest air fight since the end of the six-day war in 1967.

The first supply convoy to get through in eight days reached Ben Het Wednesday, and an allied commander whose troops helped break the siege claimed that "the enemy is defeated completely."

Other officers warned, however, that the Communist command could launch a new attack at any time against the Special Forces camp.

National News

Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Wednesday the drop-off in Vietnam fighting and in enemy infiltration, if it continues, could speed up the withdrawal of U.S. troops.

"During the last week we have had the lowest level of combat activity in Vietnam for a long time," Rogers said.

Pickets continued to march at the Charleston, S.C., County Hospital Wednesday, as about 100 former strikers returned to their jobs at the Medical University of South Carolina Hospital.

Civil rights leaders and county officials failed to reach an agreement Wednesday afternoon in the County Hospital strike, which has entered its 14th week.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee approved Wednesday a resolution that could be a step toward recognition of Communist China.

The measure would express the sentiment of the Senate that U.S. recognition of a foreign government and an exchange of diplomats "does not imply that the government of the United States necessarily approves of the form, ideology or policies of that government."

The famed old Wabash Cannonball will continue to run between Detroit and St. Louis, at least for another year, because of "great public demand," the Interstate Commerce Commission ruled Wednesday.

The commission rejected a request by Norfolk and Western Railway to discontinue the run because of revenue losses.

Any violation of the law at weekly hard rock concerts in Ann Arbor will be handled by Washtenaw County sheriff's deputies if city police do not respond, Sheriff Douglas Harvey said.

Harvey said his department would not tolerate any lawbreaking at the concerts, sponsored by Trans-Love Energies. He was especially critical of the lack of action taken against alleged violators at a rock concert this past Sunday in West Park.

Secret peace talks spur debate

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S. Dak., said Wednesday that a secret session with Communist negotiators in Paris convinced him that the United States must start a "systematic withdrawal" of troops and quit supporting the Thieu regime in Saigon if it hopes to end the Vietnam war.

McGovern sparked a new round of Senate criticism of Nixon Administration Vietnam policy with his report on a 10-hour private meeting he had with North Vietnamese and Viet Cong negotiators in the French capital.

"So long as we cling to our military policy of maximum pressure and our political embrace of General Thieu," McGovern told the Senate, "the negotiations in Paris are a sham and a delusion."

McGovern discussed the May 23 talks in Paris, which he said were conducted with the approval of the State Dept., and chief U.S. negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge, and told reporters at a pre-speech briefing, "It fortified the views I have held previously."

Secretary of State William P. Rogers, who was asked about McGovern's speech before it was delivered, declined comment on grounds he had not heard it.

Leading war critics, such as Chairman J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, rose to praise McGovern and to protest lack of progress toward peace by the administration.

In addition, Fulbright, in two Senate speeches and in talking to newsmen, denounced as "especially offensive" a speech Tuesday night in which Vice President Spiro T. Agnew lumped Senate critics and former Johnson administration aides among those whose "sincere opposition is undermining our negotiations for peace and prolonging the war."

"It comes from one with so little background of what he is talking about," Fulbright said.

On the Senate floor, Fulbright suggested that since President Nixon's war policy seems to be the same as former President Lyndon B. Johnson's and candidate Nixon criticized that policy, the President himself "could be classed, as a critic of Nixon's war policy."

Church said, "We have waited for some indication of a substantial change in the policy that led us into this morass."

"I too have failed to detect such a change," he added.

Noting Nixon's comments at his June 19 news conference in which he expressed a hope that U.S. combat troops could be withdrawn from Vietnam by the end of 1970, the Idaho Democrat said "if his objection is to spread confusion both within the country and throughout the world, I say he has succeeded."

McGovern told reporters that he had delayed disclosure of his Paris meetings "to give the administration a chance to react" to his report of his discussions.

"I get the feeling that very little is happening in Paris," he said.

McGovern made a two-day trip to Paris after attending an interdenominational church conference on racism in London, for which he was chairman. He revealed afterward only that he had conferred with the American side in Paris. Except for saying then "things aren't moving very fast" the senator had said nothing further until Wednesday.

He said one reason behind his trip was to inquire about the fate of a constituent, Capt. Sam Fantle Jr. of Sioux Falls, who was shot down over North Vietnam many months ago. They promised to look into this, McGovern said, but he has heard nothing since.

The senator's conference was arranged by Prof. George M. Kahin of Cornell University, a longtime war critic who is a friend of the North Vietnamese delegates.

Before he met the Hanoi and Viet Cong representatives, McGovern said he conferred with Lodge. "He discouraged me in no way," the senator said.

APOLLO REHEARSAL

Leak slows mock launch

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) -- A launch crew repaired a leaky fuel valve Wednesday and successfully completed a countdown rehearsal to keep America's man on the moon adventure moving on schedule toward a July 16 liftoff.

Simulating launch day with the 363-foot-tall Saturn 5 rocket and Apollo 11 moonship fully fueled on its pad, project officials counted down to a make-believe blastoff at 12:51 p.m., more than three hours later than planned because of the valve problem.

Despite the difficulty, the 5-1 2 day test was the smoothest countdown rehearsal ever conducted with a Saturn 5-Apollo rocket. If Wednesday had been the actual launch day, Apollo 11 would have blasted off with more than one hour to spare before the moon would have moved out of range as a target from Cape Kennedy.

A hold in the countdown was called just 1 hour, 50 minutes from the planned simulated lift-off time.

A valve in the system that replenishes liquid hydrogen fuel in the Saturn 5's upper stage was leaking. Project officials dispatched a four-man crew to the site, located at the 200-foot level of the rocket's service tower.

The technicians tightened the valve and sealed the leak, but not before 3 hours and 18 minutes were lost.

An additional one-minute delay occurred just 3 minutes and 15 seconds away from the mock liftoff to allow time for an engine chamber in the Saturn 5's second stage to be chilled to the proper temperature.

For safety reasons, Apollo 11 astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins did not participate in the exercise. They plan to enter their moonship Thursday, after fuels are unloaded from the rocket. Then they will rehearse the final hours of the countdown and launch.

If all goes well, they will blast off from Cape Kennedy at 9:32 a.m. July 16 and swing into moon orbit at 1:20 p.m. July 19.

The next day, Armstrong and Aldrin will crawl into a lunar module landing craft attached to the command ship's nose, separate from the mother ship piloted alone by Collins and land on the lunar surface at 4:23 p.m.

Air Force reveals loss of oil, gas in Vietnam

WASHINGTON (AP) -- A complex system to keep track of gas and oil sent to U.S. forces in Vietnam broke down in 1967, says a private report by Pentagon auditors, leaving the Air Force unable to account for $21 million in petroleum.

The report, which has never been made public, outlined dozens of management practices it branded as faulty. It indicated they have resulted in other large losses to the government, but gave no figures.

Prepared last year by a nine-man Joint Petroleum Technical Assistance Team, the report blamed lack of centralized, one-service control, negligence and the rigors of war for failure of the system.

Last January, the General Accounting Office charged that a similar breakdown of the petroleum accounting system in Thailand had created circumstances under which millions of gallons of petroleum products were stolen from U.S. bases.

The GAO investigation was requested by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., who now has asked Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird for a copy of the Vietnam report by the Pentagon investigators. The report has been in Defense Dept. files since the one-site investigation was concluded in January 1968.

Congressional wives veto slim welfare food budget

WASHINGTON (AP)--Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, ate a peanut butter sandwich and a carrot under the crystal chandeliers of the Senate.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., had hot dogs for dinner at home for three straight nights.

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., had nothing but biscuits with water in prospect for Wednesday night dinner. His wife said she had run completely out of money allotted for food.

The wives made their reports Wednesday at a news conference on the last day of a week of buying food for their families on a welfare budget.

The families of a half-dozen members of the Senate and House tried it out under a program sponsored by the National Welfare Rights Organization, which is campaigning for a guaranteed adequate income instead of patchwork food programs for the needy. It says a guaranteed income of $5,500 a year would be adequate for a family of four.

"What we learned was how bland, tasteless, monotonous and uninteresting the food was --and I'm hungry," Mrs. Mondale said.

"That's all I've been thinking about for a week is getting something more to eat. And besides, I've gained two pounds."

The wives said they went in heavily for bread, rice, noodles and other starches to stretch things. Peanut butter, spaghetti and hot dogs were frequent items on the menus. They missed good lean meat, fresh fruits and ice cream.

"I think you learn the value of pennies," Mrs. Church said. She said she spent half a day each day planning what to buy and where to shop, adding, "I'm a good cook, but terrible at mathematics."

Mrs. Eagleton said "we survived" but more important was the lack of nutritional foods that cost too much.

"How do you send your children to school with empty stomachs?" she asked.

The American dream ... the American way

We are the children of affluence. Bathed in wealth, swaddled in luxury and wrapped in a cloak of sufficiency.

We never knew Pearl Harbor, the meaning of liberty so often taken for granted suddenly challenged by an obscure, foreign enemy. For us there never was a depression, nor the cold, desolate bread lines, save in memories that have savored more the comforts of suburban America than the windy dust bowl of the Kansas plains.

We did not stand beside a creaky kitchen table where the scratchy family radio echoed the voice of Franklin Roosevelt admonishing his people that they had nothing to fear but fear itself.

We have heard only the tarnished recordings. They may have stirred the imagination, but they blurred reality.

The world you have bequeathed us is of a different breed than the poverty covered devastation your forefathers handed you. We will never stand in line, huddled beneath a thin, worn frock, hoping only for a few hours work on the waterfront so that we might feed our children.

We were touched by fate with a gentler hand, perhaps more understanding, but still not perfect.

You have told us that our "good life" was the product of your sweat and toil, a grimacing pain we would never know.

And we believed you. Yet we stood in blank astonishment when the immense wealth accumulated in this vast, rich country was denied to a people whose only difference is the tint of their skin. We felt the pain an impoverished mother feels when she has not the milk to feed her infant son. That is of our time, and our world. It is too monstrous, too gross for us to turn a head and pacify ourselves with the great luxuries we've hoarded from the rest of our brothers.

You've shown us the bountiful resources that cover this land from Maine to California; her sparkling waters and towering timberland, a wealth of minerals hidden beneath the richness of coal black farm land. But you turned your back when the land was raped and the waters darkened with the poison from your industries. We could not understand your incomprehension of the plunder you cast upon a once fertile, proud America.

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776. The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America.

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a solemn appeal to the Supreme Judge of the world is made for the rectitude of their intentions. We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness. That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. That the Declaration of Independence of the United States of America is hereby declared to be the act of the people of the United States, and that the same shall be held sacred and inviolable.

We have not known the pain and agony of death in a blitzkrieg over Berlin, but we have known a different pain. We watched as you sent us to a foreign, distant land while we baffled at your reasoning for the bloodshed you cast upon a people you neither knew, nor understood. You have brought over 30,000 of us home from this battleground in six-foot plastic bags.

You left us a proud heritage, far greater than that of any land, or any time before us. You gave us a country founded on the dreams and aspirations of a thousand years of mankind's toil. The freedom to think, to expound, to enjoy life in its fullest have all been passed to us because of your efforts, and of those who came before you.

You do not understand when we criticize the institutions, the means and goals for which you are now striving. You see it only as a repudiation of the principles and proud history that you have fought so hard to protect. You have not seen that we do not wish to tear down that heritage, to destroy those principles, but only to strengthen them, extend their boundaries outward until they embrace all within our shores.

We are not unpatriotic because we have not blindly followed the example you have set. We are not ungrateful because we do not grovel in the past. We choose to live in the present, and seeing the conditions before us we can do nothing but try our hand at correcting the wrongs of 200 years. We have not forgotten the lessons you taught us, but rather have applied them to the gut reality as we perceive it.

Now it is our time. A time for questions, for new ideals. A time for the end of injustices that have become institutionalized. Perhaps it will be easier now.

We care. We are the involved generation. And that is to your credit.

Acting first lady 'Wally's' shock absorber

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

Pauline Adams can't believe that her husband is acting president of MSU.

"I still think that some mistake has been made someplace," she said.

However, if Mrs. Adams had her way, Walter Adams wouldn't have accepted the job in the first place. Even their 22-year-old son, Jim, who graduated from Harvard University in June, didn't want his father to become the acting president.

"He (Jim) was against it at first. He didn't want him (Adams) to be hurt and he was sure that he would be hurt," Mrs. Adams said.

"But," she added, "I think he's changed his mind. He sees it now as a very exciting experience. You see all these powers in the University at work."

university president. She can't even remember her first impression of the man she married in 1943.

The Adamses came to MSU in 1947. They came, Mrs. Adams said, because it was the only job offer her husband had received. Since then, she added, they have had many opportunities to leave, but they have accepted none of them.

"I think that when we came here it wasn't a highly selective choice," she said. "But it would be very difficult for us to leave East Lansing now. We've spent 22 years of our lives here."

"We are devoted to the University," she added. "We don't pick up as easily as many faculty people do."

Portrait of Pauline from frostbite on the cheeks. She stopped following that advice, she said.

From faculty wife to president's wife is a great distance to traverse, but Mrs. Adams said that it hasn't changed her life to any great degree.

"I really don't think that life has changed so much for us, except that there are added functions," she said.

She said that their "expanded social life" now includes more ceremonies, receptions and invitations to things to which they were not invited before.

First Lady Role

Mrs. Adams said that her one big problem as "first lady" of MSU is assuming "the proper dignity" at some public functions.

"I don't really see myself as first lady of MSU. I rationalize though and say I'm just 'acting first lady,'" she said.

How does Mrs. Adams see herself?

"I see myself," she said, "as a shock absorber, as a wife, as a place where you come and let off steam."

"I see myself as a mother and more recently as a mother-in-law," she added. "I see myself as a teacher."

Pauline Adams, instructor of American thought and language, has been teaching at MSU for the past 15 years. She had wanted to be a teacher, she said, from the time she was 10 years old.

Still Teaching

Despite the fact that her husband became acting president, Mrs. Adams has continued to teach. One advantage, she said, of being the president's wife is that she has the opportunity to meet a greater number of young people.

"I've always been in close contact with students. I'm very favorably impressed with young people. I've always been, even when I was young," she said.

Less Sensitive

At one time in her husband's career Mrs. Adams was very "sensitive" to criticism directed at Adams. Since he has been the acting president, she said, that she has changed.

"I'm convinced that what he has been doing so far is es-entially right. I've reached a point where I think it's healthy for those who criticize to do so. I no longer take it as a threat," she explained.

According to Mrs. Adams, Walter Adams hasn't changed "one iota" in making the transition from faculty member to administrator.

"He's the same man. He's just as difficult whether he's a teacher or the president," she said.

Like any other husband, Walter Adams occasionally brings problems home from the "office" to discuss with his wife.

"I never expect him to be bound by my thinking and I'm glad that he isn't," Mrs. Adams said. She can recall one particular instance where her husband would have been mistaken if he had taken her advice.

"If he would have taken my advice, he wouldn't have taken the acting presidency," she said. Now she said that she is glad he did.

Mrs. Adams sees this experience for her husband as a very rewarding and enlightening one.

Non-Candidate

She said the acting presidency has opened her husband to new "areas of action." She insists that he does not want to be the next president of MSU.

"He's been a critic of the University for many years and now he's in a position to do something about it," she said.

"His criticism has always been constructive. Constructive criticism is vital for any institution. Even when the president is named, he (Adams) will resume his role as constructive critic. I think he will be a more knowledgeable critic as a result of this experience," she explained.

Mrs. Adams said that one distinctive quality of her husband is that he doesn't "play roles."

"A lot of people," she said, "think that you act a certain way in accordance with a job. Role playing is hypocritical."

Mrs. Adams said that certain proprieties are inherent in any job, but that you must be aware of "de-humanizing" the position. She said that in our highly mechanized society "this can be deadly."

What will people remember about the acting presidency of Walter Adams?

If his wife is correct, very little.

"I find," she said, "that most people have very short memories. They will be concerned about the problems and the administrator who is then in power."

What will Mrs. Adams remember about this time in her life?

"I think Walter has shown me that he can act on his principles and act effectively. It has been a good test of his beliefs. Very few people have the opportunity to try to put their beliefs into effect," she said.

"This opportunity has proved something to me that I did not see in the past. I didn't think that he could be as judicious or as controlled as he turned out to be despite quite a bit of provocation."

BOYCOTT THREAT

Huff raps trustees' closed door policy

By GEORGE BULLARD
Campus Editor

Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said recently that one reason he chose to boycott closed board meetings was over the question of public discussion on a possible hike in residence hall fees.

"I don't think the trustees should agree to raise the rate without public discussion," Huff said. "The public may not like the board's decision (on rates), but perhaps they will better understand the issue or at least feel better that there was a public review of the problem."

Huff said that the board has fallen into "bad habits" by discussing, during closed sessions, certain subjects which "should be discussed publicly."

Besides the residence hall hike, Huff objected to the June closed discussion on doctoral programs at Oakland University. MSU trustees also govern Oakland. He said that the board loses "credibility" by discussing such issues during closed sessions.

Huff and Clair White, D-Bay City, announced at the June board meeting that they would attend no more board meetings "without the availability of the public or the press."

Huff said that their actions would perhaps force issues that should be public from the closed finance meeting agendas.

"If you want support and understanding from students and faculty you have to give them all the information you can," he continued. "What the hell's wrong with public disagreement?"

Huff said, however, that issues such as University investments and personalities were "legitimate subject for executive (closed) sessions."

He disagreed with the secrecy surrounding the statement on the desired aims of the University recently drafted by the All-University Search and Selection Committee (AUSSC).

Dale Hathaway, AUSSC Chairman, did not publicly release the statement, saying that it "was not a polished document."

"I think," Huff said, "that there is some useful purpose in discussing the aims of the Univer-

Rebate granted for spring term scholarship cut

Michigan students whose state scholarships were cut by $20 during spring term are receiving a $13 rebate from the Dept. of Education.

Ronald Jursa, director of the division of financial aids of the Michigan Dept. of Education, said that all students were originally billed for $20 because scholarship commitments for the year exceeded the $6-14 million appropriation.

Jursa explained that the amount of money committed for scholarships before fall term is based on past experience with students who drop out. The commitments always exceed the appropriation because the money is returned for students who drop out, he said.

This year, Jursa said, not as many students dropped out as were expected.

"We kind of gamble with commitments each year as best as we can to keep within the appropriation and also help as many students as we can," he said.

Jursa said that scholarship commitments ran about one-half per cent, or approximately $70,000, above the appropriation.

RIOTOUS CELEBRATIONS...

Doldrums to spark Fourth

By SHIRLEY BRUNNER
State News Staff Writer

So here you are, stuck in East Lansing on the Fourth of July, and forced to come up with something stimulating and exciting to celebrate appropriately. Well, East Lansing just isn't made for riotous celebrations. Especially in the summer.

But the entertainment-stimulation void in this city has already been discussed in depth, and anyone who has spent the first three weeks of the term here is well aware of the situation. Don't bemoan what can't be changed. Be optimistic. There must be something here to do.

The first requirement for the Fourth is a picnic and water. Yes, we do have the water. The Red Cedar and Lake Lansing. But for swimming? The old quote, rephrased by the MSU student should be, "Water, water everywhere and not a place to swim."

So that idea is shot. Some coeds had a good idea in bringing up a wading pool. It could be a reasonable substitute for the IM pool on a hot day unless your dorm authorities decide you're using too much water and college students sitting in a little kids pool doesn't reflect well on the intelligence and sophistication level of a university.

Night life for those not 21, with a set of false identification or car is non-existent. Now that they've made East Lansing wet, there is hope that in the future we'll be allowed to run across Grand River for a cold beer--but that's in the future. For now, the only solution lies in grabbing a six-pack and retiring to the seclusion of the bushes along the river.

It's tornado season, and if we're lucky the weather may come through with some excitement, so that the Fourth can be spent crouched against the wall in some basement. Try setting off firecrackers. Everybody will think the building is about to fall in and you will have a minor riot.

If you feel you've become too cynical about the environment here, take a walk over to South Complex and sit in on some or-

Spirit of patriotism pervades Museum

Back in the "good old days" before the Fourth of July became a day for swimming, boating, playing golf and drinking beer, it was the day when a wave of patriotism surged across the country, engulfing the heartland of America--the small towns.

Fathers and mothers took the children to the park, where everyone enjoyed a picnic lunch that maybe included apple pie. The young ones waved flags while romping through the streets, trailing behind their parents who were eager to hear their congressman speak from the banner-decked train at the local station.

An exhibit in the MSU museum portrays a small town celebration of Independence Day around 1855. The display centers around a scale model locomotive, built sometime about that year.

The locomotive, trimmed with flags, is represented as bringing to town the speaker of the day. A band waits near the tracks as the local townspeople gather to hear a patriotic and somewhat political oratory.

Val Berryman, Museum curator, said that the locomotive is about 10 to 12 inches high and set among figures and a station which the museum staff built to scale.

Berryman said that the exhibit represents a Fourth of July political parade of about 1855.

Mass exodus to stall traffic

By ROSANNE BAIME
State News Staff Writer

Independence Day in the fun-filled Metropolitan Lansing area--the cue for a mass exodus east, west and north.

Most students with transportation, and some without, are expected to leave the campus today for the holiday weekend via trains, planes, cars and buses.

State Police officials expect extremely heavy traffic on all major north-south highways starting early this afternoon and again on Sunday. A spokesman from the police also predicted heavy traffic in lake areas.

"Last year 26 people were killed on the highways during the holiday weekend," the spokesman said. "I can't predict what fatalities will be this year, but the present trend indicates they will increase."

Weekenders flocking to northern and lakeside campsites may find themselves in long, waiting lines. A representative of the Michigan tourist council said this week that camping sites are generally busy this time of year and normally crowded during holiday weekends.

The weekend of June 22 hundreds of campers were turned away from various Michigan public camping grounds," he said.

Commercial transportation is readying for the rush. United Airlines already reports one of today's flights from Lansing to Chicago as filled and the flight to Detroit nearly closed.

The Grand Trunk Railroad has scheduled extra east and west-bound stops at Farm Lane today. East bound trains will stop at 2:38 and 8:24 p.m., while westbound will stop at 1:35 and 6:15 p.m. Regular stops on Friday and Sunday will be made as scheduled.

Greyhound Bus scheduling was not changed for the holiday weekend, with the exception of an extra east-bound bus leaving the East Lansing station for Detroit at 3:30 p.m. Friday.

Those students remaining in East Lansing will find plenty of events and activities to occupy their time. In addition to the everyday movies showing in the area, many local communities will offer fireworks shows.

The first aerial fireworks display in 30 years will be sponsored by WJIM television and radio in Francis Park. General entertainment plus an appearance by Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves will run from 7:45 - 9 p.m., with a 45-minute fireworks show following.

The East Lansing Rotary Club will sponsor a fireworks display in City Park.

Neither city plans to have any other celebrations.

On-campus activity will be light Friday. Classes are cancelled and both the Museum and Kresge Art Center will be closed. Abrams Planetarium will present a show at 8 p.m. Friday, despite the holiday.

The library will be closed Friday. For those who want to study for upcoming mid-term exams, however, it will be open Saturday from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m., and Sunday from 2-11 p.m.

Area broadcasters present Lansing fireworks display

For the first time in 30 years an aerial fireworks display will be held in the city of Lansing.

The show will be sponsored by television and radio station WJIM at 9 p.m. in Lansing's Francis Park.

"We were talking about various summer promotions we could run," Tom Jones, WJIM station manager said, "and Mayor Graves was talking about necessary programs in the city."

Station executives came up with two ideas--a fireworks display and a series of street dances in July and August. Both were enthusiastically approved by Graves, Jones said.

"We're working in cooperation with the city all the way," he said. "City officials helped us select the site for the display, give us permission to stage the show, and get help from police and fire departments for traffic supervision and safety."

Both Graves and WJIM hope to expand the activities in the future and make it an annual celebration. Tentative plans, Jones said, include turning the day into a day-long picnic with popular entertainment, with the fireworks display capping the day's events.

Fireworks are as traditional to Independence Day as apple pie is American. Why have they been eliminated from Lansing celebrations, it was asked.

A representative of the Lansing Park and Recreation Dept. said that for many years Lansing residents attended shows presented by two local country clubs. When the city tried to present its own show, he said, it ran into problems finding a proper location.

"I doubt if it's been 30 years, though, since the city's last display," he said.

Hectic wedding schedule fills Alumni Chapel facilities

By DARIA SCHLEGA

MSU is reputed to be, among other things, a vast mating ground, replete with husband-hunting co-eds. How many formal unions do occur is anybody's guess, but at least 111 marriages will be officially solemnized this year at the MSU Alumni Memorial Chapel.

The red-bricked chapel, partially covered with ivy and set among the green lawns and trees typical of MSU, has been used for weddings since its dedication in 1952.

"We have more requests than can be filled," says Beth Gustafson of the Managers Union office, "but I can usually fill about 75 per cent of the requests."

For $25, the wedding party will get one rehearsal, use of the organ—which was made in Holland and reassembled here — two seven-branched candelabra, a wrought iron kneeler or two kneeling pillows and a white canvas runner for the center aisle. Added this year is a bronze bell cast in 1886 in Baltimore, Maryland.

The Chapel, deceptively larger than its front indicates, can accommodate 200 people. The chapel has stained-glass windows, pews of bleached oak, and is air-conditioned. Downstairs is a bride's dressing room and a reception room.

The Union will be happy to cater the reception, providing any combination of punch, coffee, finger sandwiches and ice-cream. The minimum fee is $95.

To be married in the Chapel requires that one partner have a connection with the University either as a student, alumnus, employe or a relation of an alumnus.

The chapel should be reserved at least five months in advance to insure getting the desired time and day, according to Mrs. Gustafson.

"I also prefer to have the people come in and fill out an application in person at my office, although reservations can be made by phone," she adds.

Predictably, June is the most popular month for weddings. Saturday is the most popular day, and the end of finals and term breaks are the most popular times, according to Mrs. Gustafson.

This June there were 22 weddings. Mrs. Gustafson will schedule up to three weddings a day, giving four hours to each wedding. "We don't want the wedding party to feel rushed. They should feel as if their is the only wedding of the day."

Any denomination is welcome to use the chapel, and there is no regulation on the type of ceremony.

John W. Fields, sexton of the Chapel, likes his job, especially when it involves weddings, which he calls "the most sacred endeavors that take place in the society of man."

According to Fields, the vow of matrimony "keeps the world in equilibrium, and keeps the chaos out of it."

"There is nothing more beautiful, joyous and sublime than a bride at the time she approaches the altar to take her vows," Fields said.

The articulate sexton sees his role as the chapel's host, and calls himself "the mother's best man at weddings."

Fields must see that the chapel is prepared so that "it is representative of the sacredness of matrimony." On days when there are three weddings scheduled, he works 10 hours keeping the chapel in readiness.

Fields works closely with the wedding party to get an understanding of what they want, and how the details should be taken care of. His job also includes coping with nervous mothers and suspicious fathers, who often feel left out of the whole process, according to Fields.

Most weddings, however, go smoothly, although grooms often forget licenses and rings, and a bride once held up the wedding for 45 minutes because who forgot her garter.

Fields claims that no one gets stood up at the altar. He attributes this to the fact that "young people know each other better today," although he remembers one groom was so nervous that he had to be literally dragged to the altar.

Most of the weddings are still traditional, although Fields said the number of off-beat and untraditional wedding ceremonies have increased.

"I see the better side of life in this chapel. The young people are not the villains they are looked upon to be," Fields said.

He also finds that the young people using the chapel have "more responsibility and are more trustworthy. They are prepared to do things that lead to more useful lives and more gainful endeavors. The public press should come to see what happens."

During the conversation with Fields, a coed and her mother came in. The girl had reserved the chapel a year ago. The wedding was planned for August.

The bride-to-be chose the chapel because "It is a nice warm building. Most new buildings are too cold. Also, the chapel is in the middle of Detroit and Grand Rapids."

The two women went downstairs to see the bride's dressing room. When they came up the mother asked Fields a few questions.

As they were ready to leave, Fields told the girl to make sure the groom left all the details to the best man, since the groom's purpose that day "is to get married."

Elizabeth II ill after investiture

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II became ill with a feverish cold Wednesday and has called off Thursday's tea party with President Nixon's daughter Tricia, Buckingham Palace announced.

Other engagements canceled include Friday's visit to the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Palace sources said she was confined to bed. One of the royal physicians, Sir Ronald Bodley Scott, was called to treat her.

The Queen returned Tuesday night from the investiture of her 20-year-old heir Prince Charles as Prince of Wales. She showed no sign of illness at any time during the ceremonies.

MSU is reputed to be, among other things, a vast mating ground, replete with husband-hunting co-eds. How many formal unions do occur is anybody's guess, but at least 111 marriages will be officially solemnized this year at the MSU Alumni Memorial Chapel.

CATHOLIC RESPECT

Women urged to cover heads

NEW YORK (AP) — Covering the female head in church is still the Roman Catholic norm. But it is more an encouraged practice than a strict rule these days, say Church officials in the United States.

There has been much public confusion in recent weeks about the Vatican's latest worship revisions and whether the ancient requirement on head-covering phrased by St. Paul was still in effect.

The answer from American ecclesiastical authorities, is that the rule remains on the books but without penalty.

"It is still encouraged that women wear a headcovering, although it depends more on the custom of the place and the fashion that is in vogue," said the Very Reverend Messenger Thomas J. McGovern, information director for Terence Cardinal Cooke's New York archdiocese.

Canon 1262 of Catholicism's code of Church laws, last revised in 1918 and now being reviewed again by the Vatican, says women must cover their heads in church and dress modestly.

When the Vatican last May 2 issued a new missal—the official prayer book—a priest uses at the altar, saying the Mass-reporter that a news conference there asked if there was anything in the new book about the female head being covered.

An official of the Vatican Congregation for Divine Worship said there was not.

"Headcoverings may still be worn if women want to," the Italian priest remarked, "but there is no longer a general rule requiring it."

The story was printed the next day in newspapers around Italy and abroad. Seven weeks later the official held a meeting with other Vatican experts on worship and said he had been misunderstood. The reports of May were "a terrible mistake," he said.

Whether a woman's head is covered or bare has nothing to do with either the old or the new Roman Missal, said the official, the Reverend Annibale Bugnini, the worship congregation's secretary. Instead it is a matter spelled out in Canon Law.

In clarifying subsequent uncertainties, Msgr. McGovern said: "We don't intend to make a commandment of this."

"The practice is encouraged out of respect," he explained.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Liturgy Committee of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops said much the same thing.

"We should not make a fetish of the law, however," said the Reverend Joseph Champlin.

By way of example, he said it was "straining the law" for a woman to pull a handkerchief or paper tissue out of her purse and put it on her head as she goes down the aisle.

WOMEN'S TENNIS TITLE

King vs Jones in finals

WIMBLEDON, ENGLAND (UPI)—Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., brushing aside the effects of a "tennis elbow" that has troubled her all year, humiliated doubles partner Rosemary Casals, 6-1, 6-0, Wednesday to gain the finals of the Wimbledon Championships in quest of her fourth consecutive title.

In Friday's final Mrs. King will oppose England's Ann Jones, who upset Australia's top-seeded Margaret Smith, 10-12, 6-3, 6-2, in the other semi. Mrs. King beat Mrs. Jones for the 1967 title and then disposed of her again in last year's semi-finals. Both finalists are professionals with World Championship Tennis.

Mrs. King, seeded second, had her easiest match of the tournament against little Miss Casals, the only unseeded player to gain the semis. The match required a mere 28 minutes and when it was over Billie Jean declined to discuss the merits of her victory.

United States a men's finalist when he goes against top-seeded and defending champion Rod Laver of Australia Thursday. In the other semi-final, an all-Australian affair, Tony Roche opposes John Newcombe. Mrs. King, who has been under the attention of a physician for her ailing elbow, lost only 17 points to Miss Casals, her teammate in 1967 and 1968 when the pair captured the Wimbledon Women's Doubles Championship. Miss Casals, of San Francisco, was able to hold her service only once—in the fourth game of the first set—and that was her only winning game of the match.

A crowd of 15,000 people, some of whom had paid $43.00 to scalpers for tickets worth $3.60, sat in boredom during the contest and even Rosie appeared to give up in the second set when she conceded shots she generally chases after.

The Jones-Court match, consuming two hours and three minutes, contained all the drama and good tennis the first semi-final lacked. Mrs. Jones blew a 5-2 lead in the opening set, which carried to 22 games, but took command the rest of the way to avenge her three-set loss to Mrs. Court in the French final May 1.

The setback ruined Mrs. Court's bid of achieving the grand slam of tennis. The power-hitting Aussie already has taken the Australian and French titles and needed Wimbledon and the U.S. to complete the sweep. She says this is her last world tour.

Mrs. Court, who retired once before in 1967, was so dejected at her loss that she said, "I may even pass up Forest Hills." She said a final decision will not be reached until later this summer after she can discuss it with her husband.

Dave Thor

Olympian Thor goes to Basel

By LINDA MILLER

Gymnast Dave Thor, MSU's '68 Olympian, will be in Basel, Switzerland, July 2-6, for the Gymnaestrada, held quadrennially for the world's top gymnasts.

Thor and Olympian Kathy Rigby, both of California, are the first U.S. gymnasts in the history of the event to receive invitations.

The event is a demonstration of gymnastic virtuosity. Thor will perform in all-around competition.

Performing in the Gymnaestrada is a mark of distinction for gymnasts. MSU Coach George Szypula said.

"This is probably one of the greatest honors a gymnast could receive. It means internationally he has great respect," Szypula said.

Thor's reputation as an ace gymnast was reasserted last month when he walked away with top honors in American Cup competition. In competition with Mexico, Canada and other Latin American countries, Thor proved to be the top all-around performer and helped the U.S. win the cup.

Thor will enter grad school at Southern Connecticut University in the fall, but he will continue competition until the 1970 World Games in Yugoslavia and perhaps the 1972 Olympics.

Top money winners missing in Buick Open start today

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (UPI)—Another first-time winner was a probability Wednesday in the outlook for the $125,000 Buick Open, beginning its 72-hole test on the 7,001-yard Warwick Hills Course Thursday.

Only 10 of the 21 players who have won in the 29 tournaments so far this season were in the field of 144 who will tee off in the event, and only eight of the top 25 money winners will compete.

Many of the big names skipped the event to prepare for next week's British Open, and Arnold Palmer, Tommy Aaron, and Charles Coody were taking vacations. Others who passed up the chance for the $25,000 top money included Gary Player, Lee Trevino, Billy Casper, George Archer, Jack Nicklaus, Bruce Devlin, Orville Moody, Bob Charles and Bunky Henry.

Changes in the course made it unlikely the winner will challenge the tourney record of 274, 14 under par, by Boros in 1963. However, the condition of the links—fairly dry, with the greens holding approaches well—indicates someone in the field could tie the course record of 65 and struck out four.

Orioles in a slump? Birds lose 2 straight

NEW YORK (UPI)—Mel Stottlemyre pitched his 13th complete game, shutting off a Baltimore rally in the ninth inning, to help the New York Yankees to a 3-2 victory Wednesday that sent the Orioles down to only their second series loss of the season.

Gene Michael and Horace Clarke collaborated on the first two New York runs as the Yankees completed a sweep of the short two-game series.

Mantle, Koufax picked to help in all-star

NEW YORK (UPI)—Former all-stars Mickey Mantle, Sandy Koufax and Tony Kubek were named along with veteran announcers Curt Gowdy, Jim Simpson and Charlie Jones Wednesday to handle the National Broadcasting Company's radio and television coverage of the 40th All-Star Baseball Game in Washington, July 22.

Gowdy, Kubek and Mantle will be the commentators for the telecast, and Simpson and Koufax will handle the radio broadcast. Jones will be NBC's "Man in the Stands," conducting interviews and adding color comments. During their playing careers, Mantle was named to 19 all-star teams, Koufax to six and Kubek two.

EVERGREEN ARMS

Evergreen Street is a shady avenue just a half block from campus. A recreation field for tossing the football is close behind.
These huge, plush apartments have balconies and air conditioning standard. All this and more make Evergreen Arms the favorite of every student.

UNIVERSITY TERRACE

Right across from campus, University Terrace allows you plenty of time to get up at 7:50 for that all-important 8:00.
Each wall is panelled in rich dark wood with thick, rich carpeting for barefoot lounging.
Every apartment is air conditioned and has a private balcony for those cool, quiet evenings.

No justice for whitey when Hate throws brick

"I ain't gonna take no more talk. Martin Luther King talked and look at where he's at. Malcolm X talked and he's six feet under, too."

Before I could reply, he thrust his hand into my jacket pocket and jerked it out again, clutching a crumpled pack of cigarettes and two pens.

"You got any money, man?" he said.
"No," I replied. He proceeded to check the other pocket and grab the plastic folder I was carrying in my right hand.

"What's this?" he shouted.
"It's my notebook," I said. "I'm a reporter from Michigan State University, like I tried to tell you before."

A sudden sound from behind me momentarily grabbed my attention. I whirled around and saw a figure running towards me.

It was rather dark, even though we were almost directly beneath a street lamp, but I could still see the eyes of the approaching form. "They were afraid and angry and confused and said 'Whitey, I hate you.'"

As my eyes fixed on his, I could sense his movements; his black fists clutching a two by four.

I felt the board crushing against my skull. It was as though everything which made me a living being oozed out—I felt nothing. I thought nothing.

And suddenly the blows stopped. The pain still remained, but at least its cause had ceased. I couldn't move and I was afraid to open my eyes; I simply lay there, waiting for the attack to resume.

But it didn't. As I heard the sound of feet running from me I opened my eyes.

"Whatsa matter, white boy," reverberated in my ears. "didn't your momma never teach you how to walk?"

"Hey Jew-boy, how ya gonna collect our rent when you're on your back?"

"Hey, you curly-haired Jew-boy honkey, git on your feet and say somethin'."

I don't know how, but I found myself wobbling across the street, seeing fuzzy trees with a dozen trunks and shimmering black people with a triumvirate of heads.

And then they vanished.

I found myself staggering down the sidewalk, clutching my head and looking for help.

But they came. And they came. And suddenly I heard the scream of an angel.

"Get outa here, you animals," she shouted. "What the hell you all tryin' to prove?"

"You beat on this cat's head and pretty soon The Man's gonna be beatin' on ours!"

"Please leave," I whispered. "You're only gonna get yourself killed."

"Tom? Tom? Honkey-lovin' Tom," the crowd shouted.

"Whatsa matter, sister, you gonna turn on your own people and play Jesus to that no-good Jew-boy white punk?"

She helped me to my feet, and again I begged her to leave. I thought of how I cried when I heard the news that an assassin's bullet had taken the life of Dr. King last spring. I remembered how I wept when I saw thousands of people singing "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" as Robert Kennedy's funeral train passed by them a few months later.

And I thought of this girl. I didn't know why she ran to help me; I only knew that I was thankful for her presence, and that she must have been insane.

After I had been on my feet for about a minute, two more figures appeared from the shadows. I was so glad and groggy and pain-wracked by this time that the thought never entered my mind that those approaching could be anything but friendly.

"Let's get outa here," one of them said to me.
"If I try to walk out of this mess with you three," I said, "we'll get killed."

"Nobody's gonna touch you as long as you're with us, man," the other said.

I was in no condition to argue, so I permitted myself to be escorted down the street.

To my astonishment, a group of my former attackers began to gather behind the four of us. What once had been a multitude of evil was now a cordon of protection.

I started talking to one of my escorts, trying to explain to him why I was there.

And then another blow plowed along my cheek.

Staggering backwards, I was caught by the crowd before I could hit the ground. I was lifted into an upright position and aided in walking forward.

As we walked on, the crowd began to disperse, until only the girl and the two young men remained. We continued down the street until halted by an unmarked police cruiser containing four helmeted, shotgun-bearing officers.

"Get the hell outa here and into that cop car," the girl said. "The minute you get inside, hit the floor, 'cause all hell's gonna break loose."

The same instant I touched the floor of the cruiser, I heard what sounded like rifle shots and the screeching of tires.

Osteopathic school

The bill, as passed by the Senate, contains no appropriation for the osteopathic college. A $323,000 appropriation for whichever university affiliated with the school is included in the still unpassed higher education budget bill.

MSU is considered a strong contender for affiliation with the new college and trustees at MSU have expressed interest in affiliation.

State Sen. James G. Fleming, R-Jackson, said he opposed the bill authorizing the creation of the state osteopathic college because MSU's medical school expansion should have first priority.

"We must put first things first and finish what we have started," Fleming said, "and that is expanding MSU's school of medicine into a full 4 year medical school."

The bill, which passed the Senate by a vote of 24-8, empowers the board of control of whichever college or university is chosen to affiliate with the new college with most of the responsibility for the conduct of the affairs of the osteopathic college.

Earlier the Senate had approved an appropriation for the osteopathic college but had denied funds for the expansion of the MSU medical school.

A conference committee has been created that will attempt to resolve differences between the Senate passed version of the higher education bill, and the House version—which includes funds for and authorization for the MSU medical school expansion—into a bill acceptable to both legislative chambers.

The Senate bill provides for the State Board of Education to assign the osteopathic college to an existing state college or university within 90 days after the enactment of the bill.

NMU's proposal goes before the AFSCME local's membership for ratification or rejection Monday. Oakland's proposal went before their membership late Wednesday night.

The remaining schools Grand Valley State, Michigan Tech., Western Michigan and Wayne State University are all involved in bargaining or mediation disputes. Like MSU, the AFSCME locals at these schools are operating under a 15-day extension of the old contract, with wages or fringe benefits the primary issues.

The space capsule, after nearly 60 orbits, continued to send clear signals, officials reported.
