rapist was arraigned Monday on a firstdegree murder charge in the death of a 25-year-old University of Michigan coed, the seventh young woman slain in the Ann Arbor area in the past two

Police Chief Walter Krasny said he had found "no concrete evidence" to link the defendant, Ernest R. Bishop Jr., 28, to the other slavings.

Bishop was charged with the killing of Miss Margaret Phillips, a B-plus graduate student who investigators said had been trying to aid Bishop in his rehabilitation and who had been doing research on the other killings.

A hearing to examine the evidence was scheduled for July 16 in Washtenaw County District Court. Bishop was ordered held without bond.

Investigators said he was released from Southern Michigan Prison six months ago after serving a sentence for rape. He was behind bars at the time of two of the six earlier slayings.

was killed by a .22-caliber weapon, as were two of the other young women murdered in the Ann Arbor area.

Police said they did not know why Bishop might have wanted to kill Miss Phillips. No evidence of sexual assault was reported.

However, Krasny said it was clear that the sociology student and Bishop knew each other. He said Miss Phillips "had previous contact with Bishop, probably through her interest in social work.

on parole and probably consulted with him on some of his personal problems. She liked to work with minority races.'

A friend of the coed told police earlier that Miss Phillips had been researching the six previous slavings as a sociological project.

Bishop was paroled last Dec. 27 after serving time for rape. Krasny said he was released under the supervision of a former University of Michigan sociology professor, Tom Mayer, who asked Miss Phillips to aid in the ex-convict's rehabilitation.

He said the weapon used to kill Miss Phillips was still missing, although skin divers were searching parts of the Huron River for the gun "on a tip"

The police chief said an earlier story that Miss Phillips had spoken two words before her death was a ruse invented by the police to bring the killer out. The coed remained in a coma from the time she was shot in the head early Saturday until her death Sunday morning.

Nixon Administration files suits to integrate schools

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Nixon Administration filed desegregation suits in the North and the South Monday, carrying out promises made last week when it eased rigid timetables for complete public school integration.

In the first of several scheduled legai actions, the government attacked a freedom-of-choice plan that it said had failed to eliminate racial segregation in the school system of Barnwell County, S.C.

A few hours later, it sought in another suit to end racially segregated teacher assignments in Madison County, Ill., the first school district outside the South to

Survey shows silent public condemns student violence

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Americans responding to an Associated Press survey on their reaction to campus uprisings condemned by a 3-1 margin the violent tactics used by some demonstrators in the past year. About one-fourth of the more than 400 interviewed expressed sympathy for the reform goals sought by young people.

AP bureaus across the country questioned citizens who comprised a crosssection of income levels and ethnic groups. Even among those who deplored the violence, however, many felt the students should be heard.

The word most often used to describe college uprisings was "disgraceful." majority thought college administrations had been too lenient. At the extreme, some proposed expelling every dissenter and a few persons advocated "cracking skulls.

Roger Birdsell, 42, a writer who lives in South Bend, Ind., and who has two stepsons entering college in the fall, said he saw the campus uprisings as symptomatic of general social disorder.

Huff defends legislator acts to mend unrest

By MARILYN PATTERSON State News Staff Writer

Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said Monday that the state legislators are expressing the "natural public reaction of concern" about the way state universities are being administered.

The legislature is now debating a higher education budget bills, which would cut scholarships to students convicted in court or by university officials of disorderly conduct or violence to a person or property. and would cease payment of funds to any university which challenges the constitutionality of the bill.

"This is a trend going on all over the country," Huff said, "that the legislatures try to control educational institutions are very much in the public eye. This is why the legislature wants to get control of them.

"I want to thank all the local whites who had the courage to come out today,' said Evers, brother of slain civil rights leader Medgar Evers. "I want to thank those who have proven to the world that all white people are not bad people.'

Sharma group readies brief

By STEVE WATERBURY State News Staff Writer

Volunteers began typing copies Monday of a summary of the circumstances under which a Fulbright-Hays Fellowship was withdrawn from an MSU professor.

The summary says "political interference" was involved in the withdrawal of a research grant to Dhirendra Sharma, associate professor of philosophy.

Copies will be mailed Wednesday to the heads of state of the 50 countries to which Fulbright recipients will travel next year, to all major Indian universities and to governmental officials

The summary reviews alleged involvement of elected officials in the revocation of the grant, and cites the efforts of University officials to negotiate a reinstatement of the grant.

'None of these efforts have so far moved Washington," the review reads. 'Our committee has, therefore, concluded that we have a responsibility to bring this lamentable affair to the attention of the 50 countries where the other recipients of this type of grant are planning to do their research.

The proposal to mail the reviews was originally made by Sharma, but later rejected by him.

For a few, it's all over; for most, war drags on

Eight hundred and fourteen American GI's packed up their gear Monday and headed home from Vietnam.

For them the war is over. They've been through their hell and now they're headed stateside. But 814 is a long way from 500,000. Yet it may be the beginning of the end, or it may just be a pacifying gesture on the part of the Nixon administra-

There is nothing wrong with tokenism so long as it is followed by concrete, affirmative action. Tokenism can be a dangerous thing, however. It can lull a people into passivity without altering a condition.

While nearly two-thirds of the American public favored the 25,000 troop withdrawal, their mood about the war remains pessimistic, a Harris poll released Monday revealed. Eighty-four per cent expressed doubt that Nixon's latest proposals "will get the communists to end the war."

And criticisms of Nixon's handling of the war are on the upsurge. By 46 to 45 per cent, the public believers that "President Nixon does not seem to be getting any further in the Vietnam problem than President Johnson did." By 47 to 45 per cent, the public gave a positive rating to Nixon's "handling of the war," but the president's margin of approval is dropping. Six weeks ago the margin was 42 to 32 per cent.

So 814 boys headed for home, but for most the war drags on. Mr. Nixon has convinced the American public that "he is really trying to get peace in Vietnam," according to the Harris poll. Yet, means of achieving that end remain vague and unclear, as emphasized by the troop withdrawal. Nixon withdraws a small number of troops. Clifford says that isn't good enough. Nixon rebounds that he can do better than Clifford. But it wasn't really a commitment, just a

And hopes run high these days, but results lag further behind. Remember how hopes soared when the peace talks began? Yet they have produced little. The same sequence of events could very easily be true with the troop withdrawal. As long as we maintain our present uncompromising stand, we can expect little relief from the war.

According to the Harris poll, the majority of the American public says it would have opposed U.S. involvement in Vietnam had it realized the costs and casualties involved. That sounds as though the American public believes we have made a mistake. Yet we are not able to acknowledge that mistake and correct it, but only plod along in our present disastrous course.

For 814 GI's the war is over. For the rest of the 500,000, it drags on. For some, however, approximately 250 a week, the war ends abruptly. The number of GI's heading home Monday was only slightly more than die in a three-week period in Vietnam.

The withdrawal is not much, but it can be a beginning if we are strong enough to take the initiative.

An American tradition: vigilante night-riders

To the Editor:

Students, faculty and staff who do not have access to the East Lansing Towne Courier may be unaware that in the July 1st issue George Colburn uncovered an undercover organization of nameless, faceless faculty members, who originally blew the whistle on Professor Sharma, and succeeded in having his Fulbright grant cancelled by politicans in Lansing and Washington.

Colburn, a doctoral candidate in history and an instructor in ATL, was told that Sharma is an alien who is an "internal enemy of the United States, the State of Michigan, and Michigan State University. So in the interests of law and order these faculty members in secret action have forced the cancellation of a grant for academic exploration and even hope to have the radical Indian's resident status in the United States investigated and re-

It certainly is comforting to know that when the constituted authorities get hung up over legal technicalities, there is in the good old American Vigilante tradition a group of night-riders who go about righting wrong, punishing the guilty, and upholding our way of life. Indeed, the only thing that really bothers me about this passion for covert justice is that it has already calimed one innocent victim, and I wonder uneasily who will be the next person to be denounced by persons he cannot find nor face. It should (parenthetically) be interesting to see if Colburn can find a place in this university when he finishes his doctoral degree.

The strength of dissent

To the Editor:

Mr. Steven Smith, East Lansing senior, is assuredly entitled to his opinion. Still, it seems a sad comment that after four years at a university theoretically dedicated to mind-expanding, in the best sense of that abused term, he retains a view which leads him to a most uncritical support of Messrs. Pittenger and Chamberlain, combined with a sweeping and patronizing dismissal of professor Sharma, with respect to that entire sad affair.

One of my own fields of professional historical interest is in early modern Spain--the "great power" of its day, whose precipitous descent to mediocrity still fascinates students. A propos Mr. Smith and the Sharma mess I would like to quote from J. H. Elliott's recent and superb Imperial Spain: "The men of the 17th century. . . had lost the strength that comes from dissent. . .(and) proved to be lacking the essential ingredient for survival-the willingness to change.'

Who casts stones?

To the Editor: . A recent criticism by Ronald W. Rowe of the State News should not go unchallenged. I would defend the State News for its excellent coverage of the local AND international news stories in the form that is appreciated most by the student community. By this I mean that students can turn to the Lansing State Journal or "Detroit metropolitan papers" for detailed accounts of the various stories that are making news.

Concerning Vietnam and the Algiers Motel Trial--I'm sure that no student is any the less informed of these news events because the State News failed to devote a page to each in the May 20, 21 and 22 issues. We all are proud to have Mr. Rowe as a graduate of MSU fighting for us in Vietnam. It is the opinion of this student, however, that any just criticism of our newspaper should come from within the student community, and it is for this reason that I would ask of Mr. Rowe 'Dare He cast stones into the darkness?'

The dirty business of wiretapping

J. Edgar Hoover would now have us believe that he was a reluctant eavesdropper and that it was the late Robert F. Kennedy who originated the idea of tapping the phone of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. But Hoover's statements are inconsistent with those made by Ramsey Clark, Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, Burke Marshall and Carl T. Rowan, and with testimony of these statements and independent investigation convinces us that some time in 1963 Hoover reported to Kennedy that a "Communist" was working in Dr. King's office and requested authorization to install a wire tap. Kennedy approved the request for a limited period, we are told, and later assumed it had been discontinued.

In the meantime, however, Hoover, without the Attorney General's approval, had managed also to place "bugs" in Dr. King's home, office, and on at least one occasion in a hotel room occupied by Dr. King. Hoover assures the country that the tapping and/or bugging were discontinued on April 30, 1965, but his own agent has testified that the surveillance continued until Dr. King's death. Was the bugging, as distinguished from the wire tap, ever authorized? And who authorized the surveillance to continue after April 30, 1965? Not Clark, not Katzenbach, and not Kennedy, who resigned as Attorney General on September 3, 1964. Clark tells us that Hoover made repeated request for authorization to install wire taps on Dr. King, none of which he granted, and that the last request came two days before the assassination.

But there is an aspect of the surveillance that is more repulsive than the fact that it was ever undertaken. Summaries of the recordings, we learn, were revealed to members of the House Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Rep. J. Rooney (D., N.Y.). Rooney and his colleagues were so "shocked" by what they learned that they thought the Speaker should have the privilege of listening to the recordings (Congressional Record, June 18, 1969, p. E-5056). How many other members of Congress saw the summaries or listened to the tapes we do not know, but word travels far and fast in those circles. Accounts have appeared in print of how some of the tapes, which related to Dr. King's private life, were played for the entertainment of journalists who happened to visit the FBI establishment. In this issue Drew Pearson is quoted as saying that he had some of the tapes or summaries. Rowan reports that "for years the FBI has had a small army of agents and allies roaming the country whispering the dirt about Dr. King.

Carl T. Rowan, who headed USIA, says that he was familiar with the summaries. Are such summaries, then, shown routinely to heads of government agencies?

This, we submit, consitutes an intolerable situation, one which the federal government cannot, in all conscience, ignore. Ramsey Clark is clearly on sound ground in saying that Hoover should resign. More to the point, he should be forced to testify under oath, subject to cross-examination, concerning every aspect of this ugly incident. To permit him to distort the truth, by taking advantage of the fact that neither Dr. King nor Robert F. Kennedy can refute him, is to involve Congress, the Executive and the White House as accessories to his malicious slander of the dead.

JUDICIARY STATEMENT

Apply guidelines equitably

the summation of the Women's Interesidence Council position on first term women's hours. This position was supported by five members of the Student-Faculty Judiciary and opposed by the other five members. As a result of the tie vote, the position that hours are not inconsistent with the Academic Freedom Report stood, since the status quo is upheld in the

It is the opinion of the Student-Faculty Judiciary that the hour's policy for freshman women is inconsistent with the guidelines established in Article 1 of the Academic Freedom Report.

The University believes its freshman women's hours policy to be educationally justifiable because "it provides a framework of guidelines to assist individuals in adjusting to and-establishing a beneficial pattern of living within the university setting," in hopes of better preparing the coed "to discipline herself in regard to time usage and more properly balance her activities to meet her own needs." Although such a regulation may have been made with good intentions, we believe it to be inconsistant with Article 1, sections .5.01 and .5.02 for the following reasons:

Articles 1.5.01 states that "All regulations shall seek the best possible reconcilation of the principles of maximum freedom and necessary order." It is believed that Article 1.3 makes explicit what is to be considered "the best possible reconciliation of maximum freedom and necessary order" in those regulations governing student activities and conduct. It states that "the University cherishes many values, modes of thought and standards of behavior that are better taught by example, persuasion, social pressure, and rewards than by threat of penalties. Regulations governing the activities and conduct of student groups and individual students should not be comprehensive codes of desirable conduct." Disciplined time usage and balanced activities may. indeed, be beneficial and valued standards of behavior. They are not, however, areas subject to direct or indirect regulation by the University.

Even if one ignores the fact that the 'benevolent" goal of this regulation is to force on the coed a particular set of values the University feels she should have, and examines merely the behavioral limitations of this curfew, it is difficult to see how this curtailing of personal freedom can be justified in terms of "necessary order." In view of the small percentage of university women affected (and then only during fall term), the hours policy can be described more accurately as unneccessary order achieved at the expense of freedom.

Article 1.5.02 states "There shall be no regulation unless there is a demonstrable need foe it which is reasonably related to the basic purposes and necessities of the University as stipulated herein." The requirement of demonstrable need protects the student from arbitrary and unnecessary regulations. It is not believed that a truly demonstrable need has been shown for either an evening curfew for any student nor the differential treatment of the sexes in this matter.

The University's justification of the need for women's hours consists essentially of a series of assumptions about freshmen in general for which no verification of factual proof was given. From these assumptions some overall generalizations are made about factors which may possibly interfere with "the development of appropriate academic behavior," such as "the immediate rewards of developing social relationships and the novelty of the irregular time schedules of college students.' Externally structuring the freshman's living pattern via a curfew is considered educationally justified as it may counterbalance these influences.

It is the opinion of the Student-Faculty Judiciary that a need, in order to be demonstrable, must be based on something more valid and credible than mere assumption. The presentation by Women's Inter-Residence hall Council included a study done at another university, which found no evidence to support the University's belief that hours for first term freshmen are essential for or even related to successful academic adjustment. The University may prefer certain styles of adjustment over others and may, in fact, wish to promote these; but (as was discussed preciously) it does not have the right to force the learning of what it deems appropriate values through coersion. The University has made clear its preference, but a preference does not constitute a demonstrable need.

In addition to an apparent lack of need for a curfew for freshmen, the University has also failed to reasonably justify why this regulation should apply only to women. It appears that the differences in societal and familial expectations for men and women are considered sufficient reason for applying this regulation only to women, "regardless of all the rhetoric on equality of the sexes." The Judiciary recognizes that different expectations do exist, even if they are of questionable wisdom. However, their existence, in and of themselves, do not inherently legitimize such forms of differential treatment.

The only way societal and familial expectations would appear to be relevant to this policy would be if it were still justified by the following traditional reason: "To indicate by regulation the generally accepted societal expectations for when a young woman should return to her place of residence for the night, thus indicating, indirectly, the manner in which University claims that it no longer accepts this as a justifiable reason for regulation women's hours. If we are to believe that this is more than merely a formal verbal disclaimer of what would appear to be still in operation informally, then not only must a demonstrable need for an hours policy be shown but also one which is applicable to women only. We believe the University would find it very difficult to prove freshman women to be less mature than freshmen men. Until then, we do not feel free to condone a regulation which establishes unwarranted differential treatment.

The Judiciary realizes that the present hours policy is the end result of many hours work by various committees throughout the past year. By finding this regulation inconsistent with the Academic Freedom Report, we are not attempting to establish ourselves as a policy-making body. But we feel that if the guarantees given in the Academic Freedom Report are to be more than just rhetoric, then this Judiciary must try to apply its guidelines equitably.

Babe's birthplace restoration begun

BALTIMORE (UPI)--Babe ional baseball shrine. Ruth, this city's greatest contribution to sports, will be honored here Tuesday with ceremonies marking the beginning of the restoration of his birthplace. Among those present will be Joe Dimaggio and Mrs. George Herman Ruth, widow of the "Sultan of Swat."

The campaign to restore the now dingy row house in the midst of a slum was begun over a year ago by a committee headed by Mayor Thomas D'Alesandro. The campaign has raised nearly $75,000-$25,000 from private contributions and $20,000 each from this city and the State of Maryland. The money will be used to renovate the Ruth home and three adjacent houses to build a nat- the New York Yankees.

A museum and theater for sports shows will be constructed in the adjacent homes and the Ruth home will be restored. The renovations are expected to be completed by February of 1970. The total cost of the project is estimated at $80,000.

Mayor D'Alesandro proclaimed Tuesday as "Babe Ruth Day." The Baltimore Orioles, for whom Ruth played when they were in the International League, will honor the Babe by passing out commemorative coins to all youngsters 14 and under who attend Tuesday night's twi-night double header. Those games will be played against the Babe's old team,
