Apollo 11 passes point of no return

British figures show Luna 15 in position to land on moon

SPACE CENTER. Houston (AP)--The Apollo 11 astronauts, tightening their course and more than halfway to the moon Thursday, faced a new likelihood that an unmanned Soviet craft would try to steal some of the glory in the American effort to take the first steps on the

New calculations of the orbit of the Seviet Luna 15 showed it was indeed in a position to land on the lunar surface and complete a mission some observers believe it has: to beat Apollo 11 back to earth with samples of lunar soil.

There was also a possibility, however, that it only intended to photograph lunar features from its 62-mile altitude.

casion for national observance.

Britain's Jodrell Bank radio telescope, tarcking the Soviet craft, reported the new orbital figures. Originally the British scientists had estimated the Luna orbit as ranging from 600 to 1,200 miles, not compatible with a lunar landing effort. But now the observatory chief, Sir Bernard Lovell, said he expected the craft to try to land on the moon Friday.

There was apparently little chance of a collision as Apollo 11-- carrying civilian Neil A. Armstrong, Air Force Col. Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Air Force Lt. Col. Michael Collins to man's first lunar landing attempt--aimed at orbit just 69 miles over the moon.

U.S. experts said earlier that even if Luna 15 were in the same orbit as Apollo 11 there would be practically no chance of a crash between the two.

At Jodrell Bank, Sir Bernard said the radio observatory was also receiving voice reports from Apollo 11. "We have the fascinating situation of listening to Apollo in one ear and Luna in the other." he said.

With the space race intruding anew in their flight, the Apollo 11 crew carried with them mementos of the five men who have died in the American and Soviet space programs.

President Nixon announced in Washington that Apollo 11 carried medals that belonged to Soviet cosmonauts Yuri Gagarin, the first man in space, and Vladimir Komarov, as well as a memento of the three Americans who died in the 1967 Apollo 1 fire, Virgil I. Grissom, Roger B. Chaffee and Edward H. White II. America's first space walker.

Med School authorization almost certain

A legislative commitment for a fouryear medical school at Michigan State appeared likely to pass Thursday, the last scheduled day of the present legislative

Conferees on the higher education appropriation bill will probably approve the medical school authorization but will delete the accompanying $200,000 appropriation to plan the third and fourth clinical years of the medical school. State Sen. Charles O. Zollar. R-Benton Harbor, said

The Senate had deleted the authorization for the medical school expansion included in Gov. Milliken's budget request, but expansion approval was restored in the House passed version of the bill.

Zollar, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the conferees on the higher education bill had reached initial agreement, although the conference report on the bill had not yet been printed and signed by the conferees.

Zollar said it was inevitable that MSU would have a four-year medical school. Approval of the conference report by both houses is required before the bill is sent to the governor.

And a-waay we go!

A bird's-eye view of the Apollo 11 blast off disproves the old belief that the earth is square. As astronauts Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. PRESIDENTIAL SELECTION

Reaction to Huff letter varies among trustees

Monday classes canceled

By LINDA GORTMAKER Executive Reporter

T stee Warren Huff's letter charging that the committee selecting MSU's next president only wants a professional academician drew varying reactions from other trustees and committee members.

"I don't know what the purpose of Mr. Huff's missile was," Dale Hathaway, chairman of the All-University Search and Selection Committee, (AUSSC), Huff said that the list of 19 condidates presented to the board last month was comprised totally of "organization academicians." He called the group from which these candidates emerged the "educationally advantaged elite.

"If that's what he means by a 'bias' the committee is using then I guess that's a bias." Hathaway said Thursday after AUSSC met with the board all afternoon.

And I'm sure most faculty members and students -- expecially students -would share that bias

Hathaway said that "the majority" of candidates on the list were academicians in that they were connected with

One unidentified member of AUSSC said "all of the 19 candidates on the list presented to the board a month ago weren't professional academicians, but they were sure largely that.

Don Stevens, chairman of the board, said. "I'm not concerned. They (AUSSC) are getting more names. I didn't complain about any they eliminated, but I'm not concerned about the ones they kept. The president ought to have some connection with education." Ken Thompson, R- East Lansing, said. "I can't visualize him doing a good job if he didn't.

Thompson said he wasn't "unduly excited" about the search and selection committee having only professional academicians for its candidates.

Although Thompson praised AUSSC he said that the final selection responsibility rests with the board.

There is not any hard and fast word that the board has to choose one of the committee's final nominees.

Presidential Huff

Trustee Warren Huff called for a bigger selection list for the MSU presidency. He warned against the danger of a "professional academician" as head of the University, charging that he would State News Photo by Wayne Munn only be a captive of AUSSC.

Huff seeks broader scope in 'U' president selection

State News Staff Writer Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, challenged the All University Search and Selection Committee's (AUSSC) list of Presidential candidates Thursday because the list is "made up sole-

"John Hannah was not acceptable to some faculty members because he was not a captive -- he was his own man his course and techniques were not always laudable. But to replace this giant of the de facto academic conspiracy would be a great retreat for MSU

Schools where "organized academia does succeed in capturing the university" are the last to respond to social movements and students' needs and demands, the statement said.

"It is no accident that the most violent confrontations have been at Berkeley, Columbia and Harvard, all of which have been controlled for years by organized academia.

While American and enemy deaths in Vietnam dropped to the lowest level since the first week in January, the level of verbal combat at the Paris peace talks picked up.

The North Vietnam and Viet Cong delegations to Paris heaped abuse Thursday on South Vietnam's free election plan after it was presented at the talks. The United States retaliated by warning that rejection by the Communists cast grave doubts on their willingness to negotiate.

The 26th weekly session of the talks thus produced no discernable movement toward a settlement of either the Paris or the Vietnam fighting.

Both houses of the legislature have agreed to a law establishing 13 to 17-man citizens grand juries in Michigan, but the legislators were unable to agree on whether to repeal the present one-man system.

Last month the House sent its bill to the Senate with an amendment to repeal the one-man grand jury on the grounds that it has no affect on organized crime and gives too much political power to one man.

The Senate failed to pass the House amendment when it approved the establishment of the multiple-juror plan.

The ammendment now will go to a House-Senate conference committee.

EDITORIAL Horseradish radiates illogical conclusions

George F. Will contends that the clinching argument for not letting students become involved in academic decisionmaking, "rests on the selfevident axiom that a desire for participation in such affairs constitutes proof that the desiring person is unfit for participation.

Believe it or not, Will is an asst. professor of political science--and he's only 28 years

With a Ph.D. in political science, Will states, "any academic smart enough to know horseradish from shoe polish should suspect either the intelligence or the sanity of any student who actually is anxious to get mixed up in such a dreary business. You can question our intelligence, but we believe there is significant evidence that by being involved we have already accomplished numerous things on campus, and beyond the ivv towers. Consider the civil rights movement, how students awakened the rest of the nation to the ugliness and degradation she was breeding within her boundaries. Consider the war in Vietnam. You have condemned students for violence. and suggested that police be brought onto campuses, but vou have forgotten that the violence occuring in the name of patriotism and lovalty far exceeds the violence on campuses. Will stereotypes student activists as "the new barbarians." It is unfortunate that in order to support his arguments. Will must resort to name-calling and generalizations. Will maintains that campus protestors were spawned "by a permissive, indulgent philosophy of modern liberalism." To cure students of their "spasms of violence in the name of extremist, ideological politics," Will advocates a University policy that would "sober up the giddy children of modern American liberalism.

It is unfortunate that Will does not better understand or comprehend the subject he discusses so vehemently. Will places concerned students in the same classification as militants, while at the same time deploring the violence the militants use without at least attempting to see through that violence to the causes. Will has condemned all students by advocating that they pay a higher percentage of their education, vet believes that students should be less involved in the University. while at the same time demanding a highly structured curriculum for all students. from which little deviation would be allowed.

Will's paranoia of militants has clouded his perception of students in general. Unfortunately, this type of reasoning is typical of many people outside the academic community. including many members of the state legislature. What is so unusual is that Will is inside the University and not far removed by age from those he condemns.

Which only goes to show that through selective perception and cognition reinforcement, one can arrive at illogical conclusions, despite the evidence with which he is confronted

They passed out the reading tests, answer sheets and MSU Scoring Pencils. I took two of each, put one set in my right sock, and listened to some instructions. Then we had to read the instructions on the front of the test booklet.

One of the main things (in bold print. even) was, "Do not write on this test booklet." Of course I immediately wrote on mine, and subsequently circled all the wrong answers. In retrospect, the next kid to get that test booklet could be in real good shape. Anyhow, headquarters would be pleased I'd made the effort.

So I took the test. Mind you, now, I took what was probably that same test in the summer of 1963 and by virtue of my performance then placed myself into an honors section of ATL.

Of course I had a hangover now, but I'm quite certain I had a hangover then, too. In fact it might have been the same hangover. But I was pretty confident. I even finished early.

Next were the arithmetic and math tests. I had bombed these pretty badly six years ago, and had since further demonstrated my ineptitude in this area by taking seven terms to bumble through Nat Sci. I clutch when I see numbers. The First National Bank wil bear out that statement.

A cruel sneer curled my lip as I blew my smoking MSU Scoring Pencil.

I had finished the two number tests really early, and I took the opportunity to look over the Class of 1973. Intense young mothers. Give them six years, I told myself.

Cut off. No way to get reinforcements, information, equipment. Alone. Like Sabine had said, college was scary.

I checked my schedule and found that my first 'academic advising session' convened in five minutes. I went down to 101C Wonders, stopping on the way to pick up a State News. But there weren't any. I thought back, and realized I hadn't seen one all day.

Well, I don't guess it would do for orientees to know MSU has Sharmas. Chapins or trustees who don't always agree with each other. They'd find out soon enough. I caught myself wondering if they'd hand these kids a copy of the State News one stop after fee receipt cards were handed out.

I felt like I was waiting in a stockyard in Chicago--just waiting. But maybe that's how an MSU freshman is supposed to feel.

I decided to slip out with the crowd. When the session was over I gathered my papers and headed out into the hall.

I didn't get far. About 1 1/4 steps outside the door I was converged upon by not one or two. but three of what I immediately recognized as agents of the Council for Reactionary Administrators at Michigan State. Green eyes, white teeth--all of them.

POINT OF VIEW

Academia and the Presidency

The following "point of view" was originally correspondence from trustee Warren M. Huff, D-Plymouth, to Dale Hathaway, Chairman of the All University Search and Selection Committee.

Dear Dr. Hathaway: In the search for a new president, I subscribe to the old adage that. "Gold is where you find it." John Hannah was a regional administrator for poultry in the N.R.A.-an unlikely place to look for a college president. He subsequently became Secretary of the University. At no time was he an "organization" academician. Yet he must be classed as one of the best university presidents of his time.

When your committee placed before the board of trustees at the June meeting a list made up solely of professional academicians, and then proceeded to stoutly defend the proposition that the new president must be chosen from this source. I was deeply disturbed. Two subsequent events increased my unease.

First, came the refusal to release the commitee's guidelines, noted in a letter to Professor Schuler. This is the public's business and, to me, warrants the widest possible disclosure, discussion and debate. Secondly, I called you on July 1 and asked that I be permitted to visit with your committee at some convenient regular meeting. You failed to agree. How can we avoid misunderstanding if dialogue is declined.

Attached are some reflections of mine on a rainy, dismal Fourth of July which I hope may point up some of the differences between us so that we may eventually come to a meeting of the minds step. No business or profession requires on this important subject of a new presi-

The following postulates and generalizations are stated for the purpose of sharpening discussion and are not necessarily defended as/final convictions. It is hoped that their statement and subsequent debate will broaden and mellow the University's approach to the selection of a new president.

The dramatic explosion of higher education in the U.S. has brought with it the widest variety of persons and styles into the ranks of the professional college professor. Most are dedicated to their scholarship and research and some are equally committed to teaching as well. Most have the usual amount of that human quality called intelligent self-interest. Greatly increased affluence in the profession in recent years has accelerated the organization of this self-interest into professional societies and pass. This is a natural de facto consemany other forums for exchange of views and joint action.

Organization tends to establish confusion tends to estab ism, whether it be the American cal Association, the Bricklayers Uni or the Pharmaceutical manufacturers Academia is also developing a social and political conformism--at least that part of it which is interested in organized effort. This is more true of academia than other professions because it begins to exercise control over its recruits at the favored child is identified at a very early age. He is usually educationally advantaged and of a tractable charac ter. If he keeps his personal and social manners he can move easily through the to do if one is from the educationally advantaged elite and willing to submit

With the doctorate in hand, there are many prospective employers. In rapid succession; the fledgling then joins the most prestigious university possible, joins the appropriate professional society and prepares for the next goal--that of securing tenure. This is the supreme test of intellectual and social conformism. Failure here is fatal. There have been many previous tests but none so rigid as this last one which is accorded by one's peers -all of whom have previously been found

But tenure is not the end of the requirement for social and intellectual lockstricter conformance to a life style--an organization man '-- than does academia. The most widely used device is "publish or perish." Even the family and personal habits of the young professor are under surveillance. One's time is so ordered that there is little involvement in the real world outside of academia.

Now, there is no sinister master-mind conspiring to bring this conformism to movement-just ahead of the A.F. of L.

quence of the working out of the intelligent self-interest of a lot of very bright people. It has been well demonstrated over time that this system works to the benefit of the profession. But, like any "establishment" it develops some weaknesses, one of which is the unwillingness to debate the merits and methods of organized academia itself. (The term "organized academia" is used to identify that relatively small portion of the profession which is interested in the politics of the group.) Like all 'establishments." the organized profession resists change

Like any bureaucracy, organized academia is immortal. Trustees and presidents come, and go, but not so organized academia. When a vacuum occurs in the presidency, as at present at MSU it will be filled by the organized faculty unless the board of trustees intervenes. This was evidenced by the original proposal of the Taylor Committee, which proposed an absolute veto over the actions of the board by the faculty committee. The trustees were asked to abdicate their specific constitutional responsibility. When the trustees refused to abdicate, the next ploy was to face the board with a list comprised of professional academicians only. The faculty committee showed dismay when even mild exception was taken to this exclusivity. Now, again, no covert conspiracy is implied. In fact, it is specifically denied. The de facto results are merely the flowering of a lifetime of conformism to the profession together with a certain intellectual arrogance that organized academia must be served and that what is good for academia is good for the nation.

Now organized academia does succeed in capturing many universities. But where this occurs, there is much accumulated evidence to support a number of acid criticisms. These captured universities were the last to discover the civil rights building trades. These were the last schools to respond to students' needs and demands. It is no accident that the most violent confrontations have been at Berkeley, Columbia, and Harvard, all of which have been controlled for years, by organized academia. These are the most responsive to the siren call of elitism, and the last to respond to social need for universal education. These are the most responsive to the lush research grants to support the military-industrial complex. These are the universities with the greatest pomposity and self-puffery These universities are the easy handmaidens of reactionaries in government business, and the professions.

Leadership, like gold, is where you find it. There is indeed some great leadership in the ranks of the academic profession. But it is also true that if you want to hunt giants, you go to giant country. And there is a rich hunting ground in the real world of public and private initiative for the innovator, the administrator, the skilled competent giant needed in the next decade for MSU

John Hannah was not acceptable to some faculty members because he was not a captive--he was his own man. This same quality alienated some legislators, alumni and trustees. His course and his techniques were not always laudable. But to replace this giant with a captive of the de facto academic conspiracy would be a great retreat for MSU. The evidence seems to indicate that the committee would eliminate at the outset any person who would not be its captive.

This suspicion could be erased by the issuance of a general statement describing the criteria that guide the committee in what is essentially the public's business, i.e., the naming of a president by a publicly elected board of trustees. The board and the committee would both benefit from the ensuing public discussion and the credibility of both would be as-

Announcement is expected to come from the board of trustees today confirming three coaching positions at MSU Asst. swimming coach Dick Fetters will become head varsity swim coach. Matthew Aitch will become asst. freshman basketball coach and Alex Terpay will become asst. hockey coach.

A graduate of Notre Dame, Fetters has been on the MSU staff since 1962. He is in charge of training Spartan performers in a summer swim program, known as the Spartan Swim Club. In 1966, Fetters coached the U.S. Swimming and Diving team for the Pan American Maccabiah Games. and in 1967 was named Michigan's Master Swimming Coach

Aitch, a former MSU basketball star himself, was a student assistant to Freshman coach Bob Nordmann last year. Aitch had two outstanding years at State after transferring from Moberly Mo., Junior College in 1965, where he was an All-

American. He led the Spartans in scoring his senior year and was named to the second team all-conference.

Terpav lettered as a goalie match, the four remaining on the Spartan hockey team in 1963-64 and '64-65. The Tonafinals Saturday morning with wanda. N.Y., native was a graduate assistant coach of the freshman team last year.

. Crew deserts Ra pending repairs

CHRISTIANSTED, V.I. (AP) --Weather-beaten and listing, the papyrus boat Ra drifted without crew in the tropical Atlantic Thursday while skipper Thor Heyerdahl, aboard a nearby fishing vessel, considered whether to abandon his voyage from Africa to Latin America.

Herb Schoenbaum, a ham radio operator here on St. Croix, said Heverdahl reported he and his six-man crew left the Ra Wednesday and went aboard the fishing craft Shennandoah because the reed boat's mast was listing badly to starboard.

They are not giving up. Schoenbaum said. "They are holding on. They are going to determine whether they can repair the ship. He said Heyerdahl reported in a radio transmission that he would make his decision Friday.

Dr. Werner said his University position is a new one, connecting him with both the College of Human Medicine and Olin Health Center.

Student health service is not a new experience for Dr. Werner. He was involved in a similar program at the University of Rochester, Rochester, N.Y. where he did his psychiatric residency and later taught.

'The situation at Olin,' said, "is a difficult one said because the University itself in terms of population represents a city. The situation vis-a-vis Olin and the University is not unlike the situation between people trying to deliver health services and the cities.
