

Apollo crew looks homeward from earth's gravitational hug

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -- With the earth's gravity pulling their spaceship faster and faster toward a world still elated over man's first visit to the moon, the Apollo 11 astronauts rested Tuesday from two days of making history.

Neil A. Armstrong, Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins flashed out of the moon's gravitational dominance, leaving behind an indelible mark as the first to go where man had never been.

The spacecraft passed into earth's gravity control at 1:39 p.m. EDT and Collins kidded controllers about having to explain gravitational difference to newsmen.

Then Collins joked that the spacecraft gave a little jump as it went through the lunar sphere.

A mission controller laughed and said "Thanks a lot."

"Dave Reed, who was to make the explanation, is sort of burying his head in his arms at this point," said mission control.

The astronauts awoke on their own and Armstrong reported each crewman had about eight hours sleep.

They faced a day of space drifting interrupted only by a short rocket burst to adjust their earthward flight path and by a 15-minute telecast.

The rocket burst, which lasted only 10 seconds, came at 3:57 p.m. EDT while Apollo 11 was 194,000 miles from earth and about 40,000 miles from the moon. Officials said the course correction went as planned.

The astronauts then put the spacecraft--which is shaped like a toy top--into a slow spin. The three-revolution-per-hour spin distributes heat from the direct rays of the sun evenly over the spacecraft.

With the lunar explorers still almost two days from home, their countrymen began planning a welcome reserved for heroes.

President Nixon announced plans for a ticker tape parade in New York and Chicago and a formal dinner in Los Angeles.

But the adulation of man will have to await the satisfaction of science.

About 18 days of quarantine await the astronauts after Thursday's splashdown in the Pacific. The space trio will be kept behind biological barriers to assure they brought no moon germs back to earth.

Nixon, still elated over the success of his country's attempts to land on the moon, said he hoped "the next great venture of space" will see Americans joined by other countries.

"This is the time for the optimists," he told a group of high school students in Washington. "Be optimistic."

Apollo 11 began its homeward journey early Tuesday morning, firing a long rocket burst above the moon's backside and whipping around toward earth. The spacecraft's speed will grow steadily until it curves into the grasp of earth's atmosphere and gravity.

The quarter-million mile trip began only hours after another moon traveler--the Soviet's unmanned Luna 15 probe--crashed into the moon.

A British scientist who monitored both moon flights from the Jodrell Bank Observatory in England said the marked contrast of the American ship landing men on the moon and the Russian unmanned probe crashing showed a clear United States superiority.

"This is the first time the United States has been demonstrably superior in a vital part of the space program," said Sir Bernard Lovell, a vocal critic in the past of America's space effort.

He said the American success may lead to U.S. and Soviet cooperation in space.

Space officials said Tuesday that Eagle, the craft that carried Armstrong and Aldrin rocketed off the moon's surface and rendezvoused with Collins, who flew alone in the command module while his crewmates landed.

Space officials said the Eagle that made history would remain in orbit of the moon "for several months" before crashing. Systems on the craft, they said, were "dying, one by one."

Elated Nixon arranges Apollo superwelcome

WASHINGTON (AP) -- President Nixon set up Tuesday a superwelcome for the Apollo 11 astronauts, predicted their successors will discover life in space and then mingled with baseball's greats before heading for a Pacific rendezvous with the returning spacemen.

It was a crammed day for the President as he sped through last-minute duties before taking off on his 12-day round-the-world trip.

But the chief executive was obviously elated with the success of the history making moonwalk--and, as a congressional leader put it, he was fired with evangelistic fervor for his forthcoming tour of seven countries.

Nixon arranged to spend the evening attending the All Star baseball game. Then after flying to San Francisco, he heads Wednesday for the mid-Pacific to be on hand for Thursday's Apollo splashdown. From there he goes on to Asia.

The stateside welcome for the space heroes, as laid out by Nixon, will feature ticker tape parades in New York and Chicago Aug. 13 plus a formal dinner in Los Angeles as his guests that night.

Nixon was admittedly brimming with optimism about the future--this is no time for the pessimists," he said--in talking to some 2,000 foreign high school-age students visiting the White House.

He said he believes that by the year 2,000 "we on this earth will have visited new worlds where there will be a form of life."

He gave no further detail on this, although he mentioned the prospect of ascertaining "what may or may not be on the moon, on Mars, on Venus." Just what beyond-the-moon exploration the United States will conduct has not yet been officially decided.

Credits key to 'U' tuition under new structure policy

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Under the new tuition plan approved by the board of trustees Friday, students will now be assessed tuitions by the number of credits they carry.

Resident students will pay $13 per credit per term, rather than the $184 lump tuition rate assessed to a full time student under the old system.

Non-resident, or out-of-state students, pay $31 per credit rather than $420 per term.

The new tuition structure was proposed by an administrative committee to eliminate the inequities of the old structure, Elliott Ballard, presidential aide, said.

Under the old system, there was a large change in tuition when a student went from three to four credits or from six to seven credits, and again if he went from nine to 10 credits, Ballard said.

The increase in the average tuition, however, will be about 45 cents per credit hour or 60 cents per term, he added.

Students taking more than 20 credits will be assessed only for 20 credits and students taking less than three credits will be charged a minimum course fee for three credits.

Several special and additional fees will be discontinued under the new structure. They are the improvement service fee, the repeat course fee, the applied music fee, the physical education laundry fee and late entrance credentials fee.

Also included are facilities fee for such physical education courses as golf and bowling, zero credit fee and doctoral thesis research fees for graduate students, music therapy internship fee and placement training fee for agricultural technology programs.

The late registration fee will now be $1 per credit for the first day, $2 per credit the second and subsequent days. Previously the late registration fee was $15 the first day, $20 the second day and $30 the third and subsequent days.

One provision of the new structure which drew criticism from two trustees is that graduate and undergraduate students will pay the same tuition rates.

Trustees Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, and Clair White, D-Bay City, contended this makes freshmen, for whom the cost of education is less, and sophomores pay for graduate programs.

Graduate students should be paying more, not less, tuition, Huff said.

Stephen Nisbet, R-Deckererville, disagreed.

"If you take this (Huff's) point to its logical conclusion," Nisbet said, "you would have to figure out how much it costs to teach each student the courses he takes."

"A university worthy of its name," Acting President Adams told trustees, "does not consist of a freshman class exclusively because it happens to be the lowest cost operation in a university."

A university consists not only of an undergraduate program, but also of a graduate program and a variety of professional schools that we customarily associate with the concept of a university."

The graduate program subsidizes the undergraduate program, Adams said, in that it provides large numbers of graduate assistants.

The graduate assistants "Probably constitute one of the most exploited groups in American society because it is they who participate, in large part, in the education of these self same freshmen and sophomores that reference has been made to," Adams said.

"So I think this is a complex issue in terms of trying to compute on an economic basis who subsidizes whom and by how much."

STUDENTS REACT

Survey shows dislike of revised tuition rates

By LINDA GORTMAKER

A sampling of out-of-state students shows plenty of criticism for the new tuition structure that would charge them $31 per credit and in-state students $13 per credit.

Graduate students and Michigan residents aren't griping that much though, an unscientific survey showed Tuesday.

"I'm against it," Larry Leventhal, Baton Rouge, La., freshman, said. "It's going to hurt me. Maybe I'll re-do the schedule I had planned for fall."

"I was going to take 19 credits," Bruce Etkin, Detroit freshman, thought that tuition should still be based on a flat rate for full-time students.

"This new method might really influence someone who's uptight about money," he said.

Steve Faulk, Battle Creek freshman, doesn't consider the new tuition structure that "necessary."

"The thing that gets me is that they didn't charge graduate students anymore," he said.

Under the new system, both undergraduate and graduate students from out-of-state will pay $31 a credit; all in-state students will pay $13 a credit.

"I can't see that our education is that much more special that I have to pay more for it," said Sally Aylesworth, Alexandria, Va., graduate student in history. "But I wouldn't mind paying more if I had to, to go to grad school."

Jean Ann Sallee, Phoenix, Ariz., graduate student in vocational rehabilitation counseling, justified the graduates' rates with her opinion that "graduate students help the reputation of a university."

"And anything usually costs more when you start out than it does after you've learned the ropes," she said.

Walt Chappell, Topeka, Kan., graduate student in secondary education, agreed that it is fair that graduate students pay the same amount as undergraduates because they use the same facilities as undergraduates, "and when we don't, much of our research facilities are funded by federal grants," he said.

Some in-state students questioned sympathized with the "plight" of the out-

Wheeler report to President hush-hushed

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Gen. Earle G. Wheeler returned from Vietnam Tuesday with a report on the war for President Nixon.

It was secret, but indications were the military can go along with further troop reductions.

Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters on his arrival at nearby Andrews Air Force Base, Md. "I must say that I find the situation good."

Wheeler, who spent four days sitting up the war, said the program to modernize and improve Vietnamese forces to take over more combat responsibility is on schedule--as a matter of fact, ahead of schedule in some areas.

The four-star general would not forecast what he will recommend to Nixon, due to decide sometime in August whether to withdraw more than the 25,000 troops announced earlier this summer.

But he and Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird scheduled an afternoon meeting with Nixon to discuss Wheeler's findings before Nixon leaves Tuesday night for his trip around the world.

Wheeler said U.S. intelligence experts in Saigon told him of indications that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong are preparing for another series of attacks which would break a recent lull in battlefield activities.

Kennedys at Kopechne funeral

Kennedy maintains silence

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. (AP) -- Sources close to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., say that despite unanswered questions, Kennedy probably will never talk publicly about the auto accident he was in which claimed the life of a young blonde secretary.

"He's told the police all he can. I'm certain," one said. "I don't know what more he could say that would help with the investigation. I honestly don't believe he remembers anything else."

The sources, all of whom asked not to be identified, commented Tuesday in a series of interviews.

The 37-year-old Massachusetts Democrat, last of the Kennedy brothers, asst. majority leader of the U.S. Senate and potential 1972 candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, was driver of a car that skidded off a bridge and into a tidal pond early Saturday on Chappaquiddick Island, adjacent to the resort island of Martha's Vineyard south of Cape Cod.

Kennedy survived the wreck, though he sustained a mild concussion and strained neck muscles. But Miss Mary Jo Kopechne, 28, of Washington, D.C., former secretary to Kennedy's late brother, Robert, was trapped in the car and drowned.

The accident, occurred at about 1 a.m. Saturday, according to the police report. Kennedy said it happened at 11:15 p.m. Friday. But in any event, the senator didn't go to the police until almost 10 a.m. Saturday. He has been charged with leaving the scene of an accident and a show-cause hearing is scheduled in the case for July 28.

The sources said Kennedy discussed issuing a public statement Saturday night and early Sunday with at least half a dozen friends, among them Joseph F. Gargan, Kennedy's first cousin and a close political associate; Paul Markham, former U.S. attorney for Massachusetts and another close political ally; Burke Marshall former asst. U.S. attorney general; U.S. Rep. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., and one of two key Kennedy staff members.

"Why weren't the police notified of the accident sooner?"

In a brief statement to police, Kennedy said he was in a state of shock after the wreck. The accident occurred as Kennedy

Lobbyists act as legislative information aides

By ED HUTCHISON

The public has yet to give its blessing to the marriage of lobbyist and legislation.

Involved in what one called the "world's most misunderstood business," lobbyists have what seems to be a perpetual black mark against them even though there is no known conviction for bribery by a lobbyist of a Michigan legislator.

Still, though, the poor public impression remains, fed by not an overly friendly press. Consider for example, these headlines:

"Legislators are Outnumbered," "Lobbyists Peddle Ideas to Uninformed Legislators," "Lobbyists Spend Millions" and "Lobbyists Move In."

These headlines, culled from Michigan newspapers by Walter DeVries in his MSU doctoral dissertation on the Michigan lobbyists indicate a press seemingly willing to promote the lobbyist as a "cigar chewing, influence-peddling caricature of the past." DeVries is a former

Second in a series.

Calvin College political science professor and aide to former Gov. George Romney.

William F. Doyle, considered by many as the "dean" of Michigan lobbyists, now retired, charged the press with "using adjectives that fit in to glamorize a sentence."

Much of the criticism of lobbyists centers around their "winning and dining" legislators. Doyle suggests that it is as appropriate for a lobbyist to buy lunch for a legislator as it is appropriate for a businessman to buy lunch for another businessman.

"Luncheon is one of the few times a lobbyist has a chance to talk to him (the legislator). Newspapers attach an unsavory connotation to this."

The press, however, isn't the only source of public misunderstanding and distrust of the lobbyist.

Doyle cited the railroads as being a "vicious" lobby in the 1920's, but has since then changed and become legitimate. The public, however, is slow to forget the occasional lobbyist or lobby that is exposed for some reason.

Doyle likened poor public impression of the lobbyist to the 1930's when banks were regarded as an unscrupulous business.

"This view existed because a few banks went broke because of an international financial crisis." Extending this analogy, Doyle said most lobbyists are honest but have been hurt by the few that are dishonest.

"There are so many bills introduced in a session that no legislator could possibly read them all. The legislator must rely on lobbyists to explain what's in a bill and tell his story. The legislator makes his own decision."

A little known side of lobbying is the presence of two or more lobbyists battling each other.

"On any public question there are lobbyists on both sides. I know of no segment of society that is not represented in legislation by lobbyists," Doyle said.

"Lobbyists battle lobbyists much harder than legislators. Often lobbyists on opposite sides get together and find a compromise and jointly go before the legislator."

"The vast, vast majority of legislators welcome assistance."

Doyle reiterated what many lobbyists have said. There are a few rotten apples in the bunch, but the vast majority of lobbyists are clean because they have to be.

"You can only lie to a legislator once and you're a marked man. The unscrupulous ones are few and far between."

Doyle said there is no need for any committee to police the lobbyists. Instead, the lobbyists will expose the unscrupulous within their ranks.

5 Kroger stores boycotted for California grape sales

By DENISE FORTNER
State News Staff Writer

The Lansing Grape Boycott Committee is protesting working conditions and wages of California grape pickers in its boycott of five area Kroger stores that sell California grapes.

Information booths and picket lines are in effect and leaflets are being distributed 4 to 6 p.m. through Friday by members of the committee in front of local Kroger Stores.

All store managers and officials at the main Kroger distributing office in Grand Rapids refused to comment on the boycott.

Ed Beard, manager of the Kroger store at Yankee Stadium Center said, "I'm just an innocent bystander and I'm not in a position to say anything."

Ann Reed, a Kroger customer, said she was buying California grapes to protest the boycott.

"As a customer I bought California grapes to show my disapproval of the boycott. Every customer ought to be able to decide for themselves," she said.

The Boycott Committee gave reasons for the Kroger action in a position paper that was taped near the fruit section of the grocery store.

"Could you support you family," the paper said, "on less than $3,000 a year? Of course not! But, according to U.S. Government statistics, that's all the migrant farm worker and his family earn."

The migrant grape pickers in California formed a union to attempt to gain decent wages and working conditions. When the growers refused to recognize and bargain with the workers, a strike was called.

The position paper ended with a plea to boycott California grapes.

Rick Manezak, a member of the Boycott committee, said, "Kroger is the only major food chain in this area that has refused to sign an agreement not to sell California grapes."

Golda Meier to visit U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Prime Minister Golda Meier of Israel will visit Washington Sept. 25-26 at the invitation of President and Mrs. Nixon, the White House announced Tuesday.

The prime minister has been in this country many times previously in a private capacity. The last time on a speaking tour in 1968, the White House said.

International News

Sir Bernard Lovell said Tuesday the Apollo 11 and Luna 15 moon shots increase hopes for U.S.-Soviet space cooperation because "this is the first time the United States has been demonstrably superior in a vital part of the space program."

"American approaches for collaboration may be received with sympathy in the Soviet Union as the Russians can no longer regard themselves as masters," the astronomer told reporters at Jodrell Bank.

Lovell also said that it seemed to him that Luna 15 was intended to recover samples from the moon, and that the Soviets could succeed in a few months. But, he added, the Russians are a long way from putting men on the moon.

Israeli sources indicated Tuesday they took pains to avoid bombing Soviet vessels or personnel in heavy weekend raids across the Suez canal into Egypt.

The sources said that their attack was not aimed at Port Said, but at Egyptian artillery, mortar, tank and missile positions.

There was fear that some of the 3,000 Russian advisors in Egypt may have been injured by the first such Israeli attack since the June, 1967 war.

The enemy in Vietnam pressed harassing attacks against allied positions Tuesday, but there was no major break in the month-long lull on the battlefields.

U.S. Command spokesmen refused to attribute any political meaning to the continuing lull. The prevalent feeling in Saigon is that Communist generals are building their forces for another surge of attacks this month or next.

National News

Sen. Barry Goldwater implied Tuesday that partisan considerations may have a role in Democratic opposition to the Nixon Administration's proposal for the Safeguard antiballistic missile system (ABM).

The Arizona Republican told the Senate in a floor speech that "opposition to the ABM did not reach anything like its present crescendo when the program was being called Sentinel and was being propelled by a Democratic administration and a liberal-oriented Secretary of Defense."

President Nixon said Tuesday he has ordered government agencies to reduce spending by an additional $3.5 billion to offset what he described as a worsening budget picture.

"No federal program is above scrutiny," the President said in a statement. "Some highly desirable programs will have to be stretched out--others reduced. The dollar deductions will be accompanied by a further lowering of the personnel ceilings established last month."

Nixon is aiming at bringing soaring spending down to the $192.9 billion target he set in April.

The Senate Democratic Policy Committee reaffirmed Tuesday its position that extension of the surtax must be tied to tax reform, but decided to discuss the situation further with the Nixon administration.

Campus News

With no campus and no local tax support, Wayne County Community College will swing into operation this fall with an estimated 6,000 students.

Classes will be held at 18 high schools around the county, 11 of them in Detroit and the rest in suburbs.

"We are turning our lack of a permanent campus into a positive advantage," said Murray Jackson, executive director of the college. Tuesday, "Our 18 centers will bring our college conveniently close to all residents and help to make it an integral part of the community."

U.S. rids Okinawa of lethal gas

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The Pentagon, acknowledging for the first time that the United States has deployed war gases overseas, announced Tuesday it is removing its chemical weapons from Okinawa.

"Preparations are being made to remove certain chemical munitions, including some toxic agents, which were moved to Okinawa several years ago as a result of decisions made in 1961 and 1963," the Defense Dept. said.

The United States acted to defuse potential diplomatic problems with Japan four days after news reports said that 24 U.S. military and civilian personnel were affected when a container of nerve gas broke open at a U.S. base on Okinawa.

Until Tuesday, the Pentagon acknowledged only that there had been a mishap, and that the U.S. personnel had been returned to duty after brief medical observation.

The new announcement by Daniel Z. Henkin, asst. secretary of defense for public affairs, gave a fuller account of the July 8 incident and disclosed that it involved a nerve gas call GB, described as a toxic, nonpersistent, quick-acting chemical nerve agent which can injure by inhalation or by penetrating the skin.

The Pentagon announcement took pains to stress that the chemical munitions were sent to Okinawa during the Kennedy administration and that "no toxic chemical agents have been deployed overseas since Secretary Melvin R. Laird took office" six months ago.

At the same time, Henkin refused to discuss whether the United States has positioned chemical and radiological weapons elsewhere overseas, but he did state "unequivocally that there are no U.S. biological weapons stored overseas."

Biological weapons are for use in germ warfare. Despite official silence, it is known that the United States has placed chemical warfare agents in strategic places abroad since the 1950s under a policy that such weapons form part of the U.S. deterrent arsenal.

In a formal statement read to newsmen, Laird recalled that when he became defense secretary, "I asked for immediate reports concerning chemical biological warfare activities" because "I felt it essential to review the entire matter."

A National Security Council review of the entire U.S. chemical-biological-radiological warfare program, ordered by President Nixon at Laird's request, is being pressed, the Pentagon said.

Included in this study is the question of overseas deployment of war bases.

Henkin said the 23 U.S. soldiers and one civilian employee involved in the July 8 incident are "well and going about their normal duties."

He furnished this account: "On July 8, 23 U.S. Army soldiers and an American civilian employe of the U.S. Army were exposed briefly to the chemical agent, GB, on Okinawa. No personnel were seriously affected."

"After precautionary medical observation, including brief hospitalization of four military personnel, all 24 persons were returned to full duty within six hours. There were no Ryukyans or other non-U.S. nationals involved."

The accident occurred during routine maintenance operations conducted by members of the 267th Chemical Co.

"During a paint removal procedure, a small leak developed in one weapon adjacent to the fill plug. The 24 personnel experienced minor symptoms of toxic exposure and standard safety procedures, including the use of protective masks, were immediately instituted."

"Ordinance teams entered the one building involved and rapidly eliminated the unsafe condition."

The building was cleared and the decontamination process was completed without incident.

Henkin did not say what the symptoms were. Such gases normally are colorless and odorless.

With a low dosage, Henkin said, GB acts as an "incapacitant"--that is, it disables. With a high dosage, he said, it can kill unless there is "prompt and proper medication."

A team from the Army's Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland has been sent to Okinawa to help to "detoxify" and dispose of the faulty weapon which sprang a leak. Henkin refused to say more about the weapon except to describe it as "ordinance."

The Pentagon's top spokesman also would not say how the U.S. chemical warfare stocks would be removed from Okinawa or where they would be sent.

He said the removal had been previously planned and that military officials had been working on such plans for some time, but that those plans had not previously been put into effect.

WASHINGTON MARCH

'U' students to protest war

By BARBARA PARNES State News Staff Writer

The G.I.-Civilian Anti-war Alliance at MSU will be among over 150 local and national student groups to participate in a Nov. 15 march on Washington to demand the immediate withdrawal of United States troops from Vietnam.

The proposal, passed at the July national anti-war conference in Cleveland and adopted by the Student Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam (SMC) Conference, will be "the largest anti-war action this country will have ever seen," according to the SMC fall actions proposal.

The Nov. 15 march on Washington presents the SMC with the opportunity to combine a student strike with a concerted effort to mobilize all sections of the population in Washington. This demonstration will meet with the greatest response yet from the growing G.I. anti-war movement," the actions proposal states.

Virginia Osteen, McLean, Va., junior and representative of the G.I.-Civilian Anti-war Alliance, said that publicity and recruiting for the Nov. 15 march will be the main concern of her group this summer and fall.

Miss Osteen said the Alliance will contact representatives in student government to try to organize a strike at MSU for Nov. 14. She said that if a strike cannot be organized a rally will be planned for the campus.

She added that the Alliance will also be getting buses to take MSU students to Washington for the march, as it did for the April 5 march in Chicago.

"We have support, but not everyone is willing to work at this," she said. "I think that on an anti-war issue you don't have trouble getting support."

In conjunction with the Washington demonstration, the SMC conference adopted the anti-war conference proposal to hold a West Coast demonstration at the same time in San Francisco.

The SMC conference also adopted the proposal to stage a demonstration on Sept. 27 in Chicago in support of the people arrested during the incidents in Chicago during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

The September demonstration was originally proposed by Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) and the Black Panthers at the SDS convention in June.

"We're going to try and build for the Chicago march," Miss Osteen said. But, she added that it might be difficult to attract support because the march is the first weekend after classes begin.

The G.I. Civilian Anti-war Alliance will also support nationwide moratorium on "business as usual" for Oct. 5 so that students, faculty members and other citizens can organize in their own communities against the war.

ROTC director to retire post and Army duty

Col. Robert G. Platt, director of the Army ROTC program at MSU, will retire from active Army duty Friday at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

He leaves his position with ROTC July 31.

No successor to his post has yet been announced.

Platt, a 1939 graduate of MSU, has served as professor of military science here since July 1965.

WSU's South End resumes publication

By STEVE WATERBURY State News Staff Writer

The Wayne State University (WSU) student newspaper, the South End, will resume publication Thursday with university support and approval, following staff agreement with a set of broad guidelines drawn up by the WSU Newspaper Publication Board.

WSU President William R. Keast suspended publication of the paper July 11, shortly before a special edition devoted to the "Cultural Revolution" was slated to appear.

Keast said the publication of the newspaper would do "serious damage to WSU and the future of student journalism here."

The newspaper has been the center of controversy since 1967, when it adopted its present name, and the editorial content shifted to become "radical-oriented."

The paper's staff members published the paper independently July 14 with the aid of underground newspapers.

John Grant, South End news editor, said Tuesday the paper "could and did publish without University assistance, but there is no reason to now."

Grant, who will take over as editor of the paper in the fall, and Cheryl McCall, the summer editor, both have agreed to abide by the guidelines of the publication board.

The recently created board is composed of three students and two faculty members, selected by the executive board of the WSU Student-Faculty Council.

In the future, student representatives on the board will be elected by a vote of the student body.

Grant said the suspension of publication by Keast was a "political action" done to "appease the state legislature."

At the time of the suspension of the paper, a legislative conference committee was hammering out a version of the higher education bill that would be acceptable to both houses.

Earlier in the legislative session, an unsuccessful attempt had been made by State Rep. Joseph P. Swallow, R-Alpena, to delete $42,900 slated for the South End from the WSU budget request.

The student newspaper has been repeatedly criticized as "racist and obscene."

The guidelines provide for the paper to:

- present balanced and relevant coverage for the whole university community;
 - not seek to shock or sensationalize;
 - follow the highest codes of creativity;
 - be accurate, impartial and objective.

Housewife nears end of solo Pacific voyage

LOS ANGELES (AP)--A 37-year-old housewife, seeking to become the first woman to sail solo across the Pacific, virtually completed the crossing today, sailing within a mile of the California coast 73 days after setting sail from Japan.

Sharon Sites Adams told her husband, Al, who pulled along side her off Port Hueneme, 30 miles northwest of here, that she had survived seven gales and a battle with a shark.

She'd also made a dress, she said, that she'll wear for a gala welcome planned in San Diego, 100 miles south, when she touches shore--probably Thursday--to end the crossing.

Adams relayed his wife's reactions via marine radio because her own radio transmitter broke down about 20 days ago.

Although she could listen to radio--and heard her husband interviewed on a radio program Monday--she couldn't send any messages.

She was last heard from 40 days ago when she was sighted from the liner President McKinley in mid-Pacific.

"Being typically female, she's talking, talking, talking," Adams said.

should not use the pill. There are a number of other contraceptive means that you might find acceptable. One of the least troublesome and most effective is the intrauterine device (IUD). The installation job is taken care of by your doctor and while they do not come with warranties, they compare favorably with the best of methods excepting the pill.

Please advise me on how to make my two year old stop biting. I have tried scoldings, spankings and biting him back. All have failed.

Biting, including biting people, is a normal activity for most babies up through their teething years. Somewhere along the line they get the message that it hurts, people don't like it and it is not rewarded. Biting in anger persists for a much longer time. (viz. the unsavory reputation of women in a knock-down, drag-out fight.)

Scoldings and spankings often fail to change children's behavior because they fail to deal with the child's needs. Biting him back goes one step further by rewarding him and encouraging him to bite again. After all, if you bite him it must be all right for him to bite you. It rarely pays to respond to a child with the same behavior you are trying to discourage.

If your child is biting in anger, he must learn as all children must, appropriate forms of expression of anger. Since most adults move faster than most two year olds, it remains for you to be vigilant enough to stop him when he bares his chops. At this point a firm "No!" works wonders. Beyond that, it remains to see if there are situations in the child's environment that are engendering unusual anger or, whether his activities are so restricted that the normal aggression discharged in play are being expressed in his eating habits.

Is it possible to become addicted to aspirin? I have severe headaches and find myself taking between 15 and 20 aspirin a day. They help my headaches, but are there some long range side effects I should know about?

No, it is not possible to become addicted to aspirin. But I wonder why you aren't more worried about the severe headaches that don't seem to be going away. While 15 and 20 aspirin a day might relieve your headaches, you are reaching the range where ringing in the ears begins. More importantly, that many aspirins per day over a long period of time can produce gastrointestinal bleeding and may activate an ulcer.

Headaches have a variety of origins. Most are short lived and occur infrequently. When headaches are persistent, frequent, or of unusual intensity, medical evaluation is in order. My advice to you is like the TV commercial that says: "If pain persists, see your doctor!"

By now we are all aware that marijuana is not detrimental to a person's health, but what about a pregnant person? I think my girlfriend is pregnant, and as we often smoke grass, and have for quite a while, I am concerned about the effect this might have on our future baby. Have you any information on how grass might affect either the growth of the baby or the health of the mother?

Your assumption that we are all aware that marijuana is not detrimental to a person's health is unfounded. There exist a large number of people and a few German shepherds in this country who are convinced that marijuana is the plague bacillus reincarnated. So, considering that most informed people are aware that marijuana is not detrimental to most people's health, your question about a pregnant person becomes very relevant. The Thalidomide tragedy has rightly made people very concerned about what they take into their bodies during pregnancy. While research evidence of damage with marijuana is lacking, it remains foolhardy to take the smallest risk of damaging your future baby by absorbing any non-vital drug during pregnancy. This would be an ideal time for your girlfriend to visit an obstetrician for correct prenatal care, to give up smoking cigarettes, as that leads to small babies and to decide whether or not marriage might affect the growth of the baby or the health of the mother.

I have a problem. I have been taking birth control pills, gaining weight, feeling dizzy, depressed, and have spots before my eyes. My doctor says it is normal, but I'm scared. But I'm more frightened about the possibility of becoming pregnant, and abstinence is not the solution. Please help me.

Congratulations! If you had added nausea and swelling of your feet, you would have had the majority of the common symptoms shown with birth control pills. You neglect to mention how long you have been on the pills. If this is the first month or two, it is possible the symptoms will disappear. If they persist longer, or you are unusually uncomfortable with them, perhaps the pill is not for you. These are potent medicines and many people (perhaps as much as 30 per cent) find that they do not do well with them. As well, there are a number of situations in which the pill is not recommended. These include a history of cancer and blood clotting abnormalities, among other things. Some neurologists and obstetricians also feel that women with a history of migraine

Obstructing the rubber stamp

Open trustee meetings have long been little more than a facade to rubber stamp decisions already reached in private. That has been altered somewhat now, due to the boycott that trustees Warren Huff and Clair White plan to continue of closed board meetings.

Closed meetings, officially called finance committee meetings, were originally used for only that—financial matters and personnel discussions. A reasonable consideration, to be sure. No one would contemplate discussing stocks and bonds or the character of a tentative personnel appointment with the press present.

The scope of closed meetings has been extended, however. No longer do they involve only these two areas. The situation became apparent after the trustees abandoned the sliding scale in a closed meeting. The press, the public and even two trustees began to wonder why the public was not entitled to the rationale behind the decisions.

But can't any trustee raise any point he so desires in the public meeting? True, but if the trustees have already resolved the issue in private, it is unlikely that the performance will be repeated for the public's benefit. The issue

Rap with trustees

The door to finance committee meetings may still be closed, but no longer does the board have complete immunity to the public for actions taken in private.

reached a climax Thursday when Huff and White walked out of the finance committee meeting after their motion to move two items to the public agenda was defeated.

What effect, in actuality, will this have on board meetings, both open and closed? It will not, of course, stop the trustees from proceeding as they always have with closed meetings, but it could throw a monkey wrench into the operation. Usually, issues are not voted upon in the closed meeting, but all of the trustees' views and questions are fully aired. In the future, open meetings should prove a little more spirited, since two trustees will not have had the benefit of the private discussion and will raise questions at the open meeting.

As this happens, and Huff and White raise questions, the opposition also will have to speak up, lest the public misunderstand its position. Everyone, then, could be engaged, finally, in some meaningful dialogue beyond the head-nodding that is usually seen.

In short, everyone could benefit—the press because it will better understand the trustee's stand; the public because it will have a better perspective on the trustees' rationale; and the trustees themselves because for many, it could mean they might have to speak up in public, and that could be good for their image.

The logical question, then, is why hasn't this happened earlier? Why haven't the board meetings been opened up for serious dialogue?

Huff believes the reason may be that the trustees enjoy the informality and unaccountability of closed meetings. Beyond this, however, there is notable disagreement among the trustees over who decides what will be discussed in private, and what will be discussed in public. There seems to be a good deal of buck-passing, with no one quite sure who is responsible for the itemized agenda. But regardless of who prepares the agenda, the trustees have the option of altering anything on it once they have been called into session.

The question seems to have become so blurred and overshadowed by irrelevant considerations that no one knows for certain.

At least the boycott by Huff and White will open the meeting it won't create the complete frankness with which we would like to see the board speak.

Does anybody remember a clause in the Michigan constitution that expressly forbids formal closed Board of Trustee meetings?

Is Huber committee necessary?

The many questions raised regarding the value of the Senate's Special Committee on Campus Disorders came into even sharper focus Wednesday when Chairman Robert J. Huber, R-Troy, stated that the bill for his quest may run as high as $70,000. According to Huber, the original $25,000 allocation, of which $6,000 has so far been spent, will be "insufficient for a study in depth of the matters assigned to the committee."

The primary quandary in many minds at this point is just exactly what is it that Senator Huber plans to investigate? Michigan colleges are not precisely what could be typified as hotbeds of radicalism. In fact, by comparison with such places as Columbia and San Francisco State, they are downright sedate. In light of this, the charge of "witch hunt" leveled by some of Huber's opponents does become a bit more plausible, though there is the possibility that "sensation-seeking" could be the better word.

This point should be clarified in the eyes of the people of Michigan before the legislature goes out on a fiscal limb with the taxpayers' money. Senator Roger Craig, D-Dearborn, among others has questioned items of the Committee's budget, such as $12,000 requested for optional room and board for 400 helpers.

It is important to note that taking a stand against campus disorders, regardless of whether or not there really are any, can be a highly politically negotiable move. Among the general public, "Law and Order" is rapidly becoming a non-rational article of faith, not unlike the flag and motherhood. Further, students pose no threat of counterattack, for they do not form any sort of cohesive political force and are, thereby, the perfect "witches" for aspiring officials to "hunt." Administrators and educators who might oppose such actions are effectively controlled by the financial hold that the legislature has over them or, as in the case of Dr. Sharma, other political pressures.

The basic essence of the question, then, is not how much money should be spent—though this is certainly a point worth pondering—but, rather, should it be spent at all. To state it another way: is there any real need for a Special Investigating Committee on Student Disorders in the State of Michigan, especially in view of the fact that there are bodies on the federal level already researching this matter and which, quite possibly, can do a more comprehensive job?

OUR READERS' MIND

Hard drug laws need change

To the Editor: I strongly agree with your editorial comment on President Nixon's proposed drug laws. However, I would go somewhat further: I think that the present laws with respect to hard drugs, such as heroin, are completely wrong-headed. In fact, I would maintain that the present laws are a major contributing factor to two of the most serious problems in this country—organized crime and the high crime rate—as well as being the main factor in the high rate of drug addiction.

Because organized crime controls the drug market, it can set pretty well any price it likes for hard drugs, and the addict has to pay. If addicts could obtain drugs in some way through legal channels, a major source of income for organized crime would be cut off, and organized crime might never recover. The only way the addict can obtain the large sum of money to buy the drugs he craves now is by theft or prostitution. If these drugs were available legally, their price would be quite low and the addict could obtain enough money in an ordinary job to pay for them without having to resort to crime. Also, if narcotics were available legally, organized crime would have no interest in getting people "hooked" on drugs as it does now, and a big drop in the addiction rate could be expected.

I am not suggesting that narcotics should be available at your corner grocery store, but it seems to me that the present "cure" for drug addiction is worse than the disease. I understand that in the United Kingdom, for instance, addicts can register with the police and obtain a supply of narcotics through an M.D. I understand also that organized crime as we have here does not exist there, and that the rates of crime and drug addiction are much lower, although there are, no doubt, other factors involved in these differences.

Lunar hypocrisy

To the Editor: I have always been amazed by the hypocrisy of American Presidents, politicians and the public in general. With the United States' latest effort to land a man on the moon, President Nixon proclaimed that this feat will be an accomplishment not only for the U.S., but for all mankind, but our astronauts left on the moon an American flag and commemorative plaque signed by all the "brass." Visualize the hypocrisy of the inscription on the plaque: "we came in peace" . . . "but we are killing in Vietnam, and we had to get to the moon before the Russians!!" Why not a United Nations flag instead (?), because we didn't mean all those things the President talked about. If NASA and other government officials had any foresight whatsoever they would have realized what great propaganda such an act would have been for this country.

Perry Serbanos Watertown, Mass., senior

Holiday silly

To the Editor: Accession to Nixon's requested impromptu holiday during the last days of an already abbreviated summer term is an act of the utmost practical stupidity—a silly emotional response to national pride and man's vanity.

The "holiday" is neither a meaningful nor a sensible tribute but an overglorifying of an already acknowledged great technological achievement which is at the same time a monument to man's twisted sense of values and the nation's shameful and immoral sense of priorities.

Sex ed. hearing airs adult protests

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

An open hearing on Michigan's sex education guidelines drew an estimated 300 people to Lansing's Everett High School Auditorium Monday night.

The first of numerous parents opposed to the guidelines was David B. Phillips, executive director of the Concerned Parents of Calhoun County, who threatened to withhold his taxes if it would pay for sex education in the public schools.

"I will not pay the bill, I will not be guilty in my conscience of contributing to the delinquency of a minor and distributing pornography," he said.

"The abuses of sex education can in no way be corrected by these guidelines," he continued, "these materials are designed to bring about a morally degenerate generation."

He said if the guidelines passed, he and his organization would enforce their right of petition, march on the Capitol, withhold taxes, petition the Supreme Court and petition for a recall of the members of the State Board of Education.

"If these measures are adopted, I'll lead a campaign to erect billboards showing dogs, chickens and human beings in the act of sexual intercourse," he said.

"Any person who thrusts this on his children must be a sexual deviant of the worst kind," he said.

However, some of those present supported the board's work in investigating the guidelines.

H. James Starr of Lansing and former State Representative praised the work of the board and said it was its duty to set up guidelines for sex education in Michigan schools.

"Sex education belongs in the school because the parents aren't doing their job," he said, "and ignorance is no solution."

He blasted the guidelines submitted by Mrs. Suzanne Talt of Swartz Creek and James F. O'Neil State Board of Education treasurer and said "they are no real guidelines."

"You can't do a responsible job on one page of guidelines," he said.

Mrs. John Amon, past president of the Lansing Council of Parent-Teacher Associations agreed with Starr and said "it's true that some parents handle this very effectively themselves."

"But some don't have the background and they don't feel free about it—so it doesn't get done."

Mrs. Ruby Ashlee, Battle Creek, said she was afraid of sex education because she had heard that it was a communist plot.

"I wonder if we could be manipulated into something that's not American," she said.

NEXT SPANISH KING

Juan Carlos succeeds Franco

MADRID (AP)—Juan Carlos de Borbon was formally designated Tuesday to become Gen. Francisco Franco's successor and eventually to be king.

The 31-year-old prince was nominated by Franco before the national parliament, or Cortes, which promptly ratified the choice.

The Cortes vote was 491 to 19, well over the two-thirds majority needed for approval. Nine legislators abstained, and 34 were not present for the extraordinary session.

Juan Carlos will be sworn in as Franco's successor-designate Wednesday after taking an oath of loyalty to the law and to the National Movement, Spain's only legal political organization.

There was no indication when the 76-year-old Franco would put the succession into effect. The generalissimo, who has ruled Spain since his victory in the Spanish civil war in 1936, squashed rumors that he might resign. He told the Cortes he planned to keep Juan Carlos by his side "to perfect his knowledge of national problems."

The prince has been groomed by the government since childhood to sit on the Spanish throne.

He is the grandson of King Alfonso XIII, who fled Spain when the Republicans took over in 1931, and died 10 years later.

Dressed in the sparkling white summer uniform of a captain general of the Spanish army, Franco spoke to a Cortes jammed with legislators in evening clothes.

The general spoke at length of what he said were the virtues of the prince, grandson of Spain's last king, and said: "And so I have decided to propose him to the nation as my successor."

Rumors of Franco's retirement had little to feed on except the emotion he encountered when he told the Cabinet of his plans Monday night. Information Minister Manuel Fraga Iribarne reported the Cabinet members showed more emotion than at any previous meeting.

The general's health has frequently been the subject of rumors, but in his appearance before the Cortes he appeared to be a man strong for his years.

Spanish monarchists were split three ways as the day dawned when a king of Spain might be named for the first time since Alfonso XIII fled the Republicans in 1931.

Most support Prince Juan, a tall handsome blond, groomed since he was 10 to be a Catholic sovereign, and married to Greek Princess Sophie.

A passionately dedicated group of Carlists supported the pretensions of Prince Carlos.

Hugo de Borbon-Parma, a French citizen who has been barred for life by the Franco government from returning to Spanish soil.

Monarchists who believe in dynastic successions, backed Don Juan, 56, Count of Barcelona, father of Prince Juan and son of Alfonso.

Succession, which gave the Spanish civil war victor the right to nominate the next king, was "contrary to the historic traditions of the Spanish people."

Don Juan left on his yacht earlier Tuesday from Portugal, where he has lived in voluntary exile since 1946. He planned a Mediterranean cruise.

He said the 1947 Act of

Cigaret ads to leave broadcast media

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cigarette makers yielded to government pressure Tuesday and agreed to stop advertising on radio and television by September 1970.

They offered to do it sooner—any time after Dec. 31—if broadcasters will cancel current advertising contracts.

At the same time, Joseph F. Cullman III, spokesman for the tobacco companies, asked for congressional guarantees that the industry will be permitted to advertise in print without including warnings on the health effects of smoking.

The immediate reaction of the broadcasting industry, which stands to lose about 10 per cent of its advertising revenue, was hostile.

Vincent T. Wasilewski, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, said cigarette companies want to continue advertising in every other media, "be it newspapers, magazines or skywriting."

Cullman, chief executive officer of Philip Morris, Inc., told a Senate Commerce subcommittee the industry will need an antitrust law exemption to collectively halt broadcast advertising.

"No company could afford to restrict or abandon its use of the broadcast media unless its competitors did the same," Cullman said. "The only practical way would be by collective action."

Cullman, speaking for nine major cigarette manufacturers, made this offer:

"Each company is prepared to agree to discontinue all advertising of cigarettes on television and radio in September 1970, when the major existing contractual arrangements will expire, provided that Congress enacts legislation which provides that an agreement to this effect shall not be deemed illegal under the antitrust laws."

"I am further authorized to inform the committee that if the broadcast industry will simultaneously terminate all contractual arrangements for the broadcast of cigarette advertising, we are prepared to agree to discontinue all such advertising at any time after Dec. 31, 1969 that such termination becomes effective."

Wasilewski told the subcommittee he could not say what position individual networks and broadcasters will take on current advertising contracts.

He said if the cigarette companies want an antitrust law exemption, it should be a broad one so that they can stop all advertising, printed as well as broadcast, after one year.

The National Association of Broadcasters has announced a four-year phase-out of cigarette advertising. Wasilewski said that would avoid "economic disruptions and chaotic conditions in the broadcast industry."

But that plan is meaningless in view of the tobacco industry move.

Volunteer Action

VOLUNTEER ACTION: Does constructive social action strike a chord? If so, take a closer look at the meaningful volunteer experience offered through your Office of Volunteer Programs. Students, faculty and staff are invited to join in the MSU Volunteer Action effort which includes those opportunities listed below and others. Contact the MSU Volunteer Bureau, 24 Student Services Bldg., telephone 355-4402.

CURRENT OPPORTUNITIES

DRIVER WITH CHAUFFEUR'S LICENSE: West Side Action Center and the Friendship Day Care Center both need drivers for immediate and fall term transport of children in their van.

HUMS AUTHOR

London prof cites utility as source of story of art

EDITOR'S NOTE: State News State Writer Diane Petryk is currently studying in London under a program offered by the American Language and Educational Center.

By DIANE PETRYK LONDON—"The Story of Art," the art book used in humanities courses, was never intended to be a textbook, its author, E.H. Gombrich, told three MSU humanities classes in London recently.

"Perhaps if I'd written it as a text it wouldn't have been as successful," Gombrich said. Gombrich, currently a professor of history at the University of London, has impressive credentials as an art expert.

He studied at Oxford and Cambridge and later taught at these schools and at Harvard University. He has been a critic for the New York Times Review of Books and, in addition to holding many honorary degrees, was presented the Commander Order of the British Empire by Queen Elizabeth in 1966.

To help MSU students gain the most enjoyment and knowledge from their two-month stay in London, Gombrich advised them of the best galleries and museums to view great art.

He said that museums are considered dead by many people but added that "the idea that a museum is dead is perfectly true for those who cannot bring them to life. This is not easy. It depends on what we bring to our experience."

Gombrich suggested student art viewers be aware that much of what is considered art today was not created to be seen publicly, much less to be sold.

He feels the artist must often be alienated from society to comment on the age within which he lives.

His response to students' questions on the future of art was that it is "anybody's guess." But he reminded them that art began by serving a function for society or the church.

"What starts out as an object of utility often becomes an object of art by the way it's done and the competition, coming eventually to be prized for its own sake rather than the sake of its function," he said.

MAN bookstore offers membership

Changes in the operation of the Man and Nature Bookstore have made discounts on paperback books nearly 25 per cent.

The store has started selling "memberships" at $1 apiece to raise funds for expansion. Each member receives a membership card and a discount rate 5 per cent higher than that received by non-members.

The normal discount is 15 per cent on paperback books. Recently, however, the bookstore dissolved itself as a corporation and became a program within ASMSU. This gives it status as part of the University and exempts it from sales tax.

Geoff Alderson, Lansing sophomore and director of the store, said Thursday that he had already sold over 100 memberships in the store.

His goal is 40,000. All money received from membership sales will be used to buy paperback textbooks for fall term.

ORAL PRINTS

Voice tested for identification

By CAROL SHANKS Voice prints may be an oral alternative to fingerprints in identifying persons, suggested Oscar Tosi, associate professor of audiology and speech services.

An investigation of this possibility is currently under way by Tosi and the Audiology and Speech Services Dept. in conjunction with the Michigan State Police and the U.S. Dept. of Justice.

Tosi, research director for this experiment, was commissioned by the Michigan State Police in 1967 to evaluate this method of identification originally developed by Lawrence Kersta, president of Voice Print Laboratories in Somerville, N.J.

Over, administrative director for MSU's Voice Print program, substantiated the contract which made possible this investigation with the Michigan State Police and the U.S. Department of Justice.

Voice Print is a two-year experiment involving 250 male students with no marked dialectal difference as speakers. Tosi said.

The speakers' voices are relayed through a Spectograph machine which transmits them into print on paper called spectographs. Each spectograph is as unique in itself as individual fingerprints.

"The 250 random speakers represent at least a population of 250,000," Tosi commented.

He is now training MSU students to analyze and match these spectographs. The goals of this project consist of obtaining scores of correct identifications in different situations, he said.

Brad Lashbrook, asst. professor of communications, is helping in the statistical analysis of this experiment. The project will be one year old September 1969.

This experiment's aim is to prove or disprove Kersta's claim that voice identification through acoustic spectography is highly reliable," Tosi said.

Tosi is also credited with having developed the Spectograph "Tosi Gate" which is able to cut off a phonetic segment in connected speech.

East Lansing woman injured by glass door

An East Lansing woman received cuts and lacerations on her legs Tuesday afternoon when she tried to open a plate glass door at the M.A.C. Ave. exit of J. W. Knapp's Dept. Store.

The East Lansing rescue unit took Susan Marrs, 22, 512 Abbott Road, to Sparrow Hospital where her condition is

According to a witness, Miss Marrs attempted to open the door and a stone or piece of metal was apparently lodged at the bottom of the door. She jerked the door causing the frame to twist and the glass to explode at her.

On guard in Columbus

Ohio National Guard troops patrol the area early Tuesday near a grocery store that was heavily damaged during racial disorder Monday night on the near east side of Columbus. One man was killed, 25 injured and 130 arrested during a night of sniping, looting, fire bombing and vandalism that started after a white shop owner was arrested and charged in the fatal shooting of a black. More than 1,300 troops were called in to help police put down disturbances in the area.

Kennedy maintains silence

(continued from page one) was taking Miss Kopechne to catch a ferry back to Martha's Vineyard, which is separated from Chappaquiddick by a narrow channel and harbor. They came to Chappaquiddick separately to attend a dinner party for a small group of Kennedy friends.

Kennedy said that after the accident, he walked the mile or so back to the house where the party had been held. He said he climbed into the back seat of a car parked outside and asked "someone to bring me back to Edgartown where he was staying in a hotel."

"Why didn't the 'someone' Kennedy asked to return him to Edgartown try to find out what had happened?"

"Why didn't they try to determine what had happened to the senator's car? Or if they did, and Kennedy told them there had been an accident and Miss Kopechne was missing, why didn't they notify the police for Kennedy?"

The police weren't made aware of the wreck until about 8 a.m., when two boys going fishing spotted the wheels of the up-ended car in the pond. They didn't know the senator had been driving until Kennedy himself went to police headquarters just before 10 a.m. and made his statement.

then returning to his hotel room.

Wouldn't someone—a police officer making his rounds, or a tourist, for example—have seen him and tried to ascertain whether anything was wrong?"

Kennedy was heading away from the ferry landing, rather than toward it, when the wreck occurred. The bridge he went over is on the eastern side of the small island, the ferry landing on the western side. While the road leading toward the landing is paved, the road leading away from it is not. Kennedy had been on Chappaquiddick numerous times. He said he became confused and took a wrong turn. But again, why?

Miss Kopechne was buried Tuesday in Larksville, Pa. The funeral, held in nearby Plymouth, Pa., was attended by Kennedy, his wife Joan and Mrs. Ethel Kennedy, widow of Robert.

Nixon

(continued from page one) However, Nixon voiced hope that other countries will join America in the "next great venture of space." And he said it was a sad thing that about half the world's people—the Russians and the Red Chinese—were not allowed by their governments to see live television coverage of the moon landing.

"I want the time to come when the Chinese people and the Russian people and all the people of the world can walk together and talk together," he said.

The President's official day started off with a White House breakfast meeting with congressional leaders of both parties.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana reported afterwards that Nixon outlined with evangelistic fervor his hopes for his 24,000-mile journey.

White House sources have portrayed the trip as a good will jaunt in which the President will exchange views with Asian leaders about future policy there. Nixon is also stopping at Romania, the first U.S. President to go to a Communist country since World War II.

Shortly before his departure Nixon also called in Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who returned Tuesday from a four-day visit to South Vietnam.

Wheeler's airport arrival report to newsmen about progress in modernizing South Vietnamese forces—"I found the situation good"—indicated he may recommend that Nixon order a further withdrawal of U.S. troops.

Nixon is slated to decide on a further pullout of U.S. forces after he returns from his trip Aug. 3.

Apollo

(continued from page one) Blazing white hot as friction chars its outer heat shield, the spacecraft will re-enter the atmosphere in a long arcing fall over the Asian land mass to the landing site southwest of Hawaii.

The astronauts will clothe themselves in heavy head-to-toe suits and breathe through canisters cleansing their breath during the transfer from spacecraft to recovery ship.

On the ship, the carrier USS Hornet, the spacemen will be isolated in a special trailer designed to keep any germs from the astronauts from spreading to the rest of the world.

President Nixon will be on board the Hornet to greet them. But, like everyone else, he'll be allowed to see the spacemen only through a glass window in the side of a quarantine chamber.

After the trailer is flown to Houston, the astronauts will continue their quarantine in the $10 million Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

Tuition rates disliked

"If I were from out-of-state, I'd be furious," Ann Hodge, Bay City senior, said.

"And, if you just wanted to take a course outside your required number of credits, you'd really think twice about it," Miss Hodge said.

Louie Bender, non-candidate for MSU's presidency, focused some attention of the situation.

"I plan to take action on this problem early in my administration," the East Lansing junior said. "I will ask the board of trustees to raise my salary so I can pay my tuition."
