Collins linked to California murder

YPSILANTI (UPI) — A student charged with the latest of seven sex slayings in Michigan was linked Tuesday with the strangling death of a girl in California.

John Norman Collins also was identified as the driver of the car that picked up the second Michigan victim, Joan Schell.

"There is a strong inference that Collins is involved in Roxie Phillips' death," Sgt. Ken Christiansen of the Michigan State Police told newsmen in Salinas, Calif.

The nude body of Roxie Ann Phillips, 17, Milwaukie, Ore., with a red belt wrapped around her neck, was found in a trash pile of a lovers' lane area near Salinas July 16. Collins, an Eastern Michigan University (EMU) senior, was in the area at the time, police said.

At the same time, the Ann Arbor News reported that a witness told police Collins was the driver of the car that picked up Miss Schell, the EMU coed who was the second victim in the string of sadistic sex slayings that have terrorized this twin university area in the past two years.

Earlier a high police source said Collins' roommate, Arnie Davis, admitted he also was in the car that picked up Miss Schell, who lived across the street.

Miss Schell disappeared June 30, 1968, while hitchhiking in front of the EMU student union. Her nude, sexually molested body was found like the bodies of all the other Michigan victims, in an isolated lovers' lane area one week later. The 20-year-old art major had been stabbed five times and her throat had been slashed.

When she disappeared, witnesses told police she had climbed into a car with three youths.

The witness reportedly told police that Collins dropped off the other two males in the car. Collins then told the two that he had dropped off Miss Schell with the understanding he would pick her up later, the Ann Arbor News quoted the witness as saying.

The witness told police he had been afraid to talk after Miss Schell's murder, but that he was willing to talk after Collins was arrested and charged with the murder of Karen Sue Beineman.

In Salinas, Monterey County Sheriff's Detective Capt. Darol Smith said, "Roxie Ann was well aware of the existence of Collins."

Christiansen and another Michigan State Police officer traveled to Salinas to investigate possible links between the string of Michigan killings and the similar deaths of three young women in the Salinas area.

The handsome, husky Collins was arrested Friday and charged with the sex-torture murder of Miss Beineman, an 18-year-old student at EMU. Her strangled, nude body, battered beyond recognition, was found in a wooded gully at the outskirts of neighboring Ann Arbor, home of the University of Michigan (U-M) on July 26—three days after she disappeared.

Police believe the 96-pound Miss Beineman was slain at the home of Collins' vacationing Uncle, State Police Cpl. David Leik of Ypsilanti.

Miss Phillips, a visitor from Milwaukee, Ore., had disappeared June 30 while walking to a mailbox.

The day before, Nancy Albrecht, a visitor from Fort Worth, Tex., and a close friend of Roxie Ann, had a date with Collins, Smith said.

He said Collins apparently met Miss Albrecht June 29 and visited the home where she was staying, four blocks from (please turn to page 9)

Huff stresses small colleges aid undergrad

By MARILYN PATTERSON

Private colleges can make an enormous—maybe a fateful—contribution to the needs of youth in their continued commitment to undergraduate education. Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, told about 200 trustees of small colleges Monday night.

Big public universities too often subordinate undergraduate education to graduate and research programs, thus leaving education of the bulk of the undergraduates to private colleges, he said at the meeting at Yakeley Hall.

"The commonly accepted goal in the big public university," Huff said, "is to get a zero undergraduate teaching load or as near to it as possible, a big research grant and two or three very bright Ph.D. candidates."

"The message is that if you can somehow get a student body made up as much as possible of the upper 10 per cent or 15 per cent of the youth of America as judged by a test that predicts success, your graduates will be distinguished and you will be known as a great prestigious university and will be loved by all."

This, he said, leaves out the "not so bright student" who may need an education more than the high school valedictorian.

The needs of the young can be met only by the wise reaction of private schools to the big school de-emphasis on undergraduate education, he said.

"If you continue to demonstrate to the American public that you care about undergraduate education and do indeed have the ability to deliver a quality learning experience, you will make an enormous contribution to our society," Huff said.

While issues needing public debate in a large state-supported university are easier to identify than they are in a private school, he said, "the position of trustees of private colleges are only slightly less complicated than are trustees of public institutions."

Walter Adams, renaissance man

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

Acting President Adams says that his first love is teaching, and his record as a teacher appears to reflect that devotion.

Adams received the Outstanding Teacher Award in 1959 and the Distinguished Faculty Award in 1960.

He conducts his classes in the Socratic method, using extensive questioning and gives essay exams exclusively. He is known for his ability to remember the names of his students even when there are 150 in the class.

But as the University's chief administrator, he has been forced to deal with students in situations removed from the classroom.

In the months following his appointment, he has encountered three potentially explosive student demonstrations.

The first was an attempt to prevent representatives of the city of Oakland, Calif., from interviewing in the Placement Bureau. Adams startled many by going directly to the scene talking with the demonstrators and personally escorting students through the crowd for their interviews.

Personal approach

The second protest occurred at the Wilson Hall cafeteria, which was occupied by black students following charges of racism against Wilson supervisory employees. Adams talked with white students from Wilson, and was cited by many residents as having a "cooling effect."

Adams also personally confronted demonstrators at an anti-ROTC demonstration sponsored by Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) at Demonstration Hall. A struggle between anti-ROTC forces and counter-demonstrators failed to reach serious proportions with Adams on the scene, talking with both sides and attempting to calm the situation.

The new acting president has not won the hearts of all campus radical leaders, however. A colleague of Adams' in the Economics Dept. pointed out they are finding it hard to have a confrontation and "radicalize the moderates" with a University president who will talk with protestors and does not immediately call in the police.

Wry wit

Adams has enjoyed a rapport with students unusual among college presidents. Part of his rapport can be attributed to his well known sense of humor.

A facetious endorsement by Adams of Gen. Charles DeGaulle of France for the presidency of MSU was picked up by wire services and sent around the world.

Friends of Adams in France and Brazil have mailed him copies of their local papers with his comments and picture displayed on the front page.

The acting president is a fan of the French "Theater of the Absurd." He has said that he attempts to live as if whatever he is doing is the most important thing in the world, and yet at the same time tries to keep a sense of perspective on the matter by realizing the WASHINGTON (AP)—An almost evenly-balanced Senate headed Tuesday for a showdown on the Nixon Administration's fight for deployment of the Safeguard antiballistic missile system (ABM).

With voting scheduled to start today, ABM supporters said they would win 51 to 49, while opponents claimed 50 votes, one short of the necessary majority, with two senators still uncommitted.

The initial test will come on an amendment by Sens. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ky., and Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., to bar ABM deployment and site acquisition while permitting continuation of research.

Many regard today's vote as a symbolic demonstration of congressional desire to curb Pentagon spending and reorder national priorities to meet domestic needs.

See Related Story p. 5

In fact, Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., an ABM opponent, said a narrow administration victory would really be a triumph for his side.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., likened today's vote to the early days of the Vietnam war and said, "The Safeguard ABM proposal may well be to the nuclear arms race what the Tonkin Gulf resolution was to Vietnam." He referred to the 1964 resolution which the Johnson administration cited as the basis for sending ground troops to Vietnam.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., an ABM supporter, called much of the emotionalism over Safeguard a reaction to Vietnam. The real issue, he said, is whether the Senate "gives the President the tools to bring peace and security or denies them."

The vote could be the closest on a national security issue since the House extended the draft by one vote in the summer of 1941—just months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

It could even wind up in a tie—but that would mean an administration victory, since an amendment fails on a tie vote.

Meanwhile, Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre, D-N.H., is waiting in the wings with

Investigation to study campus power failures

The causes of two power failures which darkened the campus Monday night have not yet been discovered, Paul Nilson, superintendent of MSU's utility services, said Tuesday.

Nilson said the MSU Power Plant staff is conducting an investigation to uncover the causes of the campus-wide blackouts.

The first blackout occurred at approximately 6 p.m., and restoration of power was started by 7 p.m., Nilson said. By 7:40 p.m., power was fully restored to the campus.

The second blackout occurred at 8:15 p.m., but all circuits were restored by 8:27 p.m., he said.

"We have a circuit priority here. We try to restore service in key areas like the hospital and Kellogg Center first," Nilson said.

He noted that the campus was never completely blacked out. The power plant and some other key areas were supplied by "reserve power" from Consumer's Power, a Lansing utility company.

Nilson explained that if the power plant itself was blacked out, it would have been very difficult to restore power to the rest of the campus. This was the problem faced by power companies during the large-scale northeast blackout a few years ago, he said.

"This is the first blackout on campus since December 1967," Nilson added. "They occur at random."

A short but vicious fire fight broke out in the A Shau Valley Tuesday, the third since Sunday, but U.S. officers said they saw no mounting enemy threat in that major infiltration corridor in the north of South Vietnam.

A small enemy force attacked a light defense position of an element of the 101st Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade. The 45-minute fight left one American killed and four wounded.

A newspaper in Leningrad carried a story Tuesday under a one-word headline "Shame," that told of a project to sell grave markers of such famous families as the Tolstoy.

The city is selling markers that it feels are in bad shape and are a sore spot for as much as 100 rubles--$1111 at the official rate of exchange.

Mariano Rumor formed his second government in eight months Tuesday ending a 31-day crisis but leaving Italy's deep political troubles largely unresolved.

President Giuseppe Saragat approved Rumor's list of 35 ministers for an all-Christian Democrat minority government, a stopgap body to govern with the support in Parliament of two Socialist parties. It will be sworn in today.

Scientists at the Lunar Receiving Laboratory in Houston say that rare gases found in the dust particles evidently came to the moon from the sun as a result of great thermonuclear reactions that propel the solar winds out into space.

Scientists in Pasadena poured over a wealth of information about Mars Tuesday, hopeful that a final stream of pictures from Mariner 7 would help solve some of the red planets remaining puzzles.

The Coast Guard Tuesday kept watch on a three mile-long oil slick in Lake Erie about 30 miles north of the resort area of Port Clinton.

The Coast Guard said the slicks, estimated to be several hundred yards long, apparently were caused by an abandoned oil well operated by Quillan-Boychuck and Associates, Ltd., of Chatham, Ont.

The slicks were first reported by a commercial airliner Monday.

POW camps termed 'adequate'

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)--Three Americans wearing blue dungarees and rubber Ho Chi Minh sandals arrived from Hanoi Tuesday night looking pale and gaunt from months in North Vietnamese prisoner of war camps.

Lt. Robert Franchot Frishman, 29, acting as spokesman for the freed men, said their treatments had been adequate and reported the North Vietnamese had made no attempt to brainwash him. He assured relatives of the many Americans left behind in North Vietnamese camps that they had no cause for worry.

With Frishman, a Navy pilot from Santee, Calif., were Capt. Wesley Lewis Rumble, 26, an Air Force pilot from Oroville, Calif., and Douglas Hegdahl, a seaman apprentice from Watertown, S.D.

They arrived from the North Vietnamese capital aboard an International Control Commission plane, accompanied by a four-man American pacifist mission headed by Rennie Davis. The pacifists took over custody of the three in Hanoi Monday.

Met officials

The three met aboard the plane for 40 minutes with officials from the U.S. Embassy before coming out to talk to reporters. They apparently were discussing whether to fly to Udon Air Base in Thailand or to travel home aboard a commercial flight. One of the pacifists said their travel route still was undecided.

Frishman chose his words carefully while talking with reporters, saying, "I do not want to jeopardize other prisoners still there. My treatment has been adequate."

He went on to say that treatment of the other two also had been adequate, then added that relatives of other prisoners should not worry.

Frishman's right arm hung limply at his side as he spoke. He had been wounded when his plane was shot down northwest of Hanoi Oct. 24, 1967.

Frishman praised the North Vietnamese doctors who had spared him from an amputation.

"The doctors were very busy giving treatment to their own people," Frishman said. "It would have been easier to amputate my arm but they operated on me and removed my elbow. I still have my arm."

Basic diet

Asked about the prisoners' diet, Frishman replied that it was "based around bread, soup and pigmeat. It may not sound very good but they had a way of preparing it that made it tasty."

Rumble said nothing to reporters, and Hegdahl very little. Rumble was shot down over North Vietnam's southernmost province, Quang Binh, on April 28, 1968. Hegdahl fell into the sea from the U.S. cruiser Canberra on April 5, 1967, and was picked up by North Vietnamese fishermen.

Hegdahl did say rather nervously that the main activities in prison camp were sweeping floors, smoking and listening to the North Vietnamese propaganda radio, the Voice of Vietnam.

The three men were escorted from the Vientiane airport to U.S. Embassy limousines, which took them to the home of U.S. Ambassador G. McMurtrie Godley, who was out of town.

Go to Bangkok

Davis, coordinator of the National Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam, said he thought the men would fly to Bangkok Wednesday and take a commercial airliner to the United States.

"It has not yet been firmly fixed but I think they'll be back at JFK New York's international airport on Thursday," he added.

Frishman, Rumble and Hegdahl were the third group of American prisoners released by Hanoi to pass through Vientiane on their way to freedom. The other groups of three came out in January and August of 1968.

Davis, speaking to newsmen after the three men had left the airport, said that during his two-week stay in Hanoi, Premier Phan Van Dong had told him that 1970 would be "the fiercest year of fighting in the war."

RACIAL HEARING

Trantham's trial delayed

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

Summer vacations and the absence of key witnesses are major factors barring a second hearing for Joseph Trantham, former Wilson Hall food service manager, said Duane M. Hildebrandt, Lansing attorney for Trantham.

"As a practical matter, the hearing couldn't be held this summer," Hildebrandt stated.

Trantham and former Wilson Hall manager Elaine M. Mishler, both accused of racial discrimination during the Wilson Hall takeover last spring, were transferred to non-supervisory positions as a result of the first hearing.

The two employees were offered a new hearing by Acting President Adams upon recommendation from the Academic Council.

Hildebrandt said the two individuals who first brought charges against Trantham and Miss Mishler are not employed by the University this summer, they are both expected back in the fall.

"When you have a number of witnesses, chances are that some of them are not going to be around," he noted.

Hildebrandt said that until last week either he or Trantham was on vacation and could not confer on any actions to be taken.

"We're now in the process of discussing the matter," he added.

Hildebrandt acknowledged receiving a letter dated July 8 from University attorney Leland W. Carr, listing eight possible candidates to sit on a three-man mediation panel at the second hearing.

"I am neither happy nor unhappy with the list," he said. "I don't know any of the men, but I have to trust that they are professional mediators."

Miss Mishler's attorney has since informed Carr that his client does not wish to participate in a second hearing.

Amusing challenge to the laws of men

To the average man it is always a little heartening to see someone put something over on the establishment. To the slightly irreverent among us, it is even more pleasurable when the put-on is done at the expense of some sacred cow. The Universal Life Church, Inc., has seemingly been able to do both these things.

All one need do to become a Man of God is to write the church headquarters in Modesto, Calif., and request ordination. Prospective ministers are ordained by return mail without regard to race, creed, color or religious belief. They need adhere to no fixed theology beyond a promise to do what is "right." The church proports that, once ordained, a minister is legally entitled to all privileges and exceptions and the ability to perform all functions that are due to any other clergyman of another religion.

Mail-order ministers of this type apparently can perform marriages, baptisms, funerals, see prisoners in jail and all the other functions of a minister in the State of Michigan.

As far as the state is concerned, all one need be is an "ordained minister"—the definition of which is left up to the individual denomination. This ambiguity is due to the fact that the state is very hesitant to go messing around in church business.

Unfortunately, all the claims made by Universal Life Church President Kirby Hensley are not true, at least in this state. His sect is not incorporated under Michigan law and, in as much as it is incorporated in the state of California, no one may represent himself as an agent of the church in this state. This means that you cannot sign contracts in the name of the church, or take your apartment off the tax rolls as a house of worship.

Certainly, Hensley's sect is making a not-too-subtle mockery of organized religion, but we find no great harm in this. It is the often-silly laws of men that are being flaunted, not the laws of God.

Every man contains within himself a particle of the godhead and is, thereby, his own minister. Certainly it is all-right to have specially trained and educated individuals to lead people in their worship if they so desire, but this sort of thing can get out of hand. In this country, too many people forget their own divinity and give to the clergy sole access to the Lord Above.

The Universal Life Church is an amusing gadfly that bites at the flab of organized religion. Possibly it, like other similar movements in history, might even make the churches shake off a little of their pomposity and hypocrisy.

Our only criticism is that we feel that the Universal Life Church, Inc., should get its facts right before it goes about happily ordaining men of the cloth. Somebody could get hurt in a legal snarl under the corporate laws of Michigan, or with the federal government over taxes.

Undoubtedly, this whimsical sect is somewhat of a farce, but it is important to remember that many of its adherents take it seriously. Besides, nobody is coercing anyone to join, and if the traditional denominations of this nation cannot survive this tiny challenge, then their general merit is dubious.

Man in the muddle

Vice President for Business and Finance Roger Wilkinson is one of the little men caught in the middle of a big bureaucracy.

Wilkinson became acting Vice President for finance after the infamous Philip May was displaced from the University. It has now been over a year since May left and Wilkinson temporarily moved into the Vice President post. Wilkinson is still "acting."

It's not that Wilkinson has done a poor job, or even that there is any tremendous difficulty in moving him to a permanent position, it's rather a matter of consideration for the next president of the University that has kept Wilkinson in his quagmire.

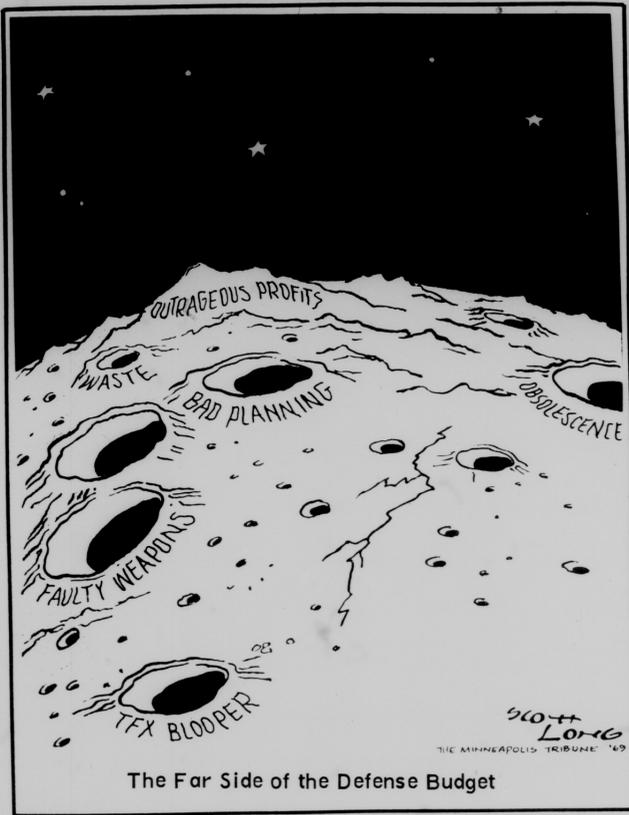

The Vice President for business and finance is appointed by the President with approval by the board of trustees. Acting President Adams has chosen, however, to leave the decision to the permanent president, whomever that might be.

And, one can note, this situation presents an element of uncertainty for the University as well. Because the possibility exists that under a new president, Wilkinson could well be replaced by a political appointee—a move that would likely prove detrimental to all concerned, if only because it would be trading off known ability for the unknown.

So this seeming willingness to trade away Wilkinson's quiet, proven efficiency on an unknown bet seems foolhardy at worst, unrealistic at best. We therefore urge that President Adams exercise the legally defined option he has, and appoint Roger Wilkinson to the post of vice president for financial affairs. And that will be the end of a man in the middle.

OUR READERS' MIND

Create Indian social revolution

To the Editor:

To my mind the controversy over Dr. Sharma's research grant raises vital questions about the behavior of a foreign national in a host country. As a patriot of Dr. Sharma I thought it my duty to invite the attention of the University community to this aspect of the question.

It is common knowledge that Dr. Sharma was an active participant in some public demonstrations on the campus. It was reported that he participated in the demonstrations against ROTC and against the dismissal of Dr. Garskoff. Also according to the newspaper reports, he was a participant in the demonstration organized by a section of the students to protest the conferring of an honorary degree on Mr. Kittikachoran, the Thai Minister, when he visited the campus. This demonstration was organized on the ground that the ministers was a puppet regime of the American Government and the University was being misused to award an apparent respectability to the regime. I can understand Dr. Sharma's participation in the Garskoff and ROTC issues, but can never understand his participation in the Thai minister episode. Was it not an affair between the American public and the Thai Government? What was the part of an Indian national in this affair? Nor has he been content with his part in affairs which directly or indirectly concerned academics. Only the other day he came up, through the newspaper column, with a vow to work for the defeat of the representative who was instrumental for a repeal of his grant.

In India there are often complaints about the participation of foreign nationals and utilization of foreign funds in elections, and such attempts are invariably publicly condemned. If an American professor working in an Indian University attempts active participation in matters political, I would tell him "hands off." I am sure the feelings of the public in this country cannot be anyway different in like circumstances. It is certainly important to separate academics from politics. To my mind it is equally important for academic people to set the standards of public behavior.

There has been instances of some of our countrymen working on alien soil, to further the causes of their own country and countrymen. Ghandiji was actively working in South Africa for the cause of his fellow-countrymen. Netaji was working in Hitler's Germany for the independence of India. If only they chose to, they had equally worthy, if not worthier causes to fight for. Ghandiji could have chosen to unleash a total struggle against the barbaric regime in South Africa. Netaji could have chosen to work against Nazism, remaining in Germany. But these Greater men in their higher Wisdom chose to limit their public activity to matters immediately concerning the well-being of their countrymen. I am afraid that Dr. Sharma, by his activities, far from helping the Indian Cause, is further alienating at least a section of the people of this vicinity from the Indian cause.

Dr. Sharma gives the impression of one imbued with revolutionary zeal. We are very badly in need of a social revolution in India. Dr. Sharma claims adversity will not deter him from working for causes dear to his heart. If so, his field is his own country, not America. Social work, like charity, I believe, begins at home. If he pretends that he is more concerned with racism in America and Vietnam, than poverty and backwardness at home, people like me cannot take him seriously. And I suppose, it is an insult to the creative talent of this country, if they have to import a revolutionary from India to create a revolution here.

I have always been for the re-institution of the grant of Dr. Sharma. And it goes to the credit of the people of this country that they have set high standards of behavior in reinstating his grant. At the same time, it is equally important for them to examine Dr. Sharma's public behavior critically. Those who worked for the reinstatement of his grant, I believe, have an added responsibility in this matter.

Hats off to bike law

To the Editor:

It has come to my attention that Gov. Milliken has signed a new bill into law which will require motorcyclists to wear crash helmets beginning September 1st. I call it a new bill but actually it, or a similar bill, was signed into law once before and was declared unconstitutional by the Michigan Supreme Court last year. The truth is now apparent. The Michigan Legislature not only has no concern for the personal freedom of its citizens, it also has no respect for its own supreme court. If we can not obtain justice through the courts, there is only one course left. If the law is not stricken down before September 1st, I call upon all motorcyclists who are as deeply concerned with the personal freedom of the citizens of this state as I am to join me in removing our helmets in a massive defiance of this unjust law. If the law is allowed to stand, we shall have moved one step closer to 1984.

Nigerian conflict: different wars

By MORT ROSENBLUM
Associated Press Writer

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — Each side is fighting a different kind of war in the two-year-old West African civil war.

Nigerian federal forces are confined to the roads and towns as they try to squeeze Biafra's 3,000-square-mile secessionist enclave off the African map.

The Biafrans control the bush, sometimes infiltrating the outskirts of the towns-harassing, striking with lightning guerrilla raids, temporarily cutting roads and withdrawing.

Neutral military sources said the last major conventional battles were in April, when federal troops captured the Biafran capital of Umuahia but lost the strategic town of Owerri in the process.

Early in the war the Nigerians advanced quickly, since much of the fighting was in areas peopled by minority tribes often opposed to Biafra's secession. Now the circle has tightened around the predominant Ibo tribe, hard core secessionists, and advances are painful and difficult.

The Nigerians control the road to Umuahia and, theoretically, the town itself. But Biafrans are still on the outskirts, and sporadic infiltration by the secessionists causes occasional street fighting in the former Biafran capital.

Nigeria's 3rd Marine Commando Division—one of the best disciplined federal units and commanded by Lt. Col. Segun Ohasanjo, who replaced Col. Benjamin "Black Scorpion" Adekunle—is advancing on Biafran-held Owerri from Port Harcourt. But the advance is slow since the division has also been ordered to straighten out the jagged front along the way.

Neutral observers said the 3rd Division might skirt Owerri to cut the vital road between Owerri and Orlu before trying to seize the two towns, the last ones held by the Biafrans.

Though the federals hold the roads, small Biafran units are infiltrating parallel to the Nigerian main forces. One such dogleg is threatening the rich Imo River oil field about 20 miles north of Port Harcourt.

The latest fighting was reported Friday about three miles east of Onitsha. A Biafran brigade of 800 to 1,000 men, stranded earlier near the Onitsha-Enugu road, linked with its main force and cut off road traffic, communiques said. This forced Nigeria's embattled Onitsha garrison to receive supplies by a longer route from the Midwest.

The Onitsha troops have been harassed in this way by surrounding Biafran forces for 16 months. During that time they have repeatedly tried to break out to Nnewi, 12 miles to the southeast but have been thrown back by the Biafrans each time.

Nnewi is the last major defense point before Biafra's sole airstrip on the Udi road, considered a key target of the war and thus heavily defended.

In the Midwest, where the Niger River marks Biafra's western boundary, rains left much of the west bank under water recently. The floods forced the federals to pull out, leaving some territory to the secessionists.

More people watched the television picture of the Apollo astronauts on the surface of the moon than any other televised event. Not bad for a black and white show with no commercials.

The lunar surface didn't look that alien and harsh to me. In fact, it reminded me of MSU's commuter parking lot.

After leaving isolation, the Apollo 11 crew will be awarded this nation's highest honor—a spot on the Ed Sullivan Show.

With the weather we've had recently, I'm surprised that the ski club hasn't reactivated.

Can a girl get pregnant when both she and the guy are fully clothed? I recently read an article in which a girl asked if she could get pregnant although she was fully clothed. No mention was made of the guy. The answer to that question was, "Yes, you could." No explanation was given. If this is true, could you please explain.

You are quite right, an explanation is needed. Dissemination of partial information could lead to needless inhibition of activity. Sperm are highly aggressive and persistent cells. They also can move at a pretty good speed. It may be possible for them to traverse undergarments in sufficient numbers to leave their mark. Even my mystic friends agree that the guy has to be at least unzipped. Intercourse does not have to occur if both parties are sufficiently undressed and in reasonable approximation to each other, but the odds of pregnancy are very low.

Is it possible to become pregnant while having intercourse during menstruation? If so, what are the chances? Please elaborate. Please answer.

Please see preceding question and answer. The principle here is again one of egg and sperm meeting. Menstruation generally begins about 14 days after ovulation. While some women enjoy unusually regular ovulation (and therefore regular menstruation), most women experience some variation in these physiological phenomena. At the extreme end of such variation, is the possibility that ovulation can occur while menstruation is in progress. The menstrual flow may not be sufficient to keep the indefatigable sperm from its purpose. The chances of this occurring are exceedingly small and, generally, most people pay no heed. Clearly, if your menstrual cycle is very irregular and you are eager not to become pregnant, caution is warranted.

Tax reform bill sweetened

WASHINGTON (AP)—The tax reform bill was sweetened Tuesday—the eve of House debate—with an additional $2.4 billion of tax relief, mostly for low and middle income taxpayers.

The Ways and Means Committee acted unanimously after critics, led by the moderate-liberal Democratic Study Group, complained the bill skipped some three or four million taxpayers in its relief provisions and did not fulfill its promise of at least 5 per cent tax reduction for all but the rich.

Chairman Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., however, said the change merely carries out the committee's original intention. The tax tables as first drafted, he said, indicated there had been "misunderstanding between the committee and the staff of the Treasury."

The committee's original tax rate revision did not include any rate cuts for the lowest five income brackets, counting on other special low income provisions to provide relief there. These brackets run up to 4,000 for a single person, 8,000 for a married couple filing jointly, in taxable income—after exemptions and deductions.

The committee has now decided on a one percentage point cut in the rates for these brackets

Scientist astronaut quits job

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—Scientist-astronaut Dr. F. Curtis Michel announced Tuesday he's quitting the space agency, thus joining a growing number of scientists fleeing a program they believe too "engineer-oriented."

Michel resigned by letter to astronaut chief Donald K. Slayton. He said he did so with reluctance, but that he was eager to devote more time to science, and the opportunities to fly into space are rare.

Three other scientist-astronauts out of the 17 selected by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) resigned earlier.

Sources said some of those remaining also are unhappy about the long wait for a flight and the lack of emphasis on science in the program. None yet has been assigned to a mission.

Dr. Elbert King, curator of the Lunar Receiving Laboratory, is resigning in September to take a post at the University of Houston.

King said NASA has "given science a back seat in the last few years," but that must change if the space program is to succeed now that the first astronauts have landed on the moon.

"Now that we've accomplished our national goal," he said, "there has to be a good scientific reason for us to keep going back to the moon. NASA has made no real effort to develop this to go into effect in two stages in 1971 and 1972. The reduction will affect not only persons whose entire income is in those brackets but everyone with higher income, reducing the levy on the first $4,000 or $8,000 income taxed.

The committee also provided an extra one percentage point cut for the two brackets covering taxable incomes from $10,000 to $12,000 for a single person, $20,000 to $24,000 for a couple.

A spokesman said examination of the tables as originally prepared showed that these brackets would receive less than the aimed-for 5 per cent reduction.

While the rate reductions, both the original ones and those newly added, will affect taxpayers all the way up the income scale, the committee calculates that for those in the top brackets the effect will be outweighed by other reform provisions limiting preferences enjoyed by the wealthy.

The additional $2.4 billion tax relief raised the bill's ultimate total in tax cuts, by 1979, to $9.2 billion, no longer completely balanced by revenue-raising changes, which amount only to $6.8 billion.

The committee spokesman said the difference would come out of the anticipated increase in government revenues as the national economy grows.

The tax writer's quick revision came midway during a hearing by the House Rules Committee on procedures for handling the bill Wednesday and Thursday on the House floor. A vote is expected Thursday.

Mills asked for the closed rule customary on tax measures, barring amendments except those proposed by the Ways and Means Committee itself.

Members of the Democratic Study Group (DSG), however, pressed for a modified rule that would have allowed them to offer amendments on the rate scale and also to delete from the bill its provision continuing the income surcharge at 5 per cent from Jan. 1 through July 31, 1970. Congress already has extended the surtax at 10 per cent through Dec. 31, 1969.

The DSG distributed an analysis of the bill contending that of the $2 billion relief to be provided by the original rate revisions, nearly $1.8 billion would go to persons with total incomes of $15,000 or more.

OPPOSES HART

Augenstein eyes Senate

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

Leroy G. Augenstein, chairman of the Biophysics Dept., said Monday he may run for the U.S. Senate in 1970 against Michigan's Democratic incumbent Sen. Philip Hart. "I'm not officially in the race, but I'm taking a look," Augenstein said after distributing to news media copies of a letter critical of Sen. Hart's opposition to President Nixon's proposed Safeguard anti-ballistic missile system (ABM).

In the letter to Hart, Augenstein cited Hart's past support of missile and anti-missile programs and asked reasons for the "abrupt switch."

"Why, after supporting ABM development without question from 1959 to Aug. 22, 1967, did you abruptly change and become an avid foe less than two months later on Oct. 9," Augenstein asked Hart.

Hart and Sen. John Sherman Cooper, R-Ken., have led the Senate fight against development of the ABM system.

Augenstein criticized Hart's views that the ABM would contribute to an expansion of the arms race, would not contribute to the national security, is highly costly and may be impossible to successfully develop.

Formerly a scientist in the Atomic Energy Commission Augenstein said Hart now condemns the Safeguard ABM system "for at least four reasons, all of which seem to apply much more to the Nike-Zeus system which you supported."

Augenstein said that the tremendous technological strides evidenced by recent moon shot and Mars probe are indicative that an ABM system can be successfully developed.

Sen. Hart's Washington office said Tuesday Hart has not issued a formal reply to Augenstein.

In the past month, Augenstein's warnings against the possibility of disease that could spread from organisms brought back from the moon have received extensive press coverage.

During this same period, he offered the State Board of Education his own sex education guidelines that he said was a "compromise plan" that could bring opponents and backers of sex education together.

Ann Arbor festival blazed with weekend blues fever

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer
A happy amalgam of freaks, blacks and traits felt privileged to give Roosevelt Sykes a five-minute ovation and demand an encore. While only the first in a long procession of bluesmen, Sykes established an initial rapport with the crowd that failed to subside throughout the three-day Ann Arbor Blues Festival.

Something East Lansing has never seen—and probably never will—this gathering of the clan left little to be desired in the way of pure talent. The guitars didn't glisten, the drum heads were tainted morning-after yellow and the drummers sat on paste-board suitcases, but diamonds don't need rings to increase their value.

An interesting phenomenon was the programming of the festival. Apparently aware of the fact that much of the audience was composed of comparative blues novices, country blues began the shows Friday and Saturday evenings when the crowds were relatively small and blues-oriented. As more and more people filtered onto the park city blues, the blues most young whites can dig took over. As the night grew older and the crowd grew larger, the music became louder and more refined.

Friday night Sykes and Arthur "Big Boy" Crudup sing about how it is "down home," while a moment in time and a generation in music later young Jimmy Dawkins and his cousin drummer and sax man started shouting what Chicago's West side has to offer a poor boy.

Sleepy John Estes laid it down first Saturday night. Sleepy John is blind. And he needs help walking. And he and his wife and kids nearly starved in Chicago during the Depression. And he told 15,000 white kids what it's like to be a black man in Tennessee in the 20's and a black man in Illinois in the 40's. And he sang a song about John Kennedy and the crowd bowed its head.

One of Luther Allison's guitar strings broke in the middle of a song and he smiled at the audience with the kind of look that said, "Man, our guitar strings a-been bustin' for 300 years."

With a cat-like grace that made one nauseous at the thought of Motown slick and white-town "soul," Allison padded his way around the stage fondling his tarnished axe.

Performers meet at 'Intersection'

Every Saturday from 9 p. m. to midnight, the Intersection features folk-rock music, dramatic readings, lots of coffee and conversation.

The Intersection, at the Psi Upsilon fraternity house, 810 W. Grand River Ave., is a coffee house sponsored by the University Reformed Church.

"The Garbage Collector," a short play which has been read at the coffee house was written by Jean Fenner, East Lansing High School student.

Admission is 25 cents. Coffee and popcorn are served.

It was getting to be 11 p. m. and Clifton Chenier and his accordion had departed and Howlin' Wolf had drained 95 per cent of the audience's adrenalin with 45 minutes of blues from the gut. Otis Rush finally appeared and the crowd knew somebody had to do some fast talking if Muddy Waters was going to sing it.

For a moment it appeared as though a wine, hash, and blues-high crowd would explode when told that Muddy had been scratched. A few swift words between the promoter and the police finally allowed 20,000 standing people to see and hear one of the four or five greatest blues musicians alive.

Sunday afternoon's gig was a sun-baked magic carpet ride of singing flesh and spitting watermelon seeds and shirtless backs and shoeless feet and shameless blues. The hash haze of Saturday night lifted and the blues flowed so thick that no one noticed Jim Morrison emerge from a van and sit cross-legged backstage.

Fred McDowell, Roosevelt Sykes and Jim Dawkins warmed the audience for a brilliant four-hour stretch of bluesmanship by Luther Allison, Charley Musslewhite and Big Mama Thornton.

Allison, a veteran at age 29, plays guitar like his life depended on it. After a 45-minute set alone and a one-hour show with T-Bone Walker, Allison wrang his shirt out and jammed with Charley Musslewhite for another hour.

Choosing from a bag-full of mouth harps and guzzling Pabst by the can, Musslewhite blew to the point of exhaustion. A former protégé of Junior Wells, Will Shade and Jimmy Cotton, he gave a show which has to rate as high as anything he or Paul Butterfield or Howlin' Wolf ever thought of doing. And then Big Mama Willie Mae Thornton burst onstage like a freight train as the sun set. T-Bone Walker came back and played guitar and Aretha Franklin's trumpeter shattered the p.a. system while Big Mama sang "Ball and Chain" and "Hound Dog" like Janis Joplin and Elvis wish they could.

After the amps had cooled and everybody groaned from a meal of hot dogs and Mountain Dew, Chicago Sam Lay sat down and made his drum heads beg for mercy. Lay, formerly with the Butterfield Blues Band, appeared with four mediocre musicians, one of which used to be Mitch Ryder's pianist (honest).

A state of hyper-tensive frenzy seized the crowd as Jimmy Cotton got into a half-hour song that left Cotton shirtless and the audience breathless. Never has a performer worked as hard as Cotton did not James Brown not Ginger Baker, not even Mick Jagger. Never has anyone sung "Let Your Love Light Shine" and "Please, Please, Please" like Cotton did.

Only 85-year-old Son House could have closed the festival. Only the once-forgotten Son House could have lived the songs he sang of the old South. Only Son House could have concluded with a medley of spirituals sung a cappella with his wife. Only Son House could have drawn tears with "This Little Light of Mine." Only Son House.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

Campus programs aid minorities

Through its Equal Opportunity Programs, MSU is seeking to move toward greater representation of minority groups in its student body, faculty and administrative staffs.

Equal Opportunity Programs director Joseph H. McMillan, former superintendent of inner-city schools in Grand Rapids, noted the efforts the program is making in the education of black and other minority group students.

"MSU is making increased efforts," McMillan said, "in the development of on-campus tutorial programs for disadvantaged students. A system is also being set up for reviewing and allocating grants to graduate and undergraduate disadvantaged students utilizing existing University offices."

Wilbur B. Brookover, associate director of Equal Opportunity Programs and the center for Urban Affairs, reports that on-campus programs underway include the counseling of minority group students, the development and support of a larger black faculty, urban research

Doors' Morrison, Krieger shape 'The Soft Parade'

By RAY WALSH
State News Reviewer

After a year's wait since their last album, the Doors have returned to the music scene with their fourth endeavor, "The Soft Parade."

The long-awaited album unfortunately offers only a handful of new songs, with the title song standing out as most notable. "The Soft Parade" performed in the unmistakable Doors' style, lasts more than eight minutes and opens with Jim Morrison recalling his earlier days in seminary school. The free verse that follows seems to ramble on, vaguely coming to the conclusion that "All our lives we sweat and save Building for a shallow grave."

"Do It" consists of two phrases, sung over and over again with instrumental bridges added to stretch it out to three minutes. The phrases repeat words often heard from parents: "Please, please listen to me children. You are the ones who will rule the world."

Robbie Krieger's "Running Blues" provides a change of pace for the Doors, combining rock sound with country music. "Tell All the People," the group's latest single, is also on the album and is reminiscent of the old Crispian St. Peter song "Pied Piper."

"Touch Me" and "Wistful Sinfu" are two other songs on the album, although the latter received little airplay due to Morrison's masturbation incident in Miami.

The album is completed with "Shaman's Blues," "Wild Child" and "Easy Ride," with the musical artistry of the Doors adding greatly to the imagery patterns woven throughout their songs.

It's easy to tell the difference between the two song writers—Krieger's are more complex compositions involving chord changes and using catchy melodies, while Morrison comes through with his basic rambling blues.

The record sleeve includes black and white photos of the Doors, but already they are outdated: half the group has grown beards. On the other side of the sleeve are all the words to the Doors' songs.

Even though Elektra raised the album price $1, "The Soft Parade" by the Doors will undoubtedly become another million seller with no trouble.

Local Model City scheme forged

Testing 1-2-3

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer
First in a series

In order that such social problems as crime and juvenile delinquency, unemployment, blighted neighborhoods and disease may be solved in Lansing, the primary foundations of a new urban improvement program are now being laid. Within a J-shaped area in Lansing's central city, officially designated as a "Model City" by the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), reside 11 per cent of the city's population.

These 16,000 individuals represent 62 per cent of the unemployed, 36 per cent of the poverty families and 22 per cent of the welfare case load. They reside in 28 per cent of the dilapidated housing structures and are victims of a crime rate which is twice as high as the rest of Lansing.

It was because of conditions similar to these in most cities that the Johnson Administration passed the Demonstration Cities and Metropolitan Development Act of 1966.

Title I of this act is designed to help selected cities of all sizes in all parts of the nation to improve social, physical and economic conditions in blighted neighborhoods. In general, it is designed for people who live in the area involved.

In 1968, HUD notified Lansing that it had been named to receive a Model Cities Planning Grant of up to $128,000. In anticipation of an actual contract, the Lansing City Council adopted Ordinance No. 185 on Jan. 13, 1969.

This ordinance established the City Demonstration Agency as a city department. The agency consists of a director to be appointed by the mayor, as well as a Citizen's Advisory Board.

This group, also known as the Policy Board, is composed of 21 members, 10 appointed by the mayor, 10 elected and one appointed by City Council.

Model Cities Task Forces were determined to be responsible for the initial research and development of Lansing's Model Cities plan. Task forces agreed upon include: transportation, income maintenance and social services, health, crime and juvenile delinquency, environment and design, employment and economic development and housing relocation and education.

Each of these nine task forces is charged to complete a study and develop a plan in its field of assigned responsibility. Each is to have a membership of 20 area residents; 10 are elected by the residents of the Model City neighborhood and 10 are appointed by the mayor.

In choosing Lansing as one city to receive an initial planning grant from a list of nearly 200 applicants, HUD listed several common characteristics of plans which all selected cities, including Lansing shared.

The first is that public and private agencies necessary to carry out the program, and local residents were deeply involved in the preparation of the application to HUD.

Several Lansing industries donated both personnel and facilities for the preparation of the application, as well as giving the city over $19,000 outright and lending both computer facilities and an experienced staff member to work with the planning board.

A second factor which HUD cited as being favorable in the selection of the planning grants was the deep probing of problem analysis, going well beyond a description of symptoms of problems to those forces that created and maintained the problem situation.

Perhaps the most important factor in the selection of Lansing as one of the cities to receive an actual planning grant was Lansing's defining the links between problems in a way that produced a perspective of the problems of the Model Neighborhood and its residents.

The Lansing group realized that blighted neighborhoods and urban decay are complex combinations of causal factors prohibiting a strict dichotomy to be made if they are to be solved. In contrast to other federal programs aimed at revitalizing or improving urban centers, the Model Cities approach is novel in its comprehensive nature.

After watching other programs fail because of lack of planning, coordination and adequate study, the U.S. government realized that the problems besetting America's cities were of a nature so diversified and complex that they could not be solved without much planning and federal inter-department cooperation.

While officially administered by HUD, the Model Cities program also involves the participation of such groups as the Depts. of Agriculture, Commerce, Health, Education and Welfare, Justice, Labor, Transportation and the Office of Economic Opportunity.

The program is striving to solve a number of problems in several different and seemingly unrelated areas.

The purposes are to expand housing, to expand job and income opportunities, to reduce dependency on welfare payments, to improve educational facilities and programs, to combat disease and ill health, to enhance recreational and cultural opportunities; to reduce the incidence of crime and delinquency, to establish better access between homes and jobs, and, in general, to improve living conditions for the people who live in the specific area.

District residence new draft ruling

By GEORGE BULLARD
Campus Editor

A federal district court decision recently delivered in San Francisco may force reorganization of Selective Service Boards around the country.

Judge Alfonso Zirpoli ruled last week that members of a local San Francisco draft board must reside in the district where their board has jurisdiction. Frequently, draft board members do not reside in the district they administer.

The case Zirpoli judged involved a San Francisco resident Frederick DeMarco. Failing to get a deferment as an conscientious objector, De Marco refused induction and was brought to trial.

His lawyer, Joel Shawn, said Monday in a State News interview that he does not expect the decision will be overturned. He called Zirpoli a "well respected judge" whose decisions generally hold up under appeal.

Though Shawn did not necessarily see far-reaching implications in the decision, a second San Francisco lawyer disagreed. Terrance Hallinan, who has defended cases in California similar to DeMarco's, labeled the consequences of the case "earth shaking."

"It puts government officials in an awkward position in pursuing the case," he said. "They're damned if they do and damned if they don't."

"If they appeal the decision and it is sustained, then it will probably be binding on every federal district judge. They may have to let go half the people in jail for refusing induction, on the grounds that they were illegally inducted."

Hallinan said the law on which Zirpoli's decision was based requires that members of draft boards reside in the district which they represent except in "unusual circumstances such as wartime."

"What happens is that boards in poorer sections of town sometimes have wealthy urban board members."

'Pressure from above' cuts poli. sci. courses to 4 credits

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

All political science courses under the 400 level have been changed from five credits to four, a move caused primarily by administrative pressure, said Susan Lawther, political science undergraduate adviser. These courses, which were changed from three credits to five in 1965, are now worth only four because their credit value was apparently out of line with credits in other courses, Miss Lawther added.

"We are striving for uniformity in the University," she continued. "Our decision to raise the credits in undergraduate courses four years ago was then hoped to be an incentive for other departments to raise theirs."

"Many people felt then that 15 credits was an ideal course load for students, she said, and that it would be more advisable to take three five-credit courses than five three-credit courses. By raising all our credits to five, we hoped to give students the opportunity to do this."

"However, few departments followed our move. As a result, we were under pressure to move our curriculum back in line with the rest of the University."

"We chose to lower the credits to four instead of three, because the normal course load seems to be around 16 or 17 credits, thus, students now can take four four-credit courses instead of five three-credits." As for also reducing the workload in political science, Miss Lawther said she would still require the same amount of reading and out-of-class work as before the change. She added, however, that this depended on the individual instructor.

"Many students," she noted, "seemed unhappy about the credit reduction, because they often did as much work in a five-credit course as in a four-credit course."

Bryan Downes, asst. professor in political science, also cited administrative pressure as the primary factor in the change. Furthermore, he expressed general disapproval of the move. "I think it unwise to force students to take a large number of courses at one time," he said. "Five different courses are often so diversified that students have too many different areas to study simultaneously."

"It seems to me," he added, "that it would be much better for everyone concerned if students took a smaller number of courses and received more credits and did more intensive work."

"Sometimes it is advisable to expose students to as many different areas as possible, especially as freshmen and sophomores. However, the possibility does exist that the result could be unnecessary confusion."

Good habits make sense.

Today's teenagers are good drivers. They have developed habits and skills which will serve them well the rest of their lives. Fastening the seat belt whenever they drive or ride in a car is one of the good habits most teenagers have...and it certainly makes sense.

Another good habit, perhaps not as deeply ingrained in young people as it is with their parents, is regular reading and using of Want Ads. But most teenagers are quick to accept and adopt as their own those things in life which are good and helpful. That's why it's not unusual to see a teenager reading the Want Ads...using them...and reaping the benefits. It's another good habit which makes sense.

Develop the Want Ad habit...and dial 355-8255 for easy placement of a fast-acting, low cost Want Ad.

Miss Phillips' temporary residence, for about 30 minutes. He talked about his plans to become a teacher when he graduated from EMU in 1970, and made a date the next day, Smith said.

He never came back, said Smith.

Christiansen said a search of a 17-foot house trailer revealed nothing to link it with any of the Michigan slayings.

The trailer was rented by Collins and his friend, burly, tattooed, Andrew Manuel, 25, and towed from Ypsilanti to California, police said. The trailer was found parked in an alley behind the Salinas home of Manuel's grandfather.

Collins and Manuel left Ypsilanti on June 21, police said. They returned in July. The three Salinas slayings occurred between June 17 and July 16.

The FBI has joined in a nationwide manhunt for Manuel, also known as Richard Diaz and John Stowtack, on a Federal Fugitive Warrant. He has been charged with larceny by conversion for failing to return the trailer, which was rented in his name.

Manuel was last seen in Salinas Saturday afternoon, and had been seen in the last two days in Pismo Beach, a resort town near San Luis Obispo, California, police said. Michigan police said they believed he may have fled to Florida.

Michigan State Police and Salinas (Calif.) city officers investigate the house trailer found in Salinas believed to have been towed west from Michigan by murder suspect John N. Collins. The trailer was rented in Michigan by Collins' roommate, Andrew Manuel, early this summer and was found Friday in an alley behind Manuel's parents home in Salinas. AP Wirephoto his amendment that would permit deployment of the ABM's computers and radars—but not its missiles—at the two initial Safeguard sites in Montana and North Dakota.

McIntyre, who plans to vote for the Cooper-Hart amendment, says he will offer his proposal regardless of the outcome.

The two senators believed to hold the key, John J. Williams, R-Del., and Clinton P. Anderson, D-N.M., remained silent Tuesday as closing speeches were delivered equally between the two sides.

Neither has indicated any intention of speaking out before today's vote, scheduled to start about 3 p.m. after four more hours of debate.

Sen Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, whose support has been claimed for several weeks by oppo-ents, finally confirmed his opposition to the ABM.

Repeating criticism of Safeguard's radars, Gravel said, "Any new weapon in the mid-70's that can destroy a few radars will turn Safeguard into billions of dollars of junk."

Mansfield, Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Gravel called for early Strategic Arms Limitation talks with the Soviet Union.

Kennedy said that, rather than push for the talks, the Nixon Administration is concentrating on testing of MIRV multi-warhead rockets and ABM deployment which he called "factors detrimental to the climate of successful talks."

Senate leaders, faced with the start of the congressional August recess next Wednesday, hope to move from the ABM vote to consideration of other amendments to the $20 billion military procurement authorization bill.

"In fact, I wonder . . . if the dire circumstances in which most private colleges find themselves may not be related in some small measure to the lack of public accountability on policies by their boards of control."

Taxpayers, he said, are revolting to the idea of public financial support of private schools.

"The needed magnitude of public support for education cannot be attained without a much greater leadership by trustees in the public debate and resolution of important issues," Huff said.

Author Adams

Adams, a nationally known economist, has co-authored or edited eight books and published numerous articles. His earlier books dealt primarily with economics and the anti-trust field in particular; his later books are international matters.

The introduction to one of his recent books, "A Guide to Study Abroad," was written by then Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson, and received favorable comment from Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., and from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Three of his books have been translated into foreign languages. Articles written by Adams have appeared in two economic journals and law reviews, including the American Economic Review, the Journal of Political Economy, the Yale Law Journal, the Columbia Law Review and the Quarterly Journal of Economics.

Adams' popularity amongst his academic colleagues is indicated by his regular re-election to the Academic Council and his recent presidency of the MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP). In 1968 he was elected in a nationwide poll to a three-year term on the national AAUP Council.

Born August 27, 1922, Adams attended New Utrecht High School in New York City.

National service Adams was inducted into membership of the Phi Beta Kappa scholastic honorary while a student at Brooklyn College, where he received his degree "magna cum laude" in 1942.

Following service in the Army, he entered Yale University, where he received his Ph.D. in 1947. Then he came to MSU.

In the last 20 years, Adams has appeared as a witness before various congressional committees on 17 different occasions. He has also served as a member of the Attorney General's National Committee to Study the Antitrust Laws from 1953-55.

He was appointed by President Kennedy and confirmed by the U.S. Senate to a position on the U.S. Advisory Commission on International Education and Cultural Affairs in 1961. He was reappointed by President Johnson in 1966 to a three-year term.

Cosmopolitan

Adams has lectured widely in Europe. Characterized by his friends as a "true cosmopolitan," he speaks fluent French and German and can understand Hungarian. He has served as a visiting professor at the University of Grenoble in France at the Salzburg Seminar in Austria and at the Centre d'Etudes Industrielles in Geneva.

In addition he has lectured at the University of Lyon in France and delivered the major address to the International Economic Conference in France in 1961 and the major address at the Fondation Europeenne de la Culture in Copenhagen, Denmark in 1960.

Recently Adams declined an offer to teach for a full year in France. Mrs. Adams, an instructor in American Thought and Language at MSU, says one reason he did not accept the position was because he did not want to be away from MSU during the football season.

Adams served in Europe during World War II, for 20 months with the 83rd Infantry Division and the 11th Armored Division. He entered the Army as a private, receiving a battlefield commission as a Second Lieutenant and five bronze campaign stars for action in Normandy, France, the Battle of the Bulge, the Rhine land and Germany.

He also received the Bronze Star Medal for heroic conduct.

Hayhoe puts punch in Packer line

GREEN BAY (UPI)—Move over, Jim Weatherwax and Frank Howard. For several years, the reputation of most impressive physical specimen in town was shared by Weatherwax, the defensive lineman of the Green Bay Packers.

ers, and Howard, the Washington Senators' baseball slugger who lives here in the off-season. Both stand 6-foot and rattle the scales at a little more than 260.

is not his size, but the fact he at least temporarily has become the packers' first string right offensive tackle.

CAGE TITLE DIM

Kentucky red-shirts Casey

LEXINGTON, Ky. (UPI)—University of Kentucky Basketball Coach Adolph Rupp's grasp for a fifth NCAA championship slipped perhaps irreparably Tuesday with the disclosure star guard Mike Casey will have to be red-shirted.

back in school. The 6-foot-4 guard averaged 19.1 points per game last season and was one of four returning regulars.

But all that changed when a red-haired young colossus named Bill Hayhoe, the Packers' fifth round draft choice from Southern California, checked into training camp. Hayhoe can't be said to overshadow Weatherwax and Howard, but at 6-foot-8 and 263 he has them out-larged by a trifle. And, as the coaches are quick to point out, he's still growing.

Jets battle Cards in pre-season test

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Weeb Ewbank will take his New York Jets into Busch Stadium for a pre-season game with the St. Louis Cardinals Saturday night.

The Super Bowl champion Jets will be trying to prove that their victory over an NFL team, the Baltimore Colts, was no fluke.

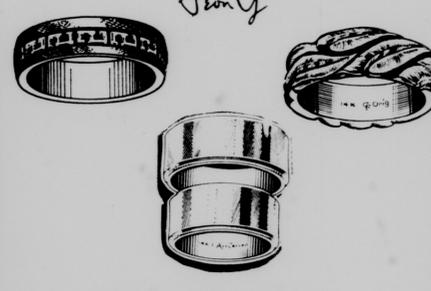

The Jets had some difficulty in knocking off the College All-Stars, 26-24, last Friday in Chicago. The Cardinals, who haven't played a preseason game yet this year, were superior to
