Pentagon critic

Sen. William Fulbright, D-Ark., following a closed door session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, sharply criticized the Pentagon for its refusal to supply the committee with a secret U.S.-Thailand agreement, which the Pentagon calls a AP Wirephoto military contingency plan.

Nixon sends Congress mammoth job program

Nixon Administration produced Tuesday a $3.5 billion program to train 1.75 million Americans a year for jobs President Nixon said would "built a bridge to human dignity.

The President sent Congress a message dealing mainly with phases of the program that would train one million persons at a cost of $2.3 billion a year--an operation which eventually would be turned over largely to states and major cities to run.

This phase of the training program comes under the Dept. of Labor now. and the balance involves the Dept. of Defense and the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. Secretary of Labor George P. Shultz conferred with Nixon Tuesday and then met with news-

Hitting at manpower training programs he said are wound up in an endless ribbon of red tape, Nixon said of the proposed legislation: "Working together, we can bring order and efficiency to a tangle of federal programs . . . By opening up an opportunity for manpower training on a large scale we build a person's will to work: in so doing, we build a bridge to human dignity

The proposed legislation contemplates a built-in escalation of spending should Shultz said Nixon plans to add 150,000 unemployment rise from its present 3.6 per cent level to 4.5 per cent over three straight months. This would trigger a 10 per cent hike in job training funds.

To discourage the unemployed from Jobs would be linked with applicants going job shopping, the administration would substitute uniform instead of unequal living allowances for different job training programs.

> Recipients would get an extra $30 a month in welfare payments in place of job training allowances.

States and cities gradually would take over an increasing share of authority and responsibility over manpower planning and training, along with a gradual increase in the amount of federal funds they administer. The latter feature would give them control of 25 per cent of the money when they develop comprehensive manpower planning and work up to 100 per cent when they meet "objective standards of exemplary performance.".

Nixon told Congress that by means of a state grant system, the proposed law would assure a fair distribution of manpower training dollars both to metropolitan and rural districts.

Welfare plan awaits committee hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., said Tuesday he finds some attractive features in President Nixon's sweeping welfare proposals and hopes the Ways and Means Committee can start hearings on it reasonably soon.

However, Mills, chairman of the committee where any legislation to carry out the proposals would be developed, agreed with other congressional leaders there is no chance for final action earlier than

Moreover, he said in an interview, he is concerned with the price tag--$4 billionplaced on the program to assure every family with children a minimum living allowance, federally financed.

The cost, Mills said, is the most unattractive feature of the proposal, while the emphasis on training the underprivileged and encouraging them to find selfsustaining work is the most attractive.

Mills steered through the House in 1969 a limit on the proportion of families in each state to receive aid to dependent

Increased VA benefits prompted by House bill

An increase in education allowances for veterans, war orphans and service widows appears likely, according to James F. Morse, director of the MSU Veterans Administration Office.

"The chances are very good that an increase in benefits will come late in fall term," Morse said Tuesday.

The U.S. House of Representatives has passed a bill increasing GI Bill allowances from $130 to $165 monthly for single veterans, from $155 to $197 monthly for married veterans, and from $175 to $222 monthly for veterans with two dependents.

Under the bill passed by the House, monthly allowances paid to war orphans, service widows and wives of men with permanent service-connected disabilities under the educational assistance program would increase for $130 to $165 monthly for full time students.

The legislation also attempts to encourage veterans without high school diplomas to go back to school and continue working full time at the same time. It would permit veterans to draw full time allowances for as little as 10 hours of weekly instruction, instead of the 25 hours of studies presently required to draw full allowances.

The Senate is currently considering a bill which provides larger increases than the House bill. The Senate bill, introduced by Sen. Ralph Yarborough, D-Texas and 23 co-sponsors, provides for a $60 increase in GI Bill allow-

There appears little chance that the Senate will act on the House passed bill until after the summer recess ends on Sept. 2.

The two different versions providing increased educational benefits for veterans may end up in conference.

A total of 1,500 veterans were enrolled at MSU during spring term. Morse said, however, that MSU is expecting a considerable increase in enrollment of veterans for fall term.

Orange-greenfight rages in Ireland

LONDONDERRY. Northern Ireland (AP)--Heavy fighting 119 raged Tuesday night between police and Roman Catholic demonstrators in this city of religious strife.

Scores were reported injured in barrages of rocks and gasoline bombs after 15.000 Protestants, some from the United States and Canada, paraded through the streets of predomimantly Catholic Londonderry. The Protestants were observing the anniversary of a 17th century battle over religious Bernadette Devlin, 22-year-old leftist member of the British Parliament, was with the Catholics, urging crowds to "unite to

The fighting erupted after scattered rock-throwing by Roman Catholics on the fringe of the big Protestant festival.

Police drove back a crowd of youngsters toward the Roman Catholic Bogside district, a maze of small streets under the city's ancient walls. By late evening a crowd of 4,000 tangled in a series of fierce clashes with police in armored cars and water trucks.

Londonderry. Northern Ireland's second city and long a flashpoint in the province's religious feuding, had been under extreme tension since the week end.

It had then become clear that the Protestant-based government of Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark would not ban the parade of the Apprentice Boys, an order commemorating the part Protestant apprentices played in staving off a 1689 siege by the Roman Catholic forces of King James II.

About 15,000 members of the order, among them representatives from branches in the United States and Canada, began marching through the city in the morning to the roll of drums and the skirl of pipe bands.

Trouble started in midafternoon in Waterloo Place, a cross roads which was the parade route's nearest point to the all-Catholic Bogside district.

Police drove the crowd back into the Bogside, where residents already had built street barricades of old cars, trucks and oil drums.

Once they reached the barricades, the police were faced with a continual barrage of rocks and gasoline bombs. Twice they were forced back to Waterloo Place.

One policeman was set afire by gasoline. Colleagues rolled him to the ground and doused the fire with their greatcoats. Three stores were set blazing and the fires doused with

The crowds broke out of the Bogside again at night and forced the police back toward the city center.

A reporter trapped in a store telephoned: "Crowds of youngsters are running up the street to hurl gasoline bombs at the police. The road outside the store is a river of blazing gasoline. Miss Devlin was at the Bogside barricades in midafternoon exhorting the crowds.

She has been at the forefront in contending that in previous riots the mainly Protestant police deliberately smashed

John Hume, a member of the Northern Irish Parliament and a leader of the Catholic-based civil rights movement, tried to pacify the crowds.

But both Hume and Eddie McAteer, leader of the Catholicbased Nationalist opposition party, were forced to retreat under a hail of rocks.

Police hurled rocks back into the crowds.

One said: "So many stones are being thrown at us and so many of our men being hit that we had no option but to retaliate. If not we would have had more casualties.

A pub on William Street in the thick of the fighting kept on serving beer and sandwiches. Flames from three gasoline bombs licked under the door. The barman doused them with a hose connected to a backroom faucet.

On into the evening, long after the official parade was over, Protestant bands paraded-playing partisan songs that can normally be counted on to infuriate Londonderry Catholics. They marched through streets of boarded up stores, most of them windowless from repeated riots since a civil rights campaign last year highlighted Catholic charges of discriminatin in jobs and housing. Most of the Protestant paraders, however, already had left the city in fleets of motor coaches and special trains bound for Belfast and other centers.

Romanian President Nicholae Ceausescu. who was host to President Nixon two weeks ago, made a cautious, Communist-styled commitment Tuesday to continue Romania's independent policies and gradual democratization of the nation's life.

Speaking at the close of the Communist Party Congress, and later to an open air rally of 150,000, Ceausescu avoided anything that could be interpreted as a challenge to the Soviet Communist party or its orthodox allies.

A French official working for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization has been arrested in Paris and charged with "a grave breach of security," official sources said Tuesday.

The unidentified official was being questioned by the French counter-espionage service and will be tried by the State Security Court, the sources said.

The Pentagon announced Tuesday a widespread investigation into the possible mishandling of millions of dollars by noncommissioned officers clubs in Europe, the United States and Vietnam.

The investigation was sparked by a letter from Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, acting chairman of the Senate subcommittee on investigations, requesting the Defense Dept. to look into charges of "criminal activities" in the clubs.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said in San Clemente, Calif., Tuesday the shattering of the lull in the Vietnamese fighting may constitute the beginning of what some people think is the initiation of a summer offensive by the enemy.

This was the first White House reaction to the increased fighting in Vietnam, and Ziegler said President Nixon will continue to watch the situation.

A busy multipurpose satellite with booms almost the length of a football field rocketed into the right orbit Tuesday but ended up on the wrong side of the earth and began tumbling end over end.

Although project officials say they see problems, they say it will take about 20 days to shift the fifth applications technology satellite--ATS 5--from the Bay of Bengal to its proper position over the Pacific, 600 miles west of South America.

Michigan News

The number of homicides in Michigan rose 20 per cent last year, while the state's population was rising less than 2 per cent, FBI statistics showed Tuesday.

The federal agency's annual report on crime showed 634 murders and non-negligent homicides were reported in Michigan II 1968, compared to 530 the year before.

Michigan voters will be asked to approve a $100 million bond issue at the 1970 general election to provide low cost housing in the state.

Gov. Milliken signed the bill into law Tuesday. It was sponsored by Sens. Coleman Young, D-Detroit, and Sander M. Levin, D-Berkley.

The bill calls for the funds to go to municipalities having "a seriously inadequate supply of safe and sanitary housing accommodations for families and persons of lower income."

EDITORIALS New welfare plan welcome but overdue

One has got to hand it to President Nixon--he may not be a great innovator, but he apparently knows a good thing when he sees it. The Democrats came up with much of Nixon's new welfare proposals, but it has taken a Republican to get them into gear.

Irony and charges of eclecticism aside, the fact remains that the President's plan is the best thing to come down the welfare shoot in a long time. Beseiged on all sides by critics states' rights folks still will of the present ailing system, Nixon has taken a meaningful and surprisingly liberal step toward a solution.

The most radical part of the proposals is what is effectively a negative income tax--hidden under the guise of a "family benefit plan." A family of four will receive benefit payments if their yearly income is under $3,920 with the payments increasing in inverse proportion to their total earned income. A family with no income at all would receive a payment of $1-600 annually.

The beauty of this plan is that a family head is not penalized for working, as was the case under the old scheme. In fact, there would be a manifest encouragement to work, as welfare recipients would be required to attempt to find jobs or undertake some kind of job training.

This last clause was undoubtedly inserted in great part to apease the more conservative, Protestant ethic-type elements of our society. Indeed, Nixon crouched his entire liberal plan in traditional conservative prose--which may even be an indicator that the President is not as inept as many thought him. In any event, the idea has a good deal of merit.

Another progressive part of the proposals, is that the family benefit payments will be administered by the federal government equally throughout the country. This will go a long way to eliminate the total absurdity and inequality of staterun programs. Further, the not be left out because states would be allowed to suppliment the federal programs-they simply would not be allowed to control Welfare any

Further, some of the grosser results of the old welfare system may be undone. The shame of often demeaning investigations would no longer keep prideful people from applying for much-needed assistance. The new program provides that a simple declaration of need, subject to spot checks, would be enough to start aid

All in all, the President's proposals are long overdue and most welcome. We feel, however, that they do not go far enough, especially in terms of helping the chronically poor.

We are willing to concede that change seldom comes in massive waves, but, rather, a drop at a time. We, therefore, support Nixon's plan, but earnestly hope that the job will not be allowed to stagnate here, half-done.

Blues festival records man's inner feelings

DENISE FORTNER

Arbor Blues Festival was excellent. To ing the only amplified mandolin one is supplement it I would like to add the following as a further expression of what the rest of you missed.

Southern country blues may appeal to a smaller audience than city blues, but Fred McDowell could have gone on all day. With a voice that could taut one time and be supremely relaxed the next. he did a rendition of "John Henry" which left one wondering where other singers got their lyrics for this song from.

Then there was the king of city blues, B. B. King, to close Friday night's performance. City blues singers are a shade slicker, yet a trifle less relaxed than the country singers, and their somewhat more facile playing and singing is "dressed up" through their contact with a more sophisticated world.

Howlin' Wolf had an orgasmic style and technique which would have won him the grand prize for resourcefulness and versatility with a microphone had there been such a prize. Possessing a gutteral and throaty voice that man was hypnotic. Lightin' Hopkins was there, oil cloth pattern coat and all, to challenge all comers to catch him if they could in a bit of a jam.

Sleepy John Estes was there with his David Bassett's article on the Ann partner of 40 years, Hammie Nix, playlikely to ever see at a blues concert. Sleepy John can sing in a soft burred and scarcely audible tone, formless murmurings, or in "scat vocals," but in all cases it makes one hurt inside to hear that man sing about the troubles he's

BRUCE'S SUPER

To describe this "gathering of the clan" would be incomplete without further mention of Roosevelt Sikes; even without his Original Honeydripper's he was still able to have his piano "tell'em ivories." And 1934 must have been a good year, for it was in this year that Roosevelt first recorded a song that helped earn him a "five-minute ovation," a little ditty called "Dirty Mother for You." The lyrics would have suited the closing of a forum on sex education in grand style.

Yes, last week-end there were utterances of a man's innermost feelings and the outpouring of his heart, but the blues still fell this morning.

> James N. McLaughlin Lansing graduate student

I have been reading "The Doctor's Bag" in the State News and have been surprised that a large number of the questions you have been asked are related to sex education. It would seem that the University has been doing a less than adequate job in this area. I would like to know more about whether Olin has a sex education program including family planning and contraception.

I am surprised you're surprised. Sexual thoughts and concerns rank very high among the total thought content of normal college students. Although I have not seen any evidence to support it, I'd imagine this is replaced by a preoccupation with thoughts of money in older age groups. Thoughts about sex

may be preferable

Your implication that most of us have had a rather poor sex education is solid. I'm not sure that it remains for the University to be the provider of this education. In fact, by the time one hits university age, much of the damage caused by this poor education has already been done. You might have observed that it seems that families and schools have been doing less than an adequate job in this area. The recent sex education hearings in Michigan are evidence of the extent to which people deny this.

At the present time, Olin does not have a formal sex education program. nor is there a family planning and contraception clinic on campus. Many questions about sex are answered at Olin, as well as by people's physicans every-

Planned Parenthood, located in the Ingham County Health Dept., 393-5960, can provide information on family planning and contraception. I am preparing a short bibliography on sex education which will be available in the fall on request. Thank you for your letter and for raising this point.

What are the psychological effects of growing up in a home with an elderly grandparent? How would this affect a person's attitude to the grandparent and his own parents? How would this affect a person's attitude to all older people?

Although relatively unusual in our society, such a person might actually like older people. The circumstances necessitating the grandparent living at home would determine some of the psychological effects on the grandchild. Considering the usual average healthy grandparent, there would be considerable benefits for both. The child could benefit from having another, constant familiar figure for those planned and unplanned moments when his own parents cannot be with him. On the other hand, a firm, demanding older person at home can often drain the resources of a family and be a detriment to all involved.

I get blisters on my hands fairly easily when I garden or canoe. I am never sure what to do with them. What do

In the way of prevention, you might try wearing gloves when engaged in the mentioned activities. The glove serves the purpose of taking up the friction that is causing the blisters. A second prevention measure is to perform blister-inducing activities for short periods of time until your hands begin to toughen up. I would not overlook getting some instruction as to how to hold a paddle or shovel correctly.

Once a blister has formed, the following technique will be found to reduce the pain and promote rapid healing. The area should be washed with soap and water. The blister should be punctured at its edge with a sterile needle. A safety pin heated over a match and allowed to cool works fine. This causes no pain because the skin has already separated from its nerve supply. Once the puncture is made, the blister fluid is gently squeezed out. A band-aid is then applied over the blister. Do not remove the blistered skin. If at all possible, the blister-inducing activity should be stopped until healing occurs. This is a good point to mention that a tetanus booster shot should be obtained every five to 10 years, assuming you have been immunized, which is almost certainly the case.

PAUL HANSON Of bobby socks and panty raids

Those graduate students and faculty members who have been at MSU since the 1950's, may not think this is a very significant item. But the students who were still in the public school system when college kids were jitter-bugging with Elvis may find it surprising to note that there were actually student demonstrations in East Lansing during that "apathetic" decade.

Hard to believe? Well, just a few minutes talking to Arthur F. Brandstatter will get vou the whole story. Bradstatter, who is now the director of the School of Police Ad., was also head of the Public Safety Dept. back then. He remembers that in the 1950's white-socked and saddle-shoed student groups ranged through campus "raising

He hesitated at the word "hell.

Brandstatter even said that pleasureseeking students were harder to control than the present social demonstrators.

'Destruction today is more controlled by students calling attention to social ills," he said. "Back then they were having a little fun.

"little fun" 15 years ago often involved the panty raid, occupying a woman's residence hall or blocking traffic on Grand River

Once he said so many students jammed Grand River that traffic through East Lansing had to be rerouted because students seized passing cars and rocked and pounded them. Brandstatter said one motorist panicked, floored his accelerator and roared out of the crowd with tires squeal-

Snake dances through the State Theater were also a popular diversion, he said. Students would go in through the front, without paying admission, and exit through the rear, disturbing patrons as they passed

Brandstatter said that because everyone was out just to have fun, his public safety officers couldn't simply block off the Administration Bldg. and stop the demonstration since the mob would turn to another objective for pleasure and chaos. So, fellow enlightened students, grab your bobby socks and your sun-tans and head down to Grand River and set fire to the pavement. And while you're about it, you could carry a picket sign or two just to get your point across-might just as well throw a little moralizing in with all that fun.

London's 'Hair': straighter than hip

By DIANE PETRYK State News London Bureau

LONDON--Hair, Hair, Hair, ets. Hair, Hair, Hair, Hair, Hair, Flow it, Show it, Long as God can grow it . .

vear, has been a sell-out ever since. Among young American goer visitors, the MSU-AMLEC group in particular, "Hair" has been rated slightly above the Changing of the Guard in sights not to miss while in London. And a sight it certainly is.

At the same time, while "Hair" is a fun show to see, there is something ominous in the way it has captured youthful enthusiasm.

According to advertising for "Hair," the producers would like us to believe they have just herded a bunch of natural hippies together to do their thing.

But "most of the cast could care less about the hippie movement," said Wendy Hanson, publicity director for the show. "We've been running nearly a year now and they're tired of the whole bit." Half of the group are straight pop singers and the other half are straight Few but the very naive really expect an actor to actually be like the person he is portraying, but this is what "Hair' would have us believe.

Producer Michael Butler has said, "Come and join us. Come and see what we are, you peoto slide by the Harlequin this ple in the middle who aren't Students will continue to urge

> The fact is that almost any thing can be said from the stage during the performance and not ruin the story, because there is none. The show moves from song to song with a few shouted obscenities and lewd gestures in between. The only plot that can be associated with "Hair" is that going on backstage among its promoters.

> "Theatre is the only true mirror of our life and times," its producer claims, and perhaps he's right. Perhaps the success of "Hair" reflects our materialism and willingness to exploit--and be exploited.

> Still, "Hair" does represent a new venture in theater. Whether it is considered good or bad is not so much important as that it is original. It does remain faithful to the anti-war, love everybody theme of today's youth. It is contemporary. It gives the Pope, pill and war a bad name.

Martin: Boswell is team's weakness

NEW YORK (UPI) -- Manager Billy Martin and his fighting Minnesota Twins came to New York Monday minus their "one weakness.'

Dave Boswell, the Twins' right-hander who was knocked cold by Martin in a fight they had last Wednesday in Detroit. was back in Minnesota awaiting action to be taken, if any, by owner Calvin Griffith.

Martin, resting in his hotel room as the twins prepared for a brief two-game series with the Yankees starting Tuesday night, said that Boswell was a man with "many problems."

"I let him off before--no, I did fine him once but I can't say how much." Martin recalled as he spoke of Boswell. "We have a team of 25 fine competitors and we only have one weakness," he added referring to the short-fused, 25-year-old

Despite having dropped four games in a row, the scrappy Martin, who had to pay damages to pitcher Jim Brewer, then with the Chicago Cubs, when they were involved in a brawl several years ago, doesn't think the incident will hurt the morale of his team.

"In no way will this hurt the team," Martin said. It's the same thing as if there was a fight on the field. (Between two opposing teams). It's not going to hurt us."

Martin would not speculate on the action Griffith will take except that he expects Boswell to be fined.

Asked if he expects a reprimand from Griffith for his part in the fisticuffs, Martin said: "I can't understand why, he (Boswell) hit me first.

The flareup also involved outfielder Bob Allison. It started when pitching coach Art Fowler reported Boswell for not taking the required number of laps prior to Wednesdy's game.

Later in a restaurant Boswell said to Allison he was going to "get that squealer" and stormed out of the building. Allison, playing the role of peacemaker, said he tried to calm the pitcher down but that Boswell punched him in the face and kicked him in the back while he was down.

Martin walked up and Boswell hit him too. After the 6foot-3, 185-pound Boswell hit him a few times, Martin, 5foot-11 and 170-pounds, landed several punches, the last one knocking Boswell out.

Allison suffered several chipped teeth and a black eye. but did not miss any games. Boswell, who had 20 stitches taken to close cuts on his face did not appear in Baltimore for a series with the Orioles over the weekend.

Boswell, who returned to Minneapolis, said Monday he hit Allison first but he did not remember going after Martin.

Student academic records show technological growth

By MARION NOWAK State News State Writer

The progressive growth not just of the University, but of technology, is well reflected in MSU's carefully preserved student academic records.

'We have a permanent academic record for every student that's attended here." Horace C. King, registrar, said. Records go back to 1857, the year when students were first enrolled in the Michigan College of Arts and Applied Sciences.

Nineteenth century records. King said, were kept in ledgers preprinted with course names. Since courses available were highly limited, the only deviations were in individual grades, which were recorded by hand.

These ledgers, kept in the noncurrent student records vault in the Hannah Administration Bldg., are leatherbound volumes with only a single page reserved for each student. Individual records appear

By 1900, when the College of Arts and Applied Sciences had grown to become the Michigan Agricultural College, permanent records were preserved on individual preprinted record cards.

These white cards, measuring 812 by 13 inches, are made of heavy cardboard stock with laminated finish. Several types of cards--depending on the individual's curriculum--were used. Improvements and growth in MAC's academic life become even more evident in the next record change in 1916. This time the cards became a better quality stock, 11 by 9½ inches, "on which administrators be-students by term. Students in different curricula also had different repreinted forms.

GPA recorded

The pressures of academic life, as we know it today, first became evident with the next record change in 1928 when MAC was already Michigan State College. Physically, new records became an 8 by 8 yellow card. All courses were recorded by hand.

The significant changes, however, involved both academia and technology: these cards were the first to have student names and addressed actually typed in--and, for the first time, grade point averages were noted down.

In 1938, just about everything got typed in-except, of course. grades and GPA.

"This was the period of the first mechanization of internal records in daily use," King Tabulating equipment and punchcards were used to print out the class lists and reports on standing.

The present 10 by 12 inch forms were introduced five years before MSC became MSU, in 1950. Along with the new card kept. size came a new recording method in which all identifying information, such as name, address, and courses, was printed in by tabulating equipment rather than typed or written in.

tirely displaced. This system. King said, has been refined and further reflects technological evolution by replacing the tabulating equipment with computers for "greater speed and storage capacity."

The storage methods for each of the records varies with representative technology, too. Pretabulator ledgers and cards are locked up in file cabinets in the Administration Bldg. records vault. The more technologically modern cards are kept in rotating elevator power files in the building, eliminating the artificial leather folders in which

Evaluation torm tunds cut for fall

By MARJORIE RUPP The 1969 edition of the ASMSU course evaluation book will not be published this year due to a budget cut and lack of workers.

The book is a compilation of student evaluation forms filled out in a random sampling of classes. The form contains a rating of the professor, the classroom situation, the course materials, and recitation or laboratory section, if included in the course.

The program, initiated three years ago by the ASMSU board, had 5,000 copies of the first book published last year. A lack of advertising resulted in only 2,500 of the books being sold, John R. Kessler, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, junior, said.

This year, the budget was lowered and publishing costs have risen drastically. Requests for grants are being made for next year.

"The program has not been cut, just limited," Kessler said. "We will continue to work on the evaluations.

At least 25 per cent of the faculty has been evaluated, he said. The goal is to eventually have a rating of every professor at the University. The evaluation contains the number and type of exams given by the professor, the size of his class, whether or not extra readings are assigned, the rating of the professor as a lecturer and the evaluation of the relavance of course material covered.

Kessler said the new book. when published, will be longer and more critical.

A U.S. spokesman said the 23 wounded. Viet Cong hoped to occupy one of these cities long enough to set up a provisional government for a propaganda victory.

The U.S. Command had set up a task force headquarters at Quan Loi, expecting the attacks. At one point, a team of enemy sappers armed with dynamite bombs were driven out by eight medics before they could reach the operations center of the 1st Air Cavalry Division's 3rd Brigade in Quan Loi. Six of the medics were wounded.

There was hand-to-hand fighting between sappers and U.S. defenders at the military support command's compound in An Loc.

One of the largest battles broke out south of An Loc where U.S. 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment tanks and armored personnel carriers reported killing 45 North Vietnamese and capturing two. One American was killed and two wounded in this attack.

A second battle erupted when the enemy attacked a U.S. artillery base guarding an infiltration route to Tay Ninh with 400 rounds of rockets, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades. In a one-hour battle, 54 North Vietnamese and 9 Americans were killed, U.S. spokesman said, and 39 Americans were

Enemy forces were reported falling back toward the Cambodian border in some areas north of Saigon under relentless attack by U.S. fighter-bombers. In the north, enemy commandos hurling dynamite bombs blasted into U.S. 1st Marine Division headquarters at Da Nang. Eleven commandos and two Marines were killed, and four North Vietnamese were

Other enemy forces fired a dozen mortar rounds at the U.S. Navy hospital in Da Nang. Two hit the building, wounding 12 American patients and 6 staff members.

U.S. Marines fought off an enemy attack 22 miles south of Da Nang, killing 40 North Vietnamese, spokesmen reported.
