Draft lottery: fare thee well Sept. 14

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first draft lottery in 17 years was held Monday night, sending men born on Sept. 14 to the head of the line for 1970 draft calls.

The first birth date number was drawn by Rep. Alexander Pirnie, R-N.Y., ranking Republican on a special House subcommittee on the draft.

Others will be called in the order in which their birthdays were drawn Monday night, until the local boards throughout the nation fulfill their 1970 draft quotas.

The list drawn Monday night applied to all men between 19 and 26 years of age as of the end of this year.

Only those classified 1-A or 1-A-O will actually be called.

But men now deferred or exempt would retain their place in this order of call should they later become 1-A or 1-A-O, that is, available for the draft.

The lottery began at 8 p.m. when, after a brief invocation, draft director Lewis B. Hershey ordered the unlocking of a black box containing 366 blue plastic capsules and ordered them poured into a large glass jar.

The lottery ended with a benediction at 9:37 p.m., just a little over an hour and a half after it had begun.

After Pirnie started the drawing, he was succeeded by a relay of young people previously named as unofficial advisers to the Selective Service System.

A young Negro from the District of Columbia, David L. Fowler, refused to take his turn. He said he had been notified by his delegation not to draw, for reasons that would be explained later.

Fourteen of the Youth Advisory Committee signed a statement expressing "deep concern" over handling of the drawing.

Larry McKibben of Iowa, held up the proceedings to read the statement, which protested the "total exclusion of two individuals who did not wish to actually draw numbers." The delegates from Michigan and Alaska were not among the advisory members who drew.

Mike Hudson, an MSU sophomore, was the Michigan representative who boycotted the selection process.

About 25 college age youths waited outside Selective Service headquarters to protest the lottery. They handed out a statement calling the lottery "a masterful practical joke on the American people."

Now they said they will have to burn their birth certificates as well as their draft cards.

Lottery drawing date list

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here is the order of call for the 1970 military draft as determined by the lottery drawing held Monday night.

This list applies to every man who is at least 19 but not yet 26 as of Dec. 31, 1969. Each man's place in the order of call is the number next to his birthday; the order of call will be applied by each local draft board to the men registered in its files.

Men now classified "1-A" or "1-A-O" may be called in this order in 1970, men now exempt or deferred will keep the same place in line they drew Monday night if they should become 1-A or 1-A-O at any time in the future.

If two or more men registered with any local draft board share the same birthday, they will be subject to call in an order determined by a second lottery drawing held Monday night, in which letters of the alphabet were scrambled.

Here is the "tie-breaking" order of call, in which the initial of each man's last name and first name if necessary will be matched with a scrambled alphabet:

1. J, 2. G, 3. D, 4. X, 5. N, 6. O, 7. Z, 8. T, 9. W, 10. P, 11. Q, 12. Y, 13. U, 14. C, 15. F, 16. I, 17. K, 18. H, 19. S, 20. L, 21. M, 22. A, 23. R, 24. E, 25. B, 26. V.

Draft lottery to affect men only one year

By NORM SAARI
Managing Editor

College students graduating in June 1970 have to worry about the draft lottery for only one year, a spokesman for the state board of the Selective Service said Monday.

"As the draft instructions now read if a man will be in class 1-A or 1-AO during the next calendar year and not inducted by Dec. 31, 1970, he will probably be free of the service," he said.

For example, if a student graduates in June and has a low priority number, he remains in the lottery only until the end of the year and will not be re-issued a priority number from the lottery in December 1970 for the year 1971.

An individual is affected by the lottery for a calendar year, not necessarily 12 months.

If a man classified 1-A is not drafted in 1970, he will be put in a special priority group, below all the 19-year olds in the new manpower pool.

Another point clarified by the state official concerned students graduating in June with high priority numbers. A student's priority number is retroactive to the first induction of the year.

For example, if your birthdate is a high priority number and individuals born on that date were drafted in February, but you were not because of a 2-S deferment, you will be drafted very soon after being re-classified 1-A. In fact, you will be drafted immediately after being re-classified 1-A if there are no delinquents or enlistees to fill your local board's quota.

Bailey enters My Lai case

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Atty. F. Lee Bailey, representing Capt. Ernest Medina, said Monday Medina neither received nor gave any orders to "butcher anyone" during a sweep through the Vietnam hamlet of My Lai on March 16, 1968.

"The company commander," said Bailey, referring to Medina, "received no orders to butcher anyone or to kill any women and children -- and he issued none."

Medina, now stationed at Ft. Benning, Ga., has retained silent while men who were under his command described the alleged massacre of South Vietnamese civilians at My Lai. The leader of Medina's first platoon, Lt. William L. Calley Jr., was charged with the premeditated murder of 109 persons there. No charges have been placed against Medina.

Congress, meanwhile, moved to close a loophole that at present prevents prosecution of discharged servicemen for crimes they may have committed while in uniform.

Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N.C., introduced a bill to permit such trials of former G.I.s in U.S. District Courts.

At about the same hour Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said the Foreign Relations Committee would send two investigators to Vietnam this week to look into "the prospects for Vietnamization of the war and the general political and military situation in Saigon and the field."

He said they were not being given specific instructions to investigate the alleged massacre of civilians at My Lai but weren't being told to ignore it, either.

The committee itself, Fulbright said, may look into the massacre story, which already was being investigated by the Army and will be disclosed in some detail at Calley's courtmartial. The trial had been expected in January, but may be delayed until March, said Calley's Army counsel, Capt. Aubrey M. Daniel III.

A White House spokesman said he knew of no plans at present for any judicial or outside-the-government investigation of My Lai.

The South Vietnamese National Assembly began its own investigation at Song My, the resettlement village where the survivors of My Lai now live, but reported little progress.

Sen. Tran Van Don, leader of the nine-man team, said Monday's questioning was largely futile because the presence of about 25 accompanying newsmen frightened the villagers.

He said newsmen would be barred from future investigative tours, which he said were needed so as to "distinguish very carefully what is the truth and what is Viet Cong propaganda."

Many of the men who have talked fall under a Supreme Court ruling that under present laws, former servicemen cannot be

IN SNIPINGS' WAKE

Jackson mayor asks for community calm

JACKSON, Mich. (AP) — The mayor of Jackson called Monday on "all in the black and white communities to maintain control and de-escalate racial tensions" in the wake of a series of snipings.

There have been six unsolved snipings in the past 1½ months. In addition, Sunday night, police reported 11 shots were fired in the area in which a white youth was killed in September.

James J. Murphy, editor of the Jackson Blazer, a black weekly newspaper called on Gov. William B. Milliken for "immediate assistance," saying this southern Michigan city of 50,700 is becoming "virtually an armed camp" with "the potential for a holocaust."

Milliken replied by saying he has named two advisers to make a complete report on the Jackson situation.

The governor said further steps "to be taken by my office will depend on the outcome of these initial contacts. State police are available for any assistance requested by local authorities."

Mayor Maurice B. Townsend said he shared "Mr. Murphy's concern about growing tensions," and said state police already are helping try to solve the snipings.

Two white persons, a 16-year-old youth and a 76-year-old man, have been killed and two other whites injured by nighttime sniper fire. Two blacks have reported being shot at on a street.

Eleven shots, which some said sounded like carbine, were fired Sunday night in the same general area where a youth riding in a car was injured fatally by sniper fire in September, police said Monday.

Police stated that a search of the area turned up no casualties or damage.

Academic Council to discuss reports on campus unrest

The Academic Council, a governing body composed of elected faculty, will meet at 3:15 today in the Con Con Room, International Center.

The Council will receive reports from the University Student Affairs Committee on Policies and Procedures on Campus Disturbances and hear its recommendations.

The committee was established a year ago and is composed of five faculty members, two undergraduates and one graduate student.

The committee's report is based upon testimony from the Director of the Dept. of Public Safety, the Director of the School of Police Administration and Public Safety representatives of the National Center on Police and Community Relations as well as representatives from various student groups.

The University Educational Policies Committee will recommend procedures for improved evaluation of instruction and there will be a report from the ad hoc committee on the College of Osteopathy.

UNDER NEW POLICY

24-hour open house legal

By DONNA WILBURN
State News Staff Writer

Effective winter term, residents of each living unit will be able to determine their own open house hours.

After the University Student Affairs Committee and ASMSU approved the proposal Nov. 25, Milton B. Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, signed the new policy -- making the 24-hour open house a possibility.

Doug LaCock, president of Men's Hall Assn. (MHA), said he is satisfied with the new ruling.

"I do not think that any governing group or committee can review an individual living unit and determine what is best for them," LaCock said.

This liberal open house policy is not significant for what it states, but rather for what it deletes. The major restrictions in the previous open house ruling were not included in the new proposal.

Hours are no longer regulated, and separate houses in halls are given greater individual freedom.

Residence halls as well as fraternity, sorority and co-op living units are included under the new policy, which will be effective the first day of winter term, Monday, Jan. 5, 1970.

"Under the new policy of living unit autonomy, we will probably have a wider variation of open houses than ever before," Dickerson said.

"The new policy also speaks to the concern of all parties for the meticulous safeguarding of the rights of individuals not participating in a particular open house," Dickerson continued. "It is certainly important that all residents be involved in the roommate issue, since it is fundamentally a question of each person's responsibility for the protection of the rights of others."

The preamble to the new policy is exactly the same as the previous one. However, the five rules governing open house procedures have been formulated into three basic regulations:

1. Procedures and policies for open house shall be agreed upon for the residence halls by the governing council, head adviser, and manager, and for all other living units by the governing council, adviser and Student Activities Division.

These procedures shall be set on file, for the residence halls in the Office of Residence Halls Programs, Resident Hall

Milliken backs aid to Biafra

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken said recently that he supports and applauds humanitarian efforts to secure funds for Biafran relief.

In response to a letter from two Benton Harbor women asking whether he supports the securing of funds for such relief, the governor said he hoped the United States would accelerate volunteer and governmental efforts to enlarge and expand relief programs for victims of the civil war in Nigeria.

"While it is true that I am deeply involved in a number of critical problems facing us in Michigan, I am also very much aware that many of the problems we face stretch far beyond the boundaries of Michigan," the governor said.

Children starving

"One such problem that should be of concern to all of mankind is what is happening in Nigeria, especially to the children of Biafra," he continued.

"I was appalled to learn that international agencies now estimate the starvation deaths there total nearly two million and that children in the two to four-year-old group are dying at the rate of 15,000 a day."

Milliken stressed that it is imperative the American effort in Nigeria be concentrated on

"assuring that the relief needs of the civilian victims of the civil war in Nigeria be met to the maximum possible."

World's conscience

"I think President Nixon put it very well when he said that 'while America is not the world's policeman, let us at least act as the world's conscience in this matter of life or death for millions,'" he said.

Christmas Art accepted for sale

The MSU student faculty Christmas art sale will continue at the Gallery of Crossroads Imports this week.

Work from MSU faculty and students will continue to be accepted from 2-5 p.m. today and Dec. 8 in Suite 40, Goodspeed Bldg., at 210 Abbott Road.

Several Michigan legislators also expressed support for Biafran relief programs.

Sen. Sander M. Levin, D-Berkley, said he supports all kinds of assistance to terminate the plight of the citizens of Biafra.

Sen. Harry A. DeMaso, R-Battle Creek, added that whether the starvation is taking place in the United States or any other country, its citizens should be fed.

Adults cause strife

"In the name of humanity, I think something should be done," DeMaso said. "It is unfortunate that children should be suffering from the civil strife of adults."

Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, added his support to the relief programs with the reservation that no interference with the citizen's self-determination and freedom should be made.

"We all feel humanistic and concerned about starving children," Vaughn said, "but it has always frustrated me that we should be so uptight about Biafra when children in our own country are starving, too."

CONFERENCE SET

Haynsworth waits for Nixon decision

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. will go to Washington this week to confer with President Nixon on whether he will remain as chief judge of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Haynsworth met with reporters shortly before 3 p.m. after being closeted behind doors, apparently on the telephone to the White House. The Greenville, S. C., jurist who was rejected in his nomination for the U.S. Supreme Court by a 55-45 Senate vote last month, said he had expected the White House to make an announcement concerning his future this morning.

"President Nixon was supposed to release a statement at the White House this morning," Haynsworth said, "but said he was holding it up until he could talk to me. I will go to Washington, I think, on Thursday."

Haynsworth's nomination by President Nixon to serve on the high court came under fire from Senate critics who claimed he had not been sufficiently sensitive to possible conflict of interest charges and from those who claimed his civil rights views were not in step with the pronouncements of the Supreme Court.

IN WEAPONS PROGRAMS

Laird reports cost overruns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mammoth cost overruns of $16.2 billion in the military's 34 major weapons programs have been reported to Congress — by none other than Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird.

The figure includes the C5A cargo plane and Minuteman missile overruns disclosed earlier this year and overruns in the Navy shipbuilding program that Secretary of the Navy John H. Chafee said could top $1 billion.

Those three items make up only a small part of the total. And Laird, disclosing the overruns in House appropriation subcommittee testimony released Monday, said he expects the $16.2 billion figure to grow higher.

"I am still not convinced that we have uncovered all the deficiencies in our current programs," Laird told the subcommittee. "and we will continue to examine them and keep the Congress informed."

But while subcommittee members referred to the figure as cost overruns, Laird used the term "cost growth," saying much of the cost increase is the result of inflation and changes ordered by the military, rather than poor estimates and other avoidable increases.

The C5A's $1.5 billion and Minuteman's $478 million overruns disclosed at congressional hearings this year were dwarfed by the two largest items on Laird's list: $4.46 billion for the F111 swingwing jet bomber and $3.2 billion for an MK48 torpedo program that has been accumulating overruns since it started in 1964.

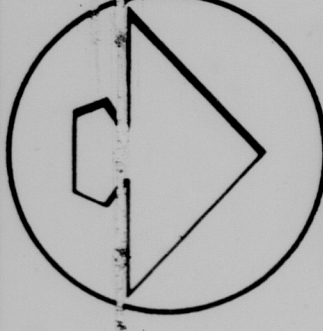

Laird called the shipbuilding program "one of our major problem areas."

Navy Secretary Chafee and Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chief of naval operations, said deficits cover 125 ships authorized over 13 years and money must be found to meet shipbuilders' claims.

To meet the deficit, Chafee said, the Navy has canceled $200 million worth of projects, deferred $104 million worth of shipbuilding to later years and is asking an appropriation of $167 million. In wide-ranging testimony Laird and Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said also:

— The $2.5 billion limit Congress set this year on U.S. aid to free world forces in Vietnam and local forces in Laos and Thailand "in future years could severely restrict" Vietnamization of the war. They said the aid this year is $2.2 billion so it would not be affected.

— The Advanced Manned Strategic Bomber will cost $7 billion to $8 billion, enough to buy 900 Minuteman intercontinental missiles or 30 missile-firing Polaris submarines, but the bomber is needed to replace the aging B52 and maintain a combination U.S. missile-bomber deterrent force.

THIS CAN GET YOUR HEAD TOGETHER

Lead your own life. Enjoy it. Don't let life let you down because of a silly headache. Happiness is as far away as an Anacin® bottle. Anacin is twice as strong in the specific pain reliever doctors recommend most as the other well known extra strength tablet. Anacin may not bend your mind, but it sure will get your head together.

TWA put a price on your head that even your parents might agree to pay.

We're out to get you home for the holidays. Fast.

Which is something that your parents will probably enjoy too.

Something else they'll enjoy is our fares for students. (Students, that is, who are between the ages of 12 and 21.) On a standby basis, you'll get 40% off regular coach fares.

Which doesn't mean you'll be flying second class or anything like that.

You still get all the great food and TWA features like movies and stereo music.* But it won't cost you like it does everyone else.

And TWA flies to nearly all the major cities in the U.S., plus we have a special youth fare to Hawaii.

With all that going for you, there's only one excuse for not going home for the holidays.

Getting your hair cut.

Slipping in under a mortar barrage, Viet Cong sappers Monday hurled dynamite charges into a U.S. Army compound at Cam Ranh Bay — considered the most secure base in South Vietnam — but caused only light damage. U.S. spokesmen reported. Three Americans were wounded. The military spokesmen said base defenders held the enemy at bay with helicopter gunships. It was the third sapper strike against the base in less than four months.

Chancellor Willy Brandt threw West Germany's full weight behind Great Britain's bid for Common Market membership Monday, and at the same time presented a plan for strengthening the European economic community. Brandt urged creation of a European reserve fund, a timetable for economic and monetary union, increased sharing of technical and scientific attainments and cooperation in foreign affairs.

Turkey has forbidden overflights by planes carrying arms from Communist countries to the Arabs, a source in the Communications Ministry said Monday. But Soviet-built jets destined for Arab air forces are still being allowed to refuel in Turkey en route to Middle East air fields. Although neutral in the Middle East conflict, Turkey maintains diplomatic relations with Israel. But at the same time it has been trying to win markets in the Arab world and has expressed sympathy for the Arab position.

Nine members of South Vietnam's National Assembly opened their own investigations Monday into charges that U.S. troops massacred South Vietnamese citizens at My Lai in March 1968. Sen. Tran Van Don, leader of the investigating team, said they've made little headway in their first questionings of villagers, due to the presence of many newsmen, which tended to frighten the subjects.

Britain will press for suspension of the Greek military regime from the Council of Europe later this month despite American appeals to reconsider, diplomatic sources said Monday. The American position says that suspension would do nothing to restore democratic rights in Greece and might weaken NATO's southern flank. Greek government officials responded with a warning that economic sanctions might be imposed against those who vote for suspension.

National News

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Monday that the Air Force cost analyst, A. E. Fitzgerald, who disclosed the $2 billion C5A cargo plane cost overrun "was fired" — but had a chance to take on new Pentagon duties. Laird said he asked Fitzgerald to prepare a paper on how he could be useful to the Dept. of Defense as a whole, but indicated the paper did not lead to a new assignment.

Tires certified by four more leading manufacturers as meeting government safety standards failed 24 per cent of federally sponsored tests conducted by independent laboratories, the Dept. of Transportation said Monday. A 25 per cent failure rate was reported by the department last week in another batch of tests on major tire brands. This week's test results involved Armstrong, Mansfield, Sieberling, and Uniroyal.

Defense Secretary Laird said Monday that he doubts that the alleged U.S. massacre at My Lai will undercut American support of the Nixon Administration's war policy. After weighing his words, Laird thoughtfully added: "But I don't want to say that this helps."

Los Angeles police said Monday they have issued warrants for the arrest of two women and a man in the slayings of seven persons, including actress Sharon Tate and four of her jet-set friends. Miss Tate, 26, was the honey blonde pregnant wife of Polish screen director Roman Polanski.

R. H. Edwin Espy, General Secretary of the National Council of Churches (NCC), proposed Monday that his predominantly Protestant organization be supplanted by a new ecumenical council, including the Roman Catholic Church and all other major Christian bodies.

Depletion allowance cut on oil, gas taxes

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate voted Monday to trim the 27½ per cent oil and gas tax depletion allowance to 23 per cent.

It was the first time the body ever had agreed to cut the 27½ per cent figure since it was written into law 43 years ago.

First the Senate voted by a surprising margin, 62-30, to defeat an amendment which would have retained 27½ per cent. Next it rejected, 52 to 38 an attempt of Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., to reduce the allowance to 20 per cent as voted by the House.

The result was to leave in the bill a 23 per cent allowance decided upon in the Senate Finance Committee.

The outcome will leave the final decision up to the Senate-House conferences on the bill.

Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., author of the amendment to retain the present figure, said there was doubt that even a 27½ per cent allowance provided enough tax incentive to assure the nation adequate supplies of oil and gas.

But Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., a supporter of a reduced allowance, said that, if the Ellender amendment were adopted, "this bill would be considered a hypocritical mockery by most Americans."

They would not regard it as a tax reform bill at all if the oil and gas allowance were left untouched, he insisted.

A reduction to 23 per cent would bring in 175 million in additional annual revenue. A cut to 20 per cent would yield 345 million.

Ellender said the allowance was designed to return to oil and gas property owners the value of an irreplaceable asset removed from the ground and also to provide an incentive for the vast amount of exploration needed to find new oil and gas sources.

Reconsideration set for school aid

The Michigan legislature returns to the capitol today, following its recess for deer hunting season, to resume consideration of Gov. Milliken's educational reform bills.

Senate majority leader Emil Lockwood, R-Lansing, said that body will probably begin reconsideration of the school aid bill, requested by opponents of the measure at the time it was passed.

Another bill authorizing the elimination of property tax credits has already been sent to the house, but a request has been made to return it to the Senate for reconsideration also.

Other items scheduled for consideration are bills to eliminate the State Board of Education, to eliminate intermediate school districts and to establish regional districts.

House Speaker William A. Ryan, D-Detroit, expressed optimism Monday that negotiations that have been going on between the governor's office and legislators have accomplished enough so that some daylight can be seen to "comprehensive educational reform."

Ryan predicted action before the Christmas recess on the school aid bill (including parochial), a series of tax bills to finance the aid bill, legislation setting up regional education districts and resolving the question of the State Board of Education.

1,614 degrees set for commencement

The total number of degree candidates includes 968 bachelor's, 404 master's, 188 doctorates, 9 educational specialists, 1 advanced graduate study and 44 doctor of veterinary medicine students.

Speaker for the ceremony will be Kingman Brewster Jr., president of Yale University and a leading spokesman for American higher education. He will receive the honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Also receiving honorary degrees will be John Hope Franklin, chairman of the Dept. of History at the University of Chicago, and John A. Garraty, professor of history at Columbia University. They will be awarded Doctor of Humane Letters degrees.

Diplomas will be presented to the graduates by Acting President Adams.

E. Lansing income tax: at students' expense

The East Lansing City Commission is considering a new revenue-producing scheme for the city treasury in an effort to lower property taxes. The proposal before the commission now is to institute a city income tax.

It is probable that this levy will take the form of a so-called "uniform" income tax—that is, residents will be taxed 1 per cent of their total wages a week, while non-residents working within the city limits will have their checks lightened to the tune of one half of one per cent per week. This ordinarily might not be too relevant to the average student until one remembers the oft-forgotten fact that the entire MSU campus, with the exception of some experimental farms to the far south and, inexplicably, a small strip of land along Shaw Lane from Hagadorn to Bogue, is within the East Lansing city limits.

What this means is that should the city implement an income tax they will have a sort of captive revenue-producer in the form of the student body.

This strikes us as being just a little bit out of line. The average on-campus student gets very little out of the city beside the privilege to shop along Grand River Avenue for items at inflated prices. Even off-campus students are accorded little in the way of the rights and privileges that ordinarily go along with the august title of "taxpayer"—a great many were not even allowed to register to vote in the last elections.

The city could, of course, sidestep this issue by charging all MSU student employees the one half per cent non-resident rate. There are certainly any number of precedents for such an administration of a "uniform" tax, but in view of the special case afforded by the overlap of campus and city boundaries we cannot shake the feeling that such an act by the East Lansing City Commission would be tantamount to something on the order of shooting fish in a barrel.

The real rub is that most students do live inside the city limits and should, thereby, be qualified as residents, but are not. Further they are completely powerless in city affairs. Students cannot file a referendum on this issue and even if students were allowed to register and vote on it we still would not get much satisfaction because most of the students who will be paying the income tax are under 21 years of age.

Another interesting point brought up by this income tax business is whether a municipality can levy a tax on state-owned land—in this case the university. The question has thus far apparently been studiously ignored by the city fathers in the hope that it might just go away.

If the East Lansing city income tax is implemented—probably summer term if ever, because then there will not be many students around—then there would seem to be only two equitable ways to handle the situation: either the University could officially list all its student employees as working in that part of Akers Hall that is within the Shaw corridor, or the city could lower the voting age to 18 and make all full-time students official and legal residents of the municipality.

In as much as both of these alternatives seem to be highly unlikely, it is our opinion that an East Lansing city income tax would most assuredly not be a good thing for the students of this University.

Translating rhetoric into concrete action

Translating ideals and rhetoric into meaningful and constructive action is a profound and timeless problem. This quandary has presented itself yet again—this time as a roadblock to those people who seek the implementation of the Massey Report on student participation in academic government.

There has been much discussion and debate on this controversial topic both in print and by word of mouth. The consensus of student opinion—from those who have an opinion—thus far has been highly favorable, but faculty support apparently remains in the minority. Yet it is the faculty that must be convinced of the merit of the Massey Report and of student support for it, because it is the faculty through the Academic Council that will have the final say on whether the report passes or not.

What can the responsible student do to further this his own cause? One of the most effective actions thus far has been for individual students to speak to faculty members on a personal basis and let them know their feelings. We have an additional method to propose.

At 3:15 today the Academic Council will convene in the Con-Con

Room of the International Center for their monthly meeting. Spectators are allowed and there is ample seating for them—most of which usually goes to waste. Few students ever attend these meetings, but if today the galleries contained a significant number of students then the effect on the faculty could be meaningful.

The Massey Report is not slated to be a topic covered at today's meeting and probably will not be discussed—that debate and vote will not come until the January meeting. Now, however, is the time for action—not during or after the fact. A number of student observers overlooking the Council proceedings would be a proof that the student body is, indeed, concerned about the academic government of this university, and, if this body of students is polite and decorous they will have furthered the proof that they are also responsible enough to deserve representation in this decision-making.

We urge all concerned students to attend the Academic Council meeting and, by their presence, show that there is worth in the Massey Report.

OUR READERS' MINDS

We are shocked by the massacre

To the Editor:

"For three transgressions of the ammonites (Americans) and for four, I will not revoke the punishment because they have ripped up women with child in Gilead (Song My)." Book of Amos the Prophet

"Thus says the Lord, 'A voice is heard in Ramah, lamentation and weeping. Rachel is weeping for her children; she refuses to be comforted for her children, because they are no more.'" Book of Jeremiah the Prophet

I have often wondered, as I have read histories of Nazi Germany, what I would have done had I lived then and known of the atrocities committed by my government. I need wonder no longer. What do you do when you know that the soldiers of your country have committed mass murder of helpless men, women, and children? Do you joke, study, eat, sleep, as usual? Or do you sit down and weep? What was I to do as I picked up the paper Tuesday morning and read that charges were being brought against an American G.I. for the premeditated murder of over 100 villagers?

What can I do as I read what a participant in the massacre says about using three or four clips of ammunition to kill a crowd of villagers, about herding others into a ditch and then shooting them, about the mothers hunching over their little ones to protect them, in vain, from murderous bullets? What can I say to a man who relates that killing helpless women and children eased his conscience because his buddies had been killed by Viet Cong soldiers?

Does anyone remember Lidice? Lidice was a small mining town in Czechoslovakia. Reinhard Heydrich was Hitler's henchman in Czechoslovakia. Reinhard Heydrich was assassinated and, as vengeance, on June 10, 1942, German soldiers went into Lidice, rounded up all the men and 56 women and shot them in cold blood; all the other women were shipped to concentration camps and the children were put in correctional schools. Lidice was no more. Now, let this sink in. The Nazi blast was more merciful than the American soldier, for the Americans spared no one, "only the chickens were left alive."

Students of MSU, listen! On orders, upwards of 400 helpless men, women and children were murdered by a group of American soldiers in March 1968. It was commanded and concealed. What can we do? We must let it be known in all quarters

Don't complain

To the Editor:

The "Mistreated" Marijuana Users: I don't have $3,500 "lying around" here at school. I don't even have $3,500 "lying around" in my bank account that I could get for bail to get out of jail. I don't make it a point to break the law either.

This is not an argument for or against marijuana. At this time it is illegal to possess marijuana. Until it is made legal (if it ever is) anyone who possesses or uses marijuana should be prepared to pay for the illegal use of it.

As for the fairness of the size of the bail, the lawbreaker has little to say about it and should have little to say about it.

I got a speeding ticket this summer (so, you see I'm not perfect—but I wasn't intentionally speeding) and I had to pay a fine which I felt was unfair, but I paid it anyway. I knew that after being pulled over, I had been driving over the posted, legal speed limit.

So, if you break the law and you know you are breaking it (no matter how unfair it seems) and, if you get caught, you get a fine or are charged bail, don't complain, you had it coming.

The hip anti-hero: looking for freedom

Captain America—God he's groovy and he blows dope and he's free and those EYES!!! and he rides an outasight bike and he's got long hair and he's so cool chicks make HIM and wasn't it a downer for him to get zapped by those uptight crackers!!!

The first time I saw "Easy Rider" I arrived at the theater in time to watch the crowd file out from the first show. Long faces, frowns, mascara streaming down chick's cheeks, almost no conversation.

Why were so many people shaken when Wyatt and Billy got it? Why did so many people dig Easy Rider? Maybe the answers to these questions lie in the fact that the protagonists represented something we all want to be, did something we all want to do, looked and acted cool and were killed by what we think to be uncool.

Like James Dean and Brando and Jagger and Lee Marvin and McQueen, Wyatt (Peter Fonda) is a hip anti-hero: good-looking, aloof, bizarre—and he GETS it by The Establishment. He is fighting The System, doing Different Things, Being Free, Doing His Thing.

Wyatt is cool, but so is a refrigerator. Wyatt is beautiful, but so is a Greek statue. Wyatt talks, but so does a tape deck.

So Wyatt and his sidekick are fighting

The Establishment, Breaking Out. So how do they finance their venture; they smuggle cocaine across the Mexican border, the same way the Mafia makes its big bread.

Our heroes decide to forsake the comforts of their modern society and search for America. They dig a rancher and a group of people living in a commune and they smile and wave at poor black sharecroppers, all while riding on 24-karat-chrome cycles and with several thousand bucks stashed inside their shiny teardrop gas tanks.

When Wyatt comes in contact with people, he withdraws into a shell and refuses conversation and says "OH, WOW!" While Billy and two chicks are swimming in a mineral bath, Wyatt sits on the side and looks at his groovy body and waits to get made.

In a plain Southern restaurant, Wyatt ignores the taunts of the mortal townspeople and a group of giggling teenyboppers and continues to concentrate his glassy-eyed stare on the wall. When Billy has the time of his life in a New Orleans whorehouse, Wyatt plays it so cool that the poor little lady has to ask "Don't you like me? I mean, after all, you paid for me.", to which our hero replies, "Umm, uh, wow, that was for my friend."

I think Fonda has far too many brains to repeat the mistake he made in "The Wild Angels." I don't think he and Dennis Hopper and Terry Southern intended for "Easy Rider" to be a statement about how uncool The Establishment is and how hip the Beautiful People are.

Rather, it seems as though Wyatt and Billy were meant to represent people running from something while not knowing where they were running to, people hating and laughing at something but not attempting to change it.

I don't think it is possible to say that Fonda intended Wyatt and Billy's deaths to be just punishments. However, it is conceivable to interpret their deaths as warnings, just as Wyatt's whorehouse vision was a warning which he refused to believe.

"Easy Rider" is a beautiful, complicated film with a beautiful, complicated message(s). I don't think it gave many answers, but it did pose a great many interesting questions, such as "Can you give someone the finger and not expect to get shot?" In other words, can The System be changed by kicking it in the groin while it has all the guns and all the bread and all the power?

Like "Hey Jude" and "Revolution," "Easy Rider" seemed to be telling people to open and fix their own heads and the rest of the world might fall into place. "Easy Rider" didn't say that longhairs are hip, but neither did it condemn shortshirts. It seemed to say that both groups are captives of society, ready to sell-out if the price is right.

Wyatt and Billy might have been saviours if they had said or done something. But they didn't. They felt trapped and constricted, but so did the people they were rebelling against. They were just as much a threat to society as society was to them. They couldn't appreciate a free meal, a free mind or a free chick. Everything they did had a price on it. As Roger McGuinn's "Ballad of Easy Rider" said, "They just wanted to be free."

that we are shocked and repelled by this atrocity. We must make it clear to all that this act was wrong, that it cannot be tolerated, that it is an outrage to humanity!

We dare not allow the blood-guilt of silence to come upon our hands! Write! Write to your Senators, your Congressmen, your mayors, your President; write to your friends and acquaintances and tell them to write! Let us tell our leaders that such depravity must cease, that men who perpetrate and men who permitted and men who concealed this deed must be brought to justice!

There are 40,000 of us at MSU. If we write and encourage our friends and relatives to write, we can flood the executive and legislative offices of this country with letters shouting that public opinion is implacably opposed to these obscene deeds and those who are responsible for them.

Visit Academic Council

To the Editor:

To set the record straight, a student, Gina Schack, moved to refer the Massey Report to committee at the Oct. 28 meeting of the Academic Council. I supported that motion. Referral to committee was not a method of emasculating the report; if anything, the execution by mutilation of the Massey Report was already underway. The legitimate opposition to the report could better be discussed apart from the stiff, formal atmosphere of the council.

More alarming to me is the backdrop of the Massey debate: a tendency to student-faculty confrontation. If confrontation is inevitable, I would prefer to see the dissenter enabled to debate the issues in an academic forum, armed with a vote, than to find dissenters in the streets challenging a power structure of which they are not a part.

If confrontation is avoidable, it will be because students and faculty have been able to exchange points of view—again, ideally in an academic setting. This alone would not prescribe the manner of student participation; perhaps students as well as faculty should elect the faculty members of the Academic Council; personally I find voting student representatives more desirable.

By the way, the next meeting of the Academic Council is at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday in the Con-Con Room. We have a large, but usually empty spectators' gallery.

BILL SONN

The constitution as religion

The Constitution is a peculiar form of religion with all of a religion's attendant defensive emotions and with a religion's attendant holy wars. In becoming a religious property, the Constitution has assumed the role of Bible and those Presidents commonly held to be great are also held to be its apostles and its saints. In each instance, these men acquired sainthood by waging and winning holy wars to spread the gospel.

With the dissatisfaction with the course of the holy war in Vietnam, there has arisen a demand by a minority for a re-examination of America's direction and a re-evaluation of national identity. The minority is essentially conservative in that most of its elements seek only a re-affirmation of the religion in more modern terms.

Because religion is 90 per cent emotion and because the minority's message has been misinterpreted, the majority has reacted defensively, somewhat blindly and with a savagery physically peaking in Chicago, but only at this moment reaching full intensity through the quasi-subtlety of the present administration.

The effective enforcement of the Bill of Rights is not dependent on the will of the majority. Its purpose is precisely to protect minority opinions against potential persecution by the majority. Instead, the effectiveness of the Bill of Rights is solely dependent upon the governmental machinery sworn to uphold it. In the past few years, dissenters have indeed been legally protected by both the judicial and executive branches. Consequently, persecution of at least the white dissenters and to a more limited extent, the black, has been minimal in relation to past history. The prospect for minimizing persecution in the future, however, is depressing.

The reason for these dark prospects is that the various organs of government upon which protection depends seem to be more concerned with pleasing the masses shivering in the throes of imagined threat than with implementing the Bill of Rights. To look to the courts for protection seems absurd in the light of faces like Julius Hoffman shining down from the bench, and with Chief Justice Burger's past statement. The Congress, while more receptive to dissent, has hardly shown any inclination or any power to seriously concern itself with minority rights. And the Nixon Administration now appears to have forgotten that the Bill of Rights exists.

In his first year in office, Mr. Nixon has displayed a remarkable gift for gauging the political winds and then shaping policies which flow with those winds. Perhaps it is unreasonable to expect such a politically-oriented President to buck the tremendous forces of majority restiveness that exist today. Yet, when Mr. Nixon assumed office, he also assumed that office's responsibilities is the protection of minority rights and, consequently, the Bill of Rights. This responsibility is so basic that it is hardly ever mentioned. But has Mr. Nixon served the Bill of Rights?

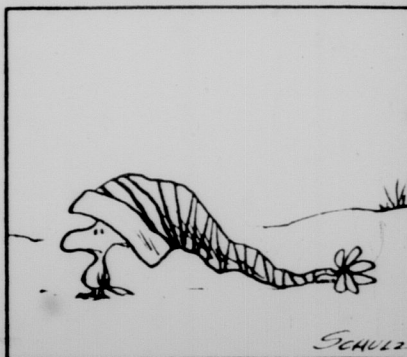

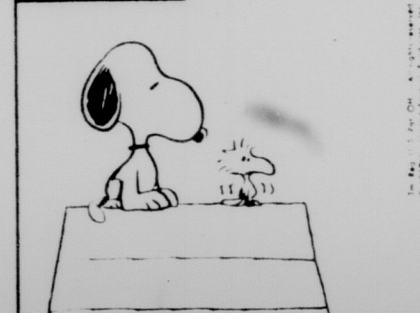

If he has, he has done it by sanctioning Mr. Agnew's vituperative attacks on conscientious dissenters seriously attempting to influence the government in a responsible and nonviolent manner. He has endorsed the freedom of the media by similarly backing the vice president's assault on the television networks, an action dangerously wavering on the rim of governmental censorship. Mr. Nixon has smiled on free speech by allowing Atty. Gen. Mitchell to investigate the New Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam on the pretext that it allowed David Dellinger to use one of its microphones.

In effect, Mr. Nixon has, in the interest of remaining in office, created a vehicle called the Silent Majority (stereotyped as latter-day keepers of the faith) to justify the stifling of dissent and the limiting of free speech. Instead of giving consideration to an articulately stated minority program, he invokes the authority of the ritual tenets of "Honor Thy Flag" to sanction the implementation of a non-existent, unstated and manufactured majority mandate.

So where is freedom of speech, the right to assembly, the freedom of the media? Very little of any of these rights is left, and it appears that the President is hungrily eating up the rest. He does so because he does not want to be the first President to preside over a defeat and thus he cannot allow dissent. How else can he present Hanoi with a fraudulent image of a united, missionary America determined to bring governments of the people, by the people and for the people to all the world?

One of the highest honors of Greece has been bestowed upon Gerasimos J. Karabatsos, of the MSU Chemistry Dept. He has been elected a corresponding member of the Greek Academy of Athens for his contributions to basic research in chemistry.

The Greek Academy is divided into groups of natural and physical sciences and mathematics, letters and arts and the ethical sciences. Karabatsos left Monday for an international tour of 11 lectures, the last of which will be in Greece.

Karabatsos, 37, is one of the youngest men ever elected to the Greek Academy of Athens.

He is known for his contributions in the area of carbonium ions such as bimolecular reactions and portenated cyclopropanes, stereochemistry and nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy. He has established a research team in Athens.

Karabatsos joined the MSU faculty in 1963. He holds a A.B. degree from Adelphi College and the Ph.D. from Harvard University.

Senator suffers moderate stroke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., has suffered a partially incapacitating stroke and his condition is considered serious though he is not in danger, his office said Monday.

Mundt, 69, has lost partial use of his right arm, has difficulty walking and speaking and will be in Bethesda Naval Hospital for at least six to eight weeks, said a statement by his administrative assistant, Robert L. McCaughey.

There has been no thought, another aide said, of the senator's giving up his office.

McCaughey said his statement was based on the opinion of Mundt's physician, Dr. Rufus J. Pearson.

"Rehabilitation treatment is expected to begin the middle of this week to restore capability to the senator's right arm," McCaughey said.

"Sen. Mundt is comprehensive, alert, eating regular meals and watches television, such as football games," McCaughey's statement concluded.

Mundt is the ranking Republican on the Government Operation Committee of the Senate, and the body's No. 2 GOP member on the Appropriations Committee.

Survey reveals 'piropo' gap

By ROGER TREMBLAY

In Argentina a sometimes subtle -- and sometimes not so subtle -- compliment paid to a woman as a stranger passes her on the street is called a "piropo."

The piropo has been a way of life in Argentina ever since suave Latin lovers decided that they needed some gallant line to break the ice and meet the women they had adored from a distance.

Although MSU is sometimes tagged a dull middle-class school, piropos, or "good lines," are still used by some of the more outgoing men on campus.

They may not have the same romantic flair as their Latin counterparts and often the result is not the same. But coeds are still treated to some rather extravagant compliments.

In a random sample, some coeds said they believe MSU males are not too inventive. Demetra Moulas, Benton Harbor senior, said, "They need new writers when they tell you what beautiful eyes you have and you know they haven't looked above your shoulders."

Other coeds said there may be a credibility gap. "It's just too bad that men pass along so many 'sayings.' By the time you get to be a college senior, you don't believe anything you hear," Alice Shrader, Orchard Lake senior, said.

However, Ann Roti,

Buchanan senior still has faith in the spontaneous compliment. "I don't think piropos are a dying art," she said. "Women like men who are aware of them."

It would seem that the gentlemen of MSU do not quite believe, however, in the same finesse and flourish that characterizes the symbolic Latin Romeo.

William Allen, Detroit senior, said, "Informal flattery just doesn't exist in the same way here. To impress a girl now requires more of a soft-sell, friendly attitude."

Those who come to campus with great expectations are often frustrated in their attempts. Jeff Bell, Saginaw freshman, said, "It's really tough to meet girls around here. Every time you go to talk to a girl you don't know, you get the cold freeze."

Some guys feel the same way a lot of coeds do about fancy lines. Larry Tyler, Detroit junior said, "Most guys who think they really have the moves aren't too original. Things that they say to girls are more vulgar than flattering."

Even though the social climate of the campus is noticeably different from that of Latin American campuses, the male desire to impress the female is still a major part of campus interaction and communication.

Thefts over weekend in Bryan Hall reported

Several students in Bryan Hall reported their rooms broken into and items stolen during Thanksgiving weekend, according to University police.

Roommates Karl H. Leskovar and Keith L. Keeter, both Warren freshmen, reported a television, tape player and other equipment valued at $2,000 taken from their room.

Edward J. Cook, St. Joseph junior, reported a stereo tape player worth $65 missing from his room Monday.

Donald D. McGaw, Bloomfield Hills senior, reported a component set valued at $90 missing from his room.

Roommates Darell L. Stewart, Drayton Plains freshman, and Kenneth W. Beall, Richfield, Minn., sophomore, reported a component set worth $200 and a tape recorder worth $250 taken from their room over the weekend.

There

once was a beast called an electronic synthesizer.

Everyone laughed and said the beast was nice as a toy, but it was ridiculous to think of it as a musical instrument. Everyone laughed but Walter Carlos, who loved the beast. And made an album with the beast, called "Switched-On Bach."

Oh, how people stopped laughing.

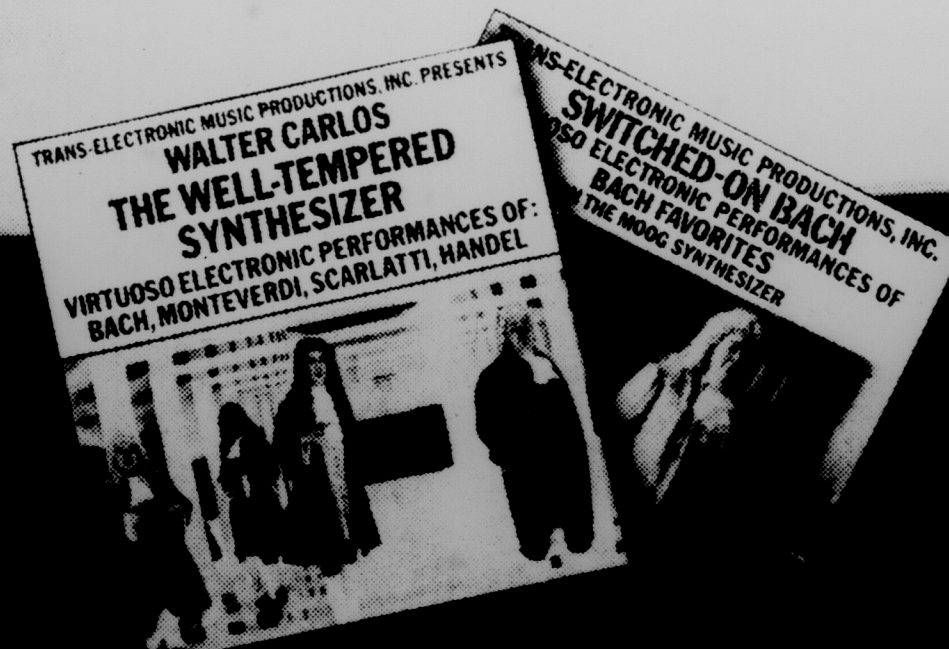

And now Walter Carlos and the beast have made a new album called "The Well-Tempered Synthesizer": The music of Bach, Handel, Scarlatti and Monteverdi brought to life by electronic media.

It's an astonishing experience.

"How in the world did the beast do it?" some will say after hearing this album.

Forgetting that the beast is only as good as the beauty that's put into it.

Kole: true life after death only found in Jesus Christ

By TOM BOWERS
Religion Editor

Do the dead return? Yes, according to illusionist Andre Kole, but the spirits of the dead do not return through mediums and spiritism. The only valid basis for a hope in life after death is found in the claims of Jesus Christ and the evidence He gave by His own resurrection.

Kole, a professional magician for 15 years, presented a program titled "Unmasking the Unknown" in the auditorium Sunday evening. The presentation was a well-integrated combination of stage magic, discussion of spiritism and explanation of the illusionist's personal faith. Supernatural communication with the dead, Kole said, is a deception. Houdini spent much of his life studying spiritualism and became convinced it was fraudulent.

Kole told of Houdini's repeated attempts to contact his mother after her death. He went from medium to medium, in each seance there were always the ghostly whispers claiming to be his mother.

"There was only one problem," Kole said. "The voices were always in English, and Yiddish was the only language his mother knew. He never told the mediums that his mother didn't know a word of English."

Kole said that modern day astrologers and prophets usually base their predictions on the work of a "prediction subscription service," a group which employs historians and other experts to analyze the trends of the times.

"It is true that many prophets correctly foretold the assassination of President Kennedy," Kole said.

The prediction was based on the astounding fact that since 1840 no American President who entered office in a year beginning with the numeral 0 lived to leave the White House alive.

Death had come to six previous Presidents. Since Kennedy was in good health when he took office, the prediction was made that he would be assassinated.

Kole went through a careful discussion of Biblical prophecies which have been fulfilled in recent years.

He said that Bible prophecies written long before Christ, clearly stated that Israel would some day return to Palestine, and that eventually Israel would control Jerusalem.

"Not until 1948 did the first part of the prophecy come true. The second part was fulfilled during the Six-Day War in 1967."

Kole said that for years he searched for a deeper meaning to life.

"I knew about Christianity," he said, "but it seemed like a religion that took the fun out of life."

"Then I found that Christianity is not a set of rules. It is a relationship. It has changed my life around and made living worthwhile. It has also given me a firm hope in life after death."

Kole invited people in the audience to try the same relationship with Christ that he experienced.

Fear not

Andre Kole, noted illusionist, asked for the bravest member of the audience to assist him in a bit of magic. His volunteer turned captive as he demonstrated the Chinese way to chop carrots and not heads.

GPA loses spot in Honors College

By SHARMON STEWART
State News Staff Writer

Honors College has conducted a probe that resulted in a de-emphasized role for grades for admittance.

Previously, the primary requirement for admittance was a 3.5 or above GPA. Quality of work is now the primary factor considered.

"Grade grabbing has been guarded against by putting an increased emphasis on the quality of a student's program," Frank H. Blackington III, director of Honors College said.

Under the new practice, students with a 3.4 GPA may be accepted over a 3.9. The student's educational program is studied before admittance is granted, Blackington said.

"A curriculum must illustrate unusual depth and breadth with an evidence of commitment to achievement," Blackington said.

Currently, invitations to the Honors College are only given upon completion of the freshman year or during the student's sophomore year. Consideration is being given to opening the college to juniors and seniors. Generally, upper classmen are not invited unless they are transfer students, according to Blackington.

An annual review of members will be conducted starting this year. Students accepted before June 1, 1969 will not be reviewed. The review will determine how well members are using the Honors College's facilities. Review procedures are being arranged by the college's central staff.

Practices of the Honors College go beyond its 1,500 members to projects that influence the entire University.

The Piton, an occasional literary paper, was adopted again this year.

Keeping true to its meaning, a wedge driven into a rock surface, Blackington hopes The Piton will be an opening wedge to the entire University.

The Piton consists of contributions from the entire student body. Publication is on an occasional basis due to a lack of funds.

The Honors College hopes to publish the paper three to four times a year. Printing is done in the basement of Eustace Hall by Honors College students.

A non-profit adventure, papers are distributed free throughout the University in hopes of serving as a platform for people to talk to each other.

'U' prof's tool shows U.S. business system

Lansing Police Chief Derold W. Husby, who was out of town at the time of the raid termed it, "a routine inspection that is a common procedure when ever such a permit is issued."

The device is a three-dimensional model of the nation's business systems -- the input, output and interrelatedness of 370 industrial components of the U.S. economy from automobiles to steel.

Hoagland will use this unique visual representation during a seminar for which he will be chairman at an international symposium for businessmen in Pittsburgh.

Key advantage of Hoagland's 3-D model, built using data supplied by the Office of Business Economics, is "tremendous visualization." In effect, the 18 by 18 foot grid does the job of 370 individual charts.

POSSIBLE LIQUOR VIOLATION

Police ball investigated

Investigations continued Monday into an alleged violation of the Michigan Liquor Control Act by the police union, the Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), at their annual ball Saturday night in Lansing.

Two police detectives were sent to the Civic Center to check for possible violations of a special 24-hour permit issued to the FOP. The permit allows the sale of liquor including beer, wine and whisky, but prohibits patrons from bringing their own bottles. The investigating officers reportedly found persons violating the regulation.

Among the 2,500 persons in attendance when the detectives attempted the raid were Lansing Mayor Gerald W. Graves, City Attorney Oskar Hornbach and several other Lansing officials.

The detectives said that they were, "acting under orders," although no formal complaint had been issued. The raid was stopped when the mayor phoned Asst. Chief O'Toole, who withdrew the order.

MSU--looking more like a park every day

By ROSANNE BAIME
State News Staff Writer

A Californian in the field of campus development visited the new Administration Bldg. at the beginning of this term and commented, "You're making this place look more like a park every day!"

Whenever the grassy fields of MSU erupt to produce yet another campus building, two administrative offices, Campus Park and Planning and Space Utilization have already done much work on the projects.

The Campus Park and Planning office is responsible for site development and over-all land planning for the academic campus, Milton Baron, director of the office, said.

"MSU is unique in that once an area is planned in a unit, all bids on the site development must include not only the cost of the building, but all the other costs of the site's development as well."

Building, landscaping together "When the new Administration Bldg. was being built, the walks, curbing, landscaping and lighting were being worked on at the same time. When the building opened last spring, it was both usable and good looking."

Campus Park and Planning's realm -- the academic campus -- has grown from 67 acres in 1855 to 2,000 acres today. It includes all the land between Mt. Hope Road and Michigan and Grand River Avenues, and between Hagadorn Road and I-496.

This academic campus has been divided for planning purposes into imaginary "rings."

The innermost ring is the campus park, Baron said, consisting of the Union, West Circle, both the Botanical and Horticultural Gardens, the Auditorium, the riverfront, Abrams Planetarium and the Stadium. These are all grouped together, Baron said, because they are all open to use by the general public.

The next ring is the academic ring, made up of all class buildings.

The third and outermost ring is the living unit ring with all existing residence halls included, plus University married housing. Expansion is being planned in only two of these three areas, according to Baron.

Dorm idea abandoned

The dormitory program has been slowed down in recent years since the completion of Holden Hall in 1967.

Several years ago, Baron said, the University felt the need for a 12-story graduate dormitory to be built south of Natural Resources Bldg. on Farm Lane. This would place it close to the science complex and the proposed medical complex.

After bids on the dormitory were received, the costs proved to be so great that it would not have been financially supported by student room-and-board fees, Baron said, and the idea was abandoned.

In the campus park, an events or all-purpose building is in the early planning stages. Its tentative site is south of the Stadium and would take the place of Jensen Fieldhouse for basketball, Popular Entertainment concerts and other large gatherings by providing a hall with a 15,000 seating capacity.

Still in early stage

The building, comparable to the University of Michigan's Events Bldg., is still undergoing preliminary studies.

A conservatory, supplementing MSU's gardens by putting tropical plants on display, had been tentatively located near the Judging Pavilion in Shaw Lane. Further plans for it have been discontinued, Baron said, because of the prohibitive costs of the facility.

There is greater activity in the academic building area.

This fall both the Speech and Hearing Clinic and the Pesticide Research Bldg. were completed and occupied.

A number of buildings are currently under construction. Among them is the Observatory, nearing completion just east of Forest Akers Golf Course. Contracts call for a Dec. 1 completion date, although construction is a little behind schedule.

The office and library addition to Wells Hall, not yet built, was allowed for when Wells Hall was built in 1967.

"We planned for future additions to both Wells and the International Center, if they became necessary, without blocking the traffic flow between the two buildings or overflowing into the park area between the International Center and the river," Baron continued.

The completion date for the Wells Hall addition is Aug. 15, 1970.

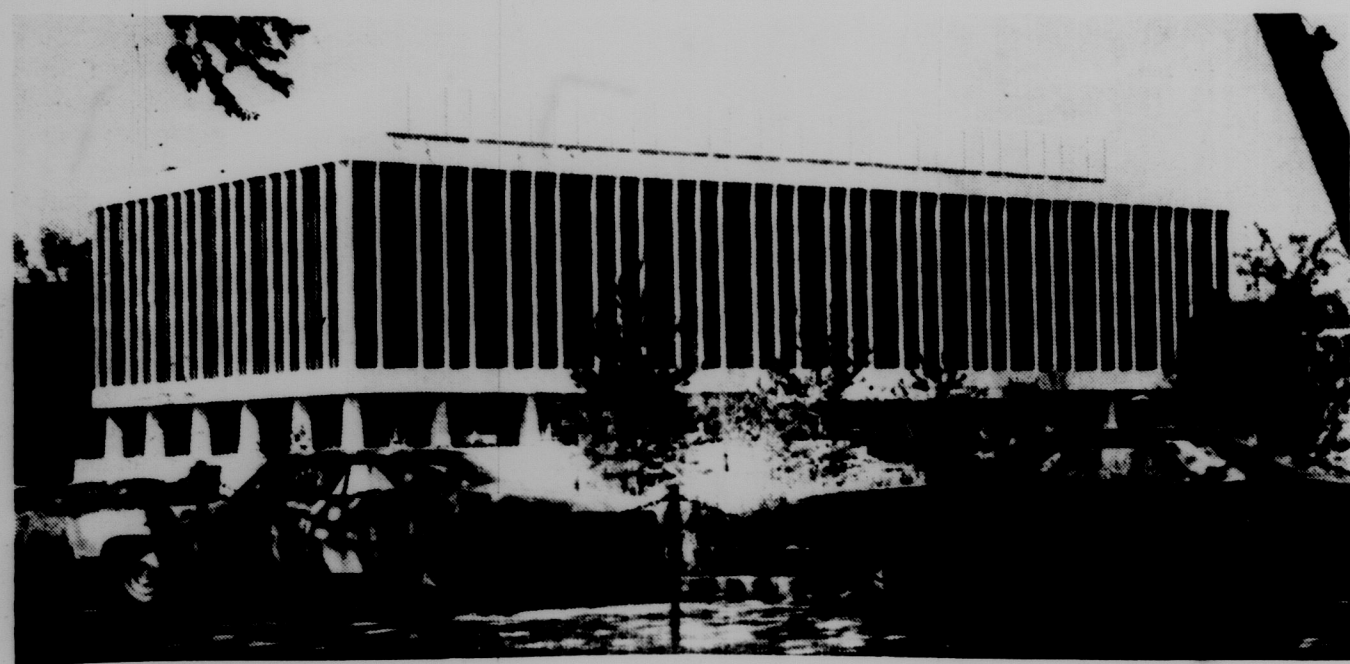

The Life Science complex of buildings which will house MSU's medical school is in its formative stages. The first of three buildings is now under construction south of the railroad tracks on the future Bogue Street extension.

Life science one underway

Life Science One is scheduled to be completed and ready for use June 30, 1971.

Other buildings in the complex are in various planning stages.

"The pendulum swings," Baron said. "A few years ago we would have millions of dollars of buildings under construction at one time. Now look at us."

Ever expanding

The five-story Administration Bldg., opened last September, houses the president's office, business offices, vice president's and other administrative officers and MSU's data processing operation. A parking ramp, Cyclotron Lab addition, Music Practice Bldg. and a Speech and Hearing Center also opened new this term as part of MSU's building program.

FINDING TRUE SELF

Self-realization members practice the art of yoga

Self-realization is the key word for the recently organized Lansing-East Lansing group of the Self-Realization Fellowship.

Meeting in the basement of the Unity Church on Marshall Street in Lansing, the core group of 15 is led by George Johnston, a Detroit businessman.

The members who meet every other week practice the art of yoga with hatha yoga postures, meditation and chanting. Sitting on carpets and blankets, college students and the over-60's group join together in a quest for finding the "true self."

Johnston, the head of the recently formed fellowship, teaches the yoga postures and lectures on the teachings of Paramahansa Yogananda, founder of the Self-Realization Fellowship.

Yoga, according to the lessons, is a science over 6,000 years old that is a system of physical, mental, emotional and spiritual development. The word yoga means union and the purpose of yoga training is to unite man, the finite, with God or whatever one may call the Ultimate Reality.

The hatha yoga exercises, called asanas and postures, are a scientific art applied to the anatomy of the living body. Unlike gymnastics, yoga exercises are geared to make the advocate experience a sense of well-being rather than fatigue.

The largest group in Michigan is in Detroit where the teachings of Yogananda were originally taught by the founder himself on a tour of the United States in the 1920's.

How does he do that?

That's what E. Kentucky's Boyd Lynch must be saying as he watches Spartan sensation Ralph Simpson pour in two of his game high 36 points in Monday's 89-85 win over the Colonels.

Hot second-half nets 'S' 89-85 win

Sophomore Ralph Simpson, looking every bit as good as his advance notices, paced MSU to a come from behind 89-85 win over rugged Eastern Kentucky here Monday night before 7,821 screaming fans.

Simpson fired in 36 points for the game but it wasn't until the 6-4 forward dumped in two free throws with four seconds left that the Spartans and new coach Gus Ganakas could breathe easily.

MSU never led in the first half and trailed the Colonels, 45-39, at the intermission. Not until Simpson rammed home a rebound at 10:30 of the second half that the Spartans held the lead, 56-54.

From that point, the Spartans, paced by Simpson and perpetual-motion forward Ron Gutkowski, also a sophomore, built their lead to 13 points, 81-68. Jim Gibbons hit four straight free throws and it looked as if the game was finally out of Eastern's reach.

But it wasn't going to be that easy of a debut for Ganakas. Paced by the deadly shooting of tall, skinny forward Boyd Lynch, who hit for 32 during the contest, the Colonels kept hammering away at the lead. Two quick baskets by burly Carl Greenfield cut the Spartans' lead to 87-85 with 23 seconds left. Then Simpson came through with his two free throws to clinch it for the Spartans.

Simpson started slowly in the first half, but hit for 16 by intermission. In the second half, he took charge of the ragged Spartans and the team came to life quickly. His point total was the fourth highest single game output in MSU history, tying Bill Curtis' total.

Gibbons, who gave away a good deal of size inside against the tall Colonels, finished the game with 20 points and 14 rebounds. Before fouling out with four minutes left, which incidentally was the point when Eastern made their comeback, Gutkowski totaled eight points and six rebounds. In addition, he played an aggressive game on defense.

Scrappy Lloyd Ward was a big factor in the second half awakening, time after time leading the Spartan fast break down the court. The 5-10 guard hit for 11 points.

"Our sophomores gave us a big lift," Ganakas said after the dust had settled. "It was a good team effort in the second half. We started playing together. In the first half there was too much individual play. "Gibbons and Gutkowski's gummy play was a real factor in our comeback. And Ward's defense inspired us. Eastern is a very good club in personnel and is superbly coached."

trailing by as much as 11 points in the first half before roaring from behind in the second half to start the season off on a good note.

Varsity Club

There will be a short meeting for all Varsity Club members at 7:30 tonight in the Stadium Club Room. Topics of discussion will be winter term initiation and reports on the freshman and varsity basketball squads. All members are urged to attend.

Women's IM

The Women's All-University volleyball championship will be decided Wednesday night when the Spartan Wives, winners of the Independent-Sorority division, meet either Holmes Fireballs or Akers Fakers.

Grand Rapids falls victim to freshman blitz, 106-87

In a relatively high scoring contest, the MSU freshman cagers overcame wooden hands in the first half to deliver Grand Rapids Junior College its first defeat in seven games, 106-87.

Led by Bill Kilgore (29 points) and Jeff Vanderlande (27 points), the Spartan frosh dealt the Raiders an overdose of scoring. All of the frosh starters ended the game in double figures.

Grand Rapids, however, never submitted to the Spartan "crush." The Raiders rolled up 48 points in the second half, but had to take a back seat to the Spartans' 60.

The Raiders fell victim to hot and cold spells. Unfortunately for the Junior College team, only two players could hit with any degree of accuracy. Pat Smith and Roger Phillips (19 points) could provide the only semblance of a challenge to the somewhat vulnerable frosh defense.

"Our weakest point is defense," Coach Matt Aicht said after the game. "We gave away a lot of easy buckets."

'S' grapplers hold 2nd round matches today

MSU's wrestling team will hold the second round of its best two-out-of-three challenge matches at 3:30 today in the IM Sports Arena.

The matchups will be the same as those fought in the first round last Tuesday.

The third matches in those classes, where they are necessary, will be fought at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

A pair of upsets of last year's regulars highlighted the action in Tuesday's opening matches.

In the 134-pound match freshman Tom Milkovich knocked off Mike Ellis, who was second in the Big Ten at 130 last year.

Tom Muir, who was conference champ at 160 last season, has his starting spot in jeopardy after he was beaten by sophomore Rick Radman in the 158 match.

In other matches, Lon Hicks won by default over an injured Don Roberts at 115; Gary Bissell beat Ray Buffmeyer at 126; Keith Lowrance topped Myron Borders at 142; Ron Ouellet won over Mark Malley at 150; Pat Karslake was victorious over Gerald Malecek at 167. Tim Moxim beat Sam Davis in the 177 match; and Jack Zindel beat Ben Lewis at 191.

Coach Grady Peninger is using these matches to determine his No. 1 team for Saturday's season opener against Maryland.

The starting time for that contest in Jonison Fieldhouse has been moved up from 7:30 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Venture: Purify water with the fiber that made men whistle.

Nylon. Reverse osmosis.

A fiber that started making girls' legs more beautiful some 30 years ago.

And a process that's been around a lot longer. But when Du Pont scientists and engineers look at them in a new way, they combine into an idea that can change the world.

Reverse osmosis is a purification process that requires no phase change. It's potentially the cheapest way to desalinate water.

Du Pont's innovation? Hollow, semipermeable nylon fibers much finer than human hair. Symmetrical, with an outer diameter of .002 inch and a wall thickness of .0005 inch, with an accuracy of manufacture maintained at close to 100%. Twenty-five to 30 million of them encased in a precisely engineered unit 14 inches in diameter by 7 feet long.

The result: a semipermeable surface area of about 85,000 square feet—the size of a 2-acre lot—and up to 10,000 gallons of desalted water per day.

So far "Permasep" permeators have been used experimentally to purify brackish and polluted water, and in various industrial separations. But the potential to desalt seawater, too, is there.

So Du Pont scientists and engineers are even now working toward improved fibers, units and plant designs that should make it possible to get fresh water from salt at a price that any town or nation can afford.

Innovation—applying the known to discover the unknown, inventing new materials and putting them to work, using research and engineering to create the ideas and products of the future—this is the venture Du Pont people are now engaged in.
