CONSULTANT'S REPORT

Campus affairs call for restraint by legislatureBy JEFF SHELER
State News Staff Writer

KALAMAZOO -- Legislative restraint in dealing with campus affairs was called for in the official Consultant's Report to the Special State Senate Committee investigating Campus Disorders and Student Unrest, released here Thursday.

The two-volume report, compiled over an 11-month period, by a study group led by Thomas Emmet, President of Higher Education Associates of Detroit, was presented to the Senate committee headed by State Senator Robert J. Huber, R-Troy, and a group of educators gathered at Nazareth College.

The report included data on causes, issues, and frequency of student protests and made extensive recommendations to the legislature.

The report ranked Michigan third in the nation in increased percentage of student protest, while the issues most protested ranged similar to other states.

The war in Vietnam, residence hall regulations, controversies over faculty members and racial discrimination are listed as the highest protest issues in Michigan.

See related story p.3

The report denies significant "outside agitation" on state campuses, and says the "student underground movement" does not have "much of a foothold" in the state.

It draws a parallel between the quality of students and faculty and the amount of protests. A "high quality faculty and student body means more protests."

"The solution to the problem if one is interested only in preventing protests, would be to have nothing in the state but passive, unconcerned students and the dullest faculty one could find," the report stated.

Biased information and the quality of communication between students and the administration are related to student unrest, the report said.

The report singles out student editors who, in answering questionnaires for the study, ranked frequency of protests on campus much higher than any other group question.

"It raises some questions as to whether editors are reporting protests they have seen or protests they would like to see," the report said.

Adding to the "climate of unrest" on campuses, the report lists problem areas in academic policies, student rights, and "accessibility" of the administration as basic factors.

The report stresses the importance of college and university presidents making themselves accessible to students and student groups.

The report also noted a "significant insensitivity" to the black students by the

McKee marathon

The Academic Council passed the halfway mark Thursday in its continuing consideration of the 30 recommendations that comprise the McKee Report on student participation in academic government. The Council, starting with recommendation nine, approved eight more recommendations and tabled one. At its next session in the Con Con Room of the Center for International Programs, the Council will begin with recommendation 18 which provides council seats for student representatives of minority groups. State News Photo By Norm Payea

Council balks at minority seats plan

By DELORES MAJOR
State News Staff Writer

The Academic Council, Thursday approved an additional eight recommendations contained within the McKee report and tabled a ninth, bringing the total of approved provisions of the report to 17 out of the 30 originally proposed.

The council quickly approved recommendations 9 through 17 while tabling recommendation 12, but the ready agreement stopped on recommendation 18 that deals with providing seating on the council for students representing minority groups.

The council floor was dominated during the three-hour session by representatives of the two opposing views of the provision: C.C. Killingsworth, professor of labor and industrial relations and James B. McKee, professor of sociology.

Killingsworth claimed that the recommendation provided for discrimination in reverse, and that such a policy would come in direct conflict with the philosophy of the Brookover report dealing with discrimination on campus passed by the MSU Board of Trustees recently.

"More discrimination is not the solution to the problem of discrimination," Killingsworth said.

He said that this type of discrimination, no matter what the merits, "would not operate in favor of ending discrimination; the damage it would do would far outweigh the merits."

"This system is in all likelihood illegal by the laws of the United States, as it stands today," Killingsworth said.

He said that the goals of the University should be to have a university policy that is color blind.

"This proposal would set us back at least 20 years, put us back to 'separate but equal,'" he said.

McKee replied that he resented the implications that his committee was racist and defended the eighteenth recommendation in his committee's report on student participation in academic government.

McKee said that the problem of discrimination rests on the problem of inequality and inequality of representation.

He said that the committee made the recommendation because they felt that the representation offered would not provide opportunity for minority students.

"The committee saw this as the best way to move now, they felt it was the best choice to make, although the circumstances are not ideal," McKee said.

Referring to one of Killingsworth's comments that called the recommendation "unthinkable," McKee replied: "It was the wish of the committee that this would not only have been unthinkable, but unnecessary."

Charles McMillan, the black student member of the McKee committee supported McKee and said that he too saw the recommendation as a step forward.

"This is not a step backwards, but a step beyond even the Brookover report, that report is just a piece of paper, and I just don't believe in papers anymore," McMillan said. "This recommendation is only good until such provisions are no longer needed any more."

MILLIKEN TELLS PRESS

Consensus vote called party leadership testBy ED HUTCHISON
Associate Campus Editor

Gov. William G. Milliken said Thursday that his position as leader of Michigan Republicans will be tested Saturday when party members meet to decide if Mrs.

Lenore Romney is to be the Republican consensus candidate for the U.S. Senate nomination.

"I am sure that this is the interpretation which will be attached to the meeting," Milliken said, and "I'm willing to have that interpretation."

When questioned by newsmen Milliken said he would definitely have his leadership standing in the party tested, Milliken said "I will." He had previously endorsed Mrs. Romney, wife of Milliken's predecessor, George Romney, Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

At a meeting two weeks ago in Lansing Mrs. Romney failed to get the necessary 75 per cent of the delegates votes needed for party backing. The meeting Saturday will consider only if the endorsement will be given.

Milliken said a roll call vote, rather than secret ballot will be used at the meeting. When asked if this could be interpreted as a disciplinary measure intended to see who votes which way, Milliken replied, "I accept the last half of that statement."

Roll call votes are a "matter of precedent" in party conventions, the governor said.

The ground rules for the meeting will be established by the delegates present although Milliken said he intends to make recommendations. He denied reports that the 75 percent vote needed to establish a consensus would be changed to 60 percent.

"From all indications, Mrs. Romney will pick up 75 per cent or more of the votes. I've been encouraged by the information I've received."

"We never know what the final result will be until the meeting is over, but I feel sure she will receive it."

No other names are to be considered by party leadership. The only question to be resolved is whether Mrs. Romney will be endorsed as the Republican candidate to oppose Sen. Philip Hart's bid for re-election to the Michigan seat in the U.S. Senate.

At the same press conference Milliken again supported a plan that calls for a new stadium to be built in downtown Detroit. "I have done what I set out to do and that was to get the issue off dead center," Milliken said.

House barely okays record
school aid billBy LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The House of Representatives passed the long-delayed controversial $1.2 billion school aid bill Thursday by one vote, 57-50 with three members not voting.

The bill needed 56 votes to pass. Fourteen Republicans and 43 Democrats voted for the bill and 36 Republicans and 14 Democrats voted against it.

Just prior to the vote on the measure, the Cooper Amendment calling for deletion of the $22 million designation for non-public schools was defeated, 52-49.

Wary of debate, the lawmakers greeted with applause and cheers a motion by Rep. James Del Rio, D-Detroit to take the final vote on the bill.

They cheered again when the vote of passage was announced in the chamber, and adjourned until Monday, leaving three members addressing nearly deserted chambers explaining their "no" votes.

Developed by Sen. Roy Spencer, R-Atlanta, the bill calls for the largest increase ever advanced in state aid to education and the largest single appropriation in Michigan's history.

The House adopted it Tuesday, Feb. 24 by a 57-45 margin as a substitute for the Senate-passed $972 million measure.

Rep. Robert Waldon, R-Grosse Pointe, moved to reconsider the vote of passage at a later date.

The new bill would reduce property taxes across the state with a corresponding 35 per cent increase in the state property tax.

Local voters could add to the basic state support by approving 10 additional mills or a maximum local income tax of 2 per cent. (Please turn to page five)

Wald voices opposition to U.S. neo-imperialismBy MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

The United States has become her own colony in America's newest imperialist movement, George Wald, 1967 Nobel prize winner, said Wednesday.

A "good, old-fashioned imperialist" would go into an area, wring it dry and take a cut of the gross national product, Wald told approximately 150 people at a dinner sponsored by the Clergy and Laymen Concerned About Vietnam.

However, the gross national product of South Vietnam is $2.5 billion, he said.

"Who in hell wants a cut of a gross national product of that contemptible figure of $2.5 billion?" Wald asked. "We're spending $30 billion a year on that war. In all of Southeast Asia the gross national product is $11.3 billion.

"If you really want to make big money you can't make it out of the Southeast Asians, they don't have it. You want to make big money you have to go where it is. Where is that? That's us. We've become the colony."

This is the new imperialism, Pentagonism, Wald said.

You don't have to read about the things happening to Asians and Africans, he said. Those things are now happening to us. With this new invention of Pentagonism, business took a quantum leap.

Wald said it was under American pressure that an international principle that a war criminal is personally responsible for his crime even though it was performed under the command of a superior.

"If a military order can be refused and is supposed to be refused if it involves a war crime, that must apply ever so much more to a business fulfilling a business order," he said.

Wald assessed the progress made in the year since he outlined the sources of the discontent of American youth in a speech at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

"We've made progress alright, but a lot of it is of the wrong kind," the 62-year-old Harvard biologist said.

The administration has no plan to stop the war in Vietnam, he said. Nixon is

'U' liquor policy hit by Owen, South CaseBy KATHY MORAN
State News Staff Writer

The Executive Council at Owen Hall officially declared liquor legal in their hall as of April 1, 1970 at their meeting Tuesday night.

The same night the resident assistants in South Case Hall unanimously passed a resolution refusing to enforce the liquor policy in Case.

The action at Owen came after "mention" of legalizing liquor in the hall was not acted on, according to Rod Joseph, New York, N.Y. graduate student and president of the council.

Joseph said the council considers Owen Hall an extension of married housing. Since married housing is on University property and liquor is allowed legally in the apartments the Executive Council decided it should be legal in Owen also.

Sandi Thompson, Willowdale, Ont. graduate student and vice president of the council said she supported the measure wholeheartedly.

"It is about time we got out of the Dark Ages," she said. "It was just a formality anyway. We just put into writing what has been going on for years."

Joseph said he did not expect opposition because the average age of students living in Owen is about 26 years old. He said they do not know yet what they will do if the resolution is opposed.

"It is inevitable that this is going to happen eventually," he said.

Section 22.01 of the Academic Freedom Report forbids the possession of liquor on University property. An amendment by the trustees exempted married housing from this ordinance.

Action on enforcement in Case Hall resulted from interpretation of the contract their resident assistant signed.

The contract states: "I will contribute to the community through my awareness and concern for the total community and be a positive influence in facilitating changes when, through evaluation, change indicates growth..."

Paul Korda, an R.A. in South Case, said

'71 lottery set for July; 215
ceiling plotted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The lottery drawing to decide the order for men to be drafted in 1971 is expected to be held early in July. Selective Service headquarters notified the draft boards Thursday.

At the same time, the boards were told that it does not appear that they will have to dip any deeper into this year's prime draft pool than number 215.

The notice to boards directs them to arrange to send to the examining and entrance stations for physical and trainability tests in order of callup numbers between 1 through 215, those classed as I-A and conscientious objectors classed I-A-O and I-O.

In addition those with numbers 1 through 215 who are expected to lose their deferments in the next six months — such as college students who graduate in June — are to be given their examinations. A selective service official said these probably will be arranged on weekends for those in college so as not to interfere with classes.

The July drawing, well ahead of the December 1969 date for the first lottery,

DOCTORS CONCERNED

Severe pains trouble LBJ

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) -- Former President Lyndon B. Johnson suffered severe chest and arm pains again during the night, his physicians said Thursday. But doctors stabilized his condition by 8 a.m., they reported.

Johnson also was fatigued by what the doctors called a poor night and by a cold.

It was the first time the physicians had described Johnson's pains as severe and the first confirmation that he had a cold.

The midafternoon hospital bulletin said that the pains the former chief executive suffered during the night were the same kind as those which caused him to be hospitalized Monday.

The doctors have said they are seeking to prevent a heart attack such as that which struck Johnson in 1955.

Although the doctors stopped the severe pain, they said, Johnson still suffered "aching discomfort in his left arm and chest."

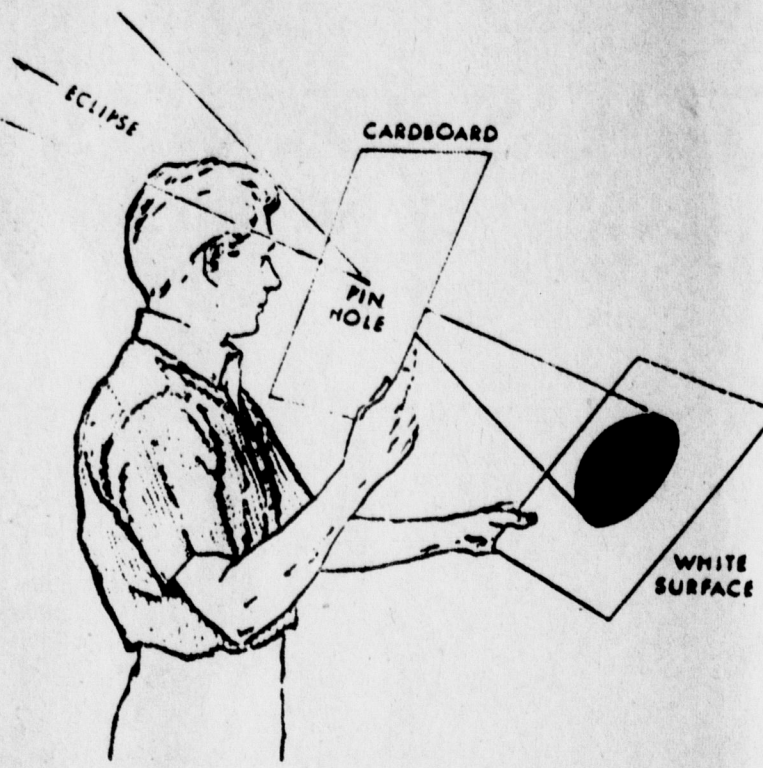

"From 8 a.m. until the time of this bulletin, there have been no medical developments which have given cause for additional concern. His vital signs remain stable," the afternoon report said.

Wednesday the doctors only referred to Johnson's symptoms as "discomfort," although they used the term "pain" earlier in the week.

Lt. Col. Robert North, a spokesman for the physicians attending the 61-year-old Johnson, was asked earlier in the day if the chance of a heart attack existed. He replied, "President Johnson's vital signs and cardiographic tracings will continue to be watched carefully."

Johnson had the sniffles Wednesday and doctors said then they feared he was developing a common cold.

Eclipse viewer

Weather could handicap U.S. view of total eclipse

NEW YORK (AP) -- The sun, the moon and the earth have a rendezvous in space and time Saturday, one that has awed man down through the ages. But another work of nature, the weather, may hide the spectacle from millions of Americans.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Washington issued a gloomy forecast Friday for much of the eastern part of the country, but said there may be favorable conditions for viewing the total solar eclipse in New England and southern Florida.

Headless of who can see it, the three celestial bodies will spin into line Saturday, and the silent, dusty moon will blot out the dazzling, life-giving rays of the sun for brief minutes.

In ancient times, man cowered in fear before an eclipse. Now he hauls out sophisticated scientific equipment to record highly complex data, and he fires rockets into the air.

Where he can, man will still look up in awe this Saturday at one of the most spectacular performances in nature's repertory.

Millions along the path of totality from Mexico to Newfoundland would have a chance to see the total phase of the eclipse if the skies were clear.

Countless others throughout almost all of North America may be able, weather permitting, to see a partial eclipse.

The moon will first begin crossing the face of the sun, taking a small crescent bite, about an hour before totality. The full eclipse cycle usually takes from 2 to 2½ hours.

Mid-point of the eclipse in New York City, where 96 per cent of the sun will be belocked, is 1:42 p.m. EST.

Moving west, with lesser degrees of totality, mid-point will come at noon CST, in Dallas, Tex.; at 12:25 p.m. CST, in Chicago; at 10:57 a.m. MST, in Denver; at 9:26 a.m. PST, in San Francisco.

The 1970 eclipse is especially notable because of its favorable viewing path and because it is to take place during the peak of the sun's 11-year sunspot cycle.

Since the eclipse will be up there for so many to see, eye specialists have expressed grave concern about the possibility of serious, permanent eye damage, especially to children home from school.

U.S. Surgeon General Jesse L. Steinfeld has issued a statement saying that the best way to watch the eclipse is on television.

Parents, Steinfeld said, should take special precautions to protect their children from staring up at the mid-day eclipse.

Some astronomers suggest using a filter or two or more layers of exposed and developed black and white film, although eye specialists fear there still is too great a risk of misuse.

The only time it is safe to look directly at the eclipse is during totality. But the moment the moon passes along, allowing light to flow past once again, the danger is there again.

The eye experts advise punching a pinhole in a piece of cardboard and, with your back to the sun, using it to focus the image of the eclipse on a second cardboard held in the other hand. Don't look at the sun through the pinhole.

For scientists, this may be the most closely watched eclipse in history. The primary observation site is in the mountains of Mexico, where there is a good chance the weather will permit unobstructed viewing.

The astronomer will seize the precious movements of totality to make special observations and measurements of the sun's outer layer that are impossible at any other time.

There is great interest in studying the corona, the turbulent, gaseous outer atmosphere that is normally obscured by the brilliant light from the visible surface.

The astronomers also are interested in making daylight observations of the planet Mercury, and in hunting for faint comets near the sun that are normally blotted out by the intense light.

The next major eclipse, of long path and duration will be visible in the United States on April 8, 2024.

Turks promise opium cut back

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The government announced efforts to dry up the source of 80 per cent of the illegal heroin that enters the United States.

The effort has bogged down in Turkish politics and traditions in recent months, the chief U.S. narcotics law officer said.

He said the U.S. has loaned Turkey $3 million to help Turkish opium farmers convert the land to other crops; provided spotter plane, guns, ammunition, vehicles and other gear to equip 460 Turkish national police to crack down on illegal production of opium, the source of heroin, and reached an agreement with the Turks to reduce the number of provinces permitted to grow opium - producing poppies.

John E. Ingersoll, director of the Justice Department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs, said the United States wants Turkey to phase out opium production entirely - the legal, medical narcotic as well as the illegal - because Turkish controls, unlike those of countries like India, have proven ineffective.

Turkey is one of 10 nations allowed to produce opium for medicinal purposes under the International Opium Convention, although heroin (an opium derivative) is illegal in every country. Opium products are valuable as a pain killer, as in morphine, and a cough suppressant, as in codeine.

"When you get more than 900 deaths in New York in one year, 200 of whom are teen-agers, then you've got a right to start hollering about it. Heroin is the major cause of death between the ages of 18 and 35 in New York City. The United States is the biggest victim of illegal international heroin traffic, and 80 per cent of it comes from Turkey," Ingersoll said.

The heroin itself is produced in Marseilles, France, where it is transformed from Turkish white poppies.

A primary difficulty in dealing with Turkey on the problem, Ingersoll said, is that the Turks are being asked to crack down on a deeply ingrained tradition, "a social and cultural activity among peasants" who can make about $50 each in cash on land otherwise unused in wintertime.

"But if we can't accomplish the full goal of removing the Turks from the opium market, at least we can see that it's better controlled," Ingersoll said.

An extra incentive to the United States in trying to stop production entirely, Ingersoll said, is that Iran has agreed to stop producing opium if Turkey will stop.

Ingersoll estimated Turkey supplies about 100 tons of raw opium for the world's legal, medicinal market each year, worth up to $3 million on foreign exchanges.

Abrams provides device for viewing sun's eclipse

People in the Lansing area will have a rare opportunity to view one of nature's most spectacular sights Saturday, an eclipse of the sun, through special equipment on the grounds of Abrams Planetarium.

According to Von Del Chamberlain, director of the planetarium, the image of the sun will be projected through a telescope onto a screen. This is the safest method for observing the eclipse, he said.

People are reminded not to view the eclipse directly through binoculars or a telescope, but should project the image onto a screen, being careful that no one looks through the telescope while it is turned toward the sun.

Chamberlain said the planetarium personnel will be on hand to assist viewers during the entire eclipse, 12:15 p.m. to 2:40 p.m. The maximum eclipse will occur about 1:30 p.m. when three-fourths of the sun will be covered by the moon.

Television sets will also be available in the lobby for viewing the network coverage of the total eclipse from the southern states.

The new program at the planetarium, "Sun, Stars and Seasons," describing the changes that occur around us because of the earth's movement about the sun, will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Special law allows transplant of kidney

From Our Wire Services

Gov. Milliken signed into law Thursday an emergency bill passed by the legislature this week allowing a 16-year-old Saginaw girl to receive a kidney transplant from her twin sister.

The bill is aimed at erasing legal doubts about doctors' authority to perform the operation on Sharon and Sheila Klein at the University of Michigan Hospital in Ann Arbor.

Sharon has agreed to donate one of her kidneys to her failing sister. Their parents also approve, but doctors questioned their authority to act under current Michigan law.

The legal question involved was whether the minor donating the organ in a transplant might be able to challenge the legality of the operation when he or she turned 21 under existing law.

In noting the question, hospital director Edward J. Connors had said:

"There can be a remote chance that when the minor kidney donor becomes 21, she would have the legal right to question the validity of parent's consent for this type of surgical procedure."

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Roy Smith, R-Ypsilanti, authorizes a person over 14 years of age to donate one kidney to an immediate relative when authorized by the probate court with jurisdiction over the person.

A dance with "The Mission" and "Jumping Jeff and His Big Apples" will be held at 8 tonight in the lower lounge of Phillips Hall.

The $1 admission will go to help those jailed as a result of the disturbances in East Lansing and Ann Arbor regarding the Chicago Seven trial.

Delegates to the Paris peace talks wrangled Thursday without touching on the question of ending the war in Vietnam. They then adjourned in almost record time. U.S. Ambassador Philip Habib, who again protested the treatment of American prisoners of war, said he found the other side unprepared to deal with issues in a serious and businesslike way and called for adjournment after 3½ hours. The North Vietnamese and Viet Cong delegations insisted that the U.S. delegation was at fault. The American presentation of the prisoner of war issue was not new, but Habib said he was stressing it and would stress it in future sessions.

American battle deaths rose past the 100 mark last week for the first time this year despite relatively light enemy activity, the U.S. Command reported Thursday. U.S. deaths reached 113, the highest in 3½ months, compared with 83 the week before. But the number of wounded fell off to 465, the lowest in about two years. The week before 657 Americans were wounded. Enemy casualties dropped sharply to 2,009 killed last week from 2,500 dead in the previous week, the allied commands said. The weekly reports raised the total combat deaths to 40,758 Americans killed and 268,296 wounded since Jan. 1, 1961.

Nigeria will maintain its 200,000 man army for at least three years and then cut it to 70,000 men, military sources said Thursday. Federal authorities are holding their men in uniform because of anxiety about what might happen when combat hardened soldiers with hidden weapons are loose. Although reliable estimates place the army's strength at well over 200,000 men, one senior officer said "I don't know the present size, I doubt if anybody knows."

Romania sought world support Thursday in its defiant bid to escape Soviet domination. In a bold move, the Romanian delegation to the 25 nation disarmament conference in Geneva called for an international agreement which would bar military maneuvers on the territory or along the frontiers of other states. There have been recurrent reports of Soviet pressure on Romania to agree to Warsaw Pact Military exercises on its territory.

National News

The government ordered Thursday the results of last December's United Mine Workers election set aside, charging widespread irregularities in president W. A. Tony Boyle's victory over the late Joseph Yablonski. Sec. of Labor George Shultz said the Justice Department has filed a court action under the Landrum Griffin act to set aside the election results and to enjoin the union from inadequate record keeping.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., accused the Nixon administration Thursday of waging secret war on a dangerous scale in Laos and of engaging in deceit in an effort to explain it away. He said the administration is violating the 1962 Geneva settlement by interfering militarily in Laos and added: "We are flirting dangerously with a new Vietnam." His speech was prepared for the National Newspaper Assn. In addition to providing military and CIA personnel, McGovern said we are sending American bombers against Laos at the rate of 500 missions a day. Sen. J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark. already has called for his Foreign Relations Committee to dig deeper into U.S. involvement in Laos. He spoke out after hearing secret testimony from Secretary of State William Rogers.

The national director of CORE outlined Thursday a school plan that could perpetuate predominately white and black schools, while assuring each of its own finances and control. Roy Innis said his proposal falls within Supreme Court guidelines and has received initial cautious but favorable reaction in the South. The plan would essentially create school districts drawn on community lines. It is the only one offering black people a chance to maximize their resources by managing their own schools Innis said.

The president of the University of Puerto Rico ordered classes suspended until Monday and flags on campus flown at half staff Thursday after a night of rioting left one girl dead and 50 persons injured. The violence began as a protest against the Reserve Officers Training Corps program, and long a target of pro-independence groups. The students set fire to the ROTC building, battled police on campus and touched off rioting that lasted far into Wednesday night in the streets of San Juan. Antonia Martinez, 21, was shot through the head while watching the disturbances from the balcony of a guest house near the campus. She died on the operating table at a San Juan hospital.

Wildcat tieups delay rail talks

By the Associated Press

In the wake of a Congressional no-strike mandate, trains moved on or near schedule Thursday along most of the nation's vast railroad network. There was brief but widespread picketing, and company and union officials sought to quell scattered wildcat tieups.

There were wildcat strikes or walkouts in Illinois, Missouri, Ohio, California and Wisconsin. Pickets were reported in Missouri and half a dozen other states.

In some areas, federal court restraining orders got would-be strikers back to work, or kept them on the job.

A bill rushed through Congress Wednesday banned for at least 37 days a nationwide rail strike while efforts are made to iron out a contract deadlock between four shopcraft unions and the rail lines.

As a result of the bill, it fell to Assistant Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery to try once again to work out a voluntary contract settlement.

In Washington, Usery said union officials were so busy trying to head off or quell wildcat action by their members that he would wait until Friday to try to get peace talks going.

The four unions involved bargain for 45,000 railroad machinists, electricians, boilermakers and sheet metal workers.

At one point, machinists, electricians and boilermakers tentatively accepted a contract providing a 68 per cent boost in current 3.60 hourly wages, and containing a controversial proposal permitting members of all four unions to cross each others' job jurisdiction lines to do limited amounts of work.

However, the 8,000-member sheet metal workers union rejected the contract, on grounds the job-crossing provision might cause them to lose jobs to their larger fellow-unions.

The strike was scheduled on the basis that the proposed contract must be acceptable to all four unions or it would be acceptable to none.

The unions' leaders were sharply critical of Wednesday's Congressional mandate, although they said they would advise their membership to obey it.

MHA-WIC elects new officers for '70

The Women's Inter-residence Council (WIC) and the Men's Hall Assn. (MHA) elected new officers Wednesday night. Officers elected for WIC are Susan Carter, Niles sophomore, president; Linda Randall, St. Clair Shores sophomore, first vice president; Linda Stierle, Battle Creek junior, second vice president; and Joyce Casbon, Valparaiso, Ind., secretary-treasurer.

Officers elected for MHA are Harold Buckner, Jackson sophomore, president; and Timothy Morris, Pontiac junior, vice president.

Terms of office will begin spring term.

27 whites arraigned as result of Lamar riot

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Twenty-seven white men were arraigned on riot charges Thursday as officers prepared more warrants — some against white women — as a result of Tuesday's school desegregation violence at nearby Lamar.

White continues scrutiny of CUA

Trustee Clair White, D-Bay City, said Thursday he will meet today or early next week with Acting Vice President Roger Wilkinson to further discuss the operations of the Center for Urban Affairs (CUA).

In addition, White said he is considering asking Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley for a legal opinion on the right of a trustee to act individually without the support of the majority of the board.

White said he has not completely evaluated the information already provided by Wilkinson, and refused to discuss the additional information he will request from Wilkinson.

"The end of this investigation is when I'm satisfied I've seen everything there is to see," he declared.

White said criticism of his investigation by trustees Don Stevens, D-Okemos, and Frank Merriman, R-DeKerville, has raised the question of a trustee's right to act without majority consent of the board.

"My own opinion is that as a constitutional officer I'm certainly not bound by the majority of the board," he stated.

White said he will consult with his own attorney before contacting the attorney general.

The 27, arrested Wednesday night and Thursday in a sweep by agents of the State Law Enforcement Division SLED, were freed under $2,000 bond each by Magistrate Sam Chapman.

No trial dates were set. SLED Chief J. P. Strom said additional warrants are being drawn in Columbia as agents identify persons in photographs taken by his men during the clash of about 150 white adults with state troopers and Negro pupils on the Lamar school grounds.

A representative of Gov. Robert McNair said some of those arrested will face additional charges, possibly assault and damage to state property.

The violence occurred on the campus shared by the Lamar high and elementary schools, which were predominantly white until a court-ordered desegregation plan went into effect Feb. 15.

The Lamar schools remained closed and there was no indication when they would reopen.

CAMPUS UNREST

Huber to 'rethink' stand

By JEFF SHELER
State News Staff Writer

KALAMAZOO — State Senator Robert J. Huber, R-Troy, said Thursday that the Consultant Report to the Committee Investigating Campus Unrest has caused him to "rethink" some of his earlier positions.

The report asked the legislature not to pass laws to revoke student aid as a punitive measure. Huber has supported a bill pending in the Senate that would take such action against student dissidents.

"Prior to this report, I was all gung - ho for signing this bill. Now I think it will require a further look at it," Huber said. "I think the purpose of this report will be to brake on further legislation that could only foment more trouble," he said.

He added, however, that he was "unsure" his colleagues would agree to restrain legislation, but it would "be studied further" because of the report.

"I often feel that if students (receiving government aid) are the source of problems on campus, that the taxpayers have a right to demand that their money be better spent," Huber said.

While pointing out that the consultant's study is only an advisory report to his committee and is not the committee's report, he said it would give them "a lot to think about."

He added his support to the report's criticism of student editors for "biased" reporting.

"Now I'm just a little more reassured that the editors don't know what they're talking about," he said.

He declined comment on the suggested open admissions policy, and said "it would require a little more scrutiny."

Report to give Huber Senate campaign aid?

The Higher Educational Executive Associates of Chicago, a research organization, has issued a report to the State Senate committee looking into campus disorders. The essential finding of the report stipulates that no additional legislation is needed to deal with disruptions or disorders on college campuses.

The findings of the report offer many worthwhile suggestions into making the educational environment of the university more receptive to constructive reform. A basic problem stressed by the report is "to channel the energies which are reflected in student unrest into more productive mechanisms and paths." The intervention of the legislature, for whatever reason, "is unlikely to contribute to this process."

The report goes on to specifically state that no financial aids, such as scholarships, loans or grants, should be withdrawn from a student for any reason except the compiling of poor grades. The document stressed that a reevaluation of the role of the college president should be undertaken in the light of minimal contact between students and the president.

Furthermore, the report recommended that rationales be maintained for the creation of black studies programs and that existing courses should be modified to include the numerous contributions of all minority groups.

While the recommendations of the H.E.E.A. are timely and worthy of strong support, it is unfortunate that the Michigan legislature had to spend thousands of dollars to "discover" what was written in the 1963 constitution: that trustees alone are responsible for the governance of their institution.

The net result of the investigation seems to be months of front-page publicity for Sen. Huber, now an announced candidate for U.S. senator. Huber was the only party to the investigations who could not lose.

Regardless of the report's contentions, Senator Huber could use the findings for political leverage. The current document allows Huber to tell his voting public that he did not lead a witch hunt, that he is concerned about students, and, above all, that he working actively with students to affect reform and eradicate violent unrest.

However, if the report had requested new legislation to deal with student fomentors and campus turmoil, the good senator could have said, "I told you so," and then proceed to rationalize the need for the witch hunt and a full investigation of campus radicals and disturbances.

The Michigan Legislature should be aware that by pouring thousands of dollars into Huber's committee on campus subversion, they have more than adequately underwritten the political campaign of Huber for U.S. senator. Had the Legislature heeded the advice of parties inside the universities themselves, this prohibitively expensive sojourn into the sovereign realm of university affairs need never have been embarked upon.

Wilkinson merits the title as well as the work

Acting Vice President for Business and Finance Roger Wilkinson has been in office for nearly two years now. Displacing Philip J. May in the summer of 1968, Wilkinson has been doing a fine job as acting Vice President. We can only wonder, nonetheless, how much longer Wilkinson will be yoked down with the title of acting Vice President.

Acting Vice Presidents are eventually replaced by new Vice Presidents or are themselves promoted to the job. We feel that Wilkinson is due a promotion. He has handled the job in an admirable manner. The conflicts of interest of the May regime are over.

Wilkinson, like many university officials that do a fine job day in and day out, goes unnoticed and deserves some recognition. Wilkinson does not run around making deadlines all of the time for his activities, but without his services the university would suffer. Promoting Wilkinson to a full Vice Presidency would be a justly earned reward for those services.

There is little to be gained by bringing in another person for the job. Wilkinson has shown that he is capable of handling his tasks in a satisfactory manner. It would take months for a man new to the University to adapt to the job and achieve the same level of efficiency that Wilkinson has already achieved. Training a new man is senseless when a good man is already in the office.

The University should also consider Wilkinson's personal position. He has been working for nearly two years at what is supposedly only a temporary job.

This places Wilkinson in an adverse position, working under undue pressures that make his duties extremely difficult to perform. This pressure places Wilkinson in a position where he is restricted and confined because it is difficult to ascertain how much authority an "acting" administrator should exercise.

It is a fact that President Wharton has been looking outside the University for a Vice President for Business and Finance. We hope that Dr. Wharton turns his eyes within the University to look at the man who is already doing the job.

L. C. LERNER

They shoot horses, don't they?

Surely, we have learned our lesson. Surely, co-optation has its limitation. Which self-righteous fools planned this Journey to the East?

Aha! Though I am mad I accuse those perfidious devils in Washington of plotting a takeover of Southeast Asia. Ludicrous, demented and what other adjectives describe my view; yet, that of the Pentagon, too.

Those listless American people; those effete snobs of the tranquil majority. A war is to begin anew in Laos and they are shocked. What manner of man bastardizes a continent, a people, a world and can then proclaim brainwashing, innocence and bereavement.

To those of you who might conjure up the spirits of Nixon, Laird, Abrams, Johnson and label them as the culpable party I say: how stupid a creature man is. Don't you see - it is all a game. You are supposed to say, "I get it. No soap radio!" And then the game will be over. The Nixons, Agnews, etc., will immediately vanish: poof!

I suppose you are impatient. You want facts, information about the war in Laos in order to achieve an acceptable level of self-torment, provide for inner - and other - directed pity and promote the general anti-welfare. Here are the facts (take out a number two pencil and copy):

Laos ... ancient kingdom ... over two million people ... Government neutral but propped - up by the U.S. ... CIA operates two airlines ... Long Cheng military base (used to be secret) controlled and financed by the CIA ... American military advisors in Laos but in civilian clothes ... U.S. Air Force bombs Laos daily as B-52s fly missions from South Vietnam and Thailand ... Maj. Gen. Vang Pao and his Meo tribesman supplied with war material by the U.S. and supported by U.S. air raids falling; the napalm turns into ivory snow, the Phantoms going to Israel become toy offers on the back of a box of Trix.

The wheat that isn't given to India strangely appears in Calcutta; the Soviet Union, without prior notice, stops selling us manganese with which we help to construct instruments for war and death; the U.S. decides to sell or give Cuba food and then proceeds to recognize Red China.

Students and the young are turning to ecology out of frustration in the political spectrum. (Don't bother to tell me that ecology is interrelated with politics; that we can work effectively in the ecological sphere; if we don't work together immediately on ending waste and pollution, we won't survive 1984. That's old hat. Cynicism? Condescension?) We have seen that even gathering 500,000 on the ides of November in Washington does no more than make President Nixon turn on - to a football game.

I suppose you are impatient. You want facts, information about the war in Laos in order to achieve an acceptable level of self-torment, provide for inner - and other - directed pity and promote the general anti-welfare. Here are the facts (take out a number two pencil and copy):

and reconnaissance ... Hanoi - with, at least, 25,000 troops in Laos - seeks to widen war and make U.S. choose ... attempts to use Ho Chi Minh trail in eastern Laos to bring supplies to follow Viet Cong fighting the "allies" ... Premier Souvanna Phouma appeals to Britain and the Soviet Union to reconvene the 1962 Geneva Conference ... the U.S. and North Vietnam have both broken the latter by upsetting the neutrality and integrity of Laos.

Many of my fellow colleagues, however, are desirous of getting on the ecology bandwagon. The fools! Nixon and company are frothing at the mouth by now. Those guys are really with it. All they have to do is say, "Ecology" and students et. al run in blind - faith to the emblazoned standard.

And as the rush to ecology becomes elucidated, the bombs suddenly stop

So many feel the answer is ecology. And why not? Nixon wants to spend $4 billion from the Federal Government and $6 billion from the states to clean - up our mess. Even our beloved Congressmen are ecological (communist?) sympathizers.

You are being CO - OPTED. Sure, ecology is "groovy, man, dynamite, far-out, oh! wow!, dynamic, where it's at." But think about the intent of those men in D.C. After ecology and another Vietnam, what then?

Shall we begin our journey to the East? Or are we then homeward bound Laos - it sounds a bit bizarre - Laos right out of camelot and into our laps like a little boy who cries because he is sad. Oh, so sad because Santa Claus is unreal and babies don't fall from the sky.

RIGHT ON! Ladies and Gentlemen. RIGHT ON!

OUR READERS' MIND

Censorship and rightful protest

To the Editor:
It seems that the editor could not see the difference between censorship and rightful protest. That film "Africa Addio" has been shown in some other places and found to be derogatory to black personality. We Africans or blacks are not looking for origin of false views - we know this already. They are mostly from the imperialist Western World.

Your editorial was so shallow and illogical when you said or apply "one cannot combat falsehood until one understands the nature of falsehood." It is shallow because you assume we blacks do not know who has misrepresented us and raped and robbed us of what we cherish, of our pride, our culture, and our all in all. You assume we do not know the nature of falsehood and degradation that daily affect us.

Indeed we are in your country, "this nation" as you put it. But in a respectable and civilized society a guest is treated with decency. Blacks from Africa are your guests in this University. We are not only guests to the U.S. government, but guests to all citizens of the United States and we deserve some decency.

If the editor did not know may I say that two black groups sent a representative to Michael Sunshine to plead with him not to show the movie. They sent the representative not to interfere with the freedom or rights of others but to claim their own right not to be misrepresented before the students of MSU. I understand the man would not yield to their pleading. They therefore decided to protest it in the public. I also thought I should be there to protest. But violence or public protest is not my way of life. So I decided to talk it with Michael Sunshine. I called him up about 11:15 p.m. Friday, Feb. 27, and our discussion lasted about an hour.

I did my best to persuade him that Africa has been misrepresented enough with Tarzan - type movies, and with a lot of negative and destructive criticism. That as people in an international community like MSU we should not perpetuate media that degrade one nation and also misinform the other nation. I pleaded with him that such things are not only worthless but dangerous to peaceful coexistence. I even quoted a recent event; that of the Swedish president who complained that the U.S. media have been telling the citizens of only the evils found in Sweden and not of the good things there. It really strained the U.S. - Swedish relationship. Evidently I failed totally to persuade him. He told me that the film was not degrading to Africa.

Mike Sunshine went on and showed the film the next day only to be stopped through a less honorable manner. If education is the right to misinform the people, I hate education. If freedom is the right to degrade another person, I think I should not acquire freedom.

Mr. Editor, if we, while students, fail to listen to opinions of fellow students who feel concerned and are directly affected by our activities, we may grow up with an attitude of indifference to others if and when we assume higher posts in the future. I wonder why we jump to the streets and call ourselves rebels and protestors and expect the government or school administration to listen to and grant our requests. The golden rule is to do to others as we want them to do to us.

Truth is meaningless if it is not conducive to the welfare of all, and if truth is made to be always on the defensive. Why tell lies against Africa and then relax giving equal time for Africa to come and defend itself. That is not only a waste of time but poor morality. Only truth and not misrepresentation or misinformation can make people free and loving.

Research needed in 'U'

To the Editor:
The editorial of March 3 "For teaching teachers" appears to be written in ignorance of what teaching, research or publication involves. Good teachers are not moldy cheeses pulled out of cellars to induce unwilling students to pass examinations. Good teachers (particularly at college level) need to keep in touch with their field and have first hand information on several aspects of the subject they teach, which can only be acquired through research. About giving expert advice outside the University, public education and creating public awareness is a responsibility of any educated person especially a college professor. The journals are not obscure to those in the field or those interested in it. At college level, research alone can create the excitement of learning. An expert in the art of communication may be able to convey the ideas of others and could benefit therefrom, but do you recommend that conveyors rather than creators of ideas get the bigger reward?

Issues are not people

A man in public office is the sum total of the works of his advisors. Somebody ought to help our president Richard Nixon. First it was his ace, vice-president Agnew putting his foot in his own mouth. Now it's Daniel Moynihan, counselor to the president who's doing the honors.

Moynihan submitted a proposal to the president in which he suggested that the issue of race be given a period of "benign neglect" by the Nixon administration. He also suggested that in observing this period of neglect the president ignore extremists, who he referred to at one point in his proposal as "crazy racists on the left," and recognize the silent black majority.

Moynihan cited the extraordinary progress black people have made as the basis for his suggestion. He speaks in his proposal of extraordinary progress while he acknowledges facts such as: 68% of black families earned less than $8,000 in 1968, that black people continue to be unemployed at twice the rate of white people, that only 16% of black high school students have verbal skills above grade school level.

I question the legitimacy of any man who in view of the existing conditions would make suggestions such as those Moynihan has made.

Maybe what has happened is that Moynihan's statement has been misinterpreted. His suggestion is, "The time may have come when the issue of race can benefit from a period of benign neglect."

The issue of race is what he is talking about, not black people. This is typical of the Nixon Administration, concerned with issues, not people.

Maybe if we ignore the extremist, and recognize the silent black majority, who we can't see or hear, maybe the race issue will enjoy a period of silence.

Probably what will happen is that we'll regress to the same type of situation we had during the days of slavery in the U.S. There won't be any open race issue, no open dissent from black people. Maybe there'll just be brothers reacting as Nat Turner, the slave who killed hundreds of whites in the south, did. Turner didn't worry about anybody listening to him. He just drew his knife and cut off heads.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The historic nonproliferation treaty went into force Thursday with U.S. and Soviet leaders pledging anew to strive for a curb on the superpower arms race.

School aid

House speaker William Ryan, D-Detroit, said he expects there will be some discussion in the lower chamber Monday night over keeping the bill in the house while Senate Bill 1084, the tax bill, is debated.

But he said the proper way is to send the bill as approved into the Senate-House conference committee so work can begin on formulating a measure to satisfy both houses.

Ryan said he didn't think the "no" votes necessarily were against the $22 million parochial section, but rather against any one of the several amendments tacked onto the bill.

It contains a provision asking for the state supreme court to render a decision concerning the constitutionality of aid to non-public schools, but Ryan said he thinks a special resolution of request should be passed by the House.

He also said that he does not expect the school aid bill will get worked out of conference and passed by both houses this month.

Ryan predicted it would be April or May before it finally came to a vote.

"But in spite of the many difficulties ahead, we're still in a good position to tackle the issues ahead," Ryan said. "This is the earliest the education bill has got to this point."

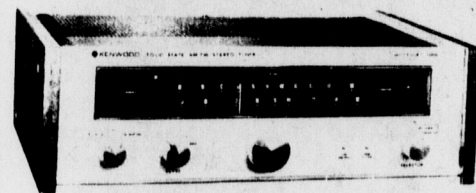

LCC offers program over multi-sensualism

The Fine Arts Center of Lansing Community College will offer a "multi-sensual" experience in a program titled Environment II on Friday. The program will take place in the Planetarium in the Liberal Arts, Sciences and Health Careers Bldg. on the corner of North Washington and Shiawassee.

The performing sculptures will utilize light, television, slides, film and Planetarium media. They will be presented in the LCC Planetarium at 7:30 p.m. and 9 p.m. Stationary environmental sculptures will be exhibited in the fourth floor seminar lounge before and during the performances.

The works are by the sculpture students of Carl Theodorski. The performance is free to the public.

"Once he has done that he has gotten rid of his most bitter opposition," Wald said. "Then he can institutionalize that war. Those support troops will involve 200,000 Americans with their equipment. It'll take that many to keep the government of South Vietnam in South Vietnam. Our President is more deeply committed to that military dictatorship with every utterance. And then that war can go on forever. It's serving a useful purpose."

The massacres at My Lai present a problem to the American people in that such war atrocities were always performed by somebody else and they could be repudiated.

"Now the chips are down," he said. "It turns out our nice American boys can look mothers holding babies in their arms in the eye and shoot them down."

A major source of student discontent is the draft, Wald said.

"You can't reform the draft," he said. "There's only one thing to do with the draft, repeal it. The draft is the most un-American thing I know. It's unthinkable that this country have a peacetime draft."

New party director predicts Dem surge

WASHINGTON (AP) - Lawrence F. O'Brien was chosen unanimously Thursday to be the Democrats' national operations chief and as he resumed the reins he predicted "the Democratic party will make a dramatic comeback this November."

O'Brien was elected by acclamation to the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee after his only rival, Indiana Democratic Chairman Gordon St. Angelo, withdrew his bid for the post O'Brien left only 14 months ago.

The 52-year-old O'Brien, widely recognized as the party's top professional political organizer, leaves his New York public relations firm to succeed Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma.

As Harris bowed out to the man he succeeded after the party's 1968 presidential defeat, he said the 1970 elections "may not only predict what will happen in 1972 but will set the tone for politics in this country for a decade."

After hearing that the party's debt at the end of 1969 stood at $9,334,068.42, the national committee elected Robert Strauss of Texas, the only contender, as party treasurer and voted to establish a Democratic National Finance Committee.

Strauss, considered close to the conservative Texas Democratic leadership of former President Lyndon B. Johnson and former Gov. John Connally, accepted a $1,000 contribution from outgoing treasurer Patrick O'Connor and pledged "to do my dead-level best."

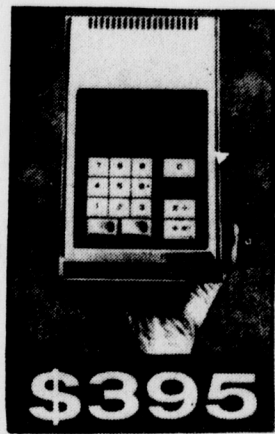

O'Brien, escorted to the rostrum by Harris and former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, noted that he resigned as post-master general because "I couldn't stand the deficit" and then went to Wall Street where the market soon dropped 200 points.

"So I am back where I belong, with you," he added. The man who managed presidential campaigns for John F. Kennedy, Johnson and Humphrey called for a truly united party, saying "we simply can't afford the luxury of being fragmented."

O'Brien, had turned down a bid from Humphrey for the chairmanship just one week ago.

Ethics of 'gay' acts differ

By PAULA BRAY
State News Staff Writer
Last in a series

Are homosexual acts sinful? Different Christian churches answer this question in different ways, but in general the churches consider them contrary to Scriptural teaching, a professor of religion said.

Francis M. Donahue, who teaches Christian Ethics, said the older and conservative Christian churches such as the Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox, Catholic, Coptic and Armenian Churches continue to view acts of homosexuality as violations of divine law and therefore sinful.

"This is essentially the view set forth in the Old and New Testaments and the writings of the early Church Fathers, both of the East and the West," he said.

But some Dutch Roman Catholic theologians are expressing more liberal views, Donahue continued. One such theologian has stated that true homosexuality is the natural response for some persons who, through no fault of their own, are not attracted to persons of the opposite sex.

According to Donahue the Dutch "A New Catechism" states that "In their human isolation they look for friendship. But even when they find true and loyal responses,

"The older and more conservative Catholic and Orthodox view holds that in such a condition, the true homosexual can only refrain from all overt sexual acts. He must be celibate and remain chaste throughout his life."

the perfect fulfillment of their human longings is not granted them."

Some liberal Catholic theologians go further and say that if the individual is not culpably responsible for his condition, heterosexual love may be no option for him. Then, he is only left with homosexuality, Donahue said.

"The older and more conservative Catholic and Orthodox view holds that in such a condition, the true homosexual can only refrain from all overt sexual acts," he said. "He must be celibate and that which is unseemly, and receiving in themselves that recompense of their error which was due." (Romans 1, 26-27).

Donahue said that Joseph Fletcher, professor of Social Ethics at the Protestant Episcopal Theological School in Cambridge, Mass., and others proposing is situational ethics believe that there can be no universal, absolute, moral law that homosexuality is everywhere, always, and by all persons sinful.

"No sinful act, Fletcher holds, is ethical if it hurts or exploits others. This is the difference between lust and love. Each issue of morality, the situationalist holds, must be judged according to the particular case."

Jewish law and custom rejects homosexual conduct as contrary to divine law, Donahue said. He said homosexual practices are condemned in the Book of Leviticus which states that "Thou shalt not lie with mankind, as with womankind: it is abomination" (Lev. XVIII, 22).

Although the male is severely punished, often with execution, the Rabbinical law holds that the female homosexual is not penalized except for disqualification from marrying a priest, Donahue said.

In referring to the sins practiced by the Gentiles, St. Paul writes: "For this cause, God gave them up unto vile affection . . . men with working

Blacks denied priesthood

By CLIFTON BRADLEY

MSU's Mormon students and faculty members are bewildered by their church's refusal to let blacks into the priesthood, even more so, perhaps, than the civil rights organizations and social critics who have censured the church's stand.

"I have no idea why blacks are not allowed in," said Bishop Gordon L. Beckstrand, a high priest in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon). "It has been revealed that the time is not right for them to hold the priesthood. This is church doctrine and we believe we must follow it until it is changed by revelation."

The Mormon priesthood is bestowed upon nearly all males who actively participate in the church -- except blacks.

Bishop Beckstrand's stand is understood and respected by most Mormons. But his words do little to quell outsiders who are becoming increasingly critical of the restriction against blacks.

Most Mormons who support the controversial doctrine admit they accept it on faith -- just as they accept all other revelations believed handed down by God or Christ to church prophets. "I only know that the ban on blacks is a long standing church policy and that's why I go along with it," Peter Steward, Roscommon sophomore, said. "I always abide by what the prophets say."

However, many Mormon students and faculty members voice frustration and sadness with the rule.

"I am concerned about this matter as a civil rights issue," said Mrs. Louise Jensen, asst. instructor in English. "All pieces of the Mormon gospel fit together so well and this one barring blacks doesn't. But because all other pieces do fit together and because we do emphasize brotherhood, I'm relying on patience and faith in trying to live with it," she said.

Mrs. Jensen pointed out that other Mormon doctrines have seemed unreasonable at first, but have been vindicated eventually. She cited the Mormon ban on tobacco usage which was considered baseless 100 years ago, but which has been proven justified by recent scientific evidence.

Many Mormons used this example as historical justification for adhering to the touchy priesthood doctrine today.

Dennis Bird, director of the Latter Day Saints Institute of Religion at MSU and East Lansing graduate student, said he knows of only one sacred reference which could be used as a basis for barring blacks. A verse in the Pearl of Great Price (Book of Abraham, 1:26-27) mentions an Egyptian pharaoh and states that he is of a "lineage by which he could not be admitted into the priesthood." Bird acknowledged that many Mormons contend the remark has nothing to do with blacks.

Bird claimed that the ban does not constitute race discrimination. The rule apparently excludes only indigenous Africans and their descendants. Black-skinned Australian Aborigines are allowed into the priesthood, he asserted.

Still, Bird and other Mormon students interviewed agreed that the rule could cause serious problems for the church. Bird said he would like to see the rule changed, but that the current social pressure on the church is not a valid reason for changing sacred doctrine.

Bishop Beckstrand said that a direct revelation must come through the president of the church before a change can be made. He noted that David O. McKay, late president of the Mormon Church, remarked shortly before his death in January that blacks would probably receive the priesthood someday.

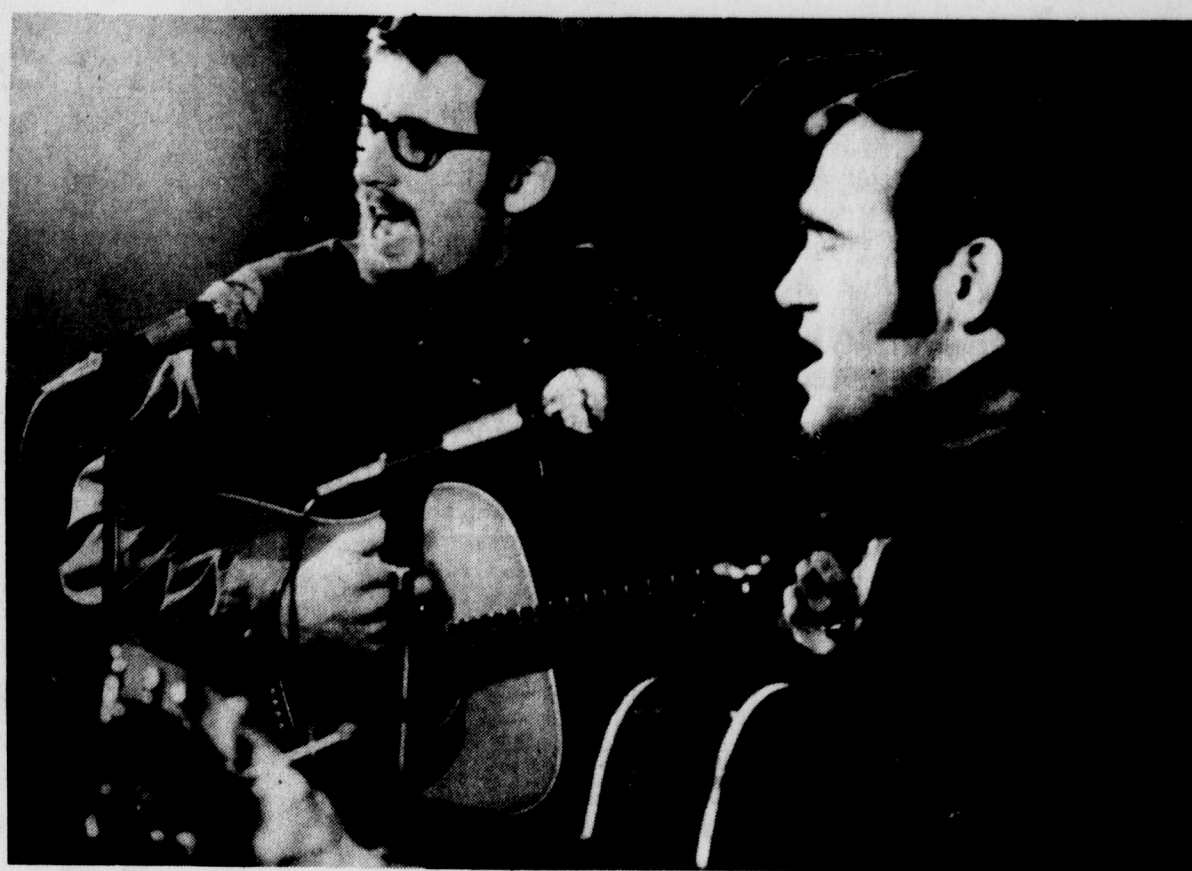

Other Mormons attach more urgency to the matter. "The rule should be changed as fast as possible," said Paul Eckert, the head advisor of West Shaw Hall and, a former Methodist who was converted to the church last summer. "It's a very hard point for Mormons to defend, and the church is losing prestige as a result of it."

Though church doctrine teaches that the priesthood is an essential step towards salvation, most Mormons believe that members of excluded groups are provided other means of achieving salvation. Women, for example, gain salvation either through righteousness or through their husbands, according to Mormon belief.

Mormons also point with satisfaction to certain sacred scriptures which assert that babies of all colors go to heaven when they die. Many regard this as evidence that blacks of all ages can achieve salvation.

Some Mormons say that blacks are privileged to be free of priestly burdens. "The priesthood is a terrific responsibility," Al Merrithew, Flint sophomore said. "The way you handle it can work in your favor, but it can also work against you."

"People who are not obligated to hold the priesthood have a better chance of achieving salvation because they don't have to worry about misusing it," he said.

Folk concert

"Dust and Ashes," a Christian, folk singing group, will present a concert at 8 p.m. tonight at the Hayes Middle School on Nixon Road. The duo will also lead a workshop on worship at 2 to 4 p.m. on Saturday at the Mt. Hope Methodist Church in Lansing.

ASIAN WORK

Missionary braves war

DA NANG, Vietnam (AP) — The Rev. Gordon H. Smith is a missionary who has survived 41 years of more turbulence than calm in Indochina.

As a man of peace he is a hawk on the war. Distrusted by the French, he admired the progress they brought to their former colony before the Geneva accords broke up the Indochinese state.

A Protestant whose efforts frequently were undermined by agents of Roman Catholic Ngo Dinh Diem, he considered the former president a strong, effective ruler before his regime smothered itself in nepotism.

The son of a British missionary couple, he was born in Argentina, raised in Toronto, and is staunchly pro-American. He has become a naturalized U.S. citizen.

The Smiths arrived in Indochina in 1929 — a young couple on their first posting with the Christian Missionary Alliance. In the ensuing years, they worked in jungles in tropical heat, reared three children through bouts of malaria, pneumonia and dysentery, fled the Japanese occupation, saw half their 100 mission stations destroyed or uprooted by war and some of their Vietnamese workers kidnapped and executed by the Viet Cong.

But for all they had to endure, they found exhilaration in the challenge.

"We knew we had come to stay," the Rev. Mr. Smith said. "We were building a work — it was a hard nut to crack — but we kept at it."

They learned six Indochinese languages and dialects, built mission stations, churches, Bible schools, leprosariums, orphanages, transcribed unwritten languages of mountain tribes, sent sick Vietnamese children to America for surgery, wrote nine books, taught, preached and counted their converts.

They began their evangelism in Cambodia, moved to South Vietnam's central highlands in 1934, then to Da Nang in 1956 where they now represent the United World Mission. The only breaks were furloughs every seven years and a five-year absence during World War II, when they lived in Chicago and the Rev. Mr. Smith taught at the Moody Bible Institute.

Returning to Vietnam after the war, the Smiths found things changed from the days when the Vietnamese were a "gentle people, most placid, languid and indifferent with no national spontaneity . . . caring for nothing but bananas, fish and rice."

"The French put us under strong restrictions," the missionary recalls. "They were suspicious of us. 'You're not here without good money from Washington,' they would say. Everyone was talking in whispers."

It was the beginning of the Indochina war.

On a journey from Saigon to the highlands city of Ban Me Thuot, the missionary hid beneath a truck load of dried fish as the vehicle came to a Viet Minh roadblock. But soon he learned the Viet Minh's "whole attitude was anticolonialist, not against us but against the French. They didn't molest us but they knew everything we did. Some of our preachers were Viet Minh."

He said he saw no parallel between the Viet Minh and their successors, the Viet Cong.

"The Viet Cong are completely Communist; they're indoctrinated. The Viet Minh didn't fight for an ideology but for freedom. This is not a civil war. It's a Communist-inspired invasion from the North."

To him, the Vietnam war is a crusade against an atheistic enemy, a battle for global freedom.

"Once people become Communists they don't believe in anything. Freedom isn't easy to come by. The Soviets are trying to take it away, so are the Chinese."

"We made a mistake in fighting the war while tying our own hands. We should have stood up to them, but we were afraid to bomb Haiphong. We had restrictions, they had none. We could have knocked them out long ago when they were weaponless — that's when we should have knocked them out. Freedom is never given, you have to fight for it. Now we are at an impasse that should never have happened. If we had gotten it over faster, fewer would have been killed."

The Rev. Mr. Smith says some of his Vietnamese acquaintances worry about U.S. withdrawal from the war. A few have suggested that if the Americans must leave, they should pay for mercenaries to do the fighting.

"They just don't realize they must stand up on their own feet," the missionary explains. "They've been under terrific strain all these years . . ."

"But we've always been optimistic — Vietnam is our home and we'll die here. I have faith in God that he'll keep the door open. I don't think God will let this country go. I don't think America will either."

Weekend presents kaleidoscope of talent

By ROBERT KIPPER
State News Reviewer

"They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" at the Spartan East, two short plays by a new playwright, a black festival and soul dinner and two good on-campus films are the prime entertainment offerings this weekend.

"I'm Not Talking About Sex" and "Service in the Time of Love," two plays by Tevia

Abrams, will be performed at 12:30 and 8 p.m. Friday and 8 p.m. Saturday in the Arena Theatre in Fairchild as part of the New Playwright's series of plays.

Brody Cafeteria is hosting "The Power of Cultured Soul," a black festival and soul dinner, Saturday night. The program will feature contemporary black music, dancing, jazz and drama. The dinner lasts from 5 - 6:15

Saturday evening and showtime is at 8:30 p.m. If you live in a dormitory and plan to attend you must pick up meal transfers before Saturday.

On-Campus Films

"Sunset Boulevard," a screen classic about a faded movie star who can no longer separate reality from myth and her foolish plans to make a comeback in films, shows at 7 & 9:30 Friday and Saturday nights in 108B Wells Hall. Gloria Swanson plays the role of the deluded star to perfection. Pauline Kael, New Yorker critic, called the film "a bizarre and bitter tribute to vanished glory." Indeed, it is a film that should not be missed.

"The Firemen's Ball," a Czech allegorical film supposedly representative of Czech conditions during the time of the recent Russian invasion, shows at 7:30 p.m. in the Auditorium. Time's film critic called the film "a directorial triumph for Milos Forman."

This week brings two Richard Burton films to campus but only his enemies will be thrilled by these lackluster vehicles.

Two female film critics do justice to these films with priceless, one line, mini-critiques: Judith Crist described "Where Eagles Dare" (which shows Friday night in Wilson and Saturday night in Conrad) as, "A clunky, over-complicated sadism - saturated bit of World War II derring-do directed as ineptly as it's performed." Reneta Adler, formerly of the New York Times, wrote that "Doctor Faustus" was "of an awfulness that bends the mind."

"Faustus" shows in Conrad Friday and Wilson Saturday. (Good news, Burton fans, "Candy," his 1968 fiasco, arrives next week.)

"Hot Spur," a exploitation film that promises to live up - or down - to its title, shows Friday and Saturday nights in Wells Hall.

"Godzilla vs. the Thing," a film that needs no explanation, shows both nights in Wells.

Lansing Area Films
NEW ARRIVAL: "The Molly Maguires," a hard hitting film from the man who made "Hud," is showing at the Spartan West. (Not reviewed by press time).

RECOMMENDED: "They Shoot Horses, Don't They," the finest American film of the past year (at the Spartan East), "Bob

& Carol & Ted & Alice," the best comedy of the past year (at the Campus), "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," the film in which Paul Newman is actually up - staged (at the Lansing Mall) and "Cactus Flower," which has Goldie Hawn as its saving grace (at the Michigan).

OTHER ATTRACTIONS: "Putney Swope" (at the State) and "The Computer Wore Tennis Shoes" (at the Gladmer).

Grueling dance

Jane Fonda helps her partner, Michael Sarrazin, keep up the pace of a dance marathon in the film "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" Miss Fonda has been nominated for the "Best Actress Of The Year Award" for her part as Gloria.

"They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" is a devastating, totally fascinating work that overwhelms its audience with the human spectacle of endurance, misery, despair and determination that typified the grueling dance marathons of The Depression.

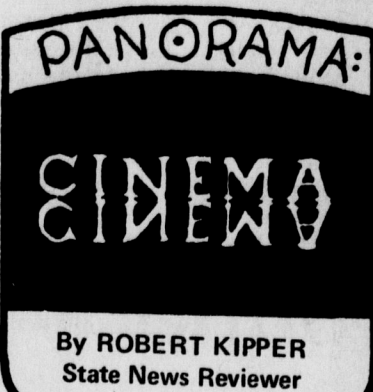

To the tune of an inappropriately cheerful band, the encouragement of the barker and the curious goading of the spectators, the contestants circle the floor of a rocco, hideously grandiose ballroom in a bizarre dance of desolation that could only be the outgrowth of the national despair that was The Depression.

With seemingly unerring authenticity of detail and uncompromising firmness of approach, director Sidney Pollack and screenwriters James Poe and Robert Thompson have recreated the gaudy atmosphere of dance marathons.

For a $1,500 prize, the couples come and endure the exploitation of the promoters, the scrutiny of the audience and the trauma of the competition to compensate their outside losses with a hoped for victory on the inside.

But, rather than protecting them from their outside problems, the ballroom intensifies their individual and collective agony.

Thrown together as human curiosities in a freak show that has been rigged so that no one can win, are an embittered girl who competes to prove she is not a loser, a young man who competes because he has nothing better to do, a sailor who competes to prove his middle-aged fitness, an emotional Jean Harlow type who competes in hopes that she'll be discovered by a film producer, a pregnant woman who competes because she and her husband need the seven meals a day promised to contestants.

As their hopes are dashed one by one, the viewer becomes emotionally drained by the sheer relentlessness of the film and intensely involved with the personal and national sorrow portrayed.

Above all, the viewer is strangely fascinated by the spectacle -- just as the on-screen spectators are -- and numb with disbelief that such contests actually existed in this country.

Jane Fonda delivers the finest performance of her career and the finest female performance of this year. She plays Gloria, the most embittered and defensive contestant, who has masked her vulnerability with a hard shell of defiance for so long that she can no longer express any warmth or concern or hope. Only once -- and this is when she asks a man to shoot her -- does the facade crack.

What makes Gloria so fascinating and Miss Fonda's performance so compelling is that until this one, pleading moment Gloria remains true to character.

Miss Fonda projects a ferocity, a defiance and an unapologetic impotence of caring that is precisely right for the role of Gloria. It is a fully realized performance that should

-- if justice is done -- bring her a richly deserved Academy Award this April.

Michael Sarrazin, Susannah York, Red Buttons and, above all, Gig Young contribute excellent supporting performances. With his role of the goading, congratulating and exploiting promoter, Young instantly makes one forget his inconspicuous past as second banana in Doris Day type films. He gives a performance as fine as any supporting one given this year.

"They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" is a gripping, grueling demonstration of the depths some of a nation's citizens can be reduced to by a national catastrophe and the heights previously unrecognized talents can achieve with the right material. It is an unforgettable film, a tragic film and, clearly, the finest American film of the year.

HONORS CONCERT

5 to solo in Auditorium

The Music Dept. will feature five soloists in an honors concert at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the University Auditorium.

Chosen by audition to perform are pianist Penelope Hendel, Eau Claire, Wisc. graduate student; tenor David Holwerda, East Lansing senior; baritone Andreas Poulimenos, East Lansing graduate student; clarinetist David Townsend, Lansing graduate student, and soprano Suzanne Wernette, Detroit senior.

Backing up the five soloists who have won in national competitions will be the MSU Symphony Orchestra conducted by Leon Gregorian and Gordon Mehling. The orchestra will also perform by itself.

Holding the concert in the Auditorium will pose many problems for the soloists and orchestra, Gregorian said.

"It will be necessary to hold rehearsals in the Auditorium to determine how to produce a balanced sound," he declared. "The building's structure produces a tremendous echo."

Gregorian said when music concerts are held off campus, it is not necessary to hold extra rehearsals to compensate for acoustics. The concert is free to the public.

New theater provides original experiences

The newly formed New Playwrights' Theatre is responsible for allowing aspiring playwrights experiment with theatre. The result has been some of the freshest and most original theatre experiences on campus.

The latest plays in the series are two one-act parodies by Tevia Abrams entitled "And I'm Not Talking About Sex" and "Service In The Time of Love." These can be seen on Friday, March 7 at 8 p.m. The two plays last 45 minutes, cost 50c and are definitely worth your attention. Tevia Abrams, writer and director, is a graduate student in theatre and is the recipient of this year's Sam Schubert Playwriting Fellowship.

The two plays are very alive, fast-moving, and amusing. "And I'm Not Talking About Sex" tells the audience that they've "Got an eye-stopper of a show lined up for you." And they do. The play is visually effective, but much too loud. The drum rolls are deafening, and some of the actors, who otherwise are really quite fine, yell their lines which makes the words incomprehensible. Abrams makes several references to the state of the modern theatre - sex, nudity, language, money, voyeurism, and human dignity. These are more effective in the latter part of the play, when the tempo is slowed down a bit from the rather noisy and too speedy opening.

"Service in The Time of Love" concerns itself with a church service at which the worshippers carry construction helmets instead of prayer books, join the Minister in a smoke during the service, and hear a sermon praising the physical side of life rather than the spiritual. The whole scene is more like an opium den than a prayer meeting, which was fascinating.

ASMSU CONCERT

Sunday blues: Cotton, Mayall

The James Cotton Blues Band and John Mayall will share the stage Sunday night in a bluesy Pop Entertainment concert being offered by ASMSU.

The concert will begin at 8 p.m. in the Auditorium. All tickets have been sold.

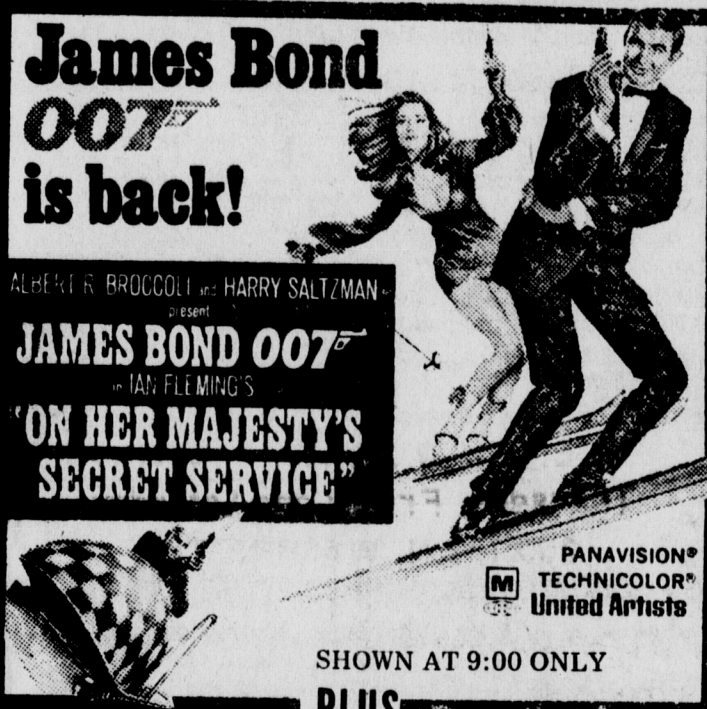

A seating arrangement with this story shows the distribution of $3.50, $3, and $2.50 seats. The $3.50 seats are in the forward third of the Auditorium, the $3 seats in the middle third and the $2.50 seats are in the back.

James Cotton and his Blues Band are the more popular of the two groups appearing Sunday night. Cotton's blues has been shaped by his Mississippi upbringing and professional experience with the Memphis and Chicago brands of the blues.

The other members of the Blues Band are also experienced musicians, having played with a number of blues and jazz bands before joining Cotton in 1966.

Mayall, although relatively unknown to American audiences, has been quite popular in England with various "training ground" groups he has led. His current group is still in the process of developing its own identity.

Ailey troupe mirrors life

Living art

The Alvin Ailey Dance Theater presented a three-part show Wednesday to a full audience at the Auditorium. The dance troupe consists of 14 performers under the direction of Alvin Ailey. The performance depicted the cultural legacy of the American black.

The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater unleashed its power with the fury of a hurricane. They were more than dancers -- they were transmitters of a mystical spirit of life. Their dazzling artistic technique forced the audience to involve itself completely in the dynamism onstage.

This unique excitement is the result of Alvin Ailey's personal philosophy. He said:

"Dance is to enrich. To hold a mirror to life itself. It's the personification of everything -- you -- and it's perhaps the highest art form because it's completely enlarging and expanding for the individual."

The personable founder-director-choreographer, Ailey, studied dance as a teenager. After working with Lester Horton, he formed his own company in New York in 1958. Like his contemporaries he was influenced greatly by Martha Graham.

"Martha," he said warmly, "is the Great Lady of modern dance. But I'm not steeped in Graham because I don't come from her like Paul Taylor or Merce Cunningham. I think it's marvelous the way dance is exploding in so many ways! That's a groovy thing! It's always fresh, because it's always changing."

The Ailey group has fourteen dancers and it is a predominantly black company. "I started out to propagandize what the Negro has done," Ailey said, "and my first roots were in blues. But I believe in integration. Dances are dances."

The MSU performance on Wednesday featured three of the eighteen ballets in the troupe's repertoire. The program began with Joyce Trisler's "Dance for Six," with music by Vivaldi. "This piece is just a visualization of the music," Ailey explained. Performed in simple rehearsal garb, the piece sparkled with a combination of modern steps on a classic base. Younger members of the group who had not previously performed this number debuted on the stage.

The highlight of the presentation was "Prodigal Prince" with a "very special dancer," as Ailey described him, Miguel Godreau, in the title role. The decor, costumes and choreography were created by Geoffrey Holder, a young artist from Trinidad.

"I can best describe this piece as 'mystic,'" Ailey began. "Geoffrey is a painter. The idea goes back to the roots of black culture in Africa, and it's a very personal work for him about finding self-expression in art. The feather symbolizes the paintbrush or ability to find expression."

A sullen but fiery Hippolite (Godreau) groped his way into the majestic vision of the Goddess Erzulie (stunning Judith Jamison), and John the Baptist (Kelvin Rotardier).

In a startling and technically daring dream sequence, Godreau rhythmically transformed himself into the lost, searching prince, seeking identity from his cultural heritage. Against a backdrop of soft pink and blue lights the stage erupted into a tribal intensity of swirling skirts and sensual movement, as the Company created the ritual dance of Hippolite's transition. With skillful grace and difficult leg positions in classic, dance style, Judith Jamison introduced the entranced Godreau to a new awareness of himself. She forced his body to inter-react with hers dynamically in rhythmic communication.

Sometimes in sorrow, sometimes jubilant Godreau pounced upon the audience with the impact of a sleek lion, confident of his power to hold and devour attention. Highlighted by drums and ritualistic lyrics, "Prodigal Prince" was totally effective and captivating.

"Revelations," the final dance, was choreographed by Ailey and consisted of the dramatic, dance interpretation of various traditional spirituals.

"Revelations is our signature piece," he said, "Although it was created ten years ago, it's our classic." The company established an effective mood in the soulful "I Been Boked" as they raised hands in a unity of motion.

Dudley Williams executed his "I Want to Be Ready" with perfection of body control. His segment required a series of complex bends and rises. (I wish the program had featured him individually in more dances.) "Move, Members, Move" contrasted greatly with the initial "Pilgrim of Sorrow," by featuring lively New Orleans jazz - spiritual action. A series of exciting leaps by Bobby Johnson, John Parks and Godreau exhibited versatility of talent.

The "Rocka My Soul" finale showcased the complementary individuality of the members of the company. The dancers playfully cavorted, interweaving themselves into patterns of couples, rocking to the steady musical beat.

"I hope dancers will be broadened by my vision," Ailey said happily, as the troupe received its second standing ovation of the evening. "There was a time when you were categorized as to what style of dancer you were. I hope there are only two categories now: Good and Bad. Let's broaden all horizons through dance. That's my goal."

Through varying moods and distinctive artistry, the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater is indeed adding new dimensions to the field of dance. And they're a long way from being merely "good." They're Sensational.

SILENT STARS

'Sunset' covers past age

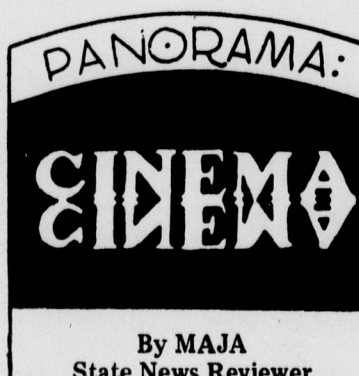

When the silent film went out in the early 1930s, a number of the stars -- many of the big names in Hollywood at the time -- went out with them. Those who were unable to adapt to the talkies gradually faded from the scene, gathering their money and memories around them like a coat against the cold wind of age. "Sunset Boulevard" is the story of one such (imaginary) star.

Norma Desmond (Gloria Swanson), 20 years after her last fling with the screen, had withdrawn to a huge monstrosity of a house on Sunset Boulevard. She lived alone with her butler Max (Erich von Stroheim) -- who previously held a somewhat more important position in her life -- until a two-bit writer accidentally became involved with her, and won her heart (a rather dubious distinction). From here the film builds steadily to a towering climax of insanity and murder.

"Sunset Boulevard," released in 1950, was made under the direction of Billy Wilder (The Apartment, The Fortune Cookie) and is a completely different genre from his present cinematic attempts. It is fortunately also a considerably more impressive one. Anticipating "What Ever Happened to Baby Jane" by some 12 years, Wilder makes fine use of his cameras and lights to enhance the brooding, morbid atmosphere of the film. He has filled the script with little surprises that hold the tension well, and help to carry the sometimes melodramatic plot. Franz Waxman's music provides a fine backdrop for the lush activity and driving force of the film.

For Gloria Swanson, "Sunset

Boulevard" was a tour de force. Her richly colored portrayal of Norma is intense and full, reaching around and through the character of the forgotten star.

Von Stroheim comes through in a superb manner, echoing Eliot's Prufrock: almost defeated, but not quite, he has found a reason for living, regardless of the questionability of its merit. The deeper he moves into the character, the more pathetic (and also the more noble) he seems to become. The final scene particularly is one of the most subtle and finest character flashes the screen has yet to produce.

Making cameo appearances are Hedda Hopper, Buster Keaton and Cecil B. DeMille.

Spartans shoot for 2nd in Big Ten track finals

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

With Wisconsin favored to romp to its fourth straight Big Ten track title at Jenison Fieldhouse today and Saturday, MSU Coach Fran Dittrich figures his Spartans can score enough points to take runner-up honors in this 60th annual affair. The last time any team other than Wisconsin won the indoor crown was in 1966 at Jenison when the Spartans led the field. Dittrich can't help but think back to that day but also thinks the Badgers have too many sure-fire placers this year for anyone to steal the title away.

The Spartans, with no great depth but a fair number of runners in the "star" category, will be depending on first, second and third place finishes for much of their scoring. "If everyone runs the way they're capable of and the way they've done throughout the season, we can finish second," Dittrich said.

"We've got to give it to Wisconsin, at least on paper, but you never know what will happen in this meet."

Top entries for MSU will be the "Big Three" of Bill Wehrwein, Charles Pollard and Herb Washington.

Wehrwein is ranked number one in the 6000-yard run at 1:09.7, but Michigan's Norm Cornwell, who upset the NCAA champ last week, has run 1:10.4. Mark Koster of Illinois has run 1:10.2 and Ohio State's Dick Bruggeman has equalled Wehrwein's 1:09.7 time.

Pollard, coming into the meet after a week's layoff, has the best hurdle time in the high barriers at 8.2 but should be hard pressed. Teammates John Morrison, a steady placer all season, Wayne Hartwick and Dave Martin will also be entered.

Morrison, Hartwick and junior

Howard Doughty will go in the low hurdles.

Sophomore Washington is the pre-meet favorite to win the 60-yard dash. He has run 6.0 and defeated Big Ten rivals Jim Harris and Jerry Hill of Ohio State and Gene Brown of Michigan.

Ken Popejoy looms as MSU's brightest hope in the distances as the Illinois freshman has posted a 4:04.4 mile, fourth best in the league. Another freshman, Pete Reiff, is the Spartan's other mile entry while senior Ken Leonwicz, junior Chuck Starkey and frosh Ralph Zoppa are the MSU entries in the league's fastest two mile ever.

Dittrich is entering many of his younger runners in the meet, hoping to give them experience and maybe sneak by with a place or two on a couple. Freshmen Tom Spuller and Chris Boggs will run the 300, soph Al Henderson and frosh Mike Murphy the 440, soph Paul Cooke the 600, and sophs Dave Dieters and Bryan Kent the 1000.

Junior John Mock, with a 1:52.8 half-mile best, will be gunning for a high place in that event along with freshman Bob May. Henderson (440) and Cooke (600) probably stand the best chances of breaking into the scoring column.

In the field events, sophomore Eric Allen is MSU's best bet and rates as a possible high placer in the triple jump. Lloyd Bridges, Jesse Williams and Mack Kelly might also rate a shot in the long jump, probably the meet's weakest event after 25 foot jumper Greg Johnson of Wisconsin is excluded.

MSU rates as one of the favorites in the mile relay along with Wisconsin, Illinois and Ohio State. The Spartans have a best time of 3:15.0. Running on the relay will be Henderson, Murphy, Mock and Wehrwein, with Cooke as the alternate.

BIG TEN NOTES: A new scoring system will be used this week with all events being scored 6-4-3-2-1 ... in the past individual events were 5-4-3-2-1 ... defending champs returning include Stan Gay of Purdue (60), Mike Goodrich of Indiana (300), Wehrwein (600), Rick Feezel of Northwestern (long jump), and Gary Haupt of Indiana (high jump) ... meet referee is Drake athletic director Bob Karnes and starter is Detroit's Dave Beauvais ...

Going into the Big Ten swimming meet this weekend at Bloomington the University of Indiana who have won nine Big 10 titles in a row holds the number one time in all but one of the events swum during the dual meet season.

So vast is Indiana's superiority over the field one opposing coach commented "we could make up an all-star team from the other nine teams and still couldn't win."

Leading the Hoosier dominance is super sophomore Mark Spitz and Gary Hall. Spitz has the best time in the 50, 100, and 200 yard freestyles as well as the 200 yard butterfly. He is closely followed however by Spartan swimmers in the 50 and 100.

MSU senior Dick Crittenden is only seven hundredths of a second behind Spitz in the 50 having gone 21.79 to Spitz's 21.70. It is doubtful that Spitz will swim the event so Crittenden has an excellent shot at the individual title. Co-captain Mike Kalmbach is fourth in the event only two tenths behind the leader.

In the 100 yard event Kalmbach is only 23 hundredths behind Spitz.

Although Hall holds the best time in only one event he must be tagged the favorite to win three. He has recorded the best time in the 200 yard backstroke, an event in which he set a new American record last year. The Hoosier freshman also holds the world record in the metric equivalent of the 200 yard and 400 yard individual medleys so he should sweep them. Presently he is second in the 200 behind teammate Larry Barbieri.

Spartan sophomore Jeff Lanini holds down the fourth position in the 200 yard backstroke behind Jim Councilman and Pete Dahlberg of Indiana.

Bruce Richards is fifth in the breaststroke and sixth in the 200 yard individual medley.

Freshman Ken Winfield has the fourth best time of 1:55.83 in the 200 yard butterfly. Spitz is way out in front having posted a 1:51.4, but the race for second will be very tight.

The Spartans rate third in the medley relay behind Indiana and Michigan and are fourth in the freestyle relay. The Wolverines stole the top spot in the freestyle relay where the Spartans are fourth. The Spartans won the event last year and have three of their four swimmers returning - Crittenden, Kalmbach, and senior Mark Holdridge.

MIKE MANLEY

Big man for cagers
just one test away?

Ever since the first snow began to fall in East Lansing last November, marking the start of the basketball season, it has been obvious that MSU needs a big man in the pivot... even more than it needs a new arena.

Jim Gibbons has carried the burden at center all year and has made a tremendous personal sacrifice to help fill the gap. A natural forward, Gib plays best facing the basket and is most dangerous with his outside jumper. On the boards, Jim has had to go up against players two or three inches taller in almost every game, and has the bruises to prove it.

Check the top-ranked teams in the country and you will find, not surprisingly, that they all have the big man in the middle. UCLA has 6-8 Steve Patterson to take the place of Lew Alcindor, South Carolina has 6-10 Tom Ricker, Kentucky has 6-8 All-American Dan Issel, Jacksonville has 7-1 Artis Gilmore and New Mexico State has 6-9 Sam Lacey... and there are your top five teams.

The only big man MSU has had in recent memory was Matt Aitch, now the freshman coach here. With Matt in the middle, the Spartans finished second and first in the conference. Lee Lafayette played there the last two seasons, but like Gibbons, he was a natural forward.

But now, after many long, frustrating years of giving up height under the basket, a ray of sunshine can be seen over the not-to-distant horizon.

The number one man on Gus Ganakas' recruiting priority list this year is a 6-9 senior Schenectady, N.Y. He's Sid Edwards, who has been roaming around upstate New York batting down shots and grabbing rebounds for Linton High School with such style and precision that his coach calls him "another Bill Russell."

For several reasons, MSU is the top school on his list. First, the coach who speaks so glowingly of him is Walt Przybylo, whose son Gary is here on a basketball scholarship but had to sit out this season after a foot operation. Gary and Sid were teammates two years ago at Linton.

Ganakas also has an influential alumni keeping in touch with Edwards up in Schenectady.

But there is a catch... nothing could be this easy, especially when going after a "super" player.

Edwards does not have the grades to meet the strict eligibility requirements of the Big Ten so he must take the college boards in early May and score high enough to qualify. Ganakas thinks he can do it.

But until May, Gus can only cross his fingers and hope. "He might not be another Bill Russell quite yet," Ganakas says with guarded optimism, "but who knows. He emulates Russell. People in New York rate Edwards and his team extremely high in the state."

Then Ganakas settles back in his chair and shakes his head. "I'll tell you this, our whole future is in his hands. All our eggs are in his basket."

After losing 6-10 Jim Chones to Marquette and 6-11 Reggie Royals to Florida State last year in the last second, it would be nice to see Ganakas land "Big Sid."

'S' win over Illini will avoid cellar

By MIKE MANLEY
State News Sports Writer

Back in November, when optimism usually runs rampant among coaches and sports writers, MSU was the overwhelming choice of the media men to finish at the tail-end of the Big Ten basketball race.

Now, more than three months and 23 games later, after Iowa made a farce of what was supposed to be a tight conference battle, the Spartans need a win over Illinois in their final game to avoid the pre-season basement prediction.

Coach Gus Ganakas' squad holds a 4-9 record to date which puts them in a tie with Michigan and Northwestern for the seventh spot in the league -- just one game ahead of Indiana. Indiana and Michigan play Saturday in Ann Arbor, but an MSU win would put the Spartans out of reach of the Hoosiers regardless of what happens at Michigan.

Just playing with statistics -- if MSU beats Illinois, Indiana knocks off U-M, Iowa beats Northwestern (a distinct possibility) and Wisconsin (5-9) loses to Ohio State in Columbus -- the Spartans could finish in a tie with the Badgers for sixth place.

But everything in that rather lengthy statistical exercise hinges on an MSU win at Illinois -- where the Spartans have won only once since 1960. Game time is 1:33 p.m. Saturday and can be heard over WILS and WKAR-FM.

For five MSU seniors -- Jim Gibbons, Lloyd Ward, Bob Gale, Steve Kirkpatrick and Ron Binge -- it will be their final game in a Spartan uniform.

Kirkpatrick and Binge have been laboring in the background for three years, rarely getting off the bench except for warmups. Kirkpatrick, a 6-2, 200-pounder from Lafayette, Ind., has played in 14 games over his career, and Binge, a 6-5 forward from East Detroit, has appeared in 11. Together they have scored 32 points for MSU in three years, a figure Ralph Simpson has bettered 12 times this season in single games.

But Kirk and Binge do their heavy work during the week, in the lonely, dusty interior of Jenison Fieldhouse -- working on the scouting team against the No. 1 team. It's not glamorous work, but it would be hard to prepare for an upcoming game without them. Both players are married and are sort of the elder statesmen of the team.

Despite his lack of playing time, Kirkpatrick is one of the most knowledgeable basketball players on the team. Ganakas once said he was like a second coach on the floor during practice.

Going into the final game, Simpson -- who has been named to the Associated Press All-Big Ten team and was also an honorable mention All-America (the only sophomore named) on the AP team -- leads the team with a 29.1 point average. The sophomore star is still hobbled by a sprained right knee and did not practice Wednesday and was doubtful Thursday.

Rudy Benjamin, who scored a career-high 29 in the loss to Purdue, has moved his scoring mark to 11.9. Jim Gibbons is next at 10.6. Those three, along with Ward (7.3), Ron Gutkowski (8.6), Pat Miller (7.3) and Tim Bograkovs (2.7) should see considerable action.

Illinois will likely start sharp-shooting Rick Howat and quick Mike Price at the guards, with Greg Jackson, Randy Crews and Fred Miller up front.

The Illini won the two earlier meetings with MSU -- 86-77 in Portland and 74-67 in East Lansing. They are 8-5 in the conference, good for third place, and stand 15-8 overall.

In the game here, the Illini used a combination man-to-man and zone defense along with a controlled offense to beat the Spartans. Howat had 19 to lead all scorers. Miller, a rugged forward, held Simpson to just 18 points -- but that was still more than any other MSU player could manage. Ralph got 32 in their first meeting in December.

Simpson needs 33 points Saturday to reach the 700-point mark for the season. Just for comparison, Rick Mount, who has shattered every conceivable Big Ten scoring record in his three years at Purdue, scored 683 in his first season for a 28.4 average. Simpson needs 17 to top that mark.

MICHIGAN HIGHLY FAVORED

Gymnasts seek second in Big 10

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

An oddity in the conference rules could conceivably eliminate the powerful Michigan gymnastics team from NCAA competition and, even more likely, it could bring the MSU team a second place finish although the Spartans had only a 3-4 dual meet record.

To determine final standings and the representative to the national tournament, the number of conference wins is added to points given for the position in the conference meet (8 points for 1st, 7 for 2nd, etc.). If Illinois finished first, Iowa second and Wolverines third, Michigan would be left out of NCAA team competition despite a perfect dual meet season this year.

A third place finish by Michigan is possible but not expected. Illinois was soundly beaten by the Wolverines and Iowa fell 160.87 to 159.19. U-M, however was without the services of George Huntzicker, perhaps their best man on the long horse vault and floor exercise.

A second place finish in the conference meet is what the Spartans are shooting for and a second for the final standings would be icing on the cake. Illinois must finish fifth, behind Michigan, Iowa, MSU and Minnesota if the MSU squad is to end up second.

Coach George Szypula's squad will go all out in an effort to prove that they are better than their record indicates.

"Even though our record isn't as good as we hoped it would be, our squad is certainly heading into the meet with a great attitude," Szypula said.

The Spartans are not in the best physical shape heading into the meet. All-around man Mickey Uram will only work side horse due to an injured back and Charlie Morse will be fighting the effects of a strained wrist. Tom Kuhlman, who will take Uram's all-around spot, is recovering from a knee injury which he picked up at Indiana when he slipped and ran into the vault.

One Spartan who has avoided the injuries and turned in an excellent season for MSU is the only senior on the squad, captain Rich Murahata.

Murahata has been especially good on the long horse vault and floor exercise. In four meets he has finished first in vaulting and three meets have seen him take the top floor exercise spot. The team leader for both events, Murahata is averaging 8.9 for the vault and 9.01 for floor exercise.

Also a standout, on parallel bars, Murahata makes the team of Randy Balhorn, Uram, Morse and himself one of the best in the conference. He has the best average for the event, 8.39.

Morse has the best average on the still rings, 8.8 and side horse, 8.77 while Uram tops the Spartans on the horizontal bar, with a 8.88 average.

Szypula will be counting on good scores in three events from his 'fourth men' Dave Ziegert on floor exercise, Bob Goldenberg on rings and Al Beaudet on the high bar. Beaudet won his event against Indiana and Ziegert, a promising freshman has had good scores in his meets.

Gymnastics team captain Richard Murahata was one of 11 MSU winners in the prestigious 1970 Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship competition.

McLain 'paints' himself out of corner, leaves company

DETROIT (UPI) — Denny McLain, the Detroit Tiger pitching ace suspended for alleged links with organized gambling, has removed himself from the paint business.

Edward P. May, general counsel of Denny McLain Dycos Paints, Inc., of suburban Livonia, announced at the firm's first and possibly last, annual meeting Wednesday night that McLain has asked that his name be deleted from the company's articles of incorporation.

McLain, 25, is listed as president of the company and had 20,000 shares of stock worth about $20,000.

The firm is one of the ventures which have pushed McLain into financial trouble.

His personal debts are estimated at between $50,000 and $150,000, and Dycos is more than $60,000 in debt. Four creditors have sued the company for a total of $7,000, and a packaging firm claims McLain owes it $53,000.

In addition, the Michigan Securities Exchange Commission is investigating Dycos and two other McLain businesses for possible violation of the state's securities laws.

May said Dycos may be placed in receivership and possibly sold to a new company made up of most of Dycos's present shareholders.

He said McLain will not receive a settlement for his investment.

McLain was suspended indefinitely by Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Feb. 20 while the Commissioner's Office conducts a further investigation of the 30-game winner's alleged links with a bookmaking operation in Flint.

Lolich is now No. 1

Detroit Tigers pitcher Mickey Lolich works on covering bunts as he throws from the mound during workouts at spring training camp in Lakeland. Watching the Tigers 19 game winner are pitching coach Mike Roarke, rookie Jim Foor, Lolich, John Hiller, Fred Lasher and Tom Timmerman. With Denny McLain suspended indefinitely, Lolich is the Tigers' No. 1 pitcher.

Software?

Systems programmers at RCA get somewhat involved with hardware.

There used to be a theory that systems programmers didn't talk with hardware designers.

This was like a husband and wife living in two separate houses.

We believe in interface—programmers and engineers work out their problems together. The results seem to be proving us right. We call it "total systems architecture."

We believe the programmer must get involved with the total problem—software and hardware people synergize with each other.

There are conflicts, but it's producing results. For instance, we are already a generation ahead of the major competitor in time-sharing systems.

There are other benefits. We are not a narrow specialized corporation. We are diverse, human and highly concerned with the future.

You will rub elbows with scientists, engineers, psychologists—people from numerous disciplines and backgrounds.

After all, the computer is going to be involved with all the problems of the next 30 years of this century.

If you are working for an advanced or undergraduate degree in Computer Science, we would like to talk to you. Contact your College Placement Director, or write directly to: RCA College Relations, Dept. E, Cherry Hill, Camden, New Jersey 08101.

Run For Your Life, Gabblers clash Sunday in All-U finals

It'll be a rematch of last year's All-University championships when the Gabblers and Run For Your Life meet Sunday night for the IM All-U basketball crown. Game time is 7:15 in the IM Sports Arena.

Both teams earned semifinal wins Thursday night — Run For Your Life beating West Shaw 9, 59-43, and Gabblers topping Omega Psi Phi, 55-48.

RFYL led 26-21 at the half and built a 38-28 lead before Shaw started a comeback. Sparked by the shooting of Jim Moravek and Gary Aaglund, Shaw scored 12 straight points to take a 40-38 lead with just under four minutes to play.

But Run For Your Life, this year's independent winners, suddenly came to life and rattled off 13 consecutive points of their own to regain the lead and ice the game. Doug Beattie (15) and Mark Vienindahl (14) paced the winners' attack while Moravek's 14 and Aaglund's 10 were high for West Shaw.

Shaw, who won the residence hall division, suffered their first loss of the year after ten straight wins.

Omega Psi Phi led most of the game but the Gabblers stayed close and finally went ahead on a lay-up by Bob Fisher to earn a 37-36 lead with seven minutes to play.

From there the Gabblers stretched the margin to nine points, 49-40 behind the hot shooting of Ken Horisny. Horisny hit three straight long shots to get the game out of reach for the Phi's.

Horisny was the game's leading scorer with 15 points while teammate Jack Nienberg added 14. Red Wiener and John Turner paced Omega's balanced attack with a dozen points each while Billy Joe Dupree had 11.

In the intramural hockey championships, the Bombadiers came out on top of Lambda Chi, winning by a score of 6-3. The Bombadiers began the game scoring hard and fast, grabbing a 3-0 lead before Lambda Chi could get on the board. Lambda Chi's last period surge was not enough to overtake the Bombadiers, though. Key saves by goalie Ron Harris, and the scoring of Dalton Cheaney were factors in the Bombadier win. Along with Cheaney's two goals, Tom Fales, Gary Clark, Ted Petroff and Henry Molise connected for the winners.

Theta Chi took the University volleyball championship, defeating Sigma Nu in two games, by scores of 15-3 and 15-7.

In the University ping pong singles championships, Lester Shu took 3 of 5 matches from John Gyekeyesi to capture the honor. The final game was Shu's on merit of a 21-17 score.

Grapplers begin quest of 5th straight title

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

The MSU wrestlers begin competition in the Big Ten Championships this afternoon, seeking an unprecedented fifth straight crown.

First round and quarter-final matches will be fought in an afternoon session beginning at 1 p.m. at Michigan's event's bldg., known as Fritz Crisler Arena.

Semi-final matches will be contested in an evening session at 7:30 tonight, while the consolation and championship finals start at 2 p.m. Saturday. Spartan Coach Grady Peninger sees a trio of teams as his toughest challengers in the tourney.

"Northwestern, Iowa and Michigan all have several outstanding wrestlers and any of the three could put things together and give us a real tough battle," Peninger said.

Scoring in the tournament will be the same as in years past, with 10 points for first place, seven points for second, four points for third and two points for fourth. In addition, a wrestler earns one point for each victory and one extra point for each pin.

The Spartans set league records for total points and individual champions at last year's championships. With a somewhat stronger team and nine events instead of ten, the Spartans could shatter both of those records.

Six or seven Spartans are considered favorites in their events and should earn the No. 1 seeds, which were to be determined at a meeting of the league's coaches Thursday night.

"We should have the top seeds at 118, 134, 142, 150, 167, 190 and heavyweight," Peninger noted.

Judging by the competition in each event and the abilities of the Spartan grapplers, the most likely Spartan winners are Greg Johnson, Tom Milkovich and Keith Lowrance.

Johnson, who was sidelined a season - and a half - with injuries before making his MSU debut, finished the season strongly. He has slowly been regaining the excellent talents he was reputed to have before he was hit by those injuries.

134-pounder Milkovich could become the first freshman champ in many years. Given eligibility by last year's NCAA ruling allowing freshmen to compete in most varsity sports, Milkovich has beaten several of the nation's best wrestlers in his weight class and is considered a strong contender for a national title.

A championship for Lowrance would be his second straight in the Big Ten meet. A poised and polished performer, Lowrance probably ranks as the tourney's most likely champion. Lowrance's only loss of the season came to Iowa State's superb wrestler, Dan Gable.

190-pounder Jack Zindel will have to knock off Wisconsin's unbeaten Russ Hellickson in order to wear his second league crown. Zindel, who leads MSU in pins with eight, seems a good bet to earn MSU one or two extra points with some pins.

With little strong competition at heavyweight, Vic Mittelberg rates a strong choice to win that title.

The 177 spot, which has been manned by four different Spartans over the course of the season will be handled by Gerald Malecek Friday and Saturday. Malecek has been impressive in the few matches he has wrestled for the Spartans. His biggest win was an upset of Michigan's Jesse Rawls, the league reigning 167 champ.

Rawls has been moved down to that weight for the meet and will face the toughest obstacle in Pat Karslake's attempt to keep his unbeaten mark intact.

Defending 123 champ Gary Bissell is only one of five or six grapplers who have a legitimate shot at the 126 title.

Rick Radman at 158 is an outside candidate to beat the same wrestlers that the injured Tom Muir beat last year in winning at 160.

Ron Ouellet missed the last two weekends of competition with a neck injury, but enters the 150 competition with good health and the favorite's role.

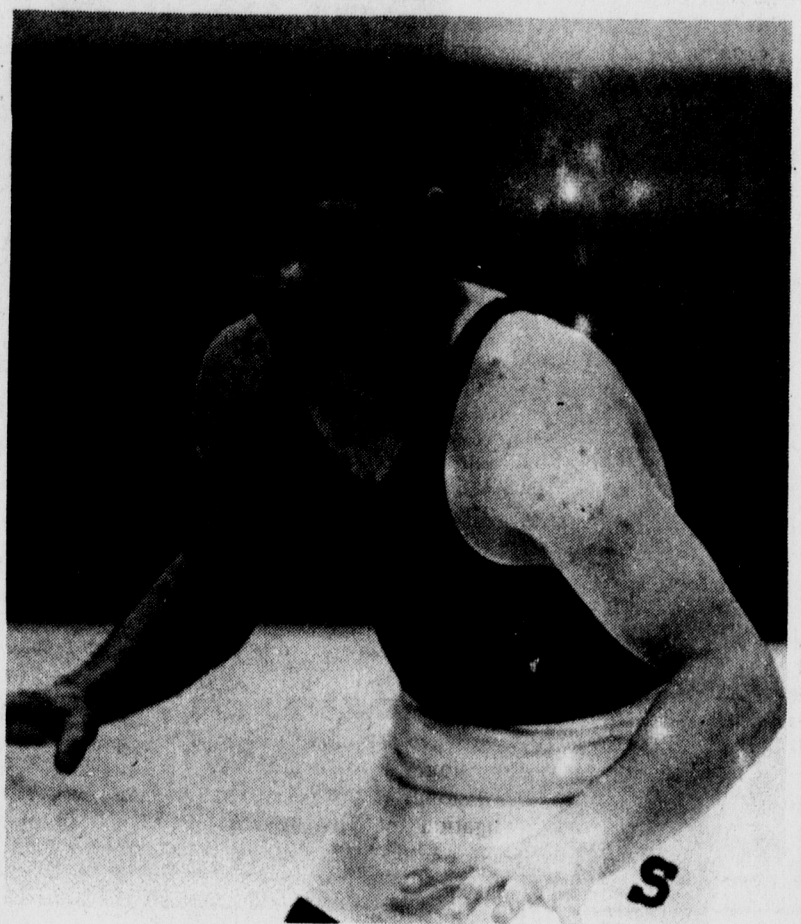

The meet is being held at Michigan to honor Wolverine Coach Cliff Kean, who is retiring after this season after 45 years of coaching at U-M. Kean went into this season with a career coaching mark of 226 - 91 - 10. His teams won 10 Big Ten crowns, including five in the last decade.

His assistant coach since 1966 Rick Bay has already been named to succeed Kean at the end of the season.

SELLOUT CROWDS EXPECTED

Wisconsin ready for MSU invasion

By OLG OLSEN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU and Wisconsin hockey teams take to the ice tonight and Saturday night in the Dane County Coliseum to battle for the first division berth in the final WCHA standings.

Both teams are tied for fourth place at 10-10 in the current nine - team standings. A Spartan sweep of the series would not only clinch a first division finish for them, but also earn MSU a slight advantage in the upcoming WCHA playoffs in Denver.

If the Spartans were to take a pair from Wisconsin, then MSU would play arch - rival Michigan in the opening round of the WCHA playoff, while host, and second - place finisher in the WCHA Denver, would draw a tough assignment - the Badgers.

Wisconsin split with Minnesota on the Gopher's ice last weekend before the largest two - game series crowd in league history. The attendance for the two games was 17,633. The Badger's expect fine turnouts over the weekend against MSU. Estimates show both games to be sellouts, with the capacity of the coliseum more than 8,000.

Badger coach Bob Johnson hopes goalie Bob Vroman will repeat his spectacular performance at Minnesota last Saturday. The Bloomington, Minn., senior registered his first shutout of the season and his fifth career shutout for a school record.

Also praised by Johnson were Vroman's teammates who "back - checked and poke - checked with abandon from start to finish." MSU's sweep over Duluth last weekend was marked by the Spartans' excellent forechecking.

Badger captain Doug McFadyen and Dan Gilchrist "turned in their fifth and sixth games at defense without allowing a goal," Johnson said, while John Jagger and Jeff Rotsch continued their steady performances.

The Spartans will be out to contain the fire - power of the Badgers' scoring leader Murray Heatley. The right wing has scored 13 goals and 11 assists this season. MSU will counter with Don Thompson who has 12 goals and 11 assists in WCHA play.

Badger freshman Norm Cherry has been coming on strong in the last two weeks, Johnson indicated, and has tallied a goal in each of the Badger games against Minnesota.

Center Jim Boyd is another top scorer for the Badgers. Boyd has stuck the puck past the opposition's goalie 12 times during WCHA play and is credited with 10 assists.

Bob Poffenroth and Dick Klispic have been consistent Badger performers, helping the Badgers to an 18-10 overall record. Both play good hard - nosed hockey. Poffenroth and Klispic's forte is their ability to get the puck into scoring position, according to Johnson.

A spokesman from the Badger sports information service said the Wisconsin icers regard MSU as a dangerous team.

"After the Spartans lost those seven games, the major indication seemed to be they had lost everything," the spokesman said, "but all of a sudden MSU is back in the groove and winning games."

Wisconsin has met MSU three times this season. The Badgers whipped the Spartans 6-3 in the Greck Lakes Invitational, but MSU copped 6-4 and 4-3 wins over Wisconsin the following week in East Lansing.

Fencers darkhorse in conference meet

With the regular season completed, the MSU fencers focus their attention at Columbus this weekend in which they will compete in the Big Ten Meet at Ohio State.

"I expect it to be a real dogfight between four teams - Illinois, defending champion Ohio State, Wisconsin, and MSU," Spartan Coach Charles Schmitter speculated. "Ohio State is strong in epee and sabre, while Wisconsin is good in foil and sabre. Illinois' strength is in foil, while ours is in sabre."

Indiana and Minnesota will be the only other schools sending teams.

The Spartans tied for fourth place last year with Indiana, but Schmitter said that his team has a strong chance to move up this time. MSU finished its dual meet season at 6-7, but Schmitter figures that being able to enter only a team's top two men in each weapon could help his club.

"Our lack of depth hurt us in our dual meets," he said, "but we do have two fine individuals in each weapon, so we should do well in the conference meet."

Schmitter said that the seasonal meets were really just warmups for the all important conference championships.

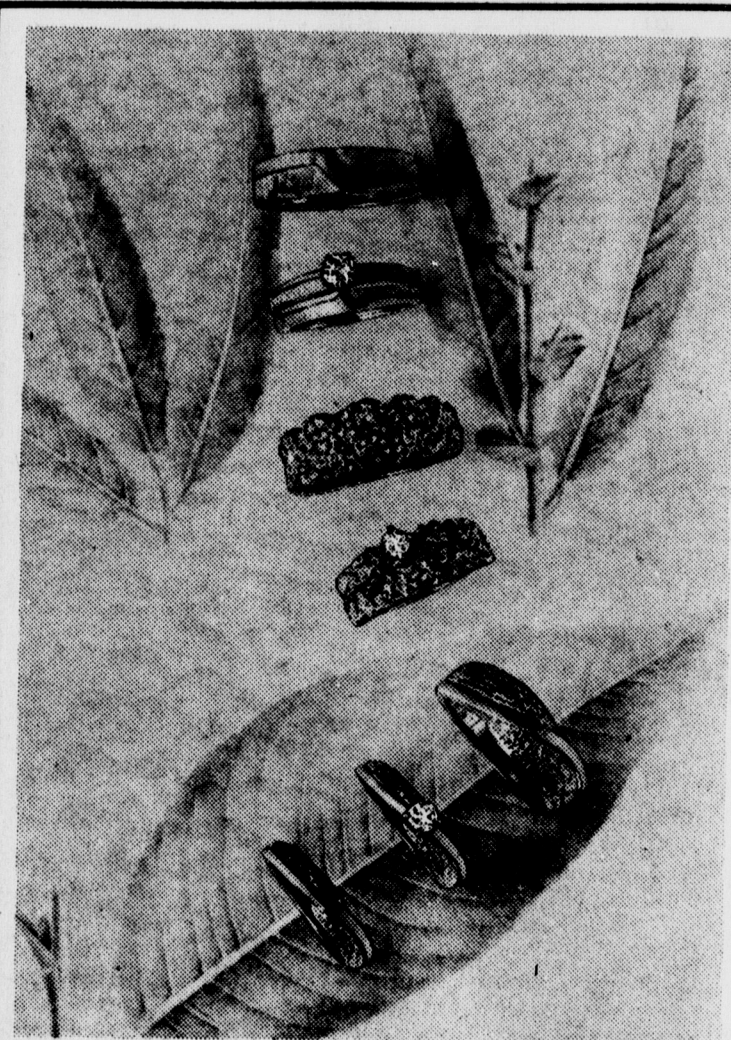

"Last Saturday the boys fenced about a dozen bouts," Schmitter said, "and it was a good indication of what they'll have to face this week."

The only returning Big Ten champion is Indiana's Galinton Bryan in sabre. The first and second place finishers in both foil and epee were all from Ohio State, but have graduated.

Heading the Spartan sabre contingent will be veterans Doug McGaw (24-11) and Bob Kreitsch (22-15). The pair helped lead the Spartans to a 70-49 record in sabre, the best mark of any weapon on the team.

Top men in epee are Paul Herring (24-12) and Bobby Tyler (15-17). "Tyler and Herring both have good chances," Schmitter said, "particularly if Tyler fences up to his ability."

The foil is the least experienced with newcomers Ira Schwartz (22-7) and Kent Neitzert (17-20) both in their first season of varsity competition. However, Schwartz' dual meet record was the best on the team and Schmitter considers him a threat for an individual title.

ENGINEERING MAJORS POLLUTION BEGINS LIFE ENDS

The Metropolitan Sanitary District of Greater Chicago is waging a battle to save Lake Michigan and restore the rivers, streams and waterways in the Chicago area to their once pure state. The Sanitary District is responsible for protection of the water supply from pollution, collection and disposal of domestic and industrial waste, maintaining waterways which carry run-off from storms, and maintaining canals which are the primary link in the inland waterways serving Mid-America, in a territory covering 858 sq. miles and 6 million people.

WE NEED HELP TO FIGHT POLLUTION! Opportunities are available in the engineering and scientific areas. We need Civil, Mechanical, Electrical, and Sanitary Engineers to work in design, construction, maintenance, plant operation, research and development and administration.

rest of the academic community. "This is especially true on those campuses where islands of black students have been artificially created without roots either in the university or in the surrounding community," said the report.

The recommendations of the consulting staff to the Huber Committee included no further legislation to deal with campus problems.

Specifically the report calls for restraint in revoking student scholarships and grants as a punitive measure.

It further calls for clarification of the President's role in universities and for closer relations between trustees and students.

It also calls for consideration of open admissions policies, establishment of student grievance channels, improvement of campus police training and more "sophisticated" curriculums.

"There is no magic answer to protest, no formula which will make it go away," the report said. "The important thing is to cease student protest of a system that needs attention."

Liquor policy challenged

that the resident assistants' duty to enforce the liquor regulation is an implied one, not explicitly stated. He said the R.A.'s feel that by not enforcing the liquor regulations, their effect as counselors will be improved.

"We do not feel our position is wrong, rather we believe the students are mature enough to direct their own behavior," he said.

While a decision from the Student - Faculty judiciary will probably take awhile, Korda said that he expects a lukewarm interpretation.

The resident assistants directly involved said they are prepared for an ultimatum. The ultimatum will be probably be either to enforce the regulations or be fired, he said. If this occurs, the resident assistants will respond at that time.
