Police use tear gas to quell River Rouge racial violence

RIVER ROUGE (UPI) — Police in riot gear and carrying sheathed bayonets used tear gas in a small section of this downriver Detroit suburb Tuesday afternoon to stop groups of young blacks who began throwing rocks in the second straight day of disturbances.

At least nine persons were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct Tuesday afternoon and one person was burned on the arm by a tear gas canister.

The arrests and injury brought to at least 18 the number of persons, including seven policemen, injured and lifted to at least 38 the total arrested. Damage was estimated at $250,000.

Police said they had received reports of "very light" sniper fire Tuesday, but the reported gunfire apparently hit neither policemen nor their vehicles.

The disturbance began Monday afternoon as a racial squabble at River Rouge High School, which has been racially troubled since last February when two schoolboard members tore down posters of black militants at an Afro-American exhibition.

The mayors of River Rouge and Ecorse, which are divided by Visger Street, the scene of Tuesday's and Monday's activities, declared a 6 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew for the second consecutive day. Authorities from neighboring Lincoln Park said they were lifting their curfew.

As the deadline for the curfew approached, police told small groups of black youths to get off the side streets. The youths generally said they would leave when police left the area; the police replied they could not leave until the youths left.

Tear gas canisters littered the street, and police used it when groups showed reluctance to break up.

The curfew and the state of emergency included restrictions on the sale of gasoline and a ban on the sale of all alcohol.

About 300 youths in small groups, who began sending light rock flurries into the street, were dispersed when the tear gas was released. Police then concentrated on keeping apart the industrial city's black and white residents, who are separated by railroad tracks which cross Visger.

River Rouge has a population of 18,000.

On Monday, the disturbance included rock-throwing, looting, the burning of one grocery store and fighting between black and white students.

River Rouge High School, where half the 1,250 pupils are black, was closed indefinitely following Monday's violence.

Ecorse sent all its 4,400 public school students home Tuesday, telling them to return to their six elementary schools and the junior-senior high on Wednesday. School Superintendent Morley Riggs said the schools were closed as a precautionary measure, "until the River Rouge situation stabilizes."

Fighting broke out between black and white students at River Rouge High Monday afternoon after the black students held a mass grievance meeting. The fighting went into the streets, and several stores in a nine-block section of Visger Street were looted and one burned down apparently as a result of a firebomb.

The crowds on the street Monday grew to about 1,000. Police estimated that $250,000 damage was inflicted before tear gas broke up the crowds. Governor Milliken sent 60 state troopers to the scene.

By Tuesday morning, however, workmen had cleaned up the shattered glass and merchants whose windows were broken had boarded up many of them.

In Detroit, which is next to River

Rouge, several hundred students walked out of the nearly all black Southwestern High School and marched several blocks toward River Rouge before they broke up. Merchants along the route said some of their windows were broken.

Technically, state law says that only the governor can declare a state of emergency in Michigan. But Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley said in an opinion in 1968 that local communities have the authority to declare a state of emergency if their charter entrusts the mayor with keeping the peace. The River Rouge charter includes such a clause.

STUDENTS, ADULTS

Wharton urges unity to make better world

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

President Wharton has called on University, government and business leaders to join with today's young people in trying to make the world a "more humane place."

In a speech to the East Lansing Chamber of Commerce Tuesday, Wharton said America's youth has become "our national conscience" on many issues.

"The youth of today have a deep concern with the state of the world which they are about to inherit. And we ought to listen to their concerns. What, after all, is so wrong with wanting to build a better world?" he said.

Wharton said the great majority of today's youth are committed to change and to building a better world.

"Today's young people are far more aware of and interested in social problems, they are more dedicated to serving their fellow man and solving society's problems," he said. "The old image of the egotistical, mixed-up, irresponsible adolescent no longer applies."

Wharton pointed to the increase in student volunteers and volunteer projects and the success of VISTA and the Peace Corps as examples of the changed nature of modern youth.

"Civil rights marches have replaced panty raids, and community service draws a bigger crowd than the homecoming dance on a majority of campuses," he observed.

Wharton said youth's "widespread image of irresponsibility" has contributed to the "communication gap" between generations.

"The term 'student activist' immediately conjures up among adults a picture of demonstrations, violence, window breaking and building defacement, not a boy tutoring an underprivileged child in the ghetto or a girl reading to a blind student," he said.

He noted that the violent protests of the few often overshadow the constructive work of the majority of students. He said the public should be made more aware of the majority who are "pursuing more constructive, mature approaches" to changing society.

"During the February demonstrations over the Chicago trials, university students rampaged on campus after campus, including MSU," he said. "I cannot speak for other universities, but at MSU less than two per cent were involved in the demonstrations and even fewer in violence."

"The majority of students care about our problems. They care enough to commit not just time and personal resources. They are willing to confront our problems face to face in constructive, non-violent ways, problems which many adults choose to ignore."

Gov. Milliken denounces campus revolutionaries

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken said Tuesday that "without question," revolutionary groups in Michigan who want to overthrow government.

Clearly these movements exist and are present," the governor said at his press conference. "The problem is they don't know what they want to do the present government."

He cited a group of MSU students who showed up on the stage while he was giving last week at MSU shouting revolution, overthrow the government," in example of these revolutionary groups.

"These groups are wrong in their aims," he said. "They cannot be tolerated, and we will not allow an overthrow to happen."

He added that he could not decide whether Michigan was the "center" of these revolutionary groups but that the state is definitely a source.

In reference to the racial disturbances in River Rouge Monday, the governor said he has taken no steps himself, other than sending in state troopers, to settle the situation which he described as "very tense."

"I would urge all students to recognize that violence will not help them achieve their objectives at all," he said.

Milliken said he sent letters to every mayor and college and university president in Michigan several months ago, outlining specific steps to take in the event of civil disturbances. He declined, however, to outline the steps.

"This means there is a clear understanding between this office and every mayor and every president," he added. "We want no breakdown of communication in case of a state of emergency."

Milliken also voiced complete support at the news conference of a decision by Senate Republicans to cut $24 million from his proposed budget for 1970-71.

Milliken's original budget proposal totaled $1.755 billion, but Senate Republicans have decided it must be cut to $1.731 billion in order to be balanced for the next fiscal year.

He said the move was a "necessary" one dictated by the legislative slowness in enacting a cigarette tax increase and a tax loophole closing package as well as unexpected increases in welfare spending. "Cut we must," he said, "but it's difficult to decide where. It would be premature to suggest where the cuts may be, but no department is going to be left out of the close scrutiny this will require."

In another area, the governor said he expects only four of his nine educational reform proposals to be passed this year.

"I'm optimistic — but realistic," he said. "This is a very complex package, but the climate of understanding is growing in Michigan."

The governor also announced that he sees no indication of when the fishing ban will be lifted in Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River. He said the ban will remain in effect at least until testing of fish is completed.

'MEETS HIGH STANDARDS'

ABA committee OKs nomination of Blackmun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judge Harry A. Blackmun received the enthusiastic support of the American Bar Assn. Tuesday as the Senate Judiciary Committee prepared to open hearings on his nomination to the Supreme Court.

Following an investigation billed in advance as extensive, the ABA's standing committee on the federal judiciary reported in a letter to Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., that Blackmun "meets high standards of professional competence, temperament and integrity."

Where two prior nominees failed, the 61-year-old federal appeals court judge apparently faces a trouble-free horizon. Committee approval and Senate confirmation may be as swift as that accorded Blackmun's boyhood chum from Minnesota, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger. Chairman Eastland has only one witness scheduled for the hearing, Blackmun himself. Pleasantries will be offered by Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., and Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., in whose district the judge resides.

Last June 3 Burger testified and was approved unanimously by Eastland's committee all in one day. The Senate completed confirmation, 74 to 3, on June 9 and Burger was sworn in as chief justice June 23.

The fate of President Nixon's next two nominees for the court was entirely different. Judges Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. and G. Harrold Carswell labored through prolonged hearings and then were rejected by the Senate.

The ABA's report on Blackmun, in a letter signed by Lawrence E. Walsh of New York, said scores of judges, lawyers, law school deans and students had been interviewed with only two sour replies.

Walsh, a former federal judge who is chairman of the ABA committee, reported also that some of the people interviewed commented on Blackmun's lack of a national reputation. They said he wrote unduly long opinions and was slower than other judges in disposing of cases.

But Walsh added, "Lack of national reputation is not unusual for highly competent federal judges whose work is primarily in their own circuit." And, he said, Blackmun assured ABA officials that he "recognizes the need for an associate justice of the Supreme Court to work rapidly and deal with an enormous volume of work under great time pressure."

Laird predicts '70 draft could drop to 150,000

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird said Tuesday draft this year may be as low as 150,000 — about 100,000 under original plans because of troop withdrawals from nam.

This is the lowest estimate yet made. We will be able to further reduce the calls for this calendar year," Laird said in a talk to a group of business, civic and other leaders who have been touring army installations as guests of the Defense Dept.

Laird said this year's draftees total could fall as low as 150,000, but he left the possibility that the number might be as large as 180,000.

Laird calls this year through May total 150,000. This suggests that quotas could be to an average of more than 9,000 a month for the last seven months of the Laird said this is "a direct result" of less in Vietnamization and concurrent in overall U.S. arms strength.

The draft took nearly 290,000 men last year with sharp reductions setting in late 69 as the Vietnam troop withdrawal boiled.

Another aspect of the draft, Laird said, the random selection system is being implemented this month for the first time in a period of 60 to 90 days of selection was necessary.

Other matters, Laird said: The amount of enemy supplies flowing through Cambodia to North and Viet Cong forces has declined markedly following the over in government in Phnom Penh.

He did not elaborate, but aides said he was referring to the closing of the Port of Sihanoukville as an inlet for enemy supplies, permitted under the ousted

Senate airs abortion issue

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The Senate began debate Tuesday on the controversial abortion reform issue, but indications were the legislation will have to overcome numerous obstacles before coming to a final vote.

Backers of liberalized abortion laws are hopeful and optimistic a decision can be reached this week on the bill sponsored by Sen. John McCauley, D - Wyandotte.

However, the bill, which would permit the question of an abortion to be decided between a woman and her doctor, restricted by a 90-day term of pregnancy clause and a 90-day residency requirement, will have to withstand the onslaught of several proposed amendments. Substitutes to the bill may also be offered.

The upper chamber already has one substitute before it, hammered out in the Health and Welfare Committee, chaired by Sen. N. Lorraine Beebe, R - Dearborn.

"This bill is a demand that we get rid of our archaic and hypocritical law," Mrs. Beebe said.

"It puts the decision where it belongs, between a woman and her doctor," she explained.

However, Sen. Basil Brown, D - Highland Park, said he "failed to see why residency should enter in" if the decision is a medical one.

Mrs. Beebe replied that the residency requirement was inserted to alleviate fears that Michigan would become an "abortion mill."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Vanderlaan, R - Grand Rapids, said, "The chances are better than average the abortion measure will pass the Senate."

Even though the Senate rejected a less liberal bill last year, Vanderlaan said there is more information and public support for abortion reform now than a year ago, and action by other states is likely to spur action in Michigan.

Mrs. Beebe, a long-time advocate of abortion reform, also predicted the eventual passage of the bill.

"I think for the first time, Michigan is facing realities.

There is so much going on now, we're on the edge of having to do something," she said.

"It is a very emotional issue, but if we try to keep cool and calm, I think we can pass it," she said.

Mrs. Beebe said the issue should be resolved this week, one way or the other. But she warned that if it is defeated, "it will just keep coming up again."

If the bill does pass the Senate, it is likely to get a stiffer challenge in the House although Mrs. Beebe said, "it looks better now than three months ago. A number of House members have come to the hearings and people throughout the state have been talking to their representatives."

Dickerson lets Free park stay

The residents of Free, a people's park between Wells and Erickson halls, were pressured Monday night — but not by University officials.

"As long as they are not damaging property they can stay," Milton Dickerson, vice president for student affairs, said Tuesday. "I understand they are happy, and we are not in the business of making people unhappy."

Pressure did come from the MSU Anarchists, sponsors of the Friday motorcycle ride for peace to the Capitol.

The MSU Anarchists were at Free Monday night trying to "work up" the people, but they didn't have any luck, Debbie Comstock, Norfolk, Mass., freshman said.

"The people here are not radicals," she said. "They just want to come here to have a good time."

Signs requesting participants for the 'cycle rally are hanging throughout the park.

"But people's park isn't for any political reasons," a student named David said.

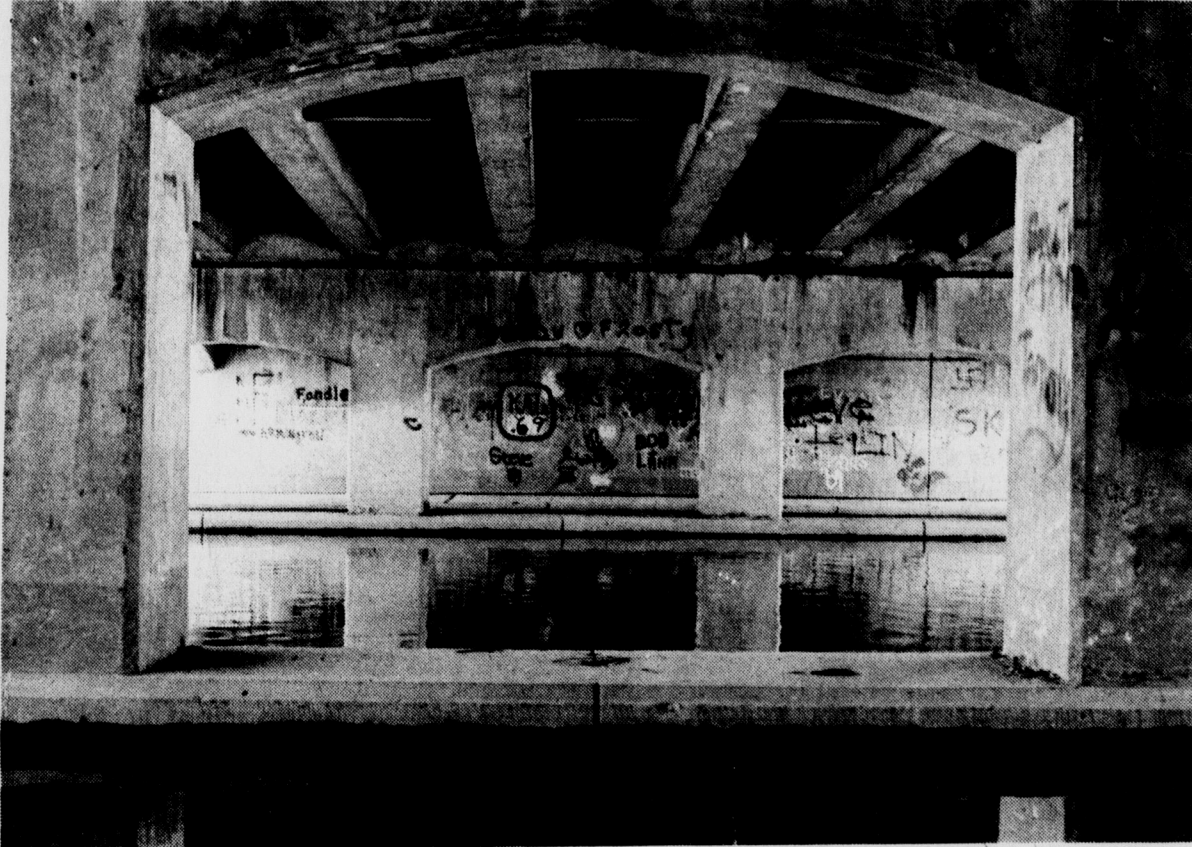

Dickerson said his main concern is keeping the campus beautiful, and he is hoping the residents of Free will keep it that way.

A spokesman from the MSU Dept. of Public Safety said several men from that department have been to the park, but they have no plans of interfering.

the Capitol in support of legalizing marijuana.

"We're calling upon all legislators and everyone who uses marijuana to stand up for their rights," David Sinclair, Panther party chief of staff, said. "It is time for everyone to stand up for what he believes."

The Panthers are also using the rally to draw support to free party leader John Sinclair, who is in the Marquette State Penitentiary serving 10 years for possession of marijuana.

Sinclair's wife, Magdalene, said, "If the laws are not changed, we will declare our own independence, and call for free grass for everybody and the release of all political prisoners." The Panthers were joined by

Sen. Roger Craig, D - Dearborn, who said, "I submit marijuana is no worse than alcohol. I would say that what we're doing is balancing the drug of our generation (alcohol) with the drug of the present generation."

He supports legalization of marijuana with certain age and other restrictions similar to those imposed on the use of alcohol.

Craig said he thinks it is valid for young people to view the nine to ten year imprisonment of John Sinclair for marijuana possession as a political move when Detroit policemen who attempt rape and murder can get off by paying $5,000.

"These are the kind of contradictions that cause young people to not believe in the political process," Craig said. "We are in grave danger of being able to say that the present system doesn't work."

Panther Minister of Information Ken Kelley said Sinclair was being declined rights given to other prisoners.

He said only members of the immediate family can visit Sinclair and that three national publications were denied interviews with him.

"We are here to tell the people that we don't expect favor, only equal justice," Kelley said. The Panthers said the marijuana laws are used to suppress a growing culture.

Milliken refuses plea to lift St. Clair ban

By UPI

State Rep. David M. Serotkin, R - Mount Clemens, has asked Gov. Milliken to lift his ban on sport fishing in Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River.

Milliken banned both commercial and sport fishing in the waters when the danger of mercury contamination was discovered in them.

"I think the real question is whether or not individual citizens are intelligent enough to understand the danger and be trusted to throw back fish they have caught or whether they must be protected from themselves by a state imposed fishing ban," Serotkin said in a letter to Milliken.

Milliken told a news conference today the ban will remain in effect pending the results of studies currently being conducted to determine the level of mercury contamination of fish from those waters.

Ambassadors of the Big Four nations wound up their second meeting in Berlin on the status of that divided city Tuesday and agreed to meet again May 14, indicating a speedup in the tempo to the talks.

There was no sign, however, of a quick accord on reducing tensions over the city. The discussions were an exchange of views, which have not yet reached the negotiating level.

Police kept watch Tuesday over the 8-year-old nephew of Queen Elizabeth II and the 19-year-old daughter of a member of Parliament following continued anonymous warnings of underworld kidnap plots.

Although police have received warnings of the possible kidnapping of several other prominent persons, they say any of the reports are "not really worth worrying about."

The Soviet Union is considering a tough new law banning all forms of industrial water pollution and containing a measure to prevent natural depletion of water resources.

"It is banned to discharge into water industrial sewage and other untreated waters," the government newspaper vestia reported.

Benito Mussolini, onetime idol of Italy's Fascist faithful, was gunned down by Communist partisans 25 years ago Tuesday. But newspapers in Italy virtually ignored the anniversary, and so did most of the nation.

But Mussolini's following is still strong in Italy. In the last election a million and a half blackshirted followers voted the Fascist ticket. And their sons battle young communists with clubs and fists on campuses and in city streets across the land.

National News

The President's chief economist said Tuesday the economic slowdown that began last year should mean a slowing in price increases later this year.

Paul McCracken, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors, explained the delay saying that price-making forces move slowly through the economy.

Earlier this week former economic advisers to the late President John F. Kennedy also said they felt the economy was presently cooling off and that this would be the proper time for price restraints.

A California law enforcement official called Tuesday for tighter military security to halt weapon thefts which said have placed guns, bazookas, grenades and plastic explosives in the hands of revolutionary militants.

Fred L. Hartley, president of Union Oil Co., said Tuesday the government should require automobile manufacturers to impose a 91 octane requirement on new car engines starting in 1972.

Hartley said this guarantee would give the oil industry confidence to make the investment required to produce lead additives in gasoline which clog air pollution control devices now being developed.

Tetraethyl lead improves the octant rating of gasoline. Costs more to make a low-lead gas and that fuel cannot be used in current high performance cars which require a high octane gas.

Motorists who apply for a new driver's license beginning June 1 must also apply for a separate motorcycle endorsement if they want to operate two wheeled motorized bikes on state highways.

Under the new law, those persons who operate motorcycles will have to pay $3 the first time and $1.50 renewals to operate motorcycles. A driving test for beginners and a written test for all applicants also will be required.

If an applicant passes the required tests and pays his fee, the vehicle office clerk will make a check in a box on the driver's license authorizing motorcycle driving.

State officials announced a crackdown on illegal billboards intended to stop what they called "pollution eyesores" along Michigan's freeway system.

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley said the first step in the drive came Tuesday when the owners of 19 signs along a 55-mile stretch of I-96 and I-496 between Lansing and Farmington were ordered to tear down the signs.

The 1966 law bars signs within 660 feet of the nearest edge of the right of way of any interstate or primary highway in the state, with the exception of some business and commercial areas.

S. Viets to move into Cambodia?

SAIGON (AP) — Thousands of South Vietnamese troops, with armored personnel carriers and artillery, have been deployed in the Tay Ninh area northwest of Saigon, possibly for new thrusts into Cambodia.

The buildup was observed Monday and Tuesday by two Associated Press newsmen, who were barred from a South Vietnamese regimental headquarters 18 miles from the border.

"You have to get out of here, this is all classified," said an American colonel, the top adviser to the South Vietnamese 46th Infantry Regiment, 25th Division.

"We are going to organize operations along the border to prevent attacks against Tay Ninh," said one high source.

Ever since the overthrow of Prince Norodom Sihanouk as Cambodia's leader on March 18, the South Vietnamese have been making raids against North Vietnamese and Viet Cong base camps inside Cambodia.

It is from base camps and staging areas inside Cambodia that the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong stage attacks into South Vietnam. Both U.S. and South Vietnamese officials estimate there are 40,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops operating inside Cambodia.

Provincial Highway 13 leading from Tay Ninh westward to the Cambodian border was blocked off to newsmen, apparently to keep them from observing the South Vietnamese operations.

The South Vietnamese have barred newsmen from the frontier in three other major forays into Cambodia at other points farther south along the border. Tay Ninh is about 55 miles northwest of Saigon.

Informed sources said intelligence was piling up indicating that the Communist command plans to launch within the next 72 hours the second phase of its so-called "X" campaign. The first phase was opened April 1 with more than 100 attacks across South Vietnam.

More than one regiment of enemy troops, up to 3,000 men, was reported in the Tay Ninh area where the South Vietnamese are missing.

"We're almost sure of an enemy high point either tonight, tomorrow night or the next night," said one source. "But there's always the possibility the enemy might react differently."

Other sources said they expected the heaviest actions in Tay Ninh Province and two other border provinces to the east — Binh Long and Phuoc Long.

One captured document mentioned a high point of attacks to coincide with May Day, celebrated by Communist nations. Sources said there was a likelihood of rocket attacks on Saigon.

A directive from the Communist command captured earlier this month said the primary task in 1970 is to frustrate Vietnamization and pacification. These programs call for South Vietnam to take over the major burden of combat and to win over the countryside to the government.

The directive called for violent and uninterrupted attacks and mass uprisings in a succession of campaigns and high points.

In the latest reported war action, the U.S. Command announced the loss of five aircraft with 15 Americans killed and six wounded.

Six Americans were killed and 55 wounded in eight scattered fights and a half dozen enemy rocket and mortar attacks, according to battlefield communiques covering the past 24 hours.

House member criticizes Laird's facts as misleading

WASHINGTON (AP) — Setting the stage for a renewed fight over the safeguard antimissile system, a House critic accused Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird Tuesday of making misleading statements on the Soviet missile buildup.

Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn., said Laird gave Congress a graph showing a rapid, straight-line Soviet missile buildup, but he said the administration's own data indicate the Soviet buildup has been leveling off for the past two years.

Giving a preview of the opponents' case against

Safeguard money in a $20.24-billion defense bill on which the House begins debate Wednesday, Fraser said Congress is responsible for controlling military spending, "but we can't do it when the secretary of defense makes statements that in my view are misleading."

But Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., calling the current U.S. Soviet disarmament talks a ridiculous exercise, said Soviet nuclear megatonnage has increased fourfold in the past five years while U.S. megatonnage has decreased 40 per cent.

"And the American people should just as well know it," Rivers added.

He described as courageous Laird's disclosure last week that the Soviets have nearly matched the 1,710 U.S. long-range missiles and could surpass U.S. submarine-launched missiles in the mid-1970's.

Asked if there is any way to halt the spiraling U.S. - Soviet arms race, Rivers replied that if some method of mutual arms inspection could be found the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) would not be needed.

"I don't have any faith in them," Rivers said of the SALT talks. "We're not in a good position."

Fraser and Rivers testified before the House Rules Committee which cleared the way for House debate beginning Wednesday on a $20.24-billion procurement authorization for missiles, planes, ships and other military hardware.

Besides accusing Laird of misleading statements, Fraser said the request in the bill for

Beer mark-up headaches seen

By UPI

The Michigan Consumers Council said today that if a House bill were passed to set a uniform markup price on beer at 22 per cent, consumers would pay $14 million more for beer annually.

Currently the average markup price in Michigan is 15 per cent, the council said.

"If this legislation were to become law, retail outlets selling beer where consumption on the premises is not allowed would be forced to raise their prices significantly," said Dianne McKaig, council director. "Such increases would be the result of artificial price regulations by government, rather than natural economic factors."

Miss McKaig said price fixing is "basically incompatible with the free enterprise system and if some retailers are able to sell beer at a lower price, it should be their right to do so."

Some small package beer dealers have complained large supermarket chains have used beer as a "loss leader" item, making it almost impossible for small dealers to compete with the low prices.

"The bill could also cause a potentially enormous increase in costs to consumers of malted beverages, soft drinks, ice cream or other items purchased in retail grocery stores," Miss McKaig said.

The bill, introduced by Rep. William B. Fitzgerald, D-Detroit, passed the house June 10 and currently is under study by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Petitioning set for contract

Petitions supporting the contract method of tuition payment are available from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. today in front of Bessey Hall.

Petitions also are being circulated in residence halls.

The Committee on Student Tuition (COST) will collect the petitions and present them to the board of trustees.

Spiraling tuition costs not solved by contract

A panacea for rising tuition costs has been discovered by a group of out-of-state students. Four-year tuition contracts have been proposed to give all students a fairly exact idea of how much they will have to pay throughout their stay at MSU.

Petitions are now circulating on campus asking the trustees to enter into contracts for a fixed tuition rate applicable for four consecutive years after the student enters the University. Students should, however, consider the feasibility of tuition contracts before they sign too many petitions.

Many misconceptions are being spread about the funding of the University. This institution receives its general education funds from two main sources, state appropriations and tuition fees. This money is used to keep the University functioning. All other programs are usually funded by special capital outlays.

At the beginning of the year the University makes out a budget that would best fit the needs of the University. This budget is then submitted to the state legislature where it is adjusted to fit the fiscal realities of the State of Michigan. The monetary proposal given to the legislature is by no means a minimum budget.

The legislature does with the suggested budget as it sees fit. As a rule it cuts those programs which it does not deem necessary. It is frequently thought, and falsely so, that tuition hikes are used to make up for the amount sliced by the legislature. Actually tuition hikes are used to raise the income of the University to an operative level.

It is impossible to anticipate the mood of the legislature four years from now. To assure the operation of the University, an overcharge would have to be made. Otherwise, if the legislature should decide to have a real field day some year with the MSU budget, the entire campus would suffer.

The contract idea also fails to take into consideration the fact that many students do not attend MSU for four consecutive years. The contract system as now proposed, while helping some students, would penalize those who only attended MSU two or three years. Adjustments to the plan to make it fair for everyone would be complex enough to defy human understanding.

We fully appreciate the fact that most freshmen entered this University expecting to pay some fixed cost for their education. Now many of them as upperclassmen are facing financial crises because of the rising tuition rates. This is unfair to them.

The present proposals, however, are based on misconceptions about the funding of the University. While the concept of a tuition contract is attractive, more work needs to be done on this concept.

The principle of all prospective students being informed of how much their education will cost is sound, if cost of living is also taken into consideration. Further investigation of the idea of tuition contracts is desirable, but the complexity of this proposal should be appreciated by those who are pushing it.

New postal regulation undermines freedoms

The Post Office Dept. can now open incoming overseas mail and inspect it for things like pornography, lottery tickets and narcotics.

The Post Office and the Customs Bureau posted notice of the new procedure in the Federal Register Feb. 3 and allowed 15 days for protests, but it seems no one protested, so now the new procedure is supposed to go into effect.

Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., plans to deliver a Senate speech protesting the new proposal, which he views as increased government snooping under the Nixon administration.

Less than one per cent of all overseas mail is considered suspect. The procedure now is that "suspect" mail is held by the Post Office and a notice is sent to the addressee asking permission to open and inspect it. If the addressee doesn't reply or says no, the letter is returned to the sender.

Under the new procedure our mail will now come through the rain and snow and sleet — and under the inspection of the Customs Bureau.

When Ervin questioned the Post Office Dept., the general counsel David Nelson said that the department has made no final decision on the proposal. Nelson defended the department's right to open foreign mail secretly or at will, saying that the Supreme Court had not banned the practice.

It seems the reason the Supreme Court made no comment on the proposal is that no one mentioned it to them. It seems no one was aware of the proposal until it was announced it was supposed to go into effect.

We should be aware of the fact that our country isn't so free, that numerous government employees read files on our income tax and census forms, and that our "free" country has now passed a "no knock" law for reading our over seas mail.

We often wonder how haunted people from the Communist countries must feel to have government inspection of the mails as we sit back comfortably protected by our Constitution, the Bill of Rights, our right to vote and the Postal Code which says our mail is our private property protected by the government.

While the Post Offices squishes, bends, sniffs and, if we remain the unaware and silent majority, opens and inspects our mail.

OUR READERS' MIND

Criticizing the critics critique

To the Editor:

It's becoming a bit tiring to see Robert Kipper's movie reviews in the State News. In fact, all one would have to do is turn to Newsweek, Time and/or the New York Times to find practically identical criticisms and plaudits of current films.

While Kipper attacks Antonioni (director of "Zabriskie Point") for dullness, isn't it possible that Antonioni intended just that effect? Kipper's role - playing movie reviewer status shines through ostentatiously as he exclaims that "the film was supposed to be Antonioni's definitive vision of American life as he perceived it during two visits here."

Who or which people made this statement of Antonioni's intent in "Zabriskie Point"? Surely, Antonioni never proclaimed that his latest movie would be "definitive." If anything, this distinguished director merely sought to place his subjective understanding of a facet of American life on film - period.

I am - in simple terms - self-righteously attacking Kipper's attempt at "rubricizing." ("Rubricizing" is a Maslowian term for categorizing, classifying, fractionalizing, i.e., one sees a painting and calls out, "Hey, I know that one. It's a Matisse.") The tragedy in rubricizing is the loss of an entity as an entity. A painting is no longer a work of art, something to marvel at, a wholeness to perceive and feel; instead, it becomes merely another painting from the Impressionist school, a "good" or "bad" painting, John Doe's "best" effort.

In a similar manner, a movie reviewer like Kipper rips, tears, attacks, partitions, separates a movie and its contents. Hence, he creates a monstrosity - a movie you can neatly put away in the woodwork, label "good" or "bad," and quickly forget.

It would be extremely worthwhile and infinitely more enjoyable to go to a movie and see, feel, laugh, cry, scream, remain mute, shout. But after reading many of the critic's appraisals (actually "ego trips" for reviewers who just reflect their subjective biases in print), it is almost impossible to absorb an art work as a whole. One often finds the necessity to think: "Well, the critics say that that means this, this means that, or does that mean that?" etc.

If a movie is dull perhaps that is saying something about the lives we lead, the structures we construct, the roles we continue to play.

Playing follow the leader

To the Editor:

The editors of the State News and the creators of the Snyder - Phillips commune movement (State News Editorial, 4-22-70) deserve special recognition and commendation for providing the University community with a brilliant example of the "new generation leadership."

In view of this manifestation of a new breed of logic, educational philosophy, social consciousness, and social action, the following editorial parable is directed to the attention of this educational community. It was written by Rex Allen Redifer and published in the Indiana Daily Student, February 6, 1958.

"A parade was passing in the street, and from the crowded throng that watched a voice was heard to cry: 'Beware you fools, you march the wrong way. That street leads nowhere - it is a dead-end.'"

"The paraders paused - alarmed - 'But can this be?' they thought, and looked as one toward the front, where tall and proud, their handsome leader made his way."

"He must be going the right way," they thought, 'for look at how well he marches and look how tall he stands - oh yes, he is most certainly going the right way.'

"The handsome leader paused - alarmed - 'But, can this be,' he thought, and stole a glance behind.

"I must be going the right way," he thought, 'for look how many follow me. Oh yes - I am most certainly going the right way.' ... and he marched on."

Forgotten man

To the Editor:

In Thursday's front-page article the presence of Robert Ross, sandwiched between Hart and Milliken, failed to be recognized. This deletion was most unfortunate since what Ross had to say far outshone the rather rhetorical performances of Hart and Milliken. Of course, Ross doesn't have the status of "senator" or "governor" and accordingly shouldn't receive equal press coverage, even though his merits surpass the questionable qualities of those public servants. Right? I trust that those present will remember the "ecopolitical" (whatever that means) speeches and that glimpse of reality amidst the self-conscious and newly acquired public images.

the occurrence of ovulation, chemical tests to determine normalcy of endocrine function, and X-ray and other tests to determine if the fallopian tubes (the tubes carrying the egg) are open. Sometimes direct visualization of the ovaries is required. As an aside, while gonorrhea is not usually thought of as being a very serious disease, it often causes infertility due to chronic infection and blockage of the fallopian tubes.

In the man, tests include determinations of endocrine function and examination of the semen and a sperm count. Only rarely is a testicular biopsy resorted to. A gynecologist is the physician a woman would see if sterility were suspected, and a urologist is usually the physician who performs the necessary tests on a man.

My roommate has read an article on cholesterol which states that one must only eat what flies, swims or grows. Therefore, she eats no meat, butter, eggs, bread, etc. I honestly expect to find her either dead or "rubber-boned" and toothless after a few months. What are your views on the matter? I believe people need to eat a balanced diet including a moderate amount of fats.

Bread? Your absolutely frightening letter was received while I was eating my usual lunch of elm bark and grasshoppers. I was so upset I didn't even finish my paramecium soup. It turns out that a balanced diet is needed, but many people make the assumption that the usual American fare is balanced. In reality, our diets probably contain a vast excess of fats. For some people this makes little difference, but depending on heredity and other factors, it is likely that part of the population hastens the occlusion of their coronary arteries by the food they eat.

It is possible to eat an entirely balanced diet without ever resorting to the use of any meat (including flying and swimming meat). Large numbers of vegetarians attest to this fact.

The fats that most people try to avoid are those known as saturated fats. They are found in most types of animal fat and certain types of vegetable fat. By using things like corn oil margarine, lean meats, skim milk, and avoiding large numbers of eggs and excess amounts of fatty foods, rather than cutting down considerably on fat intake. There is no reason to think that one would turn rubber-boned or become toothless. I side with your roommate in this matter. For further information on low fat diets write to: The American Heart Association, 44 E. 23rd St., New York, N.Y. 10010.

I recently went off contraceptive pills after taking them for two years. At the expected time of my non-pill period I had the usual signs, such as cramps, but I did not have a period. Is this quite usual? Also, I would like to know just as soon as possible if I might be pregnant. When is the soonest a woman can know for sure if she is or isn't by urinalysis?

It is not unusual for there to be a delay in the resumption of normal menstrual cycles after the pill is stopped. Unfortunately, people often do not start on alternate effective contraception as soon as they stop the pill and an undesired pregnancy occurs. Pregnancy tests by urinalysis are positive about six weeks after conception. This will correspond to the time of the second missed period. Before making any assumptions about what's going on, I suggest you check with your physician.

Structural change not a solution

Marriage and the family in America are caught in a social whirlwind of change and transition. Their futures are unpredictable, but the emergence of experimentation with the once "frozen" mode of married and family togetherness has indicated a need for massive reappraisal.

When U.S. statistics relate that one in four marriages end in divorce, can there be any doubt that divorce has become the most widely accepted means of coping with marital problems? When a recent government study reveals that one-third of all first-born children in the United States from 1964 through 1966 were illegitimate (thereby forcing many hasty marriages), need anyone question why one in four marriages end in divorce?

The under-30 generation in the 1960s looked to communal living for marital happiness. But the success and acceptance ratios of the commune movement remain low.

Their number, however, has grown sufficiently to encourage publication of a journal, Modern Utopian. In 1969, the journal listed names and locations of almost 200 communes, but it is estimated today that four to six times as many actually exist in the United States.

Although the types of communes vary from agricultural subsistence to religious, many are organized for the purpose of group marriage. Yet even within this classification the concepts of group marriage vary extensively, indicating that the types of communes are as varied as the number.

The indication of variety, however, is not a condemnation. According to author-counselor Herbert Otto, communes have commonly acquired new meaning and definition. He claims that the emphasis today is on "the exploration of alternate models of togetherness, the shaping of growing dynamic environments, the exploration of new life-styles, and the enjoyment of living together."

While these objectives are beyond reproach, one major disintegrative pressure fragmenting communes is the hostility of surrounding communities. People perceive communes as threats to their own undefined notions of marital happiness and respond accordingly with anger and fear. But communes also fail when conflicts, jealousies and disagreements from within cloud the objectives.

Amid these failures, what can be done about the divorce rate and the continuing inability to cope with marital problems? Marriage has always involved an element of chance, but the odds for success have decreased to a point where Russian roulette offers more of a chance for survival than does marriage.

Perhaps the failures in marriage are not implicit in the structure. For example, why should polygamy succeed where monogamy doesn't if people continue using divorce as a problem solver? And why should a commune succeed where the family unit fails, if conflicts and jealousies are still not resolved?

To suggest that monogamy and the family unit must be replaced today by other structures is a classic example of "treating the symptoms but not the disease."

The massive reappraisal of marriage and the family which is so much a part of this era must extend beyond a study of the "symptoms." Problems exist in people, not in structures, and experimental models have been abused by people who consider a change in structure as the end in itself.

A framework is only as significant as that which it supports. Marriage as an institution is worthy of support only insofar as its opportunities for individual growth and development are recognized.

Director anticipates limited job selection

By CHAS FLOWERS
State News Staff Writer

The director of the Placement Bureau Tuesday gave a dim job forecast for spring graduating seniors.

"The economy climate has changed substantially and this is immediately reflected in the job market," John Shingleton told the Faculty Club. "This year is definitely an employer's market."

He said graduates cannot be as selective about jobs this year as they were in the past.

"Today employers are able to look for and get a better quality graduate for their dollar," Shingleton said. "This is a year when employers are looking for quality rather than quantity."

One of the groups the job squeeze will hit the hardest is teaching majors, Shingleton said.

"Not all education graduates will have a job of their choice on graduation this year," he said.

Shingleton cited statistics compiled by the Michigan Education Assn. which show a decreasing demand in relation to supply of teaching majors.

Listed with a high demand in relation to supply were teachers in early elementary, industrial arts, mentally handicapped, paraprofessionals, women's physical education, remedial reading and science.

Those teachers who have topped the job market and are in a position of highest supply in relation to demand are: social science, history, later elementary, general special education, English, home economics, biology, speech and art teachers.

Shingleton blamed cutbacks in government programs for much of the falling demand for technical graduates, especially Ph.D.'s.

"Research scientists with better credentials are now having to compete for the glamor jobs," he said, "when only a few years ago employers were scrambling all over the place to try to hire any candidate available."

Graduates with masters degrees still hold a strong card over those with bachelors, Shingleton said.

"We find that most employers still pay a sizeable premium to hire them," he said. "In business a person with an M.B.A. will start on the average of about $200 to $250 per month higher than a person with only a bachelors in the same discipline."

With the exception of accounting, which he said is "continuing its meteoric rise to the top," Shingleton said, "graduates in business and liberal arts have less to expect than their counterparts of past years."

"Most college graduates' salaries will go up approximately two to three per cent over last year," he said. "This compares with a five to seven per cent average annual increase for these same people during the past six or seven years."

Shingleton said black graduates, though in short supply, are "still in heavy demand."

"Every black student coming out with a degree will have ample opportunity," he said.

The graduate of today can more easily try to fit his job to his life-style than was the case with depression graduates, Shingleton told the faculty members.

Pessimist

John D. Shingleton, director of the Placement Bureau, forecast a dim job market for spring graduates at the Tuesday meeting of the Faculty Club. This year employers have the upper hand, he said, and students can't afford to be too selective.

SOUND WARNING

Dems push delegate reform

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Democratic reform commission warned Tuesday that failure to revise delegate selection procedures by 1972 could result in a flight to third and fourth parties — "or the anti-politics of the streets."

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., the commission chairman, called the recommendations for reform "our answer to that sense of powerlessness and division within the party" that was climaxed by the turbulent events surrounding its 1968 national convention.

The South Dakota Democrat released a letter from Lawrence F. O'Brien, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, which called the group's work useful and said he would recommend to the executive committee May 22 "that procedures be established for implementation of the report by the Democratic National Committee and the 1972 Convention."

"As I read it, it's an endorsement," McGovern said of O'Brien's letter. "In the absence of reform," McGovern told reporters, "I would anticipate a large number of challenges" of delegates in 1972, warning that the difficulties of 1968 "will be compounded if we fail to carry out reform."

Some 40 states have set up their own party reform groups, and a number have already taken steps to revise party procedures. Commission aides said all states will have to make some changes in existing procedures.

Principal recommendations of the commission, adopted in open sessions last November, would bar a series of practices used by many states to prevent open participation in the delegate selection process; would require party participation by 18-year-olds and that future delegations include young people, women and minority group members "in reasonable relationship" to their percentage of the state's populations; and would provide for representation of political minorities in composing delegations.

The commission is one of two created by the 1968 convention. The other one, headed by Rep. James G. O'Hara, D-Mich., is studying party and convention rules.

McGovern again took the position that only the next convention — not the national committee — can review the guidelines of the commission.

"We believe that our guidelines place no unreasonable demands on state parties," the report stated.

McGovern said that since the guidelines were distributed to state party leaders several months ago, "The reaction has been uniformly good."

Some 95 per cent of the mail has been favorable, he added, and "We have not encountered strong opposition in any state."

The report, unanimously approved by the 28-member commission, criticized the Republicans for not mounting a similar effort.

BLACK PANTHERS

21 striking Yale students picket Rockefeller Center

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty-one of the striking Yale students who want their university to back the Black Panthers against "repression" came down from New Haven Tuesday and set up a picket line at Rockefeller Center.

The students made the bus trip and set up their "educational" picket line in order to press their demands with two Yale trustees, J. Richardson Dilworth and Cyrus R. Vance.

Dilworth, an adviser to the Rockefeller family, was not in his office in the RCA Building as the students marched 56 floors below.

However, Vance, at his Park Avenue office, said he would be happy to see representatives of the students. But the former Paris peace negotiator and onetime secretary of the Army said he'd be in and out and they'd have to catch him.

A week-long strike at Yale, protesting Connecticut proceedings against Panther National Chairman Bobby Seale on a murder charge, has won expressions of sympathy from the university's president, Kingman Brewster.

Meanwhile, pretrial hearings in the bomb and murder conspiracy charges against 13

New York Panthers continued downtown in Manhattan Supreme Court.

The hearings are being held to determine whether evidence allegedly found in the homes of the arrested Panthers can be admitted. Tuesday's hearing concerned the raid on the home of Curtis Powell.

Guard to assist at May Day rally

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — While the countdown continued to the May Day rally here in support of the Black Panthers, Connecticut's adjutant general confirmed reports that the National Guard would be standing by.

A unit will be stationed in the New Haven area, Maj. Gen. E. Donald Walsh said in a telephone interview.

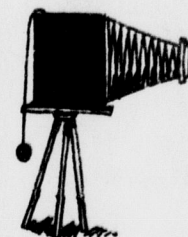

Organizers of the rally have said they intend no violence and that they are recruiting marshalls from the Yale University student body to help see that the demonstration is orderly.

However, a group called "Citizens Concerned for New Haven" was calling for the National Guard as well as police.

In printed statements distributed Monday, the group said radicals throughout the nation are planning to descend on New Haven and local police "can't handle a crowd of 50,000 bent on violence."

Estimates of the crowd expected for the demonstration have ranged upward from 25,000. The rally is in support of eight Black Panthers charged with plotting the kidnap and death of Alex Rackley, a Panther allegedly thought to be a police informant.

MSU Anarchists stage motorcycle 'peace ride'

The MSU Anarchists will lead a motorcycle ride for peace from the Union to the Michigan Capitol at 2 p.m. Friday.

Max Frei, one of the organizers of the ride, said expects about 300 bike-peace buffs to join "non-parade" down Michigan Avenue.

The riders will meet at the Union and leave for the Capitol sometime between 2 and 3:30 p.m., Frei said. The Anarchists are sponsoring the ride "peace, fun and to convince the older generation that a new day has dawned."

At the Capitol, "we may camp on the People's Lawn (the Capitol grounds), picnic, whatever people want to do," Frei said.

A Michigan law requires a permit for a parade, but the Anarchists claim that this is only a group of people getting together and riding to the Capitol, not a parade. Frei said the Anarchists intend to ride slowly and obey stop signs.

An assistant press secretary to Gov. Milliken said that "of course the governor favors demonstrations, as long as there is no violence or violation of people's rights. Demonstrations have forever and forever been the American way."

Concert fare: sun, song

Windy City 7

The jazz rock group "Chicago" will blast Old College Field May 24 with a loud horn rendition of "Beginnings" as part of the all-day Festival of Life.

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

The Open Air Celebration scheduled for May 24 will be the first such concert on any college campus and is the result of years of speculation and hope by ASMSU Pop Entertainment, according to entertainment chairman Steve Plichta.

Previously, pop concerts were not making enough money to support a project of this extent.

"This year, most of our concerts have been sell-outs, and we feel we have the support for something special," Plichta said Tuesday.

The day is planned as a community celebration, an opportunity for people to get together in the sun, go barefoot, dance and do anything else they feel like doing. The name itself — Open Air Celebration — reflects the activity's festive nature.

Tickets for the concert, which combines the Jefferson Airplane, Chicago, Delaney, Bonnie and Friends, John Sebastian, the Small Faces with Rod Stewart, and the Rotary Connection in a seven-hour festival, are $5 and are on sale at the Union, Marshall Music, and Campbell's. Approximately 10,000 of 30,000 tickets have been sold.

Mail-order sales will begin Thursday. Advertisements have been sent to most college papers in central Michigan.

Plichta said ticket prices were set as low as possible.

"The groups alone cost $60,000 and agents, publicity, stage construction, sound systems, security and service facilities raise that, so we'll be spending a minimum of $100,000 on the concert," he said.

ASMSU Chairman Bill Rustem said Monday he hopes profits from the concert will be used to establish a student cooperative off-campus. The cooperative would sell food, clothing and other items to students at reduced prices and would include the New Community electronics co-op and Man and Nature Bookstore, which are currently housed in the ASMSU offices.

There have been attempts recently to remove these co-ops from ASMSU on the charge that they are using University property for unfair competition with area merchants.

Plichta does not expect a large profit, however.

"Costs really soar at this kind of festival," he said. "Construction costs, for example, are usually twice the initial estimate."

Original speculation on the location of the concert centered on the Stadium, but was changed to Old College Field. Plichta said the field area is larger and "more conducive to our needs."

Although the groups will be playing outside, hearing and seeing them will be difficult outside the concert area itself. The stage will be a 40 x 80 foot band-shell opening out onto Old College Field, and the sound system will be aimed at the concert area.

Old College Field is surrounded on three sides by the Red Cedar River and on the fourth side by a fence. Students will be stationed around the perimeter to insure that the audience will be able to enjoy the concert without outside interference. Tents may be used on portions of the fence closest to the stage.

Two hundred student auxiliaries from the New Community will furnish personal assistance within the concert area. These students refused payment as individuals, so ASMSU Pop Entertainment will donate $1,000 to the New Community for use as legal service funds.

Campus police will assist in directing traffic and other similar duties.

First aid facilities, lost and found booths, toilet areas and water fountains will be provided within the concert area. Concession stands within the area will be managed by Crossroads Cafeteria.

Rain or shine, gates will open to ticketholders at 9 a.m. May 24. Each of the six groups will play for about one hour, with the exception of the Jefferson Airplane, which will end the concert with an hour and a half performance.

Prof to conclude organ festival

Organist Alexander Boggs Ryan will conclude MSU's Festival of Organ Recitals when he performs at 8:15 p.m. Monday in Hart Recital Hall in the Music Bldg.

Ryan, an associate professor of music at Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo, will perform on the 43-rank Schlicker pipe organ given to MSU last fall by Dr. and Mrs. Ernest Hart of Medina, N.Y.

The program, which is open to the public without charge, will feature works by two composers from the Baroque era — the "golden age of the organ." The works will include "Chacone in E Minor," two chorale preludes and "Prelude and Fugue in G Minor" by Buxtehude and "Prelude and Fugue in F Minor," two chorale preludes from "Orgelbuchlein," and "Passacaglia and Fugue in C Minor" by J.S. Bach.

SECOND SOLO ALBUM

Denver sings with charm

By VALERIE RESTIVO
State News Reviewer

John Denver's "Take Me to Tomorrow" is his second solo album. You may know him as Chad Mitchell's replacement in the Mitchell Trio.

His voice is true, and he does most of his own guitar work. The title song, "Take Me to Tomorrow" is set in rather ordinary rock and does not reach me as a song, although the lyrics are blandly appealing.

"Isabel" is a nostalgic tribute to Denver's secret, delicate, imaginary lady — love. He sings more directly, to a real love (his wife) in "Follow Me."

I like the simplicity and melodic charm of "Follow Me" and "Aspenglow."

With all the superb Jacques Brel songs around, "Amsterdam" is disappointing. The lyrics are not sufficiently profound to merit theft of the ancient "Greensleeves" melody that accompanies them. Not that the original lyrics to "Greensleeves" were profound, but the melody is too beautiful to steal for a song like "Amsterdam."

The highlights of the album, performed well, are two Tom Paxton songs, "Forest Lawn" and "Jimmy Newman." They demonstrate the best of Paxton's writing — both satirical and bitter.

"Rock of Ages, cleft for me / For a slight higher fee — Oh, take me when I'm gone, to Forest Lawn."

"Jimmy Newman" is one of the most moving of all anti-war songs. Its impact approaches that of the bitter "Maman." ("Maman" still holds more power over me.)

The album ends on the bittersweet notes of Biff Rose's "Molly."

John Denver is a sensitive singer, a good guitarist, a tasteful musician and composer. He does not excel at writing lyrics. The themes he deals with have too often been dealt with by superior writers. He might do well to stay with the best of other people's compositions or to find a lyricist to work with on his own compositions.

'Damned' distorts reality

"The Damned" is an intellectually offensive film of high pretension, low restraint and untenable logic.

Director Luchino Visconti intended his film to be a powerful condemnation of Nazism and a graphic illustration of the moral corruption that tainted the German nation and its people during the first suppressive months of Hitler's Third Reich. In a crass attempt to overwhelm his audience with an unflinching spectacle of moral decay, he has devalued his work to a voyeur - oriented distortion of reality.

Forsaking restraint, Visconti reaches for gross sensationalism. Bypassing subtlety, he settles for overstatement and exaggeration. Worst of all, instead of limiting his story to what could have been a compelling study of isolated greed, Visconti chooses to expand its significance by illogical extension.

"The Damned" focuses on the Rossenbecks, a family of wealthy German industrialists.

The murder of the president of the Rossenbeck Steel Works, a prosperous family - owned firm, locks the remaining family members in a bitter struggle for control.

The presidency is inherited by Martin Rossenbeck, a blank-eyed effeminate who would rather fondle children or impersonate Marlene Dietrich than manage a steel business. The other family members find Martin unsuitable, exploit his weaknesses and conspire to secure his power for themselves.

Individually and, at times, collectively, they plot, blackmail and cheat to win Martin's favor and eliminate all other rivals. Occasionally, when incriminating anti-Nazi information is discovered or can be trumped up, they call in the ever-willing Gestapo to accomplish what mere inter-family treachery does not.

One by one the family members are eliminated - the victims of Gestapo arrest, secret police massacre, exile or confinement in concentration camps - until four are left to claw away at each other in a climactic confrontation made lethal by Martin's sudden awareness of the surrounding manipulation and willingness to stop at nothing to secure what's rightfully his. In the end, Martin stands alone, the sad victim pushed to his final action by the prevailing hatred and decadence of his relatives.

In reaching his climax - an example of evil triumphing over evil - director Visconti contends the Rossenbeck family were merely products of their age, manipulated victims of National Socialism who were corrupt because their nation was corrupt. The screenplay includes lines like, "Hitler says we are an elite society where everything is permissible" to tell us that Hitler's policies, not individual greed, were responsible for decadence.

Visconti attempts to stun his audience with a single family's depravity and then blame Nazism for it. Such an extension - absolving the individuals involved because of national degradation - could've been illuminating had Visconti presented Nazism realistically. It is well documented that Hitler's policies were repressive and his secret police were vicious.

Visconti had only to present Nazism honestly for his film to be effective. Instead he exaggerates its evils. Nazi soldiers are portrayed as a bloody bunch of perverted brutes who approach lechery or a fling in bed with fellow soldiers with the same animal excitement that they do a massacre. Making Martin the victor implies Nazi corruption nurtured his victory and welcomed such a man as a leader.

Visconti over and over again lambasts the viewer with his excesses. "The Damned" doesn't seek to enlighten its audience. It intends only to shock. Naked soldiers are shown reveling in bed together. A distraught son strips before his mother and then seduces her with little matural resistance. Before "The Damned" is over the viewer is overwhelmed not by the insight provided or the purpose underlying the work but the propensity of sex, sadism, murder and incest presented. Visconti fears truth may not be incriminating enough so he distorts it for his own purposes.

"The Damned" is a vacuous work unworthy of the praise it has received from professional critics and undeserving of the performances contributed by its proficient cast. Helmut Berger as Martin, Ingrid Thulin as his wily mother and Charlotte Rampling as a winsome cousin are exceptional. Too bad their performances and the film's portentous theme are betrayed by the prevailing venality of its maker.

Some party?

Nazi troopers relax following one of their quiet diversions in Luchino Visconti's movie, "The Damned." The movie depicts the decay of Nazi Germany.

LAYS, FILMS, DANCES

Variety spices entertainment

This week's midweek entertainment offers an outstanding variety of activities to suit just about anybody's taste. While waiting the sun to decide whether or to shine, you can see films, the night away, go to the theater or any of a number of things.

It opens this week's series with "Sympathy for the Devil," the controversial Stones film. Directed by Luc Godard, one of the revolutionary of contemporary directors, it is less a film of the Stones than a meditation on Godard's left-wing politics. "Sympathy" will be shown tonight in the Vet and Thursday in 109.

One has "The Haunted

Palace" billed for 101 Kedzie tonight. "Palace" is another in a never-ending series of Vincent Price - Roger Corman flicks whose major delight is Prince's fabulous demonic performance.

"Face of War" is perhaps one of the most startling and authentic of all the visual records of the war in Vietnam. Director Eugene S. Jones and a crew of three men spent over three months following a single squad through the rigors of the war and let the cameras and the men tell it like it is. Sponsored by the International Film Series, it will be showing tonight in the Auditorium.

Right next door - in Fairchild - tonight Le Treteau de Paris will present two plays by Ionesco, "La Lecon" and "Les Chaises." The plays will be in French and are in the true Ionesco style. Tickets are on sale at the Union.

Also tonight, the Student Mobilization Committee will present a dance concert with The Brownsville Station, Ormandy and The Whiz Kids. The floor unrolls at 7:30 p.m. in Hubbard Hall.

For those of a more phlegmatic nature, Kresge has works from the permanent collection in the main gallery and works by undergraduate art students in the entrance and north gallery. The horticulture students (with a little help from Mother Nature) also are slowly but surely converting the various gardens around campus into showcases that deserve more than a quick glance en route to class.

Last but not least, the third floor of the Home Economics Bldg. houses an exhibit entitled: "Renaissance - the Ukrainian decorated egg from the collection of S. Winkler." It has to be seen to be believed.

eterinary wives an spring luncheon

Veterinary Wives of Lansing will sponsor their second annual luncheon buffet at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Michigan Assn. (MEA) Bldg, 1216 Kendale. The luncheon is a benefit for the Walnut Street School for mentally handicapped children. Tickets are $1.50 and will be available at the door.

Collins trial move ruled out

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — The trial of John Norman Collins will begin in Washtenaw County Circuit Court June 2, but the judge said he is uncertain whether an impartial jury can be selected because of the publicity on the case.

Collins, a tall, good-looking college senior was arrested July 31 and charged with the sex slaying of Karen Sue Beineman, 18, Grand Rapids, an Eastern Michigan University coed who was the seventh young woman killed in the Ann Arbor - Ypsilanti area in a two-year period.

Defense attorneys have tried three times to get the trial shifted from Ann Arbor to another community where publicity surrounding Collins and the slayings has not been so intense.

But Circuit Judge John Conlin ruled Monday the trial will not be shifted. He said, instead, he will try to impanel a jury and begin the trial June 2.

Jury selection "may be very difficult and perhaps impossible," Conlin said in his ruling Monday. He said he will accept another motion for a change of venue if it is indeed impossible.

Conlin also ruled Monday that testimony of a key prosecution witness, Mrs. Joan Goshe, owner of a wig shop in nearby Ypsilanti, will be admissible at the trial. Defense attorneys claimed her testimony, given at a pre-trial hearing, should be suppressed because she was improperly influenced by police.

Mrs. Goshe told police she had seen Miss Beineman leave downtown Ypsilanti on the back of a motorcycle and identified Collins as the driver. Defense attorneys claimed she had been shown photographs of suspects before viewing Collins in a line-up.

Michael Devine, Michigan Supreme Court Administrator assigned to the case, said Conlin probably will examine two panels of prospective jurors — between 250 and 310 persons — before accepting another motion for a change of venue. He would not speculate in what other county the trial could be held.

Defense Attorney Neil Fink made his third request for the shift last week, claiming "strong community feeling and a pattern of deep and bitter prejudice against him (Collins) as a result of extensive newspaper, TV and radio publicity given the case."

The latest publicity began April 15 when Collins was indicted by a Monterey County, Calif., grand jury in the slaying there last June of Roxie Ann Phillips, 17, whose body was found 17 miles from Salinas, Calif.

Devine said Michigan will not give up jurisdiction of Collins to California until after his trial here.

HOMEFRONT FIRST

Mrs. Romney speaks out against Asian involvement

PROVO, Utah (UPI) — Lenore Romney, announced candidate for the U.S. Senate from Michigan, said Monday she does "not want to see our young men fighting in Asian lands."

Mrs. Romney also said that she did not think American ground forces should be sent to Cambodia.

"I do believe that the great hordes of people — human beings — are committed to their way of life there and we cannot possibly make an indentation," she said in an interview after a talk before 1,500 students at Brigham Young University.

She and her husband, George, were in Utah for a fund-raising program being held by the university.

"I believe we should not send troops into Cambodia," Mrs. Romney said. "We have to make Democracy work here at home first. If it works here, then I believe we have a great tool to help them that will be much more effective than if we bleed ourselves here and in every way take our manhood and our strength and wealth."

"We can't possibly help them to the extent we can if we are great and fine here at home."

Romney, speaking later at Farmington, Utah, called for a "wage-cuts-price policy. We must curb the excessive collective bargaining power of unions if we are going to curb inflation," he said.

Romney said U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia war was "the worst mistake we have ever made in our foreign policy." But he praised the President for having "seized the peace initiative."

'U' fraternities consider move to apartment living

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

The appeal of apartment living and the problems of filling membership quotas are causing several MSU fraternities to consider leaving their houses. Two fraternities, Zeta Beta Tau and Sigma Alpha Mu, made the move to East Lansing apartments earlier this year. Next fall Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity will move from their house on Sunset Street to Colonial Arms apartments on Orchard Street, fraternity member Greg Smith, Jackson, junior, said.

"We just feel that it's better housing," Smith said. "Our house is an older building and it has a lot of upkeep problems. But also, the guys are more inclined to live in apartments. It's more in tune with the thinking of the times."

He said the fraternity is not having difficulty filling the house, as other fraternities indicated as their reason for moving, but that the move was a "matter of convenience."

Alpha Tau Omega (ATO) fraternity is considering a move to "an apartment or lodge-type setup" as part of an "over-all revamping" of the fraternity's system, ATO president Scott W. Kaufman, Park Ridge, Ill., junior said.

"We see the need for a smaller living unit," Kaufman said, "but not because we have a smaller chapter. It's a part of the trend to individualism."

The ATO's are presently negotiating for ownership of their house at 451 Evergreen but hope to eventually sell the property and move into apartments.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon (SAE) averted a forced closing of their house at 131 Bogue when pledges increased this term, according to Larry Urey, SAE member and Detroit, sophomore.

"This was our do or die term," Urey said. "If we had just gotten two or three pledges as we have for the past few terms, we would have had to fold. But now we have 14 new pledges, and, if everything works out all right, we will open next fall with a full house."

Large pledge classes spring term also stalled off house closings for Delta Upsilon and Beta Theta Pi fraternities.

TOWARDS CHICANOS

Commission hits police conduct

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The U.S. Civil Rights Commission urged Congress Monday to pass laws aimed at halting what it called "widespread patterns of police misconduct" against Mexican-Americans in the Southwest.

In a report submitted to the President and Congress, the commission also urged federal and state law enforcement agencies to hire more Mexican-Americans. And the report criticized Justice Department investigations of civil rights complaints.

It further recommended congressional legislation to insure equal representation of minority groups on state, grand and petit juries.

The 135-page study reported finding a "black picture" of the relationship between Mexican-Americans in the Southwest and the agencies which administer justice.

The commission said an estimated four million Spanish-surnamed persons live in the Southwest and make up the single largest minority in the five-state area - Texas, California, Arizona, New Mexico and Colorado.

The report said Mexican-Americans frequently complain that officers discriminate against them.

"Such discrimination includes more frequent use of excessive force against Mexican-Americans than against Anglos, discriminatory treatment of juveniles, and harassment and discourteous treatment toward Mexican-Americans in general," the commission said.

The "most extreme allegations," the report stated, were made by small-town residents. In rural areas, Mexican-Americans complained it was "difficult to obtain police protection when they needed it," the commission said.

The report asserted that FBI and Justice Department procedures for investigations of civil rights complaints, were inadequate. FBI agents "have often failed to interview important witnesses or interviewed such witnesses in a perfunctory and hostile manner," the report said.

Mexican-Americans in south Texas expressed fear of the Texas Rangers, the commission said. Jose Martinez, a Pharr, Tex., farm worker, was quoted as saying of the Rangers: "Many people hate them, many people are afraid they will be hit or kicked."

Batsmen succumb to heavy WMU hitting

By GARY WALKOWICZ
Executive Sports Editor

Western Michigan hitters raked MSU pitching for 12 runs and 16 hits Tuesday as the Broncos crushed the Spartans, 12-3, in a three-inning game at Kobs Field. The Spartans were playing with a reshuffled lineup because of injuries to several regulars. MSU was stymied by the seven-hit pitching of Tom Zahn as it suffered its seventh loss in its last 10 games. The Spartans are now 16-9-2 for the season, while WMU upped its record to 13-8. First baseman Mark Hari was the hitting hero for Western.

Hari laced out two home runs and a single, knocking in four runs and scoring three. Second baseman Harry Shaughnessy and shortstop Tim Lock also had outstanding days as each totaled three hits and combined for a pair of double plays that cooled Spartan threats.

looked strong for three innings but then deteriorated badly to surrender seven runs in the next two frames. Clancy, the Spartan's relief ace, hadn't pitched more than two innings in any of his previous 10 appearances.

Kirk Maas replaced Clancy and surrendered a three-run homer to Hari in the sixth before leaving. Freshman left-hander Elliot Moore pitched the final three and two-thirds innings and was the most effective MSU hurler as he allowed just one earned run in his third Spartan appearance of the season.

WMU scored first with a pair of runs in the fourth inning. Singles by Hari and Lock, a wild pitch by Clancy and an error by third baseman Dick Vary, one of four committed by MSU, accounted for the pair of scores.

The Broncos broke the game open with a five-run outburst in the fifth inning. Three singles and a fielder's choice produced one run and loaded the bases for Bronco center fielder Dave Shoemaker, who promptly unloaded them with a fly ball triple to deep left center. WMU's Jim Mayer followed with a line single over the head of shortstop George Petroff to drive in WMU's seventh run and drive out Clancy.

Maas got the Spartans out of further trouble in the fifth but gave up one-out singles in the sixth before Hari unloaded a drive over the rightfield fence to increase the Bronco lead to 10-2. Hari hit a solo homer off Moore in the eighth and a pair of ground ball singles and an error by shortstop Steve Cerez, who had replaced Petroff, accounted for the final Bronco run.

The Spartan threatened early against Zahn, but the Bronco righthander, who came into the game with a 4.12 ERA, settled down and retired 11 hitters in a row at one stretch to record his second win.

A pair of errors by third baseman Mayer allowed MSU to tie the game at 2-2 in the last of the fourth. Mayer missed a ground ball by Rob Ellis and then was guilty of interference, allowing Shaun Howitt to score from third with MSU's first run.

Pinch hitter John Dace singled in Ellis for the tying tally, but Zahn escaped further problems as catcher Bailey Oliver and Clancy hit into fielder's choice plays.

After Zahn retired 11 Spartans in a row, MSU rallied briefly in the ninth. Ellis hit a lead-off double and rode home on a sharp single to right by Cerez. Dirk Dieters, batting in Dace's spot, followed with another single, but Zahn induced Oliver to bounce into a game-ending 6-4-3 double play.

The long stretch does it

MSU's Whitey Rettemund is nipped at first base to complete a Western Michigan double play, one of three the Broncos had in Tuesday's game. Rettemund hit to the WMU third baseman who stepped on the bag and threw to first for the final out of the first inning.

Lacrossers meet Bowling Green

It will be time to separate the men from the boys when Bowling Green University invades the MSU campus for a Midwest Lacrosse Assn. (MLA) match today. The game will be played at 3:30 p.m. on the secret football practice field, next to the soccer field.

It should be a true add test for the young Spartan unit, as the Falcons are currently riding high atop the MLA standings. The Ohio squad has an unblemished 5-0 mark.

Bowling Green's most recent conquest was last year's champion, Denison, by a score of 8-6. Denison earlier in the year demolished a visiting Spartan team, 25-2.

But the Spartans have two factors swinging in their favor for the match. First, the game will be played on the home Spartan field, where the MSU squad has lost only twice this year. Secondly, the Spartans will be coming off of a win over a power in the club division, Notre Dame.

A key to the Spartan path of improvement has been the ability of the offense to put some balls past the opposing netminders. Co-captain Rick Bayes has become the team's most consistent scorer, with nine goals so far this year. Sophomore attackman Doug Kalvelage has added seven more to the team's total, including the game winner in MSU's sole victory.

The sudden outburst of scoring from senior Joe McLain, sophomore Bill Wasinski and freshmen John Beach and Bob Stevenson has taken some of the burden off of Bayes, Kalvelage, Tom Bowman and Dan Denov.

MSU's young tennis squad had little trouble in overpowering the out-manned Wayne State squad, Tuesday, as the Spartans opened their home season on a winning note with a 9-0 victory.

Coach Stan Drobac's team looked sharp as they swept each match in straight sets. Only in three sets did the Tartars win four games as MSU completely dominated the match.

The match, which left the Spartans with a 4-2 regular season record, provided a good tune-up for Friday and Saturday's conference matches with Iowa and Minnesota. The team members now hope that they can carry the winning formula into the all-important weekend matches.

The bottom half of the Spartans line-up had the easiest matches of the day. DeArmond Briggs, Rick Vetter and Reik Ferman only lost a combined total of seven games as they all won handily.

Briggs and Vetter won their matches by identical scores of 6-0, 6-2 against Mike Kowal and Mark Schneider for the Tartars. Both looked impressive and Briggs, especially, ranged all over the court to return his opponents shots.

Ferman remained unbeaten at the No. 6 spot with a 6-1, 6-2 win over Ken Mann. He is now 4-0 after taking over the singles position in the Spartans third match.

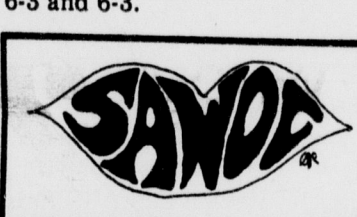

Dusty Rhoads, the Spartans No. 1 man, started fast and had little trouble in wrapping up a 6-2 and 6-4 win. Wayne State's Joe Spolniki could do little with the hard, veering serve of Rhoads until the second set, and even then Rhoads carried most of the play.

Tom Gray, playing at the No. 2 spot, got off to a slow start but soon recovered to win 6-3 and 6-2. Down 3-1 in the first set, he allowed Frank Reed only two of the next 13 games, to win his fifth match in six starts.

Playing at the No. 3 singles for the first time this year, sophomore Mike Madura defeated Vann Hooks 7-5 and 6-0 to remain unbeaten in regular season play. The two players were locked in tight battle until Madura broke Hooks' serve. From that point, he did not lose a game.

Despite the fact that the match was already clinched, MSU did not let up in the doubles. Rhoads and Gray won 6-2 and 6-2; Vetter and Ferman swept to a 6-4 and 6-2 win and Briggs and Jim Symington won 6-3 and 6-3.

Gray concentration

MSU's No. 2 singles player, Tom Gray, keeps a watchful eye on the ball as he returns this backhand shot in Tuesday's match with Wayne State. Gray and his five singles partners were all victorious as were the doubles teams as MSU defeated the Tartars, 9-0.

'S' offensive line poses big question mark

Tom Beard

Gary Nowak

By JEFF ELLIOTT
State News Sports Editor

With only one returning starter from last year's offensive line, Spartan Line Coach Gordie Serr faces a difficult task of rebuilding a solid line which will open holes like last year's front line did.

"We've got a lot of work ahead of us," Serr said before Tuesday's practice. "With only our center Tom Beard returning, we'll have to start from scratch. And it'll be a tough task as we'll be working with men who have never played at the position they're at now and we'll be going with several freshmen."

At the start of spring drills, Head Coach Duffy Daugherty indicated his starting front line at that time would consist of Beard at center, Mike Tobin and Errol Roy at guards, Victor Mittleberg and Gary Nowak at the tackles and Frank Butler at the tight end spot. But injuries have sidelined Tobin and Mittleberg, with the latter yet to see any contact work at all.

The injury bugaboo also has kept two of the Spartans biggest men on the squad out of action — Jim Nicholson and Gary Van Elst. Nicholson hurt his ankle the first week of practice and only last week started working out with the blocking dummies. The big 6-7, 265 pound Hawaiian was being moved from tight end to tackle this year by Daugherty but has yet to see any action there.

Van Elst is in a similar boat, being shifted from linebacker to tackle, but he, too, has not been involved in any contact, nor is he expected to get in any scrimmages this spring. The 6-3, 250 pounder suffered a back injury playing basketball during the winter and keeps getting spasms in the lower portion of the back.

"We're really handicapped losing three good tackles like that," Serr commented. "We would have liked to have had all four tackles healthy so we could have done some experimenting. If we see we're set at the tackle spot we may possibly move someone to defense. But right now we're limited in our switching positions."

Serr ruled out the possibility of moving Nicholson back to tight end.

"We've got four good men contending for the job," he said. "Butler is running No. 1, but Billy Jo Dupree has been looking good as have two freshmen, Brian McConnell and Marvin Roberts."

Butler, who has yet to catch a pass at MSU in a regular game, had an outstanding green - white game a year ago when he nabbed six passes for 80 yards and earned selection as the outstanding lineman on the white squad. DuPree was highly counted on last year but missed nearly the entire season with an injury.

Nowak, who saw a lot of action as a defensive end last season, says he is happy at his new spot but still has a lot to learn.

"I've got to work on my downfield blocking more," he said. "I'm waiting too long before throwing the block that could spring a runner loose. I've also got to improve on my goal line blocking. I'm hitting the defensive man too high instead of taking his feet out from under him."

Having played defense as a freshman and sophomore, Nowak holds a slight advantage over some of the other linemen.

"Having played on that side of the line, I know some of their tricks," the 6-4, 230 pounder said. "It helps sometimes as you can pick up a blitz or stunt on the part of the defense. Right now I just want to do the best job I can, I know I've got a lot to learn but I want to win and will give it all I got."

Tobin was back-up man behind all - America, Ron Saul for two years, but he appears ready to move into the starter's spot this year. The 6-1, 220 pounder suffered an ankle injury in last week's practice and did not see any action in Saturday's scrimmage.

Working at the other guard spot is Errol Roy, a junior letterman who was used as a substitute at both guard and center last season.

"Errol establishes himself more and more every day," Serr commented. "It's been hard for him because he mostly played center last year and has had to learn a new position this season. But he's a real hard worker and really puts out every day."

Backing up Tobin and Roy at the present are two freshmen, Chris King and Joe DeLamelleure and junior Bob Black. DeLamelleure is currently the starting right tackle but is expected to be moved to guard when the three ailing Spartans return.

Beard started every game for the Spartans last year as a junior. According to Serr, he is the only lineman who is virtually assured of a starting job in the fall.

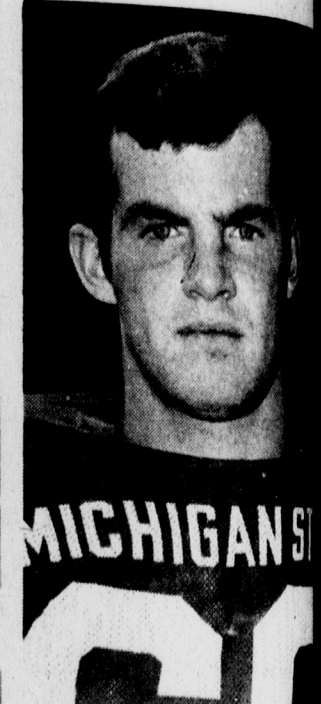

"But I'm not worried about Tom becoming complacent," Serr said. "He has a solid hold on his job, but he is probably one of the hardest working linemen. At 6-6 and 250 pounds he's a good man to have around when it comes to protecting that quarterback."

Morgan Justice, Trenton sophomore, and Bob McClellan, Dearborn freshman, are running even for the No. 2 spot behind Beard. Both men looked good in Saturday's scrimmage and both got a lot of work as Beard missed the workout due to a finger injury.

"We've had to go with more group work this year than in the past," Serr said, "because none of the guys have played together on the same unit. Right now we're working on basic drills, the getting off on the snap of the ball together and executing the right assignments. I just wish we had more than 20 days in which to teach the guys everything. There's a lot to learn."

Al Henderson: fast soph on 'S' relays

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

Running fast can get to be a habit-forming, and no one knows that better than MSU sophomore Al Henderson after his two - day performances last weekend at the Drake Relays. Henderson, running on the ill-fated Spartan sprint medley quartet that failed to qualify for the finals even with the third fastest time, turned in a 46.4

clocking for his stint. It was the fastest relay split ever for the Detroit East Catholic product and was 1.6 seconds better than his best effort to date in the open quarter.

Before that Henderson ran a 110 leg on the MSU 440-yard relay, and in the last event on Friday, he led off MSU's mile relay with a 47.9. Saturday he again ran on the 440 relay and closed his weekend's efforts with a 47.3 leadoff leg in the mile relay final.

A lot of running, and pretty fast. Enough, maybe, to make the average runner wince, but for Henderson it's just the kind of thing he wants, and needs, to become the best in the Big Ten and one of the best in the country. Spartan assistant Coach Jim Gibbard thinks Henderson is getting ready to claim an often elusive rating as "one of the greats."

"He's progressed to the point where he should be classed as one of the better quarter - millers in the Big Ten," Gibbard said. "With hard work he can be one of the best in the country."

"Al's attitude is the greatest. He's a hard worker, and he's always willing to do anything, to run anything, he's asked," Gibbard added.

Henderson credits the sudden influx of spring weather with helping him get going so well at Drake, where the temperature rose into the mid 70s each day.

"I can't really run in the cold," Henderson explained. "I'm normally tight, and I need the heat to loosen me up, to get me feeling flexible."

Haywood is ABA's MVP

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Rookie sensation Spencer Haywood, hero of the Gold Medal winning U.S. team in the Mexico Olympics, was named the American Basketball Assn.'s most valuable player for 1969-70 by a near unanimous vote Tuesday.

Henderson said he likes his present position on the Spartans' 440-yard relay, although he might be classed as anything but a great sprinter.

"If we can get together we could have a good one," he said. "As for me, the passing has gone pretty good, but I need to work on getting started better."

Henderson pointed out that good weather, both for practice and meet situations, can make all the difference in the world. It's hard to get out and run when conditions are poor, he said.

"It's not such a job in good weather," Henderson said. "Some of the mental anguish is gone for everybody so they un better."

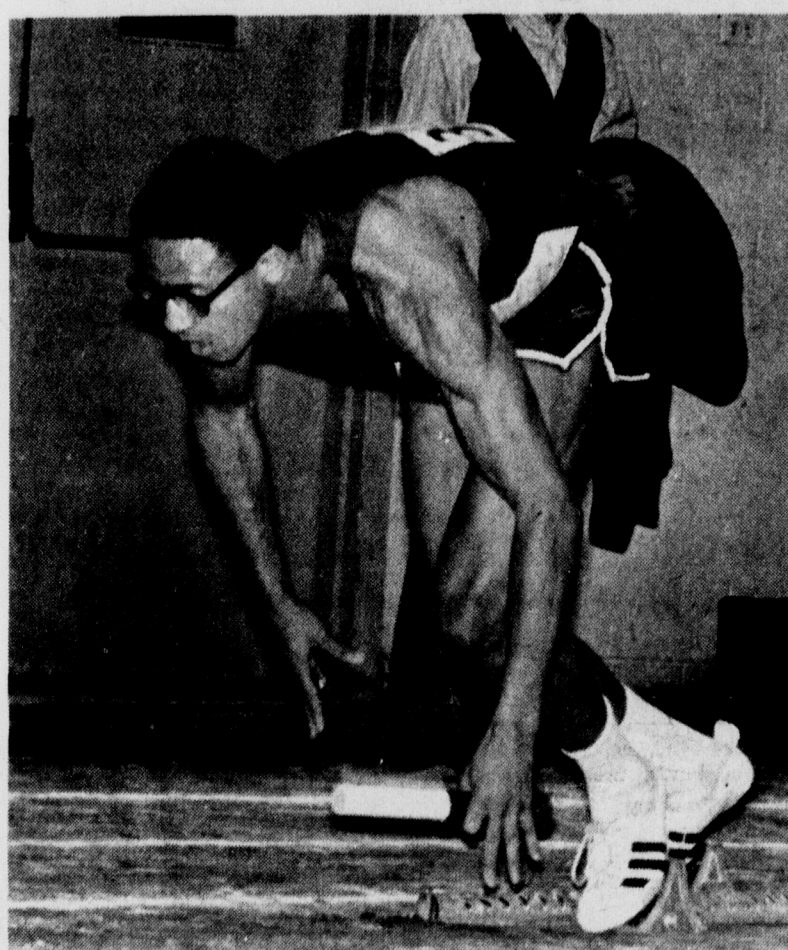

Henderson was third in the Big Ten 440 inside and helped the Spartans to a first - place mile relay finish and a Jensen Fieldhouse record.

Terry Musika of Indiana, the indoor champ, and Danny Clarke of Purdue, who decisively defeated Henderson two weeks ago, would appear to be his chief competition along with teammate Bill Wehrwein for the outdoor 440-yard title won in 1969 by Wehrwein.

Musika, who has already posted a 47.0 outside, was sidelined at Drake with a muscle pull. It's not known how serious it was, but Henderson says he'll be ready for him now and in the Big Ten. And Clarke, Al adds, "has got his coming."

"I should have been first indoors, but..."

If Al Henderson has his way, after May 16 he won't have to say "should have been."

Trouble starting?

Al Henderson says he's been having trouble getting started, but you'd never know it the way he flew through the 220s and 440s at Drake last weekend. Here he readies for the crack of the gun at the indoor MSU Relays.

'S' sailors earn midwest title spot

The MSU Sailing Club earned the right to compete in the Midwest Championship Regatta at the University of Indiana, May 16 - 17, after scoring an impressive showing in last weekend's Area A Eliminations at Lake Lansing.

The Spartan skippers and respective crews sailed to a first place tie with Wayne State University, but the Wayne sailors were awarded the first place trophy because they had recorded more wins over the MSU crews.

Although MSU and Wayne picked off top team honors, the University of Michigan dominated the eliminations, registering four straight first places in the A division.

The Wolverines, who didn't sail a B team until Sunday, placed third with 45 points along with MSU and Wayne qualified for the Midwest championships.

Finishing out of the race for possible honors in a championship regatta at Lake Michigan were the University of Toledo and Kent State.

Michigan's Steve Klotz, who in the A division, captured a low - point skipper award in the B division following a sail - off with a Wayne skipper.

Also sailing for the Spartans were skipper Jeff Norik and crew members Dale Bryant and Nancy Schiffer.

No new bowl games NCAA council says

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — The policy - making body of the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. (NCAA) still is in no mood to add new college football bowl games.

The 18-man NCAA council Monday turned down bids from six cities wanting to stage post - season games. They were the Cactus Bowl in Phoenix, Ariz.; the West Coast Bowl in Tampa, Fla.; the Blues Bowl in Memphis; the Carnation Bowl in San Diego; the Copper Bowl in Tucson, and the Charity Bowl in Lake Charles, La.

The executive committee, which governs financial affairs and new tournaments, approved for the first time the system of district qualifying for NCAA wrestling tournament. A spokesman explained there were over 500 entries this year and this is an attempt to cut down the number of entries.

It was the third year in a row the council has turned thumbs down on new bowls.

But the council approved 11 already - established bowl games for next year, along with five All Star games.

They include the traditional New Year's Sugar, Cotton, Rose and Orange Bowls. Also getting an okay were the Pasadena Bowl on Dec. 12; the Liberty Bowl on Dec. 12; the Sun, Dec. 19; Gator, Dec. 26; Tangerine, Dec. 26; Peace, Dec. 30, and Bluebonnet, Dec. 31.

The Shrine East - West All - Star game was approved for Jan. 2; the Blue - Gray game on Dec. 28; the North - South, Dec. 25; the Alamo Bowl, Dec. 26, and the Penn - Dutch Bowl Nov. 28.

Lakers shun critics, topple Knicks in 105-103 thriller

INGLEWOOD, CALIF. (UPI) — Wilt Chamberlain, who silenced his critics the last time out, and Jerry West, who says his years are running out, lead the Los Angeles Lakers against the New York Knicks Wednesday night in game No. 1 of the National Basketball Assn. finals.

Chamberlain pulled down 24 rebounds and turned in an outstanding defensive job on Willis Reed while West hit 34 points, including the winning free throw with 46 seconds left Monday night as the Lakers triumphed 105-103 at New York. That evened their best - of - seven game playoff series at 1-1.

Reed, who likes to roam around outside against the 7 - foot - 1 Chamberlain, hit only 12 of 29 field goal attempts. He had 37 points in a 124-112 New York win Friday night.

"Chamberlain showed he was more mobile than the Knicks believed," Los Angeles Coach Joe Mullaney said. "He got a step closer to Reed whenever Reed received the ball and made him hurry his outside shots."

Chamberlain, who admits he finds it hard to ignore his detractors, was criticized for being immobile after the first game of the series. Before Monday night's contest, the 11-year pro said:

"Man, I just can't let all this negative talk around here about my lack of mobility bother me or I'd end up jumping off the Empire State Building. I must admit it becomes irritating after awhile."

West, the NBA's leading scorer during the regular season with a 31.2 average, is the leading scorer in the series with 87 points while Chamberlain has picked off 48 rebounds in two games.

"I'm going all out to win this playoff," West admitted. "I don't have many more years in pro ball and I'd like to go out with a winner."

West has been with the Lakers since they moved from Minneapolis to Los Angeles in 1960. Six times they failed in the finals against the Boston Celtics.

The third game of the series is set at the Forum Friday night with the fifth contest due at Madison Square Garden next Monday night.

reasingly concerned with the of the nation's economy. Analysts also said the Blackmun report Tuesday its index of leading economic indicators dipped last month after showing a gain in January has added to investor encouragement.

However, one prominent economic observer remained pessimistic. "Frankly, if I had money I'd be buying stocks now," President Nixon reportedly told a visiting business group at the White House.

Nixon urged the members of the American Society of Association Executives to "keep your faith in the American economy."

Stock prices on major European stock exchanges were lower in what analysts said was a response to the sharp drop in New York Stock Exchange prices. The London Times financial index topped 10.1 points to 366.0, a new low for the year.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange's 225-share price index fell 70.63 to 2,315.43, its second sharpest drop this year.

The Dow industrial average, the most closely watched of all the price - change indicators, has been on a decline - interrupted briefly last spring - since its bull market peak of 985.21 on Dec. 3, 1968. That was nearly 17 months ago.

The length of the current slide surpasses the length of any of the eight bear markets the country has gone through since 1938 and April, 1942.

New York and American exchanges and the over - the counter market.

Trading on the New York exchange Tuesday was active. Volume rose to 12.62 million shares from the 10.25 million shares traded Monday.

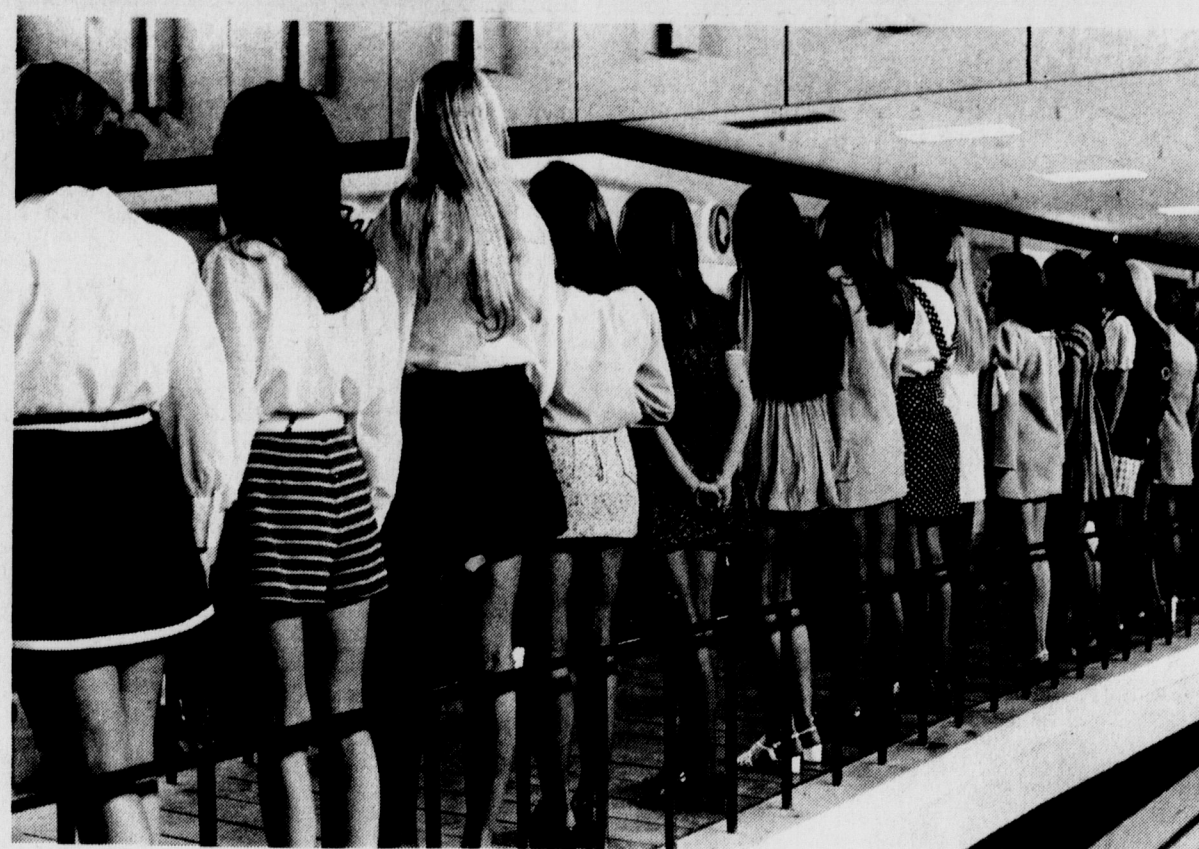

For the 19th consecutive day on the New York exchange, declines outran advances: 1,094 to 308 among the 1,629 issues traded.

The declines swept across motors, rubbers, mail order - retail, aircrafts, electronics, metals, chemicals, rails and oils.

Among the 20 most - active issues on the New York exchange, 18 declined and two advanced.

Closing Big Board prices included:

IBM, down $11.25 to $290.25; Telex, up $4.50 to $92.00; Texaco, down 75 cents to $24.50; American Telephone, down $1.12 to $47.75; Xerox, down 50 cents to $82.25; Gulf Oil, down 75 cents to $24.00, and Coca Cola, down 87 cents to $72.60.

court shift riot trial rejected

ALTIMORE, Md. (AP) - A judge federal panel Monday a defense request to shift the arson and trial of H. Rap Brown to a federal court. As a result, the trial could resume this week, according to a prosecution spokesman.

Defense counsel William M. Butler had requested removal of the trial to federal court under an 1866 civil rights law that guarantees "full and equal rights" of the law.

A similar move by Kunster to the Supreme Court only was denied Jan. 12. Kunster earlier he was prepared to the new appeal to the Supreme Court, if necessary, but not present when the ruling was announced.

Butler, who had been missing since March 8, is charged with rioting, and inciting to riot in connection with the 1967 disorders in Cambridge, Mass.

denying the defense request, the panel rejected Butler's contention that Brown's life would be in danger if he were tried in federal court.

Butler also ruled there was no evidence of intentional discrimination in the change of venue.

At most, their decision was the defense position that only an assignment of venue that could be appealed to Maryland courts or to the Supreme Court.

Wharton

Youth's desire for "instant solutions" to problems often leads to frustration, cynicism and disillusionment, he said.

Wharton called on young people themselves to maintain "a sustained commitment to changing the world."

"It takes a great deal more time, patience and perseverance to sit on important committees and contribute positively or to work in worthwhile volunteer programs than it does to break windows, or to bomb or deface buildings," he observed.

Wharton called on older people to encourage and support youth's responsible leaders in their endeavors.

RUSSIAN'S SUGGESTION

U.S. - Soviet effort on city urged

NEW YORK (AP) - A leading Soviet city planner called Tuesday for a joint U.S. - Russian effort to solve problems of urban environment, to benefit city residents now and generations to come.

The Soviet expert mentioned such urban problems as development of small and midsized cities, building new cities, prefabricated apartment housing and limitation of the growth of big cities.

The suggestion came from Aleksei Kudryavtsev, head of the department of urban planning and construction of the State Committee on Urban Construction and Architecture of the U.S.S.R.

Kudryavtsev made his comments in a discussion with American newsmen arranged in advance of the Second National Convocation of the Challenge of Building Peace, sponsored by the Fund for Peace. Eleven Soviet specialists in various fields are taking part in the convocation Wednesday.

"For the first time since the beginning of the Cold War," the fund said, "leading citizens of the Soviet Union and the United States will engage in open, on the record discussions of eight vital world issues."

Kudryavtsev touched on various urban subjects that could be the object of joint U.S. - Soviet efforts, including, for example, the prospects for the development of cities for the next 100 years.

"I think that the exchange of experience in this field between Soviet and American architects would be very useful," he said through an interpreter.

"The problem," he added, "is not only to create a livable environment for present populations but also to think of generations to come."

Soviet planning for its big cities, Kudryavtsev said, includes limiting their growth. Moscow, he said, has a population of seven million now and will not exceed 7.5 million by the year 2000.

But Kudryavtsev, saying that he was not propagandizing, said any limitation would be difficult in the United States because of this nation's economic system.

Another area for cooperation, the urban expert said, would be the role of municipalities in city construction. Despite differing economic and political systems, he said, New York City municipal representatives could learn something from visiting Soviet cities.

"I think that an exchange of experience between the two countries could be very useful," Kudryavtsev said. So far, he said, there have been visits between the countries but "no close technical cooperation."

Among the things the Russians could learn from this country, he said, concern the pace at which big buildings are constructed with excellent materials, especially decorative materials, and the ability of architects to organize the interiors of some of the best buildings.

Radio telescope draws scientists

WESTERBORK, Netherlands (AP) - The world's newest and biggest radio telescope, probing eight billion light years into space, is beckoning U.S. scientists to Europe.

"There is almost a brain drain in reverse," said Ernst Raimond, superintendent of the observatory to be opened here June 24.

Many U.S. scientists want to come to Europe, Raimond said, because Europe has a more ambitious radio astronomy outlook than the United States.

The observatory has 12 parabolic radio telescopes each 25 meters in diameter and spread over a one - mile area. The plant was inspected last week by experts from many countries.

Dutch astronomers are hoping to probe the mystery of the start of the universe, which according to the "big bang" theory, originated about 10 billion light years ago.

Raimond said he is concerned that his telescope may encounter interference from a nearby mystery transmitter of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization which has caused front - page speculation in the Dutch press.

anti-riot proposal voted down in Michigan House

By UPI

anti - riot proposal which would give local governmental wide powers to declare emergencies and impose curfews, fell four votes short of passage in the Michigan House Monday.

Opponents of the proposal, led by recent racial riots in the Detroit suburb of Rouge and surrounding communities, mustered only 52 necessary 56 votes needed for passage on the House floor.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Joyce D-Allen Park, the anti - riot bill would have allowed cities, towns, townships and counties to form interim committees which would have been empowered to impose curfews, prohibit the sale of alcohol, gasoline and firearms as well as declare a state of emergency.

A similar measure was vetoed by former Gov. George Romney three years ago.

Mrs. Symons, whose legislative district includes the troubled city of Lincoln Park, said she plans to move for a reconsideration vote on her bill.

step toward instituting a police state," said Rep. Jackie Vaughn, D-Detroit.

Under current Michigan law, only the governor has the clear-cut authority to declare states of emergency even though mayors and city councils occasionally take on those duties.

Dutch astronomers are hoping to probe the mystery of the start of the universe, which according to the "big bang" theory, originated about 10 billion light years ago.

Raimond said he is concerned that his telescope may encounter interference from a nearby mystery transmitter of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization which has caused front - page speculation in the Dutch press.

Members may be picked up in the College office in the Hall.

Firing time - consuming procedural motions into the midst of floor debate, the black caucus successfully staved off a final vote until nearly midnight.

Foes of the proposal argued that the bill would have given local governmental officials "dictatorial powers to suspend civil rights" and accused backers of "pushing the panic button."

Erie safeguard sought by Ohio

WASHINGTON (AP) - The State of Ohio appealed to the Supreme Court Tuesday to safeguard Lake Erie from mercury contamination.

Ohio Atty. Gen. Paul W. Brown said two chemical companies, one in Michigan and the other in Canada, have been feeding poisonous mercury and mercury compounds into the lake for years.

Brown said the justices should order them to stop, clean up the lake and pay damages to the people of Ohio for harm to the fish, other wildlife and vegetation.

The targets of Brown's suit are the Dow Chemical Co. of Canada and the Wyandotte Chemicals Corp. Dow, said Brown, has been discharging mercury into the St. Clair River since 1949 in its manufacture of caustic soda and chlorine near Sarnia.

Brown said Wyandotte Chemicals has been making similar discharges into the Detroit River for several years. The waters of the two rivers feed into the lake.

Also named in the suit is the Dow Chemical Co., which owns all outstanding shares of capital stock of Dow of Canada.

Brown asked the court to assert original jurisdiction - to take the case on directly rather than leave preliminary action to lower courts.

He said the situation is urgent and that Ohio has no speedy legal remedy other than to ask the Supreme Court for a permanent injunction against the alleged contamination.

"The potential for deadly consequences from the continued mercury pollution of Lake Erie cannot be overstated," he said.

Brown recalled that 110 people were killed or severely disabled from 1953 to 1960 after eating fish caught in the mercury polluted waters of Minamata Bay, Japan.

"There must not be a Lake Erie tragedy repeating the Minamata Bay tragedy," he said. "Action by this court now can avoid this threat."

In sufficient quantity mercury is a lethal poison for which there is no known antidote. Canada has banned all fishing from its side of the St. Clair River and the Detroit River and in St. Clair.

Lake Erie, bordered by Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New York and Canada, has been a plentiful source of white bass, carp, perch, catfish, coho and other fish.
