Nixon sends troops into Cambodia

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon dramatically announced Thursday night that American ground troops have been ordered, at his order, a Communist base complex extending 20 miles into Cambodia.

Nixon told a nationwide radio and television audience that he would stand by his order, certain to provoke controversy, even at the risk of becoming a one-term president.

"This is not an invasion of Cambodia," he asserted. "The areas in which these troops will be launched are completely occupied and controlled by North Vietnamese forces. Our purpose is not to occupy the areas. Once enemy forces are driven out of these sanctuaries and their military supplies destroyed, we will withdraw."

The attack, commanded by American officers and augmented by units of the South Vietnamese army, began about 7 p.m. Washington time — about two hours before Nixon addressed the nation and about one hour before he met with Democratic and Republican leaders of Congress to discuss his decision.

A White House source, who declined to be quoted by name, said several thousand U.S. combat troops were involved in the operation, which he said is expected to last six weeks to two months.

This official said the new move would not affect Nixon's April 20 announcement that at least 150,000 American troops will be withdrawn from South Vietnam by May 1971.

Nixon said, "I have concluded the time has come for action" because, he argued, the enemy's moves "in the last 10 days clearly endanger the lives of Americans who are in Vietnam now and would constitute an unacceptable risk to those who would be there after our withdrawal of 150,000."

The chief executive said he had three choices, one to do nothing, the second to provide massive military aid to Cambodia and the third "to go to the heart of the trouble."

Announcing that he had selected the third alternative, he said:

"Tonight, American and South Vietnamese units will attack the headquarters for the entire Communist military operation in South Vietnam. This key control center has been occupied by the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong for years in blatant violation of Cambodia's neutrality."

"We take this action not for the purpose of expanding the war into Cambodia but for the purpose of ending the war in Vietnam and winning the just peace we will desire," Nixon said.

The area of the attack was in the "fishhook" area of Cambodia, about 50 miles northwest of Saigon and northeast of Cambodia's "Parrot's Beak" region attacked Wednesday by South Vietnamese troops with American advice and support.

Nixon, without naming him, noted that Republican Sen. George D. Aiken of Vermont had said Wednesday American involvement in Cambodia meant the GOP had lost all chance of winning the November elections.

"Others are saying today," Nixon declared, "that this move against the enemy's sanctuaries will make me a one-term president. No one is more aware than I am of the political consequences of the action I have taken ...

"But I have rejected all political considerations in making this decision."

"... I would rather be a one-term President than to be a two-term President at the cost of seeing America become a second-rate power and see this nation accept the first defeat in its proud 190-year history."

The President concluded that rather than wind up by seeking support for himself, "I ask for support of our brave men fighting tonight halfway around the world — not for territory — not for glory — but so that their younger brothers and their sons and your sons will be able to live in peace and freedom."

One section of the address seemed aimed at Communist China and the Soviet Union. Said Nixon:

"These actions are in no way directed at the security interests of any nation. Any government that chooses to use these actions as a pretext for harming relations with the United States will be doing so on its own responsibility and at its own initiative and we will draw the appropriate conclusions."

Reciting American actions to halt the bombing of North Vietnam, reduce air operations in the South, plan to withdraw more than 250,000 troops and offer to negotiate flexibly, Nixon said the reply from the Communist camp "has been intransigence at the conference table, belligerence in Hanoi, massive military aggression in Laos and Cambodia and stepped-up attacks in South Vietnam, designed to increase American casualties."

Nixon touched only briefly on Cambodia's request for extensive military assistance. He did say:

"Unfortunately, while we deeply sympathize with the plight of seven million Cambodians whose country is being invaded, massive amounts of military assistance could not be rapidly and effectively utilized by the small Cambodian army against the immediate threat."

Bombings Link exists Police think

Two new bombings in East Lansing may be linked to the recent bombings of three East Lansing banks and the vandalism of high school buses, according to East Lansing police.

A firebomb cracked a side window at the First National Bank early Thursday morning. The building and nearby sidewalk were scorched by the bomb, a bottle filled with a flammable liquid, police said. An East Lansing water pumping station was damaged early Wednesday by a bomb struck from a lead pipe, police said. Damage was confined to an outside radiator and fan and did not affect the water pumps. Police are unsure what explosive was used in making the bomb.

Last Friday night firecracker bombs shattered the plate glass doors in three East Lansing banks, including the First National Bank. The other banks were the East Lansing State Bank and the East Lansing Savings and Loan Assn.

Steve Naert, East Lansing deputy chief of police, said that it appears a pattern is developing, but police are not sure who or what groups are behind it.

"I assume the bombings are connected," he said, "but we do not know for sure."

The wave of local bombings began in March when a pigeon laboratory in Olds was firebombed, causing $1,700 damage. The building was again set afire a month, causing an additional $500 damage.

Plate glass doors of the Administration Bldg. were shattered April 1 by what police believe to be firecracker bombs similar to ones used on East Lansing banks last week.

Firecrackers are apparently taped together and placed on windows with a remote fuse that burns down and ignites them. Such a device was found unexploded in a window of Jacobson's on the night of the Administration Bldg. was damaged.

Police guard Capitol; White Panthers rally

The White Panthers, an Ann Arbor-based youth commune, staged a "Grassroots for the Masses" rally on the steps of the Michigan State Capitol Thursday afternoon in support of the legalization of marijuana in Michigan.

A heavy police guard was stationed in and around the Capitol. No incidences of violence were reported.

After more than two hours of chanting on the statehouse steps, a group of about 100 White Panthers entered the State Capitol. They were ordered out of the building after they began cheering a speech by Sen. Basil Brown, D-Highland Park, in opposition to the police guard.

Brown said the use of policemen was unnecessary and that further demonstrations could be prompted by the play of police in the Capitol.

Policemen should be used to put down disturbances not create them," he said. "I don't condone illegal or disruptive tactics, but I am opposed to a police state."

Several legislators objected to the ordering of the White Panthers out of the gallery.

Sen. Roger E. Craig, D-Deerborn, pointed out that various other groups, such as recent abortion reform supporters, have applauded during speeches but have not been ordered out of the gallery.

"It appears that it is not a question of how many demonstrations there are but of who is demonstrating," Craig said.

Sen. Thomas F. Schweigert, R-Petoskey and president pro tempore of the Senate, denied Craig's request that the Senate reconsider its order to have the gallery cleared. Schweigert said the situation was a "state of emergency" and that the law allowing a senator to question the president's ruling did not apply at that time.

Sen. Robert J. Huber, R-Troy, said he supported the president's order and objected to the "intimidation of the Senate."

As the Panthers left the gallery, carrying White Panther flags, they shouted, "Free John Sinclair." Sinclair, the leader of the group, is now serving a 9½ to 10-year sentence at Northern Michigan Penitentiary

Student, National Guard clashes continue at OSU

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Screaming students and National Guardsmen clashed repeatedly on the Ohio State University campus in a second day of violence Thursday.

At least 28 policemen and scores of demonstrators were injured. Several students suffered gunshot wounds. Nearly 300 persons were arrested since the first confrontation between students and police Wednesday afternoon.

Tear gas was used to break up crowds of students chanting, "Pigs Off Campus" and "Pigs Go Home." Guardsmen, the Ohio Highway Patrol, and city police tried to keep the crowds small and manageable.

A 6 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew was imposed on a two-square-mile area around the university for the second night Thursday. Police banned the sale of guns, ammunition and gas masks throughout the city.

The university, which has 45,000 students, cancelled night classes a second straight night to conform to the curfew. Michael White, one of three students who sought a meeting with John Mount, OSU Vice President for Student Affairs, quoted him Thursday as saying: "I'm sorry, I won't negotiate with anyone today."

White left Mount's office, he said, to tell more than 2,000 students waiting in a campus park that "Mount won't negotiate."

"I don't want to see this campus burned down," White said. By day's end nearly 300 persons were arrested. One hundred or more police and demonstrators were treated for injuries. Four persons were hospitalized, three with gunshot wounds. Police said they did not know the source of the gunfire.

University President Novice Fawcett, who cancelled classes Wednesday night, called for classes to meet on schedule Thursday. However, many professors called off sessions when tear gas drifted into campus buildings.

Fawcett suspended all arrested students. Executive offices in the university administration building were closed because of gas fumes. Three elementary public schools near the campus closed early for the same reason.

Gov. James A. Rhodes had 1,200 National Guard troops working in shifts to help police and highway patrolmen patrol the campus and nearby residential and business areas. Rhodes called up 600 additional troops in the second day of campus violence.

Fawcett said violence would not be tolerated. He promised to keep Guardsmen on duty as long as necessary to insure campus security.

The protests started Wednesday noon as a peaceful, somewhat disorganized students strike protesting a lack of university response to demands from a student group.

The 11 demands included more black students and faculty and severance of all ties with war research and the military.

The protests quickly escalated to violent confrontations. Police began arresting demonstration leaders.

Damage was mainly to four buildings around The Oval, a mid-campus park and focal point of the demonstrations. Windows were broken, office and classroom furnishings smashed. Water damaged one building where students turned on fire hoses.

Birth control, V.D. booklet hit by Feurig

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

Response to a booklet prepared by MSU students offering facts on birth control, pregnancy, abortion and venereal disease (V.D.) has been generally favorable, although some criticism was raised by Dr. James S. Feurig, director of Olin Health Center.

Feurig said despite a good purpose and format the booklet contains some inaccuracies and should be revised.

Distributed widely on campus, the 20-page, pocket-size booklet was written, edited and published by four resident assistants (R.A.'s) from Phillips Hall. The girls found that from their experience as R.A.'s a lot of serious problems were caused by unfortunate ignorance concerning contraception and what may be done if it fails.

"We felt it was really important to provide a handy, simple source of knowledge that was localized," said Aloha A. Ruddy, Garden City senior.

So far 25,000 copies have been made available to students in residence halls.

Cambodia assault 'grave,' senators say

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, calling the U.S.-backed South Vietnamese assault into Cambodia "a grave development," demanded Thursday that the Nixon administration answer important "questions concerning United States policy in the widening war in Indochina."

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said the committee specifically wanted to know if the attack was requested or backed by the Cambodian government and was intended as a one shot, or a continuing operation.

But the committee deferred action on a series of legislative proposals until after President Nixon's Thursday night speech with Fulbright conceding, "I don't think there is any actual, practical way we can in the near future deny the President the power to order American troops into Cambodia."

Republican senators, taking their cue from a White House memorandum, defended the attack as a short-term measure designed to protect U.S. troops in Vietnam.

The statement issued by the Foreign Relations Committee was in line with the position it took at a session Monday with Secretary of State William P. Rogers when members strongly opposed any U.S. involvement in Cambodia. Fulbright said a letter containing the committee's questions was being prepared for dispatch to the

S. Viet troops seek enemy in Cambodia

SAIGON (AP) — A force of 15,000 South Vietnamese supported by U.S. advisers and helicopter gunships thrust 24 miles into Cambodia Thursday seeking to wipe out enemy sanctuaries and link up with hard-pressed Cambodian troops.

Military observers said it was too early to assess the two-day offensive in the Parrot's Beak area 50 miles northwest of Saigon. North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops who have been roaming the area with impunity appeared to be fading away and putting up little resistance.

The invaders, working in four task forces, reported capturing more than 150 weapons and 50 tons of rice, most of it in sacks from Red China, and destroying 350 bunkers and 160 storage huts.

The South Vietnamese government has insisted that its troops are under orders to complete their assignment in the Parrot's Beak and return to South Vietnam.

Tri's announced plan to reach the Cambodians seems to have raised a credibility question. A Cambodian spokesman said in Phnom Penh Thursday that Cambodian troops were not taking part in the offensive and had not been consulted.

In South Vietnam, North Vietnamese forces attacked allied installations in Northern I Corps and shot down two more U.S. helicopters. Five Americans were reported killed and 29 wounded.

HOLDS OUT

High winds hit, but Park stays

By CHAS FLOWERS

Although high winds Wednesday night knocked numerous trees down in Ingham County and left some areas in the southern part of the county without power for four hours, East Lansing and MSU escaped severe damage, local police said.

Many tornado funnels were reported sighted aloft, and two touched down in Eaton Rapids in Eaton County. One reportedly tore the porch off a house.

None of the several reported touchdowns in Ingham County were confirmed.

No trees or wires were knocked down on campus, but the recently established

"People's Park," between Wells and Erickson halls was hard hit. Nearly all of the tents erected there were blown down, while their owners took refuge in Wells during the tornado warnings between 8:30 and 11 p.m.

"Where were you when the storm hit?" was the question most often asked as the campers worked late to put their tents back up and dry them out.

Despite the severe weather, 60 to 75 of the over 100 members of the congregation spent the night, the third straight night of rain.

Besides the weather, some of the student campers report having difficulty studying, as this is not only the rainy season but also the season for midterm examinations.

"Some of us don't study, but some of us never did," a coed who calls herself Ralph said. "I study as much here as I ever did."

As many as 20 classes are held daily in the park, a student who prefers to be called Ajax said.

The U.S. Weather Bureau issued a tornado warning again Thursday evening. At least one funnel was seen about three miles west of campus.

For most of the campers in the park, this spelled only another soggy night. None expressed any desire to leave the park permanently.

"I plan to spend the rest of my life here," a camper named Louise said. "I really dig it."

Kopechne case legally concluded

BOSTON (AP) — The attorney general of Massachusetts said Thursday "the legal aspects are over" in the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, and he expects no criminal action against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

"Legally, that's it," said Atty. Gen. Robert H. Quinn, referring to release of the inquest report into the girl's death, "but politically it remains to be seen."

Quinn, in Washington, D.C., to argue a case, said the Massachusetts Supreme Court ruled that publication of the inquest report forecloses any prosecution unless new facts come to light.

The attorney general's comments came one day after release of the report in which District Court Judge James A. Boyle said he did not believe part of Sen. Kennedy's story, and said that Kennedy was negligent in the accident that took Miss Kopechne's life last July 18.

Sen. Kennedy said he believed the judge's finding was not justified, and said, "The facts of this incident are now fully public and eventual judgement and understanding rests where it belongs."

BLACK PANTHER RALLY

Troops alerted for Yale protest

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — National Guardsmen were alerted and 4,000 federal troops were being airlifted into New England Thursday for a potentially explosive May Day rally of Black Panther sympathizers. Armored vehicles reportedly were on suburban standby.

Sponsors estimated that Friday's demonstration might draw as many as 35,000 to the New Haven green, on the edge of Yale University's Ivy League campus. The rally was organized on behalf of Panther national chairman Bobby Seale and seven other murder case defendants.

"We are calling for a peaceful mobilization, and we want to make that clear," said a Panther spokesman. Party emissaries were said to have fanned through the East to urge nonviolence on black and white demonstrators headed in this direction.

However, the Defense Department ordered a brigade of the 82nd Airborne division flown from Ft. Bragg, N.C., to Westover Air base at Chicopee, Mass. A regiment of the Second Marines was airlifted from Camp LeJeune, N.C., to Quonset Point Naval Air Station, R.I.

"New Haven has been turned into a military base... to credit an atmosphere to break down the mass mobilization we have created," said David Hilliard, the Panther's national chief of staff. The 269-year-old university was not itself a cosponsor with the Panthers of the mass rally. But arrangements were made to feed and house the demonstrators on the Yale campus.

Police Chief James F. Ahern's force was being reinforced by an estimated 500 or more Connecticut National Guardsmen, called up by Gov. John Dempsey.

Mayor Bartholomew Guida said the militiamen would be stationed on the city's streets Friday as weekend Panther demonstrations got underway. He added they would not be held back "at some distant location waiting to be called in the event of violence."

The dispatch of the federal troops on a standby basis followed an appeal from Dempsey, who told U.S. Atty. Gen. John Mitchell that "violence could escalate beyond our capacity to contain it."

The Pentagon responded by ordering the paratroopers and Marines to federal installations within quick reach of New Haven "as a purely precautionary measure."

Sponsors of the weekend demonstration was the Black Panther party's Defense Committee of New Haven, demanding release of the eight party members awaiting trial.

Seale and the other seven Panthers await trial on murder charges in connection with the slaying of Alex Rackley, whose body was found in a swamp in rural Middlefield, Conn., last May 21.

ON NADER IDEAS

Trustees seek aid in GM vote

The Board of Trustees has asked the University Business Affairs Committee to consider the proposals before the General Motors stockholders and recommend how the University should vote.

The University owns 7,100 shares of GM stock. Among the proposals to be voted on at the stockholders' meeting late in May are two from consumer's rights crusader Ralph Nader.

Nader's proposals would expand the board of directors from 24 to 27 members to include three representatives in the public interest, amend the certificate of incorporation to limit GM's endeavors to those in the public interest of health and safety and require GM management to establish a shareholders committee to oversee the public impact of GM decisions.

The Business Affairs Committee could recommend voting with the company, with Nader or not voting.

It will make its recommendations at the May 15 meeting of the board.

The State Court of Appeals has ordered a new trial for a 17-year-old youth because the youth's father allowed police to search the boy's room without the boy's consent.

Police found a quantity of marijuana in a hi-fi speaker during the search and the boy was convicted on a charge of possession and sentenced to three years on probation.

In reversing Oakland Circuit Judge Philip Pratt, the appeals judges held Thursday that the father could legally admit police to search his house for the evidence they had been told was there.

But it said the father had no personal or punishable involvement in the suspected crime and could not waive his son's constitutional right to consent to an otherwise unlawful search.

"The right was personal to the son as the real and only defendant and could be waived only by him," the court said.

An anti-riot bill aimed at giving cities wide power to declare states of emergencies and impose curfews was rejected by the Michigan House Thursday for the second time in a week.

Backers of the proposal scraped up only 46 of the necessary 56 votes for approval. The final vote was 46-48.

The proposal, sponsored by Rep. Joyce Symons, D-Allen Park, fell four votes short of passage earlier this week.

Profs describe work conditions

By BARBARA PARNES
State News Staff Writer

The Michigan Employment Relations Commission will reconvene at 9:30 a.m. today following six and one-half hours of testimony Thursday in the case of two assistant professors charging MSU with unfair labor practices in violation of the Public Employment Relations Act.

Eileen Van Tassel and Bertram Murray Jr., Assistant professors of natural science, have appealed to the Michigan Employment Relations Commission on the grounds that Emanuel Hackel, chairman of the Dept. of Natural Science, allegedly discriminated against them for concerted efforts to improve working conditions.

Both Murray and Miss Van Tassel have been denied reappointment by Hackel on the recommendation of the elected Departmental Advisory Committee. Their appointments expire August 31, 1971.

In testimony Thursday, Murray and Miss Van Tassel described their efforts to effect changes in the department.

Murray, 36, said he has been disappointed "in the natural science course and in the attitude in the classroom" from the first day he started teaching at MSU in September, 1968. Miss Van Tassel, 30, came to MSU at the same time.

"My feelings were that the problems were caused by the course being required of students and the common final examination which I think tied my hands in the classroom," Murray said. "I had the responsibility of preparing students for a common examination for which I didn't know the questions."

Murray said he and other faculty members including Miss Van Tassel petitioned to meet with Hackel in spring of 1969 to clarify the department's policies on promotion and reappointment. The request was never answered, he said.

Miss Van Tassel told the trial examiner that she was dissatisfied with the "kinds of restrictions placed upon me in classroom in terms of how I viewed general education."

In his testimony, Hackel denied charges that he discriminated against Murray and Miss Van Tassel in the availability of research money, the awarding of committee assignments and the awarding of mid-year salary increases in Jan., 1970.

He also denied threatening to terminate their appointments.

Stevens, Huff voice doubts on 4-year tuition contracts

By MARILYN PATTERSON
State News Staff Writer

Two trustees said Thursday they are willing to discuss the establishment of student fee contracts.

Both, however, also voiced reservations about a contract system of determining tuitions.

The Committee on Student Tuition is conducting a petition drive to request the trustees to look into establishing a contract which would fix a student's tuition rate for four years after he enters the University.

"I will check into anything," board chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, said. "But I will insist that it would have to be on an ability to pay basis."

"I am opposed to having tuition altogether," Stevens said. "Universities shouldn't have to charge tuition. Public education should be free. But it's forced on the universities. Tuitions are a tax like any other tax and the only kind of tax I can support is an ability to pay tax."

Warren Huff, D-Phymouth, said there is "a lot of merit in assuring young people what costs will be."

"There must be some brake on the assumption of many administrators and trustees that the student is a reservoir they can tap whenever they are short of money," Huff said.

Huff questioned, however, whether the tuitions assessed by one board can be binding on the next.

"Two board members' terms run out every other year," he said. "I wonder if the new board members can be held to the tuitions determined by the old board members."

Stevens said he agrees with the students who ask for a fixed tuition, yet he thinks a tuition contract would have to be worked out with the legislature.

"The students and their parents should be putting pressure on the legislature and Gov. Milliken to let them know that the education budgets cannot be cut," he said. "A great deal of study would have to go into something like this (the contract) so that you wouldn't cut out the quality of education."

Both Stevens and Huff said the trustees will not be able to assess next year's tuition until after the state legislature approves the University budget. The legislature usually acts on the budget in June or July.

"I would oppose a tuition increase," Stevens said. "Hopefully they'll (the legislature) appropriate enough money that we won't have to increase tuition."

The University requested a budget for 1970 - 71 of $71 million, a $17 million increase over this year's appropriations. The governor's suggested budget was $61 million. The Senate Appropriations Committee is now considering the budget requests.

20 VOTES NEEDED

Abortion reform bill set for final Senate debate

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

The Senate adopted Thursday a committee substitute for abortion reform and positioned the issue for final debate next week.

Sen. N. Lorraine Beebe, R-Deerborn, said the bill, developed in her committee, should be up for debate and a vote on Tuesday and predicted that, if it stands substantially as it is, it would get 21 votes, one more than is needed for passage.

However, Sen. Basil Brown, D-Highland Park, said he will move today to send the bill to the Judiciary Committee. Mrs. Beebe said it would be "touch and go" whether that motion would pass.

She stated that the Brown motion would be a move to kill the bill.

"I'm not saying that is his intention," Mrs. Beebe said, "but it has been in (that committee) before and it died." She was optimistic about the bill's acceptability to the members of the upper chamber, calling it, "a good progressive bit of legislation."

In Tuesday's discussion, the Senate also will discuss four substitutes offered by Sen. John McCauley, D-Wyandotte, that would remove all references to abortion in present Michigan statutes.

This goes far beyond the adopted substitute which allows abortion only until the 90th day of pregnancy for women have been residents for 90 days. As written, the bill allows the abortion to take place in any licensed health facility, including a doctor's office.

In Thursday's action, the Senate defeated four more amendments. Earlier this week, the Senate defeated five other amendments and passed one that deleted the penalty provisions in the bill.

The amendments defeated Thursday would have required a doctor to certify under oath the pregnancy had not gone beyond 90 days, required three co-suiting physicians and struck out the restrictions of residency and length of pregnancy.

Two other amendments were withdrawn.

Sen. L. Harvey Lodge, R-Waterford, termed the requirement for certification under oath of a doctor as the "most dangerous amendment (offered) until now."

"It puts us back into the Dark Ages," Brown said, "This amendment cripples the bill unnecessarily."

Dean investigating coed room exchange

Eldon R. Nonamaker, dean of students, said Thursday night that his staff is investigating "grapevine" information that two men and two women have exchanged rooms in Snyder - Phillips Halls in violation of University regulations.

He said that "to the best of my knowledge, two sets (of men from Snyder Hall and women from Phillips) may have moved from one side to the other."

They will be referred to the Student - Faculty Judiciary if they have violated residence hall regulations," he said.

The exchange of rooms reportedly followed a Tuesday vote by students - identifying themselves as a commune - to allow coed living to those who wanted it.

Nonamaker said the charge to be brought against the four students will be basically that women's halls are women's halls and men's halls are men's halls, and they are moving into an area which is not designated for a person of the opposite sex.

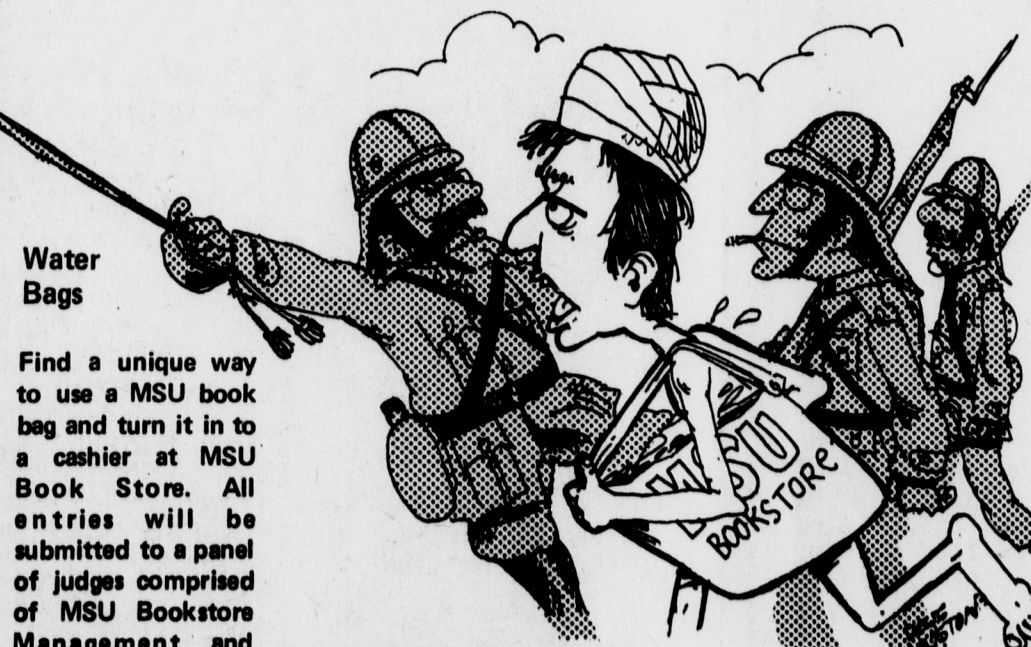

A residence halls staff member said that four students have actually made the move to the other side.

Should the Judiciary find such students guilty, it could impose punishment up to suspension.

Agnew needs education on college happenings

Spiro Agnew, that lead-tongued orator of the Chesapeake, has once again removed his foot and opened his mouth to tell the world about how Dr. Benjamin Spock is the root of all evil and how all those blacks the University of Michigan let in will lower the educational values of that fine institution.

While this is bothersome, it is to be expected of Agnew. The vice president has as much right as anyone else to pop off about anything he wants. In fact Spiro's diatribes are something to which we can all look forward every week. In a nation in need of a sense of humor, Spiro indeed plays an intrinsic role.

One can be a bit disturbed, however, when one of Spiro's one-liners advocates the removal of Kingman Brewster, president of Yale University. Brewster's crimes against society include stating what is becoming increasingly clearer — that a Black Panther cannot get a fair trial in America — and terming presidential elections a "hucksterized process."

Most likely Agnew views Brewster as a symbol of all that is wrong with the administration of American universities today. After the inept tutelage of "permissive upper-middle-class parents who learned their Dr. Spock and threw discipline out the window when they should have done the opposite," Spiro concludes that junior arrives at college and "finds there a smiling and benign faculty even more accommodating and less demanding than his parents."

This is not really a very realistic conception of what is going on in American universities. Granted, student activism is running rampant on campuses across the nation, but President Wharton has put the situation in a more proper perspective.

Too many people think of violent confrontations when they think of student activists. It is strange that Agnew has yet to mention students working in the ghettos and helping handicapped children.

Campuses have changed since Agnew's days. In Wharton's own words, "civil rights marches have replaced panty raids, and community services draws a bigger crowd than homecoming dance on a majority of campuses."

It would be refreshing if Spiro began educating himself about what really is going on in education. Agnew occupies the second highest office in this land and could conceivably hold the top slot one day. That day will be a disastrous one for the American system of education if Agnew himself is not soon educated.

A miscarriage of justice in political conviction

In Columbia, S. C., Tuesday the world witnessed yet another miscarriage of justice in justice's name. Three civilians who operated an anti-war coffee house catering to off-duty soldiers from nearby Ft. Jackson were found guilty of "operating a public nuisance" and sentenced to six years in prison.

If this seems like a stiff sentence for what in South Carolina is a common law misdemeanor, the simple fact is that it is. State Circuit Court Judge E. Harry Agnew who imposed the sentence (and denied 49 motions for a new trial) agreed that his decree was abnormal but stated that he could not overlook the influence that the defendants could have over young people and the future.

It is clear that the Columbia three have been found guilty of nothing more or less than a political crime. The U.F.O. Coffee House (as it was called) had been harassed on a number of occasions by both the military and the local authorities — in theory because it was a center for the drug traffic. This matter was pointed out by the prosecutor who called the U.F.O. a "cesspool of evil" — a truly enlightened phrase for the 20th Century.

The proprietors of the coffee house have stated that they made attempts to keep drug pushers out of their place. This is beside the point; the state did not bring charges relating to drug traffic and, therefore, it seems logical to assume that they did not have a sufficient case.

We have seen the forces of repression in this country use the drug laws (John Sinclair was one victim) to enforce political conformity, but the extreme bending of lesser offenses into pogrom tools is a not-so-familiar and sinister twist. It is a significant commentary on our times that the forces of "law and order" are the very ones that by bending the law out of all semblance of original intent are doing the most to undermine our legal system.

The prime concept of a democracy is the protection of the rights of the minority, rather than the will of the majority. It is clear that the high-handed use of statutes to punish political crimes represents a serious transgression from this precept. All we can say is that it is very sad that, yet again, we are forced to wonder if it should not have been the judge rather than the defendants on trial.

Who knows about pesticides?

It was no coincidence that Earth Day and spring happened together. Spring means flowers, trees, grass and insects. And flowers, trees, grass and insects mean herbicides and insecticides. So when you breathe that sweet Michigan air and laze around in the lush campus grass, remember!

You might want to think twice about which trees or shrubs you lie under or near, and you might wonder about letting your skin touch that luscious grass. Some control of insects is necessary, but seeing profuse spraying and dusting has made me wonder about the necessity of all that is done, and the manner in which it is done.

On Earth Day itself, near Beaumont Tower, a man was spraying up into the trees. An observer said "It looked like water showering down. I ducked into a building, but other people walked casually by." The man did not pay attention to the people walking under, or near the trees he was spraying. This, and an incident I experienced have caused me to wonder. I would be interested in YOUR response. Perhaps I am over-cautious or over-frightened. Each "authority" I listen to offers an opinion contradictory to some other "authority's" opinion.

Last year I was standing on the lawn of a friend's East Lansing home, holding my year-old son. It was summer — mosquito-fogging season. I had seen no notice of plans for fogging the neighborhood, nor had any of the news media mentioned the city's insecticide-dispensing procedures. In fact, I have never been given any information I did not specifically request in the several years I have lived in the Lansing area.

As my son and I stood there on the private lawn of a private home a truck came down the street. I thought it was a cement mixer, until it approached the yard next to my friend's. Then I saw that it sprayed huge showers of foul-smelling insecticide across the lawn, reaching the doorway of the house. I ran toward my car, shielding the baby as well as I could. But the truck evidently saw me too late. I was sprayed enough to wet my clothes and legs. I think my son was fairly well protected from the spray.

I was concerned, as I had read about the known and suspected effects of some pesticides. I telephoned the police who checked to discover what combination of pesticides were used. The mixture contained malathion, highly toxic in sufficiently large doses. I was given no information about the percentage of each poison used. I was told that I was in no danger, that the spray was "completely harmless." Since my son and I have been fairly healthy during the past year, I have no reason to suspect any damage.

Some research, however, has detected long-range effects and cancer-producing agents in some pesticides.

What disturbs me is not only the widespread, public use of such radical techniques as fogging. It is the fact that I have NEVER encountered an instance in which the public was notified in advance that an area would be fogged. I was sprayed during broad daylight, around 1 p.m., a time when many children are outside playing.

The year before last, I had talked with a professional exterminator. I was concerned about taking the baby outside during or after spraying. The man was very patient, and he gave me what seems to be the viewpoint of many in his profession.

He made me feel over-cautious and silly.

He told me, above all, not to pay any attention to what the NEWSPAPERS say! Newspapers, he said, always distort the facts, and alarm the public.

Here I am... I am not trying to alarm the public. I am confused, perplexed, concerned. Perhaps you can help. I would be interested in any information you have that I don't have. (YOU meaning ANYONE who would like to reply, either to the State News editors, or to me, in care of the State News.)

The man who worked for an extermination company told me NOT to take the baby out of the house while they sprayed around it. He said the only danger of "fall-out" or "drift," is with large-scale mosquito fogging... such as that I was to experience the following year. But the following year the City of East Lansing officially told me there was no danger! I am indeed confused.

In addition, the exterminator said, that what his company used was safe. "We carry lots of insurance," he said, "so it's to our advantage to be careful." Ah, the innate humanism of man! "We wouldn't want to use anything that's harmful to mankind." I felt much better, until I telephoned the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture office for information about pesticide in foods. The man I spoke with was very nice and extremely helpful. He told me that much of the overuse of pesticides in the State of Michigan is attributable to private citizens who indiscriminately paint, spray and dust their homes and gardens each year, and to exterminators who falsely advertise and misuse their products and methods.

He, too, warned me that the "newspapers are misleading," in their reportage of pesticide research.

Thus, it appears that the exterminators contradict the government and the government does not trust the exterminators — but NOBODY trusts the press! Think about that, as you read this... maybe you shouldn't trust me...

It seems to me that it ought to be a truism, that the public should be warned IN ADVANCE of public fogging and other spraying and dusting of insecticides.

I will offer a few more facts and opinions I have gathered, in an article to follow. After that, I will write no more on the subject but will continue to duck, run, hold my breath and display other kinds of hysterical behavior when confronted with machines and men that dispense pesticides.

OUR READERS' MIND

Selling out Earth Day in the name of science

To the Editor:

With the empty rhetoric of Earth Day past, we return to reality. On April 29 between 8 and 8:30 a.m. I walked into my office to find that it was being filled with an insecticide directed in the vicinity of the elm tree outside. My questions about this procedure have brought some interesting responses such as: "the spraying is part of a campus-wide experiment" and "the insecticide is harmless". For the people who feel this way I would like to make "An Innocent Proposal" to test their beliefs. I would like to set up an experiment in their office and spray this insecticide around while they are there. To make it look "scientific", we can put some small potted elm trees in the office and cover one. As we have been taught "this covered plant is the control." The person who agrees to this will not be told the day of the experiment, so that he will probably be wearing some synthetic fabric dissolved by the solvent with the insecticide. (I am told that cars are covered in the line of spray, but not the people. They aren't even warned.) The added attraction in this experiment will be a loud motor running. In case you haven't been to a recent lecture this is now called noise pollution, and most experiments indicate that it does not seriously affect the growth of plants.

The hypothetical experiment described above would be with your consent. The part of the "scientific" experiment that I received in my office on April 29 was without my consent. Since Homo sapiens is part of the Ecosystem (a currently popular word) together with Ulmus americana (elm), they are both part of the experiment. What is your stand on the use of humans in experiments without their consent?

Nazi review

To the Editor:

It is nice to see that Robert Kipper reads his mail. I'm sure Larry Lerner's charge that "all one would have to do to turn to Newsweek, Time and/or the New York Times to find practically identical criticisms and plaudits of current films" (State News, Wednesday, April 29, 1970) stirred him to action. His review of "The Damned" is a desperate attempt to be different and challenging; unfortunately, Mr. Kipper proves himself to be uninformed and unobservant. This is not to say that Mr. Kipper is not entitled to his opinion about a film, but he makes so many blunders about what is presented in the film that I am amazed that his review was printed.

First, the family (based on the Krupp is named Essenbach (and Achenbach for the SS cousin), not Resenbachs. Second, Martin does not, in the end, stand alone, he is very much the tool of his Gestapo captain cousin. Third, Visconti makes it very clear that this family is corrupt individually, coincidentally with the rise of the Nazis, except for Herbert Talman, the brother who flees and later returns (for love of his wife and child) and is sent to a concentration camp. And finally, (and here Mr. Kipper's lack of historical knowledge is staggering) Visconti does present Nazis honestly, he does not "exaggerate its evils" (sic). When Mr. Kipper says that "Nazi soldiers are portrayed as a bloody bunch of perverted brutes who approach lechery or a fling in bed with fellow soldiers with the same animal excitement that they do a massacre" (sic) and implies that this was not historically so, that Visconti has created a fiction, he shows his lack of knowledge of recent history. Obviously, Mr. Kipper knows nothing of the "Night of the Long Knives," when the elite of Hitler's interior army (notorious for its homosexual practices), was assassinated by Hitler's SS forces, which is factually portrayed in "The Damned." I advise Mr. Kipper to read some of the histories of the Nazi era; he would not be so cavalier in his opinions of how Nazism should be "honestly" (sic) presented.

One final point about fiction and history, Visconti does not attempt to present a documentary about Nazism or the Krupps, although he uses facts to present his view of that period of history. To say that Visconti "fears truth may not be incriminating enough so he distorts it for his own purposes" (sic) shows a lack of understanding of what Visconti attempted to do in "The Damned," but is an excellent comment on Mr. Kipper's approach in his review of an excellent and unusual film.

POINT OF VIEW

Semifinalists not promised aid

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following Point of View was written by Gordon A. Sabine, MSU vice president for special projects.

There is considerable inaccuracy being reflected in the comments being made about the amount of financial aid promised non-resident students who also happened to have been National Merit semifinalists as seniors in high school.

Such students must be divided into two groups — those who actually won Merit Scholarships, and those who did not.

The winners — and only the winners — are guaranteed all the financial aid their confidential family financial statement indicates they need.

The amount of this need is determined by the National Merit Scholarship Corp., not by MSU.

Upon application by the student to the Merit Corp., that need can be adjusted upward or downward at any time there is a significant change in the student's financial situation.

Students who were Merit semifinalists but not winners — and they are in the majority — received a very specific promise of very specific aid, upon proof of financial need.

What they were promised was up to $500 a year loan and up to $500 a year part-time campus job.

In every case that has been brought to my attention, such students did in fact receive precisely what the University promised.

For the non-winners, there never was any "escalation" promise — i.e., there was no indication that we could or would meet the total need or that the aid could be adjusted as the need increased.

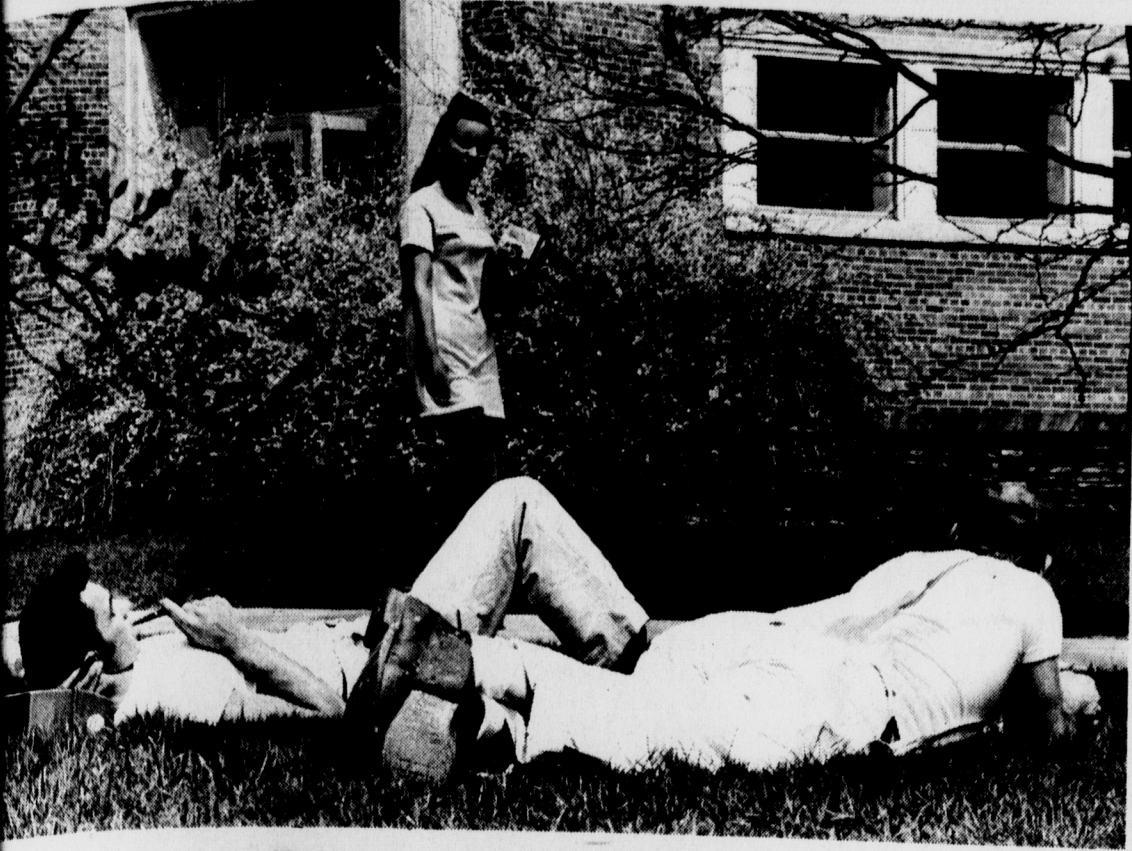

The problem, of course, is that students with much greater than $1,000 need decide to come to MSU even without adequate financial support. This is a decision the student makes, and sometimes — especially when the cost of attending MSU goes higher — it causes understandable financial difficulties.

Students regularly transfer from MSU to other institutions (and from other institutions to MSU) for many reasons, among them the cost. When this becomes the wise decision, for whatever reason, then the individual student must be mature enough to make it for himself.

MSU does actively urge National Merit

semifinalists to consider coming to MSU not because we can provide them with the necessary funds, but because we believe that we have among the best facilities and educational facilities in the United States. We have been delighted to welcome those students who can use the specific aid promised to supplement their personal resources and are thereby able to come. But at no time were there indications that the University would be responsible for meeting the total costs of their university education or be in a position to offset the impact of escalating costs in higher education which affect all students, not just Merit semifinalists.

Group pushes for Milliken

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Although Gov. William G. Milliken has not yet announced his candidacy for another term, Michigan citizens are already busy rallying support for his re-election.

The formation of a statewide "Michigan for Milliken Committee" was announced Thursday by S. John Byington, a Detroit communications executive who will serve as chairman for the group.

"We believe it essential to the future of our state that Gov. Milliken run for and win the governorship of Michigan this fall," Byington said.

Byington, who managed former Gov. Romney's successful campaign in 1966, explained that the committee was assembled as a "broad-based, citizens organization."

More than 50 prominent citizens from around the state have volunteered their support for Milliken and will serve as the steering committee.

"The steering committee is just the first step," Byington said. "We hope it will lead to a large volunteer group for the state."

The first task of the committee, he explained, will be to circulate the petitions needed to put Milliken's name on the ballot. A minimum of 10,301 signatures in total, from every Michigan county, is required.

The group also will work to round up support and money for the governor's campaign, should he decide to seek re-election.

When asked by newsmen if Milliken were "surprised or shocked" by the organization of the committee, Byington grinned and said the governor had only said he was "very pleased and encouraged and grateful."

He said the first he had spoken to Milliken about the committee was early Thursday morning but that he had been in contact with members of the governor's staff.

The group will open offices in Detroit and Lansing to "convince the people of Michigan that Milliken is their man," Byington said.

"Gov. Milliken has demonstrated leadership, vision and courage in advancing programs that are bold, innovative and sensitive to the problems of the '70s," he said,

"programs that will improve the quality of life for all the people of Michigan."

"Once we have the opportunity to inform people, I think they will respond very favorably," he added.

Milliken has been maintaining an official stance of non-candidacy but has reached the point where he cannot suppress a smile when asked if he will run. He already has picked U.S. Atty. James Brickley of Detroit as his running mate.

End to social oppression sought by 'gay' movement

The MSU Gay Liberation Movement (GLM) was organized last week to end societal oppression of the homosexual and to establish legal and social resources for "gay" students, a co-chairman said.

"Members believe that being homosexual says only one thing: emotionally you prefer your own sex," he said. "It says nothing about your worth and value as a human being."

At the first meeting at Snyder - Phillips Hall, both male and female gay students discussed legal assistance and opinion, affiliation with other groups and public relations.

"In support of the Snyder - Phillips Manifesto which states 'anyone can dance in our grill' the movement culminated their meeting by doing just that," he said. "For the first time in the history of MSU, 'gay' men and women danced with friends of their own sex without harassment."

The movement is concerned with abolishing common myths about the homosexual and creating understanding with all parts of society, the officer said.

Members of GLM met with students from the MSU Medical School Monday night to discuss the "gay" community.

In the future, Gay Liberation intends to establish a homosexual draft counseling center, collect legal information for its members and publish a newsletter for the local "gay" population.

Other Midwest groups have sponsored dances — one which was attended by more than 1,500 students — picnics, research and educational activities.

Presently GLM is seeking an office and a student center. Meanwhile, meetings will be held at off-campus locations.

The group desires to meet interested individuals and organizations to challenge the stereotyped image of the homosexual the co-chairman said. Arrangements to meet members may be made by writing to GLM, 101 Student Services Bldg.

A GLM meeting will be held at 8 tonight. For information call 355-6238.

'U' closes dorm releases to co-op, frats, sororities

By JULIE CLARK

Residence hall releases will no longer be available to fraternities, sororities and co-operative houses.

The Residence Halls Management Office made the announcement in a letter dated April 23 to those bodies which will be affected.

Each unit is usually allowed to release two members from University residence hall contracts during winter and spring terms. MSU will not offer this service to the 35 fraternities, 22 sororities and 13 co-op houses as of fall term, 1970.

"Because of the realignment in the number of students in the classes, the University can't allow students to break dorm contracts during the year anymore," Donald M. Schmidt, asst. manager of housing assignments, explained Tuesday.

Fraternities and sororities will be affected financially by the policy change. In the past, when members moved out of a house for student teaching or other reasons, new members from the residence halls were able to move in immediately.

Interfraternity Council President Paul Wenstrom sees "no recourse" to the policy.

"We'll have to take other measures to get around this. We may possibly hold rush at the end of this term to have fraternities re-evaluate themselves," Wenstrom said.

Although Panhel cannot help sororities financially, the council is looking into the possibility of a Panhellenic House for next year.

Committee delays vote on Blackmun nomination

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate Judiciary Committee on the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Harry A. Blackmun of Rochester, Minn., has been put off until next day.

There was no sign of any opposition to the 61-year-old U.S. 8th Circuit court judge, who drew bipartisan support at a three-day committee hearing Tuesday.

Robert C. Byrd, D-W. Va., requested the delay. He told newsmen he wanted committee members to have an opportunity to review the hearing record before voting.

Although Byrd said he was filled with respect for Blackmun's ability, integrity and legal philosophy and expects a vote for his confirmation, he wants "to see the fine

River Rouge calms, restrictions lifted

RIVER ROUGE (UPI) — Mayor John F. McEwan announced Thursday he was lifting a three-day-old curfew in this downriver Detroit suburb following a night of racial peace.

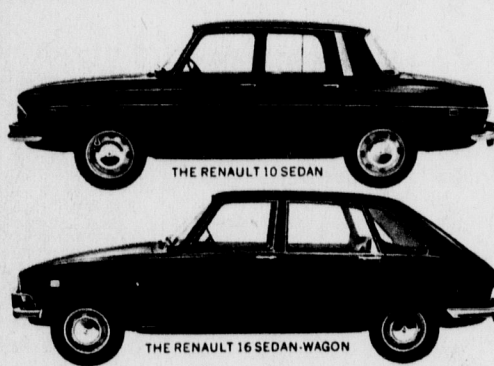

The dusk-to-dawn curfew was imposed Monday night after fist-fighting between black and white River Rouge High School students developed into street disturbances in the Negro section of the city.

No arrests, incidents or threats were reported Wednesday night or early today, McEwan said.

The mayor said authorities would continue to ban assemblies of more than five persons unless permission is obtained. He said the restriction would remain in effect indefinitely.

Other emergency controls, including a ban on the sale of alcohol and restrictions on the sale of gasoline, were lifted.

Lawmen of 10 states to use new computer

By TOM BOWERS
State News Staff Writer

The career criminal who skips from state to state to keep ahead of his record will find it more difficult to disappear and avoid prosecution once an East Lansing computer goes into operation for a new multi-state crime information network.

The system, now in the late stages of development, is called Project SEARCH (System for Electronic Analysis and Retrieval of Criminal Histories).

Michigan is playing a lead role in planning and implementing the project. The nationwide system's central computer will be located at the Michigan State Police headquarters in East Lansing.

"I would call it aerospace technology for law enforcement," Thomas J. Trimbach, technology specialist for the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, said. Trimbach is co-chairman of the national SEARCH project.

Ten states currently are participating in a demonstration program designed to test the feasibility of the project concept. Representatives of the 10 states are meeting in Washington today to chart the progress of the project.

The 10 states are being linked together in a computer network capable of rapidly transmitting a criminal's record from one state to another. The system test and demonstration is scheduled for this summer.

"Career criminals travel from state to state. We will be able to pass criminal histories from state to state, and we will be able to catch them with high-speed communications," Trimbach said.

At present, it is difficult to determine if a man arrested in one state is wanted elsewhere in the country, Trimbach explained.

For example, Lansing police may detain a man on suspicion of a minor offense. A check with Michigan's Law Enforcement Information Network (LEIN) reveals no Michigan arrest record. The suspect is shortly released.

The Lansing police do not know and have no efficient way of finding out, for instance, that the man is wanted in Arizona for burglary and in California for parole violation.

If, for some reason, the Lansing police do become suspicious of the man's record, they must obtain details by mail or telephone. Once obtained, the information must be hand transferred to local records.

The method is inefficient, expensive and time-consuming, Trimbach said. Because police may not hold a suspect indefinitely while searching the country for various bits of his record, many wanted men are released.

Although the operating concept of SEARCH is simple in nature, its effectiveness will far outstrip the present practice of thumbing through paper files to identify a suspect, according to those associated with the project.

Criminal record information is being collected and stored in computers in each of the participating states. In Michigan, much of the necessary information is already available in computer files used by the Michigan LEIN system.

When SEARCH is in operation, a police department in one state can feed a suspect's identification factors to the East Lansing switching and index center. The East Lansing computer will automatically search the computer files of all participating states and relay the results back to the inquiring agency.

The whole operation will take only minutes.

Plans are well under way to integrate video-type terminals into the system. The video terminals would allow SEARCH to transmit identification portraits (mug shots) and fingerprints at the same rapid pace.

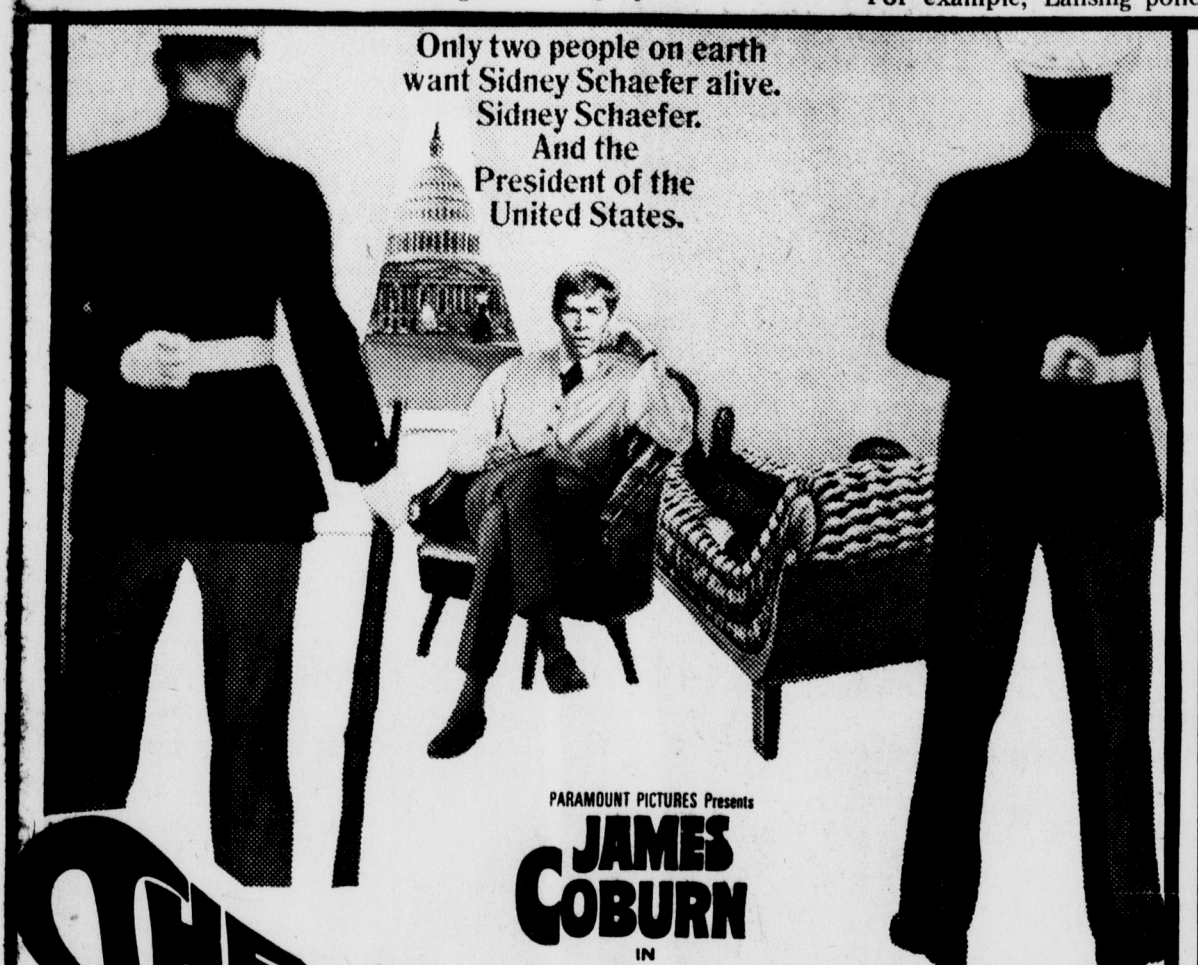

"With SEARCH, we will be able to construct a criminal's history immediately," Trimbach said.

States participating in the demonstration and test project besides Michigan are Arizona, California, Connecticut, Florida, Maryland, Minnesota, New York, Texas and Washington. In addition, Colorado, Illinois, New Jersey, Ohio and Pennsylvania are participating as observers and are expected to join the system later.

The 15 states represent 70 per cent of all crime reported in the United States in recent years.

MSU changes elm spraying

By ANN HODGE
State News Staff Writer

MSU's environmental quality team - in led to at least one attempt to control pollution. The annual spray program to protect campus elm trees was altered this year in response to environmental concern.

Spraying to curb Dutch elm disease on campus started Monday with precautions taken to eliminate any potentially harmful side effects.

"Without this spray program and our other control practices, the MSU campus could lose all of its 1,700 elm trees by 1980 with substantial losses in the first year," William Wallner, MSU extension entomologist, said.

He said all spraying was done by helicopter between the hours of sunrise and 7:30 a.m. when there was a high humidity and lack of wind to permit the best possible vertical drop.

The pilot was given a campus map showing each elm tree in color, and a polymeric gelling agent was added to the spray to improve tree coverage and control spray drift.

In the past, the most common method of treatment has been mist spraying from the ground. However, through five years of research, MSU scientists found that helicopter application is more effective and requires only one-third as much insecticide as ground application methods.

Methoxychlor is the chemical used to treat the campus elms. Although it is similar to DDT, methoxychlor is much less persistent and does not build up in biological systems.

"We stopped using DDT in our Dutch elm program five years ago because of its effect on water and wildlife," Wallner said. "Since then we've monitored the residues of methoxychlor in the soil beneath trees and the Red Cedar, and they're much lower than the DDT residues of previous years."

Wallner said methoxychlor is not dangerous to humans, but minor eye irritation can occur if an individual is exposed to the spray. The antidote in such cases is to flush the eyes with water.

MSU groundskeepers spray the trees in the Horticulture Gardens. This was the method used until recently when helicopters took over the job. Studies indicated that the helicopters were more efficient.

SENIORS WIN AWARDS

Landscapers honored

Three MSU seniors are winners of cash awards in a landscape competition at the Greenfield Village Clara B. Ford Garden Forum held last week.

Victor Nehlebel, Lansing senior, placed first with Jim Longstreth, Midland senior, and Darwin Baranski, Saginaw senior, placing second and third respectively. Greg Page, Birmingham senior, and Wilmer Gertz, Gladwin senior, received honorable mentions.

The theme of the forum was "Plants in the Garden: A Livable Environment." Students were given a landscape problem and developed their projects considering problems of soil type, existing trees, architectural style, lot size, contour and the size and economic status of the family.

"A Man Called Horse" is perhaps the first motion picture to treat the Indian in every detail of his life with unparalleled accuracy. It is drama - A sharpened to a cutting edge with authenticity... creating a new kind of excitement, enhancing even further this extraordinary story about this most extraordinary man.

It is 1825. Richard Harris, an aristocrat, comes to the prairies of South Dakota to discover what kind of man he really is.

He is captured by the Sioux who are fascinated by the first white man they have ever seen. Tethered naked to a stake and forced to fight with animals for food, this man they call Horse is reduced to man at his most primitive minimum.

His only escape: to become an accepted warrior of the tribe. He must convince his captors that he can endure anything they can endure.

The ultimate test of his courage is the Sun Vow Ritual. Brutal. Beautiful. Electrifying.

"A Man Called Horse" is unlike any motion picture you have ever seen.

Blacks criticize Detroit media

DETROIT (UPI) — A new organization called the National Assn. of Black Media Producers has accused six television stations and all but four of 37 radio stations in the Detroit area of racial discrimination.

Tony Brown, President of the two-month-old organization, made a list of demands and set a May 15 deadline for the stations to offer to negotiate.

GRAND RIVER BLOCK

Alleyway gets a face lift

By LINDA KNIBBS
State News Staff Writer

Beautification of the alleyway behind the stores on the 300 block of Grand River Avenue will continue this summer according to the plans of the Joint Downtown Redevelopment Committee.

The alleyway will be landscaped as a pedestrian walk with pavement, planters, benches, trees and lights. The project was designed by landscape architects Johnson, Johnson and Roy of Ann Arbor.

East Lansing businessmen, city officials and Chamber of Commerce members have been working together through the redevelopment committee since January, 1969, on plans to beautify the block. They hope to remove the pedestrian traffic from the Grand River sidewalk to the more convenient and appealing walk behind the stores.

"We are all cooperating to make the area more attractive," City Manager John M. Patriarche said. "If this pilot project is successful, we may continue with plans to beautify the rest of the downtown area."

Patriarche said the alleyway will be covered with pavement so delivery and trash trucks can service the stores. A schedule may be arranged later so trucks will be in the area only during certain hours of the day.

Utility companies have put all the wires underground, and stores on the block are redecorating their rear entrances.

The parking ramp on the same block will open in June, Patriarche said. The 393-car ramp will be connected to the new Jacobson's store by an arched walkway from the third and fourth deck of the ramp to the second and third floors of the store.

The new Jacobson's is scheduled to open in November. Plans for the store provide for a 10-foot arcade between the store and Campbell's Suburban Shop allowing pedestrians to reach the alleyway from Grand River.

Another 10-foot walk between Knapp's and the parking ramp will connect the alleyway with Albert Street.

Construction on the buildings and landscaping of the block will be completed by next spring, Patriarche said. The city and businesses on the block may promote art shows and have sidewalk sales for an opening of the area.

"Furthermore, our First Amendment rights of free speech are violated because they are not expressed over the air waves which is the property of the public leased to broadcasters."

Radio and Television licenses in Michigan are up for renewal by the Federal Communications Commission on Oct. 1. Licenses must be renewed every three years.

Among the association demands: — Include the "legitimate voice of black protest along with the status - quo orientation of your programming in the areas of public affairs, public service and news reporting."

— Establish scholarships and fellowships for minority members in broadcast careers.

— Include a "proportionate" number of Blacks in commercials.

— Pay black radio announcers and disc jockeys a "similar wage" to what whites receive.

— Start recruitment programs for blacks and minorities for on and off - the - air employment.

Station executives said they were studying the association's demands.

A survey indicated most stations have recruitment and training programs and the stations have asked help from the Urban League and the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP).

Russian studies group prepares future activities

Plans for next year's activities will be the main topic at the Thursday meeting of the Russian and Eastern European studies program at 7 p.m. in the Gold Room of the Union.

The group hopes to coordinate a program between MSU and the University of Michigan for the 1970-71 school year, which would include film clips, a weekend symposium and several get-togethers with foreign students studying in the mid - Michigan area.

Professor Domokos Kosary, a Hungarian historian, will speak to the group at 7:30 p.m. May 8 in the Green Room of the Union.

British 'effect film' leaves doubt, contention in wake

British produced in 1968, "If..." is one of the most controversial films to come out of that country in the past few years.

It tells of an exclusive boarding school whose prime objective seems to be to break the spirits of the students sent there. Mike Travers and two companions refuse to be bullied by submission by the out-of-date and perverted standards of the institution and resort to increasing degrees of rebellion, finally closing the film in a flash of glory for which the audience is totally unprepared.

"If..." is what this reviewer would term an "effect film": it's time objective is not really to tell a story, but to send the viewer home with something to think about. To a great degree it is successful, but Lindsay Anderson (the director) has the unfortunate tendency of going somewhat overboard, so that, by the end of the first hour, one is not really sure who the bad guys are. His brutality would be far more effective had it been tempered down a little, and the film, in showing no favor to anyone, leaves the viewer on the outside looking in, so to speak.

From its powerful opening to the equally tense end, "If..." is riddled with symbolism and fantasy/realism jumps. This, in turn, creates a problem, since the former is highly fragmented and difficult to understand, and the latter is not in any way discerned, giving rise to general confusion as to what is fantasy and what is not.

Intensifying this is Anderson's haphazard use of tinted black and white footage which one presumes means something, though what it means remains elusive. This technique has its advantages, too, in that it allows each viewer to take his own idea home with him.

The cast of "If..." is limited almost exclusively to newcomers, all of whom do a superb job. Particularly, Malcolm McDowell (Mike), David Wood (Johnny) and Rupert Webster (Phillips) deserve a hand for remarkable expression and fine intense performances. Anderson establishes his characters in revealing vignettes, his handling of individuals and groups leaving little to be desired.

Though I have some reservations about the film's receipt of the 1969 Grand Prix at Cannes over such films as "Easy Rider" and "Z", it does have a lot to offer and provides an evening of entertainment that is, to say the least, thought-provoking.

Flicks enrich weekend fare

Once again the movies dominate the weekend entertainment scene with "If..." on campus, and "Z" and "M*A*S*H," off campus, representing the top choices.

On-campus films

"If..." Lindsay Anderson's realistic fantasy about the violent overthrow of an outmoded British boarding school is a film one must merely "react to" rather than presume to understand. It is a difficult, puzzling work, more engrossing than entertaining, more ambitious than satisfying. It approaches the volatile problem of student dissatisfaction with irrelevant institutions and does so with considerable style, purpose and much ambiguity. Vincent Canby of the New York Times and Susan Stark of the Detroit Free Press placed "If..." on their 10-best lists. "If..." shows at 6:30, 8:30 and 10:30 tonight and Saturday nights in Wilson and Conrad.

Singer marks birth of Israel

Marking the 22nd anniversary of the independence of Israel, a program featuring an Israeli folk singer, Osnat Paz, will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Union Parlor.

Miss Paz, whose repertoire is said to capture the spirit of Israeli life, has performed at Carnegie Hall and many colleges in the U.S. and abroad.

The program, which is sponsored by Kadema, the MSU Hillel Foundation and the Israeli Club, will include Israeli folk dancing.

The public is invited and refreshments will be served.

this anti-establishment comedy on her 10-best list. She called it "free-wheeling, outrageous and very funny, laced with a sophisticated zaniness that is sheer delight." The film shows tonight and Saturday night. Check ads for location and showtimes.

"FONDO - YLIS." A Mexican film, violently pessimistic and anti-religious, it incited a riot during its first Mexican showing in 1968. Shows tonight and Saturday night in Wells.

"COME BACK AFRICA" will be shown at 7 tonight in 108 Wells. The film, sponsored by the African Studies Center, was made secretly by a non-professional staff.

Racial tension in Johannesburg, South Africa, is depicted. There is no admission charge.

Lansing area films

Three new films open this weekend:

"LOVING." This tale of modern marriage, starring George Segal and Eva Marie Saint, opens tonight at the Michigan.

"THE LIBERATION OF L.B. JONES." William Wyler's study of racism down south opens tonight at the Spartan East.

"SKULLDUGGERY." This science fiction film about subhuman creatures shows at the Gladmer.

Hold-overs include:

"Z." The Costa-Gavras French film, distinguished by fast pace, tense involvement and chilling importance, is one of the finest films of the past few years. It continues at the State.

"M*A*S*H." A zany bunch of professionals near the front lines of the Korean War pass their off-duty hours with mocking wisecracks, elaborately staged pranks and a prevailing sense of comic madness in this outrageous, highly innovative film. Shows at the Campus. Highly recommended.

"THE DAMNED." Luchino Visconti's graphic display of a family's decadence and a nation's corruption during the first months of Hitler's Third Reich was highly praised by most critics. I found it a disappointing film of overt sensationalism and a misleading distortion of realistic situations. It shows at the Spartan West.

War folly

David Hemmings, who starred in "Blowup," portrays Captain Nolan, an expert soldier who meets his doom in "The Charge of the Light Brigade." The Tony Richardson film shows at 7:30 tonight in the University Auditorium.

Students display art works in Kresge Center exhibit

The annual Student Undergraduate Art Show will be exhibited in the gallery of Kresge Art Center today through Sunday, May 24.

The exhibition will reflect what has been done in undergraduate art classes since last spring.

The showing will open at 7:30 p.m. with films created by students, a band and refreshments.

James R. Filkins, Birmingham senior, has been named student coordinator to work with James Fagan, asst. professor of art, and faculty coordinator of the show.

All types of media are represented, including silk screen, sculpture, ceramics, etching and jewelry.

"Students are exploring the different media at an earlier level than they use to," Filkins said. There is a shift toward more use of minimal art (the use of acrylic paint over oil) he added.

Industrial design students are presenting a special show, including slides and a model sailboat they designed.

The works of Art 131 and 132, a predominantly freshman course, will be presented together to show the variety achieved in this introductory core program.

Works exhibited were selected by one faculty member and two students from each department in the college. Of the 1,200 works submitted by students, about 150 were chosen to be exhibited.

This process differs from last year's show which was based on competition, with final judging up to one person.

The judging system was changed to give each department a fair share in the number of total works presented and to give the show greater variety, Filkins said.

In previous years, the undergraduate show has been held in June. It was moved up this year in order not to conflict with final examinations.

Gallery hours are: 9 a.m. - noon and 1 - 5 p.m. Monday - Friday, 7 - 9 Tuesday evening; and 2-5 Saturday and Sunday. The public is invited.

Admission is free.

The Eastman Kodak film, "This Bloomin' World" will be shown along with the Lapland fair tale, "Tale of the Northern Lights" and "Tuktu and the Magic Spear."

Panelists discuss pollution

By JIM SHELTON
State News Staff Writer

Society must pay now for future environmental benefits, two panelists at Edgewood

United Church asserted Wednesday night.

The Rev. Richard Jackson of United Ministries in Higher Education and Nancy Marshall, instructor in James Madison College, discussed society's response to environmental problems in the last of a series of four April seminars.

An "environmental response" from tornado warning sirens cut short Jackson's summary of the other seminars in terms of "systemics, metaphysics and a theology of nature."

Wednesday's discussion centered on philosophical values behind earth problems.

Previous seminars dealt with the more material topics of population and food problems in the future, man's technology in relation to the environment and the principles of life supply systems.

The Rev. Mr. Jackson cited "metaphysics" as the reason for the environmental dilemma. Because man stands apart from as well as adjacent to the natural order, he thinks of himself as "qualitatively different from the natural order."

"Metaphysics is really all wet," he said. "The scientists are closer to understanding the way it really is. They understand how much we really are related to the natural order."

He predicted that the new theology of nature man is developing will make it possible for him to see himself as a part of and a brother to the natural order.

Mrs. Marshall called for a "change in attitudes and beliefs." People are reluctant to spend money now for results which can only be seen in the future, she said. Changing this attitude requires that people see the inconsistency between their beliefs and behaviors.

Wayne Roush, state plat examiner in the Michigan Treasury Dept., showed slides on Michigan land misused by waterfront property developers.

Roush said some developers buy lakeshore lots, dredge out inland channels, then use the excavated waste material for filling in the lots. Good topsoil and gravel cover this, and the man buying the land doesn't know what he is getting, he said.

Harold Baar, sanitary engineer of the Michigan State Health Dept., cited examples of poor sewage facilities planned for two Michigan recreation projects.

Baar said a proposed subdivision, two miles south of Houghton Lake will cover 320 acres with 800 lots. The ground will have a problem absorbing all the sewage from these lots, and, eventually, the sewage will back up into the drinking water, he said.

The Lakewood Shores development project at Cedar Lake by Lake Huron is another example of improper planning, Baar declared. More water is being drained away from the 1,122 proposed lots than precipitation is coming in. When the precipitation cycle falls dry for a couple years, the level of Cedar Lake will go down, he said.

Panelists at the fourth and last environmental seminar at Edgewood Church on Hagadorn Road discussed the philosophy behind man's overdue pollution debt.

Area church urges unity in environmental actions

The Rev. Truman Morrison, minister of the Edgewood United Church, East Lansing, said Thursday afternoon that his church is encouraging its members to "come together for personal and social action" on the environmental problem.

The Rev. Mr. Morrison's remarks came in response to the recent environmental quality seminar series held at Edgewood United. He said the seminar was a result of scientists and MSU faculty members in his church who "shared a concern for environmental problems and decided to set a seminar in motion."

In providing a place for a "cluster of people to stimulate each other and implement a concern," the Rev. Mr. Morrison said, the Edgewood United Church is exercising its concept of addressing a problem in a serious and sustained manner.

"The seminar itself represents one of the things we have done and will continue to do," he commented. "The seminar is symbolic of an attempt to walk around a subject and to look at it from different angles."

In addition to the environmental issue, the Rev. Mr. Morrison said, Edgewood United has followed similar projects in areas of civil rights, housing, the migrant issue and a consumers' coalition. All these areas involved people coming together in the church and taking action on the things they were concerned about, he added.

Expressing his opinion on the environmental issue, the minister said:

"We are in a race with a catastrophe of major proportions. It's hard to overestimate the danger. The system of nature has not been kept in a cycle, and our natural resources are in deep trouble. We must do everything we can."

The Rev. Mr. Morrison, going beyond the areas of water and air pollution, cited the "urban squalor and decay that blights the lives of the people" as an equal issue for environmental reform. Ecology, he said, means all facets of the environment.

When the church comes in on earth problems, he observed, it is dealing in part with a moral issue. The Rev. Mr. Morrison said that lives of people involved, ethics of individuals and social ethics of society will have a fundamental bearing on the problem.

"We must realize what this means as a change in our lives," he added.

Christian Science lecturer to speak

Doubt is dissolved in a life of faith illuminated by spiritual understanding, says James E. Pike, C.S., of Chicago.

Pike, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, will speak at 8 p.m. Friday in the Everett High School auditorium in Lansing. His lecture, titled "Life Without Doubt," is free and open to the community.

Pike was an educational administrator before entering the public healing ministry of Christian Science in 1956. He received an A.B. degree from De Pauw University and did graduate work in Paris. He was a Christian Science war-time worker while in active military service.

Petitioning opened for 11 OCC seats

Petitioning is open for the 11 council seats on Off-Campus Council (OCC).

Petitions can be picked up in room 334 of the Student Services Bldg. during the regular University business hours.

Norm Mayer, North Woodmere, N.Y., senior, and president of O.C.C. said the only requirement is that the petitioner live off campus during his term of office.

Mayer said the new council member will work with the 1969-70 council until the end of spring term when they will officially take office. Mayer said this was to insure a sense of continuity.

The O.C.C. president said he would like to see next year's council work on eliminating all room deposits. He added the council should investigate the possibilities of a food co-op and tenant organization in general.

Mayer said the O.C.C. and East Lansing community relations have improved "tremendously" in the past two years.

Previously, relations were almost non-existent, he said. There was hardly any communication at all.

This year's council has worked with apartment managers in establishing a towing policy in East Lansing as well as developing a computer roommate service.

Norm Mayer, North Woodmere, N.Y., senior, and president of O.C.C. said the only requirement is that the petitioner live off campus during his term of office.

Mayer said the new council member will work with the 1969-70 council until the end of spring term when they will officially take office. Mayer said this was to insure a sense of continuity.

The O.C.C. president said he would like to see next year's council work on eliminating all room deposits. He added the council should investigate the possibilities of a food co-op and tenant organization in general.

Mayer said the O.C.C. and East Lansing community relations have improved "tremendously" in the past two years.

Previously, relations were almost non-existent, he said. There was hardly any communication at all.

This year's council has worked with apartment managers in establishing a towing policy in East Lansing as well as developing a computer roommate service.

Batsmen seek end to slump, 'M' here today

Flinging Phil

MSU Coach Danny Litwhiler hopes that pitcher Phil Fulton can put the Spartans back on the winning trail against Michigan today. Fulton has been MSU's ace hurler, but some hard luck has left his won-lost mark at 2-2.

By GARY WALKOWICZ
State News Sports Writer

Stumbling MSU will attempt to right itself before the home fans today against a young Michigan team at 3 p.m. at Kobs Field.

The Spartans' Big Ten home opener will be preceded with special ceremonies. Guests of honor will be Mrs. Clifton Wharton and son, Bruce, with young Wharton throwing out the first ball.

Today's game is the first of a home-and-home weekend series with the University of Michigan. MSU meets the Wolves in a doubleheader Saturday at 1 p.m. at Fisher Field. The first game will be the regular Big Ten contest, a nine-inning affair. The seven-inning nightcap won't count toward the team's Big Ten record.

MSU Coach Danny Litwhiler will send out righthander Phil Fulton against U-M today with southpaw Jim Burton the likely pitching choice for Michigan.

Fulton has been the Spartans' top pitcher this season, though his won-lost mark is a non-impressive 2-2. He was victimized by a lack of hitting and some fielding misplays as he dropped his last two starts -- to Central Michigan and Minnesota. Fulton has had the best control and strikeout ratios among the regular Spartan hurlers. He has walked 15 and struck out 42 in 42 and two-thirds innings and has an ERA of 1.68.

Burton was a 5-4 loser against MSU last year in a game at Kobs Field. This season, he is 2-2 with a 2.88 ERA. Burton is a fine strikeout hurler, fanning 46 hitters in 34 and one-third innings.

Rick Kreuger is slated to pitch the Big Ten portion of Saturday's twinbill with Larry Ike, if he's not used in the two preceding games, starting the nightcap.

Michigan is probably the only team in the conference that can best MSU in the inexperience department. U-M is 7-14 for the season, including a 1-3 Big Ten start but has fine potential with its underclassmen lineup. The Wolverines, in fact, don't have a senior listed on their entire roster.

Freshman outfielder Tom Kettinger has been the team's top hitter with a .358 average. Kettinger has four home runs and 12 RBI's.

Litwhiler says the Spartans, losers of seven of their last 10 games, including three of four in the Big Ten, will have to tighten their defense and become more timely with their hitting to regain their winning touch.

"We had as many total runs and more total hits for last weekend's four games, but we still lost three of them," Litwhiler said. "We had the men on base but couldn't bring them home when we needed to."

The Spartans also have been hindered of late by a rash of injuries. A pair of regulars, rightfielder Ron Pruitt and second baseman Whitey Rettenmund are still questionable for the weekend games.

Rettenmund has a pulled back muscle, and Pruitt is bothered by a charley horse in one leg. Rob Ellis will probably play second base with John Dace, who is also slowed by a leg injury, taking over at first. Phil Rashead, after a game's rest, will return behind the plate and either Pruitt or Tim Bograkovs will be in rightfield.

"I'd like to have Pruitt back to full health," Litwhiler said. "We need his hitting to win. He hasn't been hitting as well as he can, and I think it's mainly because of that injury."

Pruitt, who was hitting well over .400 on the Spartans' Florida trip, has seen his average slip to .325 in his slump. Pruitt has just seven base hits and one extra base hit since the team returned north.

Centerfielder Gary Boyce continues to lead the Spartan hitters with a .400 average. Ellis continues to challenge him for the team leadership and is currently at .385. Third baseman Dick Vary, at .338, is the only other Spartan hitting over .300. Ellis and Dace are tied for the team home run leadership with five apiece. As a team, MSU has hit 27 balls over the fence and is within easy reach of the team season record of 31.

EYE THIRD TITLE

Big weekend set for Spartan linksters

By OLG OLSON
State News Sports Writer

A hard-working group of MSU golfers set out today on the opening 36 holes of the 72-hole Northern Invitational eyeing a second straight major tournament title.

The Spartans, who last weekend rallied to beat Indiana in the Indiana Sesquicentennial, will find the competition at the Northern Invitational "the toughest we've faced all season," according to MSU link coach Bruce Fossum.

Fossum rated the Northern this weekend as a "mini NCAA and prelude to the Big Ten meet." He based his assumption on the fact that "all of the conference teams and outsiders such as Miami (Fla.), Kent State and Notre Dame are competing in the tournament at Champaign."

In his fifth year as head golf coach at MSU, Fossum said that the Spartans would be out to better last year's third-place finish after watching his team get the best week of practice in since the southern tour.

"This group of golfers is the hardest working team I've ever coached at MSU," Fossum said. "They put in between five and six hours of practice every day with the exception of Sunday -- that's a day of rest." Sunday has proven to be a well-deserved day of rest for the Spartan linksters who have (please turn to page 13)

IU, BADGERS HERE

Spartans meet Big 10 foes

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

The MSU track team will play host Saturday for the second and last time this year as two powerful Big Ten rivals battle the Spartans in a triangular meet.

Starting time for the MSU-Wisconsin-Indiana battle is set for 1 p.m. at Ralph Young Track. Admission is free.

While Indiana is regarded as the favorite in this tune-up for the Big Ten, only two weeks before all ten conference schools head to Bloomington, Wisconsin's indoor champions and defending outdoor titlists are always tough to beat and promise to give the Hoosiers a run for their money.

MSU, while not regarded as a contender for the league title simply because of weakness in the field events, has enough sprint, hurdle and middle distance strength to give the Hoosiers and Badgers a scare, and maybe just enough to sneak by one of the two teams on its home track.

Spartan Coach Fran Dietrich figures he has several performers with bona fide chances to win over their Wisconsin and Indiana counterparts but emphasizes that the competition will be the toughest the Spartans have faced outdoors in dual or triangular meets.

Although first places may be hard to come by simply because of the strength of all involved, Herb Washington in the 100, Bill Wehrwein and Al Henderson in the 440, John Mock in the 880, Ken Popejoy in the mile and the Spartan mile relay would appear to have the best shots at winning.

Washington, who will run the 100 and 220, is set to battle the Hoosier duo of Mike Goodrich and Larry Highbaugh in a race which could break all marks. Goodrich has a career best of 9.2.

Washington will also run on MSU's 440-yard relay, along with three others picked from among LaReu Butcher, Mike Holt, Henderson and Wehrwein. Although Indiana 440 ace Terry Musika is out of action, Henderson and Wehrwein could still have rough going with Wisconsin's Mark Kartman and Jim Young, while Mock, second in the league 880, will have to face off nemesis Mark Winzenried of Wisconsin again.

Ken Popejoy posted two clockings in the 4:10 range at Drake last week and appears ready to go in the mile after a slow start. He faces Wisconsin's tough duo, Don Vandrey and Chuck Baker, while the Hoosiers (please turn to page 12)

Ready for splashdown

Steeplechasers Ralph Zoppa, left, and Ken Leonowicz get ready for splashdown during their race against Northwestern. The two Spartans will have to do some tough running (and jumping) against top-notch Wisconsin and Indiana steeplechasers Saturday.

Knicks lead 2-1 in NBA title series

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) -- The New York Knicks were 2-1 against the Los Angeles Lakers Thursday, but they still are talking about Jerry West's 60-foot desperation shot.

West's heave tied the score at the buzzer to send the game into overtime before the Knicks prevailed 111-108 Wednesday night in the third game of the NBA best-of-seven series.

The last-second shot by West came after the Knicks' Dave DeBusschere hit a jumper from the free throw line over Happy Hairston with three seconds to go in regulation play.

"I was on my way to the locker room when West made his shot," Walt Frazier of the Knicks smiled.

Willis Reed was the difference, however, finishing with 38 points including a free throw that put New York ahead for good in overtime. West poured in 34 points, despite hitting only 11 of 28 from the field.

DeBusschere had 21 points, Frazier tallied 19 and Dick Barnett added 18 for the Knicks. For Los Angeles, Wilt Chamberlain scored 21 and picked off a game-high 26 rebounds while Keith Erickson scored 19 points.

MSU's mile relay at Drake (Henderson, Holt, Mock and

But Wisconsin is loading its quartet and Winzenried is a good possibility for the anchor leg.

PIRO UNDERGOES SURGERY

Students invited to Sat. scrimmage

By JEFF ELLIOTT
State News Sports Editor

Winding up the third week of the Spartans' spring drills, MSU Head Football Coach Duffy Daugherty has issued a special invitation to all students and faculty to attend Saturday's scrimmage in Spartan Stadium. The scrimmage will begin at approximately 1:30 p.m. Students and faculty will be admitted with their ID card.

Daugherty also indicated students can view next Saturday's scrimmage free of charge. The following week, May 16, the Spartans will stage their annual Green-White clash at which a small admission fee will be charged. Proceeds will again go to the Martin Luther King Scholarship Fund.

Despite the daily grind and the hot and humid weather this week, Daugherty said the team's spirits remained high.

"There's a lot of enthusiasm and competition on this year's squad," Daugherty said. "We've lacked this spirit and desire the past two or three years. The while team has a good attitude and when you possess that, you've got half the battle won."

Daugherty also indicated he was pleased with the progress the team is making this spring despite the rash of injuries. Three Spartans did return to action this week. Bob Walerowicz, a sophomore linebacker from Detroit; Jim Nicholson, the converted tackle from Hawaii, and Brad McLee defensive safety from Uniontown, Pa., all took part in their first contact this week after being on the sidelines for the first half of spring drills.

Veteran right guard Mike Tobin is still out of action with a sprained ankle as is his linemate Vic Mittleberg. Second string quarterback Steve Piro, who was operated on last fall after a knee injury in the Purdue game, returned to action Wednesday but promptly returned to the sidelines just as fast.

The 6-2, 180 pound sophomore, who had been running for several weeks but was withheld from contact, took part in Wednesday's scrimmage. Near the end of the workout, Piro was carrying the ball and cut upfield only to have his knee (the same one that was hurt before) buckle out from under him.

Piro thus underwent surgery Thursday morning to repair torn ligaments. He was listed in satisfactory condition following the operation. No prognosis can be made at this time, however, as to when Piro would be able to resume football.

With the loss of Piro, the quarterback race appears to be a two-man battle at the moment with two players (Bill Triplett and Brad Van Pelt) who could step in if needed. George Mihaiu, sophomore - to - be, is currently running slightly ahead of Dan Werner who started the last two games for the Spartans last year. Werner took over for Piro in the Purdue game and had a great game, throwing for 314 total yards passing, only two yards short of the Big Ten record at that time.

It's tough for a sophomore to open the season at quarterback, but Mihaiu is making a strong bid for the opportunity. The River Rouge native saw action at both quarterback and in the defensive backfield on last year's frosh squad. This year, however, Daugherty has kept him on offense, and Mihaiu has responded exceptionally well.

For Saturday's scrimmage Daugherty named a starting tailback, freshman Mark Charette at fullback and Ed Allen at wingback. A three-way battle is emerging at the tight end spot between Frank Butler, Bill Jo Dupree and Brian McConnell. At the other end, veterans Steve Kough and Gordie Bowdell are alternating. On the offensive line two freshmen and three juniors will start. The yearlings are Joe DeLamielleure and Chris King, who will open at right tackle and right guard respectively. On the other side of center, Tom Beard (please turn to page 13)

BG whitewashes Spartans; seventh loss for stickmen

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

The MSU lacrosse team found out Wednesday afternoon that the ball was more elusive than their opposition, and the Spartans tumbled to Bowling Green for their seventh regular season loss, 12-0. Their seasonal mark has now deteriorated to 1-7.

Plagued by an inability to scoop up ground balls, the Spartan stickmen spent much of the game warding off a ball-control minded Bowling Green unit. The stickmen were continually beaten to the ball and were unable to take a face-off during the entire game. This, plus the fact that the Falcons came out enforcing a deadly hitting game, made life miserable for the Spartans.

Bowling Green needed only 18 seconds before it put its first point on the board, as ace midfielder Bruce Correll drilled a shot past Spartan netminder Billy Hermann. Correll, who averaged three goals per outing, was used sparingly for the remainder of the match after his first mark.

Bowling Green added three more goals to their score in the first period, carefully picking at Spartan defensive shortcomings around the net. Joe Zimmerman, John Brizendine and John Dohms were responsible for the BG marks.

The Spartans had their best scoring opportunity of the day in the first period when the stickmen ran a quick break with only three Falcons back. Doug Kalvelage took a pass behind the defensemen and had only the goal to beat. His shot flew high and wide of the net, however, and the Spartans found the remainder of their offensive charges defensible.

The only other threat the stickmen could surmount was in the dying moments of the first half as the Spartans' Rick Bays flung another ball too high on a clear shot in front of the net.

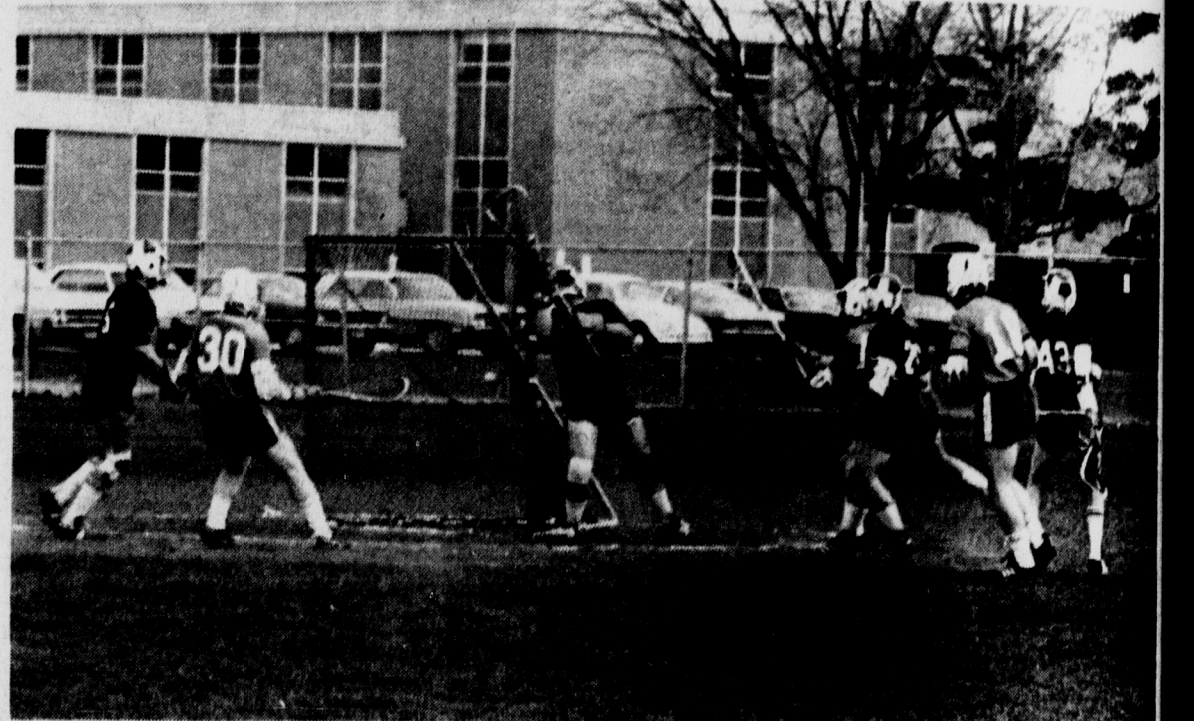

A key factor working against the stickmen during the entire game was their excessive amount of detected penalties. The Spartans were short-handed 16 times, while the Falcons were down only six. BG wasn't penalized until eight minutes into the second period.

The Falcon scorers were led by Zimmerman and Brizendine, who tallied three goals each. Bill Kolbfeisch and Rich Lieberfarb also jumped into the scoring column with one apiece.

Bowling Green goaltender Bill Burch had a comparatively easy day, stopping only five Spartan shots. His toughest period was the third as he turned away two shots.

Hermann was once again peppered in the Spartan cage, blocking 26 shots. He stopped eight shots in both the second and third periods. Hermann was replaced by Rick Partrich late in the fourth period, but Partrich was not tested by the Falcons.

Not this time, Falcons!

Former Spartan Garvey optioned

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers announced Wednesday they were optioning rookie third baseman and former Spartan Steve Garvey to Spokane of the Pacific Coast League and had purchased the contract of first baseman-outfielder Gary Moore from the same club.

Moore, although under Spokane contract, had been playing for the Dodgers' Albuquerque team of the Texas League. He hit .370 in 11 games this season and led the Texas League with four home runs. Moore had hit safely in 10 of 11 games, scored 11 runs and drove in eight runs.

Garvey, who was signed by the Dodgers after completing his sophomore year at MSU, had shown promise at the plate during spring training when he compiled a .268 batting average, but since the season started he was able to connect for only two hits in 23 times at bat.

Largest field since '51 to go in 96th Derby

Woman jockey to compete

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A field of 18, the largest in 19 years, was entered Thursday for Saturday's running of the Kentucky Derby and for the first time in the history of the classic a woman was listed as one of the jockeys.

Late Wednesday evening, W.P. Lyons Brown decided he would start Fathom to give Diane Crump a chance to ride in America's most coveted horse race.

George Lewis drew post No. 1 in the largest field since Count Turf ran against 19 rivals in 1951. The others entered in the mile and a quarter race, in post position, order, were Dust Commander, Dr. Behrman, Holy Land, Rancho Lejos, Silent Screen, Robin's Bug, Portanto, Native Royalty, Action Getter, Fathom, High Echelon, My Dad George, Terago, Naskra, Admiral's Shield, Personality and Corn Off The Cob.

The 96th running of the Kentucky Derby will be the richest in the history of the event with a total value of $171,300 and a winner's purse of $128,800 if all 18 3-year-olds start.

The track had dried out almost completely, but the weatherman predicted the possibility of thundershowers between now and posttime Saturday (5:30 p.m. EDT).

Several of the horses were unlikely to start if the track was muddy. These include Fathom, who finished third Tuesday in the derby trial stakes.

"He started to slip and slide," Diane said, "and he wouldn't have a chance in the mud."

Corn Off The Cob also would be withdrawn if the track is as bad as it was last Tuesday. Trainer Arnold Winick said several other trainers also would prefer a fast track but would start their horses regardless of the footing. On the other hand, those handling Dust Commander and Rancho Lejos would like to see it rain.

Jockeys were assigned all the entrants except Dr. Behrman. Trainer Jimmy Conway hopes to be able to name one for Dr. Behrman late today.

One other riding assignment was vague since Eddie Belmonte, scheduled to ride Personality, may be suspended and be unable to ride. If he is suspended, Laffitt Pincay would get the mount.

Many of the trainers and owners entered their horses as a last minute decision, but Jack Weipert had decided to run Holy Land months ago.

RACE IOWA, GOPHERS

Netters in final nine days

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

MSU heads into its final, crucial nine days of regular season tennis play today. It will be a pivotal week and two days that could make or break the Spartans' season.

Starting with Iowa and Minnesota this weekend, the Spartans face five Big Ten powers and Western Michigan in the span of nine days.

The big match will be against defending champion Michigan Tuesday, but the Spartans still need two big weekend victories, and they will not be looking past either Iowa or the Gophers.

Although not rated as high as MSU, both of the Spartans' weekend opponents are fighting for first division finishes and either could upset MSU if the Spartans are not at their peak.

MSU Coach Stan Drobac has repeatedly emphasized the conference race would be close and among many teams, and his general rule has been to play the games one at a time.

"Both Minnesota and Iowa have tough teams, and we will have to give it everything we have," Drobac said.

Drobac is hoping that his young team can come up with big wins to improve their title battle the two conference foes this weekend. Dusty Rhoads will work the top spot, Tom Gray will play No. 2 singles, and Mike Madura will try to improve his 6-0 mark at the No. 3 position. DeArmond Briggs, Rick Vetter and Rick Ferman round out the singles.

In doubles, Rhoads and Gray continue to work the No. 1 spot. Ferman and Vetter plus Briggs and Jim Symington will be at the other two spots with Drobac undecided as to which pair will work the second position.

Madura and Ferman have had the hot hand for the Spartans lately. The two sophomores are both undefeated with Ferman sporting a 4-0 mark and Madura unbeaten in six matches.

Minnesota will probably be the toughest of MSU's weekend foes. With a 3-2 record they are three points ahead of the Spartans in the standings, but they have played one more match than MSU. The Gophers are led by sophomore Jim Ebbitt who has lost only one match all year. Iowa (2-3) will be handicapped when they play MSU due to the loss of their No. 1 man Jim Esser.

The match with Iowa will begin at 3 p.m. today, and the Spartans face the Gophers at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Any student interested in calling and scoring for the Spartans tennis matches with Iowa and/or Minnesota this weekend should contact Coach Stan Drobac in the Mens IM Bldg. or on the courts before each match.

hopes and build a winning attitude.

"The teams attitude is important," said Drobac. "This is a good tennis team and if they can win big this weekend they'll really be ready to go against Michigan."

The same line-up that defeated Wayne State 9-0 will Edmundson led the way for the Spartan linksters at Indiana, finishing in a tie for medalist honors behind a 36-hole total of 144. Lee is averaging 75.3 for the season, which is a full stroke behind his junior and sophomore combined average.

Since the Illinois Invitational, Woulfe's game has been shaping up tremendously. He finished in a three-way tie for individual honors at Illinois along with teammate Janson and Purdue's Bill Shulha. He was third best in the recent Indiana tourney.

Janson, the MSU captain, has been playing steady golf on his way to 76.3 average in six major tournaments, but Fossum believes the East Lansing senior "still hasn't found his true capabilities this season."

Vass, in the last week, has found himself under pressure from Peterson and English for the No. 4 man spot on the varsity link unit. Vass is averaging 78.6, while Peterson has a 79.5 average and English, playing his first major tourney of the season last weekend, has an average of 76.5.

"The averages don't really mean that much," according to Fossum however, "because everyone is having up and down rounds in the six-man unit, of which only five are scored."

Spartans making the trip to campaign this weekend are Lee Edmundson, Rick Woulfe, Lynn Janson, Denny Vass, John Peterson and Ron English.
