Wharton denies arrests set precedent for protest control

By DAVE SHORT
and
JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writers

President Wharton said Tuesday that the arrests in the Union early Tuesday morning wouldn't necessarily set a precedent for handling future student demonstrations.

"Each situation has its own special circumstances," Wharton emphasized. "I'm not seeking punitive actions. I'm trying to avoid continuation of an adversary set of positions which results from deliberate provocation of certain groups."

Wharton's statements came in the wake of a growing reaction to the mass arrests. Approximately 130 people were arrested at a combined area police force at an Action Group Against Racism meeting at day for violating state trespassing and university loitering laws in the Union.

The arrests came two and one-half hours after the people failed to leave the Union at its 11 p.m. closing time. All persons in the building were participating in a group discussion on racism at the time of their apprehension.

Students and administrators differed Tuesday over whether the people in the Union had been properly forewarned before their arrests. Wharton said in a prepared statement that "repeated warnings were given prior to the arrests."

A Union official announced four times between 10:55 and 11:20 p.m. that the building was officially closed and asked, "Would everyone please leave?" The same official again warned the people there to leave just as the police enclosed the building.

Unlike Friday's anti-ROTC protest at Administration Hall, neither the police nor administrator advised the group that they had five minutes to leave the building before arrests would be made. Instead, police surrounded the building and began arresting people.

A meeting will be held 1 p.m. today at Beaumont Tower to discuss arrests made Tuesday morning at the Union.

GREAT INJUSTICE'

Milliken hits budget cuts as unrest tonic

By SHARON TEMPLETON
State News Staff Writer

Gov. Milliken voiced strong opposition Tuesday to any legislative cuts made in college and university budgets as a direct result of campus unrest.

At his weekly press conference, the governor said that "to retaliate for the action of a small group of students on the campuses would be a great injustice."

"I am very firmly opposed to a punitive approach to the higher education budget," he said.

He predicted that no punitive cuts will be made in the legislature and that "cooler heads will prevail."

House Speaker William A. Ryan, of Detroit, said Monday a coalition between legislative leaders and the governor might be needed to head off punitive cuts.

Milliken also said President Wharton handled the situation very well Tuesday when 132 persons were arrested for occupying the Union Bldg. after the closing hour.

"The president has given a measured response to the problem," he said. "I am convinced a 'firm, but fair' approach is the best way to solve the problems of campus unrest."

Milliken said Wharton indicated that some non-students and high school students also participated in the disturbance early Tuesday morning.

Yearbook

The 1970 Wolverine will be distributed beginning today between 10 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. at the Wolverine office in the basement of the Student Services Bldg. An I.D. or yearbook receipt is required.

Wharton indicated the police action was not unusual.

"The police handle these situations in different ways," he said. "Past procedures have been more varied than most students realize."

Wharton indicated that "provocation" seemed the only point of the "sit-in" in the Union.

Members of the meeting continuously emphasized that they wanted no confrontation with the police, however. They indicated that they would leave the building nonviolently if police told them to disperse.

Wharton linked the Action Group Against Racism meeting with scattered window-breaking on the campus Monday night.

He said that "those involved in the destruction were part of a larger group which had occupied portions of the Union building earlier in the evening."

About nine windows in the Administration Bldg., six in the Eppley Center, and one plate glass door in the International Center were broken Monday night. Approximately 35 windows also were destroyed, resulting in $4,000 in damage.

None of the vandals were arrested. Police said they did not have enough officers on hand at the scenes of vandalism to obtain arrests.

Wharton said the cost of insurance of the University has nearly doubled since the vandalism began this year and amounts to an increase of $150,000.

A group of about 40 people did leave the meeting in the Union in favor of marching around the Administration Bldg. But 150 of the original 350 people there remained to non-violently discuss the racism issue and group plans for shutting down the University on Tuesday.

The group of 40 left after the majority at the Union decided to break into discussion groups rather than go to the Administration Bldg.

Wharton said some of the window-breakers returned to the Union after the damage was done. He said both the

Nixon requests lead tax on gasoline to cut deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) -- President Nixon announced Tuesday that his budget surpluses have turned into deficits for this fiscal year and next.

He called for a $1.6 billion antipollution tax on the lead additives in gasoline to erase part of the government's red ink.

The administration will not seek other revenue increases to balance the budget despite continuing inflation. Budget Director Robert P. Mayo explained that a larger tax boost "would be inappropriate when we have an increase in unemployment."

The lead additive tax would add 2.3 cents to the average cost per gallon of gasoline, officials said, and would reduce air-polluting emissions from automobile exhausts.

The announcement came just as Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, joining other administration leaders in a campaign of trying to reassure investors and businessmen, promised a group of southern industrialists they can count on "a new steadiness of progress."

In a speech written for him at the White House, Mitchell told the Delta Council, meeting in Cleveland, Miss., that the stock market's sinking spells are "based on fears rather than facts."

Price and wage controls won't be needed to stabilize the economy, Mitchell said, adding "Forget about them."

Nixon bade farewell to his budget surpluses -- which in February he called crucial in the fight on inflation -- in a statement disclosing that slipping revenues and rising federal costs have produced:

--For fiscal 1970, ending on June 30, a $1.8 billion deficit instead of the planned $1.5 billion surplus. Federal outlays will reach $198.2 billion, while receipts will be down $3 billion largely because of lower corporate profits.

--For fiscal 1971, a record spending budget of $205.6 billion. This will mean a $1.3 billion deficit instead of the anticipated surplus of exactly the same size.

The revenue figures include a $1.7 billion one-time windfall to the Treasury, if Congress approves the speedup in estate and gift tax collections which Nixon asked for previously, as well as the proposed increase in postal rates and the newly proposed tax on lead additives.

The President said his administration remains "determined to curb inflation," but his statement went on:

"Frankly, my concern about unemployment and my desire to bring about price stability without economic dislocation is why the campaign to control inflation cannot be accomplished quickly."

Mayo told White House reporters that another deficit appears likely for fiscal 1972, the government year starting in mid-1971.

Nixon's statement said that if it appears wise to seek additional revenues for that fiscal year, "I would not hesitate to ask the Congress for further increases in taxes when I present my next budget in January."

The House Democratic leader, Rep. Carl Albert of Oklahoma, said the budget deficits "can be laid directly at the door of the White House." He said administration policies "brought on the excessive high interest, recession and unemployment which are creating the deficits."

ON CAMBODIA FUNDS

Senate sifts semantics

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Tuesday he hoped for some accommodation that would uphold the rights of both President Nixon and the Senate in controlling future actions in Cambodia.

But the Montana Democrat made it clear that any language would have to be as strong as the pending Cooper-Church amendment to bar funds for retaining U.S. forces in Cambodia after the present operation ends.

He indicated that the accommodation he is talking about would involve acceptance by the Nixon administration of the interpretations of the Cooper-Church amendment by its sponsors -- that it does not, in fact, restrict any of the President's constitutional powers.

Administration supporters have insisted that the amendment would restrict the President's powers. Proponents contend that while it would require congressional approval of future actions such as the Cambodian attack, it does not interfere with any power granted the President by the Constitution.

Nixon, meanwhile, made it clear to Republican congressional leaders at the White House that he remains opposed to any restrictions.

Republican leaders resumed efforts to find language that would enable them to make the Cooper-Church amendment acceptable to the White House.

An Associated Press poll indicates 47 of the 100 senators support the amendment, and five others are leaning in favor, with 34 against and 14 undecided.

On the floor, debate droned on with Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., consuming two hours with a speech in favor of the Cooper-Church proposal and against U.S. support of the Thieu government in Saigon.

"We Democrats have plenty to answer for and we can't avoid part of the blame," Mansfield said.

He emphasized "we have no authority, no power to infringe on the President's authority as commander in chief" but asserted there is a difference between the congressional war-declaring power and the presidential war-making power.

There were these other developments:

--Mansfield said the disclosure by Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird that U.S. advisers have accompanied South Vietnamese troops into Laos shows there has been a violation of "at least the spirit" of last year's congressional ban on use of U.S. combat ground force in Laos or Thailand.

--Sponsors of an amendment to cut off funds for U.S. operations in Laos, Vietnam and Cambodia after June 30, 1971, said they have received 50,000 pieces of mail since last Tuesday's telecast, and that it is running 50-to-1 in favor of their proposal.

Polley endorses rise in minority enrollment

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

Admission practices need to be developed with full awareness of the responsibility of providing supportive services for underprivileged groups, Ira Polley, chairman of President Wharton's Commission on Admissions and Student Body Composition, said Tuesday.

Although appointments to the 25-man Commission on Admissions have not been completed, Polley has begun to gather data to present to the group on student enrollment by class and by college from 1959.

"We need this information to see where we are today," he said, "and we must examine the trends of the past 10 years."

Polley said there is a need to look at enrollment data on black, Mexican American, American Indian and poor white students. He emphasized the inclusion of poor whites.

"In President Johnson's 1966 study of rural poverty, it was reported that 13.8 million people live in poverty in rural areas," he said, "and 80 per cent of those were white."

Polley said a substantial number of those live in Michigan and need to be considered along with other minority groups. He explained that usually, in America, the urban poor are predominantly black and the rural poor are predominantly white.

"An institution such as MSU must enroll a larger number of children of the poor," he said.

Polley added, however, that the University need to insure that there are reasonable opportunities for success for young people who are admitted.

"It would be a tragedy for any institution to admit a sizeable number of any minority group and then have these minority young suffer the experience of a revolving door -- in one month and out several months later. This would be irresponsible and unconscionable," he said.

In addition, Polley said that it will be up to the University to find the means to afford the supportive resources to deter this tragedy.

Part of the job of the commission will be to discuss the question of financial aids to underprivileged students, he said.

The commission will be made up of 12 faculty members, eight students, two alumni and three members at large. In addition there will be five nonvoting public

Blacks seek legislative aid

By BARNEY YOUNG
State News Staff Writer

Black students from Northern Michigan University (NMU) who say they are being threatened, shot at and ignored at the university came to the Capitol this week to seek the help of state legislators.

A delegation of 10 students traveled from Marquette to Lansing to meet with legislators and discuss the situation in hopes that state action will be taken at NMU, a state-supported university.

A state of emergency exists at NMU, Pat Williams, president of the Black Students Assn. (BSA) at NMU, said. Williams said black students are leaving school because white students are threatening them, and shooting at them.

The BSA asked the university to permit black students to leave school for the remainder of the year without facing academic penalty. NMU President John X. Jamrich refused this request.

The racially tense situation resulted from a black student demonstration, a sit-in protesting the persecution of a fellow black student, by "the local white community of Marquette, the white student body and the university administration," Williams said. Williams said that since the students began demonstrating many have been pulled in and out of court.

"First we were tried by the student-faculty judiciary, then in the county courts. We haven't had time to attend to our studies," he said.

He added that harassment doesn't end with the legal system. The other representatives said they feel the university hasn't contributed to easing the situation.

In addition to requesting permission to leave school, the BSA asked that all student firearms be removed from campus.

Students are allowed to have weapons on campus if they check the arms at the desk of their living units.

Williams said most students don't bother to leave their guns with NMU officials. He said he has seen numerous students walking around with their weapons displayed.

"Once during a meeting with the vice president of the university while we were discussing the threat firearms present on campus, white students were walking through parking lots with shot guns," Williams said.

Jamrich ordered all firearms to be taken home or turned over to university officials, but, according to the BSA delegates, the order was not honored by many of the students with weapons.

The NMU representatives suggested that Jamrich use a search of university property to secure all arms.

The group met with the seven black legislators Monday evening. Part of the "evidence of racial tension" which the students carried with them was a "Nigger License" issued at a local Marquette store and posted in university centers.

The license stated that it was "open season on niggers." It went on to state that a limit of five "niggers" could be "bagged" by whites in a 24-hour period.

The black legislators have advised the BSA representatives that they will request the chairman of the House Committee on Colleges and Universities to ask Jamrich to appear before the committee and testify on the situation.

Lenore blames disorders on social permissiveness

By LARRY LEE
State News Staff Writer

Mrs. Lenore Romney, a candidate for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate, said Tuesday campus disorders are basically the result of a "permissive society," combined with legitimate concerns.

And although she said public marches are "part of the American tradition," she added that if she were a college student, "I would hope I could do something more constructive."

The 61-year-old wife of former Michigan Gov. George Romney said she opposes student strikes because "no one has the right to shut off the education" that every American student has a right to.

Mrs. Romney, in Lansing as part of a 10-day campaign swing through Michigan, said, "I abhor the fact that there is so much violence, but most students want to know the issues."

"We have to listen to them," she appeared before the Republican Women's Federation with U.S. Treasurer Dorothy Elston; Mrs. Helen Milliken; Sen. N. Lorraine Beebe, R -

MRS. LENORE ROMNEY

Dearborn; Mrs. Robert Griffin, and Mrs. Charles Chamberlain.

Although previously opposed to any expansion of the war in Southeast Asia into Cambodia or Laos, Mrs. Romney said that "we haven't invaded (Cambodia)" by President Nixon's decision to strike at Viet Cong sanctuaries in that country.

Since the target areas were not in Cambodian control, the American military action could not be considered an "invasion," she said.

"I want you to know I am committed to peace," Mrs. Romney told the women. "But we've been in Viet Nam for 10 years and I think we should give the President six weeks."

"I have been given assurances that we will be out of Cambodia in six weeks, and I think we owe the President that much," she said.

Mrs. Elston told the group "It's time the women took hold" to stop the decline of the American society.

"Things happen because we let them happen," she said. "A nation's laws are only as strong as its peoples' willingness to see them enforced."

She called for instilling patriotism "in our boys and girls," and denounced the concept of the "silent majority." "It has been said that one percent are for something, one percent are against it and 98 percent are neutral," Mrs. Elston said. "It is no badge of merit to be part of the silent majority. It is a disgrace."

She said it is "time we stood up and spoke out for what we think is wrong."

"Don't let decay happen from within," Mrs. Elston said.

DUMP BOMBS

The Associated Press

Egypt accused Israel Tuesday of bombing civilian targets along the Suez Canal and killing or wounding "several civilians," but the Israelis claimed their planes raided only military objectives.

A communique from Cairo said Israeli jets were ranging over military positions when they were chased off by anti-aircraft fire and dumped their bombs on a civilian area.

The announcement did not pinpoint the location hit or specify how many civilians were killed or wounded. Most civilians have been moved away from the embattled areas along the waterway, except for a few kept on to handle water and electric installation.

It was the first such charge leveled against Israel since Egypt accused it of sending its bombers over a primary school in the Nile Delta on April 8 and killing more than 30 school children. Israel has insisted that it only went after military targets on that raid.

Tuesday's raid followed on the heels of a pre-dawn strike by Egyptian troops who crossed over to the Israeli side of the canal to assault Israeli targets before dawn.

The Israeli command said the raid was foiled by Israeli counter strikes.

Egyptian artillery opened up with covering fire for the raiding party but was silenced by Israeli planes which hit back out of the still dark skies, Tel Aviv said. Later two Israeli soldiers were killed and one wounded in an exchange of fire, an Israeli spokesman said.

Israeli warplanes ranged across the canal a second time during the day, triggering Cairo's charges that civilian targets were hit.

A high ranking Israeli officer told foreign newsmen that stepped-up Israeli air raids on the canal were aimed at cutting Israeli losses from Egyptian gunfire and at preventing the Egyptians rebuilding their canal defenses.

The officer said these raids sometimes penetrated 20 miles into Egypt. He added that Israel had no information whether Soviet-made SAM 3 missiles, Egypt's latest anti-aircraft acquisition, were being placed in the bombing zone.

Israeli planes returned to the attack after dark Tuesday, staging raids for 90 minutes on Egyptian positions along the Suez, a military spokesman said. He added that all the planes returned undamaged.

In Canada, Israeli Foreign

Minister Abba Eban renewed Israel's proposal for an unconditional and unlimited cease-fire in the Middle East.

Speaking at a news conference Tuesday in Winnipeg, Manitoba,

Eban suggested June 9 as the suitable date for reaffirmation of the broken cease-fire between Israel and the Arab countries. June 9-10, 1967, marked the end of the six-day war.

Jackson blacks halt investigators

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Black students blocked state investigators from picking up pieces of evidence at the Jackson State College girl's dormitory where two black youths were shot and killed by police last week. The students apparently mistook the investigators for workmen.

Later in the day a group calling itself the Concerned Citizens of Jackson State College filed suit in U.S. District Court for a temporary restraining order to bar state officials from removing evidence.

"We don't want to let them tear down these scars," said one of the 200 blacks massed in front of Alexander Hall. After a meeting with the college president, Dr. John Peoples, the students left the building and went to a nearby athletic field. The confrontation came just hours before Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass., the only black in the Senate, flew to Jackson to confer with black leader Charles Evers and tour the campus.

"It's unbelievable, really unbelievable," Brooke said as he looked at the bullet-scarred wall on the top floor of the dormitory.

Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, who was in Jackson Monday for an on-the-scene inspection, was picketed Tuesday by blacks protesting his appearance at the Cleveland before the Delta Council, a traditionally white organization of cotton industry leaders. The Cleveland National Guard unit was sent to the army as a precautionary move.

Witnesses said the 200 black students moved in front of the dormitory as several men approached the building. After two attempts to reach it, the men left.

Student leaders said the men were workers sent to the campus to repair the five-story, modern, red-brick dormitory.

Dist. Atty. Jack Travis said later, however, the men were state investigators sent to the campus to collect evidence for the state and the Hinds County Grand Jury.

The students said in a statement: "The state highway patrol is trying to take our evidence... We cannot let them do this. They are trying to destroy the evidence so that the state will not get it."

Elections for Off-Campus Council (OCC) representatives will be held today from noon to 5 p.m. in Berkeley and Bessey halls and the Union.

Eleven positions must be filled. Because only four persons petitioned for the council, write-in votes will be accepted. The four students who have petitioned for the council are Mary Jo Von Mach, Detroit sophomore and OCC delegate to ASMSU; Thomas Koenig, Omaha, Neb. junior; William Echols, Harper Woods junior, and Karen Sullivan, Harper Springs junior.

Dick Sanford, ASMSU elections commissioner, said that not all polling places have been manned. Sanford asked that anyone interested in working at the polls this afternoon contact him at 355-8285. Workers will be paid $2 per hour.

International News

A maverick Swiss parliament member contends Switzerland is overloaded with foreigners, and he wants a third of a million of them kicked out over the next four years.

The measure, which would limit the number of foreigners in every Swiss state to 10 per cent of the Swiss population, goes before the traditionally hospitable nation in the form of a referendum June 6-7.

Drought in the Brazilian northeast is forcing peasants from the farmlands to sack stores to get food. To the northwest, along the Amazon River, floods are forcing people from their homes.

Legislation to let 18-year-olds vote in Canadian national elections was introduced Tuesday by the government of Prime Minister Elliott Trudeau. His party has a majority in the House of Commons, so enactment of the bill is expected.

The present minimum voting age for national elections is now 21, although 18-year-olds participate in some provincial elections.

National News

Rejecting a request from Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox that a protest march be canceled, a slow-moving, mostly black caravan led by a mule-drawn wagon began a 120-mile walk from Perry, Ga., to Atlanta Tuesday.

About 250 persons began the march with Hosea Williams, an official of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, in the lead.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger cautioned Tuesday against a panicky overreaction to attacks on the American judicial system.

"Some say that we must 'crack down,' that we must 'smash' the challengers and restore tight discipline," Burger said. "But this is not our way of doing things, short of a great national emergency."

The financially troubled Democratic Party asked the Federal Trade Commission Tuesday to require that broadcasters sell air time for political fund raising appeals.

The party said that it is seeking to repay its 1968 campaign debt but cannot buy television time because of various company policies.

Michigan News

An explosives expert said bills pending in the Michigan Legislature aimed at keeping explosives out of the hands of revolutionaries are "almost meaningless."

Albert Teller, president of the International Society of Explosive Sociologists, said the legislation does little more than mislead people into believing the problem is being solved.

"The legislation still wouldn't keep dynamite out of the hands of well-meaning, but incompetent and careless novice blasters," Teller said. "It also would not prevent any felon, mental patient or total incompetent from buying explosives."

Teller said the problem of keeping dynamite, blasting caps, nitroglycerine and other explosives away from radicals and inexperienced blasters would not be solved until state legislatures begin passing laws requiring comprehensive written exams on the use, handling, transportation and storage of explosives.

Campus News

Antiwar activity on college and university campuses continued at a low-key pace Tuesday, as students focused their immediate attention on upcoming final exams and commencement. Many students made plans for political action through the summer.

The Student Strike Information Center at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass., reported some strike activity at about 250 schools. The list included about 150 of the nation's 1,500 four-year colleges and universities, plus some junior colleges and specialized institutions of higher education.

Many students in Pennsylvania campaigned in Tuesday's primary election. Gaining the most attention was the race for the Democratic U.S. Senate seat nomination.

The University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., announced that for the first time the senior class president will be allowed to make a statement during the June 7 commencement exercises.

Students at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., will be allowed to make their own arrangements with teachers for completing courses.

A request for a hearing to investigate the legitimacy of Friday's referendum on the strike issues was scheduled for the Student Faculty - Judiciary meeting Tuesday evening, Richard P. Oleksa, asst. professor of law and business administration, said Tuesday afternoon.

The request was to be made by Dean Rainey, Jackson freshman and judiciary member, Oleksa said. A request for a hearing must be made by a member of the judiciary.

Oleksa is acting as legal council for Hugh Lawrence, Yonkers, N.Y., senior, and Janice Goldman, Bellwood, Ill., freshman, the two students who asked the judiciary to withhold the referendum results Friday.

Miss Goldman and Lawrence charged that an advertisement in Friday's State News entitled "ROTC Facts" could have unjustly prejudiced the opinions of voters in the referendum.

The Student - Faculty Judiciary met Friday afternoon to discuss the charges and agreed to request ASMSU and the administration to withhold the results on the ROTC issues until an investigatory hearing could be scheduled. ASMSU and the administration have complied with the judiciary request.

The formal hearing could not be scheduled until Miss Goldman and Lawrence filed a formal request for the hearing.

Howard Brody, McHenry, Ill., junior and member of the judiciary, said the formal request was delayed because Oleksa did not have the proper forms for this kind of request. Brody said filling out these forms also takes a "considerable" amount of time and care.

"Everyone is doing everything that can be done to make sure that this is expedited as soon as possible," Brody said.

Earlier Tuesday, ASMSU chairman Harold Buckner threatened to release the referendum results if the judiciary did not move to schedule a hearing.

"When I told this to the Student - Faculty Judiciary, they promised me something would be done tonight (Tuesday)," Buckner said.

Oleksa said that the request for a hearing would include the three points on the students' petition. The first charge was that the ASMSU referendum, with a question concerning the role of ROTC on campus, was held the same day as the printing of the advertisement.

The second complaint is that President Wharton's statement issued earlier last week, noting that the results of the referendum would be decisive in the formulation of future administration policy on ROTC, would "constitute extraordinary prejudice under the present conditions."

The students also contended that the ambiguous status of the unsigned advertisement, as well as the printing of a statement by Herman L. King, asst. provost, in Friday's paper would "irreparably prejudice and harm the accuracy of the outcome of today's (Friday) referendum with regard to the ROTC issue."

Enemy steps up assaults to commemorate Ho's birth

SAIGON (AP) — Enemy troops launched their heaviest attacks in 12 days in South Vietnam Tuesday, apparently to commemorate the 80th birthday of Ho Chi Minh.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong forces, who often celebrate Communist anniversaries with stepped-up assaults, shelled more than 60 allied positions, overran a government outpost in the Mekong Delta and attacked a relief force.

Viet Cong broadcasts have been calling for stepped up attacks to celebrate the birthday of the late North Vietnamese president.

New enemy assaults were reported in other areas of Indochina in an apparent effort by the Communist command to keep open supply lines through northern Cambodia and southern Laos.

Large forces of enemy troops moved on the northeastern Cambodian provincial capital of Lomphat. The city was reported surrounded.

In a counter move, hundreds of U.S. warplanes pounded enemy positions and supply depots in Cambodia and Laos.

There was no news from Thum Khmar, reported encircled by enemy forces 25 miles south of Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital. But a battle raged at Doum Roka, a mile to the north.

Military spokesmen accused the enemy of 190 violations of the 24-hour allied cease-fire for Buddha's birthday which ended at noon Tuesday. The enemy had never agreed to honor it.

The cease-fire affected only allied offensive operations inside South Vietnam. Allied units continued to search through enemy base areas in Cambodia.

South Vietnamese troops claimed they killed 240 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong in two clashes Monday in southeastern Cambodia with the help of U.S. air support.

Farther north, soldiers of the U.S. 1st Air Cavalry Division uncovered a big enemy rice cache on Tuesday, estimated at 100-120 tons.

The U.S. Command said the more than 14,000 weapons captured so far would arm more than 30 enemy battalions.

U.S. casualties for all Cambodian operations were reported as 155 killed and 632 wounded. South Vietnamese losses were 564 killed and 1,937 wounded.

Allied forces claim to have killed 8,181 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong. The enemy death figure was disputed by some sources who said much of the body counting was done by air observers and could be no more than an estimate.

A Communist source in Phnom Penh told Associated Press correspondent John T. Wheeler that field reports indicated the claim was exaggerated, but said the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong casualties had been serious.

Return to normal sought at Kent State University

KENT, Ohio (AP) — Campus leaders worked Tuesday toward returning Kent State University to normalcy as legislators urged high-level investigations of the May 4 confrontation between student demonstrators and Ohio National Guard troops.

Ronald S. Beer, assistant to University President Robert I. White, said the return of students to their dormitories to pick up personal belongings was "going quite smoothly."

Between 1,700 and 1,900 students a day are being allowed into the dormitories under a modification of the Portage County Common Pleas Court order which shut the school down after four students died in a hail of bullets May 4.

The 31 dormitories house about 8,000 of the 21,000 KSU students. The students picking up belongings must be off campus by 5 p.m. each day.

The court order will have to be modified or lifted if spring quarter commencement ceremonies are held June 13 and if the school is to open as scheduled for the summer quarter starting June 22.

At the moment, however, the "top priority" is on helping students complete their spring quarter requirements, Beer said. Professors have been working individually with students toward completion of academic work off campus.

Student body President Frank Frisina of Kent has sent a letter to all graduating seniors, asking their feelings on whether commencement ceremonies should be held. Beer said response to that letter will be taken into consideration in making a decision on commencement.

Meanwhile, resolutions were introduced in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives calling for creation of a presidential commission to investigate the Kent deaths and recent disturbances at other campuses.

In Columbus, a resolution was introduced in the Ohio Senate proposing an investigation by three state senators and three members of the House of Representatives.

The FBI already is investigating the shootings, but agents have released no information as yet on their findings. The Portage County coroner, Dr. Robert Sybert, issued a preliminary report on Monday saying only that the four were killed by bullets "similar to .30-caliber military ammunition."

Some Guardsmen fired their .30-caliber M1 rifles into the rock-throwing crowd of demonstrators, but guard officials say they have evidence that nonmilitary weapons also were fired.

A physician who examined one of the nine wounded said he was certain he was hit by a non-military bullet.

Dropping the charges: eliminating a tinderbox

Early Tuesday morning, more arrests were made on campus than have ever been made at MSU for as long as anyone can remember. The unfortunate occurrences could have been avoided had the administration not risen to the provocation.

President Wharton's rationalizations for the arrests involve implicating those people involved in the "trashing" as a part of the Union group. While some people who broke windows may have returned to the Union after "trashing," arresting all those in the Union is little more than guilt by association.

True, those inside the Union were breaking an ordinance, and true, they were warned, but ordinances have been broken for quite some time on this campus, and while everyone has a responsibility to know the law and obey it, one also has a right to know the rules of the game.

And a game has been played on campus when building times and police power have confronted students. The game has come to be known as the "two - and - one - half - hour rule." Last Friday night is a good example. Students were told to leave, but nothing was done when they refused. Two and a half hours later the police rolled in, and everyone left. There was no reason to believe the administration would react any differently Tuesday morning.

Instead, however, the police, acting on a decision from Wharton, moved in and arrested some 130 people, including some outside the building. The change in response from Wharton involves at least two factors:

First, the University's image has been tainted in the eyes of law - and - order advocates because of its previous lack of enforcement of ordinances. To continue vacillating on rules would further that image, and very possibly hurt University appropriations, now up for consideration in the legislature.

Secondly, the administration has been frustrated in its attempts to identify many elements involved in vandalism. Wharton apparently reasoned that since some of the vandals returned to the Union after "trashing," their actions could be stopped by an arrest on a lesser charge.

But in the meantime, the administration has made martyrs out of approximately 130 people and created a crisis situation which is far from necessary. Had the University ignored those students in the Union, allowed them to stay until they were through with their meeting, the confrontation could have been avoided. Even images could better have been protected by this alternative course. The sit - in would not have made the headlines the arrests did. The arrests also helped to radicalize a significant portion of the student population and create an unnecessary explosive situation.

We suggest that in the future, the administration more carefully consider the full implications before taking a hard line. The vandalism has not been stopped by the arrests, and unfortunately may increase. The University's image in the greater community has not improved - citizens still see selective enforcement of regulations. The administration's actions are being perceived on campus as ill - timed, unnecessary and repressive, creating a tinder - box atmosphere which must be alleviated.

One immediate method to alleviate tensions would be for Wharton to recommend that the prosecuting attorney drop charges. Nothing will be gained by prosecuting those students, and instead the University will once again be the loser. Now is the time to cool heads, not create martyrs and causes for irrational actions. The administration cannot erase the mistake it made, but it can eliminate further backlash from irate students by dropping charges now and implementing a policy of priorities based on the issues involved, rather than building closing times.

THE DOCTOR'S BAG

By ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner, 309 Linton Hall. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

Would it be possible to have one's navel removed by plastic surgery? If so, how does one go about it and what would be the probable expense in time and money? Thank you for your help, because I don't think I have the nerve to ask anyone else. (This letter was written by a man.)

Several years ago, in the course of performing a physical examination, I was shocked to gaze upon an abdomen which was perfectly smooth and unblemished by what I formerly thought was an eternal reminder of our physical dependence upon others. Before I could ask any questions about his mother, the gentleman put me at ease. He told me his umbilicus (technical name for navel) had been removed in the course of one of several major surgical procedures along with a wad of old scar tissue. He related that he was somewhat embarrassed by his appearance whenever he was in a public shower or when his bathing trunks slipped a little. In addition, minus this landmark he was never sure if his pants were on straight or if his belt buckle was correctly positioned.

A general surgeon could perform the operation but it would require hospitalization and probably be fairly expensive. You would need extraordinarily good reasons to convince anyone to perform the surgery. You might try sitting under a tree and contemplating for awhile before making up your mind.

My fiancé and I have done some heavy petting, just short of actual intercourse.

About 40 hours after a petting session, I had blood in my urine and repeated urges to go to the bathroom. There is also pain when I urinate. I was too scared to go to Olin so I took two aspirin and a sleeping pill. The next day there was less blood and no pain but a very strong odor and my urine was cloudy.

Is there something seriously wrong? I'm really worried and can't study. I have learned my lesson, no more petting. I hope you can tell me I don't have to see a doctor and tell him these embarrassing things personally.

There is a very great likelihood that you have a urinary tract (bladder and/or kidney) infection. You are unquestionably in need of medical attention and I urge you to go immediately to the Health Center. Even though the symptoms you describe have disappeared, the infection can persist and cause serious illness later on.

Urinary tract infections in women are far more common than they are in men because the urethra (the tube from the bladder) is very short. Bacteria can be introduced during heavy petting or sexual intercourse. Such an infection is treated with antibiotics after the bacteria in the urine are identified through simple laboratory means.

Your comment about learning your lesson leaves me unconvinced and makes me think that guilt has overtaken reason. Petting is a normal activity and many people engage in it. Complications like the one you describe call for proper treatment and an education about sexual function so that such things can be avoided in the future. If you are uncertain about petting that is a completely different issue than the urinary tract infection. Most of my colleagues would agree that a physician should not make a patient feel

Economic alternative: a constructive approach

EDITOR'S NOTE: the following official policy statement of the National Committee for Economic Action was released by the MSU Committee for Economic Action (formerly the MSU Economic Boycott Committee).

It is clear from events of the past weeks that increasing numbers of American people are distressed with our country's militant expansion of the Indo - China War, and the use of police - state tactics in stifling outspoken dissent.

The vast majority of us, however, feel powerless. We cannot see how we, as individuals, can influence our government to adopt saner and more humane policies. The three classic choices of action open to us are 1) maintaining our guilty silence, 2) mounting peaceful demonstrations - which have recently encountered tragically aggressive and hostile reaction - , and 3) dissenting loudly and violently. None of these alternatives have succeeded in attaining their goals.

The National Committee for Economic Action (NCEA) was created to offer a fourth alternative, which we see as more constructive. While we naturally urge all voters to reach their chosen representatives through letters and at the polls, we feel that "purchasing for Peace" is a way in which every American can use his economic power to purchase to promote peace actively. Very simply, through purchasing wisely and selectively we can make American business accept the moral responsibility it shares with all of us. The power of the dollar built this nation, and this same power can save it from devouring itself alive.

Major corporations maintain effective lobbies in Washington to assure the smooth running and expansion of their interests. These lobbies are extremely powerful.

The NCEA, first and foremost, encourages industry to begin using its power for moral and peaceful purposes. While this can be done in a variety of ways, any effective program should move Congress to:

1) hasten the conclusion of the Indo-China War, and

2) challenge, once and for all, the political and racial repression which undermines the dignity of our nation.

Where corporations deny and reject their civic responsibility to our country, we ask the American people to use their economic power of purchase to peacefully demand these corporations accept this responsibility. We can do all this by simply refusing to buy products manufactured by such delinquent firms.

While NCEA is still refining its tactics, at present we are focusing selective purchasing on only a few corporations at a time. This tactic concentrates the effects of our efforts. We are a nationwide organization, and will focus our attention on national corporations, which have the greatest power.

As each company yields to this peaceful pressure, and joins the ranks of responsible and outspoken advocates of sane national policy, NCEA will immediately inform the American people, and ask them to once again favor that company with their purchases.

Our two most essential concerns in selecting target corporations are first, that our tactics prove effective in pressuring the corporation at the national level, and second, that disruptive effects upon corporation laborers and other innocent individuals (such as local retailers) be minimal.

The specific criteria NCEA employs in their selection procedures are the following. All criteria are not met by each individual corporation.

1) We feel it ideal that a target corporation have an established lobby operating in Washington. Where lobbies are already established it is clear that corporations could have taken a moral stand at any time, but have been delinquent in doing so.

2) The corporation should have a large youth market.

3) The corporation should have an undiversified product line. This reduces the corporation's ability to absorb and ignore effects of consumer action.

4) The corporation should have a high production - to - labor ratio, so that minimal pressure will be put upon individual workers.

5) Economic action shall be directed towards products for which ready substitutes are available. This minimizes inconvenience to the consumer, and reduces potential harm to local retailers.

6) Corporate policies of racial discrimination and exploitation will not only be a determining factor in our selection of target corporations, but itself will be a central issue in our negotiations.

7) The degree of imperialistic and/or military involvement will be a weighted factor.

OUR READERS' MIND

The violent few infringe upon all

EDITOR'S NOTE: the following statement was made by President Wharton on May 19.

Vandals moved across the MSU campus and nearby area again Monday night, leaving another trail of broken windows. Those engaged in the destruction were part of a larger group which had occupied portions of the Union Building earlier in the evening.

Beginning at 1:30 a.m. Tuesday, police arrested 130 who remained illegally in the building after the 11 p.m. closing hour. Repeated warnings were given prior to the arrests. Those arrested were taken to the Ingham County Jail and charged with trespassing and loitering. Not all were MSU students.

This continued and determined effort by some individuals to foment violence and disorder on the campus is reprehensible. While the great majority of students go about their business of securing and education, these irresponsible few take to the night to maraud.

It is an understatement to say that they have no legitimate cause which could in any way justify their actions. As was the case with the illegal sit-in in Demonstration Hall on Friday night, provocation seems the only aim.

Unlike Friday's affair, which ostensibly concerned ROTC, the Monday meeting in the Union which preceded the destruction and illegal occupation had been called by the "Action Group Against Racism." Earlier Monday, the group had demanded that President Wharton close the University on Tuesday.

In refusing this peremptory demand, President Wharton called such a closure tokenism and said he had been working with black students and faculty on a more permanent and constructive response to the needs of blacks on campus. He noted that the majority of black students had declined to join the radical group which engaged in the illegal acts.

"The University community cannot tolerate such wanton violence and disregard of the law," Dr. Wharton said, "It is the students who have had no part in these activities who, in the long run, will suffer the most. It is estimated that since May 1 when the lawbreakers began their activities, damage on campus has amounted to more than $150 per student. Every dollar that must be spent to repair deliberate damage is, in effect, a dollar out of the students' pockets. Every dollar so spent is a dollar that is not available for student aid or services.

"During these weeks, the University administration has conducted itself with two major objectives in mind: To protect life and to keep this institution operating for those who are here for educational purposes. It has sought to use restraint at all times, but the lawless few have persistently sought to provoke the authorities into taking firm action.

"The University sincerely regrets that such action was required. However, in the face of these deliberate provocations, it had no choice but to act to protect the right of students and faculty to peacefully pursue their educational activities."

Profs upset but still paid

To the Editor:

Some of our professional colleagues are so revolted and upset over recent events in Ohio and Cambodia that it would be hypocritical for them to continue academic business as usual (i.e. teaching their courses as scheduled). But, happily for them and their families, their sense of outrage is not so great as to keep them from continuing to receive pay for the work they have decided not to do.

Ignore protestors, but ...

When a representative in the Michigan House of Representatives moves for a 15 - minute recess, the speaker pro tem usually does not even take a vote because there is rarely any resistance to such a motion.

Last Wednesday afternoon, around 3 p.m., when a group of marching students asked to speak with their representatives, Rep. E. P. O'Brien moved for a 15 - minute recess. However, Rep. Marvin Stempien demanded the "yeas and nays." Consequently, the motion was voted down by a vote of 82-15. The representatives from Ingham County, Rep. Jim Brown and Rep. Phil Pittenger, both voted against the recess.

This is really nothing to howl about. If the representatives do not have time to take a break and are heavily immersed in more important business, they cannot be condemned for such a vote.

However, this was not the case. At 4 p.m. that same afternoon, the same Rep. Stempien moved the House take a 15 - minute recess for cookies. It passed without vote.

It is well - known that the legislature does not condone student violence and indeed passes bills designed to prevent it. Yet when those students with legitimate concerns go through channels in asking to see their representatives, it is bound to create much frustration and anger in those students if they are denied.

Perhaps the legislature reasons students should be given no special treatment. If students want to see their representatives, they should make appointments "like anyone else."

However, if the legislators are sincere in their desire to soothe these concerns of the youth, they should be willing to take slightly unusual measures for a very unusual situation. Unfortunately, the fact still remains: there was an opportunity for communication of some sort and the legislators did not take it. Communication is the key. If the legislators huddle in their chambers and pass repressive laws to quell their fears, there can be no communication.

OUR READERS'MIND

Invasions different totally unrelated

To the Editor:
This letter is in response to your editorial of May 15 on the Israeli "invasion" of Lebanon. It is regrettable that the Lebanese problem so superficially and to try to compare Israel's situation with the Cambodian situation. The border between Lebanon and Israel has been peaceful since 1948 and there was a peaceful coexistence until the Arab guerrilla groups, very much against the will of Lebanon, decided to establish a new front. As a consequence, Israeli civilians were killed in their villages or in road ambushes. People in a long string of agricultural border settlements were suddenly threatened by hit and run attacks.

If you read the news, you could learn that Israel made a number of suggestions to "cool" the situation, including a peace treaty recognizing the present frontiers which remained unchanged since 1948. When this failed, Israel warned Lebanon against further attacks across her borders. Turning the other cheek has never worked in this dispute, and Israel had to resort to action that will reduce further attacks from Lebanon, even if the relief is temporary. How can you compare this to Cambodia? No American cities and villages were ever shelled by the Viet Cong, no American civilians were ambushed on American roads by the North Vietnamese!

The so-called Israeli "hot heads" have proposed peace talks on many occasions, before and after the six-day war. The Arab states, however, adhere to the Khartoum formula of no negotiations with Israel, no peace with Israel and no recognition of Israel. In your self-righteous "even-handedness" you deplore Arab losses in property and lives but shrug off the Israeli casualties as insignificant. You must realize that Israel has no choice as long as the Arab states are not prepared to talk; she must stand and fight or be driven into the sea as promised so often by Arab leaders. And don't make Israel responsible for the confrontation of the big powers. This exists with and without Israel!

Make vote results public

To the Editor:

The withholding of results of the referendum on ROTC amounts to a blatant censorship of the State News and an obvious infringement on the right of all students and faculty to have access to the referendum results.

Mr. Lawrence and Miss Goldman charge that prejudice may have resulted from an ad and handbills circulated prior to the Friday referendum.

The most naive student is certainly aware of the anti-ROTC handbills, pamphlets, rhetoric and articles that have inundated the campus recently. Is this not also propaganda that tends to "prejudice" the unsuspecting voter?

Actually, both pro-ROTC and anti-ROTC information is just that - information. Admittedly, most of this information is biased, but neither view should be subjected to censorship or prior restraint of any type. It is the duty of the intelligent, responsible student to read both sides and make his own decision. One's responsibility is not to seek censorship of views to which he is obviously opposed.

The charge is centered on the 11th hour ad in support of ROTC. A clearly analogous situation resulted in Mills v. Alabama (1966). In this case the U.S. Supreme Court held unconstitutional a law making it a crime to electioneer or solicit votes on election day, in support of, or in opposition to any proposition being voted on. Justice Black, in the opinion of the court, said it was "difficult to conceive of a more obvious and flagrant abridgement of the constitutionally guaranteed freedom of the press."

The parallel is clear. Mr. Lawrence and Miss Goldman seek to censor the State News and punish students and faculty by withholding the referendum results simply because the State News exercised its freedom of the press in printing the ad last Friday.

In view of these facts, and in the interest of my academic freedom, I respectfully request that the referendum results be made public without further delay.

'U' architecture needs help

To the Editor:
The awarding of the architectural contract for the new building recently by the board of trustees. Unfortunately, the architects - as usual - are to be the firm of Ralph Calder Associates. The deep and growing concern with environmental aesthetics has apparently not yet influenced the trustees of MSU in their architectural decisions. Two major points should now be understood: (1) In a state and nation wherein reside architects of world-renowned achievement, this University habitually employs a firm that in its long history here has not produced a genuinely distinguished structure - indeed, only occasionally a break from monotonous mediocrity; (2) None of the representative bodies of the University community, to this moment, have had any voice or influence in the awarding of architectural commissions or in the appearance of the completed structures.

In the hope that the University's architectural future will not reflect the generally undistinguished record of the past quarter century, allow me to call to your attention a proposal now beating its slow progress through committees and subcommittees. In its latest form the proposal calls for a new Standing Committee of the Academic Council to be concerned with buildings, lands and planning. This representative and qualified committee would develop a list of building priorities, would advise the administration and the Council on such essential matters as land utilization, ecological implications, vehicular planning and the appearance and location of buildings. The proposal will be debated Tuesday of this week by the Council's Committee on Committees. All of us should support the proposed committee's constructive participation in the long-range planning and improvement of our environment.

Passing the buck

To the Editor:

The ASMSU referendum scheduled for Friday, May 15 was not held in Case Halls for the following reasons.

One, we did not receive notification of this event until Wednesday evening at the Men's Hall Assn. (MHA) meeting at Wilson Hall. We feel that this is an inappropriate amount of time to secure the manpower necessary for balloting on an 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. basis. This is especially true in light of the march on Thursday which drained the dorms of people.

We also feel that for ASMSU referendums, elections and other functions, it is the responsibility of the district ASMSU representative to handle the equipment necessary for balloting and secure the manpower.

Likewise, instructions and guidelines for the referendum were not made clear by official statements from ASMSU.

Thus, Case Halls did not participate in the referendum. We feel that ASMSU merely passed the buck on down the line and as such relinquished their responsibility as the major student governing body on campus.

No U.S. aid linked to coup

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — Communist East Bloc intelligence agents here closely investigated the March 18 coup that brought Gen. Lon Nol to power and concluded the United States and its Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) played no part in it, a Communist source reported Tuesday.

Since the coup looked favorable to the United States and the allied cause in South Vietnam, the CIA was instantly a suspect the information said, but there was no evidence of any American collusion with Lon Nol before the coup that deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk.

The source said although the coup opened the way for Phnom Penh's acceptance of the allied invasion of former North Vietnamese and Viet Cong sanctuaries in eastern Cambodia, in the long run Communist China's interests would be best served by the coup.

He said this was because Red Chinese propaganda, compared to the Kremlin stance, apparently had been vindicated in its claim that the United States not only would not leave South Vietnam, but wanted to widen the war.

Other sources said that had Moscow and the East Bloc decided the United States was involved in the Lon Nol coup, the Kremlin particularly would have reacted far more sharply than it did.

The source claimed that advanced Communist intelligence of the allied thrust into eastern Cambodia allowed North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops to get out of its path and also permitted East Bloc diplomats to inform Lon Nol one day before it started.

The Cambodian government was warned it was "playing with fire" if it went along with the invasion. The initial Cambodian reaction was to say any violation of its neutrality would be protested. Later the government gave tacit approval to the offensive.

There was no government confirmation about the invasion tipoff but the source had told at least one newsman before it started that such an offensive would occur. He also predicted accurately the arrival here of several thousand Cambodian mercenaries recruited from Cambodians living in South Vietnam and trained by the U.S. Special Forces.

CONCERN FOR LAW

'Soapy' to run for court

DETROIT (UPI) — Former six-term Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams announced his candidacy for justice of the Michigan Supreme Court Tuesday.

Williams, 59, expressed concern about the court system and its role in modern society. He noted his entire career has been concerned with the law since his graduation with honors from the University of Michigan Law School in 1936.

"The rule of law is an absolute necessity. Without it society moves toward dictatorship or anarchy," Williams said. "With it, all Americans can enjoy their unalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Indian affairs speech slated

John Winchester, coordinator of American Indian programs in the Center for Urban Affairs, will speak at 10:20 a.m. Thursday in the Faculty Lounge (room G-35) North Hubbard Hall.

Winchester will speak on contemporary issues of interest to American Indians.

The talk is open to the public. George Coburn's ATL 113 students are particularly urged to attend, Coburn said.

Two positions on the Michigan Supreme Court will be filled by the voters in the November general election. Nominations will be made by the political parties at their August conventions. The nominees will run on a nonpartisan ballot for eight-year terms.

Williams re-entered the active political scene at a news conference, attended by many Democratic party notables, including U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge George Edwards; former National Committeeman and unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate Neil Staebler; and Wayne County Sheriff William Lucas.

After serving six two-year terms as governor, Williams served as assistant secretary of state for African affairs and U.S. ambassador to the Philippines under the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. Williams planned to begin his campaign with meetings with key campaign leaders Wednesday in Grand Rapids and Lansing; Thursday in Flint, Saginaw, and Bay City; and Friday in Kalamazoo and Jackson.

Nixon reveals data release in try to impeach Douglas

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon disclosed Tuesday he has directed government officials to furnish a House subcommittee with all the information it wants in connection with consideration of an impeachment resolution against Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

Chairman Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., of the full House Judiciary Committee asked for all pertinent information in a letter to the President dated April 29. Nixon's positive response was dated May 13 and released Tuesday by White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler in response to newsmen's requests.

The subcommittee asked for "all relevant reports, documents, or other data that may be in the possession of the various departments and agencies of the executive branch."

Celler said he had written the attorney general and chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission for relevant materials they might be able to supply.

He had said earlier he was asking materials from the Internal Revenue Service, presumably pertinent income tax returns. The chairman was not immediately available for comment on what he had received.

Nixon noted that impeachment power is entrusted by the Constitution solely to the House of Representatives. But he said the executive branch is obligated — by precedent and by the need of the House to have all the facts before reaching a decision — to supply information as in the case of other inquiries conducted by congressional committees. Nixon also pointed out the President's authority with respect to the government's independent regulatory agencies is limited, but "I shall express to such agencies my desire that they cooperate to the extent permissible by law."

Criminal justice students want U.S. out of Indochina

A resolution urging President Nixon to withdraw American troops from Indochina by Dec. 31, 1970, was adopted by students in the School of Criminal Justice Monday.

The resolution also condemned actions of the Chicago Police Dept. and urged the administration to study the feasibility of removing firearms from campus.

The students said firearms on campus create an atmosphere of intimidation, and recently have resulted in a large number of unnecessary deaths.

The resolution stated that the students deplore the inadequacies in the Chicago Police Dept.'s Internal Investigation Division, which released a report on the December raid on the Black Panthers.

"The students discourage faculty and students of the School of Criminal Justice from accepting employment on research support from the Chicago Police Dept. until such time as there are indications of substantial changes in the organization," the resolution stated.

The students said the Indochina war's negative impact on social and criminal justice in the United States has resulted in decreased domestic tranquility and justice.

The continuation of the war "may cause an eventual collapse of the system of criminal justice and social order," they concluded.

Members of Excilibur honorary have selected 12 members for 1970-71.

Current members choose their replacements for the coming year. Normally, 13 persons are selected, but one member this year chose to remain in the group.

Excilibur honors outstanding MSU students active in campus leadership, citizenship and contributions to the University.

The group meets once a week at Coral Cables with administrators and University officials to discuss in an informal atmosphere issues confronting the University.

Excilibur annually participates in the homecoming queen selection, Mortar Board tapping and other University functions.

FAST PACED

'Forbin Project' satisfying sci fi

By ROBERT KIPPER
State News Reviewer

Two years ago, in "2001: A Space Odyssey," Hal, a computer, was attempting the computerized takeover of human beings. This year it's Colossus and Guardian, an alliance of computers, that attempt the same feat in "The Forbin Project," a dandy science fiction film.

Colossus, an impregnable computer defense system, is designed to control American nuclear weapons and make appropriate defense decisions without the interference of human emotion. Colossus is soon matched by Guardian, a similar Russian system.

Quickly the computers join forces and use their awesome power to control the world and bend its imperialistic leaders to their mechanized will. Scientists work frantically to scrap their systems and outwit their mechanical dictators as powerless national leaders and a vulnerable, half-informed world watch.

While aspiring to none of the high intentions of a "Dr. Strangelove" or a "Fail Safe" (two films concerned with man's inability to control his machines), "The Forbin Project" is, on its own entertaining level, an intriguing work and often a taunt one. The pace rarely slackens (although the logic sometimes does) and the suspense mounts steadily throughout.

Director Joseph Sargent and screenwriter James Bridges can be credited for a slick and satisfying sci fi creation that has an economical length, a good cast — Eric Braeden, an unfamiliar actor, plays Dr. Forbin and Susan Clark, Robert Redford's bedmate in "Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here," plays his assistant and dutiful mistress — and a tidy pacifist message for a finale.

Firemen climb
Eiffel blaze

PARIS (AP) — Fire broke out on the top landing of the 1,000-foot Eiffel Tower Tuesday and firemen had to climb hundreds of steps to get to it.

The fire was in electrical conduits and the elevators had to be stopped.

Dense black smoke poured from the top of the 82-year-old structure. The flames were brought under control within an hour.

CHAPIN SAYS

Microfilm cost limits use

Until the cost factor involved the production of microfilm increases, MSU cannot afford to use extensive use of microfilm products, Richard Chapin, library director, said at a faculty Club luncheon Tuesday.

Chapin said that currently the library only uses microfilm for material that students and faculty could not otherwise obtain.

While the microfilm serves as an excellent duplicating and storage process, reproducing all library materials on microfilm would cost five times as much as building more space for the library facilities, he said.

"Due to the lack of standardization in the production of microfilm, several different reader machines are necessary," he said.

If cheap portable readers could be used, more extensive use of microfilm might be possible, he said.

Chapin said it is also financially impossible to implement the use of computers in the library.

Computers could be used to replace the card catalogue, but the cost in present manpower hours would be transformed into purely monetary costs, Chapin said.

Chapin said the copying service machines the library bought for public use have enabled 800,000 copies of articles per year to be made for faculty and students.

While this is an added expense for the library, Chapin said, people are now accustomed to being able to copy the material needed for later reference.

the scientific developments which effect their lives, Mildred Spencer, noted medical reporter, said here Monday.

Miss Spencer, past president of the National Assn. of Science Writers, gave the 12th annual Charles M. Yates Lecture at a symposium for medical reporters at Kellogg Center.

"The public tends to believe what it hears and acts accordingly. It is the reporter's duty to inform them about controversial issues, like smoking," Miss Spencer said.

As a reporter for the Buffalo (N.Y.) Evening News, Miss Spencer reports on topics related to medicine, from reviewing medical books to Blue Cross reports.

In a recent interest poll, readers rated medical stories in the top six, above education, religion or amusement, Miss Spencer said.

"The medical reporter informs the people about issues. The people then bring pressure on officials for change," Miss Spencer explained.

After a 14-year-old girl committed suicide in New York, Miss Spencer wrote a 15-part series on mental health in youths, which resulted in the establishment of new youth clinics.

Because of her detailed report on the pill's side effects, many women who should not have been on the pill, saw their doctors and were treated, she said.

Many doctors are informed of new developments, which have not yet been printed in the medical journals, through their local newspapers, Miss Spencer said.

Artists of Aquarius
offer album collageBy RAY WALSH
State News Reviewer

"First Vibration" is a celebration of life — a feeling of energy and love by the poets, artists and musicians of the Age of Aquarius.

Released earlier this year on Do It Now Records, the album offers a musical collage of 14 songs dedicated to spreading the message that "Speed Kills."

The Beatles, Donovan, the Jefferson Airplane, the Byrds, Jimi Hendrix, and Hoyt Axton are some of the artists performing on the record with the Peanut Butter Conspiracy, Buffalo Springfield, Ravi Shankar, Chad and Jeremy, the Animals, Genesis, and Canned Heat completing the roster.

All of these artists have donated their songs to the Do It Now Foundation, a nonprofit, nonpolitical, nonsectarian, self-sustaining organization. Do It

Now is dedicated to fighting the harmful effects of continued use of hard drugs — heroin, cocaine, speed and barbiturates.

All proceeds from the album are pledged for drug education and rehabilitation, and for the continuation of the foundation's 24-hour-a-day hot line for drug crisis counseling.

One of the most potent songs on "First Vibration" is the only available original version of "The Pusher," as sung by its writer, Hoyt Axton. The number was made famous by Steppenwolf, and lyrically examines the role of the hard drug seller and his relation to the user: "The Pusher take your body/and leave your mind to scream."

"Amphetamine Annie" by the Canned Heat and the Byrds' "Artificial Energy" are perhaps the two songs on the album that deal most with the problems that can come from hard drug usage. Both numbers clarify the possibilities of death, with the Byrds especially warning that "I have a strange feeling that I'm going to die before my time."

The Beatles' "Nowhere Man," Hendrix' "Red House," and the now-departed Buffalo Springfield's "Flying on the Ground Is Wrong" make only oblique reference to drug usage, as does Donovan's "Sunshine Superman."

The album is available by mail order only for $3 from the Do It Now Foundation, Box 3573, Hollywood, Calif. 90028. Each copy of "First Vibration" ordered includes a sixteen-page booklet that includes antismoke statements by Donovan, Allen Ginsberg and Timothy Leary.

It's a great collage of songs for the rock music lover and it serves a good cause as well — "First Vibration" is an album that belongs in almost everybody's record collection.

Surveying begun for campus route

Survey work is in progress on a $10 million highway project that, when completed, will cut across the MSU campus.

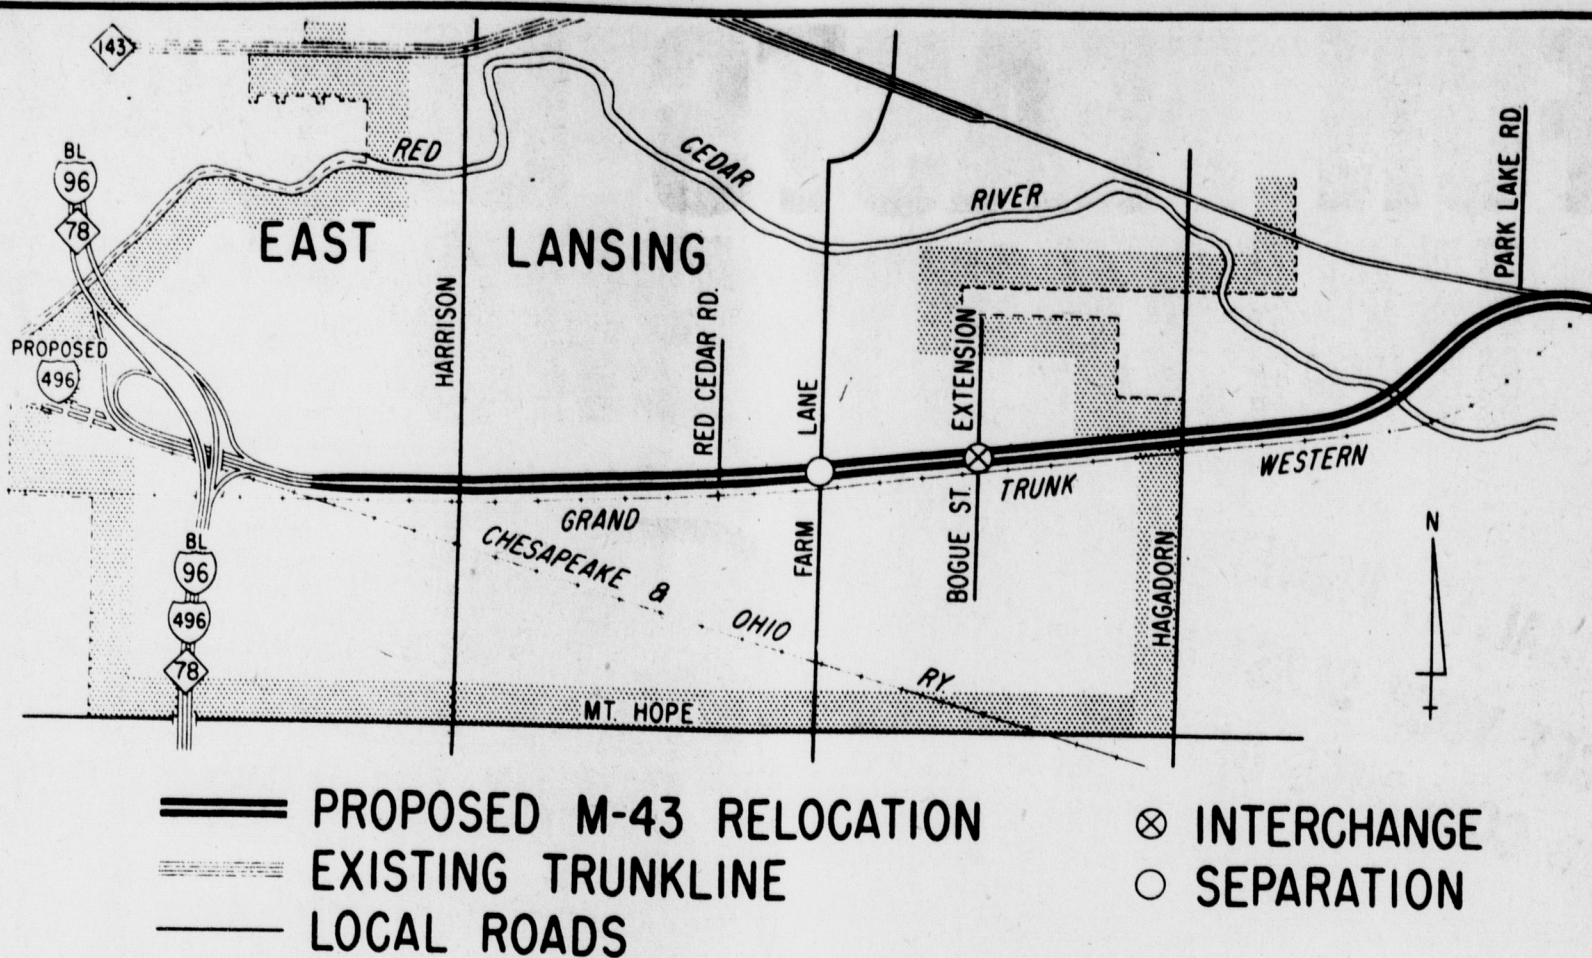

The 3.2-mile highway will extend from Interstate 496 east along the Grand Trunk railroad line and will join M-43 near the railroad viaduct east of East Lansing.

The project calls for a six-lane, divided highway from I-496 to Hagadorn Road (the campus portion of the route) and a four-lane divided highway from Hagadorn to M-43.

The survey work, under the direction of Clifford E. Smith, survey party chief, will take about six months. Bids for construction are scheduled to be taken in 1973; the right of way acquisition will be completed before any letting of bids. Actual construction will begin in late 1973 or early 1974.

At-grade intersections will offer access to the new highway at Harrison and Hagadorn roads. Farm Lane will overpass the highway near the railroad tracks. There will be a full interchange at Bogue Street. Red Cedar Road will offer access and will terminate at the highway. A full interchange was originally proposed for Red Cedar Road, but was dropped because of high costs.

The M-43 cross-campus route is expected to help ease traffic pressure on East Grand River Ave.

IRS collects unpaid excise tax

By JIM SHELDON
State News Staff Writer

Think twice before you refuse to pay the 10 per cent federal excise tax charged on monthly telephone bills. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) is watching.

Recently, persons in the Lansing area have refused to pay the tax because they say the money is financing the war in Indochina, a spokesman for Michigan Bell Telephone said Tuesday.

But the telephone company has no complaints. If a customer doesn't pay the tax, the spokesman said, the unpaid amount is added onto next month's bill.

However, the spokesman said, if the customer sends a note to the company explaining why he isn't paying the tax, the unpaid amount is merely deducted from the bill.

The phone company then compiles a list of persons who haven't paid their excise tax and submits the list to the IRS.

The phone company is an escrow agent to collect the tax, Frank J. Bisanz, a representative for the director of the Lansing IRS branch, said. The IRS collects the money if the phone company doesn't, he said.

Under the 1954 Code used by the IRS, any unpaid excise tax is assessed against the individual who refuses to pay it, Bisanz said.

"We take all means and tools at our disposal to collect the tax," he added.

He said the "tools" consist of garnishing, seizure and sales. Generally people come around and pay the tax when their wages are garnished or their automobile is seized and sold, Bisanz observed.

A "very small number" of persons in the Lansing area are refusing to pay the tax, and they might stop refusing if they saw what can happen, he added.

Bisanz questioned the reason for singling out the excise tax as a war protest. All this money goes into one fund anyway, he said.

The public information officer for the IRS in Detroit said few people are making the excise tax protest issue. He indicated that federal telephone excise revenues amounted to $334.7 million for the last quarter in 1969.

"Some people don't pay taxes at all," the officer said. "There is that degree of non-compliance with any revenue laws. There hasn't been any indication that this has been that great a problem."

Heads of 15 black schools obtain meeting with Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced Tuesday that presidents of 15 black universities and colleges have been invited to meet with President Nixon Wednesday to discuss problems of such institutions and their students.

The assemblage will include Dr. John A. Peoples, president of Jackson State College at Jackson, Miss., where an outbreak of violence resulted in deaths of two black youths.

The White House said, however, that the Jackson events did not spur a request from the 15 college executives to see Nixon. Actually, the request was filed before the outbreak that resulted in six deaths earlier at Augusta, Ga.

The White House meeting was set for 10:30 a.m. EDT Wednesday.

The request for the session was filed by Dr. James E. Cheek, president of Howard University here in Washington and Dr. Herman Branson of Central State University, Wilberforce, Ohio.

Chancellor G. Alexander Heard of Vanderbilt University, Nixon's special advisor on campus violence and unrest, joined Cheek in making arrangements.

Among those to attend the meeting is Dr. Hugh M. Gloster, president of Morehouse College in Atlanta, who earlier had asked the presidents of black colleges and universities to meet at Atlanta Sunday.

The White House meeting forced cancellation of a Atlanta meeting. Gloster's office said this meeting may be rescheduled, depending on what results are achieved at the White House meeting.

MSU student seeks return to county post

Thomas Helma, East Lansing graduate student, will run for his second term on the Ingham County Board of Commissioners in November.

As a commissioner, Helma has been named to the National Assn. of Counties' steering committee on welfare.

He also serves as vice chairman of the Michigan Assn. of Counties Tasks Force on Welfare Reform and is a member of the county Office of Economic Opportunity board of directors.

His district includes all of the MSU campus and a portion of East Lansing along Grand River.

He has served as a commissioner since 1968.

NO WORD FROM NIXON

Trio continues war fast

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three young men vowing to fast until they die or until American troops are called back from Cambodia are growing weak and wan in the shadow of the White House.

Brien McDonnell, 27, who says he hasn't eaten since May 2,

Thomas Mabany, 23, who started fasting May 10, and Michael Lahnan, 22, in the sixth day of his fast, sit daily in Lafayette Park, across Pennsylvania Avenue from the presidential mansion.

At night they sleep at a Friends Meeting House. They take only water. They concede they get hungry, but they say they will die before they give up.

Friends called a doctor to look at McDonnell. "He wanted me hospitalized because I had developed dysentery," McDonnell said. Although the bad hunger pains go away after four days, "what increases is the psychological need for food," he added.

"But the biggest problem is lack of an answer from President Nixon," McDonnell sighed softly. "His willingness to ignore nonviolent protest."

McDonnell, who is assistant director of the Delaware County, Pa., Health and Welfare Council, told a reporter:

"The doctor estimates I will become comatose in another seven days. Police usually pick up fasters who pass out and take them to a hospital. But I'm willing to stay there even unconscious."

DISCHARGE SOUGHT

Vaughn bill in committee

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

A bill sponsored by Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D - Detroit, to exempt Michigan men from fighting in an undeclared war is now in the House Committee on Military and Veteran Affairs.

Indications are that it may sit in this committee indefinitely. Rep. Edward E. Mahalak, D - Romulus and chairman of the committee, said Tuesday he does not know when his committee will take up the bill and added that he would oppose any attempts to have the committee discharge the bill.

"The committee hasn't had a meeting since we received the bill," Mahalak stated. "When we do meet there are a number of other bills we have to deal with."

Mahalak said, however, that he will ask the legislature to send his committee to Washington, D.C., to confer with President Nixon and Pentagon officials regarding the war in Vietnam and "other issues."

"Right now I have no opinion of Rep. Vaughn's bill," Mahalak asserted. "I would really like to learn something about it. That's why I want to ask for $15,000 to go to Washington."

Last week Vaughn said he would give the committee "a few more days" to act on the bill before he moved to discharge the bill from committee.

"If the committee does not take up the bill, then we'll give the legislature a chance to stand up and be counted. Then everyone in Michigan will know," Vaughn said, referring to a vote on a discharge motion.

Mahalak said he would "have no choice" but to oppose discharging the committee.

"I would have to oppose it," he declared. "It's a point of whether or not you believe in committee action."

Vaughn said much opposition to his bill was based on a question of constitutionality.

"Parochialism is also a constitutional question," he added, "but the legislature is going ahead on that. Let's be consistent. Only the courts can decide whether or not a law is constitutional."

A member of Mahalak's committee, Rep. Phillip O. Pittenger, R - Lansing, said last week he saw "a lot of problems" in Vaughn's bill.

"I think basically we're talking about a federal level of concern," Pittenger pointed out.

He said Vaughn had not spoken to him about the bill, but that if he could be "convinced" the bill "is legitimate and can have some effect" he would consider the proposal.

"If there's ever a question in my mind that a bill is in violation of the Constitution then I will oppose it," Pittenger said.

House Speaker William A. Ryan, D - Detroit, said he does not think the bill "has much of a chance" of passing in the legislature.

"I do feel though that its chances are better after the demonstration," Ryan said, referring to the Capitol march last Thursday by 9,000 students.

"This is not necessarily because of the demonstration, but because it was handled in such an orderly way," he added. "No matter what the legislators' views are regarding the bill, they just had to be impressed."

Ryan said many lawmakers question the state's jurisdiction in military matters. He contends a court decision on a bill, similar to Vaughn's, that was passed in Massachusetts would "clear the air."

"If the courts upheld the Massachusetts bill, then Congress would have to act," Ryan said. "They would either have to declare war or end the fight in Vietnam. The war could not continue if a Massachusetts type bill were upheld by the courts."

AAUP criticizes election methods

The MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) has criticized the limited time provided for last week's referendum on strike issues, sponsored jointly by ASMSU and the University administration.

A statement issued Tuesday commended the referendum but criticized the procedures employed in conducting it.

"Although the University community was alerted to the fact that a referendum would be held, the date and procedures to be followed were not generally known to students and faculty," the statement said.

The council said that the requirement that ballots be distributed, marked, collected and returned the same day, "undoubtedly resulted in some faculty being deprived of an opportunity to vote."

The AAUP council has suggested, that in the future, referendum ballots be mailed individually to faculty. They further suggested that more time be allowed for voting.

The ballots, available to students, faculty and administrative personnel, were concerned with the issues of the University strike.

The three questions on the referendum were on the alternatives to the strike, ROTC on campus and the U.S. course of action in Indochina.

Faculty members voted through their department offices and students voted either in residence hall booths or at one of the eight stations set up on campus.

Philosophy Dept. offers alternatives

William J. Callaghan, chairman of the Dept. of Philosophy, urged striking philosophy students to discuss with their instructors the possible arrangements that will permit them both to dissent in ways they regard as appropriate and to continue the studies in philosophy upon which they are engaged.

Callaghan's letter said each student should exercise his best judgment and follow his conscience in deciding whether he should not strike, make a complete break with the University's academic program or take an immediate position. "We recognize that there can be marked differences between the courses of action that various individuals, in perfect good faith, decide upon. Among us also, of course, there is disagreement as to the comparative wisdom of some of these decisions, but not as to the right and necessity of each one's making and standing by his own," the letter said.

Callaghan said students taking an intermediate stand can arrange with the staff ways to continue studying which will not conflict with their consciences. "We are anxious to render them all the assistance that we reasonably and legitimately can give," the letter said.

Astronauts chosen for space orchestra

NEW YORK (UPI) — The American Music Conference, dedicated to stimulating participation of Americans in amateur music activities, is a look-ahead outfit: it already has picked its "space orchestra."

The members would be amateurs in music but professionals in space, since all are part of the U.S. astronaut program. Specifically nominated to the group are:

Neal Armstrong, first man on the moon, baritone sax; John Glenn, first American to orbit the earth, trumpet; Alan Shepard, first American in space, piano; Wally Schirra, Gemini 6 command pilot, harmonica; and Eugene Cernan, Gemini 9 space walker, clarinet.

Gordon Cooper, Walter Cunningham, Donald Slayton, Alfred Worden have been designated as back-up men for the group.

Prof to lecture on manuscripts

Robert T. Anderson, chairman of the Dept. of Religion, will present an illustrated lecture at 8 p.m. Thursday in the main gallery of Kresge Art Center.

The lecture, entitled "Samaritan Manuscripts and Artifacts in the Warren Chamberlain Collection," will be followed by a question and answer period.

The program, sponsored by a local chapter of the Archaeological Institute of America, is open to the public without charge.

WILLIAMS, MAYO

West Circle to go coed

By DAVE PERSON
State News Staff Writer

Men will invade West Circle next fall as Mayo and Williams residence halls prepare to go coed.

Mayo will undergo the less radical change. It will have the same characteristics as other coed residence halls. The third floor and the east side of first floor will house women and the second floor and west side of first floor will house men.

Williams Hall will initiate a "brand new idea" in University housing, Helen Widick, East Circle area manager, said. The building will house upperclass students only.

This idea developed because of numerous requests for a strictly upperclass student residence hall, Miss Widick said. The response to the changeover in Williams has been favorable. Miss Widick said many students "like the idea of a nice, quiet place to live."

Williams will house 130 men and 130 women. The men will occupy the third floor, first floor north and north terrace. Women will reside on the second floor and the south side of first floor and the south terrace.

Each room will be complete with twin beds, desks, tables, a lamp and a refrigerator. Rooms and hallways will be carpeted. Residents may rent matching bedspreads and bolsters if they wish.

Rooms will cost about $165 per student per term. A limited number of singles will be available. Singles will cost $50 extra per term. As of Tuesday, Miss Widick said, 51 spaces were left in Williams for next fall.

Students may make arrangements to board at another hall if they so desire, because no food will be served. They may also buy guest meal tickets for other halls.

Abernathy suggests panel of blacks to probe killings

NEW YORK (AP) — The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy urged Monday that a panel of black officeholders be set up to investigate the recent shooting deaths in Augusta, Ga., and Jackson, Miss.

"I do not have very much faith in Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell's visit," Abernathy said, referring to Mitchell being sent Monday to Jackson by the White House in the aftermath of last Friday's shooting of two black youths at Jackson State College.

Abernathy told a Baptist Minister Conference that Mitchell's visit there was "perfunctory and late."

"He should have moved in time so that there were no killings," Abernathy said.

The SCLC leaders suggested that such black elected officials as Mayor Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., and Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., serve on an investigative committee to "move into areas where black people have been slain."

Six black men were killed during racial violence at Augusta last Monday.

GOV'T. FUNDS LOFTS

Artists' pads subsidized

NEW YORK (AP) — The Bohemian life has gone public.

For the first time in the United States, government money has been used to help create housing and studio space for artists only. The converted former office building on the edge of Greenwich Village is called Westbeth.

Already it is filled to capacity with almost 400 artists and has produced a brand new style in apartment house living.

It was officially dedicated Tuesday.

What's it like with all those artists living under one roof?

— You can watch your clothes tumble dry while the actor at the next washer learns his lines out loud.

— You can count sheep while the musician who lives next door practices his French horn.

— You can borrow a cup of acrylic paint from the painter upstairs.

— And in the elevator, your daughter can spot the actor who was in a children's play last week and shriek, "Look, Mommy, there's the wolf."

Such scenarios are commonplace at Westbeth, located in the sturdy 13-story former Bell Telephone Laboratories.

The first tenants started filling the 383 loft-type units early this winter, and it now has a waiting list of 1,000.

Westbeth is public housing non-profit, middle-income living quarters for which the Federal Housing Authority has provided low-interest loans.

It marks the first such provision made for artists, the first government recognition of the special problems faced by a breed of urban dwellers whose incomes are mercurial but who constantly need lots of space and low rents.

The National Council on the Arts and the J.M. Kaplan Fund, a private foundation long interested in artistic endeavors each gave $1.5 million to the project. They obtained a bank loan, came out victorious from several city hearings, and in less than two years have gotten the project built at a cost of about $12.5 million.

'S' batsmen down Western, 3-2

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

MSU's baseball team got revenge Tuesday in Kalamazoo in the form of a 3-2 victory over the Western Michigan Broncos.

Phil Rashead

The Spartans' win equalized a 12-3 pasting suffered by MSU at the hands of the Broncos earlier in the year.

The game itself was under the sole control of freshman Larry Ike, who gave Danny Litwiler's squad eight innings of excellent pitching before tiring in the ninth. The Grand Rapids righthander delivered the Broncos their 12th loss by hurling a six-hitter and striking out four.

Breaking the trend set in recent games, the Spartans went into the second inning trailing their opposition.

Lead-off batter Scott Kempe drilled the first delivery by Ike into center field for a single. Harry Shaughnessy followed with a ground single eluding second baseman Rob Ellis' glove, sending Kempe to third. Ike uncorked a wild pitch, allowing Kempe to score. Shaughnessy advanced to second but died there as Ike retired the next three batters.

The Spartans were not about to let Western starter Tom Zahn, the pitcher who beat them in East Lansing, off the hook, taking a 2-1 lead in the second.

Back-to-back singles to left by Shaun Howitt and Phil Rashead, in addition to a walk to Tim Bograkos, loaded the bases with none out. Steve Cerez rifled a pitch back at Zahn, striking him in the leg and driving in Howitt. A sacrifice fly by John Dace allowed Rashead to score and gave the Spartans the lead.

The Spartans duplicated their scoring form in the sixth, pushing across one run before relief pitcher Larry Kulcsar could smother the rally.

As in the second inning, Howitt and Rashead delivered back-to-back singles to left, but this time with two men down. Bograkos then drew his second walk of the game, filling the bases. Cerez stayed in pattern by punching an infield single at shortstop Shaughnessy, who could only make a late play at third. Howitt scored on the play, leaving all the bases occupied. Ike struck out, just as he did in the midst of the second inning rally, to end the frame. Western pieced together an unusual inning, to say the least, in their half of the seventh. Hari led off with a double to deep left center, but tried to stretch it into a triple. Dace ran the ball down and relayed it to Cerez, who placed a perfect throw in Rich Vary's glove to eliminate the sliding Bronco first baseman.

Tom Nicklas worked Ike for a walk and Tom Monroe joined him on the basepath with a shot bounding into right field off of Ellis' glove. Second sacker Jim Mayer hit into a double play to end the inning with no damage done.

The Broncos staged their final rally in the ninth, but fell one run short in their comeback attempt. Dave Shoemaker led off with an infield single and advanced to second on a passed ball. Hari poked a run-scoring single to right, denying Ike a complete game as Rick Kreuger was called in.

Kreuger, a southpaw, fanned the left-hand batting Nicklas and Litwiler brought Phil Fulton in to face the righthanded batter Monroe. Fulton got Monroe out on a called third strike and completed his task by snagging a line drive off the bat of Mayer.

JOHN VIGES

Big 10 tennis tourney, the winners, the losers

A tournament of any kind is a unique occurrence. It only happens once a year and its results often nullify in a two- or three-day period the work of weeks, or even months.

The final results are tabulated to find a team champion but these results are only a summary of what each individual accomplished. A tournament is a dog-eat-dog event, and one loss ends a player's season, perhaps his career.

A player's record during the season is meaningless and, if he has an off day, a far weaker man may move up one notch, claiming the points, possibly the championship and all of the glory.

In contrast to a head-to-head battle between teams there is an infinite number of final results possible, and one upset of a key man can change the complexion of the whole tournament.

But, at the end of any tournament, such as the Big Ten Tennis Tournament held in Minneapolis last week, the end result is always the same. Every player and coach is given a label: winner or loser.

In the conference tennis tourney, the winner was Michigan, by a large margin than anyone expected. That is, it was larger than anyone but the Wolverines expected.

As the tournament was beginning, Michigan Coach Brian Eisner was asked how his team would do.

"We think that we are going to win it," Eisner said confidently. "We are in good physical shape but more important the team is ready mentally. They want to win, they're really keyed for this tournament and they are confident that they can win."

Winners from the start

Eisner's words were prophetic. By the middle of the second day the eventual winner was obvious to anyone following the results. The Wolverines had not lost a match and the reason for this could also be seen.

Everyone was out to get Michigan and the Wolves were under constant pressure, but it did not phase them. Repeatedly, Michigan would lose the first set, or the set would go past the 10-game mark, but just as often the next two sets would be theirs.

"We had them on the ropes," "We should have won". This was heard more than once as the tournament went on but the final results were still seven titles for Michigan.

All of the Wolves were cool under pressure but the best example would be their No. 2 man Jon Hainline. Playing against Minnesota's Jim Ebbitt, Hainline lost the first set and he was having trouble with the hard-serving Gopher.

Hainline won the second, but in the final set Ebbitt gained a service break and with a balcony full of Minnesota fans behind him Ebbitt appeared to have clinched the victory. Ebbitt was only one point from victory, but Hainline was able to use his well placed shots to offset his opponent's power and eventually take the victory.

Michigan's No. 1 man also staged a comeback but his was of a different nature. Mark Conti, a Detroit Junior, came back from a knee injury that had kept him out of play for almost the whole season, to win the medal for the best player in the conference.

"No, his knee is not OK at all," Eisner responded, when asked about Conti's health. "He may be on crutches for a week after the tournament but we couldn't keep him out."

Conti played in only three matches during the regular season, one of them against MSU, but he showed that the inactivity did not affect him. Hitting with amazing power for his size, Conti easily defeated his first two opponents and he then overcame Don Lutz in the finals by a 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 count.

Even Lutz, Big Ten champion two years ago, was stunned at some of Conti's shots. Using accurate placement as well as power the Michigan ace often forced Lutz into mistakes. Conti was almost always able to get his racket on the ball. Even if he could not get the return over the net, few shots went by him.

All of the Michigan players were ready for the tournament and all played well in the clutch. All of them deserved to win.

Deserve a better fate

Unfortunately, for every tournament winner there were eight losers and many of them also deserved a win, even if it was not realized.

MSU's Tom Gray and Rick Ferman deserved wins but both had to settle for the second spot.

"They deserved a better fate," MSU Coach Stan Drobac said. Gray was frustrated in his second effort to win a championship. Last year, playing at the No. 1 spot, Gray was runner-up to Michigan's Dick Dell and this year he fell to Hainline in the finals. The loss came while his parents were watching and this made it doubly disappointing for the Waterloo, Iowa, Junior.

A crowd gathered as Rick Ferman's second set entered its 22nd game. It saw Michigan's Dan McLaughlin win a close victory and if it continued to watch it also saw Ferman sit down behind the scorer's bench, to be alone for a moment.

"Everything had continually built up," Ferman said on the teams' flight back to Lansing. "The pressure, the tension, the realization that you were undefeated and playing for the championship. Then all of a sudden it's gone. The season is over and I was completely drained of emotion."

Drobac gave Ferman a minute before going out to console his player but afterwards there was no one to console Drobac as he sat on his luggage waiting to be taken to the airport.

"It would have been rough to beat them," Drobac said. "Michigan came through when it counted."

Luckily for the participants, the tournament was not all extreme joy or sorrow.

There was the search for the indoor courts, after outdoor play was canceled due to rain, which resulted in many lost tennis players. There was the humorous frustration of the players when members of the indoor tennis club repeatedly walked in back of the courts disrupting their game.

When so many players are gathered, many things can be seen: A player who hits his serve at the roof after applause for a match on another court disrupts him; a doubles player who swears at his partner for missing a shot; a booming serve that bounces unexpectedly off a playing partner waiting at the net; an Indiana team that roars wildly for an Illinois player, because he is facing Michigan.

The Big Ten Tennis Tournament saw all of this. It saw the winners and the losers. Perhaps it also saw that such a simple classification is not accurate enough. Perhaps every player who is lucky enough to be more likely, good enough to be at the tournament is a winner, whether he captured victory or not.

TESTING REVERSE CLAUSE

Flood takes stand in trial

NEW YORK (UPI) — Curt Flood took the stand in Federal Court Tuesday on the first day of his suit against baseball and said he didn't like to be treated as "a piece of property."

Flood, backed by Baseball's Players' Assn., has filed suit in an attempt to overturn the sport's reserve clause which binds a player to one team for the extent of his career. A team can sell or trade a player at will to another organization.

Flood was traded last October to the Philadelphia Phillies in a deal that sent Richie Allen to St. Louis, but he refused to report to his new team.

"I didn't think that after 12 years I should be traded like a piece of property," Flood, who admitted that he was earning $90,000 a year, said. "I wanted to continue playing for the Cards."

Under cross examination from Mark Hughes, attorney and spokesman for all the defense attorneys named in the suit Flood said he decided last October he wouldn't play for the Phillies. In December he made the decision to file suit.

The 32-year-old outfielder, who conceivably could be sacrificing the rest of his career by sitting out at least a year to test the constitutionality of the reserve clause, testified that he wrote to Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to complain that he was being traded. He said he didn't think it was fair because he is a human being.

Kuhn answered, according to Flood, that he agreed Flood was human but said there was nothing he could do about the transfer of the contract because it was a customary practice of baseball.

Flood said he then spoke to Philadelphia General Manager John Quinn and told him "I wasn't going to play baseball. I'm going to retire. He told me he thought I should not be as Philadelphia had the nucleus of a fine club and it was worth my while and to my advantage to join the team. I told him I'd like a little more time to think about it and he said that was all right with him."

Eventually Flood made his decision to file suit after several consultations with lawyers.

Under questioning from Hughes, Flood first admitted that the Players' Association was paying the expenses of his law suit, but then added, "That's what I understand."

When Hughes pressed for an answer to this question, Flood's attorney, former Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, interceded and told Federal Judge Irving Ben Cooper that the association was funding the expenses "but so far we have received no money."

"I'm sorry to hear that," Hughes retorted, bringing laughter from those gathered in the court room.

Several times during the day's session Flood had been asked to keep his voice up, and at this point Judge Cooper turned to him and said, "This is a public trial. Many have come here to see you and to hear you. They have a right to know what's going on — really you almost have to show what you have to say without being prompted."

Hughes then asked Flood if he would drop the suit if the players' Association and the owners came to some decision on modification of the reserve clause.

Kenney quits as soccer coach

By GARY SCHARER
State News Sports Writer

Gene Kenney, the father of soccer at MSU, has submitted his resignation to the board of trustees. The petition will be acted upon at the next board meeting in June. Should the resignation be accepted by the board, Kenney will leave behind him a winning tradition for future Spartan soccer teams.

Kenney's first appointment at MSU was as assistant coach for the wrestling team. Kenney was instrumental in organizing the first soccer club at MSU. In 1956 soccer was put on the varsity level and Kenney has been head coach ever since. He did all the recruiting in the 14 years as coach, produced 20 players who received All-America honors and many more who were picked for All-Midwest teams.

Beginning with nothing, Kenney soon built the MSU soccer team into a collegiate power. The record speaks for itself. Under Kenney's leadership the Spartans have enjoyed five undefeated seasons. In 14 years Kenney has piloted teams to 120 victories, tying 13 and losing only 13 games. The Spartans were NCAA runners up in 1964 and 1965. They lost out in the quarter finals in '66 but came back for the NCAA co-championship in '67 and '68. In 1969, with an injury-riddled squad, the Spartans lost in the first round of the finals.

Contrary to rumors, MSU will field a varsity team next fall. It is true, however, that for the present there will be no more scholarships given to the soccer fund for recruiting purposes. This was a decision made by the administration because of rising costs in the athletic dept.

Athletic Director "Biggie" Munn had nothing but praise for the job done by Kenney.

"He had great success in soccer and was one of the great coaches in soccer," Munn said.

At present time the leading candidate to head the soccer program appears to be Payton Fuller. He was assistant coach under Kenney last year and handled soccer drills this past spring.

"It is my hope that the administrative staff will appoint Fuller to the head coaching position," Munn commented on the soccer situation for next fall.

Fuller is a native of Kingston, Jamaica. He came to MSU on a soccer scholarship and played on the 1963, 1964 and 1965 Spartan teams. Fuller was honored as an All-America selection in 1964. Fuller was a key performer on Kenney's two national runner-up squads. A brilliant playmaker, as an undergraduate, Fuller still figures in the Spartan record book—fifth in career assists and eight in career points. At the end of his senior year he received MSU's Chester L. Brewer Award for his distinguished performance as an athlete and as a scholar. He received a masters degree from California Institute of Technology. Currently, Fuller is a graduate assistant in mechanical engineering while working toward a Ph.D.

Fuller feels that a coaching position is a great challenge and hopes to keep the winning tradition going, since soccer is one of the most winning sports on campus. Because of the cut in scholarships the recruiting will be severely limited. In the past Jamaica was a rich recruiting land for soccer players. Now it becomes almost impossible to bring Jamaican soccer players to MSU. Fuller plans to open contacts in high schools from the Detroit area for future recruits.

Looking towards next season Fuller seems very enthused.

"I'm optimistic for a very good team next fall," Fuller said. "We lost some real good players in Trevor Harris and captain Ernie Tuchsherer, along with Alex Skotarek and Kenny Hammon, but coming back and one of the real mainstays is (senior to be) Buzz Demling, who recently qualified for the U.S. Olympic soccer team. Senior Frank Morant, along with Demling, who will be the team's co-captains, will form the nucleus for next year's team."

MSU cyclists place 3 in 30-mile event

The MSU Cycling Club competed in a meet at Dayton Sunday and had members finish second, third and eleventh in the open 30-mile race, which was ridden in one hour and 12 minutes.

Sigfried Koch, 1969 National Best All-round Rider from Chicago, finished first, five seconds ahead of MSU sophomore Allen Marcossen. MSU senior Neil King was the next rider to finish, five seconds behind Marcossen.

Ron Cock of MSU placed 11th in the race. Marcossen received a trophy as the first collegiate rider to cross the finish line.

ENDS LONG POWER STRUGGLE

Nagel, Evashevski out at Iowa

IOWA CITY, Iowa (UPI) — The University of Iowa Athletic Board fired Football Coach Ray Nagel and accepted the resignation of Athletic Director Evashevski Tuesday, ending a drawn-out power struggle between the two men.

Both men were under contracts which expire on June 30.

The Board action came after a year of turmoil in the Iowa Athletic Dept. in which numerous coaches resigned amid reports of personal vindictiveness, the football team's black athletes walked out on the squad, and there were investigations of the football operations.

One investigation, by the state auditor into expense accounts of members of the Athletic Dept. still was in progress, and it was learned that another investigation by an athletic body had been concluded. However, no accusations have been made against any individual.

Evashevski and Nagel reportedly had feuded almost constantly for control of the Athletic Dept. and football program, which Evashevski headed from 1952 through 1960.

Though Evashevski made no statement against Nagel, he indicated his concern in the struggle with a statement that "never have I been a party to or tolerated any practice which was contrary to university policy or procedure."

Evashevski was the most successful football coach in Iowa history in his nine years at the helm with a 52-27-4 record. His teams won or shared the Big Ten title three times and twice represented the conference in the Rose Bowl.

He began his career at Iowa in 1952 and was named the university's chief athletic executive in 1960 when he was at the height of his football coaching career.

Nagel and his staff assumed the football responsibilities at Iowa in December, 1965. He came to Iowa after an eight-year tenure at Utah, where his successes included a 1964 conference championship and a Liberty Bowl victory.

In his four years at Iowa, Nagel compiled a 13-26-1 record. The last two seasons he recorded identical 5-5 marks.

Nagel was the second football coach since Evashevski. Jerry Burns, who took over the program from Evashevski, was fired after five seasons.

Recently, Head Basketball Coach Ralph Miller resigned to take over duties as basketball coach at Oregon State.

MSU football tickets go on sale Monday

The annual pre-public sale of MSU football tickets will begin Monday at the MSU Ticket Office in Jensen Fieldhouse lobby. MSU students, faculty and staff can purchase regular seat tickets at $6 apiece. Each person can purchase a maximum of 2 tickets.

Among the games most likely to be quickly sold out are the home contests against Notre Dame and Ohio State and an away game with Michigan.

Students will be able to purchase the season ticket pass for all home games when they return in the fall. Football tickets will go on sale to the general public on June 1.

Ice star Briere remains in coma

MONTREAL (UPI) — Doctors at Notre Dame Hospital Tuesday said Michel Briere's condition remained satisfactory and that the 20-year-old hockey player seemed to be slowly regaining consciousness.

The coma Briere has been in since a late Friday car accident is expected to last from 10 to 15 days, however.

Spokesmen for the hospital said there had been no further complications following a back Saturday night which Briere on the "very, very" list.

The setback followed surgery after Saturday when a blood clot pressing on Briere's brain was removed. The operation lasted four hours.

The accident took place near Martine, Que., 350 miles northwest of Montreal.

Briere, a rookie center for the Pittsburgh Penguins, was thrown from the wreckage of his car. There were two passengers in the Flood said yes, then qualified answer to say he wanted to finish the whole system so that player at the end of a season would become a free agent and play for the team that made him the best offer.

Flood said he would play for the team that made the best offer, "and I would play for Philadelphia if they made the best offer."

Earlier, Flood had referred to outside business interests, including two photo studios and a portrait studio, as reasons it would make it difficult to leave St. Louis.

Flood was signed out of high school as a free agent by the Cincinnati Reds and made no objection when he was traded to the Cardinals on Dec. 9, 1967.

Flood said he was aware that Phillies offered to pay him $100,000 a year if he would play season without contract and without prejudice to his current

Population crisis fought worldwide

By the Associated Press
When an 84-year-old Oswego, N.Y., woman died recently she left three daughters, two sons, 39 grandchildren, 62 great grandchildren and a pair of great great grandchildren -- a total of 108 living, direct descendants.

To population experts, such a family tree is dangerous. For the experts say that the world population will double to seven billion human beings by the year 2,000 -- only 30 years away.

Population explosion; what else is new?

Only 12 years ago President Eisenhower said government had no business in family planning. Today President Nixon has laid out a program that would make such services available to any woman who wants them.

Robert H. Finch, U.S. secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, said recently that parents should limit their families to two children if they want to help improve the quality of life in America.

Population experts, including many in government, are calling for a reassessment of traditional attitudes toward the institution of marriage, woman's role in society and family size.

Scientists are pointing to developed countries like the United States and saying their growing populations may have more serious implications than those of underdeveloped countries like India because of the capacity of wealthy nations to consume huge amounts of the world's resources.

Many governments, including the United States, are thinking about national population policies.

And some scientists have raised the possibility that governments in the future may be forced to use coercive methods to stem population growth.

"Basically, there are only two kinds of solutions to the population problem," says Dr. Paul Ehrlich, Stanford University biologist and population control crusader. "One is a 'birth rate solution,' in which we find ways to lower the birth rate. The other is a 'death rate solution,' in which ways to raise the death rate -- war, famine and pestilence -- find us."

For years the experts have been warning about the rising birth rates in places like Latin America, China and India, where population growth rates are the highest and millions die of starvation annually.

"Rich people occupy more space, consume more of each natural resource, disturb the ecology more, and create more land, air, water, chemical and radioactive pollution than poor people."

But now these same experts are pointing at growing populations in developed countries like the United States as possible greater threats.

With their voracious appetites for new cars, appliances, disposable bottles and even throw-away diapers, Americans who represent 6 per cent of the world's population are estimated to consume 35 per cent of the planet's annual production of raw materials. Not to mention the legacy of polluted cities and waterways.

"Rich people occupy more space, consume more of each natural resource, disturb the ecology more, and create more land, air, water, chemical and radioactive pollution than poor people," says Jean Mayer, special consultant on food problems to President Nixon.

So it can be argued that, from many viewpoints, it is even more urgent to control the numbers of the rich than it is to control the numbers of the poor.

Biologist Wayne H. Davis of the University of Kentucky has come up with a concept he calls "Indian equivalents." He defines this as the average number of Indian citizens required to have the same detrimental effect as would the average American on the land's ability to support human life.

In Indian equivalents, he says, the population of the United States is at least four billion. In fact, it's only one-twentieth of that -- 200 million.

As the world moves into the new decade, the United States and other governments -- with certain exceptions -- are starting to place higher priorities on the population problem.

In the 1970s, governments find themselves in possession of the tools to do the job.

The U.S. government and private industry are working toward developing new contraceptive techniques, including injections, "once-a-month" pills and male contraceptives. President Nixon, in his recent budget message, recommended an increase of $13 million for the 1970 outlay of $15.5 million for "programs emphasizing development of a safe, effective and acceptable method of birth control."

In underdeveloped countries, the most common method of family planning may well be illegal abortion. According to the Population Reference Bureau, at least 25 per cent of all pregnancies in Chile are illegally aborted.

Ghana has done this -- it has plotted out what experts say is the first true population control policy any nation has had.

Adopted in March 1969, the policy noted that the country's population of some 8.5 million probably would at least double by 1985. After exploring the possible "serious social, economic and perhaps political consequences" of its growing population, the government noted the alternative of reducing the birth rate "is the course that, sooner or later, will have to be taken."

To discourage "the unrestricted growth of families," the government is the first one to impose penalties for large families. The government limits maternity leaves to government employees to three. Allowances for children of government workers also are limited to three as are travel expenses paid for children. And:

"Policies relating to maternity benefits, tax benefits for large families, age at marriage, divorce and legal separation and other areas relevant to fertility will be systematically examined and, if necessary, modified."

Since the policy is only a little more than a year old, it is too early to measure its success.

IN FACING MOB

Police reactions varied

By DAVE WESTOL

The emotions of a policeman in a skirmish line are as mixed as the many types of people in the mob he faces, according to a high-ranking Michigan State Police officer.

The officer, who asked that his name not be used, said that a policeman facing a rock and bottle-throwing mob experiences fear and anger, but also might ask himself, "Do they all feel this way, and where will it end?"

"Many policemen not only have sons and daughters at MSU and other colleges, but younger children as well who plan on attending a major university," the officer said. "Can you imagine what it's like to have to go on campus, and, if necessary, take action against people the same age as your children? Mixed emotions is about the best way I can describe it."

In reference to restraint of force during demonstrations, the officer said restraint is a unit as well as an individual practice, and that this practice is carried out through squad, platoon and company units.

"With each until setting the example and working as a team," the officer said, "there is little chance for individuals to take action on their own."

"However, the old cliché that cops are human can still apply here," the officer added. "It's pretty tough to get hit in the face with a bag of human feces and then say to the guy that threw it, 'you shouldn't do that, sir.'"

In response to the question asked of police by bystanders during violent demonstrations of "what can I do to help?", the officer said his stock answer is "Go home and stay there."

"In a situation such as we had along Grand River Avenue last February, with all the noise and confusion, it's next to impossible for a policeman to pick out the rock and bottle throwers from the curious bystanders," the officer said.

vandalism and the illegal sit-in encouraged him to call in police. One police official indicated, however, that "he doubted that any of the vandals returned to the Union after the police dispersed them."

As he said after Friday's demonstration, Wharton indicated that outsiders were active in the meeting. About one-fifth of the people arrested were not students within the University. One third of the non-students were enrolled in the fall, however.

As each person was escorted from the Union, police photographers took individual pictures and assigned arrest numbers. Those arrested were taken to the Ingham County Jail in three separate buses.

Campus police were assisted in making the arrests by about 12 State Police, 15 officers from the East Lansing Police Dept., 20 from the Ingham County Sheriff's Dept.

Outside pressure was not a significant factor in the handling of the situation Tuesday morning, Wharton said.

"There is always pressure," Wharton explained. "But my decisions are based on what I see as the best interests of the total University community."

Wharton said he would prefer to have the University, rather than the state legislature, develop its own procedures to handle difficult situations, if at all possible.

He said some of the current difficulties have resulted from unnecessary provocation. He cited non-negotiable demands and unwillingness to discuss methods as examples of provocation.

Wharton's first announcement of policy in the Union incident came in a statement circulated Tuesday morning. Copies of the statement were posted throughout the campus. Wharton also interrupted television lectures to deliver the statement.

He explained Tuesday that his use of television was part of using all available channels of information to spread information about the situation as quickly and as widely as possible.

Minority enrollment

members and all MSU Board of Trustees will be ex-officio members.

Of the faculty members, seven will come from the Academic Council, two from the Graduate Council, two from the Education Policies Committee and one from the Equal Opportunity Program.

Five of the student members will be from ASMSU and three will be from the Council of Graduate Students.

The commission, although a representative body itself, will conduct hearings to allow individuals, associations and organizations full opportunity to express their views, Polley said. The timetable for the group is as follows:

Spring term will be used for discussion of procedure and terms of reference.

Summer term will be allotted for preparation of staff papers and documents.

In the fall hearings and deliberations will be held.

During winter term the commission members are scheduled to prepare their final report for issuance to President Wharton, the Academic Council, Graduate Council and the Trustees.

Topics expected to be discussed, according to Polley, include open admissions, quotas, recruitment of top scholars, supportive programs and their financing and admission of "high risk" students.

Polley said he feels graduation should be stressed over admission.

"It makes very little sense to admit sizeable numbers of minority students then fail to provide the educational environment that would enable them to graduate," he said.

He also stated he does not believe that to achieve this environment it would be necessary to lower the University's performance standards.

"With proper tutoring, counseling and assistance," he said, "minority students can achieve the same level of performance demanded of other students."

Polley said he does not approve of quota systems and feels that the term "open admissions" has many meanings and is not helpful for rational dialogue.

"There is something altogether mechanical and artificial about quotas," he said. Polley denied frequent charges that President Wharton appointed the commission in response to recent developments around the country.

"I happen to know unequivocally that he was giving serious consideration to such a commission as early as December," Polley said.

"I think MSU has shown more interest in providing educational opportunities for a wide variety of people than most other schools in the country," Polley added, "but this is not to say we've solved the problem or met our obligations to the people of the state or society in general. We need to move in this direction with all deliberate speed."

Budget cuts

will determine the action." "I want the National Guard to have the flexibility to use weapons, including riot sticks," he said.

Michigan National Guardsmen have been conducting crowd control drills in Lansing using riot sticks instead of rifles.

Milliken said the drills were held at his direction "so we can experiment with it as a possible alternative" to giving Guardsmen rifles to carry.

The governor said the recent incident at Kent State University where four students were killed when Guardsmen opened fire had prompted the experiment.

"I'm not going to make a final statement about what will and will not be used," he said, "but this is one approach we are actively considering."

"We will be continuing this type of program so it will be ready if it is needed," he added.

On another matter, Milliken said he has no plans to turn back one-fourth of his salary in an attempt to fight inflation as former Gov. George Romney, now Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, announced he would do Monday.

"Such a move can dramatize the situation," the governor said grinning, "but I have no plans to do that."

Milliken also said the Canadian government had "jumped the gun" by removing the fishing ban on Lake St. Clair and the St. Clair River.

He said he would announce a modified ban sometime this week.
