Legislation to broaden public action on pollution

By JEFF SHELER, State News Staff Writer

The days when all a person can do about air pollution is cough or sneeze or occasionally pass out will soon end when Gov. Milliken signs into law a bill passed in the legislature Friday that will allow citizens to sue environmental polluters. In a vote 34-3, the Senate passed House Bill 3055, sponsored by Rep. Thomas Anderson, D-Southgate. The House concurred shortly thereafter and sent the bill to the governor for his signature. Milliken has supported the bill since it was introduced and commended the legislature for taking a "significant step toward a quality environment."

complaintant to post $500 bond if the court has "reasonable grounds" to believe he may not be able to pay the costs of prosecuting the case.

"I'm sure that will deter those who don't have a serious purpose," Anderson said. The other amendment protects industries cleared of a charge from being prosecuted again for causing the same type of pollution.

The bill also provides that an accused company or agency must show that "there was no feasible or prudent alternative" to its actions and that it poses no threat to public safety.

Rep. Anderson explained that this provision recognizes some types of pollution as being unavoidable and incurable, and that remedying this type of pollution would be too costly and time-consuming.

The provision is a safeguard against the possibility of an industry being ordered to shut down for unavoidable instances of pollution.

The three senators who voted against the bill were Sen. Emil Lockwood, R-Elm Hall; Sen. Robert J. Huber, R-Troy; and Sen. Harold W. Hungerford, R-Lansing.

Lockwood said he opposed the bill because of a report last year by Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley that called the proposal "unworkable."

Huber, a candidate for the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate, called the bill "disastrous for industry" and said a strong state agency could better combat pollution.

Hungerford predicted the bill would cause the courtrooms to be flooded with "every kook, psychopath and malcontent," attempting to sue industries.

Passage of the bill came after long consideration by committees and after public hearings on the bill.

Student groups from several state colleges and universities including MSU spoke in favor of the measure at a hearing at the Capitol last winter.

Indians told of fund proposal

By JEANNE SADDLER and ROBERTA SMITH, State News Staff Writers

Michigan Indians were told over the weekend that Gov. Milliken is seeking legislation to increase the budget of the Michigan Commission on Indian Affairs (MCIA). Indians had gathered over the weekend at Kellogg Center for the first annual Michigan Indian Conference.

Richard Haellenbreck, representing the governor, said the proposal included a $25,000 increase for the MCIA budget, a $50,000 grant for census, health and education studies and the establishment of an Indian study group.

John Winchester, a Potawatami Indian and coordinator of Indian programs at the Center of Urban Affairs, said that the MCIA had been "ineffective since its establishment in 1965." Winchester, who planned the weekend conference, has served on MCIA for the past two years.

Winchester said that although $25,000 would provide for only slightly more than one salaried staff member, it was a start for the commission.

"It is time for our people to start making decisions and planning programs for ourselves," Winchester said. "We know that the white man has studied us to death."

Charles (Moose) Pamp, a Chippewa-Potawatami and Lansing junior, said the Michigan Commission on Indian Affairs has no communication with Michigan Indians. Representing the Great Lakes Indian Youth Alliance, Pamp said the Alliance was an informal group to establish a voice for Michigan Indians.

"The American Indian still has the lowest standard of living, the highest rate of suicide and is the most oppressed minority in the United States," he said. "The Indian youth have to get together because we need a voice."

The Youth Alliance recently took over a lighthouse at Iriquois Point with plans to convert it into a community center. He said the Indians had been trying to bargain for the lighthouse for years.

"Now Iriquois Point is ours," he said.

Joseph G. Jorgenson of the University of Michigan explained the traditional white folklore that has influenced government legislation concerning Indians.

"There are still people in the U.S. in positions of power who influence legislation counter to your best interests," he warned. "The thrust of American legislation has always been:

"1. to make Indians sever ties with other Indians,

"2. to make him move away from his land and get an education,

"3. and only then to consider him a 'respectable citizen.'"

"They always felt if Indians would be just like whites, everything would be all right," Jorgenson said.

Jorgenson added it would be appropriate for the government to spend $500,000 a year for Indian programs.

John Bosin, a Kiowa from Grand Rapids, who works to preserve the Indian culture and ways among Indians all over the country, said the scars of the last 50 years are slowly beginning to heal through Indian organizations.

"An Indian should live 24 hours a day as an Indian, not just one week or one

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The men who knocked the midiskirt will get a chance to wear one themselves.

A women's designer here has come up with one for men. Many stores are ordering it and the designer is confident of its success.

But not most men, judging from the reaction of the few who have heard about it.

The designer, Rebecca Welles, believes the skirt will catch on at resorts, golf courses and around the swimming pool.

"I think it would have been better as a mini," giggled one teenage girl.

Sturgis: typical of Midwest, Silent Majority

By LOUIS CASSELS, UPI Senior Editor

STURGIS, Mich. (UPI) — To a visitor from the urban east, this handsome little town looks at first like an island of serenity that has managed to remain insulated from the turmoil of the modern world.

But if the visitor sticks around for a while, he becomes aware that even here, in the heartland of middle America, there is bitterness, division and anxiety about the future.

Sturgis is a good place to listen in on the murmurs of the "silent majority" because it comes as close as any town can to qualifying as a typical midwestern community.

It is located in the rolling green farm country of southwest Michigan, 149 miles west of Detroit, 120 miles east of Chicago, 2 miles north of the Indiana line. Kalamazoo, the nearest city of appreciable size, is 50 miles away.

Sturgis has a population of 9,000, a business district five blocks long, a good daily newspaper, enough industry to provide nearly full employment, an excellent school system, numerous churches and a restaurant that serves steaks as good as any you can find in Chicago. It is a paradise for sportsmen: 20 clear, unpolluted lakes are within a 10-minute drive.

The crime wave, like pollution, is something the people of Sturgis read about in newspapers and hear about on television. The actual experience of being robbed or assaulted is so rare that many citizens need not bother to lock their homes. Police have investigated two homicides in the past 21 years.

Racial tension also is merely the rumble of distant thunder. There are only four black families in town.

"We do have hippies," my host told me in a tone that managed to combine repugnance with a touch of civic pride.

He pointed out five young men standing on a street corner. They all had long hair and one sported a straggly beard. Last summer, the "hippies" shocked the community by using a municipal park as a boudoir on warm nights. But the police have found a way to stop that: at midnight, lawn sprinklers are turned on in the park.

Even the prettiest apples may harbor worms. There was a snake even in the Garden of Eden.

The worm in Sturgis' apple is a growing concern about the economic outlook.

"We've had two plants shut down recently," Harold S. Pringle, publisher of the Sturgis Journal, said. "Our unemployment rate is still below the national average, but unless business begins to pick up soon, we'll have a problem. A lot of people are worried that we're sliding into a national recession."

The snake in Sturgis' garden is the Indochina war.

Some citizens are disturbed about the apparent inability of the United States to end the conflict — or disengage from it.

"A lot of people want to pull out," said Mrs. Donna Wright, a school teacher and mother of four children. "They feel we aren't getting anywhere, and they're sick of seeing so many of our boys killed and wounded over there. They think we ought to leave and let the people over there work out their problem."

Others are less perturbed by the war than by the demonstrations which college students are conducting against it. Jack Grim, a grain elevator operator, said he did not think national guardsmen should be criticized for opening fire on demonstrating students at Kent State University.

"We've got to put a stop to all this burning and rock-throwing," he said. "If it takes bullets — well, law enforcement officers have a right to defend themselves."

I asked Grim whether he had children.

"Yes," he said. "I have a son in college. And if he was out there breaking up public property in a campus demonstration and got shot, I'd feel remorse but I'd also feel that he got what was coming to him."

Attorney Robert Boyce blamed the news media for student unrest. "You glorify rioters and make them out to be heroes," he said. "But you never carry stories about decent youngsters who aren't involved in that rabble."

Warren Fudge, quiet-spoken superintendent of schools, said there have been no anti-war demonstrations in Sturgis High School. "But that doesn't mean our young people are indifferent."

Fudge, who has a son nearing draft age, said his personal view is that "we can't go all out to win, because that could bring on a nuclear holocaust; we can't just pull out overnight, because that possibility of a tuition hike" would be discussed. "I did not say that tuition fees would be discussed," he said.

The closed finance committee meeting of the board of trustees, originally scheduled for Monday night, has been canceled due to legislative failure to act on University appropriations, Chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, said Sunday.

The trustees had thought when they scheduled the meeting that the legislature would have acted on appropriations by this time, Stevens said. The meeting would have prepared the University budget for the next fiscal year. Stevens denied tuition increases were to have been discussed at the meeting. Reports in the Lansing State Journal and on the radio had quoted Stevens as saying "the

A story in the State News Friday said tuition increase guidelines would probably be discussed at the meeting but attributed the statements to University sources, not to Stevens.

"We're not going to do anything about fees until the appropriations are passed," Stevens said. "We are hopeful that legislative appropriations will be enough to make an increase in fees unnecessary. "If we act on any tuition fee increase, we will act at a meeting open to the public and the press, if I have my way," he said. "However, I repeat what I have said many times: that in my opinion tuition fees are too high now.

"Should inadequate appropriations force a tuition fee increase in order to provide for adequate salary adjustments and other cost increases to assure quality education, any increase that I will support must include a continuation of the Student Aid Grant system that was adopted unanimously by the trustees last year," he said. Under this system, 7,678 needy Michigan resident students received a full one-half fee reduction, paying only $292.50 in tuition during the 1969-70 three-term year. On the average, students receiving this aid came from families whose total income was about $3,000 per year. An additional 2,500 Michigan resident students received smaller deductions. "This method of aiding needy students is truly on an 'ability to pay' basis," Stevens said.

Paper emphasizes nurture over nature

A child's ability to take a test is highly related to his past environmental experiences, according to a paper being published by Robert Green, director of the Center for Urban Affairs (CUA), said the U.S. Office of Child Development.

Green's position disputed the view put forth last year by Arthur Jensen, professor of educational psychology at the University of California. In "How Much Can We Boost I.Q. and School Achievement?" published in the Harvard Educational Review, Jensen said that genetic factors are the greatest influence on a child's ability to learn.

confuse the definite separation of influences on a child's educational ability.

"If one would randomly sample in an upper middle-class white community, Green said, "and then randomly sample from a poor white community, it will probably be found that the two groups differ significantly in terms of aptitude test performance.

"We never, however, report that whites in the Appalachia area, for instance, are genetically inferior (intellectually) to whites in Skokie, Ill.," he noted.

Green said Jensen's argument that he was merely attempting to provide the right kind of opportunities for "genetically handicapped" children is based on peculiar evidence. He pointed out that Jensen had compared white middle class children to black lower-class children.

"Even if it were difficult for Jensen to immediately identify a large middle-class black population from which to draw his sample, no such difficulty exists in identifying lower-class whites," Green said.

Another point which Green took issue with was Jensen's statement that "no holds barred" is the best formula for scientific inquiry. One does not decree beforehand which phenomena cannot be studied or which questions cannot be answered.

This is not true, Green said. He used the example of scientists exploring the relationship of radiation in order to determine this relationship experimentally.

Similarly, he said, white children are not subjected to the kinds of emotional and physical stresses experienced by minority children in order to determine the influence this stress has on I.Q. measurement.

"If there are genetic differences related to race," Green maintained, "it is highly unlikely that they correspond to the criteria developed for measuring school performance."

Green and Jensen also disagree on "compensatory education." Jensen believes the premises on which compensatory efforts have been based should be reexamined. Green thinks that what is meant by compensatory education must be more carefully defined and then it must be determined if it has ever really been tried.

There can be no instant solution, Green stated. Compensatory education programs will not and cannot deal with all the problems of all the children in America, he said.

ROBERT GREEN

Green's paper, entitled "Environment and Educational Achievement: Implications for Head Start and Social Change," argued that tests are based on a set of experiences which have often been denied poor white and minority group children. Therefore, he said, when speaking of intelligent behavior or intellectual performance on a test, it should be determined whether the child has been exposed to those experiences.

Jensen presented data in his work on the relationship of I.Q. to such prenatal environmental influences as nutrition, multiple birth, prematurity and low birth weight. All of these, he conceded, have a higher incidence among blacks, Mexican American and American Indian children.

Green contends that the influence of these variables cannot be separated from the effects of purely genetic ones on the learning ability of children. He argues that the further experiences of malnutrition and other problems after birth homes, tents, sleeping bags and camp stoves.

Belaski drew a parallel with East Lansing when he asked donors to consider what they would need to survive if their homes were destroyed in the middle of December.

Belaski said donations have been coming in very well. The major problem is transportation to Peru. He said that many relief groups across the United States have collected large stockpiles of relief goods, but they have few shipments leaving for Peru because of a lack of transportation.

The Peruvian National Airlines carries as much as it can on its one daily flight to Lima, and other South American airlines do the same. But this isn't enough, he said.

"The regular channels of transportation are overloaded," Belaski said. "We need a new method of getting help to Peru."

The new method Belaski said, could be the use of U.S. armed forces planes. But the government has not acted.

"It galls us," Belaski said, "to see that Mrs. Nixon flew to Peru in Air Force One Sunday to deliver her personal aid when a cargo plane could have been sent instead. Hell, if the government would have sent a cargo plane she could have stayed home and sent a letter."

Although transportation is a problem, there is still a need for private help from the East Lansing area. Belaski said private donations can be in the form of food - especially light, high-protein food like dry milk or macaroni - money or time. But the council is taking almost anything that is offered to them, he said. For example, the Ingham County Medical Facility gave 30 cases of hospital linen, and Olin donated beds.

"We concentrated during the first two weeks on collecting food, medicine and money," he said. "But now we're looking for other goods."

He urged people to see what they can give, and to call the council at 332-6424 to arrange for a pick-up.

Volunteers aid quake victims the lives of 50,000 people and devastated much of the mountain region of the South American nation.

The aid was assembled and shipped by the Peruvian Disaster Relief Council, a non-profit corporation set up three weeks ago to mobilize a relief effort in the area. To date the volunteer workers of the council have assembled even more supplies that are in East Lansing awaiting transportation.

But the first shipment represents a milestone for John Belaski, 32, who organized the relief council.

Belaski visited Peru and lived in a town that was 80 per cent destroyed by the quakes. When he was told by friends of the totality of the destruction there, he set to work collecting aid in the form of food, drugs and money.

He worked on his own for a week, setting up a program with the Peruvian Embassy in Washington. For the past two weeks he has been helped by the MSU Peruvian Club and other volunteer workers.

The council pleaded for all types of aid for the disaster victims, but especially important was food and drugs. Many of the victims were isolated in mountainous regions without medical attention. But now that the first shipment has been sent from East Lansing, the council has moved into a second phase of relief work, feeding the victims.

Belaski said that there is only enough food in Peru for 20 more days. This is the winter season in South America, and what food there was in storage was, for the most part, destroyed. It will be many months before crops are ready for harvest.

He said that, after the food emergency is met, the Peruvians will have to be clothed and given shelter, since many of the victims are homeless.

For this third phase of relief, Belaski said the Peruvians need items to set up temporary

COLUMN CONTINUES

Huber renews attack on 'Bag'

Despite criticism from state legislators the newly controversial "Doctor's Bag" will still be published in the State News.

"I intend to continue the column," George Bullard, editor of the State News said Sunday. "I cannot let one narrow-minded senator dictate what our educated readers should read. "If Sen. Huber (Robert J. Huber, R-Troy) truly believes that the column is immoral, then I suggest he stop reading it," he continued. "I don't want to be responsible for legislators having impure thoughts. "I think legislators should be tolerant of other peoples' problems," he said. After an item in the column concerning use of the diaphragm was read into the Senate record at the suggestion of Huber, he appeared Friday on a local television station and renewed his criticism of the column. Huber progressed from his description of "disgusting" on Thursday to a criticism on the news show depicting "immorality." He specified an article in the Michigan Constitution that was the basis for his attack. Article VIII, Section 1 of the constitution states: "Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

Romney renews vow to defend W. Berlin

BERLIN (UPI) - George Romney, secretary of housing and urban development, Sunday reaffirmed the American pledge to defend West Berlin, saying that unless West Berlin remains free, freedom everywhere is in danger.

Romney issued a statement on Berlin after a tour of East Berlin and the wall on his third day here on a European trip to study urban problems.

He denounced the wall as a "wall of shame that makes me sick."

He expressed the hope that negotiations now in progress to reduce armaments might result in reduction of tension that would eradicate barriers like the wall.

Romney made his tour of East Berlin after attending two Mormon services at a Latter-day Saints church. He preached at the services on the theme "Freedom is Not Free; Sacrifices Must be Made for Liberty."

"Though isolated from the rest of the free world, West Berlin is not an island," Romney said in his statement.

"Every free nation and individual is part of West Berlin because unless West Berlin remains free, freedom everywhere is jeopardized. As our presidents have made clear, including most recently President Nixon, West Berlin's freedom is so much a part of our freedom that we are committed to both."

Israelis counter rocketing with air raids on guerrillas

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Arab guerrillas operating from Lebanon and Jordan rocketed Israeli frontier towns early Sunday, killing a man and wounding two other persons. The Israelis countered with air raids against guerrilla locations across the borders.

The military command also reported that Arab irregulars infiltrated from Lebanon and attacked Israeli border police in upper Galilee wounding two policemen with bazooka fire.

The warplanes attacked guerrilla strongholds on Mt. Hermon, in southeast Lebanon, for 35 minutes, a spokesman said, and also hit guerrilla bases in Jordan three times during the day. They returned safely from all the raids.

In Cairo, a military spokesman reported 36 Israeli Phantom and Skyhawk planes bombed Egyptian positions in the Suez Canal area intermittently for 4 1/2 hours. The raiders were brought under fire of anti-aircraft guns, said a spokesman, making no mention of casualties on either side.

The three civilian casualties occurred in the town of Kiryat Shmona, located in upper Galilee 2 miles from the Lebanese frontier.

In Amman, Jordan, Palestinian guerrilla leaders said they would try to block any attempt at a settlement result from a new U.S. peace proposal.

"We will never agree to a peaceful settlement," said one guerrilla official. "If the Arab countries now think they can gang up and make peace over our heads they are mistaken."

Lebanese-based guerrillas slammed several rockets at Kibbutz Dan, six miles from Kiryat Shmona. There were no casualties, the Israelis said.

Fire was returned following all attacks, they added.

On the Jordanian front, Israeli warplanes twice made morning sorties against guerrilla objectives. All planes returned safely, a military spokesman said.

Between the raids, rockets launched by the guerrillas struck Israeli territory around the frontier town of Beit Shean at 7 a.m. and at 8 a.m.

No casualties or damage was reported.

It was the third attack in four days on the immigrant community of 12,500.

Israeli planes also continued to hammer Egyptian military targets on the Suez Canal, a military spokesman said. All planes returned safely, he added.

USE QUESTIONED 'U' maintains accounts

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

The University still maintains three non-interest bank accounts, the use of which was questioned by the state auditor general in his report on MSU finances, Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, said last week.

Funds at a fourth bank, the American Bank and Trust Co., have been transferred to an interest-bearing account at the same bank.

"The non-interest accounts should be considered in the full context of our total banking relationship," Wilkinson said. "Those three banks hold University bonds amounting to $37 million at interest rates less than four per cent — far below the regular rate."

Most of these are in connection with the residence hall program, Wilkinson said.

As a state institution, the University is expected to maintain relationships with a number of state banks, Wilkinson said. To simplify record-keeping, however, only two principal bank accounts are used, one for payroll checks, the other for regular University checks and disbursements.

Other smaller accounts are kept at banks throughout the state to maintain good relationships and to facilitate borrowing.

"We balance short-term deposits against long-term loans," Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson also said the non-interest bearing accounts were not inactive.

"There was always a flow of funds in and out of those accounts," he said, "although over a long period of time the balance was fairly stable."

The auditor general's report, which was released May 27 after nearly three years of preparation and covers the period July 1, 1966 through June 30, 1967, had recommended that non-interest accounts be discontinued, and the funds placed in interest-bearing accounts.

At the time in question, the University had nearly $1 million in four non-interest accounts at the American Bank and Trust Co. (since discontinued), the Detroit Bank and Trust Co., Manufacturers National Bank of Detroit and the National Bank of Detroit.

The University of Michigan has $2 million to $4 million in such non-interest accounts, Wilkinson said.

Wilkinson said the University will review its total relationship with state banks in the near future.

International News

North Vietnam claimed Sunday the United States achieved none of its objectives in the military invasion of Cambodia.

A broadcast dispatch of Hanoi's official Vietnam News Agency said: "That is why a campaign of deception has been conducted in the past few days."

The news agency also said the statements by the South Vietnamese and Cambodian heads of state declaring the United States' victory were engineered by President Nixon.

The Organization of American States reached a virtual agreement Sunday to condemn political kidnappings as "common crimes whose gravity converts them into crimes against humanity."

But it closed the door on the use of a hemispherical armed force to prevent such happenings in the future.

A state of emergency went into force for three million Chileans in the Santiago area Sunday in a government attempt to halt violence during the nation's presidential election.

President Eduardo Frei, who is not running for re-election, ordered all military police forces onto alert status in a wave of student outbursts that have in the past few days killed two persons and wounded 20 others. Fifty arrests have been made.

National News

The Senate, moving to end nearly two months of debate over U.S. involvement in Cambodia, is being offered a new plan to carve out no-combat zones in Vietnam as a peace initiative intended to scale down fighting.

Offered to the White House 10 days ago by Sen. Charles M. Mathias, R-Md., it calls for the creation of fire-free zones in a peace drive coupled with new emphasis on Paris negotiations.

Mathias said he had not received any reaction from President Nixon, but said, "I think this kind of an idea is under serious consideration."

Rep. Gerald R. Ford, House minority leader, predicted Sunday that U.S. troop withdrawals from Vietnam will be accelerated and hinted that President Nixon may make such an announcement this week.

The Michigan Republican also declared his hope that the House will reject the Cooper - Church amendment, expected to pass the Senate Tuesday.

Milton Friedman, a top unofficial economic adviser to President Nixon, said Sunday government spending is much too high and must be cut if inflation is to end.

Moreover, he added, taxes are excessive and tax "rates ought to come down, but to do so government spending rates must also come down."

He said he favors cutting funds from agricultural subsidy payments and urban redevelopment projects to balance the federal budget.

The New York Police Dept. estimates 150,000 Italian Americans will besiege the FBI headquarters there today to protest what they consider unfair linking of persons with Italian names to organized crimes.

Police said 520 buses had been chartered to bring protestors from as far away as Florida to the rally which starts at noon in Columbus Circle.

The FBI had no comment on the planned demonstration.

Some 3,000 homosexuals marched from Greenwich Village to Central Park Sunday to demand equal rights with heterosexuals.

It was the climax of what its organizers called "Gay Pride Week." The week has featured demonstrations, outside state and city offices to demand an end to alleged police harassment of homosexuals.

Light in spirit and marked by much cavorting and prancing, the march and rally were devoid of incident.

Campus News

The City University of New York has announced plans to start training retired policemen and firemen to become registered nurses.

Officials hope the federally subsidized program will ease the nursing shortage, provide second careers for early-retiring policemen and firemen and change the "women's work" image of nursing so other men will enter the field.

The first class of 100 policemen and firemen will start the 2 1/2 years of study in September.

Sabine's job spread to other departments

With Vice President for Special Projects Gordon Sabine presently on leave, the responsibilities of his office are being temporarily channeled to other departments within the administration.

Both the registrar's office and the admissions and scholarships office are reporting to Provost John Cantlon in Sabine's absence.

Summer Orientation Director Marcie Lamarr has taken over all orientation responsibilities for Sabine. Reports on the disadvantaged students program are given to President Clifton Wharton.

Sabine has been on leave doing research for the American College Testing Program since May 1.

Asst. Provost Herman King said that there are no plans to appoint anyone to fill Sabine's position because he is expected to return here. Being on leave without pay and having tenure, Sabine can be away from his post for a year.

Because he is on leave without pay, however, Sabine has no obligation to return to the University as he would if he had taken a paid sabbatical.

'Doctoring' the news: a matter of morality?

Newspapers have nearly run out of words to describe Sen. Robert Huber, Troy Republican and all-around moral watchdog. But in light of his immature attack on the Doctor's Bag - our medical advice column - we found a few adjectives that fit: hidebound, arrogant, prudish and publicity-conscious. Huber, perchance you haven't read, has attacked on the Senate floor the weekly medical column written by Dr. Arnold Werner, who holds a medical degree among others. Werner is also a board certified psychiatrist and an asst. professor of psychiatry. His credentials are unimpeachable; he is well-qualified to advise readers on medical matters. Now enter one backwoods senator who attacks the column as disgusting, unconstitutional and immoral. It's true. Huber believes that Werner's medical advice is immoral.

Huber did not say exactly who appointed him keeper of the Michigan moral code. Certainly the Republican party didn't. Republicans don't even want him as consensus candidate for U.S. senator. And we doubt that God gave him a special appointment. Who then? No one, obviously. Huber's criticism springs from his own home-grown pomposity.

Weekly feature

The Doctor's Bag has been a weekly feature in the State News for nearly a year. For publicity, Huber chose to attack it when he is contesting Lenore for the right to lose to Sen. Hart in November. Running against a Romney must still be a difficult endeavor.

Dr. Werner's column is similar to medical columns in other newspapers. Detroit newspapers, for example, print columns geared toward older people. Dr. Werner draws on rigorous, professional training - just as the Detroit authors do.

But Dr. Werner, of course, writes for the State News' relatively young readership. In singling out the Doctor's Bag, however, Huber does not cite which medical manual rates a penis more immoral than a varicose vein.

Huber has a right to his opinion. Any man in the United States - no matter how parochial - has this right. However, when Huber attempts to suppress ideas (or columns) because they somehow violate his personal code, he violates the very Constitution that he so fondly quotes.

And when legislators attempt to cut University funds because they disagree with a single medical column, they expose themselves as bigoted censors beyond historical parallel.

Second death

Long before Huber began his lackluster career as senator, Thomas Jefferson wrote:

"I am mortified to be told that in the United States of America, the sale of a book can become a subject of inquiry..."

Ah, Thomas would die a second death of mortification if he knew that a Michigan senator (and several representatives) could make a single column the subject of inane inquiry.

Jefferson, the great libertarian, would probably chuckle at the clowns in the Michigan legislature were they not so potentially dangerous to the freedom he cherished so much.

Jefferson - perhaps eyeing the day when a hidebound senator would attempt censorship - wrote in 1786:

"Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that freedom cannot be limited without being lost."

Huber, in contrast, said that because he thinks a medical column is immoral, it should be banned. If Huber wants to join the U.S. Senate (and he does badly), he must come up with a broader perspective than he now has.

Imagine Huber at the Constitutional Convention with our founding fathers. Anachronistically, he would probably label Jefferson a "pinko" and insist that freedom of the press hinges upon some nebulous moral code. No telling what he would say to Ben Franklin, who fathered two illegitimate children. Obviously Huber's view of morality and the Constitution differs greatly from the wiser view of our founding fathers.

Without anguish

In a television interview Friday, Huber mumbled something about Dr. Werner writing about sex without mental anguish. The passage wasn't clear, but we would like to go on record as advocating sex without mental anguish. In no medical or religious manual could we find any doctor or cleric claiming that sex must be accompanied by mental anguish to be moral. Perhaps Sen. Huber will enlighten us?

To Sen. Huber, we make an appeal for tolerance. We ask that he recall the words of Arthur Helps - "Tolerance is the only real test of civilization." If Sen. Huber cannot tolerate the morality of others, perhaps he should step down as senator and allow room for someone who can.

In response to his standing on "morality" to condemn the Doctor's Bag, we bring to his attention the words of Thoreau:

"Do not be too moral. You may cheat yourself out of much life so. Aim above morality. Be not simply good; be good for something."

If - after contemplating these bits of wisdom - Sen. Huber still has hang-ups, we suggest he write to the Doctor's Bag, c/o Dr. Werner, 301 Linton Hall, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Michigan 48823.

"To whom are you referring, Mr. Vice President... yourself or Mr. Rhodes...?"

TRB FROM WASHINGTON

The Middle East, head on

America needs a war in the Middle East like a hole in the head. Yet every day it comes nearer. On or about the time you read this, Mr. Nixon will probably have sold Phantom jets and Skyhawks to Israel. No less than 76 senators urged him to do it; a majority so big and emotional that it recalls that other time when all but two senators approved the Tonkin Gulf resolution.

If Americans were not obsessed with Vietnam they would be jumping up and down today with anxiety over the Middle East. We are eyeball to eyeball with the other Superpower - and each day tension mounts.

We got into Vietnam with the best of all intentions; our object was idealistic. It was an immaculate misconception. And how about the Middle East? Joe Alsop has declared war already. Yet it is one of the most complex tangles anywhere on earth. As anybody who has been there knows, or who has read James Michener's careful

The strange fact is that the Palestinians, whom most Americans haven't even identified yet, have a dream too; it is a dream of a homeland and of a nation and they dream it with the mystical intensity of the Middle East that has produced three great religions. The "homeland" of the Palestinians is, of course, the territory occupied by the Israelis.

As Dr. Avineri puts it, "The Middle East conflict has never truly been susceptible of analysis in Cold War terms." Great Power rivalry, he says, "is a secondary and derivative factor."

"There are probably more Marxists in Israel than in the whole of the Arab world, but the Soviet Union could not care less about that. Nor is it of any importance that in most Arab countries (including Egypt) Communist parties are outlawed and individual Communists rot in jail, whereas Israel is blessed with two Communist parties, both of them represented in the Knesset."

If Americans were not obsessed with Vietnam, they would be jumping up and down today with anxiety over the Middle East. We are eyeball to eyeball with the other Superpower - and each day tension mounts.

history, "The Source," irreconcilable conflict has gone on for millennia. Americans say "Brave little Israel" - and with reason! Israel is an island of perhaps 2 1/2 million Jews in an immediate sea of 100 million Arabs. Israel is a democracy. It is technologically modern. And it is a dream come true, of a homeland that existed 2,000 years only in the imagination. The Bible tells the story.

But it is dangerous to chart geopolitics on a roadmap no later than the Bible. To the U.S. Bible - belt it is simple as black and white. But it isn't simple to Mr. Nixon. And it isn't simple to the doves and hawks in Israel itself.

The land is saturated in sunshine and hate. Some people think the problem is insoluble. The United States left a vacuum there beginning with Secretary Dulles' pettish rejection of the Aswan Dam, and Russia stepped in, probably not caring two straws for the Arabs but wanting among other things to reopen the Suez Canal so that it can get its ships down through the Red Sea to India and Cathay. And the last small chance of resolving the Israeli-Arab conflict with some show of reason probably turns on whether the hawks in the Knesset think they can count 100 per cent on American support.

Am I being anti-Israeli? I don't think so. The excellent magazine Commentary is published in New York by the American Jewish Committee. In the June issue is an article by Shlomo Avineri, chairman of the Dept. of Political Science at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Speaking of the Middle East crisis he says, "Despite appearances it is not - and never was - a struggle between the two Great Powers." What is it then, for heaven's sake? Let us go back a bit. The land once populated predominantly by Arabs (Palestinians) was given to the Jews. Never mind the rights or wrongs, this is history. Some Palestinians stayed. But perhaps 1.5 millions fled in the 1948 and 1967 wars. Many of them have now lived in refugee camps for two generations. Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., told the Senate the other day, many of them (maybe most) have no vocational abilities whatsoever. But they can hate. The Middle East is where hatred was invented. The Palestinian guerrillas (fedayeen) don't care if they precipitate World War III or not.

So what is the conflict? "Basically and ultimately it is a conflict between two movements for national liberation." And today, Dr. Avineri says, "both the Jewish and the Arab national movements lay claim to the same piece of land, historic Palestine."

If Americans want a war in the Middle

AL CAPP

Behind the week's lineup in the 'talk show' business

EDITOR'S NOTE: Though 'ole' fightin', snortin' Al Capp and we here newspaper types have done some fussin' and feudin', we thought it might be beneficial to keep an eye on the other half. Hence, in the public interest, we will periodically present Al Capp's weekly column.

Do you wonder how guests are chosen for our popular nighttime TV talk shows? Let's look behind the scenes of a popular Cal Affwit program.

"I have a great lineup for you next week," cried his producer. New faces! New ideas! Shelley Winters and Shelley Berman! David Susskind and David Frye! Jackie Vernon and Jackie Susann! Steve and Edie! The other Steve - the one they called Steverino when he had steady work - and his wife! Jack Douglas and Jack Carter! Jerry Rubin and Abbie Hoffman! The lawyers for the Chicago 7 and the Panther 21! And, to wind it up on a high intellectual level, Truman Capote and Gore Vidal and whatshisname who wrote 'The Selling of a President'!

"A great lineup of new faces and new ideas," the star agreed. "But somehow it sounds familiar..."

The producer lifted his eyes to the date at the top of the list and broke into laughter.

"Small wonder," he chuckled. "That was LAST week's list. Here's the right one: David Susskind, and David Frye, Abbie Hoffman and Jerry Rubin, Truman Capote and Gore Vidal..."

"That certainly is as fresh a lineup of new faces and new ideas as any popular star could ask for," the popular star said, "but don't you detect a resemblance to last week's list?"

The producer squealed at the date and burst into another peal of laughter.

"It was sharp of you to catch that, Cal," he chortled. "It's the list of the week BEFORE last."

"Also the week before that, if I recall correctly," the star said, "although recalling correctly isn't easy on our show. One week seems so much like another."

"I wonder if it does to our audience, too?" mused the producer, with a worried look. "I wonder if that's why we're being out-rated by Randolph Scott reruns?"

He crumpled all the lists and tossed them into his wastebasket.

"Cal," he cried, "we're in danger of falling into a rut! Let's make a fresh start! Let's get some REALLY new faces - some REALLY new ideas! We have the whole world to pick from. Everybody wants to get on TV talk shows, but no one ever seems to except the same bores who are always on!"

"Let's lead off the week with a distinguished star of stage and screen who also has a light side. Someone, say, who can come up with some Spiro Agnew jokes. Someone, say, like Shelley Winters!"

"But doesn't that sound familiar?" Affwit asked.

"Naturally! Everyone has heard of her. And everyone has heard her Spiro Agnew jokes..."

"But how about youth?" Affwit asked. "The nation needs to hear from youth."

"Have I got some youths for you!" the producer said. "Jerry Rubin and Abbie Hoffman! The nation'll hear plenty from them. It'll hear how Spiro Agnew is stifling free speech because, after they called him a fascist, a liar, a mass murderer, a clown, an ignoramus and a pig, he called them effete snobs."

"Already," Affwit said, "it sounds like as fresh and as new a lineup as any talk show has ever had."

"But," put in the producer, his face clouding, "we need a fresh new face in the band. We must replace the trombonist."

"His playing sounds the same as ever to me," Affwit said.

"It's not his playing that has fallen off," the producer said. "It's his laughing. For two nights in a row, he didn't slap his knee while laughing convulsively at your opening monologue!"

"Fire him!" cried the star. "There's no room in this organization for traitors!" (Copyright 1970 by Daily News Inc.)

OUR READERS' MIND

More to morality than the moment

To the Editor:

I have attended several meetings held by those on strike and I have since come to the conclusion that they, as the administration in Washington, are guilty of failing to see the other side of this moral question concerning our present involvement in Indochina. There is more than one type of morality without the second being immoral.

Many of us have been brought up to believe that killing is morally wrong and that what we are doing in Southeast Asia is morally wrong. But if we examine history, which necessarily shapes the present and the future, then we can appreciate what we as a nation have learned from Chamberlain's quest for peace in Munich, 1938. It was there, while he was "securing peace in our life time" that he and the French officials handed over Czechoslovakia to Hitler. We again learned the same lesson when Roosevelt and Churchill gave Eastern Europe to Russia. In both cases the appeasers involved had to wear the blackest stain imaginable on their moral character.

Twenty-five years ago we condemned those men for not insuring peace and today we condemn President Nixon for not shirking his responsibility to mankind.

You may reject what I have just said but I hope that you do not reject the morality of the other side. We claim to be the best educated and of open mind so I ask you do not think that your morality is the only right one in the world. It isn't.

Classes should stay open

To the Editor:

An open letter to President Clifton Wharton Jr.:

Representing approximately 12,000 veterans on the campuses of Michigan colleges and universities, the State of Michigan Assn. of Collegiate Veterans (SMACV) wholeheartedly encourages your effort to keep classes open at MSU.

We have an understanding of the issues being contested on college campuses today. Yet, because our organization is basically apolitical, we take no formal position on the Cambodian situation. However, we do not condone the actions of the National Guard at Kent State University.

The right to dissent peacefully is undeniable. Even so, we feel that colleges and universities have definite social and contractual obligations to provide regularly scheduled classes. The purpose of universities is education, not to provide violent battlegrounds for opposite ideologies. Therefore, we condemn the actions if iconoclastic minorities which seek to tyrannize those students that exercise their right to attend their scheduled classes.

We at the state level unequivocally support the position of MSU's veterans organization and feel assured that MSU veterans will assist you in your efforts to keep classes open.

Jondahl discusses war-economy issue

LYNN JONDAHL

Lynn Jondahl, ordained minister and "peace candidate" for the state Senate, told student supporters here Friday that changing from a wartime to a peacetime economy poses a major question to the state.

"We won't get the support of many of the people of this state opposing the war in Vietnam until we can assure them that the country can prosper without the war economy," Jondahl told about 30 members of the MSU Students for Jondahl Committee.

"A man won't vote against the war if he thinks he will lose his job when the war ends," he said. Jondahl, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the 14th District state Senate seat now held by retiring Sen. Harold W. Hungerford, a Republican, will face Leonard Stuttman, former host of his own TV show, and John Cataldo, an East Lansing businessman, in the Aug. 4 primary.

Jondahl met with the student group to explain his views on several issues and to map strategy for the primary campaign.

An ordained minister in the United Church of Christ, Jondahl told the group his religious beliefs had a bearing on his candidacy but "not in a doctrinaire sense."

"The concerns I have are to bring my faith into an active relationship with the problems facing other people," he said. Besides his stand against the war in Indochina, Jondahl explained his views on:

- abortion: "I support repeal of any reference to abortion in the state statutes."
- parochialism: "I am opposed to any program of parochialism. I think the program passed in the legislature is a mistake, and I hope it will be repealed."
- higher education: "I think one of the wisest moves of the framers of the state constitution was to provide for the autonomy of the universities."

- race: "The state must develop programs that will guarantee to all citizens the rights of equal education, full employment, permanent housing and adequate health care. Racial hostilities and fears must be abolished."

Nearly 200 parents, teachers, students and administrators from Michigan secondary schools met at Kellogg Center Saturday to discuss academic unrest at the State Board of Education Conference on School Disturbances, but they found no solutions to their problems.

"We have been trying to develop a sense of understanding, of sensitivity to the problems of student unrest," Daniel Kruger, professor of industrial relations, told the groups in a summation speech. "There can never be final answers, because education is life, and there are no final answers in life."

Kruger cited a need for better communication and the importance of due process in disciplinary practices as major themes which had emerged from the conference.

"Adults must trust students," he said. "If we are to have student involvement, students must have the right to make mistakes."

Goodwill on the part of students, parents, teachers and administrators is vital to the educational process, Kruger said.

Most of the day-long conference was spent in small-group discussions. Topics included the causes of school disturbances, community involvement in school disturbances, use of police in the schools, role of the teaching faculty, administration and students in resolving school disturbances, grievance procedures and the role of state and local agencies.

THREE-PRONGED EFFORT VC launch new attacks

SAIGON (AP) — Enemy forces attacked three important points near Phnom Penh on Sunday and the Cambodian military command said one of the assaults may be a preparation for a move against the capital itself.

Informants in Saigon said about 1,000 South Vietnamese marines had moved to Phnom Penh's outskirts to bolster the capital's defenses.

The Cambodian command said a major munitions depot at Long Vek, 23 miles north of Phnom Penh, came under a heavy mortar and infantry attack in an apparent enemy effort to obtain additional arms for a possible strike on the capital.

It was the fourth day of attacks on the installation but the command said Cambodian forces kept the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong from breaking through the perimeter.

Other attacks were reported at Kompong Speu, 25 miles southwest of Phnom Penh, and at Kompong Chhnang, 50 miles northwest of the capital. Both towns are provincial capitals. Kompong Speu has been a major battleground for more than two weeks. It lies on Cambodia's main highway to the sea.

The government spokesman also reported Cambodian army troops reoccupied Prek Tameak, 12 miles north of Phnom Penh on the east bank of the Mekong River.

A battalion of government troops was forced to retreat across the river from the town several days ago by hit-and-run Communist command forces who apparently were maneuvering for a position closer to the capitol for what some expect to be the start of mortar and possibly rocket shellings against Phnom Penh.

Informed sources in Saigon said the task force of 1,000 South Vietnamese marines had moved to within 10 miles of Phnom Penh in a tactical shift to offset the enemy threat to the capital.

The marines' move to the eastern flank of Phnom Penh was understood to be part of a coordinated South Vietnamese-Cambodian plan for strengthening the capital's defenses.

Brig. Gen. Ngo Dzu, commander of all South Vietnamese forces in the Mekong Delta where the marines normally are based, has established what was described as a "light mobile headquarters" at Phnom Penh airport, to maintain liaison with the Cambodians.

The heaviest fighting centered an area just north of the South Vietnamese border and southwest of the important ferry landing at Neak Luong, where marines and infantry killed 33 enemy and captured 12.

AAUP president hits faculty salary raise

In a letter to the board of trustees, Jack Stieber, president of the MSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), has denounced the probable five per cent salary increase for faculty.

The letter states that faculty salary increases will not amount to "even 6.0 per cent which would be required to enable faculty members to maintain real earnings in line with the increase in the cost of living during the past year."

"The MSU chapter of AAUP strongly believes that any salary adjustment which does not permit faculty to recoup the loss in real earnings caused by the inflation of the past year, and in addition provide some merit increase, will be disastrous for faculty morale and have serious repercussions," the letter continues.

The board of trustees was to have discussed the issue at its meeting tonight but the meeting has been cancelled. It also was to have considered recommendations by the Faculty Affairs Committee and the Academic Council that urged a 14 per cent increase.

The original Faculty Affairs Committee recommendation was for a 20.7 per cent increase. This was later revised to 14 per cent.

Administrative - professional employees are to receive an average increase of 10 per cent.

Cultural series coordinator to resign July 8

Virginia B. Hutcheson, coordinator of the Cap and Gown Series has resigned for personal reasons effective July 8.

Mrs. Hutcheson will be replaced Eric R. Jensen who has been assistant coordinator and has a Ph.D. in higher education. A permanent coordinator will be appointed by the board of trustees.

The Cap and Gown Series is a division of the Continuing Education Service that arranges for off-campus performances of music, dance and theater by MSU faculty and students.

Spartan's Vass wins state amateur crown

By JEFF ELLIOTT
Executive Sports Editor

Three weeks ago, Denny Vass was in an intersquad playoff with four of his teammates. Vass finished last.

Saturday, the Bloomfield Hills junior forgot all that as he capped a sparkling five days of golf by winning the 50th Michigan Amateur Golf Championships with a one-up victory over Rod Sumpter of Grand Blanc.

The win by Vass marked the second time in three years an MSU golfer had won the state's top amateur tournament. In 1968 Lynn Janson, then a sophomore at MSU, won the crown.

But with Janson and four other Spartan golfers in Columbus competing in the NCAA Golf Championships this past week, Vass made the most of being left behind. After a fine qualifying round Tuesday (his 21st birthday), Vass defeated in order Steve Presser of Huntington Woods, Paul McIntosh of Detroit, Guy Billings of East Lansing and Mark Henrikson of Grand Blanc to reach Saturday's semifinals round.

In the morning Vass was paired against Mark Christenson, a former No. 1 golfer for the University of Michigan. Vass defeated the 23-year-old Christenson three and two to qualify for the finals against Sumpter, another ex-Wolverine linksman.

In the finals Vass never trailed but could never get more than a two-stroke edge on Sumpter. Vass won the first hole and dropped a five-foot birdie putt on the seventh to go two up, his biggest margin of the round.

But Sumpter, who had defeated 15-year-old Steve Cole, a Jackson Parkside student (the same school Vass attended) in a morning semifinal match, started a comeback. He squared the match on the tenth hole with a nifty birdie putt.

On the 15th hole Vass went one up when placed his second shot on the green, a 180-yard seven iron shot. He missed a six-foot putt for an eagle but tapped in for a birdie four on the 459 yard, par five hole. Sumpter landed in a sand trap but chipped out to finish with a par and the loss of a stroke.

The excitement mounted as Sumpter birdied the 17th hole evening the match with one hole to play. On the tension-packed 18th green, Sumpter chipped his third shot within four feet of the cup. Vass almost wrapped it up on the next shot as his 30-foot putt just missed and he settled for a par four.

Sumpter only had to sink his four footer to send the match into sudden death, but the ball rimmed the cup and stayed out thus giving the 6-0, 150 pound Vass his moment of glory.

"I never figured I had him," the Spartan junior said after the match. "I knew better than that."

Three weeks ago, Vass was in a 72-hole playoff with Rick Woulfe, John Peterson, Ron English and John VanderMeiden for the remaining three spots on the Spartan golf squad that was to compete in the NCAA meet. Woulfe, English and VanderMeiden won the three spots to join Janson and Lee Edmundson as MSU's fivesome in the tournament.

Spartan Coach Bruce Fossum may have wished Vass had made the trip as the Spartans failed to qualify for the final two days of competition, finishing with a team total of 603 for two days, two strokes behind the last team qualifier.

Janson and Edmundson qualified for individual honors the first two days and thus competed in all four rounds. Edmundson finished with a 295 (72, 75, 74, 74) for a tie for 17th place with three others while Janson was three strokes back at 298 (72, 74, 72, 78).

John Mahaffey, of the University of Houston, fired a final round of 68 to win the individual title with a four under par 284. Mahaffey's efforts paced the Cougars to the team title, edging out Wake Forest by 10 strokes.

ASHE, LAVER OUSTED

Two upsets at Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — The outlook for the All England Lawn Tennis Championships has changed after a pair of upsets Saturday eliminated defending champion Rod Laver and No. 3 seed Arthur Ashe.

First, Laver of Australia, a four-time winner, was downed by Britain's Roger Taylor in four sets, 4-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1, and then Ashe, Gum Springs, Va., was eliminated in straight sets by Spaniard Andres Gimeno, 7-5, 7-5, 6-2.

Laver and Ashe were a popular pick to meet in the final, and 24 hours after their ouster before a center court crowd of 15,000, tennis buffs still were talking about one of Wimbledon's most sensational days in the 84-year history of the championships.

The loss of the $7,200 first prize was of minor consequence to Laver and Ashe. It was the manner of their defeat which hurt their pride.

Double faults spelled their downfall. Laver served 10 and Ashe's tally was 13. Against opponents who did not concede an inch, this was too great a handicap.

America's sole survivor in the last eight is big-serving Clark Graebner of New York City. He meets Taylor in the quarter-finals and should he survive comes up against the winner of the all-Australian match between Tony Roche and Ken Rosewall in the semi-finals.

Three Australians — unseeded Bob Carmichel, two-time champion Roy Emerson and 1967 winner John Newcombe — and Gimeno are the other half of the draw. Carmichel meets Gimeno while Emerson takes on Newcombe in the quarter finals.

Graebner has not looked altogether convincing to date, but his power game is made to measure for the fast grass here and now that Laver has gone, the field is wide open. He will try to become the first American since Tony Trabert in 1955 to win the title. Like Ashe, he was a beaten semi-finalist in 1968 and 1969.

Taylor's first comment after eliminating Laver was: "It's a bit of a let-down to realize I'm only in the quarter-final after beating the Rocket."

Laver made no excuse for his loss. "I simply double faulted away the match. I just could not serve," he said.

The 31-year-old Australian, who now lives in Los Angeles, refused to blame his injured right ankle for his defeat. "I'm perfectly fit. I was not nervous. Maybe that was my mistake," he said.

Ashe was equally as frank about his poor showing. "I just couldn't serve, the balls were very soft, the court was very dead, and it all added up to Gimeno, I guess," the third-ranked U.S. player said.

The upsets were not all confined to the men. Three seeded girls failed to take their allotted places in the quarter finals. Cecilia Martinez of San Francisco claimed the biggest scalp of all when she beat third seeded Virginia Wade of Britain with the loss of only five games.

The standard of the women's field, however, remains below expectations and it will take an upset to match Taylor's defeat of Laver if Australia's Margaret Court and Billie Jean King, Long Beach, Calif., don't meet in the final.

Monday's quarterfinal pairings are: Mrs. Court vs. Helga Niessen of West Germany, Miss Shaw vs. Rosie Casals of San Francisco, Miss Durr vs. Miss Martinez and Australia's Karen Krantzcke vs. Mrs. King.

Tigers rally in nightcap for 5-1 win over Cleveland

DETROIT (UPI) — Mickey Stanley triggered a five-run sixth inning with a two-run double to reward the six-hit pitching of Mike Kilkenny of the Detroit Tigers with a 5-1 win Sunday after Sam McDowell won his 11th game for the Cleveland Indians, 8-2, with a five-hitter in the opener.

Cleveland banged out 16 hits in the opener to hand Earl Wilson his fifth loss against four wins. Jack Heidemann went 5-for-5 and drove in one run while Ray Fosse collected a single and double to drive in two runs and stretch his hitting streak to 19 straight games.

Roy Foster also continued his hot hitting against Detroit pitching with a single and his ninth home run of the season.

Fosse singled home a run in the first inning as did Duke Sims in pinning losing pitcher Earl Wilson with his fifth setback against four wins.

The Indians tacked on two more runs in the second when Heidemann's second single off Wilson produced one run and a sacrifice fly by Vada Pinson off reliever John Hiller brought in another.

Ted Uhlander forced in a run in the third inning, and Cleveland added its final pair in the eighth on a forceout by Fosse and Sims' second single.

McDowell struck out only five in raising his record to 11-4 and wild-pitched home Mickey Stanley, who tripled home Detroit's second run in the fifth inning, after Stanley doubled the first and advanced to third a ground out.

Stanley greeted former teammate Fred Lasher, who came on after loser Mike Pinson yielded a single and a walk open the sixth. Stanley's double down the right field line brought in both runs and gave Detroit the lead for the first time in the day.

Jim Northrup and Norm Casler singled off reliever Dick Ellsworth to bring in one run while the other two scored on Dean Chance on a pinch single by Gates Brown and a sacrifice fly by Kilkenny, who won his fourth game in five decisions.

Eddie Leon produced the Indians' run in the fourth inning of the second game when he doubled to lead off the inning and advanced on fly balls by Foster and Fosse, who doubled down the third base line with two out in the ninth to extend his hitting streak to 20 games. He is 31-81 in that stretch to .375.

Theme beneath surface beauty of 'Women'

To get at the apparent meaning of "Women in Love," the viewer must look beyond its surface beauty. There he will find an absorbing and sensual story, much more simple than the intricate surface appearance might suggest and much more difficult than the overlong and multiple-conscious film seems able to adequately handle.

love with Rupert, marries him but finds her love insufficient by itself to satisfy him. Gudrun looks for an intellectual as well as physical relationship with the sullen and rather brutish Gerald but finds him incapable of providing it.

"Women in Love" is a misleading title because the story approaches, with equal concern, the two men and their search for love as they have envisioned it. In fact, it is Rupert's particular search, rather than that of either of the two women, that comes closest to Lawrence's probable theme.

Rupert is searching for a higher love to supplement the conventional romance that exists between lovers and man and wife. He feels marriage or any other form of exclusive, channeled love between two people is not enough to satisfy one's emotional needs. An added love, an extra but different bond with someone else, is vital.

"Women in Love" contrasts man's inherent sexual drives and needs with society's repressive attitude toward them. The film presents its characters as sensual people, inhibited by their culture but relaxed when expressing their emotions openly, spontaneously. Lawrence's murky theme seems to cry out for human sexual liberation from the unnatural restrictions of his society. Director Ken Russell fills his film with a prevailing sense of apprehensiveness and passionate rhythm that is precisely right for displaying this theme.

The open expression of sex, be it a freight nude wrestling match between two men or a lyrical embrace in a golden field, is made to look beautiful and natural which, I think, is in keeping with Lawrence's intentions.

It is unfortunate that Russell has clouded this theme with such stunning surface beauty. "Women in Love" is full of visual wonders: lush countrysides, pastoral river scenes, authentic and teeming cityscapes and meticulous attention to details. The photography by Billy Williams is nothing short of breathtaking.

Its entire composition makes "Women in Love" the most beautiful looking film since "Romeo and Juliet."

The preoccupation with the visual is, however, misdirected. It dazzles the eye but diverts the mind from the significant anxiety of the characters. The whole look is so complicated and textured the viewer loses his perspective on the characters and the theme. As a result, he leaves the theater full of beautiful images but confused about the intentions behind it all.

It is too bad that the intuitive cast is at the mercy of filmmakers who are unsure of what to do with their well-executed characters or what to make of their well-expressed emotions. Alan Bates as Rupert, Oliver Reed as Gerald and Jennie Linden as Ursula are fine, but it is Glenda Jackson, a sort of visual and emotional cross between Anne Heywood and Genevieve Bujold, whose performance dominates the film. As Gudrun, the more aloof and distressed sister, she is superb.

"Women in Love" contains a solid, personal theme that would have made a more thought-provoking film had its surface gloss been subordinated to that theme rather than the other, unsatisfying, way around.

"Women in Love," the film version of the D.H. Lawrence novel, deals with four people and their pursuit of love in the real world to match their individual conceptions of it.

Two sisters, Gudrun and Ursula Bragwen, meet two friends, Rupert Birkin and Gerald Crich, pair off, and test out their theories on love and marriage during their shaky affairs with them. Ursula falls in

Sisters in love

Jennie Linden, as Ursula, and Glenda Jackson, as her sister Gudrun, discuss their views on love and marriage in this scene from "Women in Love," Ken Russell's film version of the D.H. Lawrence novel. The film is playing at the Spartan Twin East.

Rioting flares in N. Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops began evacuating women and children Sunday night from western Belfast, besieged by Protestant and Roman Catholic mobs hurling stones and gasoline bombs.

The Northern Ireland government said it was faced with attempted revolution and warned that persons carrying firearms would be shot on sight.

Two nights of rioting left five persons shot dead and more than 200 injured after Roman Catholics were enraged by the jailing of their civil rights champion, Bernadette Devlin, 23-year-old member of the British Parliament.

The mobs were in the streets again Sunday night in both Belfast and Londonderry. The evacuation of hundreds of women and children from the Protestant, Barnsley Estate district was carried out under rock attacks from Roman Catholics in adjoining Ballymurphy Estate. The evacuees were moved into schools and halls in a safer district.

The government broadcast appeals declaring Belfast virtually "out of bounds" to outsiders and calling on the 500,000 residents to stay indoors, away from the tense riot areas.

Security forces stopped at the outskirts, and searched for arms, all approaching cars to prevent gun-smuggling.

Lt. Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, British commander of troops in Ulster, met provincial Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark in an emergency session and then sounded this warning:

"All civilians seen carrying firearms or using firearms in any way whatsoever are liable to be shot without warning."

British Home Secretary Reginald Maudling brushed aside Sunday a call from Bernadette Devlin, the 24-year-old Irish Roman Catholic civil rights leader and member of the British Parliament, who has suggested he visit her in prison where she is serving a six-month sentence.

Her imprisonment Friday night for her role in the 1969 riots in the Bogside district of Londonderry sparked this weekend's demonstrations of support along with Saturday's show-of-strength parades by Protestant Orangemen in Belfast.

Belfast on Sunday morning was littered with rubble after 48 hours of violence.

Shops in four districts had been looted and burned, a hotel was destroyed, and smoke poured from two British-owned department stores.

Waiting rooms in hospital casualty wards were packed as people sought relatives missing from their homes.

Deputy Prime Minister Faulkner, who attended a government security meeting, denounced the rioting as "acts of hooliganism of the worst kind, backed up by organized gunmen."

He did not identify them, but the outlawed Irish Republican Army — IRA — and the Protestant extremists in the Ulster Volunteers are known to have stocks of arms.

At the height of the rioting, bands of young Catholics roamed the city shouting "release Bernie — you bastards."

Mias Devlin is being held in the women's wing of Armagh Jail, 48 miles west of Belfast.

FOR EARTHQUAKE VICTIMS

Pat Nixon flies aid to Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Mrs. Richard M. Nixon flew on a mercy mission to earthquake-stricken Peru on Sunday with two planes packed with relief supplies.

Her two-day visit, with Peru's first lady as her hostess, could help take the strain off U.S.-Peruvian relations in addition to promoting relief work for the survivors of the Western Hemisphere's worst earthquake of the 20th century.

Mrs. Nixon's companion will be Consuelo Gonzalez de Velasco, wife of Peru's president, an attractive woman just turned 50 — the mother of four children.

The two first ladies will visit earthquake relief centers, attend a Roman Catholic Mass Monday, a major religious holiday, and fly to the Andean mountain valley where the May 31 earthquake struck hardest. An estimated 50,000 persons perished.

In the first hours of the 4,000-plus-mile flight to Lima, Mrs. Nixon endorsed checks for last-minute contributions to the relief funds, bringing the total collection to around $30,000.

years of official isolation from South American countries for Fidel Castro's government and illustrates the stated policy of Peru's military government to steer a course between capitalism and communism.

Prince Brothers out of business

George and Larry Prince ended almost 25 years in the grocery business last week when they closed the Prince Brothers Shop Rite Market on E. Grand River Avenue.

The Prince brothers sold their grocery stock to the Goodrich Spartan Shop - Rite and auctioned off store equipment last week.

A spokesman for the Prince brothers said that they closed their business for retirement purposes. He said that the market had been a profitable concern, but that the brothers had tired of the grocery business.

The closing of the market, coupled with the sale of the Prince Brothers Provisions Co. last April, left the brothers with no business concerns. The provision company provided cut meats and frozen foods for area restaurants.

The provision company was cited twice in the past two years by the Michigan Dept. of Agriculture for selling ground beef containing too much fat. The company was convicted of the charges both times.

Approximately 15 employees worked at the Prince Brothers Shop - Rite Market before it closed. All but one employee have reportedly found other jobs.

Peruvian newspapers, including those controlled by the military government, have devoted columns to Mrs. Nixon's visit and to the nine tons of donated relief supplies.

Significantly, nothing has been published for nearly a week about Cuba's relief effort. It has 50 doctors, nurses and sanitation experts in the mountains and a plane arrives every three days from Havana with clothing and medicine.

Catholics protest church reform

VATICAN CITY (AP) — One thousand hymn-singing, traditionalist Roman Catholics marched straight through the doorway of St. Peter's Basilica Sunday night to bring their protest against church reform into Christendom's largest church for the first time. Vatican gendarmes made no effort to stop the orderly line of marchers, led by nine priests, who had trekked across Rome. Basilica police took away half a dozen flags and pennants that had been carried in the front of the procession as it crossed St. Peter's Square virtually under Pope Paul's windows. The traditionalist Catholics, most of them from France and Germany, proceeded to the Altar of the Sacraments, the Basilica's main altar, and sang the Latin hymn, "I Adore You With Devotion."

More than 5,000 tourists were in the Basilica and the Square when the protesting Catholics came on the scene. The marchers seemed to arouse little curiosity. The Basilica's archpriest, Paolo Cardinal Marella, was conducting special vesper services on this eve of St. Peter's feast day at the far end of the church. The service was not interrupted by the conservatives.

After their hymn at the Sacrament Altar, which was more than 50 yards from the vesper service, the conservatives crossed over to a chapel containing the remains of Pope Pius X, the early 20th century Pontiff who enacted the traditional Catholic catechism. The conservatives vowed to use only this catechism for their children, not new versions written in recent years.

In front of the Pius X Altar the traditionalists sang, in Latin, "Christ Wins." Organizers of the conservative group said some of the marchers would stay in St. Peter's Square all night in a vigil of prayer that the Pope repeal the new liturgy for the Mass and other modernizing reforms he has enacted.

Italian police in jeeps took up positions around St. Peter's Square but took no action to stop the marchers. Vatican prelates reportedly have asked them not to intervene, lest an incident be enacted. Earlier in the day, several thousand traditionalists joined in an old-style Latin Mass in Rome's ancient Colosseum in protest against modernization of the liturgy.

That was the start of the biggest demonstration here so far in the restless church for an end to liberal reforms and a return to traditional rites. Conservative priests and laymen from many countries would support Nixon and his Indochina policy. But further questioning often reveals they understand that policy to call for complete withdrawal of U.S. forces from Indochina within a year or so at the most. Many are visibly distressed when told that the President has not, in fact, made any definite pledge about a timetable for complete U.S. withdrawal.

"The people I talked to are supporting Mr. Nixon because they have gotten the impression from his statements and broadcasts that he means to get all of our troops out of Indochina fairly soon," said publisher Pringle. "If this war drags on and on and we still have a lot of men over there this time next year, I think you might see a drastic change of political sentiment in Sturgis."

Sturgis is Republican country, and voted overwhelmingly for Nixon in 1968. Most of its citizens, if confronted by a public opinion pollster, still would leave chaos behind us; so we're left with only one sensible and honorable alternative — gradual withdrawal."

He said he believed President Nixon was committed to gradual withdrawal until U.S. forces were sent into Cambodia. "Now I don't know what to think. I hope he still means to extricate us fairly quickly — but we'll have to wait and see what he actually does."

Indian conference

Louis R. Bruce, commissioner of the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), said the "father-knows-best" concept of dealing with American Indians had been erased in Washington. Instead, he said, the bureau would become a service rather than a management organization.

Indians would be provided the opportunity to take over any or all BIA programs. Other participants in the conference were Joseph McMillan, director of Equal Opportunities Programs; Charles Cleland, associate professor of Anthropology; Daniel Jacobson, professor of the Social Science Technical Institute, and Paul Melcher of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Minneapolis, Minn.

Winchester was optimistic at the conference's conclusion. "It was concluded at the workshop summary that the conference was meaningful, and all the participants agreed that a second one should be held," he said. The conference had brought about a few encounters between Indian youth and their elders. An especially controversial issue was the red flag carried that their parents said they felt symbolized communism. The older Indians agreed that the cause should have a symbol, but the red flag generally connoted undesirable things to many. This was not the extent of tension between the Indians. Disagreements over life style and hair length were voiced in "rap" sessions. Winchester said that some of the youths needed leadership and guidance. As a result of the conference, representatives from both types of groups will share conference steering committee activities for next year's gathering.

(continued from page one) If, however, both should fail, state lawmakers will have their work cut out for them when they return to session after summer recess. The legislature is expected to recess late this week to allow the lawmakers to return to their districts to campaign for the primary August 4.

Rogers: S. Viet troops to stay in Cambodia

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Secretary of State William P. Rogers said Sunday that South Vietnamese troops "obviously" will remain in Cambodia as long as North Vietnamese troops do so. He said, also, a renewed peace initiative would be made by President Nixon this week following the withdrawal of all U.S. ground forces from Cambodia on Tuesday.

After meeting with President Nixon Sunday night and this morning at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., Rogers will return to San Francisco today to speak at a foreign policy conference of editors and broadcasters. The secretary flies to Manila later today for a SEATO ministerial meeting, and to Saigon for a meeting with the countries contributing troops to the defense of South Vietnam.

South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu said in a weekend speech that his country would reduce its troops to a minimum but would consider Cambodian requests for military assistance. Rogers said that the United States hopes all foreign troops are withdrawn from Cambodia, including the South Vietnamese, but added: "Obviously South Vietnam is not going to withdraw before the North Vietnamese do, but if there is a withdrawal of all foreign troops, Cambodia will be neutral."

Nixon will file a written report to the American people on the Cambodian operation Tuesday, and this will be followed on Wednesday by a television appearance. Rogers said that America is going to use air support after June 30 against Communist supply lines in Cambodia. "We are not going to announce what we are not going to do but obviously if we interdict the supply lines, this will have a dual effect." "It will help the Cambodian government, but our purpose is to support our troops in South Vietnam."

TOURIST ATTRACTION

Corpse kept on display

PRESCOTT, Ark. (AP) — He is a curiosity, a sort of tourist attraction, and two busloads of children came up this week from Magnolia to see him.

Mike is a corpse, a body found 59 years ago in a small city park here. Nobody knew his name. He was a paralytic, on crutches, who sold pencils and combs, and had been in town only a few days.

Other visitors come almost daily. Without charge, they open the door of a cabinet and peer in at "Mike," who stands there with taut features under the flow of a small, white light. Mike is a corpse, a body found 59 years ago in a small city park here. Nobody knew his name. He was a paralytic, on crutches, who sold pencils and combs, and had been in town only a few days. J. D. Cornish, manager of the Cornish Mortuary at the time, embalmed the body. "I believe there was a custom then that you had to keep the body out for a week to try to identify it," S. L. "Blue" Avery, a funeral home employe, said. "I'm not sure of that."

But, he said, the body represented a marvel of embalming, and "one week turned into two and the weeks into months and the months into years," he said. No one has ever objected to displaying him, Avery said. "Some have asked why we keep him. The reason is that it is such a good job of embalming. Some people even today have doubts about him being dead."

Every few years, Mike is removed from the cabinet and bathed. The old clothes are burned and a new set are put on. Then he is placed back in the cabinet. "We won't bury him as long as he holds up," Avery said. "I believe he'll hold up indefinitely."

BELGIAN KING VISITS

Congo requests help

KINSHASA, The Congo (AP) — King Baudouin of Belgium, on his first visit here since the former colony's independence celebrations a decade ago, has made a triumphant return to the economically troubled nation. But most here do not view the event as an indication of increased Belgian aid. Baudouin has been publicly asked by President Joseph D. Mobutu for more financial aid and seems to have politely sidestepped the question. Mobutu came to power in an army coup at the end of 1965 and it seems that two years of holding the reins of government convinced him that Belgium was the only country that could put together the national pieces torn apart after independence. Piece by piece, relations were patched up and the topping off ceremony has been Baudouin's current two-week visit.

Some observers believe the king's visit has removed the last obstacle to Belgian businessmen picking up where they left off 10 years ago.

The king said, however, Belgian government already doing a great deal for the Congo and was now becoming more involved in Europe.

Jury opens Jackson probe

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — A special federal grand jury will be empaneled here Monday to probe last month's Jackson State College disorders in which two young blacks were killed.

Atty. Gen. John Mitchell announced the special panel after federal authorities were unable to get cooperation from the state highway patrol in an investigation of the violence. Mitchell said the grand jury would "make a complete investigation of all aspects surrounding the incident which occurred at Jackson State College May 15 to determine whether or not any federal laws were violated."

The two youths were killed and nine others were wounded in a barrage of gunfire into a women's dormitory. Gov. John Bell Williams said the officers fired only after they were fired on by snipers. Asst. Atty. Gen. Jerris Leonard conferred with state officials here several weeks ago in an attempt to persuade the highway patrol to cooperate. Specifically, Leonard wanted patrol officers to be interrogated and their weapons examined. He said he was refused cooperation. Williams contended the State was reluctant to help because federal officers had not cooperated with the state. "Mr. Leonard has refused to submit any of his people to our Mississippi authorities for interview," Williams said. "It's time he learned that cooperation is a two way street."

A Hinds County Grand Jury will also convene here July 6 to investigate the violence. Dist. Atty. Jack Travis has subpoenaed more than 150 persons.

OAS to receive appeal for Americans in Cuba

MIAMI (AP) — An appeal for help for some 700 U.S. citizens reported held in Cuba is being directed to the Organization of American States by the Remember the Pueblo Committee. The Rev. Paul D. Lindstrom, chairman of the committee dedicated to aiding American prisoners in Communist countries, said Sunday he has prepared a report on the situation and will present it, with an appeal for help, to OAS Secretary General Galo Plaza in Washington this week. Lindstrom said the committee has learned that 794 Americans and 2,237 Cuban members of their families are awaiting exit from Cuba by airlift to the U.S. Mexico border. "This airlift is no longer flying regularly as Castro had promised," Lindstrom said. "And many of the flights are only half filled. Theoretically there are flights once a month."

Americans in Cuba have not asked to leave, he added. Lindstrom, of Prospect Heights, Ill., said he spent a week in the Miami area researching the situation of Americans in Cuba, the committee's newest project. The committee chairman said the Americans who have asked to leave Cuba are virtual prisoners. "Some are actually behind bars and others are restricted in other ways," Lindstrom said. Persons arriving from Cuba say everyone applying to leave there is fired from his job and thus vulnerable to arrest for vagrancy. "We feel Castro is holding them, the Americans who want to leave for blackmail purposes," Lindstrom said.
