Board of trustees requests review of Freedom Report

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

In a closed finance committee meeting June 19, the board of trustees called for a "complete review" of the Academic Freedom Report.

A major aim of the review, according to several trustees, is to find a way to give the board the power to initiate amendments to the report, as well as to have final approval concerning such amendments.

The review was apparently intended to be done in secret, as no mention of it was made in the open board meeting which followed the finance committee meeting. A motion to require a public review, introduced by chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, lost on a 4-4 tie vote.

President Wharton said Friday he was not sure of the current status of the review because he had turned the matter over to several assistants who had not reported back to him.

"I have no way of knowing the full position yet," he said. "We're going to move very carefully in what is or is not raised."

"A new document is often changed after a time (of adjustment)," Wharton said. "All they (the trustees) have done is to ask us to review it."

Two trustees contacted late last week said they favored the review and felt the board should be able to initiate amendments to the report. A third said he opposed the review because it violated due process.

"We can't live with a document that abdicates all right of amendment," Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, said Thursday. "I'm not talking about the board (making amendments) unilaterally."

"Any of the parties to the document should be able to initiate amendments," he said. "At the present time, all but the taxpayers, represented by the board of trustees, are provided for."

Stephen Nisbet, R-Fremont, echoed Huff's words.

"A thing that excludes the board of trustees is a little out of line as far as the administration of the University is concerned," he said Friday.

Under current procedures, the freedom report may be amended at the suggestion of the Student Board of ASMSU or the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs. Both groups may also approve amendments or revisions to the report proposed by living unit or group governments or by not less than 100 student petitioners.

Proposed amendments and revisions cannot become operative without consultation with the ASMSU Student Board and the approval of the Academic Council and the board of trustees. If either of the two latter groups rejects a proposal, it is required to send an explanation to the body that proposed it.

Conceivably, under the present procedure, either ASMSU or the Faculty Committee on Student Affairs could formally propose an amendment suggested by the board of trustees, much as a senator or representative may submit a bill actually drafted by the staff of the President of the United States.

"But what if the faculty don't like the amendment?" Nisbet said. "Then we (the trustees) can't do anything about it."

If the trustees are to have the power to initiate amendments, the Academic Council will probably have to approve an amendment to that effect.

"I don't know what we'll do if the Academic Council doesn't provide for board initiation," Huff said. "Maybe the board will have to reconsider its earlier action and rescind the whole document."

Huff said he did not think this would happen, however, because he doesn't think the Academic Council will refuse the board's request.

As an example of conditions the trustees "can't live with," Huff said there was no way, under current procedures, the board could amend the report to allow for summary dismissal of students who are caught throwing rocks at the Administration Bldg.

"The administration feels the procedures for dismissal are unduly complicated," Huff said. "In the case of out-and-out violation of University regulations, there is no way to dismiss the student immediately."

Don Stevens, D-Okemos, said Friday he was not opposed to the trustees' discussing the Academic Freedom Report, "or any other matter."

"But I am opposed to the trustees' amending the Academic Freedom Report without the procedures in the report which we ourselves adopted," he said.

Stevens also said he opposed the secret nature of the review, and said any discussions of the report should be open to the public and the press.

The five other trustees could not be reached for comment.

The review was sparked by board discussion of amendments to Article Six (publications) and the proposed incorporation of the State News. These

Investigators get $9,000 to continue campus probe

The Michigan Senate has authorized an additional $9,000 for the special Senate committee probing campus unrest, bringing the committee's total appropriation to $59,000.

Sen. Robert Huber, R-Troy, who heads the investigating committee, had asked for $12,000, but the amount was cut by the appropriation committee to $9,000.

Huber had told the Senate last year, when $25,000 was added to the original appropriation of $25,000, that he would go out to solicit funds from private organizations. But last week Huber indicated that persons he had contacted showed little interest in making donations. Huber stated that the additional funds were needed, in part, to support publication and distribution of a two-part staff study of campus problems released earlier this year. However, the additional appropriation did not pass without criticism from a number of senators.

Sen. Basil Brown, D-Highland Park, said at one point that the report should be burned.

"I have not read it and I don't intend to," he said. Brown added that he had seen newspaper accounts which criticized the report for its lack of solid information.

Also critical of the additional appropriation was Sen. Coleman Young, D-Detroit, who asked, "Are we furnishing finances to promote a statewide candidacy and give him exposure?"

Huber, who is seeking the Republican nomination to the U.S. Senate, said that his committee and campaign staff were separate. "We have tried to keep campus committee costs down," he said.

Court tries Sihanouk; prince sentenced to die

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — A military tribunal found Prince Norodom Sihanouk guilty Sunday of treason and sentenced him, in absentia, to death. A civilian court president and four military judges reached the decision after 40 minutes of deliberation.

The former chief of state remains abroad, last reported in Peking, and has formed a government-in-exile which frequently calls on Cambodians to overthrow the regime which took over March 18.

Sihanouk was found guilty on nine counts, ranging from economic sabotage to treason. The trial lasted three days.

The defense argued that the military tribunal was not entitled to try Sihanouk because he is a member of the royalty and protected by the still-existing laws of the kingdom.

Legislature OKs $330.3 million budget bill

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

A $330.3 million budget bill designed to ease Michigan's 42 public colleges and universities through the 1970-1971 fiscal year has cleared the legislature and awaits Gov. Milliken's signature.

Under the measure, MSU will receive $59.9 million, an increase of $5.8 million over last year. University officials said $71.1 million would be needed for this year's operation.

The measure skimmed through the Senate on a 26-4 vote Friday and won 56-17 approval in the House hours later following a last-minute compromise which rescued the package from two earlier House defeats.

Under the final spending blueprint, $284 million was earmarked for the state's 13 public four-year colleges — up $31.7 million from the previous fiscal year.

Reflecting the legislature's "get tough" policy on campus unrest, the higher education budget bill came equipped with three stipulations aimed at cracking down on campus violence. Although opponents warned some of the stipulations may prove unenforceable, legislators told college administrators:

— to immediately expel any student who damages campus property or buildings.

— to revoke the scholarships from any student who is found guilty of disorderly conduct or violence to a person or damage to property while on campus.

— that state funds will be withheld from schools which fail to take punitive action against teachers and students who disobey university rules.

For the first time in Michigan history the legislature also set minimum working hours for college instructors. The bill stipulates that full-time faculty members must teach 15 class hours. Instructors at technical schools 12 hours and graduate level teachers 10 hours weekly.

The entire package reached a temporary House impasse when lawmakers disagreed over a clause setting a state-wide minimum and maximum tuition rates for all junior colleges.

Republican opposition to the proposal helped defeat the package twice, sending the bill into further conference huddles that ended in a last-minute compromise.

Trustee amendments unnecessary for Report

The board of trustees have never been particularly happy with the Academic Freedom Report. One of the primary reasons is that the document really does guarantee a degree of "academic freedom."

Certainly nothing could be further from the truth. One of the primary rationales for creating autonomous universities with independent boards of trustees (and etc.) was to insure that there would be academic freedom.

This notwithstanding, the board of trustees has decided to undertake a "complete review" of the report. The catalyst of this decision may be the recommended changes in Article Six of the Academic Freedom Report that were brought about by the proposed incorporation of the State News.

Under the existing system amendments may be initiated by either the Academic Council or the student board of the Associate Students of Michigan State University (ASMSU). An amendment begun by the student government requires the approval of the council, whereas, one begun by the Academic Council may be passed over the objections of ASMSU.

Use of legal challenge provides new weapon

A most interesting case is shaping up in the U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids. The plaintiffs in the action are the 132 people arrested in the Union last May 19. The defendants include such personages as Ingham County Prosecuting Attorney Raymond Schodeller, Ingham County Sheriff Kenneth Preadmore and President Wharton.

Certainly this matter needs resolution. There is something aesthetically, if not morally, improper about arresting students for assembling in their own Union building on their own campus.

become part of the Academic Freedom Report.

Apparently, the trustees are not satisfied with this infallible check on the report and desire to be a body of first instance with regard to tampering with the document. This would be, at best, of dubious value.

To this suggestion trustee Stephen Nisbet, R-Fremont, is quoted as saying: "But what if the faculty don't like the amendment?" Indeed, if none of the scores of members of the Academic Council liked a proposal, then we submit that the amendment is probably completely without merit.

And, as hearings before a House education subcommittee have disclosed, there is resentment at giving what many Northern congressmen see as reward to the Southern districts that have resisted desegregation the longest and hardest.

In sum, there does not seem to be any good rationale for investing the board of trustees with the power to initiate changes in the Academic Freedom Report. Indeed, at best such an act would only serve to create a comparatively useless bureaucratic channel, where other efficient, though unofficial, channels already exist.

on a schedule reflecting the ad hoc needs of the campus dwellers rather than by some arbitrary and inflexible time sequence.

Further, there can be no doubt that the challenge is being presented properly. Appropriate channels are being utilized to the utmost. The citizens are once again using the laws of the land in an attempt to attain relief from what they consider an improper rule.

Regardless of who wins or loses this action, one fact emerges: student-establishment confrontations may never be the same again. The young people have seized upon a new and mighty weapon in their battle to change society - the law.

This new emphasis is most worthy, for it may ultimately prove to be the only truly effective method of challenging the status quo. At the very least one thing is clear - officials may very well think twice before jumping the gun if they know that they will have to answer in court for their actions.

Chichester-Clark sees riots as front for revolution attempt BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - The British army brought its strength in Northern Ireland last week to an unprecedented 11,500 men, charged with the seemingly impossible task of keeping peace between feuding Protestants and Roman Catholics.

Politicians on both sides of the religious divide agree on only one thing: that coming weeks are critical and are likely to add to the bloodshed of the past weekend.

The gloom surrounding Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark's government has been deepened by the belief that the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA), or one of its splinter groups, is now working as a cohesive force.

The weekend's Belfast shootings during which seven persons were killed, were accompanied by a series of major fires in factories and downtown stores. Military authorities say the fires were started by skilled arsonists using sophisticated devices.

Thus the belief in the provincial government is that Northern Ireland's troubles have changed their character. The Protestant-Catholic rioting goes on, but behind it, said Chichester-Clark, is an organized attempt at revolution.

Something of the same kind appeared to be going on simultaneously in the neighboring Irish republic.

Dublin, the republican capital, has in the past week suffered four major fires which police put down to arson. The apparent object in Dublin is to upset Prime Minister Jack Lynch, whom extreme republicans charge with playing along too closely with the old enemy, England.

The army, although reinforced by more than 3,000 men in the past week, clearly is reluctant to use its firepower.

Eight months ago the commander, Gen. Sir Ian Freeland, warned that people throwing gasoline bombs would be shot on sight. In the past week gasoline bombs by the score have been thrown at the troops themselves. Not one of the bombers has been shot.

But the new British Conservative government has sounded the law-and-order note somewhat more loudly in recent days, backing a tougher stand by the provincial government. The provincial Parliament has passed two new laws - one providing jail terms up to five years for rioting, and another providing stiff sentences for inciting hatred and dissension.

The ideal, of course, would be to seek the root of the trouble and cut it out. With the taproot of Catholic-Protestant hatred buried in 300 years of fights and discord, this doesn't appear possible. Reason has been supplanted by passion.

Even when a thin plaster of peace can be, somehow, troweled onto the edifice of government, the breath of passion may touch off an explosion. There are many fuses.

One of them is a 23-year-old member of the British Parliament, Bernadette Devlin, a little spitfire who blasted off to political fame with her active and persistent championing of the Catholic civil rights movement.

Out of jail she's a gadfly; in jail she's a symbol. At the moment she's a symbol - serving a six-month sentence in Armagh jail on conviction of rioting and inciting to riot. From her jailing sprang the latest riots.

But, if Miss Devlin is provocation, the parades of the hardline Orangemen in their bowlers, sashes and white gloves are dynamite. The jarring thump of their drums as they make their annual marches to commemorate historic Protestant victories over the Catholics, drive Roman Catholics up the wall.

Legal they are, however, and will continue, it appears, until the climactic blockbuster of a finale July 13. For each parade, Northern Ireland could have a riot.

Desegregation request greeted coolly on Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's request for $1.5 billion to help desegregate schools has been received coolly on Capitol Hill, particularly by Northern supporters of integration.

Suspicion of the administration's motives, based on its desegregation efforts so far, has helped dampen the enthusiasm of the Democrats for the program which would put most of the money in the South.

There is reluctance also on the part of Northerners whose own districts are starved for funds to earmark such a big chunk of money for the South when the administration has held down spending for schools generally.

And, as hearings before a House education subcommittee have disclosed, there is resentment at giving what many Northern congressmen see as reward to the Southern districts that have resisted desegregation the longest and hardest.

"We're being asked to pay reparations to some Southern school districts for having inflicted the Constitution on them," Rep.

William D. Ford D-Mich., told administration witnesses.

The program has not even been embraced by the Southerners in Congress. Most of them voted against the $150-million down payment requested by Nixon for immediate use when the Senate approved the expenditure recently.

The President called for the $1.5-billion outlay over the next two years in his school desegregation message last March. The Supreme Court has issued a final order for an end to dual school systems this September, and heavy added costs are anticipated by the districts affected.

The money would be used as the local district decides, for such things as teacher training, curriculum revision, repairs or minor remodeling of school buildings and transportation services.

Under a formula that double-counts minority children in districts carrying out a court-ordered or federally approved desegregation plan, two-thirds of the money would go to the South.

SPECIAL SESSION 'HELPFUL'

Late 'U' budget approval complicates '72 request

By JOHN BORGER State News Staff Writer

Late legislative approval of University appropriations will make it extremely difficult for the administration to submit its budget request for 1971-72 by the September deadline, Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, said Friday.

The budget request for 1971-72 must be based on the actual budget for 1970-71, he explained, and the 1970-71 budget must be based on the legislative appropriations.

The guidelines must then be used to establish a workable budget. "We have about three weeks of work to establish this year's budget after the trustees establish guidelines," Wilkinson said.

Because the next regular trustees meeting is not until July 17, Wilkinson said a special trustees meeting to discuss the budget "would help a lot."

Such a trustees meeting had been scheduled for June 29, but it was cancelled because the legislature had not acted upon appropriations at that time.

President Wharton said Friday the trustees were being contacted about holding such a meeting, but a decision whether or not to hold the meeting had not been made.

Since the legislature acted on appropriations only Friday, if the board of trustees does not meet until July 17, by Wilkinson's estimated schedule it would be around August 7 before this year's budget is completed.

Because next year's budget request must be submitted to the board of trustees for final approval before it is given to the legislature, this leaves only about six weeks for Wilkinson's office to prepare the budget request.

Wilkinson said the major hold-up in the system was the legislature, which usually takes about six months - from the beginning of January, when the governor submits his recommendations, until the end of June - to act on university appropriations.

"If we could know what our appropriations would be in late April or early May, we could zip right through this whole thing," he said.

In such a situation, faculty and students could be informed of salaries and tuition changes much earlier, possibly before the end of spring term.

Africans' visit to Vatican disturbs Portuguese

LISBON (AP) - The Portuguese government Sunday broke a four-day silence on a rift with the Vatican over an audience granted by Pope Paul VI to three anti-Portuguese African rebel leaders.

It said it awaited "convincing explanations" from the Holy See. A communique issued by the foreign ministry said the government has been informed through press reports that "the leaders of the terrorist movements attacking Portuguese borders" were received by the Pope last Wednesday.

The three anti-Portuguese fighters - Agostinho Neto of Angola, Marcelino dos Santos of Mozambique and Amilcar Cabral of Guinea - head guerrilla organizations which have been active in Portuguese African territories since 1961.

"Despite the extreme gravity of such reports, the Portuguese government thought it should not alarm the conscience of the country before a full explanation of the facts," the document said.

Collins jury selection resumes

ANN ARBOR (UPI) — The John Norman Collins "coed murder trial" resumes today after a recess following the questioning of five potential jurors who were dismissed Thursday for a variety of reasons.

Four of those dismissed Thursday were from previous jury panels and only one was from the list of 300 potential jurors summoned this week in the continued attempt to select an impartial jury to hear the case.

Of the two men and three women dismissed Thursday, two had opinions about the case, one had a job he couldn't be away from, one lives next to a prosecution witness and the husband of the fifth works at Milan Prison.

Collins, 23, a former Eastern Michigan University senior, is charged with first degree murder in the slaying of Karen Sue Beineman, 18, a Grand Rapids coed at EMU. Her death last July 23 was the seventh of young women in the Ann Arbor - Ypsilanti area in a two-year period.

Circuit Judge John Conlin ordered the summoning of 300 more potential jurors Monday after denying a fifth motion by defense attorneys to have the trial shifted to another Michigan city.

Of the 300 names drawn for the jury panel, 165 were successfully served with notices to appear for jury duty. However, only 128 showed up Thursday, and Conlin dismissed all but 57 of them. Only one of that group came under questioning Thursday, leaving 56 awaiting questioning on Monday when the trial resumes.

"Maybe the board will have to reconsider its earlier action and rescind the whole document (the Academic Freedom Report)."

SUMMER PROJECT

Local drug center open

A public Drug Education Center organized by a group of students, professors and members of the East Lansing community, opened last Monday at 131 Albert St., East Lansing.

The center, which is a summer project, will provide information and counseling services to young people in the East Lansing area. Staffed by a professional psychiatrist, students, parents and volunteers, the center will also offer informal classes in guitar, literature and horseback riding.

Ed Lynn, professor of psychiatry, said the center's program will emphasize "inter-personal relationships and safe, non-judgmental help."

"We are also considering setting up 'encounter' groups between parents and students," Lynn said.

"Although there are other facilities for drug information in the Lansing area," Lynn said, "some of those places are just too establishment-oriented."

Mike Gieszer, East Lansing

graduate student, is chairman of the board of directors for the project.

Members of the board said that the community is void of any drug information during the summer and that they hoped to continue the "drop-in center" idea next year if it is successful. They feel the Albert Street location is good because it is close to the downtown area.

PASOA symposium set

The Pan-African Students Organization in the Americas (PASOA) will sponsor a Student Symposium on Africa's Future at Howard University, Washington, D.C., July 24-26. The theme is "The African Peasantry and the African Revolution."

"We believe that every African student does and should have a contribution to make," they stated.

Consumer rights crusader Ralph Nader has asked Sen. Edmund A. Muskie, D-Maine, to investigate reports that the Atomic Energy Commission has been persecuting two of its scientists who have been critical of the AEC policies.

The two, John W. Gofman and Arthur R. Tamplin, both of the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory at Livermore, Calif., delivered several technical papers recently criticizing the allowable radiation dosage limits set for nuclear power plants.

Nader wrote to Muskie Sunday that "the available indications are that Gofman and Tamplin have been accused of heresy by an agency so committed to the promotion of atomic energy that it has insisted that radiation risks be treated more as articles of faith to be unquestioned than propositions to be examined continually."

Israeli planes hit Egyptian sites near Canal

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli warplanes attacked Egyptian artillery batteries and missile sites along the Suez Canal on Sunday, and the Israelis said one of the planes was shot down by ground fire. The Egyptians claimed two jets downed.

The Israeli report said the two-man crew of the aircraft, presumably a U.S.-built Phantom jet, parachuted into Egyptian territory.

A Cairo dispatch reported the capture of an Israeli captain and a lieutenant.

By Israeli account, this was the third aircraft lost to the Egyptians in the canal area in six days. The Egyptians claim to have downed 11 Israeli planes in that period and to have captured three Israeli airmen.

An Israeli military spokesman said the plane shot down Sunday was hit either by antiaircraft fire or missiles.

Two Israeli aircraft hit last Tuesday were knocked down by Soviet-built SAM 2 missiles, the Israelis say.

Israeli planes carried out a day-long strike on Egyptian targets in the southern and central sectors of the waterway, the Israeli military spokesman in Tel Aviv said.

He denied the Cairo claim that two planes were shot down.

The three aircraft which the Israelis admit losing in a week's time is their highest plane toll in a single week since the 1967 Middle East war.

The Israelis say they have lost 24 planes fighting the Arabs since the war, 14 of them against the Egyptians. They claim to have downed 102 Egyptian warplanes.

Knowledgeable sources in Tel Aviv have reported that the Israeli government is seriously concerned over the recent redeployment of Soviet missiles in the canal zone despite round-the-clock bombing and reconnaissance by the Israeli air force.

Last November the Israelis said they had wiped out all Egyptian missile sites near the canal.

The Egyptians are believed to have succeeded now in stationing a network of modified SAM2s capable of being launched from field sites, the sources say.

On the Jordan front, the Israelis reported that Jordanian army regulars joined Arab guerrillas in an exchange of fire with Israeli units across the frontier at Belt Shean Valley. No Israeli casualties were reported.

The Israeli command said there also was an exchange with Arab guerrillas in the Mt. Hermon sector in Lebanon.

In Amman, Jordan's capital, Arab guerrilla leaders asked the countries represented by the four-man Arab Conciliation Commission for "basic guarantees to protect the Palestinian revolution," a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization - PLO announced.

The spokesman, Kamal Nasser, said the request was made because guerrilla organizations still believed "counterrevolutionary forces in Jordan are carefully planning to strike once more against the Palestine resistance movement."

Cairo claimed two Israeli Phantoms were brought down and their pilots captured in the central sector of the canal.

A statement distributed by the Middle East News Agency did not say how the planes were downed.

FOCUS: AFRICA

Journal to debut in fall

A student journal of African studies will begin publishing in the fall, the journal's five student editors announced last week. The publication represents one of several innovations that came out of student demands made on the African Studies Center last year.

"The African Studies Center affirms its commitment that African studies must be made more relevant to the needs and aspirations of persons of African descent wherever they may reside," the editors' statement read. "This relevance includes increased participation by persons of African descent in decision-making processes of the center, increased involvement in the teaching and study of Africa and related areas and the encouragement of their appreciation of their African heritage."

The journal will be called "Mazungumzo," meaning "dialogue" in Swahili.

The editors will accept contributions of articles with a major focus on the African continent and subjects related to Africans of the diaspora. Manuscripts should be on standard-size paper and 10-15 pages long. The deadline for fall publication is Sept. 1.

Manuscripts should be sent to: "Mazungumzo," Student Journal of African Studies, African Studies Center, MSU.

Legislator skips meetings, discussion of audit report

State Rep. George Montgomery, D-Detroit, failed to appear at two meetings of state legislators and University officials to discuss the MSU Audit Report, sources said Friday.

Montgomery has criticized the board of trustees for "refusing to cooperate" with the legislature by not offering satisfactory explanations of the report.

The source said University officials invited legislators to the University to discuss the audit report shortly after it was released. Another discussion was held at the Capitol.

Montgomery was invited to both meetings, the source said, but did not attend either.

Montgomery, who is chairman of the House subcommittee on higher education appropriations, is a candidate in the Democratic gubernatorial primary. Rep. Marvin Stempier, D-Livonia, also a member of the three-man subcommittee and Montgomery's legislative campaign chairman, sent form letters to nearly 100 university officials throughout the state, asking them to circulate nominating petitions for Montgomery.

MSU did not circulate the petitions. "Not circulating the petitions" may not have hurt us, but it sure didn't help us any," the University sources said.

City seeks 'missing' residents

Students who were out of the city of East Lansing during the spring census are being urged to contact the city offices to report their residence. City officials believe that this year's low census count was due to students leaving the area during the spring break.

Although census enumerators canvassed the area, officials counted only 47,392 residents, 11,000 below their estimate of 58,500.

Mike Conlisk of the Planning Dept. said the decrease could cost the city $2 million in tax rebates. He said those who called would be sent an official "Were You Counted" form.

Residents who were out of the city should call Conlisk or Bill Costick, administrative assistant to the city manager.

Meanwhile, Conlisk said, they will try to obtain data on the number of students enrolled from the University.

Runaways get counseling, home at volunteer center

By JEANNE SADDLER
Associate Campus Editor

If you're really in a hassle with the family scene and want to "leave the crib" for a while to "get your head together" and learn to deal with your problems, The Raft is the place to go.

The Raft is a newly established counseling center and eventually will be a temporary home for local runaways. The directors hope to get their state license as a housing institution for the 420 Evergreen Ave. residence within a week.

The Raft is staffed by 24 paraprofessionals and professional volunteers from the entire community and is open 24 hours a day. Four house parents are on call for 12-hour periods each to receive new runaways and counsel others.

Susie Kehde and Teme Levbar said they realized the need for such a house while they worked as volunteers at the Listening Ear for a year.

"We all had to deal with runaways frequently," Miss Kehde said. "And we realized that there was no facility in East Lansing to deal with this type of problem."

Miss Kehde explained that the volunteers at The Raft work on individual and family counseling. When the runaway arrives, there is an initial "rap session" with the person during which he is informed of all of his alternatives and told he must make his own decision.

"If he decides to stay," Miss Kehde said, "he must agree to try and work on his problem and parental contact must be made." The person is then helped with personal problems and those within the family.

But a young visitor to The Raft won't find 25 understanding adults to fawn over him. When he arrives, it will be possible for him to talk to a member of his peer group — high school and junior high students who have undergone a training program. Miss Kehde said the young volunteers were trained in listening skills, the legal aspects of runaways and have had orientations to problems involving sex and drugs.

All of the work and help needed to prepare the house use was done by junior high and high school students. So far The Raft is being supported by individual donations and support from churches and other institutions. Miss Kehde estimates household expenses will be around $1,000 a month. The house parents are Rose and Hazel Woudenberg, and Gary Hayes and Teme Levbar.

Freedom Report review

amendments had gone through the amendment channels outlined in the Academic Freedom Report, having been approved by the Academic Council in May, and had the recommendation of the administration.

Discussion of the amendments eventually covered the entire report. Huff reportedly volunteered to second a motion to review the entire document if someone would make the motion.

A motion to that effect was made by vice-chairman Frank Merriman, R-Decker, and seconded by Huff.

Stevens then attempted to amend the review motion by adding, "This review and discussion will be in a public meeting." The motion was seconded by Blanche Martin, D-East Lansing.

The motion failed to win approval on a 4-4 tie. Favoring the amendment were Stevens, Martin, Huff and Clair White, D-Bay City. Opposed were Merriman, Stephen Nisbet, R-Fremont, Kenneth Thompson, R-Grand Rapids and Frank Hartman, D-Flint.

The original review motion was then approved 5-3. Huff, Merriman, Hartman, Nisbet and Thompson voted to approve it; Stevens, Martin and White opposed the motion.

at Huff's suggestion, seconded by Hartman, the proposed incorporation of the State News Report has been reviewed.

was tabled for further study, until the full Academic Freedom Report has been reviewed.

Strontium 90 down from '68

LONDON (AP) — The content of radioactive Strontium 90 was lower last year in British milk than in any year since 1961, a government report said. It reported Strontium 90 levels were down 10 per cent from 1968 and only one-quarter of the 1964 level.
