East Lansing, Michigan

Tuition increases per credit hour of $1 for resident students and $2 for out - of state students were approved Friday by a 5-3 vote of the board of trustees.

By the same 5-3 vote, residence hall rates were increased to $1,080 for a three - term year, an increase of $105 per year. Average faculty salaries were increased

7.5 per cent, effective July 1, 1970. A motion by Chairman Don Stevens, D-Okemos, to establish a student - faculty

The tuition increases will be partially off-set by a half - million dollar increase to student aid programs. This will allow some students to qualify for aid up to 50 per cent of their tuition costs.

Revenue from student fees will be increased $2,608,334 in the 1970-71 budget. More than half a million dollars of this is due to an increased enrollment summer term and other credit hour production increases. Undergraduate fee increases contributed $1,515,030 to that increase ($1,149,504 from residents and $365.526 from out - of - state students). Total revenue from student fees will be $29,880,362 for 1970-71. The state legislature's appropriation was $59,932, Warren Huff, D-Plymouth; Frank Hartman, D-Flint, and Clair White, D-Bay City, opposed approval of the budget.

Two of those objecting favored higher faculty salaries than the budget allowed. Huff said he wanted a 8.5 per cent faculty salary increase. Six and a half per cent increases were needed simply to cover cost of living increases, he said; the other two per cent would be salary improvement, as MSU currently ranks at the bottom of the Big Ten in the salary level of full

"Our faculty salaries are sinking badly in comparison to others of the Big Ten," Huff

Huff said the budget was a "question of priorities" and suggested a number of ways in which extra funds could be obtained. White called current salary levels "one of the scandals of this University.' "You can't operate unless you can maintain senior faculty over a long period of time that young faculty want to come and rub elbows with," he said. The teaching faculty salaries rose an average 7.8 per cent, while administrative salaries were boosted an average 5.9 per cent. The raises cost the University $2,775,300 and were financed from the general fund and grants. Although the pay increases are retroactive to July 1, the raise will not be added to paychecks until Aug. 30, due to the delay in approving a final budget.

University laborers received an average seven per cent wage increase. The original figure for faculty salary increases in June had been five per cent but was raised after trustees expressed dissatisfaction with that figure. Hartman based his objection on tuition increases, which he said were too high. Last year's increases should have lasted two or three years, he said. The other five said they, too, wanted higher faculty salaries and lower tuition but that the money simply was not available to provide this. "Let's not kid ourselves," Nisbet said. "There are only two sources of income:

legislative appropriations and student fees. We've gone as far as we can (in providing faculty salary increases) this year. Stevens introduced a motion to establish

Cowles House opened to 'U' faculty art works

By PAUL HANSON State News Staff Writer

Dolores Wharton appreciates the art produced at MSU. And to show it off she has opened Cowles House to Kresge faculty works for the first time in the history of the president's residence.

But the story of the Cowles House exhibits entails more than hanging the paintings and displaying the other art works. That story is simple; they are there. The reasons why are far more interesting.
From the time the Whartons arrived in East Lansing, Mrs. Wharton's love of art was known. She had been a member of the Museum of Modern Art's Junior Council and had expressed curiosity about the work being done on campus.

One of the first things she did after arriving on campus was to visit Kresge and become acquainted with the faculty and their works.

There was some doubt on campus that she would find any art worthwhile at the "cow college." But she didn't share those apprehensions. "It wasn't until I had been here awhile," she said, "I was made aware of the attitude that this is a college less gifted in the arts than it really is." What she found in the faculty studios of Kresge surprised her nonetheless. "To find it so excellent," she said, "is well, it's wonderful."

And that began Mrs. Wharton's campaign to promote what she calls "the sophisticated art" at MSU.

"Student art is shown at Kresge," she said, "but faculty art is not always seen. And faculty art is professional, Cowles House should have professional art."

The house was another reason for the exhibitions. According to Mrs. Wharton the house lends itself to the display of art. The rooms are large, low - ceilinged areas often seen by visitors on official or semi - official business with President Wharton.

The natural atmosphere has been improved by Mrs. Wharton's redecoration. She had some rooms painted in a neutral white so that the rooms and the art together make a unified statement.

But the same thing could be done with almost any other building on campus. What makes the display unique is the house. "I find it a lovely, intimate experience to see art works in a home," she said. "I've seen many, many homes of collectors in New York. I find it an intimate response to see famous paintings in a living room." But if art in a living room is intimate, it is also complex, at least in terms of choosing which work goes where. Galleries are constructed with a lack of windows for maximum wall space. Hallways are wide for good viewing. In fact the entire

But a house is different. Its purpose is shelter and comfort for its residents. The display of art is secondary.

Cowles House has only six semi-private large walls. The rest of the display area necessary for an exhibition has to come from stairways, mantels and halls. In short, some things cannot be shown in the house simply because of space.

"But I never choose a painting because it will fit on a wall," Mrs. Wharton said.

The mood of the house also has to be taken into consideration. Cowles House has a tradition, an atmosphere. And for art works to look their best in the house, they must blend.

"Together" is a word Mrs. Wharton uses to describe the art and the house. To her it means a balance, a mutual compliment, a common statement.

"There is a character to the house, as there is to the paintings," she said. "The two have to work together."

"It's finding the house and finding the art and putting them together," she said.

Mrs. Wharton chooses the works for Cowles House at a special exhibition given the faculty members interested in having their works placed in the house. She has also made requests after seeing something she likes in a studio. When she sees a work she likes "a little bit of magic takes place," she said.

"I make selections," she said, "purely on the works themselves and the pleasure they give me."

Once the works are in the house, she begins to place them. For the first exhibit she was helped by Paul Love, gallery are that we're going to have a good year. We haven't had our big annual fund drive yet, so I can't give any specific figures."

The fund drive is held from September through December.

"The only thing that would change my prediction is if we have protests and demonstrations like last spring," he said. 'If we have a good fall, we'll have a good fund drive."

The unrest and problems of last spring have not affected donations. Kinney said. Only about a dozen schools said they felt reaction to student demonstrations was mainly responsible for the drop; the others blamed the economy.

Among other findings: • The number of small donors increased. but the dollar volume of contributions

ALL ABOARD RESCUED Atlantic explosion rips Norwegian cruiser

SANTA CRUZE DE TENRIFE, Canary Islands (AP) · More than 700 passengers and crewmen abandoned the burning cruise ship Fulvia in the Atlantic Ocean Sunday after an explosion ripped through the liner's engine room.

All 448 passengers, most of them Italians and 273 crewmen were rescued by the French luxury liner Ancerville, which sped to the scene in response to radioed distress

The Fulvia's captain, C. B. Fasting, boarded the Spanish tug Tamaran and hoped to use the boat's modern firefighting equipment to save what was left of his 16, 923 - ton vessel.

Norwegian - owned ship left the Portuguese island of Madeira to continue a summer cruise that began in Genoa on Tuesday. The Ancerville, steaming from Dakar on the coast of Senegal to Casablanca, Morocco, reached the scene nine hours after the explosion and rescued the passengers and 246 crewmen from lifeboats. Capt. Fasting and 26 other crewmen stayed aboard the vessel to try to control the blaze, but they also abandoned ship after the fire intensified and boarded the Ancerville.

Reached by radio telephone from Paris, the chief radio operator of the French liner said all survived, and no panic was reported.

There was no explanation for the explosion, but the Coast Guard said there were no casualities when the blast ripped through the engine room.

Sen. Beebe requests halt to rock fests

State Sen. Lorraine Beebe, R-Dearborn, in a letter to Michigan Atty. Gen. Frank J. Kelley, called for an end to rock music festivals in Michigan.

Mrs. Beebe said that such gatherings encourage "delinquency, moral decay and destruction." She asked whether it was the purpose of individuals and organizations sponsoring the rock festivals "to encourage illegal action by simply making it more available for such offenses to happen.

"It would seem to me that state authorities should exert all the power they command to use the law to prevent these degrading events from being held anywhere in the State of Michigan," she said. A rock festival which attracted a crowd of more than 22,000 was sponsored by ASMSU Pop Entertainment May 24. It is the largest such festival in the state of Michigan up to the present time.

The landmark decision by the Supreme Court on the issue of free textbooks for public school is expected to affect 60 per cent of the state's 500 school districts

"It has long been the position of the State Dept. of Education that such things as free textbooks are an educational right," John Porter, acting state superintendent of public instruction, said.

Although the Lansing School District has supplied free textbooks through the nint grade since 1917, local officials said they are not sure whether the ruling will apply only to required courses such as English and math, or to electives such a art and music.

Friday's action stemmed from a 1966 case of an Ann Arbor cleaning woman whose employer took her case to court when she found the woman could not afford the text and fee charges in the Ann Arbor district.

The Supreme Court ruling amounted to a reversal of circuit court and an appeals court ruling.

costs and raising money

 Increase the graduate fee significantly, without increasing undergraduate tuition, because the graduate programs are from four to eight times as expensive per student as undergraduate

 At the present time, tenured faculty members with whose work the administration is unsatisfied or whom the administration considers incompetent, are given only minimal salary increases. Huff suggested giving them no salary increases at all, "to encourage them to move on."

 Check into the large number of institutes at the University, cutting funds from those which are not as "worthwhile" as others. Use up the "cookie jar" accounts, the reserve funds of the University. "I know we don't have as many left as we once did," Huff said, "but we probably have some." • See if extra funds could be to give concer presidency. Bender wrote Huff the following letter, which circulated among pres representatives at the meeting and was somehow mislaid and probably never reached him

"Dear Warren - My wife and have a little nest - egg we might be willing to let go at about 94 per cent. It would amount to, say, $150 - $200, and we would have to pay for writing checks, but it's for a good cause, and we know you're hard up. Louie."

Another misplaced letter told the trustee: "If you just ask him nicely, I'm sure Dr. Wharton will work for free. Mrs. Wharton will just have to learn to sew and paint her own pictures."

That letter was unsigned. Huff, who presumbly received neither letter, had no public response.

shift to a "more focused" investigation instead of the original "scatter - gun approach."

He said the police would continue to use "good investigative practices," in an attempt to narrow down the search.

"We will continue the massive investigation until such a time as all the information we now have is eliminated," Husby said.

Husby urged all persons just returning from vacations to check their premises for possible clues to the whereabouts of Miss Murninghan or her abductor.

He said police are interested in areas where "there are excessive barking of dogs." The dogs may have noticed something unusual in a nearby field or woods that may be related to the case, he said.

Husby said Friday that he would not officially approve of or invite any type of clairvoyant into the investigation.

He added, however, that he would not be surprised if someone attempted to bring clairvoyance into the investigation since it has a way of getting into "this type of case."

Wharton at the half-year: promise on the horizon

President Wharton has begun his seventh month as head of MSU. Since the smoke from the strike has settled and summer calm hangs over campus, the time seems ideal to review his six - month fire trial.

Overall, he has administered well. During his novitiate, pressures have been phenomenal. Students were justifiably enraged over the Cambodian invasion. Parents were enraged over student rage. And Michigan legislators, bless their bumbling souls during national crisis, were screaming over tents and bare buttocks on campus.

Wharton steered MSU through turmoil that rained lethal anarchy and legislative repression upon other universities. During the strike, for example, he walked tightropes between warring factions. No particular faction got its every demand because any administrator has but limited options for any one decision.

And during the difficulities, Wharton managed to come up with inchoate programs that perhaps someday will prevent the need for a demonstration or two.

The presidential commission on admissions, for example, stands as a key to opening MSU on a truly equal basis. This pioneer land - grant college could well blaze another trial in fair and broadly based education.

And students now get an informal hearing on major policy decision through the Student Advisory Group - a Wharton innovation. Indeed, it now seems the faculty -- particularly the hindsighted Academic Senate -that needs a liberal prod or two.

We are moving, but there is much left to do. Programs are needed to better reward teaching and take the emphasis from research.

And although the administration serves at the pleasure of trustees. perhaps it could from time to time firmly remind the board that students are real people and are the of U.S. education.

"Tis better to have loved and lost, reasons for the board's existence.

(Perhaps it is unfair to ask anyone to speak effectively to the caprice of trustees. Wharton, however, has shown that he can match trustee waywardness with logic -- even if it frequently doesn't do a helluva lot of

During his months here, Wharton has endured sniping from every quarter. If one believed every charge, he is simultaneously right wing, left wing, establishment patsy and student puppet.

Attacks come from surprising sources (perhaps not surprising). Rep. Phillip O. Pittenger slammed Wharton this month with a few gnarled interpretations of fact.

And John P. McGoff, president of Panax Corp. recently wrote that Wharton was ill-equipped to comment on Southeast Asia. McGoff, head of a news - gathering outfit, failed to report many of Wharton's qualifications, including membership on five national panels on Indochina, including the U.S. State Dept's, advisory panel for East Asia and the Pacific.

Wharton has absorbed the criticism without losing his poise as president. But despite the myriad inputs and criticisms -- including occasional volleys from the State News - he has distilled a course that brought MSU through what could have been an academically, financially and politically crippling half - year.

In an editorial Jan. 21, we criticized a Wharton speech to the Faculty Club and suggested that actions speak louder than words.

Since then, sounds of action have been gratifying.

MSU's physical growth since 1960 has been tremendous. But the buildings are just a skeleton. If MSU can hang onto its sanity for awhile, Dr. Wharton will add flesh in the form of progressive programs that can put us in the absolute forefront

Harry Bentley talks to himself S

Harry Bentley, at 27, is fast approaching the dangerous age of 30. From others I have learned that Harry has kicked aside his former flamboyant manner and in seeming good humor has become an openly introspective intellectual. Not that Harry from what I can remember - was never intellectually inclined during his undergraduate days, but rather his loquacious, ever - soaring wit made others view him as more buffoon than scholar.

had overheard Harry vociferously mumbling to himself - my guess is that it was some sort of forced monologue of inner frustration - at a garden party given in his honor. Harry's "monologue" went something like this:

A friend recently informed me that he

"It may be easy for you to SAY, my dear Nathan, but have you ever FELT that way. Seriously - you always talk about morality, wisdom, professionalism; I frankly doubt that you can remember what it means to actually experience your drives, successes, failures.

"Look, you live in a world of DEFINITIONS of feelings, emotions, passions; I'm attempting to truly feel, express my emotions and feelings without having someone else prescribe the acceptable route I must take. You want to arrange your diurnal cycle so that this is neatly paired with that, so that A reflects B, so that if you ever feel mentally lost you can look at the wall calendar and get your

"I can't stand that type of tommyrot! I can't stand it - don't you see, truth is subjectivity. It's so innocently true. Okay, now I'm raving . . . sure you can run your own life, do what you think is right, but allow me that privilege. And you can't grant me that privilege because by your continual ordering, demanding, requiring, I can't be me. Don't you see it! I know I'm being vague but . . . well . . . try this . . . a guy gives a talk on how smoking is wrong, evil, detrimental to one's health. Someone in the audience gets up and asks if the guy ever smoked. The lecturer responds in the

"There's the fundamental, intolerant mistake. The lecturer has every right to speak of the evils of smoking (though he hasn't experienced it subjectively) AND the audience has every right to believe or disbelieve what the lecturer has to say. It's that simple.

"But now people have to start waving flags to show how patriotic they are, and sure they can wave them if they want to but when they begin waving them in my face, I get a bit angry. Now if he can wave the flag, why can't I wear it or burn it as long as I'm not bothering anybody?

"Now get me - I mean 'not physically bothering anybody.' You feel waving a flag is patriotic; I feel wearing one is patriotic. Your views on the flag or anything else are different than mine? Fine. I'll accept your views if you'll accept mine - and, most of all, let me do what I want if I'm not hurting anyone.

Poe's sly old raven, were he answering Michigan voters today, might well base his reply on the film "Lenore." Citizens might well ask him if they should clasp Lenore Romney to their voting souls.

OUR READERS' MIND

Herbert C. Rudman's letter, which appeared in the State News on July 15, was particularly dismaying to me. It is incredible to me how he could distort the and then accuse that person, ironically, of

I believe that his criticisms of Miss

Jeanne Saddler's column of July 8 were as far off the mark as he stated her ideas were. Specifically, he implies that her disagreement with certain Negro leaders

Her film, in case you haven't seen it, is a slick bubble of air with one central puff: that Lenore should be U.S. senator because she is a woman, a mother, a grandmother and/or all of the above.

It takes nearly a half hour to say all that, but then it should take time to create an illusion of experience when none exists.

Mrs. Romney touches all visual bases in the film. She babbles with old people, students, blacks, blue collar workers . . . everyone gets a chance to identify.

Her platform is simple: "Never before has the voice and understanding of a concerned woman been more needed."

Criticism of Saddler misguided

Femininity seems a shaky peg on which to hang an entire campaign. Women's Liberation movements must take especial objection to Lenore's running on her womanhood.

Nevertheless, it is an entertaining film. The dialog would make excellent Laugh-in material:

The charge that Miss Saddler is a

Critics rap the film because it does not address itself to issues. Not a single problem is distilled, nor a single solution offered. Fred Zimmerman described the plot well in the Wall Street Journal: ". no more substance than a blob of cotton candy."

State Sen. Robert Huber, Lenores opponent in the primary, calls the epi "one of the best breaks I've had in the campaign." He once brought a television a meeting so people could watch the program before he spoke. He would well to spend campaign funds to keep the Lenore says that the film "portrays what is in my heart." It seems a bit conceited to have all that praise for oneself wrapped up in the heart.

She would have done well to direct 1 little brain power toward the camera. Scenes of her flying around Michigan shuffling through important - looking papers do little to enunciate he qualifications.

Motherhood and womanhood qualify he for the Senate no more than fatherhood and manhood qualify Sen. Hart. Once viewers distill sentimentality from substance, they find the film a waste of $50,000 plus televising costs.

I think Mr. Smith has missed the substance of what so many have been saying and trying to do. I do not loathe America; it is the actions of our leaders and some of our mis - guided citizenry which I loathe.

I loathe the attitude which says that money and power are success, that four years of college is education, that technology is science, and that the growth of the GNP is economic well - being.

This attitude results in a society which tries to coerce its members through all the tricks of modern advertising to consume useless luxuries they neither need nor, indeed, want. It leads to military strategies calling for complete destruction of civilian populations, a plan which does indeed bear a slight resemblance to the methods of Hitler and Stalin. It leads to the continued support of such boondoggles as the SST, instead of needed technologies such as pollution and population control. Etc. ad

No, I don't loathe America; but I do loathe stupidity and shortsightedness. Dan Ramey

KANSAS CITY (UPI) - Don Wert's two - run double scored the winning run in a six - run eighth inning, giving the Detroit Tigers a 6-4 victory and a sweep of a doubleheader Sunday over the Kansas City Royals.

The Tigers won the first game, 2-0, when Joe Niekro and Tom Timmerman combined to pitch a three - hitter. The double loss pushed Kansas City's losing streak to six.

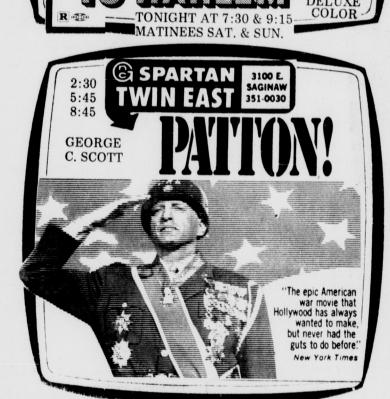

Trailing, 4-0, the Tigers pushed across six runs in the eighth inning with only two hits. Four straight walks by reliever Ted Abernathy scored one run before shortstop Jackie Hernandez

The Tigers have now won five straight games since the all - star break and have won nine of their last eleven games. The doubleheader sweep coupled with Baltimore's split with Chicago, narrowed the Birds' lead to three games with only a two game difference in the all important loss column.

The Tigers will attempt to gain their second straight three game sweep tonight when they meet the Royals in the final game of the series. Les Cain will be on the mound for Detroit while Jim Rooker is expected to get the starting nod from KC manager Jim

In Chicago, Jim Palmer, backed up by a 14-hit attack, beat the Chicago White Sox for the fifth consecutive time and the third this year in pitching the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-2 victory in the first half of a doubleheader. Chicago won the second game by a

Vass, Gallas triumph in best-ball tourney

Long ball hitting Denny Vass stroke lead after the month round but Vass and Gallas got and his 57 - year - old partner Emil Gallas, pooled their talent Saturday to capture the ninth nnual Country Club of Lansing Invitational Tournament.

For Vass, it marked the second championship he has won or shared in less than a month. Three weeks ago, the 21 - year old MSU senior captured the state amateur tournament at Charlevoix. In Saturday's 36 hole championship round, Gallas and Vass defeated the team of Tad Schmidt and John Stolle, 3-2. The losers had taken a one

Rock festivals--experiences in music, living, togetherness

By ROBERT KIPPER

First there was Monterey in '67. That was surpassed by Woodstock in '69. And that was rivaled by Atlanta about two weeks ago.

The emergence of the rock festival as a major social and music event is one of the phenomena of the late sixties and early seventies. Their enormous popularity, with hundreds of thousands experiencing and enduring them and millions imagining them vicariously through news reports, books, records and movies, promises to make them even more widespread in the future.

Indeed, rock festivals, both large and small, carefully prepared and spontaneous, are being planned nationwide. Whereas once radio stations planned dances, today they host rock festivals. As few as two or three groups get together and invariably attract a responsive crowd.

One wonders if in the future rock enthusiasts will settle for anything less than a day long, multi-group "experience." The day of the isolated act inciting enthusiasm seems temporarily to be diminishing.

Part of the attraction of rock festivals, especially the large ones, are the various approaches to contemporary music that are provided. One can go to a rock fest and experience, if the program is as balanced and encompassing as it should be, a dazzling variety of groups and styles and a virtual representation of the folk-rock culture in microcosm.

Another part of the inherent thrill of a rock festival is the rapport between the audience and the performer, a rapport that exists not because of a physical contact but because of an emotional one. It is the shared interest and enthusiasm for music that pushes performers to do their best and audiences to be their most responsive.

But the real beauty of a festival transcends the groups and their performances. It lies in the harmony that exists among those in the crowd. Many go to rock festivals for the experience rather than the music alone. Living together, keep it local and it lasted but one lake and nature trails-is more suited to a and improvising shelter is often what one remembers most about festivals. The setting is usually pastoral countryside where restrictions are minimal and boundaries are flexible.

Locally, festivals have been limited in planning and in success achieved. M.S.U. played host to around 30,000 people and six groups last spring. Efforts were made to afternoon. The festival featured Chicago, the Jefferson Airplane, the Rotary Connection and John Sebastian but it was plagued by poor weather and faulty sound equipment.

A three-day festival will be held Aug. 7-9 at Goose Lake Park, near Jackson. It, too, will be limited in attendance (to around 60,000) but its setting-a rambling, 350-acre recreation area with hills, fields, a rock experience. The sound, planners insist, will be excellent, and the spacious facilities will eliminate the inconvenience of overcrowded conditions.

Promoters at Goose Lake plan another festival for Labor Day and as many as three for next summer.

Thus, the rock festival spirit is alive but limited in the Lansing area.

U.S. space programs still hotly controversia

By DAVE SHORT State News Staff Writer

"I believe this nation should commit itself to achieving the goal, before the decade is out, of landing a man on the moon and returning him safely to earth. No single space project in this period will be more impressive to mankind, or more important for the long - range exploration of space; and none will be so difficult or expensive to accomplish."

Nine years have passed since the late President John F. Kennedy thoroughly committed this country to the space age with his ringing call for lunar exploration. During that time, the U.S. space program has progressed from the limited "man in a can" Project Mercury launches to the precise, highly - successful Apollo flights. The nation's position in the worldwide space race has also changed over the nine year period. The United States has moved from an early 1960s Cold War - type game of "keep up with the Russians" to a status of world domination in the space age. The United States surpassed Russian space technology during the 1966 Gemini launchings and has steadily moved ahead in achievement.

One year ago today, this country accomplished Kennedy's goal when astronaut Neil Armstrong became the first man to walk on the moon. The Apollo 11 moon landing gave America its finest hour in space.

But the Apollo flights haven't always been enveloped in national and world acclaim. The country lost three of its top astronauts in the 1967 Apollo 1 launch fire and almost lost three more in the near . disastrous Apollo 13 moon flight.

There has always been hot controversy over the value of the Apollo space program. But, over the year, the number of space critics have increased.

Money has always been one of the major arguments against the space program. The United States has spent more than $26 billion on its space programs. Many people are against such large spendings.

"Outrage"

"It is an outrage, at a time when there is such crushing poverty in this country, to be wasting money on the Apollo program," Charles Larrowe, professor of economics, said recently.

"If one is realistic about the state of College of Engineering, counters Larrowe's thinking on the money element.

"We'll be way out ahead in the future. You have to remember the money for Apollo was spent on earth," he said.

"The Apollo program has created jobs, put money into the schools, etc."

The Apollo program has created jobs. At its peak in 1966, it involved 300,000 people. But, Larrowe emphasized that the people who need jobs, the ghetto residents, haven't received many in the Apollo project.

The creation of a space center in Huntsville, Ala., in 1960 has increased the town's population from 30,000 to 161,000, and payrolls there hit $400 million a year.

Michigan No. 20

Michigan ranks 20th among the states in total Apollo project allotments. Since 1961, $135 million worth of Apollo prime contracts and subcontracts have been awarded in Michigan. Approximately 100 Michigan companies are involved in making parts for the Apollo program.

The Whirlpool Corp. in Benton Harbor supplies the food for all the Apollo missions. The other major Apollo contract in the state involves the Bendix System Co. in Ann Arbor, which developed the Apollo Lunar Surface Experiment Package, the experiments left on the moon to look for moon quakes and magnetism, etc., and the communications set-up used to such data. Locally, the University is not inw any space projects. But the Instrument Co. in Lansing manufacture small motor prism assembly on the aboard Apollo spacecrafts.

Priorities in national spend important in the economic control As Walter Adams, a colleague of in the Economics Dept. said, economist, I'd say that a society to allocate its limited resources we and in such a way of importance as a priority system. Of course, the William Faunce, chairman d Sociology Dept., supports viewpoints on allocations.

"There should be a re-allocation priorities so that more money is a social problems and less goes town space program. But both programs have higher priorities than a lot defense programs," Faunce said.

Technological gains

To neutralize critics, supporter, Apollo project often cite the techn gains involved in the missions.

"I think that Apollo project of the technological gains involved missions.

"I think that Apollo is the ki astronomical, engineering and god thing we need. Many people view it engineering stunt, however," Willia chairman of the Biochemistry Dept

"Many people have a tendency to value judgments too soon. I see the term value of Apollo as better the sociologist would."

Overall, John F. Kennedy was right landing on the moon was impress mankind, important to long - range exploration, difficult and expensive.

director, and Erling Brauner, chairman of the Art Dept. For the second exhibit, the one presently on display, Phillip Joseph, a graduate student in the Art Dept., helped with the hanging.

Compatibility

The hanging is another exercise in compatibility. Even though the works were selected with the house in mind, they won't go on display unless a mutual agreement between house and work is maintained.

"I didn't hang some beautiful things," she said, "because once they were in the house their moods didn't match. It's better not to show something at all than to show it badly."

But if something "matches" she will try to find a place for it, even to the extent of moving furniture. Presently, most of the living room furniture sits in the center of the room because three large paintings dominate the walls.

Just like the selection, the hanging is fun for her because art "is a beautiful thing to play with,"

Mrs. Wharton said that in the United States great care is taken in the hanging of art. It is not just driving a nail into a wall. Things like distance to the nearest painting, the texture of the wall and viewing distance all have to be considered, she said. "Hanging can't be structured, however," she said. "It must be

Her only rule, besides showing the work to its best advantage, is that faculty art must hang in the semi - public areas of the house. Because of this she has relegated her private collection to the private, family areas. She did this to give the faculty works exposure, which is her aim. The present exhibition, all of it abstract, will be in the house until August, a three - month stay. At least one work from every artist who has exhibited for Cowles House has been shown, she

'Life blood'

Mrs. Wharton hesitates to say very much about what the present group of paintings "means" because, she said, "this is the artist's life blood. I can't comment on it subjectively. "Abstract art can't be talked about and discussed by anyone but the artist," she said. "I don't believe in talking about a painting." She said, however, that it is important for contemporary art to be judged on current principles. And what does the Art Dept. think of the Cowles House Erling Brauner, chairman of the department, complimented Mrs. Wharton on her effort.

"She brought to the whole idea a considerable amount expertise," he said.

Faculty pleased He said the whole faculty is pleased by this "support of department and the arts."

"It's comforting to know," he said, "someone thinks the are important. "Some of the artists said they didn't think their paintings of look so good," he continued.

Dolores Wharton appreciates the art produced at MSU. right now she has a houseful of it. Twenty artists have loaned nearly 50 works to display for three months.
