AAUP raps statement on faculty salary hikes

By DAVE PERSON State News Staff Writer

The MSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) issued a statement Friday challenging a statement issued by the Office of the Provost concerning faculty pay increases.

The statement said that, in the opinion of the AAUP, "both the general public the MSU faculty have been misled by statements issued by the Office of the Provost on July 17, 1970, to the effect that faculty salaries would be increased on the average by 7.8 per cent."

The report went on to say that "on the basis of an admittedly incomplete survey of colleges and departments, it appears that many departments and colleges are to receive increases averaging well below 7.8 per cent."

The statement called for a specific breakdown of salary increases by colleges along with a rationale for the patterns of distribution. The statement said that although MSU salary increases may be the largest in the Big Ten, "the increases do little to move the senior MSU faculty salaries out of the Big Ten cellar." An AAUP spokesman added Sunday that

"if anyone believes that professors (at MSU) are getting rich, they are grossly

Herman L. King, assistant provost, said that no matter who makes the decisions (regarding salary increases) others will disagree.

He said that in the past, the Provost's Office has received charges of inequities in the 12-month salaries as compared to 10-month salaries. He said that the provost also has received complaints that the "upper ranks" were discriminated against.

He added that salary increases were being distributed this year in an attempt to clear up these inequities.

"But if you correct these inequities, somebody will lose" in regard to the increase by percentage, he said.

King said that he can accept criticism of action by the Provost's Office, but when something is done "in good faith," he doesn't think the integrity of the office should be challenged with charges

CAMPUS UNREST

Huber delays report

To protect his report on campus unrest from charges of "political motivation," until after the Aug. 4 primary this month's scheduled release of the report.

Huber, who is seeking the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate against Mrs. Lenore Romney, had planned to release the contents of a state legislature report of college and university disorders on July 21.

Pre-primary release of the study made by a special committee to investigate campus unrest could adversely affect the Huber campaign for the U.S. Senate nomination, Huber said.

Huber also explained that to release the study now would "cast a shadow of political intent" on the report and that the committee had worked too long and too hard to have that happen.

The report, financed with $59,000 in state funds, was compiled by the special eight - member committee of which Huber is chairman. A lengthy staff report detailing findings of the research group was released to the legislature in the spring.

Romney calls mayors for policy talks

WARREN (UPI) - Housing and Urban Development Secretary George Romney has called on the mayors of 39 suburban Detroit communities to meet with him tonight to discuss reports the federal government will try to force communities to move toward quicker integration.

In telegrams sent to the mayors after a meeting Sunday with Warren Mayor Ted Bates, Romney said his department's "programs have been jeopardized by erroneous stories about our policies in the Detroit metropolitan area."

They could covertly press the button on a light - weight transmitter, Pomeroy said, which would register their confusion on a receiver held by the professor.

Stuart Hoening, an electrical engineering professor who helped Pomeroy, said the device, when in production, would be far cheaper than similar devices now in use and would be portable while present systems are fixed.

A communique claimed South Vietnamese forces had killed 10,346 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops, captured 1,582 prisoners and seized 19,609 weapons since March 20 when they began unannounced forays into Cambodia.

South Vietnamese losses over the same period were put at 929 men killed and 4.113 wounded. The South Vietnamese peak strength in Cambodia was 43,000 men in June. U.S. troops withdrew June 30 after two months of search and destroy missions along the border area. But the South Vietnamese remained.

The new incursion by the South Vietnamese is not the result of any new policy. Saigon's forces are in Cambodia indefinitely. Vice President Nguyen Cao Ky said in June that Cambodian leaders had agreed to "let us launch military operations along the border as well as anywhere necessary for our security." Meanwhile, action in South Vietnam tapered off to its lowest level since mid -July after a brief step-up in activity Friday, when more than 100 enemy troops were reported killed in scattered clashes.

U.S. infantrymen reported uncovering a big enemy cache containing more than 50 tons of rice and 10 tons of ammunition late Sunday afternoon less than a mile from the Cambodian border, about 70 miles northwest of Saigon.

Lake Superior, which showed the greatest increase, was up three inches from June. Lakes Michigan and Huron were one inch above last month, but were expected to decline one inch in the coming month.

Lake St. Clair's level dropped one inch in the past month and is expected to drop another two inches by late August. But Lake St. Clair's level still was 32 inches above the all - time low which was recorded in 1934.

The level of Lake Erie, the lake survey said, was one inch above the June figure with a three - inch drop expected in the coming month.

Judicial end to the war: result of Nixon bungling

It is just possible that the Supreme Court of the United States will be recorded by history as the Vietnam peacemaker. This is a most unlikely role for the august body - and one that justices would probably not have.

Traditionally because of constitutional mandates, it has been the legislative and executive branches of the government that have been primarily concerned with the business of war. And traditionally the Supreme Court has tried to avoid ruling on hot issues as long as possible.

There is more than a bit of good sense here. The Supreme Court has no power to enforce its decisions save that power which the people cede to it through respect and tradition. The Court has never forgotten the Marshall - Jackson debacle which ended when President Jackson is reported to have said something like: "the Chief Justice made the ruling - now let him enforce it."

Circumstances are, however, stripping away the Supreme Court's chances for inactive retreat. The nation is plagued with a paralyzed Congress that only lately has been making a few feeble efforts to have some say in the Asian carnage. Following historical precedent, the executive has come to the fore and assumed the dropped reins of government from the Congress. The problem is that while the administration is doing something, it is doing it in such a bumbling and hamhanded way as to make matters

Vacuum

It is into this functional vacuum the Supreme Court has been unwillingly drug. A literal barrage of the high bench in the last couple of years – and the rate of filing appears to be increasing with almost a geometric swiftness. Last week two and, if the court finds against the government in both, the conduct and could be radically altered.

seeking to have the high court the law of the land.

overturn the ruling of a lower court that held that the draft law is unconstitutional in that some Catholics were forced to choose between their beliefs and prison

The importance of this case is obviously not restricted only to Catholics. There are few, if any, religions in America that do not pay at least pay lip service to the exhortation that "thou shalt not kill." If on the basis of Catholic theology McFadden can obtain conscientious objector status, then it is only a short step to granting of this status to members of any religious persuasion if he professes to be antiwar. The sum result would be the abolition of the draft as it now exists. The implications that this could have on this nation's efforts in Southeast Asia are obvious.

Massachusetts case

The second hearing of importance is the now - famous Massachusetts case. The State of Massachusetts has asked the Supreme Court to rule on a state law passed earlier this year that would prohibit Massachusetts citizens from being compelled to serve in legally undeclared wars. In fact, however, the high court is being asked to rule the Vietnam conflict unconstitutional. In April when the statute was passed by the Massachusetts Legislature, observers thought that it would amount to nothing more than a token protest. Now, experts are not so sure of the

The net result is this: the Vietnam war is being assaulted "through channels." The pressure is on the executive and the Congress to end the war now. If they do not speedily end the war, it appears likely that the government may reap a war - inspired cases has come before constitutional crisis of the first

U.S. coalition statement plays into Hanoi's hand

At just about the same time that the black comedy team of Nixon and Thieu were nixing an "imposed coalition," the Viet Cong were stating their willingness to coalesce with almost anyone. Probably, the timing of the announcement was no accident - the VC are old hands at making propagandist hay out of American ineptitude.

While the U.S. - Saigon axis has all but ruled out a coalition with the Communists – it is hard to imagine Communists winning anything in "free elections" where they are outlawed - the Viet Cong has smilingly indicated that they could get along with most anyone, except South Vietnamese President Thieu. This is hardly surprising considering his rabid anti Communist stance.

Maybe the VC are sincere in their statements, though more probably they are yet again playing Jekyll to America's Hyde. At the very least one comment can be made: it is more than a little disheartening to see the United States continually play into the hands of Hanoi's propaganda

The last time they appeared together, one TV critic referred to them as "Mr. and Mrs. Bad Taste." This time they talked about the "Myra Breckinridge" movie. Jerry and Susann agreed that "Myra" should never have been released because it lacked taste.

It was like John Dillinger and Bugsy Siegel ageeing that Al Capone shouldn't have been released because he lacked honesty.

Dustin Hoffman told a magazine that while he was filming "Midnight Cowboy" he suggested an added scene. He said he wanted a black to come into a restaurant and sit next to him. Then he would get up and move and say, "I won't sit next to no black guy."

The director refused. A year later, Hoffman still thinks it should have been done. As realism.

TERRY SMITH

The mistunctional world view

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is part two of a two - part column by Terry Smith.

We must stay in Vietnam long enough to guarantee that that country can survive indefinitely after our departure, as a nonCommunist sovereignty. At stake is our credibility as a guardian of the free world, a role we play because no other non -Communist nation can or will.

The reason why the Soviet Union doesn't get pushy in central Europe is because they BELIEVE that we would not hesitate to use tactical nuclear weapons on any Russian or Warsaw Pact armored column caught rolling toward Rotterdam.

The reason why we didn't invade Cuba in 1962 to get rid of the missiles (and coincidentally put Castro out of business) was because we BELIEVED the Russians had it in them to push the Rubicon button in order to protect their only foothold in the Western Hemisphere.

Now this is impressive, not so much for its impact on the major powers, but most importantly for what the nations under the Soviet and American nuclear umbrella think.

What would have happened to Soviet influence in the closely watching non-nuclear nations if she had permitted a successful American invasion of Cuba in 1962? Precisely the same thing that would happen to American influence if Vietnam goes under - no one will believe that America adheres to her commitments. America's allies would be naked in the face of imperialism and aggression from all quarters; neutrals would have to start worrying about how long their neutrality would be guaranteed.

Big deal, you say, let the nations of the Third World start worrying about their own problems. The shortsightedness of this point of view is that we won't have to LET them start to worry about their own problems; they'll do it without our prodding, once they see that our symbol to the world is no longer the Eagle, but the

So what, you ask. If we don't have our troops and guns and especially our nuclear weapons scattered all over the world, we are telling the Russians that we are indeed peaceloving and dedicated to coexistence,

The Soviets, who understand power and power vacuums much better than they understand Marxism, would be ecstatic without bounds were the United States shown incapable of backing her commitments.

But let's not even talk about this aspect of an American humiliation in Vietnam. Let's talk about the smaller nations which it affects right away, particularly in terms of America's discredited policy of nuclear protection of the free world from Japan and India are good places to start. Both nations have long had a technology capable of building nuclear weapons which have to date not been utilized because the United States has demonstrated that it will fight for the territorial integrity of her friends.

When both nations perceive America to be unwilling or unable to provide for their defense, they would posthaste tool up so that they can provide it themselves. After all, China, whose history of expansionism is particularly gruesome, is but minutes away from the capitals of both nations by

But what about the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty? It would be less than worthless if one of the signatory nations which has the Bomb isn't willing to come to the aid of signatories which don't. That's implicitly the whole point behind the

Yet Japan and India have a great deal to lose in a nuclear war; both are industralized and in positions of potential political power in their respective regions. They would have, in other words, power with responsibility, and probably could be counted on to avoid provocations which might lead to a nuclear exchange.

But then there are other nations who now have the capability of developing a nuclear arsenal, nations in which foreign policy - making is among the least rational endeavors of state. Israel, for example, a nuclear capability and a respons foreign policy, but without a cred American nuclear shield as a last reson case of general Mideast war, would forced to develop the bomb.

And then, of course, so would Eg who would immediately become inquisitive baby with the live hand great What does Egypt have to lose in a nucleochange with Israel? The leaky Ass Dam? The Cairo mosque? A mill camels? But she has everything to gain! lost prestige, moral (?) leadership of Arab world, and Palestine (a radioact wasteland but nevertheless Hebrew . k

Who is going to tell Nassar he can't his Bomb? And who is going to assure some Egyptian pilot hopped up on Thoughts of Al Fatah won't decide incinerate the Zionist dogs singlehander

And who in Israel can be sure it was Egyptian bomb. Maybe it was Iraq's Syria's. Israel would have to strike everywhere and ask questions later. If the was a later, that is. It boggles the mind, there are several other areas of the w besides the Mideast where power rationality are just as bitter enemies as the belligerent nations.

This scenario is, of course, not inevitable product of an American de in Vietnam, but it is assuredly a li likely outcome than a global peace, or e armistice. And we haven't even begun consider what the Soviet Union would on her own if America withdraws into

People who don't believe in getting the bottom of things but instead pressing issues with verbiage and moral trash, demonstrate only two things:

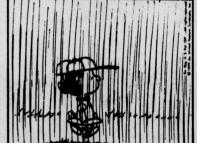

1) that solving the problem at issue is really important to them, and 2) that they are willing to tolerate creation of large numbers of infinite more serious problems, solutions to wh probably aren't particularly important them either. And thus faced with such a disastr inability to cope with reality, these peo stop thinking and start crying, in the be that emotionalism makes things better.

OUR READERS' MIND

Presbyterian article misleading

After reading the article entitled "Presbyterians offer sex code" which appeared in the State News on July 10, it was quite clear to me that the writer of the article must certainly have been unaware of all the facts concerning the proposed sex code. The article, as it stood, was very misleading and has given a number of people many false impressions.

The report presented to the Presbyterian General Assembly in May was drawn up by a subcommittee of the Church and Society Committee. There was strong opposition to the report by eight members of the committee itself. Their objection was based generally upon the fact that although the report seemed to describe the problems involving sex which are present in society today, all of the suggested solutions do not approach the problems from a New Testament Christian point of view. The remaining members of the committee presented the report to the General Assembly where a very small margin of votes sent it to the churches for study.

The Assembly gave no supporting recommendations to the paper as it now stands. If it is discussed at next May's General Assembly, it will be because it is re-presented by someone present.

The concluding paragraph of the State News article made a generalization which I also feel is invalid. It stated that "young clergymen seem to respond favorably to the proposal," but that older Presbyterians reflect the "Generation Gap" by refusing to respond at all to problems involving sex. Judging from my own conversations with Presbyterian clergymen (and those of other denominations for that matter), I am convinced that very few, young or older, would condone the present approach of the Church and Society Committee's report. I am also convinced that no member of the clergy would suggest that the present day problems involving sexuality should be ignored.

I hope that these few comments help to clarify the present status of the report, and that it is now understood by readers that the Presbyterian Church is not condoning unrestricted sexual activity in society.

He said the group's activities during the summer are somewhat limited since they are not allowed to campaign for any candidates before the Aug. 4 primary election.

"That is why we haven't had any previous meetings,' Neuhausen said.

Deborah Ludlow, Port Huron senior and a member of the group, said the members of the organization in the fall may decide to break up into committees to campaign for individual candidates. This has been done in past campaigns, she Neuhausen described the group as "loosely knit," and "not as structured as some other political groups," especially those supporting individual candidates.

He said the membership carried over from spring term is expected to near 120.

Thursday the group planned a fall membership drive which, Neuhausen said, would be centered around registration in September.

He said other activities in the fall, subject to membership approval, may include some canvassing and pamphlet distribution.

'Walk'--soap opera drivel

State News Reviewer

"A Walk in the Spring Rain" is the kind of story one used to find in the McCalls or the Ladies Home Journal: romantic drivel that aims at the tear ducts rather than the sensibilities.

But I doubt if even the handkerchief brigade will accept this story of Libby (Ingrid Bergman), a middle - aged wife with a brat for a daughter and a boor for a husband who finds romance and temporary respite from dullness in the arms of Will (Anthony Quinn) a down - to earth clod she meets in Tennessee.

In "Walk," one finds all the unappreciative husband; the them in this film. selfish daughter; the simple

'Super 12' seek gains for blacks

By JEANNE SADDLER Associate City Editor

For the past five weeks, MSU has been host to the "Super 12."

If you didn't notice their extraordinary powers when you first met them, it was probably because they look very "Clark Kent" normal on the outside.

Well, almost anyway. The Super 12 are black juniors and seniors from colleges all over the South who participated in a five - week seminar in political science sponsored by the Center for Urban Affairs and the Political Science Dept.

The Super 12 are so named because of their unique ambitions and dedication. Their belief in the need for change and revolution within the American system runs deep, and if it is still possible that change can be affected within the system, the Super 12 may supply the manpower. 'The two most important things for black people in America today are re-education and the dissemination of information," Al Green of Southern University, New Orleans, La., said. "I hope to eventually become a political science professor so I can teach and still have time to work in the community, too.'

"I believe that education has to be active as well as passive," Green said. Green runs a political education class in the black community

Virginia Finch of Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., wants to go into public administration and use her skills to "strengthen the community."

Miss Finch participated in the late Martin Luther King's march on Selma, Ala., and several other political activities in the South. But today she looks to Stokely Carmichael and Charles Hamilton as black leaders who represent courage and have brought about significant change.

Alona Riley of Bowie State College, Bowie, Md., admires blacks who "can learn how to fight the system and win, without selling out." "Our biggest problem is getting together," Miss

Riley said, "and one of the tools for getting together can be our art."

Corporation law is Miss Riley's field until "she gets a feel for the system" - then she will retire to become a free lawyer for her people. Miss Riley and another student from Bowie, black schools in the South because of the integration directives, and also the recent crime bill passed in nearby Washington, D.C. "You don't know how hard those people fought that bill," Miss Riley said."Now it will just be a model for cities all over the country.

Tony Prout, expressed concern over the loss of Washington is just one big ghetto, controlled by a committee of bigots." The D.C. crime bill includes such measures as no-knock, search and seizure for drugs and legal detention on suspicion of having committed a misdemeanor. Prout, a sociology major, hopes to eventually work in the administration of an all - black

"The most important thing that can happen in education for black children is for black elementary school teachers to stop warping kids' minds with the white racist education they received," he said. "White instructors need to go through some sort of re-education process on that level, too.

"I don't care what color an instructor is," Prout said, "as long as the student can learn something from him and he can learn from the

Guy Kirkland of Hampton Institute, Hampton, Va., says he will either go to law school or to graduate school to study the politics of African

"Most black organizations are really lacking in their political tactics," Kirkland said. "Black people need three things to be free - political economic and social tactics." The Super 12 will leave campus this week, but some hope to return to MSU for grad school in political science.

Jim Nevels of the Center for Urban Affain coordinated the program.

It was the unanimous decision of the group that the program should continue "forever."
