VD on rise at MSU

By LARRY MONROE

Changing moral values and "free wheeling" sexual attitudes are contributors to increased cases of venereal disease on the MSU campus and in the nation, according to Dr. James S. Fuerig, director of the Olin Health Center.

Dr. Fuerig said cases of venereal disease at MSU are up approximately 33 per cent over last year. However, he said that this increase is consistent with other colleges across the nation and that the problem is universal.

Dr. Fuerig attributes the increase in VD primarily to declining moral values. Human values are such that more sexual relationships are being encouraged with a somewhat free - wheeling attitude, he said.

Very few barriers or inhibitors based on moral or religious concepts exist today, said. He estimated that 100 per cent of the VD cases diagnoses at the health center are acquired through sexual relationships.

The two most common venereal diseases. gonorrhea and syphilis, are transmitted primarily by sexual contact. The existence of syphilis at MSU is nil, Furig said, but he emphasized that health center personnel watch for it, although their concern is with gonorrhea.

The bacterial organism which causes gonorrhea has undergone mutations and modifications which have made it resistant to the basic drug used to treat it.

After World War II penicillin was a miraculous cure for gonorrhea, Feurig said, but because of changes in the organism the drug has lost much of its effectiveness.

There was a time that a single shot of penicillin would cure a case of gonorrhea, but at the present time no single drug is a cure in itself. Treatment now requires that a patient remain under care for weeks or months, he said.

"Another factor which has enhanced the growth of VD in the United States is extensive world travel," Dr. Fuerig said. "This is clearly demonstrated in the military.

"When personnel are assigned to an area which has a high VD rate it is certain that some of them will carry the disease home. Almost all cases of syphilis can be traced to a foreign contact," he said. Untreated syphilis will result in permanent damage to the spinal cord and brain. The individual may become a complete invalid. Early symptoms include the development of a hard ulcerated sore in the genital area, loss of hair and hoarseness of voice, according to Dr. Fuerig.

An individual infected with gonorrhea will experience urinal discomfort and discharge. If the disease is not freated in three to five days the organism will move in retrograde motion, utlimately infecting the prostrate gland and testicles.

The final stage, Dr. Feurig said, is gonorrheal arthritis, a painful swelling of joints. This may occur in both untreated (please turn to page 5)

HOUSE REFORM

Anonymous vote ended

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House voted Monday to permit by-passing of a parliamentary gimmick which has allowed secret voting on many major matters.

It wrote into a congressional reorganization bill a provision for a printed public record of how members vote on amendments considered while the House sits as a committee of the whole.

Much major legislation is approved or beaten that way, by teller votes, with no record votes allowed but with members being counted only by number.

The provision added to the reorganization bill would allow a minimum of 20 members to force a record vote when the House rejects or adopts amendments to

Heretofore, it has been possible to force record votes on amendments adopted but not on defeated amendments - which often are of greater import than those adopted.

The decision to end the anonymous voting was on a voice vote with members not recorded by name for the time being.

A roll - call vote is scheduled before final action on the bill, probably late Tuesday.

The entire bill then will go to the Senate and won't become law before next January if it eventually gets to the White House and is signed by President Nixon.

The successful drive to remove the cloak of secrecy from some major House voting came as the third week of debate got under Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, a peasant's son who became the longest reigning dictator in modern Europe, died Monday at 81.

Salazar, a bachelor, was Portugal's prime minister for 36 years until a head injury and a subsequent brain hemorrhage rendered him comatose in September, 1968. He died without knowing that he was no longer prime minister.

The foreign ministers of West Germany and the Soviet Union settled down Monday to negotiate a treaty to promote better understanding between their countries. West Germany's Walter Scheel, on his first day in Moscow, met twice with Soviet Union's Andrei A.

Gromyko for a total of three hours. They gave no detials of what they discussed.

U.S. Stratofortresses dropped bombs on both sides of the Cambodian border Monday, seeking out in Cambodia base camps the Communists may have set up since the Allied incursion this spring.

Elliot L. Richardson, secretary of health, education and welfare, said in Atlanta Monday that the requirements of school integration, including those involving "the busing of pupils must be judged on educational standards" rather than on the basis of racial balance.

But the secretary said his department will continue to evaluate the racial balance of schools, beyond the implementations of present HEW integration plans.

Blaming the Democratic Congress, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, the Republican Senate leader, said Monday President Nixon may be forced to propose increased taxes in 1971. Democrats insisted Congress is cutting, not raising the Nixon budget.

Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, responding to a Nixon charge of overspending, said Congress has cut the administration budget for last year and this by a total of $8.3 billion and will slice away more.

Democrats on a House fisheries and wildlife subcommittee Monday accused the Nixon administration of needless delay in acting against water pollution. They promised to move ahead with efforts of their own.

Leslie L. Galsgow, asst. secretary of the interior, asked the subcommittee to defer action on two bills because the administration has a study under way on the subject and a bill of its own pending before the House Public Works Committee.

"Invariably we are asked to wait because of some administration study," Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., the subcommittee chairman, said. "But we will proceed expeditiously to present this legislation to the House."

Armed forces justice: a denial of civil rights

There are many reasons why an increasing number of young Americans are repelled by military service. The recent case of Army Capt. Jeffrey MacDonald gives an almost classic illustration of one such Capt. MacDonald is currently under investigation in the murder of his wife and two children - he claims the atrocity was committed by a band of drug - crazed hippies. For some time the Army has been seeking unsuccessfully to obtain a hair sample from MacDonald to compare with evidence found at the scene of the crime. On the advice of his lawyers – and in the absence of a court order - the captain has declined to supply the sample.

This past week in a Gestapo - like move the Army decided to take matters into its own hands. A jeepload of MPs forced a car that contained MacDonald, his two attorneys and an escort officer off the road. They threw one attorney was returned to his barracks later in process is called "the draft." the day, he was minus one hair

In civilian life such a scenario would probably never have taken place – evidence obtained in such a manner could quite likely be thrown out of court. In the military, however, this is not necessarily the case. Indeed, the very fact that officials would pull such a gangbusters move as forcing the car off the road sheds doubt on the validity of the entire proceedings.

This is not the first time that such a thing has happened. American military justice long has been infamous for its denial and mockery of all precepts of justice. The MacDonald case is only one page in a continuing chronicle of injustice.

Clearly it is time for a change. Why must a citizen lose all of his civil and human rights when he goes to "serve his country?" The inequity is especially grievous when one considers that most soldiers were forced to enter service involuntarily.

It is an interesting study of to the ground and the other up semantics to note that in 1970 against the car and spirited involuntary servitude with a MacDonald away. When the captain suspension of civil rights and due

Jondahl: a refreshing contrast

Jondahl, candidate for the Democratic nomination to the 24th Senate District, harbors few illusions about a tough primary campaign.

Along with other candidates, he seeks the nomination to fill the seat of retiring Harold Hungerford. Hungerford's withdrawal leaves the race wide open - no one has an incumbent's edge.

Jondahl is moving cautiously toward Aug. 4. He knows that neither the primary or the election will be a cakewalk for any one candidate.

His approach to the race is rare among 1970 candidates: he uses calm reason. But don't let a low-key approach lull you. His savvy carves to the heart of the issues eschewing bloated promises and long winded dissertations.

Jondahl is young (33), articulate and his insights jar audiences into listening - really

Listen and you will hear him define the system as unresponsive. It may sound like another political pitch until you hear his analysis of unresponsiveness, applied to a cross section of the populace, including elements that "have it made."

Ask him a question. He won't hedge on an answer. Probe him on transportation problems, for example. He won't only define the problem but will begin carving toward a solution: break down statutes that channel gasoline tax into highways . . . use the money for long - range transit programs . . . amend tax laws to permit Spring pollution on him. You won't get a stock answer.

Jondahl frankly admits pessimism on man's depraved drive to destroy environment. But in the concern is anquish and urgency. Imagine 38 Jondahls in the Michigan Senate: 38 Jondahls wouldn't leave massive loopholes in pollution laws. They wouldn't give industry 10 years to cease polluting (remember the wench who gave a molester 10 minutes to stop?).

Listen to Jondahl digress briefly into his love for sailing. Watch him grimace and describe the flotsam filth in Lake Lansing. As you listen to the digression, a question forms. What is a nice minister like Jondahl doing in a brawl for a Senate seat?

The answer arrives from all sides, embedded in each of his answers: " . . . legislation is not enough . . . new alternatives are needed . . . the system is closing . . . civil rights threatened. . .

Absorb the answer and make a mental note to vote for Jondahl. In the pessimism over a bumbling legislature, perhaps if just one senator were there to apply cool reason to the proceedings . . .

Jondahl himself piques curiosity. An ordained minister, he is completely free from the pomposity and sanctity that clerics enjoy wrapping around themselves. Colored shirt, sideburns . . . he could be mistaken for a young corporate executive. As a minister in the United Church of Christ, Jondahl has been an activist, focusing his effort on struggles for racial justice and self determination of minority peoples. He applies Christianity to human problems. Christians haven't done that since the exodus from the catacombs when Constantine made the whole show legal in

Life: a broken pinball machine

There is a world view that holds that life is rather like a broken pinball machine. No matter how many dimes you pump into it, no matter how many points you rack up you never get the promised free game. The premise is that everything is input with no output, that everything is misfunction, and there is no payoff as promised.

The list of life's treacheries is almost endless. You'll spend longer in jail for a joint than for running over somebody with your car. Even though a clear majority of the people favor it, the legislature won't pass an abortion law. Even though it's a "free country" you'd best stay out of the Lake Lansing bars if you've got an improprietous amount of

And there are other less physical burn jobs that the system hands down to plague the unwary. All your life you've been told that you might as well try something because "what have you got to lose?". In fact, "they" go on to say it's rather noble to strive against all odds to try to attain the apex. But horribly and ignobly you wind up losing and getting burned because the people that get to make the decision about you are insulted because you had the unmitigated gall to run in the first place.

It is the college campus that holds one of the ultimate contradictions. America is the land of the independent man - only, you can only do an independent thing in some cloistered place like a campus because out in the regular world the flag decal boys will kick the heck out of you. So you do your thing on the campus, only you can't even be independent there because people will take it personally if you don't do their thing. For example, consider the case of the poor long - hair that didn't support the strike. There are numerous other examples that can be called forth to support this

Real America falls short of ideal

Why such a set of conditions should exist is not easy to answer. Most the - world - is a - pile - of - dung sayers seem to ascribe this state to an inherent attribute of existence. Its almost as if there is a vapor emitted by society that naturally messes the mind and brings down woe.

I see the origins of this inhuman condition as being more subjective in nature. It's not that the system is working against you, but, rather, that it simply is not working for you. Nobody's out to get you - it's just that nobody's out to help you either.

That's a basic fault of our society. We are taught that the system if played properly will always pay off. Life and endeavor are seen as an immutable form of karma administered by trans - human gods - good works are rewarded, purity of heart will get

Such a system would work - if it were administered by cosmic computers, or impartial deities. The fact is, however, that courts and legislatures and boards are made up of people with all their failings. of Micronesia, let alone know where it is. The names of a few of the major islands – Saipan, Turk – bring back hazy recollections of the Pacific campaign in World War II, but little more. To the 100,000 Micronesians, however, the more than 2100 islands spread over thousands of square miles of ocean represent home – and a home that is struggling to find its place in the twentieth century. One of the most pressing problems is to determine a final political solution for the islands. Currently Micronesia is administered by the United States under a 1947 United Nations trusteeship. This de facto colonialism is, however, rapidly outliving whatever utility it had and the future is now in doubt.

The most promising suggestion appears to be the one offered by the United States Dept. of the Interior last week. This proposal would have the Micronesian islands enter into a commonwealth relationship with the United States, probably a la Puerto Rico. In essence, Micronesia would have local political and cultural autonomy with U.S. supervision and protection in the international arena.

The only other alternative, independence, is not even being seriously considered. The lifespan of micro - states - like the Maldave Islands – have generally been short and unpleasant.

We would support the proposed plan if it is, indeed, all it is trumpheted to be. The Micronesian people must be allowed to maintain their culture and find their own way

By BRAD SIMMONS

MSU's Sanford Natural Area, a 35-acre forest reserve located on campus just south of the Red Cedar River between Bogue Street and Hagadorn Road, may be destroyed if protective measures

For more than a century the natural area has served faculty and tudents as a major instructional resource for forestry, botany and biology courses. Now, beer bottles, cans and food wrappers trewn throughout its trails make such study difficult.

"An imminent danger is the foot traffic," reports John Beaman, professor of botany and plant pathology.

"More than 7,000 students live in the neighboring dormitories, not to mention all those in the mass of apartments on the north ide of the river," Beaman said. "This concentration of people has iready made it impossible for certain studies to be effectively arried out in the area."

"We used to do maple syrup research in the Sanford area," Victor Rudolph, professor of forestry, said, "but vandals have orced us to move elsewhere.

The Sanford area has traditionally been a useful one - 1.050 silons of maple syrup have been taken from its trees, and the rea used to have its own sawmill. Certain trails were used by the ross - country track team. Outdoor cooking classes were even Despite protests, 20 acres of the forest were cleared to commodate new developments including the widening of Bogue street and construction of the new residence hall complexes. A Dutch elm epidemic wiped out most of the elms, some of which are still standing. Although sometimes hazardous, dead rees are not always removed since they serve as natural habitats or birds, animals and fungi.

Low fences on the south, east and west borders of the area have ot kept students from using it as a shortcut and sidewalk.

The Union for National Draft Opposition (UNDO) is seeking the ultimate end of U.S. involvement in Indochina by eliminating the conscript army.

Domestically the draft works to the detriment of all who are omically deprived, UNDO contends, and that their antidraft activities are a giant step toward ending involvement in anti American, inhuman and "probably unconstitutional" activities. The national coordinating center for UNDO at Princeton University is currently publishing a pamphlet that will outline antidraft activities in which every citizen, no matter what his relation to the selective service, may participate.

'Infidele'--chilling suspense

State News Reviewer

"La Femme Infidele" is a chilling French suspense film that even Alfred Hitchcock might envy.

Writer - director Claude Chabrol has taken the familiar plot gimmicks of an unfaithful wife and her jealous husband, a murder and an arrest, and created a tense and calmly gruesome film around them. To heighten the grim suspense, he presented the affair, the murder and the subsequent police investigation in an uncluttered and startlingly subdued way.

Like the pure and unpretentious Hitchcock film, the viewer doesn't begin sensing the tension until midfilm and doesn't stop sensing it until the final, shattering frame.

The horror here is in the serenity of the setting, the relative sanity of the characters

Some sports notes and shorts concerning MSU players, coaches and other sports personnel have made the news recently so I thought I'd take one long column to relay them on.

MSU's two most knowledgable sportsmen. Fred Stabley and Nick Vista, will be in Chicago all this week for the annual convention of College Sports Information Directors of America (COSIDA).

Some 200 - 250 sports publicity men from all over the country are expected to be in the Windy City, with wifes and several newspaper men raising the figure to around 300.

Monday all the Big Ten sports info personnel met in the Sheraton Hotel to discuss the upcoming football season and review the conference's achievements of last year. Today, Wednesday and Thursday will be spent in workshops, with COSIDA members exchanging ideas and thoughts from their own publications.

Friday will be the annual banquet with the Football Writers of America also in attendance. Fred Steinmark, the courageous defensive halfback from Texas who had his leg amputated prior to the Cotton Bowl, will be the guest speaker. The week's activities will then be climaxed with the sports PR men attending the college all - stars - Kansas City Chiefs game that night as guests of the Chicago Tribune.

Things are likely to be slow over at the MSU sports info office this week with Stabley and Vista gone, but they may really be hampered by the absence of one of the hardest working members of the info staff, the former Miss Patsy Wallace. The pretty brunette who's been Stabley's right hand girl and personnel secretary for the last two years, will also be gone the whole week on a little two - person convention. She became Mrs. Fred Kohagen Saturday and is currently enjoying her honeymoon in Kalkaska. Student asst. Terry Barnard will be there however, to provide pictures and information of any present or former Spartan athlete or coach. should someone need either of the two.

MSU Baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler is back from Philadelphia where he took part in the Philadelphia Phillies - A's Old Timer's Game Saturday. Litwhiler was one of the heros of the game, as he singled in the fourth inning and eventually scored the game's only run in the Phillies' 1-0 win. The exhibition was only set to go three innings, but a scoreless tie at the end of the third frame forced an extra inning.

Democrats.

Yankee and A's pitcher Bobby Shantz. Robin Roberts, who pitched for the Spartans in 1946-47 hurled the first inning for the Phillies.

Two former MSU football players played instrumental roles in leading the Lansing All Stars to a 25-14 exhibition game win over the Pontiac Firebirds last Saturday.

George Chatlos (1965-67) recovered a fumble and raced 52 yards for a touchdown while Kermit Smith, starting fullback for the Spartans most of last year, scored twice. Robert "Turf" Kauffman, head coach of the varsity lacrosse team in the spring, is back for his second year as head mentor of the All Stars. Last year's team won the Midwest Football League championship. The All Stars will entertain Dayton this Saturday at Everett High School in Lansing.

Dave Leisman, MSU junior, has earned a spot on the Lansing City League all - star team that will face a team from the Saginaw area this Saturday at Municipal Park. Leisman, who prepped at Lansing Waverly, pitches for Petroff Realty in the city league. He currently leads the league in innings pitched (49), strikeouts (69) and in wins (6-0). The team is managed by MSU Asst. Baseball Coach Tom Smith.

Leisman had his troubles last spring, appearing in 11 innings and giving up 12 earned runs. But both Litwhiler and Smith are optimistic that the hard throwing right hander can develop into a top notch pitcher for the Spartans in 1971.

Rick Kreuger, who pitched for MSU last spring and is set to graduate this term, continued his fine performances for the Grand Rapids Sullivans of the United Baseball League. Last week he hurled a three hit shutout over Muskegon. The Sullivans dropped the second half of the twinbill however and are in danger of losing the league championship for the first time in three years.

A recent survey by an Associated Press writer showed MSU football teams have the 11th best won - lost record the past 25 years. Over that span the Spartans have won 158, lost 70 and tied 7 for a .693 mark, only .003 points behind eighth ranked Princeton.

Oklahoma leads the list with 196 wins, 61 losses and 5 ties, a .763 percentage. Following the Sooners are Texas, Mississippi, Penn State, Ohio State, Notre Dame, Army, Princeton Wyoming, Alabama and MSU. Intra - state rival, Michigan ranks 18th on the list with a 145 - 83 7 mark, .636 per cent.
