Final testimony, summations heard in Union trespass case

By DAVE SHORT State News Staff Writer

GRAND RAPIDS - U.S. District Court Judge Noel Fox Tuesday heard final testimony and summations on an injunction that would bar the University from prosecuting 132 people arrested May 19 in the Union.

Fox is slated to make a decision on the injuction, filed on behalf of the 132, early next month.

The 132, most of whom were students,

MITCHELL INTERVIEW

Self-protection cited in recent shootings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Discussing recent off - campus killings by police, Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell said Wednesday no one can deny officers the right of self -

"If somebody has a gun in his hand, it may be necessary for a policeman to protect himself," Mitchell said in an

"We have advocated use of minimum force, but it is not the intention of this department or anybody else to deny law enforcement people the right of self protection.'

Mitchell drew a distinction between the shooting of six students during disturbances on two campuses last May and more recent deaths, most of which he said were a result of "normal police activities." At least three persons have died in mass confrontations with police in the past few weeks. Mitchell said the circumstances could not be compared to those at Jackson State, where two were killed by bullets from police and Mississippi Highway Patrolmen, or at Kent State, where Ohio National Guardsmen fired into a crowd of students including antiwar demonstrators.

Negro men during a racial disturbance in Augusta, Ga., are under investigation by the Justice Dept. A federal grand jury was impaneled to probe the Jackson deaths after state officials refused to cooperate with the FBI.

The two most recent fatal incidents occurred in Houston, Tex., where a black militant was killed in a gunfight with police, and Lawrence, Kan., where 'two youths were shot to death by persons still

"I believe police in most instances were carrying out normal police activities," Mitchell said. "I think you will find out that the individuals confronting police had

In most of the recent shootings, Mitchell said, "there have been very few circumstances that would warrant a federal investigation."

The U.S. attorney in Houston has been asked to look into the shooting there, but Asst. Atty. Gen. Jerris Leonard said, before leaving for Houston on other business, "we

The attorney general said federal officials are still examining possible violations of federal law in the Kent State shootings, but were arrested while attending a Committee to Abolish Racism meeting because they violated a University ordinance by occupying the Union past legal closing

Attorneys for the 132 tried to show Tuesday that the University administration was acting in "bad faith" when it ordered the arrests.

Marc Stickgold, one of three attorneys for the plaintiff, cited several reasons for the "bad faith" contention. He indicated that the administration made the arrests because of desires to "get the students" and stop the meeting rather than to protect the Union.

Stickgold said the arrests were an example of discriminatory and improper prosecution. He said the University was "out to get the students" because 1. no one was ever arrested before for staying overtime in the building; 2. and a well settled practiced of informing student of alternatives before making arrests was "aboslutely junked" in this case.

"The whole normal arrest process was junked; a selective use of law machinery took place. The University trapped them (132 people) into arrest," he said.

Stickgold stressed that certain people not taking part in the meeting were not arrested. He used earlier testimony from Edmin Reuling, asst. director of student activities, to back up his contentions.

Reuling said that he told police not to arrest one student because he had just entered the building and wasn't participating in the meeting.

Reuling also said that he "probably" told students at the meeting that the same procedures of administrative warnings before arrests, used in past demonstrations, would be used again.

Reuling also said that Eldon Nonnamaker, dean of students, and Louis Hekhuis, associate dean of students, told him in rehashing the incident that outside pressures, specifically from the legislature, had been influential in making the arrest decision.

Stickgold indicated that the administration reacted in haste and under political pressure in making its decision. He said that the University ordinance concerning loitering and trespassing was designed to be vague and to allow police to use it to prosecute anyone it wants for anything.

"The court can decide that the 132 did trespass but that the trespass wasn't the real reason for the arrest," he said. "We feel that the University administration acted in bad faith."

The defense questioned Stickgold's contentions. Attorney Leland Carr pointed out that there was a "clear violation of trespassing," which resulted in the arrests.

"Nobody has challenged anything during this case that takes in the state trespass law itself," Carr said.

Carr also indicated that there was no evidence presented proving that the University acted in bad faith.

"Past practice gave to the plaintiff no constitutional indications that they would not be arrested."

Concert turns into riot

CHICAGO (AP) - A free rock concert eries designed by city officials to build camaraderie with youth was canceled Tuesday because of rioting at a rformance Monday in Grant Park in which 135 persons were injured.

The Chicago Park District commissioners oted unanimously to cancel four - pop oncerts scheduled for the park in August nd another program set for September in Soldier Field.

Senate OKs $4.4 billion for education

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate ananimously passed a $4.4 - billion ducation appropriations bill Tuesday and ent it to President Nixon, who considers it too expensive.

Along with it went a suggestion to the white House from Sen. Norris Cotton, N.Y.: Choose something else to veto. A roll call vote of 88 to 0 completed ongressional action on the bill which costs the Nixon budget by $453 million.

Mayor Richard J. Daley and Daniel J. Shannon, park district president, said the three - hour clash between policemen and demonstrators was "premeditated."

Police arrested 165 persons on charges of mob action as a result of the melee. Three youths were wounded by gunfire. Of those injured, 65 were policemen.

Shannon said the "pop" concerts were programmed for the youth because former outdoor concerts traditionally presented symphony music aimed at an older generation.

Shannon said chains, rocks, knives and guns were brought by "those bent on destruction," who pushed away "the good kids who just wanted to communicate with music." He said the battle was planned by persons who wanted to break down the "camaraderie" the Park District established with youths.

The battle started shortly after the concert began at 4 p.m.

A group of youths stormed the stage and demanded the immediate appearance of the featured group, Sly and the Family Stone, which was scheduled to perform at

As more police arrived, more of the crowd began attacking them with bottles, stones and bricks. Officers fired shots on two occasions, but police said it was not determined if the wounded persons were hit by police bullets.

Two police cars were overturned by the crowd. One was set afire. A private auto on Balbo Drive also was burned.

Near darkness, the melee quieted and the youths moved to the downtown area where they smashed storefront windows along State Street and Wabash Avenue. An official of a glass company estimated damage at $35,000.

Residence halls to hire Education appropriation

Student employment in residence halls will be cut back next fall, Lyle Thorburn, residence halls manager, said Tuesday.

Thorburn emphasized that no old employes would be fired. The cutback will be achieved by simply not hiring new students to replace employes who leave for personal reasons.

Thorburn said he could not predict how great the cutback will be, as it will be handled by the individual residence halls on a need basis.

The cutbacks are part of a general tightening of the residence hall budget, primarily caused by a falling occupancy

Also due to the budget tightening, no major alterations will be made in the residence hall system next year, Thorburn said. Maintenance will be limited to necessary minor repairs.

At the July 17 meeting of the board of trustees, Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, told the trustees this curtailing of maintenance operations would be an effective money - saver only for one year. Over longer periods of time,

Doctors refuse new patients

By JEANNE SADDLER Associate Campus Editor

The shortage of doctors has grown more acute in the Lansing area recently, with many area physicians adopting a "no new patients" policy.

Out of 10 general practitioners contacted by the State News recently, four refused to give appointments for various reasons, three said they were not accepting any new patients and three were willing to set up appointments this week.

Most of the doctor's secretaries or nurses say that the doctor is "just too full" or "can't handle any more patients."

"I've been in this area for three years," a nurse at the Ingham County Health Center commented, "and I still haven't found a regular physician."

Officials at the health center and the Ingham County Medical Society will give callers names of physicians who are accepting patients. They also suggested calling doctors who had recently moved to the Lansing area.

Tony Doherty, executive director of the Michigan Health Council, gave several reasons for the current shortage of physicians.

"Seven or eight years ago," Doherty explained, "Wayne and U-M medical schools were having trouble filling up their classes because most young men wanted to go into engineering. That seemed to be very appealing at the time because of the space race."

Because of the drop in interest in medicine, Doherty explained, there was no big push for a third medical school at that time. Officials at U-M and Wayne feared that state funds for medical education would not be increased, but simply divided into three pieces.

Since the Michigan Health Council began concentrating on recruiting programs in high schools and colleges, the number of applicants have increased in the last four or five years.

The Basic Science Examination, formerly required of all physicians who wished to begin practice in Michigan, has also contributed to the shortage, according to Doherty. The exam has recently been abolished.

"We used to receive letters from physicians all over the country saying that they had decided not to come to Michigan because they could go to other states without taking the exam. We now exempt doctors from anywhere in the States from taking it, although doctors from Canada must. Some doctors believe that that should be abolished, too," Doherty said.

Doherty said the exam dealt with general science subjects which the doctors may have taken years beforehand.

Doherty also noted the tendency of some doctors to settle in better climates such as California, and the fact that all Michigan med schools are state supported, with no supplementary private medical schools.

"Michigan is about in the middle of the road as far as the nationwide shortage goes. We're worse off than some states such as New York and Pennsylvania where they have one entering medical student per 15 -18,000 people. Michigan has only one

Nationwide, campaigners spent between $250 and $300 million in 1968. Candidates in Michigan spend an estimated $8 to $10 million in a state election, and spending is likely to increase this year because of inflation.

Contributions to candidates have been ecreasing in recent years. In 1960, 12 per cent of the voters made political ontributions; in 1968, eight per cent. In Michigan well below 10 per cent

State Sen. Sander M. Levin, D-Berkley, a ubernatorial candidate, has introduced a bill to encourage citizens to contribute to the candidate or party of their choice.

The bill would allow a $5 tax credit on the state income tax for a person who contributed money to a candidate or party.

At present, a donor cannot deduct political contributions from federal or state income

A person who did not contribute during the year could still receive the tax credit if he indicated he wished to contribute on his tax return. The Dept. of the Treasury would forward the $5 to the indicated

The bill, which is in the Committee on Taxation and Veterans' Affairs, would become effective Jan. 1, 1971, if passed.

A similar bill was introduced into the state House of Representatives by Rep. Alfred A. Sheridan, D-Taylor. Election laws in Michigan provide ceilings

Each party has clubs whose status is determined by the amount they contribute. Each club gives the member special privileges and increases his influence.

The Republican party has a $300 club whose members receive a special pin and

The Democratic party has a $5 membership fee, a $15 drive to the Capitol, a $100 club and a $500 club. The $500 club, composed of from 15 to 20 members, began this year.

In addition, the Democratic party has about 300 members who contribute $2,000 or more.

In the Democratic party, candidates are left largely to their own resources with little help from the Democratic State

Central Committee. The committee does not give financial help to a candidate before the primary because they do not want to support one candidate who may lose the primary to another Democrat. It would also be a waste

The Western White House announced Tuesday the federal budget deficit reached a higher-than-expected $2.9 billion in the fiscal year that ended June 30.

In making the announcement, Director George P. Shultz of the new Office of Management and Budget said he took heart from the fact that spending actually fell short of earlier estimates. The larger deficit reflected a fall - off in revenues stemming from the economic siowdown, he said.

The year's deficit is about $3 billion.

A Senate - House conference committee Tuesday agreed on an appropriations bill boosting funds for urban renewal, water and sewage treatment plants and veterans medical care far in excess of President Nixon's budget requests.

Exact figures on the total appropriation included in the bill were not immediately available, but aides estimated it would raise the President's recommendation by about $700 million.

Zolton Ferency said recently that if he is elected governor he will establish the office of "ombudsman" at the top level of state government to defend citizens against "bureaucratic ineptitude."

Ferency, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, said the concept of ombudsman or "people's advocate" was recommended by the administrative law committee of the Michigan State Bar several years ago.

"At the present time, there's really no centra!, easily accessible place for a citizen to go when he has a problem or a complaint involving the citizen's relationship with his government," Ferency said.

Ferency said the office of the ombudsman would save the state money because it would allow the governor to fire "the hundreds of governmental apologists and propagandists whose sole function has been to cover up mistakes by highly placed, but inept governmental misfits.'

Ends become tainted as party jolts Wallace

Selfish foreign interests

oppose draft abolition

It has long been maintained especially in the North - that George C. Wallace owns the State of Alabama. Indeed. Wallace himself has done little to discourage the myth of his political solidarity - it has been useful in the past. All, however, is not quiet down on the plantation and has not been for some

It was back in the mid-1960s that a bloc of primarily north Alabama legislators thwarted Wallace's efforts to amend the state constitution to allow him another term as governor. Now in 1970 the little governor has been handed another jolt – this time from Democratic party loyalists.

By a 69 - 28 vote, the newly elected Alabama Democratic Executive Committee - which for the first time includes a few blacks has decreed Democratic presidential electors will be compelled to support the party's national candidates. The result would force Wallace to seek election as president on a third party ticket in his home state. In 1968 Wallace ran and won as a Democrat - this move cuts him off from official use of the party machinery for a new bid at national office.

Although Alabama Dems have taken one step forward, they have taken another directly backward. As part of their let's - keep - George honest scheme, the Executive Committee has decided that from here on it will select the party nominee for the electoral college. Previously, the electors have been nominated by popular vote.

A political party serves democracy only so long as it maintains democracy at the core of its procedures. The appointment of electors by a select committee seems to betray this ideal.

We hope that, in their haste to bind the hands of George C. Wallace, Alabama Democrats will not ignore their commitment to honor the will of the people.

It would be sad for the people of Alabama and the nation if a defeat of George Wallace turned out to be seating ceremony for unrepresentative government by executive committee.

DOCTORS By ARNOLD WERNER, M.D.

Letters may be addressed to Dr. Werner, 309 Linton Hall. Names need not be included unless a personal reply is requested.

My appendix sometimes hurts several hours at a time. It is not an unbearable pain, so I have never asked a doctor about it; but it seems to be happening more frequently in the past few months and I wonder what it means. Should I see a

I am impressed with your conviction that it is your appendix that hurts. I don't want to shock you or anything, but there is quite a bit of stuff rattling around in your abdominal cavity aside from your appendix. There are about 25 feet of intestines, a stomach, liver, spleen, pancreas, bladder, miscellaneous other things, plus ovaries and a uterus if you are a woman. The appendix is a three to four inch skinny remnant of the large intestine is a tube with a closed end. An infected appendix can produce a large variety of symptoms, though characteristically the pain begins around the umbilicus and migrates down toward serving no discernable purpose in man. It is susceptible to becoming infected because it

the lower right hand part of the abdomen. While the likelihood is you are suffering some ill defined "gas pain" it would none the less be wise for you to visit a doctor and have him examine you so your fears could be allayed. If you are a woman, part of the examination the doctor performs should be a pelvic exam including taking a culture for gonorrhea and other bacteria as pelvic infections can cause abdominal pain.

I am a 26-year-old man and have frequently been plagued with the following problem: Everytime I drink three or four beers before having sex with my fiancee, I get a burning sensation in the urethral area of my penis following orgasm. Could you tell me the cause and if it is a serious problem that must be corrected in the near

You have a unique opportunity to make a contribution to medical science. If inclined, you may proceed as follows: Starting with no beers increase your beer intake by one bottle each time before you have intercourse. Note the exact number of beers that causes the burning sensation. You can then try this with different beers and determine a "burn index" for each brand. You might even find the brand that will permit you to drink enough beer to make you impotent before any burning occurs. Then, you will be faced with another decision.

Urethral burning can be caused by gonorrhea. In such a case the burning is severe and there is usually a discharge. Immediate treatment is advised. Other causes of burning can be an overly concentrated urine due to dehydration, or the presence of some unusual substances in the urine. Some men report the desire to urinate following intercourse; this appears related to the presence of semen in the urethra.

Alcohol definitely decreases one's ability to perform sexually (and in most other ways) if taken in excess. This is especially true as one ages (i.e. over 30, alas). One drink may serve to lower inhibitions and make sexual intercourse possible; multiple drinks may serve to avoid intercourse.

Hanoi help limited: Cong must take over

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following news analysis is by William L. Ryan, AP special correspondent.

AP NEWS ANALYSIS

From the sound of what Hanoi and its Viet Cong allies have been saying, the southern guerrillas in Vietnam are being conditioned to accept as inevitable a prospect of years more of hit - and - run warfare.

It would appear, too, that North Vietnam has come to a point where it is obliged to cut back somewhat on its enormously expensive participation. Hanoi stresses the idea that the guerrillas must rely more and more upon themselves, so far as manpower is concerned. Presumably supplies and ammunition would be forthcoming indefinitely by way of the North from Communist sources.

There is a note in recent statements by Hanoi indicating it seeks to notify its southern allies, however reluctantly, that the North Vietnamese well of manpower is not bottomless. The North Vietnamese have sustained frightful casualties over the

In addition, the war in Indochina has taken on a new look since the opening of the new arena in Cambodia. North Vietnam invests a large amount of manpower in Laos. It expends a good deal of it also in maintaining the Ho Chi Minh trail, the supply route to South Vietnam. And now it is attempting to hold a large area of Cambodia which it has overrun since that phase opened this spring. That tends to spread manpower and resources a There has been a curious sort of dialogue going on in the propaganda exchanges between the two allies.

First, Hanoi radio, quoting the North Vietnamese military newspaper, says that "never before has guerrilla warfare held so important a position as it does now," it says, however, that guerrilla warfare must be developed even more extensively and must aim primarily at breaking up the U.S. - Saigon programs of pacification and Vietnamization in the South. It says the has become a "long - range" struggle.

Then the Viet Cong's "Liberation radio" uses almost the identical words. On its own, however, it speaks of determination to "overcome all difficulties" and to struggle on in a spirit of self - reliance, with a "sense of urgency," to frustrate Vietnamization. Intensifying guerilla warfare, it says, would be "the best way for us to repay the immeasurably meritorious service" of the North. This was in the past tense, as if to suggest that the service in the future might not be all that great. Hanoi said that "for more than two year guerrilla warfare has been developing at an accelerated pace in the South." This hing that perhaps the last really big North Vietnamese effort offensively for some time to come was at the time of and up to a few months after the disastrous Tet attempt in 1968.

The Hanoi newspaper went through i litany of "musts" for the souther guerrillas.

"The struggle to oppose the enemy pacification program has become a long. range resolute struggle. Localities must endeavor to strongly set up continua widespread guerrilla warfare.

"Guerrillas must directly take part in developing and consolidating militia and guerrilla units, in maintaining and strengthening leading organs and in closely coordinating three programs of attack: armed, political and troop proselytizing.

'Omnipresent strong guerrilla units constitute not only the central local forces to defeat enemy counterattacks, but also constitute the sharp forces which struggle against the enemy under any circumstances." Hanoi also tells the Viet Cong that "to meet war requirements, guerrilla force must be very numerous."

All this would seem to be saying that from here on, the southern guerrillas must not rely too heavily on North Vietnamese manpower, which now, after years of extremely heavy losses, is spread thin and occupied in a number of places at the same time.

AAUP STATEMENT

Salary increases last in Big Ten

EDITOR'S NOTE: the following statement was released by the MSU chapter of the American Association of University Professors on July 24,

Reporting on a joint meeting of in coming and out - going officers and council member of the Michigan State University chapter of the American Association of University Professors (AAUP), Sigmund Nosow, chapter president, said, today, that in the opinion of the AAUP both the general public and the MSU faculty have been misled by statements issued by the Office of the Provost on July 17, 1970, to the effect that faculty salaries would be increased on the average by 7.8 per cent. On the basis of an admittedly incomplete survey of colleges and departments, it appears that many departments and colleges are to receive increases averaging well below 7.8 per cent, and they have raised some doubts about the accuracy of the reported figure. The AAUP has been unable to obtain the figures, but in light of the widespread dissatisfaction concerning the differences between the stated salary increases and those anticipated by many administrators for their faculties, it would appear that specific breakdown of salary increases by colleges should be made available immediately along with a reationale for the patterns of distribution.

The statement that MSU salary increases this year are the largest in the Big Ten may in fact be true, but the overall position of MSU faculty salaries fell further behind most Big Ten schools last year with an "average" increase of 5.4 per cent, inadequate even to meet the rising cost of living. The increases this year still do little to move the senior MSU faculty salaries out of the Big Ten cellar.

The AAUP regrets that the Board of Trustees has seen fit to tie faculty increases to a rise in student fees. Faculty salaries constitute an integral part of the operating budget, no less essential than are coal, janitorial services, etc., and the responsibility for fee increases should be properly placed at the doorstep of the legislature which failed to provide an adequate operating budget for MSU. The AAUP further regrets that there undoubtedly will be reduction in educational opportunities for many young people who may not be able to pursue their education at MSU as a result of fee

OUR READERS' MIND

Why do Christians shoot people?

To the Editor:

One day - a Monday in May or June or maybe even April, I don't know when exactly as my psychic scars have no precise date embossed on them - I became obsessed with "turning the other cheek." How important was the doctrine of turning the other cheek to various sorts of churches? Given a telephone, I turn into a Lyndon Johnson type ogre and I was soon busily telephoning ministers of assorted Christian type denominations to find out the latest about turning the other cheek. What I found out is that Monday is a day of rest for many beleaguered pastors. Those others who have another day of rest (or perhaps no day of rest) were rather noncommittal. I found one fellow believing that you should turn the other cheek, but believing also that he could not push the idea in his congregation.

Finally, I had the brilliant idea of calling the "Campus Crusade for Christ." The young man answering had, in every way, the equal of my gift in gab. I broached the turning the other cheek topic. He countered with concern over the salvation of my soul. I refused to budge from turning the other cheek. He was equally adamant on saving my soul.

We thrust and parried and it became almost a religious experience as I sought to protect my soul from his greediness for souls. I looked out my living room window for an eternity as we talked, experiencing the cyclical everness of the sunlight upon the roof of the next building and greening bushes and grass, the shafts of shadow and changing angles of the sun, and I wrestled verbally with this young man for possession of my soul. It was still an even match but I was tiring. I became desperate.

"But why do Christians shoot other people?" I wailed.

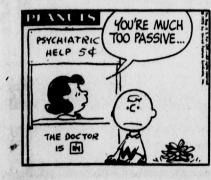

"What? REAL Christians do not shoot other people!" he returned.

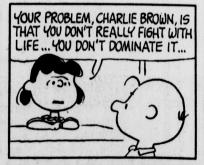

This was volleyed back and forth and wearied to its death. Finally we ended the conversation which had degenerated into his still reaching out for my soul and my continued echoing of "Why do Christians shoot people?"

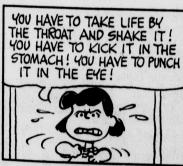

It was done. I was free, in possession of my soul, praising God for my escape, for freedom and for the sun.

By that afternoon I had completely forgotten the morning's conversation. turned on the radio and awful, sickening irony of my question, "Why do Christians shoot other people?" surged through me # I heard, and could not believe, that an American city was closed and barricaded. Schmidt is not so much worried about what effect an abolition of conscription would have on the go proposition.

German armed forces so much as he is concerned with what effect it will have on the future of Germany's American protection.

One thing is clear: Defense Minister Schmidt is clearly appalled at the thought of Germany's having to take on more of its own defense. After all, it was because the United States' protection that the West German people could concentrate their efforts on what has become an "economic miracle."

The people of the United States are having too hard a time getting rid of the present unjust draft system to need any harassment from truly outside agitators. One of the last reasons in the world why the U.S. should keep the draft is for the benefit of the military budget of Germany.

All we can suggest is that if Schmidt is worried about Germany's military future, perhaps he would do well to persuade his local legislators to loosen the purse strings. Military defense is, after all, a pay - as - you -

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cities from New York to Atlanta were shrouded in an annoying haze Tuesday as the eastern seaboard experienced one of its more visible, but not yet dangerous, sieges of air pollution.

The Weather Bureau at mid - afternoon said atmospheric conditions in a seven - state area bounded by Philadelphia, Atlanta and Chattanooga could cause potentially serious air

Only Philadelphia had contamination levels approaching the point for emergency restrictions on autos, electric power plants and factories.

The cause was a stable high pressure mass extending from the Gulf of Mexico to New England.Little general relief was predicted before Thursday from high temperatures, oppressive humidity and the haze.

A virtual calm plus varying degrees of atmospheric inversion prevented the usual mixing and cleansing of air, said Darryl Tyler, chief of the emergency operation center of the National Air Pollution Control Administration.

An inversion occurs when a layer of cool air acts as a lid to prevent the escape of warm air to heights where it can be

Tyler said pollution in no city had reached the level classified as an imminent hazard to health.

"But there will be people suffering," Tyler said.

He mentioned eye irritation from the smog, sinus aggravation and worsening of chronic lung ailments.

There's a scene in "Paint Your Wagon" in which a preacher arrives in a lawless town and, stunned, prays to the Lord to forgive the people. His prayer is perhaps the best advice I can give if you insist on seeing this film: "Close thine eyes and hold thy Without sight or smell you might be able to endure this bustling, brawling and mindless musical. Most of the songs are splendid so at least your sense of hearing won't be assaulted, although your sensibilities continually will be.

"Paint Your Wagon" is the story of two "pardners," Lee Marvin and Clint Eastwood, who share food, shelter, a claim and a woman (Jean Seberg) in California during the gold rush days. Their life together as a happy triple goes smoothly as long as

as the Western center of gambling, drinking and whoring. Respectability arrives But, with the arrival of churchgoing people and their aura of respectability, Seberg has misgivings and Marvin decides it's time geared for the family trade. It is also a dull one and little more than a flimsy excuse for killing time between songs and filling the all - too - wide screen with expensive sets and gorgeous scenery. (Do open your eyes from time to time to savor the view, which, when Marvin, Eastwood and Miss Seberg get out of the way, is quite breathtaking.)

The love triangle is never dealt with intelligently or imaginatively. The three approach it with a smugness that becomes insulting. The sex involved, vital to the story, is merely referred to with puritanical allusion and adolescent innuendo.

"Paint Your Wagon" wants to be spirited and ribald but it compromises for the family trade. What might have been a mildly diverting adult musical is instead a toneless work that confuses the kiddies and bores the adults.

The acting, by Marvin, on one end of the acting spectrum, and

Expansive void

Marvin seems to have approached the wide screen as an expansive void that he, alone, must fill with a larger - than - life portrayal. Thus, he delivers the most idiotic, high - pitched performance of his career.

As Ben, a bearded prospector, Marvin tries to outdo his Oscar. winning role as Kid Shelleen in "Cat Ballou" and ends up surpassing only its energy while desecrating our fond memories of its inspiration. His Ben is a swaggering, obnoxious sideshow of exaggerated emotions and unfunny flamboyance. Eastwood and Miss Seberg, on the other hand, are so placid they seem transparent. The wide screen demands life · size performances from actors. Anything less reduces them to just another scene - filling prop that the eyes and the mind pass over Being upstaged by a tree or a cabin is no small feat but

Eastwood, an actor afraid of emotion, and Miss Seberg, an actres seemingly incapable of registering genuine emotion, allow it to happen with the unawareness of flash - in - the - pan amateurs.

'Camelot' director

The film was directed by Joshua Logan. He, you may remember, is the man who put the spirit of "Camelot" to sleep on the screen but compensated with dazzling surface beauty, spirited showcasing of its music and glowing presentation of its most luminous asset: Vanessa Redgrave.

But with "Paint Your Wagon" spirit has always been missing; the show was slumbering long before the cameras began to roll. Without stars with the magnetism of Miss Redgrave or at least the attractiveness of Richard Harris or Franco Nero (the other "Camelot" stars) to give it animation and lacking a spirited story to give it built - in appeal, "Paint Your Wagon" emerges as a fiasco and an expected one.

Destined to be a spectacular dud, it became one and not even beautiful camerawork, fine music and fancy trappings can make one grateful for its arrival.

'Dialogue' projects begun

By JEANNE SADDLER Associate Campus Editor

Seventeen students participating in Dialogue '70, a student research project in Los Angeles, Calif., have begun their work with several urban social agencies there.

The students, 16 from MSU and one from the University of Michigan traveled to the coast with Clyde Morris, professor of communications, on his second summer Dialogue program. Last year, Morris's group traveled throughout the Midwest talking with middle - aged citizens, attempting to bridge the generation gap.

This year's project is called "A Listening and Learning Project with Social Problems in Urban Areas." The students hope their work with social agencies in Los Angeles will enable them to remedy problems some of Michigan's expanding cities may face in the future.

Morris estimates that the group has been in contact with at least 150 individuals and organizations in the past four weeks. Karol Kumata, the U-M student, and Marjorie Warshawsky, Ishpeming sophomore, are working at the Longbeach Free Clinic.

The clinic deals with the medical and psychiatric problems of approximately 150 patients daily. Miss Kumata and Miss Warshawsky volunteered to process patient records.

Several students as well as Morris are working with agencies related to the problems of criminal justice, juvenile delinquency

Gary Bissell, Haslett senior; Jack Zindel, East Lansing senior; Gregory Johnson, Lansing junior; and Tom Milkovich, Maple Heights, Ohio, freshman, are interviewing parole officers and personnel in Orange County to make a study of juvenile delinquency. Three others, studying the problem of teen drug users, are working with police and county health officials.

Susan Rose, Oak Park sophomore, and Reva Grooms, Fenton senior, are involved with the Orange County of Criminal Justice, studying their court, policing and detention systems.

In the area of social relations, Becky Brenneman, Muncie, Ind., sophomore, is studying the treatment of individuals when they are referred to public agencies by a certain Help - Line agency.

Other students are studying female juvenile delinquency and the problems of welfare and the elderly.

For Steve Piro and Jesse Williams, there won't be a 1970 football season at Michigan State.

Oh they'll both be out for most of the practice sessions and they'll be two of the Spartans' strongest rooters each Saturday. But to share in the happiness and satisfaction after each win, or the agony and frustration after each loss, that's something they'll have to leave to their teammates, this year anyway.

Both men are the unfortunate victims of knee injuries, that

National Football League owners and players continued their "who's going to yield" game on the fifth straight day of bargaining Tuesday to work out a new contract. The chief point of contention remained an $8 million additional contribution from the owners to the players' pension fund.

Morning discussion were held separately by subcommittees which included player and owner representatives, but a scheduled afternoon joint session was postponed twice to a 7 p.m. (EDT) starting time.

Guessers could only wonder whether it meant the negotiators were somewhere near agreement or deadlocked more tightly.

The new contract under study contained a large number of items — a score or more — some of them called tricky, but it was agreed the main obstacle to settlement was the pension plan.

dreaded occurrence that was suppose to be a thing of the past when artificial grass was surfaced in Spartan Stadium. But last spring the two Spartan backs underwent similar operations only a week apart.

It's been three months since then, and Piro and Williams are now walking normally and working out each day to strengthen their knees. Though their immediate future is bleak, both men have maintained good attitudes despite their injuries.

MSU Equipment manager Ken Early has made sure the pair doesn't lose any of the football atmosphere this summer by putting the two to work painting the locker rooms in Spartan Stadium. They've been at it for a month now and will probably need another two or three weeks to finish the job. It's certainly a worthwhile project as the rooms (dressing quarters for the freshman footballers and home and visiting soccer, track and cross country teams) have never been painted before.

Piro's story is one filled with hard luck. He had been counted on to make a strong run for the starting quarterback spot this fall, but a sharp cut on an end around run this spring, put him back in the hospital and another cast on his leg. The ironic thing about the mishap was that it was Piro's first day of practice since the previous season, when he suffered the same type of injury in the MSU - Purdue game.

"Right now my knee is just a big question mark," Piro said last week while at work. "Duffy (MSU Head Football Coach Duffy Daugherty) has already told me that they'll red shirt me next year in hopes that the knee is all right for the 1971 season.

"I'll be able to work out on it this fall, but can't take part in any contact work. The coaches have said that I'll probably either help out with the scouting team or the freshman squad."

Long struggle for Piro

It's been a long struggle for the Iowa City junior, ever since he had his first knee mishap back in 1968 while a senior in high school. It almost cost him a scholarship and a chance to play at MSU.

"I was playing defense the second game of the season," Piro said, "and was in the process of tackling the runner. Somebody came up from behind me and hit the back of my knee, causing it to snap.

"I had received several offers from Big Ten schools and from Big Eight coaches, but after they saw that knee injury, a lot of them never came around again. Actually it was my basketball that may have won me a football scholarship. I recovered from the operation quickly and played basketball that winter so the MSU coaches figured that the knee must be OK."

Piro almost enrolled at the University of Iowa where his dad was an assistant coach from 1952 - 1965 under Forest Evashevski and later Jerry Burns. But the Hawkeyes were experiencing some difficult times then (which have since increased) so Piro decided on MSU.

Williams also almost decided on another school — Southern California. He and high school teammate Gail Clark were all set to become part of the Trojans' freshman squad two years ago, but changed their mind at the last minute.

Stick with Gail

"When we were in high school, Gail and I agreed we would attend the same school together," Williams said, setting down his paint brush next to Piro's. "We had signed letters of intent to go to Southern Cal and were just waiting to make it official when we decided MSU would be a better choice. Actually it was more Gail's idea than mine, as I had kinda looked forward to going to California.

"I wented to go to some school where I know I could play hall."

"I wanted to go to some school where I knew I could play ball for them and be a starter," the Bellefontaine, Ohio native said. "I knew it would be tough at Southern Cal as they always have exceptional runners there and have a lot of junior college transfers. So when Gail suggested MSU, I agreed."

Williams had suffered only one major injury in his career before his accident last spring.

"I had a sprained ankle my sophomore year and missed the game which decided the league championship," he said. "We won though 12-0. The guys said afterwards their slogan was 'Win it for the Gimper.' After that I stayed healthy."

Williams clearly remembers the play which will cost him the 1970 season.

"I was going around end and got hit by a couple of players," the two - time prep all - America said. "As I was going down one of the Halliday's helmet hit me in the knee and then fell on it. I can still see that helmet coming at me."

Williams spoke with a grin, but you could tell that deep down his slender 6-1, 185 pound frame it hurt to know that he wouldn't see any action for the Spartans this fall. For if Piro's injury was damaging, Williams' injury was crippling to MSU title hopes this season. The Spartans seem to have found two able replacements in George Mihaiu and Mike Rasmussen to fill the quarterbacking chores, but other than Henry Mathews, nobody looked real strong at the running back spots during the spring practices.

For the time being, Piro and Williams will have to play the waiting game and make the best of their situations. But don't think both men haven't been looking at the 1971 MSU schedule—in between their painting hours of course.

million figure) to $29.88 million University officials, when pressed, have attributed the MSU would have netted only higher rates for graduate and $428,861.50 less if an overall non - resident students to $1 per credit hour increase had "political considerations."

It is fairly understandable: nearly two - thirds of the budget This is less than the $500,000 comes from legislative trustees set aside for financial aid to offset the tuition appropriations. State legislators and the trustees - are elected And it is less than half the by the people of Michigan and $1,149,504 which the University are primarily concerned with

Michigan needs. And even on a strictly group for resident undergraduates financial basis, the reasoning goes, why shouldn't non residents and graduates pay The total operating budget for more? Michigan residents support the University through taxes, after all, and graduate increases is not an amount to be Huff pointed out at the July 17 shrugged off, especially if the board meeting) are substantially more expensive to maintain than

Such arguments have merit, but they fail to consider several questions. How significant, for example, is the "tax support" of a student who lives in Michigan only long enough to establish the necessary six - month residency requirement before he registers?

More importantly, the arguments fail to consider that. due to the substantially smaller numbers of out - of - state and graduate students, fees must be raised many times the amount paid by resident undergraduates to obtain the same income per

Appealing arguments

Still, the arguments are appealing to many, and political considerations cause higher fee scales for these student minority groups, particularly the out - of programs (as Trustee Warren stater (who must also meet far requirements).

The situation is not limited to MSU. Indeed, even the $33 per credit hour figure (or roughly $1,485 per year) merely places the University in the center of the Big Ten non - resident tuition rates, above Iowa ($1,250 per year) and Minnesota ($1,263 per year) but well below Ohio State ($1,680), Wisconsin ($1,798) and the University of Michigan ($1,800). Private schools generally avoid the disparity, but their fees are uniformly high rather than uniformly low.

Since the out - of - state tuition situation is nationwide, solutions might logically be expected on a national basis, through greater federal support for state institutions. However, this does not appear likely in the near future.

The University currently receives approximately $27 million in federal funds, or roughly one - half the state appropriation. Most of this is specifically earmarked for research projects, extension more rigorous entrance services and the Experimental Station, however.

Major share

The federal funds provide a major share of the University's $41 million research activities but add little to the general operating fund. The $385,000 annual allotment from the land grant Morrill Act is the major federal contribution there.

Another proposal is for states to establish revenue - sharing educational plans, through which, for example, Ohio would pay Michigan a set amount for each Ohio student in a Michigan university.

This plan could conceivably work well between states which receive nearly equal numbers of students from each other. Other states which sent about as many students to Michigan as they received from Michigan in fall. 1968, included North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Nevada, Alaska and most of the southern states. None of those, however, were exact matches. And states which send more students than they receive will be reluctant to lose money which might have gone towards improving their own educational parties. The Democratic party has five scheduled dinners which will cost up to $40 a couple. The Republican party has 25 $100 a plate dinners scheduled for May and June.

Candidates in the Republican party receive help from the Republican State Finance Committee. The committee's contributions comprise from 50 to 60 per cent of a campaign's funds for gubernatorial and U.S. senator candidates.

According to Jack I. Slater Jr., executive director, this is the first stage in a new program designed to coordinate campaign financing from a centralized

Doherty said this may be because there are several privately supported medical schools in the East. The state average for medical doctors is one for every 973 people, according to Doherty. In separate parts of the state the breakdown is: Upper Peninsula, 1/1344; north - central 1/925; west - central, 1/1042; east - central, 1/1323; south - west, 1/1109; and Detroit 1/846. Including osteopaths, the ratios of physicians to citizens around

The Michigan Health Council has a two - fold plan to remedy the shortage which concentrates on the state's medical schools and hospitals.

"We'd like to up the number of students graduated from all three schools to 500 - 600 per year," he said. "We'd also like to shorten the length of time the student spends in medical

Approximately 300 - 350 students graduate yearly now.

Doherty said they would like to reduce the time of graduation from high school until graduation from medical school to six

"By doing away with unnecessary, time - consuming subjects many students have had in high school, and by creating a combined intern - residency program, we could cut the time to when he actually starts practicing to 6-8 years instead of 10-12,'

"The education of a doctor is a life - time thing anyway," Doherty said, "if it's not, he's no good anyway."

The other approach involves attracting more young doctors to do their internship in Michigan. Doherty said the Michigan Health Council has started a program to attract more interns to Michigan. Out of 600 openings, Michigan only trains 350 annually.

"We also want to encourage the legislature to provide funds to hospitals which train interns," he said. Doherty said it is hard for hospitals to expand their programs because it ups the costs of services for their patients, who are already complaining.

$4.4 billion OKed

Republican administration and the Democratic Congress seemed close behind, as House - Senate negotiators agreed to a $541 million budget increase in an $18 billion bill providing funds for housing, urban renewal and an assortment of other agencies.

Nixon on July 18 cited the education money bill as an example of "a persistent and growing tendency on Capitol Hill to approve increases in expenditures without providing the revenue to pay the costs."

But Cotton told the Senate "I hope and believe that the President will not veto this . . "I just think that . . . he will not choose the educational funds for veto when these other appropriations are coming on its heels for much less important purposes," he said.

Despite the Nixon complaint about th education bill, there was no attempt on th Senate floor to block the appropriation Republican Leader High Scott said he assume Nixon would either refuse to spend all th money, or would make reductions elsewhere i the budget to balance the increase.

The appropriations bill includes Hous provisions designed to bar the use of feder: funds to force school closing, the busing ( students or pupil transfer over parental protes 'solely to achieve racial balance.'

The administration said those provisions woul not impede school desegregation efforts. Bu Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R. N.Y., called them "th vestigial remains of separate but equal sogregated education.
