Revolutionary sock hop to net reds some 'green'

Last Tuesday night's East Lansing City Council meeting was the scene of a remarkable and concrete demonstration of grass roots revolution and of working through the system to further the Cause. Members of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) asked for and got permission to hold a fund raising dance.

While on the surface the idea of a radical sock hop may seem about as probable as Chairman Mao sitting in on a Pengaton planning session, there is wisdom behind this new wrinkle in revolution. SDS has found that they must address the students of this community on a level that they can relate to – and, by the way, make a little green (which goes good with

According to impeachable State News sources the proposed program will offer something for every musical inclination. The evening will begin with Freddy and his Firebomb Four doing those old favorites the Radical Rag and the Bourgeois Bop. Later in the night there will be collective dancing competitions in such areas as the Mao Mash, the Trotsky Trot, the Stalinist Stomp and the Castroypso. The highlight of the evening, however, will be the beginning of Rudi "Crazylegs" Glick's "I'm gonna twist until the U.S. aggressor pigs get out of Indochina and the Red Revolution comes" marathon dance.

The local radical caucus, continued the State News source, has assured all its operatives that the Socialist Shimmy will be non - violent. This commentary was deemed necessary in light of the ill-fated Hogs Ear, Ky., Lenin Memorial Shake-In in which the organizer, Mervin "The Shakey" Melville, was bugalooed over more than 90 per cent of his body.

Nixon 'slip' irresponsible press is forgiving President Nixon for his incredible remarks about Charles Manson. The President, they are saying, just made a mistake, a simple slip of the tongue that could have been made by anyone.

But the President of the United States is not just anyone - and his slip could possibly wrongly cost a man his life. Nixon is supposed to know better - we elected him because he was supposed to be able to keep his cool. He is a lawyer and quite a good one it is said - so he ought to know all about prejudicing a jury.

The greatest irony is that California authorities had taken extra precautions to maintain the jury's neutrality. How were they to know that they would be assailed from a most unexpected corner? One can scarcely fault Manson for showing the newspaper headlines to the jury. The President's actions only serve to shore up his conviction that he has already been doomed by society.

There is a conclusion that is rapidly becoming inescapable: the Nixon administration is flatly

The greater part of this nation's irresponsible. Vice President Agnew's flamboyant rhetoric has already been causally linked to social unrest and violence. Now this nation's foremost proponent of law and order has struck a direct blow against his own

> We will probably never know for sure if Manson is guilty for, in the manner of a ancient emperor, the President has turned "thumbs down" on him. If Manson is found guilty by this jury or a subsequent one, many people will blame Nixon. If he is found innocent, others will blame legal technicalities and Nixon for it. As appears to be the administration's standing rule, Nixon has again done his best not to "bring us together."

We prefer to believe that the President made a mistake – better a bumbler than an autocratic Machiavelli. Now if he can just manage to make another "mistake" over the Red Telephone then all our problems will be over.

Until that day and for so long as this nation shall endure we feel that Superior Court Judge Charles Older has a clear legal and moral obligation to declare a mistrial for Manson.

Lawrence: Kansas bleeds again

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lawrence, Kan., would seem to be the least likely place for terror and death. It is a university town situated in the heartland of America. Now it is wracked by violence, and its story may be the story of the tensions besetting much of the United States. Ken Hartnett of the AP Special Assignments Team visited Lawrence for an in-depth report. The following article is part one of a two - part series on his

"Two years ago," said a raw-boned young Kansan - his long brown hair fastened in a pony tail - this town was really beautiful. It was mellow. There were

"If your thing was smoking dope on the street, you could do it and no one would bother you.'

"Our philosophy has been," said City Manager Buford M. Watson Jr., "that the least enforcement is the best enforcement."

Now the atmosphere of live and let live is seriously threatened in Lawrence - this once serene university town of 45,000 tucked away in the lush farmlands of northeastern Kansas. The long, dry summer has brought terror and violent death.

Said one radical: "A little bit of America has come to Lawrence."

Here, on a small scale, are all the angers and agonies of the larger society. Though smaller in size than the problems that grip a Chicago or a New York, those wracking Lawrence are no less tragic.

Now the talk inside the modernized storefronts of the flat-topped, two - story downtown buildings isn't so much about the dry spell that has left lawns more brown than green this summer.

In Lawrence these days they're talking about guns - the guns in the hands of the angry young blacks, the guns in the hands of the police, the guns in the hands of would-be night riders and young white

And they're wondering whether peace will ever come again.

"This has been said before, but we've got some difficult days ahead," said one city official. "I've just got my fingers crossed." Blacks in Lawrence for more than a century had been outwardly respectful, silent and mostly poor. Now many are not only speaking out, they are quoting Huey P. Newton, Black Panther leader.

Radical whites once were interested mostly in the marijuana which grows wild in the Kansas countryside. Now they are ridiculing and at times openly attacking the stable and sober Kansas society.

Now people are remembering that the land of Eisenhower and Amelia Earhart and the Wizard of Oz was once known to the nation as "bloody Kansas," before the outbreak of the Civil War.

Since July 16, two persons - one a 19-year-old black militant; the other, a white University of Kansas student from the exclusive Kansas City suburb of Leawood - have been killed by gunfire.

At least three others, including a police lieutenant, have been wounded.

Snipers and arsonists have been active. Arsonists tossed a fire bomb at a judge's home and snipers opened up with rifles on four white men standing outside the courthouse, including Dolph Simons Jr., publisher of The Lawrence Daily Journal -World. All four escaped injury.

The violence, unsettling enough in itself, is even more unnerving because it has broken loose outside of any set of articulated political demands - either negotiable or otherwise.

Nothing is on the bargaining table. "It seems to me that it's just violence for violence's sake," said County Attorney indeed. "I've got four children and I don't like killing," said a downtown merchant. "But if it's going to take some killing to get the job done, then I say let's get on with it."

As small as Lawrence is, its problems are as stubborn, if far more solvable, as those in larger communities.

Lawrence's 4,500 blacks represent 10 per cent of the population. In recent years they have become vocal about the lack of job opportunity - only one black holds a white collar job in City Hall, only 11 of 450 professional school personnel are black - poor housing, and bad treatment at the hands of the police.

"This is the most racist town I've ever been in," said Rod Bush, a black graduate student in psychology at the University of Kansas.

It is an indictment that many whites in Lawrence find harshly unfair.

"Is this town racist?" white middle aged Kansan Ed Down pondered aloud, "I would say that like anywhere else there are both kinds. But remember this is still free state antislavery country burned down by Quantrill's raiders during the Civil War."

Said black Topeka lawyer Charles Scott: "It's the kind of racism that expresses itself in words like, "I knew Jim all his life and I even paid for part of his burial." They perhaps don't know the meaning of

The coroner's inquest was not even a whitewash, sneered Leonard Harrison, the community's leading black militant. "It was a more like a Klanwash," Now the blacks, who contend Dowdell never fired at the policeman, are planning their own informal inquest.

Dan Young, a Rockefeller Republican vilified on the far left as a racist and attacked on the far right for being too soft on blacks and white dissenters.

So far, the normal political processes have brought no solution.

"We've got a group of guys here," said Publisher Simons, referring to the close knit Lawrence establishment. "Once they get behind something, usually they can get something done."

But, so far, the white leaders have been

Insane war games--a dead end

As a young boy, he often played at war. It was an easily familiar game to play, made so by television and movies and grade-school history lessons of founding fathers battling the British and of colonists carving homes for themselves out of wilderness and Indian bodies.

He never really remembered just when he learned the game. Perhaps it started too early for memory. When he was three, his parents bought him a cowboy costume, complete with two-gun holsters. They thought it looked cute on their darling

Later, he asked for, and received, an Army helmet. His arsenal grew: a toy bazooka, a squirt gun resembling a German Luger, a machine gun, a "fighter jet cockpit," hand grenades, pistols, rifles, even a bow and arrow.

And armies of two-inch high plastic figures which could be slaughtered with a wave of the hand or a casual kick. Resurrecting them took more time, and was not as much fun.

He played at war. Sometimes he used his miniature hordes.

sometimes he used his manufactured arsenal, sometimes he used little more than a broken stick. In any case, his major weapon was his imagination, for it was both a time/space machine and a matter creator. With that, he could do anything and he did.

His enemy varied from savage Apache to treacherous Nazi, but he never changed. He was always magnificently courageous, always a splendid warrior who, though outnumbered 1,000 to one, was never an underdog (for he was, after all, himself, and therefore invincible).

Sole survivor

He was the sole survivor of the Battle of the Little Big Horn, due his serendipitous discovery of the principle of the Gatling gun while cleaning his trustworthy Colt

He was pursued, naked but for a discreet loincloth, over the whole of Africa by a blood - thirsty tribe, which he eventually defeated by virtue of superior cunning, skill, strength and intestinal fortitude.

As a spy in Berlin during World War II, he was betrayed to the Germans by a treacherous confidant, and had to fight his way back to England single - handed. Which he did, of course. Splendidly. He was a first - class hero.

He was a child pretending to be an adult acting like a child.

When he played with others, he was forced to modify his heroics somewhat, to allow them guest - star status.

Playing with others complicated his strategy. He was forced to realize that others would angrily quit the game if he refused to die on cue, although he could righteously insist that their bullets had been laughably far from the mark (unlike his imaginary opponents, whose shots came perilously close).

On the other hand, even when he skillfully put a bullet through his enemy's chest 1,000 times, that stubborn enemy would insist, "You only winged me." It all seemed a little unfair.

Somewhere in the midst of his epic adventures, he grew up. And registered.

His number came up, bringing with i shorter hair and a uniform. And a trip to someplace far away.

And a gun. Which he one day found himself holding on top of a hill as he watched men i different uniforms swarm towards him.

A gun which he raised. And fired. A little late He watched a face erupt, and he fire again and again and again at that face wanting to be sure that the owner of the face would not rise and protest that he wa "only wounded."

But there was no danger of that, h finally realized. And with that on realization came another, that the gam was no fun when played for keeps. "I don't want to play anymore," thought. It was a little late for the thought, but he thought it anyway. He pu his gun down and walked away. His commanding officer told him to stop but he walked on, perhaps not even hearing the officer's warning. He walked away possibly not knowing and probably no caring about the punishment for desertion under fire. Shortly thereafter, he lay in the dirt as turned to mud.

The battle lines shifted radically that night, and as things turned out he we never buried. His body was never shippe home in a flag - draped coffin to be well over the relatives he had forgotten or neve known, and his blood was never exchange for embalming fluid. He never had flowed put on his well - trimmed grave. The wasn't even a funeral service. None of which really mattered to his anymore anyway.

So he was through playing at war. But h picked a helluva time and a helluva way t

Somehow, somewhere, there's just got t be a better way.

OUR READERS' MIND

Micronesian plan neo-colonial

To the Editor:

I have just finished reading your editorial entitled "Commonwealth plan: a chance at the future." It contains several misconceptions, which should be corrected.

First, a "trust territory" is not a colony. Therefore, the "administering power" cannot, unilaterally, decide upon its (the trust territory's) status. This the U.S. Dept. of the Interior has done in proposing the "commonwealth" status for the Trust

Olin staff professional

To the Editor:

It is common and documented knowledge that home remedies, incantations, and poultices made of day-old hamburgers are frequently safer and more efficient than the treatment offered by the Olin Health Service. This past week my wife ventured up to the second floor for surgery and received excellent care.

It is infrequent that anyone does or has reason to praise procedures related to Olin's operation. Nonetheless, the second floor nursing staff and everyone concerned my wife's surgery and treatment demonstrated the finest in professional understanding and efficiency. In addition, all the nurses are to be complimented for knowing the limitations and the uses of a bureaucratic system and for the constant pursuit of humane treatment and meaningful personal interaction.

This University as a whole, and indeed the downstairs staff of the Health Clinic itself, could benefit by a study of the accomplishments of these concerned medical professionals.

The United States "Micronesia." government does not exercise any sovereignty over these islands, nor was it intended to have any. Sovereignty is held by the United Nations as "guardian" of the Pacific Islanders. Second, the Declaration of Independence to Colonial Countries and Peoples, adopted by the U.N. General Assembly in December, 1960, clearly states that 1.) the subjugation of peoples by alien subjugation, domination or exploitation is a denial of fundamental human rights and the principles of the Charter of the United Nations, and 2.) inadequacy of political, economic, social and/or educational preparedness should never serve as a pretext for delaying independence. If, as the United States Dept. of the Interior has implied, this Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands is declared to be, in any way, "unprepared for independence," it is the United States government that is to blame, not the Pacific Islanders!

Finally, the only near acceptable statement is, "The Micronesian people" must be allowed to maintain their culture and find their own way inthe world." In fact, the United States Dept. of the Interior has proposed a neo-colonialist tactic for "legitimizing" her continued rule in this area in clear violation of the rights of self - determination. "Commonwealth" becomes, under this plan, a polite term for the pejorative "colony." Once again the sincerity of the American - espoused Wilsonian principle of self: determination is brought into question. Also, it is amazing that a student newspaper would endorse such a plan. TOKYO - More than a year after Mao Tse-tung set about the egg of organization.

Though the question may seem minor to outsiders, it is central to the future of the philosophy that three years of cultural revolution sought to impose on Red China.

That philosophy basically is Chinese Stalinism: belt tightening and strict controls domestically, and a hostile posture toward the United States and Russia. Its survival depends on a slavish acceptance of Mao's ideas by the mainland's 700 million people.

Mao tore the party apart in 1966-69 in order to get at his enemies lurking within the structure. With the close of the cultural purge in May 1969 and the elimination of his rivals, led by President Liu Shau-chi, Mao set about restoring the party edifice.

The question which seems to nag party leaders is that of priority: should new party members first pass through the eye of the Maoist needle, proving themselves pure ideologically, or should primary emphasis be placed on restoring the party organizationally while turning a tolerant eye toward political imperfections?

journal Red Flag answers the line . . . " question from Mao's viewpoint.

Foreign Minister Chen Yi was "inspected and criticized" on a number of occasions during the cultural revolution. His sin, perhaps, was that he retained his wit and his cool. Or, more likely, his nimble brain could not keep a tight rein on a quick tongue. Some of the things he said during his self - criticisms could be taken as stabs at the Mao elite. His functions have been taken over by Vice Premier Li Hsiennien.

Security chief's Hsieh Fuchin's vanishing act is more difficult to explain. As a member of the Politbureau he had his finger on the dossiers of many prominent Chinese. It is tempting to

By GEOFFREY ATKINS Associated Press Writer

GENEVA - The International Commission of Jurists, which has infuriated governments with controversial reports on violations of the law, may soon be forced out of business.

Almost its entire budget, averaging around $380,000 a year, has been financed by grants from American foundations. This year the grants have all been cut off. The main reasons appear to be new legislation removing tax advantages from these grants, an economic slowdown in the United States and increased American preoccupation with internal problems.

Sean MacBride, 66, a former foreign minister who is secretary general, reckons the body can struggle along two more months without a new source of finance. The main hope is a consortium of seven European governments which are studying ways of aiding the commission.

A group of lawyers, licensed by the Berlin blockade of 1948 and the general "cold war" policy of the Soviet Union under Stalin, was the nucleus of the commission.

When it was founded in 1952 it was a solidly pro-Western group whose main aim was to disseminate propaganda spotlighting violation of human rights in Soviet - occupied territory.

It has since graduated into an international body whose 28 commissioners have come from 27 countries on all continents. They include two Americans, Judge Dudley B. Bonsal and lawyer Eli Whitney Debevoise, both of New York. No government, regardless of its political system, is free from the jurists' lash if they find evidence that it has violated the rule of law

Ocean dumping site disputed by officials

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon's No. 1 environmental adviser agreed Wednesday the Army's plan to dump deadly nerve gas into the Atlantic Ocean is the least undesirable way to dispose of it.

But Russell Train, chairman of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, told a Senate subcommittee, the council believes it is clearly inappropriate to use the oceans for the disposal of any and all toxic material.

He said knowledge of the oceans is so limited that "we cannot confidently predict the consequences of placing in them any dangerous materials.' Train said the ocean dumping appears to offer the least risk to the environment because the condition of the nerve - gas rockets sealed in 418 concrete coffins is such that speedy disposal is called for. He said, as Army spokesmen have, that there is a risk that the aging rocket explosives may become dangerously unstable, or that corrosion destroyed, 13,850 homes with The city's airport, heavily of the rocket casings might release the deadly major damage and 41,800 with damaged, reopened. Docks also chemical warfare agent. were usable although cargo sheds

Due to these dangers, the Army argues that it cannot risk destruction via an underground nuclear explosive because that would require many months of preparations. It hopes to complete the dumping operation within two weeks.

The Army plans to transport the concrete coffins from storage centers near Anniston, Ala and Lexington, Ky., on Aug 10 by special trains to Sunny Point, N.C.

The coffins then will be loaded on a barge and towed to a spot about 280 miles east of Cape Kennedy, Fal., where the barge is to be sunk in water 16,000 feet deep.

Although accepting the need for the dumping, Train said the council feels that the question of impact of the nerve agent on living organisms has not been considered in sufficient details. And he noted that if the coffins break up in the sea there is a possibility that fish, directly used by man, might pass through the contaminated zone.

The subcommittee heard Army witnesses testify there appears little danger of any trouble while the gas is being transported to port.

"We don't think there's going to be a bit of leakage from the vaults during transportation. We're highly confident there won't be," said Brig. Gen. John Murray. Undersecretary of the Army Thaddeus R. Beal said that even if the gas escapes into the ocean he thinks it will be effectively detoxified by the salt water in a few hours.

Former Spartan gridders now 'All-Stars'

Their colors are green and white. Their head coach is a varsity coach at MSU. All three assistants coached played their college ball at MSU and the team's six cheerleaders all attend MSU. It's the MSU varsity football team right?

Wrong, it's the Lansing All - Stars of the Midwest Football League (MFL) who have such an MSU influence in their set-up that you can almost call them the Lansing Spartans.

Robert "Turf" Kauffman, varsity lacrosse coach at MSU, is in his second season as the head coach of the All - Stars. Kauffman attended MSU and was a member of the Spartans football squads in the early '60s. He later served as a student assistant coach of the freshman squad under Burt Smith. In June of last year Kauffman was named head coach of the lacrosse team when the sport officially became MSU's 14th varsity sport.

Assisting Kauffman this year are three former Spartan gridders. Handling the defensive squad is Tom Drahnak, a member of the Spartans' 1959 football squad. Starting All - Stars tackle Jerry West, who was named on several All - American teams his senior year in 1966, is in charge of the offensive linemen, while Bob Super, three - year letter winner for the Spartans from 1966-68, is heads up the defensive backs.

As if having the head coach and three assistant coaches having formerly attended MSU, over half (23) of the 43 man squad list MSU as their present or former school.

In their first season in the Midwest Football League last year, the Stars put together a devastating ground attack along with a solid defensive unit to finish on top of the Midwest division standings with an 12-1-1 mark. They then went on to best the Great Lakes conference leader, Lackawana, 20-8 for the championship of the MFL.

The championship capped a great season for the Stars who after dropping their season opener to Lackawana and tying their third game, rolled to 12 consecutive wins.

That mark now stands at 14 after the club's two exhibition wins the last two weeks. The Stars topped a tough Pontiac team 25-14 and last Saturday scored on the first play from scrimmage enroute to a 19-0 win over Dayton.

Kauffman and his charges must now turn their attention to this week's game at Detroit. The game marks the opening of the regular season and with only a 10 game schedule, each contest is

"In our two exhibition games, we just tried to concentrate on getting our timing down and perfecting our moves," Kauffman said. "But from here on out we've got to go all out in each game. Detroit shouldn't prove too tough but the game will be on their home field and I'm sure they'll be ready for us."

Some of the top performers for the All - Stars who also played for MSU are offensive linemen Roger Peltier, West, Dave Van Elst, Tony Conti, Mike Young and Bob Lange; and offensive backs Charley Wedemeyer, Ken Hines, Jim Garrett, Bill Ware, Kermit Smith and Ernie Pasteur.

On defense Nick Jordan anchors down one of the tackle spots while three former outstanding Spartan players are listed as the starting linebackers - Ron Goovert, Charlie Thornhill and George Chatlos. In the secondary along with Super is former baseball player Joe Gavel, who still holds the record for the most stolen bases in one season by an MSU player -21 – set in 1969.

After this Saturday's game with Detroit, the All - Stars return home (Lansing Everett High School - Centennial Field) to host Wyoming (Mich.) Tickets are available at Duke's Shell Service or at the game.

Ex-MSU great Adderley retires from pro football

GREEN BAY, Wisc. (UPI) - Herb Adderley, former three - year letterman for MSU from 1958-60 and one of three co-captains his senior year, made it official Wednesday that he's retiring from professional football.

The three - time all - pro defensive back who since last December has vowed never to play for the Green Bay Packers again, called head coac and general manager Phil Bengtson to tell himo his decision. "Herb has decided to retire. So that questioni Adderley, 31, called a member of the new media after the Packers' final game las December to express his anger at being left of the pro bowl squad. He charged that the Gree Bay coaches had not recommended him for the pro bowl squad, and also accused Wavn Robinson, then the defensive backfield coach, o being too critical of the players under hi jurisdiction.

Several times in the next few months, Adderle vowed to retire unless the Packers traded him Bengtson said Wednesday a trade no longer wa being considered.

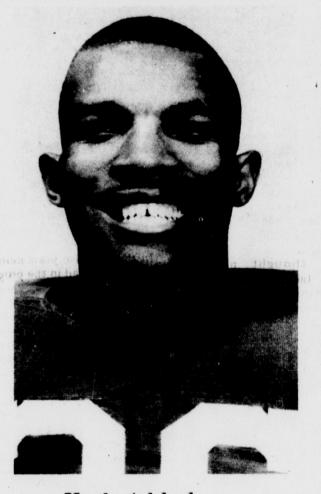

"We attempted to make a trade in response to Herb's initial position and we were unable to dit," he said. Adderley's status will be voluntarily retired, meaning he will stay on Green Bay'reserve roster and will not be able to play for an other team without the Packers' permission.

"I know this has been a real big thing for you feellows (reporters)." Bengtson said. "But I have feellows (reporters)." Bengtson said. "But I have fellows (reporters)," Bengtson said. "But I he you'll keep it to a real minimum. I think ther are a lot more interesting things about the 197 Packers than the fact that Herb is not going t

Bengtson said he may look to rookies to fill th hole in the defensive backfield left by Adderley retirement, and indicated Leon Harden, a 196 taxi squad member, or rookie Ken Ellis woul start at the cornerback spot against the Ne York Giants Saturday night. Other rooki possibilities are Al Matthews of Texas A & I an Ervin Hunt of Fresno State.

Adderley is the 10th veteran to depart, either by trade or retirement, since the 1969 seaso ended, although Bengtson did not regard the 2 per cent turnover rate as excessive.

Jets are shaking- IM SCHEDULE Joe's not in camp

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The New York Jets were dealt a severe blow Wednesday when Al Atkinson, their highly regarded middle linebacker, announced his retirement from pro football "for personal reasons."

In addition to Atkinson's surprise announcement, the Jets also have yet to hear from quarterback Joe Namath, who failed to show up for his physical Tuesday.

Atkinson, reportedly, became miffed at the actions of some pro players during the recent players' strike and his retirement leaves the Jets with no experienced replacement as the defensive signal caller. Namath, is believed to be in New York but has not reported to camp and the club has had no information as to when

A number of interesting social events and activities were available for Upward Bound students. Everyone was supposed to participate in the events and activities to raise money for the banquet which will be held the last day.

There have been three dances. three parties, four trips, two picnics, several visits on campus and "rap" sessions.

Music for the dances was provided by a band named "The Soul Systems." There will be a dance Friday at the Union with music by "Uhuru Unlimited."

'ROUGH COMPETITION'

Area high school athletes attend seminar sessions

Some successful high school athletes are in the Upward Bound program.

All of them come from the roughest competitive areas in the state. They come from Lansing Sexton and Eastern high schools, Ecorse and River Rouge. The first two are Class A schools and the others are Class B.

Four of these successful athletes are Ralph Perry, Royce McKinney, James Ridgell and Herbert Harris, all of River Rouge.

Ralph Perry is a six-foot, one-inch, 154-pound junior and played reserve football, reserve Balcom, Denise basketball and ran on the varsity track team. He Lynch, Valerie D. Morris, Julie played split end in football and completed several touchdown passes during the season. He was a starting guard on the basketball team which was undefeated in 16 games. During track season he was a high jumper and part-time

As a high jumper he was best in the league. He reached six feet at the league meet. As a sprinter he ran on the 880-yard relay team which was the sixth best in the state.

Royce McKinney, the only senior of the four, is a member of the varsity football, basketball and track teams. As a member of the football team, he was a sometimes starter as a halfback on defense and a very capable backup man for all stater Ken Russaw.

As a member of the Class B state champion basketball team, he saw limited action. He was a hurdler on the track team.

James Ridgell, 6-feet, 2-inches, 148 pounds, played basketball for the reserves. Though he was not a starter, he averaged 10 points a game for

Herbert Harris, 5-feet, 2-inches, 162 pounds, was a member of the reserve football team where he played tight end. His specialty was defense. He was a half - miler on the track team and his best time was 2:09 - very good for a sophomore.

Hart, who is running for a third term, was unopposed for the Democratic nomination and is a heavy favorite going into the general election campaign.

Milliken spent almost no money or time in the primary, yet easily defeated Turner, whose campaign was directed more against Democratic Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley than against Milliken.

In contrast, Levin spent an estimated $200,000 - 250,000 in an uphill campaign which saw him take the lead in the final days before the primary.

Text of Stevens' letter

The full text of Stevens' letter to Democratic party and district chairmen is as follows:

"Michigan Democratic party County and district chairman

"Dear fellow Democrat:

"I am writing to inform you that after considering the requests for my candidacy from the East Lansing and Ingham County Democratic organizations, from past and present elected student leadership, from the Black Faculty of the University and from a large contingent of faculty encompassing individuals from deans through classroom teachers, and by the Michigan State Employes Union, Council 7, AFL-CIO, I have decided to seek renomination to the board of trustees of Michigan State University. I have been a member of the board since January, 1958. During this period, the University has had a vast growth, both in the size of the physical plant and in the number of students it has served. Whole new colleges have grown up; the Labor and Industrial Relations Center has been founded, the Center for Urban Affairs and the Equal Opportunity Program has been founded and a Medical School has been put into operation. In all of this growth, the University has made a conscious effort to stress a growth in quality as search for quality education, but also to be sure that this great institution serves the social ideals of our party. We have had programs of many sorts aimed at making higher education available to the sons and daughters of the poor as well as the affluent. I was one of the authors and supporters of the graduated tuition plan and of the present innovative system of need - oriented financial grants which has taken its place. We now have programs of special assistance to students who for various reasons are lacking some of the traditional college preparatory work and other steps are being taken to recruit students from all communities in our state. "In addition to this constant attempt to make the University relevant to the needs of the poor as well as the rich, I have tried to be active in supporting the legitimate rights of students and faculty to freedom of specch and due process. I believe that no one could call himself a Democrat and do less. I have tried, within the legal responsibilities delegated to the trustees by law, to provide for participation for students and faculty in the decisions that most nearly affect their lives. I believe that no one could call himself a Democrat and do less. I believe that this emphasis on both justice and participation has helped us to keep order at the University and that a combination of firmness and

'SOULNESS'

Upward Bound students express black experience

By JEANNE SADDLER Associate Campus Editor

"You Got It In Your Soulness," a theatrical production staged by 16 Upward Bound students Tuesday night, was a beautiful expression of reality and feeling.

For those who have tried to commercialize those ingredients and sell them as "artificial soul," this production was a glowing actively and confidently drew example of the real thing - the feeling that unites.

The audience immediately became a part of the students' dramatic effort as the cast came in singing "The Whole World is a Stage." Poems by noted black to a Dream Deferred," by Langston Hughes, were

Network heads hit broadcast bill

WASHINGTON (AP) - Heads of thr three major broadcast networks Wednesday opposed a bill to give Congress free air time as "unnecessary, simplistic" and a "straitjacket by legislation." The proposal, by Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark., would require boardcasters to give at least four prime - time periods each year to the Senate, House and judiciary to explain their views on whatever issues they choose.

Conceding there are many problems inherent in the proposal, Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., asked and received assurances that networks would consider voluntarily donating Congress some air time on an experimental basis to see if the format could work.

CBS President Frank Stanton said the Fulbright proposal is "dangerously simplistic," full of unresolved problems, and would "violate the intent and spirit of the First Amendment," which guarantees freedom of the press.

"We think this is an unnecessary requirement," said NBC President Julian Goodman. He said he thinks Congress should leave decisions on what is newsworthy to the networks.

ABC President Leonard H. Goldenson testified present regulations are adequate to assure that Congress gets its say and that the Fulbright proposal might not achieve its intended effect.

"Instead of placing the networks and broacast stations in a straitjacket by legislation which seeks to achieve balanced presentation according to a rigid formula, we urge the subcommittee to reaffirm, as it did in 1959, the FCC's 'fairness doctrine,' " he said.

The Federal Communications Commission's fairness doctrine requires generally that opposing viewpoints on controversial issues get equal exposure.
