Lansing teens register to vote under U.S. law

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

Two Lansing women walked into the Lansing city clerk's office Wednesday and became the first under-21-year-olds in Michigan to register to vote under the 1970 Federal Voting Rights Act.

Maureen Henley, 19, a Lansing Community College student, and her sister Vicki, 18, were allowed to register by Lansing clerk Theo Fulton who told the women she would hold their registration cards "in abeyance" until January 1, 1971, when the Voting Rights Act will go into effect.

Mrs. Fulton said she had received no instructions from the state director of elections to begin registration of 18-year-olds.

"The only thing I can do is to register them and hold their cards until January," Mrs. Fulton told state Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, who accompanied the women to the clerk's office.

Mrs. Fulton was at first reluctant to allow the women to fill out the registration cards because, she said, the U.S. Supreme Court hasn't yet ruled on the act's constitutionality.

The court is currently studying the act which has been challenged by several states that contend the voting age can be lowered only by constitutional amendment. A ruling may be handed down before the law would take effect January 1.

But Vaughn, who sponsored an ill-fated amendment proposal to the state constitution that would have lowered Michigan's voting age to 18, reassured the clerk that the Voting Rights Act is "the law of the land" until the Supreme Court decides otherwise.

"We pass laws at the state Capitol every day," Vaughn explained to the clerk. "And when they are passed by both houses and signed by the governor they are law. Anyone can take the law to the Supreme Court, but until that happens the law is the law."

Later Vaughn said that Wednesday's activity marked the beginning of a statewide drive to get 18-year-olds signed up to vote before January 1.

"We want to get this ball rolling early,"

Vaughn said. "We're going to set up machinery on the college campuses to assist the 18-year-olds in becoming registered voters."

Legal questions that may arise over the early registration of 18-year-olds were soft-pedaled later Wednesday by Kenneth Franklin, a legal adviser to Gov. Milliken, who said that he doesn't view the registration as illegal.

"The fact is that they are not really registered," Franklin said. "If the city clerk wants to let an 18-year-old fill out a form and then hold it until January—that's up to him. There's no problem with that."

Franklin said the early registration was "more of a courtesy" than an actual registration.

TO OFFSET CUTS

Fee hikes seen unlikely

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

The state legislature's nearly $600,000 cut in MSU's 1970-71 budget will probably be offset by "operating economies" rather than fee increases, University officials said Wednesday.

The cut in the University's budget was part of $61.9 million in statewide cuts made by the Senate and House Appropriations committees and Gov. Milliken. Cuts were made to eliminate the state's anticipated deficit.

All four-year colleges and universities in the state received a one per cent budget cut.

"We'll have to curtail some operations," Roger Wilkinson, vice president for business and finance, said. "The budget is simply too well fixed on the revenue side for us to do anything there."

Wilkinson said he had received only "unofficial notification" of the amount of the budget cuts and that he had not been directly contacted by the legislature.

Wilkinson said he had no idea where the budget cuts would be made. He said the administrative group would meet in the near future to discuss the cuts and make recommendations to the board of trustees.

Although discussion of the budget cut is not on the agenda for the trustee meetings Thursday and Friday, it will probably occur. "This is a severe cut," Don Stevens, D-Okemos and chairman of the board, said. "I'm sure we'll talk about it, but I don't know what we can do about it right now."

Stevens said he had been expecting some sort of cut because state revenues had not been as high as predicted, but said he had not known how much of a cut there would be.

The legislative cut is one per cent of the University's legislative appropriations this year.

Elliott Ballard, presidential assistant, said some of the budget cuts could be made up from operational savings so far this year.

"For example," he said, "we may have a vacant or newly created position which we don't fill until several months into the fiscal year, but for which we have a full year's salary budgeted. Then we save the two or three months' salary for the time before an appointment was made."

Newton talk cancelled after dispute over fee

An address by Huey Newton, Black Panther minister of defense, scheduled for Wednesday afternoon at Western Michigan University (WMU) was cancelled after Newton informed the Black Action Movement (BAM), the group sponsoring his address, that he would not appear unless he was assured of a $2,000 fee.

President James Miller also denied a request by Newton to have those attending the speech searched for weapons at the door.

Arthur O'Connor, a University information officer, read a statement he said was released by BAM Wednesday and confirmed earlier statements made by the president.

There was no answer at the BAM office at WMU Wednesday afternoon.

"The Black Action Movement decided that we could not guarantee this sum on the basis of the daytime audiences at Oakland University and MSU," the statement read.

The black student organization said Newton's security requests and requirements would be honored, however. BAM arranged for students' money to be refunded this week.

President Miller stated that he found any request that persons attending the speech be searched "repugnant."

"There will be no search of persons attending the speech to be given by Huey Newton," Miller said. "If any speaker requests that outer coats and packages be checked at the regular checkroom, that will be required," Miller said.

Proposed tax increase to face voters next term

By JOHN JUEL
State News Staff Writer

A revised version of the proposal to increase the ASMSU student tax from 50 cents to $1 per student per term was presented at Tuesday's ASMSU student meeting, but it was tabled until an all-University referendum can be set up for the winter term.

The revised tax proposal earmarks the funds from the tax increase for use in expanding legal aid services and (See related story, p. 2)

Establishing a student co-op. In addition, a limit of three years was set on the tax increase, beginning spring term, 1971.

Three other constitutional amendments currently in policy committee, and if passed, may join the tax proposal on the winter term referendum.

The tax proposal, as a constitutional amendment, must be approved by a majority of the undergraduate students voting in the referendum. The proposal will be placed on the ballot so students can vote on each of its three sections individually.

"An additional 20 cents per student term shall be collected for the purpose of increased legal aid service for the student body."

"An additional 30 cents per student per term shall be collected for the purpose of expansion and development of student cooperative services."

"An additional tax levied above 50 cents per student per term shall be collected only for three years, starting with spring term, 1971, unless the period is later extended by a vote of the student body in an all-University referendum."

The tax proposal was tabled rather than passed outright because the constitution calls for a referendum within 10 class days of the passage of an amendment by the board. Board members felt it would be difficult to set up a referendum before the end of the term, and the wait would give them extra time to "help sell the tax."

One of the three proposed amendments still in the policy committee would make the presidents of the major governing groups at MSU—Men's Halls Association, Intrafraternity Council, Off-Campus Council, Women's Inter-residence Council and Panhellenic Council—voting members of the student board.

A second proposal in policy committee would establish an All-University Elections Commission to handle all ASMSU elections and referendums.

A fourth constitutional amendment was proposed at the meeting by Larry Stempel, Shaw-McDonel district representative.

Stempel moved to delete Article X, the article covering compensation for student board members, from the constitution.

"Students should have the chance to vote on whether or not they want to pay board members compensation, as well as whether or not they get to pay a tax increase," Stempel said.

Nixon asks Congress to increase foreign aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon asked Congress Wednesday to add $1 billion to the $2.8 billion he had requested earlier for foreign aid in this fiscal year. First indications were that the request faces a rocky legislative road.

About half the added funds asked in a special message to Congress would go to help Israel build its military potential. Neighboring Arab states of Jordan and Lebanon are down for $30 million and $5 million respectively for what White House aides described as internal security needs in those countries.

Apart from Israel, major sums would go to Cambodia, South Korea and South Vietnam.

Nixon described the money as necessary to carry out plans for reducing direct U.S. military commitments abroad while increasing the ability of allies to defend themselves.

White House officials conceded, however, that part of the need for more money

Group cites dangerous toys

WASHINGTON (AP)—A consumer organization warned Wednesday that toys under the nation's Christmas trees could be hazardous to children unless government acts now.

Consumers Union, which does its own product testing, petitioned the government to ban—and seize if necessary—eight toys the organizations called dangerous.

Most of the toy manufacturers counted the Union's charges. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, whose Food and Drug Administration on Friday began steps toward a possible ban on four toys, said it had negotiated design changes or was investigating all of the toys named by the consumer organizations.

"We have found no compelling reason in the accident reports available to us for declaring any of the toys an imminent hazard," said HEW.

But in a joint news conference with officials of the nonprofit Children's Foundation, Consumers Union technical director Morris Kaplan said actions already taken by FDA offer no guarantee that even admittedly dangerous toys have been taken off the market.

One of the toys cited by Consumers Union, for example, was the Empire Little Lady Oven distributed by Metal Ware Co. of Two Rivers, Wis. The National Commission on Product Safety had cited the oven as a burn hazard because of its surface temperatures reached up to 300 degrees.

Metal Ware president Wesley Drumm said his firm stopped making the oven in 1966. The FDA also noted the toy had been discontinued. Kaplan said the model he demonstrated at the news conference was purchased near CU's Mount Vernon, N.Y., headquarters last February.

"Because many toys stay in warehouses or on shelves until they are sold," he added, the government must do more than just negotiate design changes or declare the toys banned.

Kaplan complained also that the FDA's proposed ban—first such action under the 11-month-old Toy Safety Act—would leave the toys on the market well into the Christmas season.

When told of HEW's response to his charges, Kaplan said Consumers Union would move as soon as possible to seek court action against the government.

Three of the toys mentioned by Consumers Union were in the FDA's proposed ban: Party Pack Five Fringed Balloon Squawkers distributed by American Party Favors; Jarts lawn darts distributed by R.B. Jarts, Inc., and Wasp cap gun distributed by Ohio Art Co. CU also cited Etch-a-Sketch, distributed by Ohio Art; Rapco Castright Metal Casting Sets, distributed by Rapco Toy Co.; Suzy Homemaker Super Grill, distributed by Topper Toy Corp.; Winnie-the-Pooh Crib Mobile, distributed by Sears Roebuck & Co., and the toy oven.

The toy manufacturers all defended their products' safety or cited recent changes aimed at making them safer.

A young girl in Manpura, East Pakistan, cries while preparing a meal of rotten rice, the only food available, which must be burned before eating to kill the stench. Many of the villagers of Manpura died in the cyclone and tidal waves which hit a large area of East Pakistan six days ago. West Germany, in another major step toward better relations with Eastern Europe, agreed Wednesday to a treaty with Poland aimed at easing 31 years of enmity.

The treaty was initiated by the two countries' foreign ministers, Walter Scheel and Stefan Jedyrchowski. Initiating is the first stage in sending a treaty toward ratification.

The Polish official said the treaty will "open a new era between our two nations." Scheel in turn hailed the pact as a decisive step in Bonn's relations with Poland — a country which was invaded by Hitler in 1939 and numbered six million of its citizens as victims of Nazi aggression.

U.N. Middle East peace mediator Gunnar V. Jarring is returning temporarily to his regularly diplomatic post in Moscow because "there is little more that he can do at U.N. headquarters," Secretary-General U Thant announced Wednesday.

In a statement issued through a spokesman in New York, Thant said the Swedish ambassador "is well advised" to return to the Soviet Union until the three-way talks he was holding between Israel, Egypt and Jordan can be resumed.

The statement said Jarring would leave "possibly as soon as Thursday of this week."

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., said Wednesday little would be gained "and perhaps something to be lost" by continuing to press for Senate passage this year of a constitutional amendment guaranteeing equal rights for women.

Bayh, however, still refused to abandon the fight once and for all. He said he wanted to confer with the chief Republican sponsor of the amendment, Sen. Marlow W. Cook of Kentucky, and with Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana.

United Steelworkers unveiled their 1971 contract demands in Pittsburgh Wednesday and President I. W. Abel said the union would strike if necessary in support of the demands.

Among the main issues the steelworkers will present in their bargaining next year with the basic steel industry, he said are:

"A 'very substantial' wage increase, an improvement in the pension program, improved insurance. Improved vacations including a two-week vacation shutdown each summer, guaranteed salary and income security, reduction in the work week from five to four days. Federal Judge Thomas P. Thornton has scheduled a hearing for Monday.

According to the court suit, the Lange Boulevard Homeowners Association voted by a 2-1 margin at a meeting to buy the house and sell it to the buyer of their choice.

Plans for selection panel OK'd

By JOHN JUEL
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board moved Tuesday to establish a search and selection committee to help choose candidates for high University administrative posts.

In other action, the board defeated a proposal to make it more difficult to waive the

ASMSU code of operations, established a committee to investigate environmental pollution by the University and allocated $200 for the Listening

Under the ASMSU proposal, a search and selection committee would be appointed whenever a vacancy occurred in the position of University president, provost, any of the vice presidents or dean of students.

The committee would consist of:

- Two undergraduate students, one of whom shall be nonwhite, selected by the ASMSU Student Board following open petitioning by the student body.
- Two graduate students selected by the Council of Graduate Students.
- Two members of the faculty selected by the Academic Council.
- Two trustees selected by the board of trustees.

All potential candidates for the administrative positions would be examined by the committee, which would then submit a list of at least three potential candidates to the board of trustees.

No candidate to whom two or more search and selection committee members objected could be submitted to the trustees for consideration. The proposal requires approval by the board of trustees to become effective.

A proposal to increase the number of voting members necessary to waive the ASMSU code of operations was defeated by a 9-4 margin.

Under the proposal, five-sixths of the board members present would be required to waive the code, rather than the current two-thirds vote.

"The proposal would have stopped the board from constantly waiving the code and voting on issues immediately," Larry Stempel, McDonel-Shaw representative and author of the proposal said.

"Motions would then go through the usual channels to the policy and agenda committee, and board members would have a week to consult their constituency before voting on the motion."

The board appointed a committee to investigate pollution by the University and to recommend what action ASMSU should take to correct the problem.

District representatives Joe Urban, Nancy Hack and Bob Rosenthal were appointed to the committee, which will submit its first recommendations to the board by the last meeting of winter term.

War photographer testifies at Calley's My Lai trial

FT. BENNING, Ga. (AP) — A former combat photographer named Haerle testified Wednesday at the court-martial of Lt. William L. Calley Jr. that he witnessed the execution of a large group of Vietnamese at My Lai, including a woman with a baby in her arms.

He also took gruesome color pictures of other slain men, women and children.

However, the prosecution made no attempt to connect the testimony to Calley, on trial on charges of premeditated murder of 102 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai March 16, 1968.

In Ft. Hood, Tex., a defense witness testified Wednesday that Sgt. David Mitchell never stopped at a My Lai drainage ditch where the Army says Mitchell shot unarmed civilians.

Elmer Haywood, Baytown, Tex., said he saw a prosecution witness — not Mitchell — shoot into the ditch.

Haywood said Dennis Conti, Providence, R.I., and Paul Meadlo, Terre Haute, Ind., shot into the ditch.

He said Mitchell recrossed the ditch and went back into the village before the shooting began.

"Did you see him stop at that ditch at any time?" a defense lawyer asked.

"No, sir, I didn't," Haywood replied.

"Were you in a position to see him if he had?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you see Sgt. Mitchell fire into that ditch?"

"No, sir, I didn't."

Haerle's testimony was put before Calley's jury of six officers to support the government's claim that multiple executions of Vietnamese took place at the hands of American soldiers at My Lai.

Calley, 27, faces the maximum penalty of death if convicted on the premeditated murder charge. He led a platoon from Charlie Company in a sweep on My Lai.

Haerle's color photographs of Vietnamese bodies were subsequently published by Life magazine.

On cross-examination, defense attorney George Latimer brought out that Haerle sold his color pictures for some $35,000 after keeping their existence secret for more than a year until the disclosure by the Army that the My Lai incident was under belated investigation.

"I didn't want to start the ball rolling... I didn't want to get involved," Haerle testified about his secrecy. "The Army could have come to me."

On direct examination, Haerle testified that he was landed by helicopter with Charlie Company and made his way into the village until he came upon a group of Vietnamese. His testimony continued:

"It seemed like quite a large group of people, I'd estimate between 50 and 75. I noticed these people squatting in the Vietnamese position. I noticed about five soldiers. I saw three or four people walking. I thought nothing of it. Then I heard firing and I could see some of the people trying to get up and run. They just fell down again."

Q. "Could you describe these people by sex?"

A. "I distinctly remember one was a woman. She had a small baby in her arms."

Q. "Can you say if any of these people had arms weapons?"

A. "I didn't see any arms."

Money: The Story of Higher Education

Not long ago it was no big problem for a college to raise money. The president simply went out and put the mooch on some fat alumnus. But that won't work today. Money is tight, shaky about what's happening on American campuses, are sewing up their pockets. And even those few who can still be shown are driving hard bargains. Not long ago, for instance, Walter "Boola" McMeekin, Yale '07, got a new gymnasium named after him and all he gave was three dollars and forty cents.

Well sir, what's a college to do? If they try to raise tuition just once more, the remaining buildings will surely be leveled. By the parents, I mean. Nor can colleges cut operating costs any further because they long ago eliminated all the frills like, for example, heating the dormitories. So where will they find the money they so desperately need?

Well sir, if yours happens to be a college where beer is sold in the student union, you've got it licked. All you have to do is put in a plentiful supply of Miller High Life and stand back. You'll see business boom beyond your most hopeful dreams because every undergrad in the country is positively bananas about Miller High Life! And why wouldn't he be? Is any other beer so tasty? So zesty? So trusty? So gutsy? So feisty? So feisty? So feisty? So malty? So hoppy?

No, dear friends, Miller stands alone, light-years above the others. And the others will never equal it, for they will never learn Miller's marvelous brewing formula, a jealously guarded secret for more than 115 years. In fact, the formula today is known to only one man on earth — Miller's chief brewmaster — who will never, never talk because he is not only a deaf-mute, he is also a Transylvanian who, as you know, can turn into a bat if he is ever captured.

But I digress. Supposing you don't sell beer in the union, where then can you raise the money? Well sir, here's what they did at the Idaho State College of Belles Lettres and Spot Welding.

What they did was add a six-dollar cover charge to each meal in the student cafeteria. Naturally they had to justify the charge, so they started doing floor shows during meals. Believe me, folks, if you're ever in the neighborhood, be sure to drop in. It's worth every penny.

The show opens with Professor Norman Glebe, the ever-popular head of the sociology and weather-stripping department, doing several chucklesome stunts and imitations. First he sings Trees as it might be done by José Feliciano, Georges Pompidou, and Woody Woodpecker. Next he sings School Days as it might be done by the Lennon Sisters, the Mayo Brothers and Mark Rudd. For his last number he does that old reliable, can't-miss, sure-fire crowd pleaser: he wrestles a naked bison.

A tough act to follow, right? But wait. After him comes Professor Nirvana Sigafos, the ever-popular head of the Finnish and other guttural languages department, whose specialty is swallowing. She starts commonplace enough by swallowing a sword, and at this point the audience always yawns and says, "Ho-hum. Another sword swallower." But she soon disabuses them of that notion, you may be sure! Next she swallows two Ph.D. theses and a Buick. But wait. She finishes by ingesting the entire buildings and grounds department! Well sir, all I can say is if Ed Sullivan ever catches this act, there'll be a bright new star in the Broadway firmament!

After Professor Sigafos's act the audience is naturally half-dead from applauding, so the finale is a welcome quiet act. Three spores come out and float for twenty minutes. Then, spent but happy, the student body retire to their pallets and sleep the clock around.

And so to those of you who despair of solving the fiscal problems of our colleges, I say: Just remember one thing: America did not become the world's foremost producer of wing nuts and nylon pie-filling by running away from a fight!

If wing nuts and nylon pie-filling don't grab you, how about trying Miller High Life, the Champagne of Beers and the sponsor of this column? Miller is available in cans, bottles, kegs... and delicious every way.

Dean ends policy of holds for dues

By SHARON STEWART
State News Staff Writer

Winter term registration is the last time that hold cards will be placed on students refusing to pay residence hall dues, Eldon D. Nonnamaker, dean of students said.

Nonnamaker has informed the presidents of MHA and WIC that he will meet with them to discuss other alternatives to collecting unpaid dues.

Hold cards prevent a student from registering until he has settled the problem that resulted in the placing of the hold card.

The Dean of Students office has, in the past, put hold cards on students refusing to pay dues, at the request of the judiciary of the residence hall involved.

"We tell the dorms to try to solve the problem on their own level, and if they can't then we will place a hold card on a student during registration."

Nonnamaker said.

This term the procedure has been challenged by students as being in conflict with the Academic Freedom Report.

Stanley E. Hecker, East Lansing senior, charged that Hubbard Hall's bylaws were in conflict with Article One of the Academic Freedom Report and took the issue to the Student-Faculty Judiciary.

"The Judiciary has asked Hubbard Hall to respond to my charges within 10 days," Hecker said.

A decision will then be made by the judiciary on whether to refuse the appeal, amend it or hold either a hearing or a discussion, he added.

In a similar case the Abbot Hall judiciary ruled Tuesday that the hall's bylaws were in conflict with the Academic Freedom Report and that mandatory payment of dues cannot be enforced.

According to a random telephone survey students pay around $2.60 per term in dues.

"Residence hall management has nothing to do with the levying of dues or with the problem that arises from failure to pay dues. This is handled by each hall and the Dean of Students office," Robert C. Underwood, manager of residence halls, said.

Scodeller to review report on parking permit charges

Raymond L. Scodeller, Wednesday of a written report and driving permits. Ingham County prosecutor, was by MSU police concerning the Police said referral of the expected to begin review late sale of illegal student parking report scheduled for Wednesday morning was delayed because of clerical problems. The report was expected to be sent to the prosecutor's office Wednesday afternoon.

The report includes facts uncovered in an investigation which began Nov. 9 when police announced persons were allegedly selling illegal permits on campus through intermediaries for $55 each.

Police said they want the prosecutor to issue a criminal warrant for bribery against those involved. Final authority for issuing the warrant lies with Scodeller who will base his decision on facts stated in the report.

Scodeller himself could not be reached for comment Wednesday. There was no indication from his office when he would take action on the matter.

Faculty group plans meet on collective bargaining

Collective bargaining for faculty members will be discussed at a meeting of the MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) at 7:30 p.m. tonight in the Union Gold Room.

Four faculty members from the two Michigan universities now having collective bargaining agreements for faculty will speak at the meeting.

Jim McKay and Joe Dement, professors at Oakland University, will discuss the situation at their university where the AAUP was recently recognized as the bargaining agent for the faculty.

Two professors from Central Michigan University (CMU), Tom Britte and Bob Clason, will also be present. A local branch of the Michigan Assn. for Higher Education now represents the CMU faculty in bargaining.

W. Fred Graham, associate professor of Justin Morrill College and AAUP secretary, said the opening meeting is an attempt to stimulate dialog on the possibility of collective bargaining at MSU.

Before the collective bargaining presentations, a brief review of faculty salaries will be presented by Einer Hardin, professor of labor and industrial relations.

Graham sees freedom end

LONDON (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham told British industrialists, lawmakers and clergy Wednesday that the world is building up to "the greatest war in history."

Graham said at a breakfast meeting in a West End hotel: "Unless there is a religious revival in the next 10 years, freedom will not survive."

"The United States is heading straight into the arms of a dictatorship unless the revival expands."

He said that "watered-down Christianity" will not bring today's youth to God. The answer he gave was to tell youth of the Biblical promises of hell, heaven and judgment.

"The young want sin to be called sin," he declared.

Graham is in London for next Monday's Royal Albert Hall gathering to commemorate the 350th anniversary of the Pilgrim fathers' voyage to America.

complaints involved the small number of advisers available to students in some departments.

"In general, the survey results were very favorable toward the administration and the environment here at MSU," Kessler said. "But when you start talking about 25 per cent of the students — around 7,000 people — being unhappy with academic advisement, there are obviously some difficulties."

Detroit board stops election certification

DETROIT (UPI) — Detroit's Board of Canvassers for the first time in its history refused to certify the city's computer-fouled election results from Nov. 3.

The 3-1 vote against certification Tuesday now means the Board of Canvassers of Wayne County, which encompasses Detroit, will have to rule on the election. If the Wayne County Board refuses to certify it, the matter goes to the State Board of Canvassers.

If that board refuses to certify, it will be up to the courts which could order a new election to be held, although that is considered unlikely.

State austerity budget immaterial to salaries

As of Jan. 1, 1971, the average Michigan legislator will be "earning" about twice as much as the average state citizen. This is providing, of course, the legislature does not overrule the recommendations of the State Officers Compensation Commission. Fat chance.

The irony of this legislative economic infusion is that it comes at a time when the state is severely strapped for funds. The General Motors strike has not been kind to the state of the people of Michigan. As a result the governor has had to announce a plan to slash the budget; the legislature, it appears, will approve it — and weep all the way to the bank.

Not that the chief executive, the justices of the Supreme Court or sundry other functionaries are going to come away empty-handed.

In fact, the proposed payroll goes even further to ease the financial burden of the working politician. The old system provided a flat expense and travel allowance of $3,000 per year — and this brought howls of protest from lawmakers that lived farthest away from the capitol. Fortunately for the legislators this inequity has now been eliminated by a sliding scale for travel expenses. The governor's share has been upped to a whopping $60,000 (including expense account). Their honors should also be happy with their new $42,000 salaries — up $7,000 over 1970.

It had been our impression that state officials are supposed to be the servants of the people — not the parasites of the payroll. Charity, they say, begins at home. We agree, and frugality should certainly begin in the House, and the Supreme Court chambers, and the governor's mansion, etc.

Niles curfew statute: guilty by implication

The city fathers of Niles Township have started to take their paternal roles a bit too seriously. Monday they passed a curfew to keep children under 16 off the street during certain nocturnal hours.

The ordinance makes a private citizen's presence on a public street an illegal act at certain hours. Certain puritanical elements of society have always frowned upon keeping late hours, but now Niles Township has made it unlawful.

Board telephone poll: can we trust a trustee

In response to a request by board of trustees' chairman, Don Stevens, Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley has issued a statement declaring telephone polls not in compliance with trustee bylaws.

The attorney general's statement referred to a telephone poll conducted by Frank Merriman last May. The poll was used to vote MSU's 5,845 shares of General Motors stock in favor of management on two proposals initiated by Ralph Nader.

The action smacks of the worst sort of political maneuvering. Whether or not the telephone survey was politically motivated, Merriman's poll arouses in the public the lingering suspicion that the board cannot act as a unit but, rather, through selected individual efforts.

Though Kelley's statement fell short of declaring the voting of shares illegal while suggesting an end to any telephone poll method of voting in the future, little confidence has been restored for a board of trustees which continues to attempt any genuine openness in its operation.

Just over a year ago Kelley publicly opposed the tradition of closed meetings of the trustees. His latest denunciation on telephone voting reminds us of the cloak-and-dagger meetings that individual trustees seem to enjoy in violation of their own bylaws.

LINDA BEARD

Trial marriage: mature solution

In the 1920's a Denver Juvenile Court Judge, Ben B. Lindsey, proposed a theory which he coined "companionate marriage." He soon found himself benchless.

Said Nobel Prize winner, Lord Bertrand Russell in "Marriage and Morals," his noted book, "Unfortunately he has lost his official position, for when it became known that he used it rather to promote the happiness of the young than to give them a consciousness of sin, the Ku Klux Klan and the Catholics combined to oust him." And yet Lindsey had been in charge of the court for many years and to that point had been considered a conservative. Why was it at this point that the people in his community found it necessary to remove him from so influential and powerful a position?

Lindsey's argument was that the biggest obstacle for young people seeking marriage was financial. His "companionate marriage" would be different from regular marriage in three important distinctions. As Russell phrases it, "First, that there should be for the time being no intention of having children, and that accordingly the best available birth control information should be given to the young people. Second, that so long as there are no children and the wife is not pregnant, divorce should be possible by mutual consent. And third, that in the event of the divorce, the wife should not be entitled to alimony."

It was Lindsey's hope that if such a situation could be legally established, more young people would enter upon mature, permanent relationships.

Lindsey said it was true that young married students do better than those who are not. "It is indeed obvious that work and sex are more easily combined in a quasi-permanent relation than in the scramble and excitement of parties and drunken orgies," comments Russell. Lindsey added that there was no reason why two young people could not live as economically as one, thus solving one of the fundamental problems that keep so many young people from marriage.

OUR READERS' MIND

End the ticket writing mania

To the Editor:

Could something, anything, be done to slow down the police on campus and their ticket writing mania?

If it were campus police only, maybe this would be a different story, but we poor students are supporting at least two other precincts, East Lansing and Mason. How come?

I'm writing after receiving $41 worth of parking tickets in a five-day period, then getting up this morning (Sunday) and going to the spot where I always park my car only to find a ticket on the window. Not a regular $2 ticket but a $5 one today. It seems this area has been redesignated as a "loading zone."

Rationale for room shakey

To the Editor:

Recently there has been a black movement for the creation of a black culture area in McDonel Hall. The rationale presented by these black students for the formation of the room was, at best, absurd. This room is supposedly to fulfill the "needs" primarily of the black students of McDonel. Whites would be theoretically allowed to use this room. However, the blacks want it operated with the stipulation that whites can be barred from meetings.

Does a racist policy like this have any right to flourish with official sanction on a campus? The reasoning behind this philosophy of segregated meetings was that too many people tend to make meetings "disruptive." Well, I agree with that statement, as far as it goes, but what would give the blacks their justification in throwing out whites from the meetings, when it would be primarily white money that would fund the whole operation? Their parasitical philosophy is clearly unjust. Who are they to judge the "disruptiveness" of white people and thus discriminate against them?

The proposal to create a black culture room, if carried out, would include a room, free paint, free furniture and $1,000. This proposal is ridiculous when it is discovered that there are only 17 blacks in the entire McDonel dormitory of 1099. This is roughly the equivalent of $60 per black. The East (women's) Council was confronted by blacks who demanded $500

I think the officer that wrote the ticket was the only thing loaded. But as a student it doesn't do any good to try and fight the issue, I know, I've tried.

The ultimate happened only minutes ago. I glanced out the dorm window and saw a campus policeman standing next to a tow truck. They were in the process of removing ticketed cars from in front of the dorm. (No, it wasn't a fire lane).

When asked why they were all of a sudden being towed the officer simply said, "Tickets don't do any good, maybe this will teach them a lesson."

As one of the owners came running to rescue her car, she had to first pay a $7 service charge because the truck had been called out, besides her $5 parking ticket. Since $7 wasn't available she had to leave her ring as collateral. A check can't be accepted because payment can be stopped. They moved from this car to the next one in line.

My fiancée, who is an R.A., had to be at school a week before classes started fall term. At this time she tried getting her car registered but was told they couldn't do it yet but that no tickets were being issued. So she parked in the same spot she had the year before.

Then came registration day and she paid $6 to register the car. She took the car home permanently two days later.

Then through the mail she got two parking tickets, one from East Lansing and one from the University.

The officers on duty at both places explained that often someone will come by and remove a ticket from the car for a joke. We agreed this could happen... once. But who are they trying to fool?

Outside of the fact that there was no one on campus the week before classes started when she was supposed to have gotten the tickets, and the fact that she tried to register the car early and was told that no tickets were going to be issued, it seems like someone is trying to get rich.

Are the area police departments in competition with each other? Why are East Lansing and Mason let on campus? Can a financial statement be published just to give us an idea of how much they screw the students out of? Can anyone do anything?

It's hard enough to try earning your way through this over-inflated University and keep a car running (which is a necessity in order to get a job) without trying to pay the wages of the whole damn police force.

It is hardly necessary to say at this point that Lindsey's proposal was not welcomed by nervous and concerned parents. He was accused of attacking the sanctity of the home as well as opening the door wide to legalized lust. Of course, he was degrading the dignity of American womanhood (for a large part the most frustrated group of women around) and exaggerating sex.

From religious corners, the question arose, would Christ have accepted such a system? Of course not. Thou shalt not commit adultery is still on the books as far as I know. Lindsey's name found itself smeared across magazines, newspapers, dinner tables and pulpits. Abstinence was still the best solution to the problem, for those who were willing to admit that a problem existed.

Of all the people who attacked Lindsey's system, no one advanced the argument that "companionate marriage" would be an obstacle to human happiness. That didn't seem to be the issue in question. Mores and morality were on trial. After all what did these kids know at nineteen and twenty? Their lives were just beginning and here they were anxious to tie themselves down. Or were they? Under "companionate marriage," divorce was possible by mutual consent.

Fine, but what about the aspect of children? What do coeds really know about accurate, but Lindsey felt that this approach was certainly better than guesstimated intercourse without the backing of any technical knowledge in the context of a mature relationship. All that was forty years ago. The same old story, a visionary crucified because he was too early for his society. But how many visionaries spouting the same theories today are seriously listened to? "Companionate marriage" has graduated to trial marriage, and, in the way of frowning and anxiety, nothing has really changed except the dates on the calendar.

In all the argument, however, it is increasingly obvious even to the most naive of us that immature as well as mature sexual experimentation is occurring. Perhaps in trying to stick to old established traditions we are losing sight of the sacredness of marriage ourselves. Any situation that is set up as the center of our civilization has got to be considered carefully. How many young girls do you know went unprepared into careening marriages because they preferred keeping their hymen intact? Or how many girls were forced to marry people they never suited to because they happened to conceive?

When you buy an expensive outfit, you try it on to be sure that it fits. This example may seem gross to you, but of Denmark and its trial marriage system has been the butt of many American jokes, but shouldn't it be said that of the two cultures theirs is the better sexually adjusted with one of the best systems for what we call "illegitimate" birth in the world? Doesn't the presence of "girlie" magazines and "peep shows" obviate an unsatisfactory response to the restrictive hypocrisy we call traditional virtue?

A more mature approach is certainly called for, and in the view of this writer, Lindsey's "companionate marriage" may be just such a solution.

Bender's the best

To the Editor:

As a journalism student I feel compelled to come to the defense of a very talented writer, Louie Bender, who has been criticized by Milton Woody, a Bailey Hall graduate adviser, (SN, Nov. 12), as a "lousy journalist."

Mr. Woody announces at the outset of his letter that he lacks any journalistic experience whatsoever, and proceeds to demonstrate the fact admirably. He assails Mr. Bender's "facts" in his "Cheap Duck Dinner Plot" article as lies, although they were obvious exaggerations written in a light-hearted manner. This was a feature story, not a news story, and the intention of this type of feature is merely to entertain. It was pure fantasy, purposely overdone to convey the idea that it was a spoof. If Mr. Woody chooses to interpret it as literal truth I suppose that is his prerogative, but he does Mr. Bender a great injustice when he accuses him of writing "junk" when he has actually produced an excellent piece of creative journalism.

Mr. Woody feels that fairy tales should be labeled as such. Most newspaper readers are sufficiently aware to realize that a sports story is a sports story and an interview is an interview; a feature need not be handled differently, particularly such a farcical article as this one.

Louie Bender is an extremely imaginative person and a credit to his craft.

Poll shows church appeal down

Copyright Unidex Corp. Bloomington, Ind.

To the nearly eight million students on the nation's college campuses, the churches seem to hold relatively little appeal. In fact, most students described the frequency of their attendance in church as "occasional" or even less. The more significant point, however, seems to be that the collegian's attitude about churches should not be equated with the strength of his own religious beliefs. In exploring the topic of religion and the churches, interviewers polled respondents from 47 campuses across the country. A total of 1190 students were surveyed the week of Oct. 25. The students were first asked: "How strong would you say your own religious beliefs are?"

very strong	25.3%
somewhat strong	24.2%
only moderately strong	28.7%
not at all strong	18.7%
no opinion	3.1%

Almost half of those surveyed expressed a strong feeling about their religious beliefs. At the same time, less than one out of five indicated that their feelings about their own religious beliefs were "not at all strong."

Contrary to what might be expected, responses to the question varied little with different religious affiliations — excepting that fewer Catholics answered in the "not at all strong" manner. By sex, females expressed stronger feelings about their religious beliefs than did males.

Contrasting the student's personal feelings with the part church plays in his life seems to convey a rather basic dissatisfaction with the manner in which the churches themselves have been relating, or better, not relating to the young. While a significant share of the students replied that they do attend church "every week" or "nearly every week," the large majority indicated considerably less frequent attendance.

Interviewers asked: "How often do you now attend church services?"

every week	18.0%
nearly every week	15.5%
occasionally	29.2%
almost never	19.4%
never	16.4%
no answer	1.5%

The percentage of Catholic students attending church weekly was almost twice as high as the portion of protestants who responded similarly. Even at this, barely two out of five Catholics said that they attended their church "every week."

Last, interviewers asked the collegians about the overall appeal of churches to the young. "Overall, would you say that the churches do or do not have appeal for young people today?"

The students answered: do have appeal 17.2% do not have appeal 77.5% no opinion 5.3%

When asked why they felt the churches were not appealing to the younger population, many different ideas were given.

One third year co-ed at U.C.L.A. answered, "Most religion is being taught as a doctrine, not as a way of life to be believed in."

A University of Massachusetts senior offered what might be the most representative answer:

"The churches don't seem to try to relate to, or communicate with, younger people."

Greeks plan drive for Listening Ear

Members of the Panhellenic Assn. (Panhel) and Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC) will be collecting money today, Friday, and Saturday to donate to the Listening Ear.

Mary L. James, East Lansing senior and publicity chairman for the Listening Ear, said the organization exists solely from donations.

"Last year the campus drive collected $1,000 and we hope to top this figure," Miss James said.

Members of sororities and fraternities will canvass the campus area for three days. Primary collection points will be located in front of the International Center and the shopping district on Grand River Avenue.

Volunteer workers will also be stationed near Spartan Stadium before Saturday's game.

The Pi Beta Phi sorority has donated a bathtub to "tub" donations on Grand River Ave. Volunteers from the Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority have baked cookies to give to contributors.

Last year, the Sigma Delta Tau sorority collected $250 for The Listening Ear. This is the first time the entire MSU Greek system will join in a united effort to aid The Listening Ear.

Trudy A. Levine, Mt. Clemens junior and Kathy A. Engman, Escanaba junior are co-chairmen of the event.

Mediation sessions called for LCC, faculty groups

Negotiations between Lansing Community College (LCC) and its Faculty Association are scheduled to resume this afternoon at a mediation session called by Ed Connors of the Michigan Employees Relations Commission.

Edward Taylor, of the LCC faculty assn. said Tuesday that his organization intends to "do everything possible to reach an equitable agreement" with the LCC Board of Trustees at today's 4 p.m. session.

He added, "we are serious about reaching a settlement if at all possible and we hope that the representative of the Board of Trustees will enter today's mediation session with the same kind of attitude and new-found flexibility."

"The two parties have been negotiating for several months and the string has about run out," Taylor said.

He said a general membership meeting has been called for Friday in order to inform the membership of the status of negotiations.

"Hopefully, Taylor said, 'this meeting will be a ratification meeting. On the other hand, if the board of trustees remains intransigent, the LCC faculty will have very serious matters to discuss."

Symphony to give concert

Beethoven's monumental "Symphony No. 9, The Choral Symphony," will be performed by the MSU Symphony Orchestra at 4 p.m. Sunday in the Lansing Sexton High School auditorium.

The concert, open to the public without charge commemorates the bicentennial of Beethoven's birth and will be a memorial to the late John F. Kennedy.

Round-trip free bus transportation for MSU students will leave the Union at 3:30 p.m.

Joining conductor Dennis Burk and the MSU

Symphony will be four soloists, the MSU State Singers and the Albion Choral Society.

The program, which includes Beethoven's "Cantata on the Death of Franz Joseph II," will also be presented Friday in Albion. The soloists are soprano

Jacklyn Schneider, who has sung with the Philadelphia Lyric Opera and the Santa Fe Opera Company; mezzo-soprano Elizabeth Mannion, noted concert artist, is a member of the Indiana University voice faculty; tenor David Aiken, who is a frequent soloist with the top symphony orchestras, and bass Saverio Barbieri, an opera performer and a frequent soloist in New York churches and with leading choral societies.

Beethoven composed the cantata at 19, as his sincere tribute to Joseph II. Beethoven completed his "Symphony No. 9" in 1823 — four years before his death. Sexton High School is located at the corner of West Michigan Avenue and McPherson Street, approximately one mile west of the State Capitol.

'New Morning'--Dylan classic

By STEVE ALLEN
State News Staff Writer

Any obituaries issued last June for Bob Dylan after "Self Portrait" have proven to be premature. Dylan is very much alive musically in his newest release "New Morning."

In fact "New Morning" is in the classic Dylan mold; it is a very worthy successor to his previous masterpieces "Highway 61 Revisited," "Blonde on Blonde" and "Nashville Skyline."

"New Morning" is a synthesis of all the great things Dylan has done since he started using an amplifier.

The harmonica riffs which Dylan addicts have tolerated since "The Times They Are A Changin'" remain as Dylan strums his guitar with and without amplification. In addition we get our first extensive dose of Dylan at the keyboards.

But the most important feature of "New Morning" is the diversity of the music. The vocals, like those on "Self Portrait" are, for the most part, polished. Some of the cuts remind us once again of that trip we took about five years ago down Highway 61. Others take us back to the Dylan album we have yet to figure out "John Wesley Harding." And when the album is all over we have a feeling within ourselves not a great deal unlike the one we felt after the visit to Nashville.

"Self Portrait" was important because it was Dylan's interpretation of America. "New Morning" is a classic album because the music is just so beautiful. The music is surprisingly simple, but amazingly precise. As usual Dylan's lyrics are perfect; he always comes up with the right word.

Dylan tramps on a great deal of new ground in this album. "Winterlude" is Dylan's waltz; "Father of Night" his prayer. "If Dogs Run Free" seems to evoke visions of some 30s-style night club in Chicago with Errol Garner tickling the piano while the singer chants / croons in the mike with a background of "oop - de - poop - poop - poop - de - wah" coming from the $5 - a night girl singer just trying to get started in the entertainment business.

"Three Angels" was made for Johnny Cash to sing as his religious song of the night; the one he would do before he gets the Tennessee Three, Carl Perkins, the Statler Brothers and the Carter Family out for a grand finale of "Daddy Sang Bass."

But it is songs like "If Not for You," "Day of the Locusts," and "Sign on the Window" which make this album stand out.

If you must classify them, it would have to be in that shady hinter land which lies between soft rock and easy listening music.

But is Dylan going commercial? I don't think so. Dylan has always done what he pleases and "New Morning" is no exception. "New Morning" does mark the end of the Dylan Nashville era. Pete Drake and Charlie McCoy are gone. Only producer Bob Johnston remains from the days in Nashville.

Dylan has taken the best elements of his folk, rock and country days, added some new notions from the "straight" music world and has come up with an album which, when it is all said and done, may well rank as the most important Dylan album of all time. The music is the work of a genius; a man who helped shape the ethos of the sixties and who may very well influence the seventies in the same manner.

Dylan makes no political statements in "New Morning," but he makes a very significant social comment: "Build me a cabin in Utah / marry me a wife / catch rainbow trout / have a bunch of kids who call me Pa / that must be what it's all about."

He may be right.

Bing or Elvis-- which is No. 1?

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Elvis or Bing? Who's the champ? Here are the facts, folks:

• An RCA Records spokesman says Elvis Presley is the all-time, worldwide champion in record sales with 275 million albums and singles marketed in the last 15 years.

• Bing Crosby's brother and public relations representative, Larry Crosby, says Bing is the champion with 300,650,000 in 43 years.

The issue came into focus when Decca Records, Bing's longtime label, struck off a plaque and platinum record to commemorate his sale of "more than 300,650,000 records."

"No way," the RCA man said when asked for comment. "Elvis is No. 1 all time, any label, anywhere in the world." He suggested an impartial arbiter, specifically Billboard, the show business magazine.

A man in the research department of the publication's New York headquarters was asked to go even farther and give figures for the top four or five record-selling vocalists of all time.

He said he'd been aware for some time of the claims relating to Crosby and Presley but "has no hard data on the top four or five."

The record industry Association of America also said it has no such information.

In his Beverly Hills office, Larry Crosby backed up Decca's claim with: "We've got the royalty reports here if anybody wants to look at them."

Elvis, meanwhile, was on tour, and Bing for his part, said: "Oh, I take all that with a grain of salt. I don't know how many records I've sold."

Told that by his brother Larry's reckoning that his voice has been recorded on 88 labels in 28 countries, Bing puffed a long-stemmed pipe and said: "Fantastic if true."

Larry's list of labels, many of them obscure, ranges literally from A to Z — from Ariel to Zonophone.

'Scrooge' -- gay, old-fashioned holiday film

'Scrooge'

Albert Finney peers over his checkerboarded pile of gold pieces in the musical 'Scrooge' playing at the Spartan Twin East.

If one describes the new musical "Scrooge" and avoids the clichés of calling it "perfect holiday entertainment" and a film with "an appeal for all ages," he would be doing it a disservice.

"Scrooge," plainly and joyously, fits both descriptions. It sets Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" to music and hurries it onto the wide screen, sacrificing none of its charm or sentiment in the process.

Director Ronald Neame has taken the Dickens' classic and added unabashed vitality to its appeal. The screen bursts with song, dance and laughter, each presented in such a shamefully old-fashioned way, one easily forsakes his sophistication and prepares his emotions for the most cheerful attack on them since "Oliver."

"Scrooge" reminds viewers, in case they've forgotten, what delight a purely escapist film can afford. Although the Leslie Bricusse tunes are awfully same-sounding, one feels like whistling them as he leaves the theater. Although the story of Scrooge and his transformation from crotchety skinflint to generous human being is familiar, one feels elated and renewed by it.

Neame and his task force of cameramen, set designers, choreographers and costumers have gone a long way to combat audience inertia.

The snow-laden street sets are lovely to look at. Aglow with the flicker of the street lamps, they provide an expansive stage for dancers and a proper path for Scrooge's scowling walk home on Christmas Eve.

While the townspeople are bustling about with their preparations for the holiday, Scrooge is croaking his hatred for life. The audience is immediately warmed by the contrast and once again wrapped up in the familiar plot.

Settling back, the viewer sees the visits of the ghosts come to life on the screen.

Alec Guinness, never smiling, never completely opening his eyes, is perfect as the ghost of Jacob Marley, Scrooge's dead business partner. Marley is a sad figure, weighted down by heavy chains and colored with the ghastly green hues of death.

Then Dame Edith Evans, so pompous yet so proper, arrives as the Ghost of Christmas Past to remind Scrooge how happy his Christmases as a young man were.

Like a Greek god, Kenneth More descends on Scrooge next as the Ghost of Christmas Present. With a holly wreath in his hair, a glittering Christmas banquet at his feet and a cup of the milk of human kindness in his hand, More is so overpowering he is delightful.

With the arrival of the Spirit of Christmas Future, Scrooge is escorted to his grave and transported through hell to his final resting place, an unheated counting house.

Throughout it all, one eagerly anticipates the finale like a child on Christmas Eve who knows what's in store for him in the morning. The finale arrives without stinting exuberance.

Scrooge, dressed as Santa

Claus, prances down the street, gushing happiness to everyone he passes, leading everyone in song and bringing the film to an uplifting conclusion as any since the "Seventy-six Trombone" finale of "The Music Man."

Albert Finney plays Scrooge. Obviously this fine British actor (so good in "Tom Jones") had the time of his career with the bravura role. With the visual aids of wrinkles, bald spots and scraggy hair, Finney plays the miserly side of Scrooge to the hilt. His fondling of gold pieces, stooped walk and gravelly diction are priceless bits of hamming that add so much to Scrooge's doddering charm, one cherishes him long before his transformation.

"Scrooge" is a film it would take a Scrooge to resist.

Olin appointments flourish

By BARBARA FARY
State News Staff Writer

"We're aware that some students are unhappy with the appointment system at Olin, but considering that there are 40,000 of them it's to be expected," Evelyn Davies said. Mrs. Davies should know. She has been in charge of the University health center appointment office since it began last fall.

"Appointments had previously been scheduled on a first come, first serve basis," she said. "We instituted the appointment office on a trial basis. We are very pleased with it."

Mrs. Davies said the office is able to schedule 24 appointments a day for each of the center's 15 doctors. That is an average of 300 calls daily. Additional patients are "sandwiched in" if it is essential that they see a doctor on the day of their call.

The appointment office moved this fall to room 108, where it shares quarters with admitting services. Last year Mrs. Davies' desk competed for space with patients and nurses in the walk-in office. Jackie Lowe was also added this fall as additional "phone power" for the office.

The appointment office number, 353-4460, is a direct line that does not go through the health center switchboard.

"Students often get discouraged on Mondays, our busiest day, because they keep getting a busy signal," Mrs. Davies said. "The lights flash all day. But this should not deter a student from calling. If we can't make them an appointment there is always the walk-in service and the emergency clinic."

She said lines are open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4:45 p.m.

Thomas Cooke, health center administrator, estimated that 80 per cent of the students using the health center are seen on an appointment basis.

"We have doubled our appointment staff and given them a new office," he said. "They are doing their job well. It isn't always easy to determine how ill a patient is over the phone."

Mrs. Davies said often students who have been told to make follow-up appointments by their doctors forget to do this. Instead they call the office on the day they were supposed to see their doctor.

"If they would remember to make an appointment as soon as they leave the doctor, just as you do in a private office, things would go more smoothly," she said.

She advised students to make appointments two to three days ahead of time, especially those with not so urgent problems, like physical examinations.

"That way students will be assured of seeing the physician they want at the time they want," she said. "On the whole there are very few disagreeable students calling, despite the fact that they are ill. They are usually quite understanding."

"This is my second year here," she smiled, "and I have only been hung up on twice."

African studies cut criticized by faculty

By JEANNE SADDLER
Associate Campus Editor

The core faculty of the African Studies Center presented a statement to Clarence Winder, Dean of the College of Social Science and Provost John Cantlon Wednesday expressing their "firm support of the Center as it is presently constituted and as it is now evolving."

The African Studies Center, which is funded by the College of Social Science and International Programs, is faced with what the faculty and students claim to be a 100 per cent cut in funding for 1971-72, according to Dean Winder's contingency plan.

"It seems evident to us," the faculty stated, "that the Administration has failed to comprehend the genuine accomplishments of the ASC, and that it has misjudged our resolve."

"Most importantly," the statement continued, "it has failed to recognize that we have built an effective, ongoing mixed ethnic and generational group, one bound together by common goals and activities."

Citing recent innovations and improvements within the Center such as the undergraduate certificate program in African Studies, increased enrollment in interdisciplinary courses on Africa, and new research and publications, the faculty said the recent activities of the center have "added prestige, academic importance and community service to a program which has for a decade held national rank of third best in its field."

"We strongly affirm that we cannot accede to the proposal of the Dean of Social Science," they continued. "If implemented it would gravely weaken, indeed would nullify, our painfully created progress in working toward goals that have been fully shared by the Administration."

She said lines are open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 4:45 p.m.

Thomas Cooke, health center administrator, estimated that 80 per cent of the students using the health center are seen on an appointment basis.

Gymkhana set by 'U' car club

The MSU Sports Car Club will hold a gymkhana from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday in Lot Y at Mt. Hope Road and Farm Lane. The gymkhana will test more than 50 cars and drivers. Entrants will compete one at a time against others whose cars are similar in weight, style and engine size.

All students and residents of the Greater Lansing area may compete and need not own a sports car to enter.

Entry fees are $1.50 for MSU Sports Car Club members, $2 for members of any other motor sports car club in Michigan and $2.50 for entrants unaffiliated to any motor club.

All drivers are required to pass a safety inspection before attempting the three timed runs counting toward their individual class championship. Nine class champions will receive trophies.

optional language requirement for students enrolled in the college, a spokesman for the dean's student advisory committee, reported.

Results of the Nov. 11 referendum released Wednesday showed that 85 per cent of undergraduates in the college voting favored an end to the compulsory language requirement.

A total of nine departments within the college approved the proposal. Only the Dept. of German and Russian Languages supported the present requirement of second-year competence in a foreign language.

A low voter turn-out for the Dept. of Religion resulted in a tie vote of two students in favor of the proposal and two opposed.

Douglas Callahan, Fenton senior and advisory committee chairman, said 657 students or about 20 per cent of the undergraduate enrollment in the college voted in the referendum.

At a meeting of the advisory committee Tuesday, Callahan proposed working through academic channels in order to implement the proposal.

VanPelt next 3 sport star

By JEFF ELLIOTT
State News Sports Writer

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's Brad VanPelt.

Well maybe not quite yet, but before his playing days are over, fans and opposing players may think they were playing against a superman. VanPelt has drawn a lot of attention as the next possible nine-year letter winner since the days of Bob Carey.

Carey was the last MSU athlete to earn nine letters, winning three letters each in football, basketball and track. He was an All-American end, the starting center in basketball and the Big Ten shot putter. He attended MSU from 1948-51.

There's been several outstanding Spartan athletes in the past who've attempted three sports, but no one since the days of Carey has earned a letter in three different sports. Richie Jordan was a letter-winner in basketball and baseball and tried out for football his junior year, but didn't letter.

Such former standouts like Gene Washington, Clint Jones and Sherm Lewis were two-sport performers and probably could have been better than average players in other sports had they played them. The all-time record for most letters won at MSU belongs to Lyman Frimodig, who won four letters in basketball, four in track and two in football between 1914 and 1917.

But VanPelt, who wears No. 10 in football and will wear the same number in basketball and baseball this year, seems likely to match some of Carey's performances. The 6-5, 218-pound sophomore (who coincidentally happens to be about the same size as Carey) is the starting safety on the Spartans' football squad this fall.

When football is over, he'll switch to a basketball uniform where he'll be used as a forward or center for Coach Gus Ganakas' cagers.

Then in the spring, it's baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler's turn to have VanPelt's services. Litwhiler will probably use the hard-throwing right hander on the mound this year, although he'd make a great first baseman and is a better than adequate hitter.

"I don't feel comfortable unless I'm playing some sport," the boyish looking sophomore said. "I plan on playing football, basketball and baseball at State for the next three years. I can't sit out—I'm too used to playing some sport all the time."

Spartan football Coach Duffy Daugherty is the first varsity coach to get VanPelt's service and he's certainly been impressed with the big sophomore's play. Daugherty has said in the past that he could put VanPelt at any position on the squad and he'd be a star there.

"I'm sure there isn't any place Brad couldn't play," Duffy said. "He has the most physical ability of anyone we've ever had play for us with the possible exception of George Webster. Brad is one of those players you don't have to coach—he has that natural ability to play the game."

VanPelt was Mr. Everything in his playing days at Owosso, earning letters in basketball, football and baseball. In his senior year he was an all-state quarterback in football, all-conference in basketball, where he averaged 21.8 points per game, and had three no-hitters in compiling a 6-1 record in baseball. He was pursued by numerous colleges, but narrowed it down to Michigan and MSU before deciding on the East Lansing campus, much to the relief of at least three Spartan coaches.

VanPelt was used as a quarterback and safety on the freshman football squad last year and was given a shot at both positions during spring practice this year. With the fine showing of George Mihaiu in the spring, and the arrival of Mike Rasmussen in the fall, VanPelt was used mostly on defense and some as a running back.

"I know I've made mistakes this year," VanPelt said. "But I'd like to think that they were sophomore mistakes and that they won't happen next year. I'm looking forward to a better year for both myself and the team next year."

"I like playing safety or rover," he said. "A lot of people have asked me why I didn't play quarterback, but we've got a good quarterback back there—the team doesn't need any help there."

The football season ends this Saturday and the following Monday VanPelt plans on being at basketball practice, trying to catch up with his new teammates who have been working out for over a month now. The annual varsity/alumni basketball game is that Monday night but VanPelt probably will have to by-pass it.

VanPelt, who supports a 2.67 GPA in physical education, says he honestly doesn't have a favorite sport.

"I enjoy playing all three. If I had a chance as a pro in either baseball, football or basketball I'd take... hmmm, I don't know which one I'd prefer. I'll just take whatever happens my way."

There's three varsity coaches at Michigan State this year that are thankful the big, bashful, blond-haired VanPelt "happened MSU way."

Squeeze play

MSU rover Brad VanPelt (10) and linebacker John Shinsky (88) have a slight disagreement as to who gets possession of this Michigan running back. Sophomore VanPelt will try and become the first Spartan athlete to win nine varsity letters (football, basketball and baseball) since Bob Carey accomplished the feat in 1949-51.

TOP BIG 10 RUSHER

'Too slow' Adamle fools experts

EVANSTON, ILL. (UPI) — Mike Adamle is the kind of football player that just about everyone guessed wrong on.

Too small and too slow was the opinion of most college scouts when Adamle left Roosevelt High School in Kent, Ohio, four years ago with a few All-state mentions and lots of local press clippings.

Mike had only two scholarship offers, one from Northwestern, perennial doormat of the Big Ten Conference, and the other from Miami of Ohio. Michigan withdrew an offer, apparently after deciding Adamle couldn't cut it in the Big Ten.

At 5-9 and 190 pounds, Adamle really didn't seem to have much to offer, but then football scouts usually can't rate courage and determination, and sometimes they overlook little things like instinct for finding daylight between a mass of charging linemen.

But nobody overlooks them now because Adamle is in the process of becoming probably the greatest fullback ever at Northwestern and is spearheading the Wildcats toward what may be their best Big Ten record in 34 years.

When Northwestern whipped Minnesota, Nov. 7, 28-14, Adamle scored all four touchdowns, tying a one game school record set by Otto Graham, and gained 192 yards in an astonishing 48 carries, a Big Ten record for rushing attempts.

"He's almost unreal. He's indescribable," Northwestern Coach Alex Agase said. "He carries any time, as many times as you could ask, and he always gets that plus yards you need that leads to touchdowns."

Adamle has already established 11 school records in three seasons including the school career rushing record which was held by Art Murakowski, fullback for four seasons in the late 1940's.

Adamle's too slow to run wide, Northwestern coaches admit, so opponents stack the middle against him, but he nevertheless has ploughed for 1118 yards this year in 270 carries, and average of better than four yards a try.

Adamle's secret is what has become known as a "shuttle step" that carries him laterally almost as fast as straight ahead plus an instinct for finding holes and determination.

Pro scouts compared him with the late Brian Piccolo of the Chicago Bears, another runner who was too slow and too small, but one that made it as a professional "walk on" because of less tangible skills.

Adamle might not have gotten a chance to prove himself in the Big Ten if Agase and Mike's father, Tony Adamle, hadn't been teammates in the late 1940's on the Cleveland Browns. Agase says he knew young Mike inherited some good qualities.

And Adamle has learned something by going to a relatively quiet suburban Chicago campus, somewhat bypassed by the usual Saturday football mystic. He explains:

"It's been a good lesson coming to a school where sports aren't everything. Everyone puts a high school athlete on a pedestal and at Ohio State those guys still are on a pedestal. I've talked to them, and all we have in common is football. Being knocked off that pedestal helps show me there are other things in life.

Mike Adamle

JEFF ELLIOTT Matthews wants more running time

Football can often be a frustrating experience as well as a rewarding one. For the player who carries the ball 30 times a game and gains over 100 yards each week, the game will be rewarding. But for the guy who's called on to block those 30 times a game and maybe carry the ball only once or twice, the game can become frustrating.

Such is the case with the Spartans' Henry Matthews. The 6-3, 198-pound fullback has been in the starting backfield in all nine of the Spartans' games so far this year. Yet Matthews has only carried the ball 52 times the entire season, an average of less than six carries per game. Excluding the first two games when he was called on 30 times, he's carried the ball 22 times in seven games—an average of three times each game.

There's no denying the fact that Eric Allen has been nothing short of sensational since the Michigan game. He's gained 585 yards in the last five games after moving to the tailback spot. Prior to that he gained 118 yards in four games while running from a flanker position.

In those five games that Allen has carried 121 times, Matthews has carried 15 times good for 52 yards. When two players see equal playing time and one carries the ball eight times more than the other, there's bound to be a little resentment.

"Sure I'm disappointed that I haven't been called on to carry the ball more," Matthews said. "I know Eric has been doing a great job—but to give him the ball seven, eight times in a row? If the other team's defense had any smarts at all they would key on Eric all day—he's the only one who carries the ball on a third or fourth down situation.

"The coaches put me at fullback to take advantage of my blocking, but I've told them from the start that it wasn't that good. I can't complain too much because I'm starting. I can help the team a lot better out on the field than sitting on the bench."

Unfortunately for Matthews, he may find himself on the bench this week. Sophomore fullback Mark Charette has been running with the first unit this week and may get the starting call Saturday. Earl Anderson looked impressive against Minnesota last week and may join Allen in the backfield on occasions this week.

While Matthews isn't pleased with his having to block on every play, he doesn't let up on any play. He knows he's got a job to do and that unless he does it, he'll be on the bench. There's another reason too.

"I try my best on every play and try to knock players out of the way for 'Easy' (Allen)," Matthews said. "He's small and we've got to protect him. That's been my job and that's why I go all out on every play."

"I was 'down' last year as a sophomore when I didn't get to play. But though I'm disappointed this year, I'm not giving it up by any means. I promised myself that at the start of the season that no matter what happened I wouldn't quit trying to do my best."

For Matthews, a temperamental guy as it is, things have to be going right or he isn't too happy. He rarely talks to members of the press, especially out-of-town writers, saying they all write whatever they want to no matter what the truth is. That's why Henry read this column before it went into print.

Matthews, a junior this year, may find the situation next year very similar to this season. Allen will be back and Jesse Williams, the outstanding sophomore prospect who was forced to miss this year because of an injury, will also return. The two speedsters could provide the Spartans with a potent one-two running punch.

The third spot in the backfield will have to be filled with a player noted for his blocking. Matthews could fill the spot but two sophomores, Charette and Doug Root, will also be pushing hard for a starting spot.

There's no doubt that carrying the ball, gaining a lot of yardage and scoring touchdowns is where the glory is. But someone must provide the lead block or carry out the good fake in order for the play to be a success. That's where guys like Henry Matthews comes in—that's their glory.

Bench is youngest MVP winner

NEW YORK (UPI) — Johnny Bench saw the last of his pre-season goals come through today when the Cincinnati Reds' catcher became the youngest player ever to win a Most Valuable Player award.

Bench, 22, was a near unanimous choice for the National League Award, capturing 22 of the 24 first place votes cast by a 24-man committee of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Runnerup Billy Williams of the Chicago Cubs was listed first on the other two ballots, with Bench being named second.

"This is the ultimate honor for me," said Bench. "It's something you just can't exceed. It's a once in a lifetime dream come through. And to be only 22 and do it, it's something that's hard to believe."

Bench said he set four goals before the season began.

"I wanted to hit 30 homers, drive in 100 runs and bat about .285. . . And I wanted to win the Most Valuable Player award."

He did all that and more. Bench, a native of Oklahoma City, Okla., whose boyhood idol was Mickey Mantle, a two-time MVP winner, hit 45 home runs and drove in 148 runs, both major league highs, while compiling a .293 batting average. Bench beat Stan Musial's youth mark by two weeks. Musial was also 22 when he won the MVP award in 1943. But Stan celebrated his 23rd birthday on Nov. 21, while Bench will not be 23 until Dec. 7. Bench becomes the first catcher to win the award since Roy Campanella of Brooklyn in 1955 and the first Cincinnati player to capture the honor since Frank Robinson in 1961. Third baseman Tony Perez, Bench's teammate, finished third in the balloting behind Bench and Williams, with Cy Young award winner Bob Gibson of St. Louis fourth and Wes Parker of the Los Angeles Dodgers fifth. Pete Rose, also of the Reds, finished seventh behind Pittsburgh's Dave Guisti.

"Winning the World Series is the top thing in baseball," said Bench, "but individually, this is the greatest honor. If you win the series, you have pride as a team, but the MVP shows your excellence individually over the season. I set certain goals and I surpassed them, but I never expected to have such a season. Maybe it's a once in a lifetime thing, a season like this."

"It's something I wanted badly. You get it now or you might never get it," said Bench. "You never know if you'll have a season like this again. I'm looking forward to better seasons and maybe more MVP awards, but I really wanted this one."

"This may have been a once in a lifetime season for me," said Bench.

WORLD TOURNEY BEGINS

Ellis on U.S. bat team

Rob Ellis, the top hitter on the MSU baseball team last season, began play with the United States team in the World Amateur Baseball Tournament Tuesday.

The Grand Rapids junior was one of 18 college baseball players selected to represent the U.S. in the tournament at Caragena, Columbia.

A letterman in his first season, the 6-0, 180 pound second sacker led the Spartans in hitting with a .380 average. Also among his accomplishments are 3 individual MSU records. Ellis collected 60 hits and 98 total bases for undisputed leadership in those respective categories and tied Bob Speer's record of 13 doubles in one season.

In the summer months Ellis played for Bloomington in the Central Illinois Collegiate League and hit .335. He later joined the Grand Rapids Sullivan in their conquest of the 1970 National Baseball Congress competition.

Managing the United States team will be Florida State coach Jack Stallings.

Sokoll named icer captain; DeMarcos are assistants

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

Randy Sokoll, two year letterman, was elected captain of the MSU hockey team Monday by vote of the players. Brothers Gerry and Mike DeMarco were named to assist Sokoll in his duties.

"My job as captain is to kind of act as a go-between with the players and Coach Bessone," Sokoll said. "On the ice, I've got to keep the players hustling and provide some leadership."

Sokoll, whose brother Mark is a defensive back on the football team, has put in two solid years on the Spartan left side. He was the second leading scorer on the team last year, scoring 13 goals while assisting on thirteen others.

"If Randy gets a good start, he'll score 20 to 25 goals a year for us," Asst. Coach Alex Terpay said. "He scored 13 goals for us last year, and didn't even get started until the last half of the season."

Giving the DeMarco boys the assistant captain posts was a stable decision, as both are two year letterman and both figure prominently in the prospects of this year's hockey team.

Mike, a rushing defenseman, has scored three goals over the past two years from the blue line. Teamed with freshman Bob Boyd, DeMarco gives the Spartans a potent offensive punch as well as a defensive stopper.

Gerry, regarded by Bessone as one of the best skaters on the team, scored eight goals last season. As a left wing on the Thompson line, DeMarco joins captain Sokoll in solidifying the left side.

"We've got a pretty good set up with Sokoll and the DeMarcos as our captains," Bessone said. "This gives us one spokesman on our first two lines and the other as a defenseman. "All three have worked hard for two years and really deserve it," Bessone added.

The three players teamed for three goals and four assists over the weekend against North Dakota.

Indians vow to hold island

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "While tourists are looking at Indian statues, our people will still be living on reservations with inadequate food and clothing, poor educations and in poor health."

Two months ago, the government awarded a federal grant to the Bay Area Native American Council (BANAC) representing an estimated 40,000 Indians in the Bay Area, to develop plans for an Indian cultural center and a program to meet the Indians' needs for housing, health and education.

Thomas Hannon, regional administrator of the General Services Administration (GSA) which is the overseer of Alcatraz, said BANAC is interested in setting up the cultural center on the mainland because of the difficulties of getting to the island.

Trudell said the Alcatraz Indians, known officially as the Indians of All Tribes, Inc., have no objection to a mainland cultural center. But, he declared, "There can be one here as well. All we need to build it is the deed."

A band of 78 Indians from about 30 tribes invaded the island from simulated canoes on the night of Nov. 20, 1969, and claimed it under the Sioux Treaty of 1869 as "a natural and traditional right."

An original landing party of 18 youths stayed overnight on the island Nov. 9, 1969, but left voluntarily the next morning after meeting with Hannon. He said he told them the courts had ruled that the Sioux Treaty had no application to property like Alcatraz.

Since last Nov. 20 there has been a continual turnover of the island's population, and today only three of the original invaders still live on the rock. They are La Nada Means, 23-year-old member of the Bannock tribe from Fort Hall, Idaho; John Whitefox, 21-year-old Shoshone from Wyoming; and Jim Vaughn, 24, of Los Angeles.

Hannon estimated the present population as "somewhere between 20 and 30 maximum." Trudell said there are about 80. Newsmen counted about 50 young men, women and children on the island during a recent afternoon visit.

Hannon said the Indians are breaking the trespass law and repeatedly have been asked to leave voluntarily. "We told them of the hazardous conditions of the grounds, the buildings and the waters, and we've told them of the many millions of dollars that would be required... to do anything with the island," he said.

"The property is in very bad condition at the present time," Hannon stated, "not only because of natural deterioration but because of vandalism caused to the property." "In the last several months, four major buildings have been burned down, and in recent weeks an explosion has blown the sides and roof off another structure."

"The lighthouse itself is completely burned out..." Trudell said the prison was condemned in 1963 because it couldn't meet earthquake standards and was rusting, rotting and falling apart before the Indians arrived.

The Indians have called the lighthouse fire an accident and said they heard a high-powered boat leaving the island after it started. "It's possible someone here did it. It's possible someone out there did it," Trudell said.

The Indians denied that there was a recent explosion in a building. Trudell said the Indians are tearing down four cottages for firewood — and one is already minus its roof and part of its front.

The cottages are across from the three-story yellow apartment building where the Indians and their families live. It was once occupied by the prison guards and their families.

Hannon said it has been his decision not to arrest the Indians. "I felt there was no particular crisis and I saw no need of a forceful removal of the Indians until the federal government is ready to proceed with its own plans."

"Rather, we would want to devote our efforts to resolve the problems that created an Alcatraz, which I feel we've started on with the grant to BANAC," he said.

"The Indians' staying there is contingent on a lot of things," Hannon said. "One is letting the Coast Guard do what they want to do when they have to do it." He explained that the lighthouse and the property where the navigational aids are belong to the Coast Guard and have nothing to do with GSA.

Last May, the government took its custodian off the island and then cut off electricity and removed the barge that had been supplying water to the Indians.

Hannon said the Indians had been cutting into the electrical power with radios, televisions and electric frying pans and had interfered with operation of the lighthouse and the navigational aids.

He said the government had used up its $1,600 appropriation for water well before the end of the fiscal year on June 30 — so when the custodian left, the water supply was cut off.

When the electricity was cut off, the light in the red lighthouse went out for the first time in over 100 years, and sailors complained.

Hannon said when a Coast Guard crew went out to reactivate the lighthouse, "the Indians threatened them with Molotov cocktails from landing."

Trudell said the Indians will not let the Coast Guard on the island until the government returns the water barge. The Indians now haul water from the mainland in five-gallon glass jugs.

A 2½-ton, 30-kilowatt generator donated to the Indians by a church group has just been put in operation.

Though Hannon contends the Indians don't have the resources to develop the island, Trudell countered: "If we have the deed, we can get the money."

Trudell, a slender man with long brown hair who spent several years in the Navy, says the island is a good place to bring up children because the youngsters are free to play and can learn about Indian life and lore. He and his wife, Loui, 25, have two other children.

Looking back over the year, Trudell said: "We're just as determined as we were in the beginning, only we're wiser now. We've got experience."

Spanning the years

John Trudell, one of the leaders of the Alcatraz Indians' seven-member board, stands beside a symbolic Indian teepee erected on the island. The one-time federal prison site was invaded by a group of Indians a year ago on Nov. 20. In the background is the Golden Gate Bridge, a white man's engineering feat.

Program works to better diet of low-income families

By MICHAEL FOX
State News Staff Writer

MSU's Family Living Program is working to change the eating habits and attitudes towards nutrition of low-income families by educating mothers and readjusting their food-buying habits.

The program is working to alleviate inadequate nutrition that stunts the growth of poor children and causes diet-linked health problems.

A Detroit mother, realizing that Vitamin C is vital for her baby's growth, regularly fed her child what she insisted was orange juice. A case aide worker for the Family Living Program, however, discovered that what the mother assumed was orange juice was really orange Kool Aid.

Explaining to this mother that the flavored water drink is not a substitute for fruit juice is the type of work that 135 full-time aides do in an effort to improve the daily dietary intake of low-income families.

Some 6,111 low-income families were helped in 1969 by the Cooperative Extension Service program with 65 to 70 per cent of the families in or near large cities.

Lois Humphrey, director of the program, said the congregation of low-income people is mostly near big cities in southern Michigan, but two case aides work in the Upper Peninsula and two are assigned to help settle immigrant families.

Funded in Jan., 1969 by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the program is now rooted in 83 of Michigan's 85 counties, with a $70 million authorization for 1971 made by Congress but not yet appropriated.

The money is distributed to states on the basis of the number of poor people, with Michigan listed as the home of 3.1 per cent of the nation's poor.

The case aides go into homes to win the trust and confidence of families who need their help. Some aides are mothers who had received Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) but go off welfare to take the job. Others are college graduates.

In their efforts to expand the nutrition of the lower income families, the case aide workers have found that some mothers are not able to take care of their own home. Giving assistance with maintenance and repair helps create a better place to live for the poor, Mrs. Humphrey said.

Many families don't have anything to eat out of, and some lack an oven or stove to cook with.

"We want the people in this country to be better fed," Mrs. Humphrey said.

Statistics indicate that the poor lack three of the four main aspects of a good balanced diet. No lack of protein is noted, but definite deficiencies in vegetables, fruits and milk are hurting the growth of young children.

Portia M. Morris, associate professor of human nutrition and foods, reported in a speech last year: "Households with incomes of under $3,000 used 20 per cent less milk, cream and cheese per person and about 40 per cent more grain products than the $10,000 and over income group."

"Low-income households used one fourth less vegetables and fruit, but as much of the dark-green and deep-yellow vegetables, which are good sources of vitamin A value, as the highest income group. They used less than half as much citrus and other vitamin C rich fruit as the high-income households."

A nationwide food consumption survey found that among very low-income people, 70 per cent of the nonfarm families and 56 per cent of the farm families had diets below the recommended dietary needs.

"It's a matter of food habits. If the mother grew up without a varied diet, she won't follow a varied diet for her children," Mrs. Humphrey said. The case aides often accept the mother's original diet but make suggestions for adding to it for a better total diet.

One mother of 12 children had been on welfare and was paying $80 a week for food. A case aide worker instructed her in the nutritional values of certain foods and the mother readjusted her buying habits. Now off welfare, the mother reported, "I think I get more for $50 now than I did for $80 before."

The U.S. Dept. of Agriculture provides food stamps to families in the program which can increase on the average a family's food outlay by one third.

"We find many do not want to be on welfare. They want to have the same kinds of things we provide for our children," Mrs. Humphrey said.

Petitioners seek list of prisoners

A program to petition the United Nations to secure the names of American prisoners of war in Vietnam has "universal appeal" according to John L. Cote, its originator.

Cote, the state chairman of the Lions Club POW Committee, said "There may be people against the war or for the war, but there shouldn't be anybody who is against this petition."

The petition states: "We the undersigned hereby petition the United Nations to procure from the government of North Vietnam the names and whereabouts of all American prisoners of war presently being held by the North Vietnamese and we hereby further petition the United Nations to take action that will insure the humanitarian treatment of these prisoners in their confinement."

The program originated with the East Lansing Lions Club and spread throughout the state. "We have a goal of half a million signatures within the state," said Cote.

Cote also sent letters to all the national Lions Club district governors.

The petition, said Cote, may help "some women know if their husband is alive or dead and children know if they've got a father."

Any person wishing to circulate petitions should contact Cote at his office at the P-K Bldg., 301 MAC Ave.

We have a speaker that won't be intimidated by any room in your house. Or by anything you feed it. The unique new Yamaha Natural Sound Speaker. It looks and works like the sounding board of a grand piano. Sound is produced with a bending motion rather than the piston action of conventional cone-type speakers. # Yankees split on power plant construction SHEFFIELD, Mass. (AP) — In 1787, a horde of farmers, disgruntled over indebtedness, high taxes and inflation, fought near here the last battle of Shays' Rebellion, an insurrection led by Capt. Daniel Shays.

Now another battle is shaping up in this normally tranquil farming and vacation region in the Berkshire Mountains. It is a fight that may have implications for power companies and conservationists elsewhere, as public utility siting becomes a major issue across the nation.

Residents of the area, described by one of them as just as "cantankerous" as when the Yankee farmers stormed the county courts in 1787, are fighting a proposal by a group of utilities to build one of the world's largest pumped storage hydroelectric plants.

The plant has been proposed for one of two sites — either in Massachusetts or in northwestern Connecticut — in this relatively unspoiled region. The project would dam streams, heap up rocks and earth to form dikes, scoop out a mountainside and string transmission lines through prime recreation and resort land. The facility would generate two million kilowatts of power, be larger than the Niagara Falls or Grand Coulee hydroelectric projects, and cost an estimated $185 million at whichever site is chosen.

Opponents of the construction criticize it as harmful to the environment. They claim that alternate means of generating electricity have not been adequately investigated. The utilities regard the claim of environmental damage as untested. They contend that pumped storage is an economical and reliable way of producing additional electricity during periods of high demand.

The dispute is between Northeast Utilities — NU, a combine of four Massachusetts and Connecticut power companies, and the Berkshire-Litchfield Environmental Conservancy Council — BLECC — a citizens group named for the adjoining Massachusetts and Connecticut counties where the proposed sites are situated.

There are 28 existing pumped storage plants throughout the nation, and Sherman Knapp, chairman of the New England utilities group, has called pumped storage "the handmaiden of nuclear power." An opponent of the project, Holger Olen, characterizes the project as "the handmaiden of environmental despoliation."

At the Massachusetts site, the waters of a famed trout stream, Schenob Brook, near Sheffield, would be among those used to create a 2,300-acre lake, from which water would be pumped up to 275 acres by 200-foot dikes at either end.

In Connecticut, the Wangum Lake Brook, close by Falls Village, would be dammed to form a 750-acre lower lake, with an upper pool of comparable size created on Canaan Mountain, according to preliminary site plans drawn by the utilities or their consultants.

Canaan Mountain is among the most varied wilderness areas in Connecticut and is the site of the Yale University Tree Genetics Arboretum, where long-term experiments in tree genetics are conducted. Part of the mountain's Housatonic State Forest, which has been preserved as a wilderness for more than 40 years, would be flooded.

The heights around Plainfield Pond are what environmentalists irreversibly disturbed by a pumped storage plant, with its extensive excavation and construction, fluctuating reservoirs, underground tunnels and powerhouse and its huge power distribution system.

The plant would operate by using electricity generated during "off-peak" hours to pump water from the lower reservoir to the higher one. Then, when demand is high, the goal of keeping the utilities out of the immediate area. Its goal, he says, is "forcing research, where the utilities are weak, on means other than pumped storage."

Not all the residents of the region oppose the plant. Some favor it and some have not made up their minds. For the latter, the conflict between the need for power and the need to protect the environment has not been resolved.

The utilities say they are studying the effect of the plant on the environment before making any final decision on site selection.

And they point out such benefits as nine recreation areas and roadside parks proposed in the vicinity of a pumped storage plant they are completing further north at Northfield Mountain, near the intersection of the Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Vermont borders.

The power companies also say the plant would provide significant tax revenues to the community where it is located.

Finally, the utilities say that sites other than those in Massachusetts and Connecticut are under consideration. An NU spokesman in Sheffield says the search also involves two sites in Maine and New Hampshire.

However, NU already has asked the FPC for a permit for exclusive exploratory rights at Plainfield Pond and Canaan Mountain. This is the first legal step the utilities must take if they are serious about the two locations.

BLECC is opposing this request in its protest to the FPC. If NU gets the permit and decides on one of the two sites, its next step would be to file for an FPC construction permit.

The argument put forward most strongly by NU is that the need for more electrical energy, produced with an eye on economy, reliability and the environment, is paramount.

As Northeast President Lellan F. Sillin Jr., who is a member of the President's Advisory Committee on Environmental Quality, once put it:

"In the future, interest in electrical service will be determined not only on the basis of cost and quality of service, but also ... on industry's ability to cope with environmental problems."

Roesler, however, believes it is impossible to put a dollar value on environmental change. He says that equating power needs with environmental requirements is like comparing "a loaf of bread and a cloudy sky."

"I doubt you could develop," he says, "a meaningful differential between the cost of an alternate site or method and the cost of damage to the environment."

There is yet another issue. The proximity of the Massachusetts-Connecticut sites to New York State leads Roesler to believe Northeast Utilities will "peddle" its output to power-starved New York City.

If NU obtains an exploration permit from the FPC, then, says BLECC, the fight will be carried to the courts, just as other conservation groups are doing in opposing electrical projects in New York, Vermont, Maryland, California, Minnesota and Florida.

'U' committee searches for effective copy center

By DAVE PERSON
State News Staff Writer

The University Committee on Business Affairs is looking for the most effective approach toward copy centers on campus.

A copy center is a printing facility designed to replace copy work such as Xerox and printing methods like the stencil and ditto.

The copy center system is cheaper, faster and of higher quality than copy machines, James E. Theroux, administrative assistant to the vice president for business and finance, said.

The system is also faster, simpler, of higher quality and equal to or cheaper than stencil systems, Theroux said in a letter to the committee.

The center can produce 100 copies of a single original in about one minute, he said. A master plate can be produced in about seven seconds.

Five copy centers are now located on campus. They serve the Dept. of Chemistry, the College of Education, the Division of Engineering Research, the Continuing Education Service, and the College of Agriculture. Other colleges and departments have requested the facilities.

The Committee on Business Affairs is considering having Central Printing take over the leases on the centers and distribute the facilities strategically over the campus to be used by any department or college having the greatest need.

"All present installations at MSU are of a type that handle printing for only the departments or college where the equipment is located," Theroux said.

"They are not available to all departments in the vicinity. Because of their high volume capacity (35,000 sheets per day) copy centers should be able to service most of the departments in their vicinity."

Rental cost for copy center facilities is $801 per month and $520 per month for labor.

Coordinated copy center systems are in use at the University of Wisconsin, the University of Chicago, Northwestern University, Ohio State University and the University of Michigan.

Minors register

Also accompanying the women to the clerk's office was Wally Reese, Okemos junior and a member of Movement for a New Congress (MNC).

Reese said MNC was preparing to help MSU students who may want to register before January 1 in East Lansing. He said the MNC would attempt to obtain legal assistance for students to take mandamus action against the city if they are refused registration.

"We're not quite ready yet," Reese said, adding that Vaughn only informed him Wednesday morning that registrations were to begin that afternoon.

Vaughn said he plans to take about 25 young people to the Detroit clerk's office on Monday to continue the early registration drive.

"Any progressive city would want to aid anyone who wanted to register to vote," Vaughn said.

Vaughn said he has already "cleared" the Monday registrations with Detroit Clerk George Edwards, who Vaughn said, will "greet the young people with open arms."

Former teacher outlines state laws on sex education

By JONI BENN
State News Staff Writer

"Sex education at the high school level inevitably falls within the realm of personal conscience and values," Juntia Jubb of the state Dept. of Education said Tuesday.

Speaking to an Education 327 class, a course in social science teaching methods, Miss Jubb outlined Michigan laws governing sex education and family information guidelines in the public schools.

Existing Michigan laws on sex education are governed by tradition, Miss Jubb told the group.

"The law was written in the thirties, revised in the fifties, questioned in the sixties and is only beginning to be answered in the seventies," she said.

Miss Jubb, a former teacher in the Michigan schools, faced a barrage of questions as she outlined Act 44 of the Public Acts of 1968, the present Michigan law.

Although the law provides for instruction in sex education in public schools, it expressly prohibits reference to birth control or abortion. Family planning information may be legally presented to a classroom, but birth control instruction may not, Miss Jubb said.

The effectiveness of the limitations set down in the state law has never been contested in the courts, she said.

It is unfortunate that many schools think that showing movies on the reproductive process to separate physical education courses is adequate sex education, Miss Jubb said.

Although the state has established an office to deal with sex education instruction, its operations are hindered by a lack of funds, she continued.

Miss Jubb stressed a need to develop a sex information library, and encouraged in-service training for those teaching sex education.

She also emphasized a need to educate parents on the objectives of school sex and health education programs.

"Parents sense a need to open channels of communications on the subject with their children," Miss Jubb said, "they are understandably afraid of what is being taught to their children. Unfortunately a parent of three children attending a PTA meeting is afraid to admit that he knows very little about what sex education is."

Mountain climbers scale Yosemite Park cliff face

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Calif. (AP) — Two hardy mountain climbers struggled triumphantly to the top of El Capitan just before noon Wednesday, completing in 27 days the first conquest of the sheer 3,000-foot southeast face of the giant rock sentinel over-looking Yosemite Valley.

Warren Harding, 46, and Dean Caldwell, 27, had a relatively easy climb up the last 400 sloping feet to the summit after their perilous scaling of the vertical cliff. El Capitan itself is 7,400 feet above sea level.

At the top, reachable by foot trails from the opposite side, a party of about 80 friends and newsmen had food and refreshment for the weary, half-starved adventurers.

Park Rangers said both men were in good spirits and appeared to be in fine physical shape, although they had eaten their last scraps of food Tuesday.

Harding's 79-year-old mother, awaiting him, on the valley floor, exclaimed, "He's still my little boy. This is the longest he's been away."

Harding, of West Sacramento, Calif., is the acknowledged dean of American rock climbing. Caldwell, of Portland, Ore., is a veteran of the climbing sport in North America and the Peruvian Andes.

The men began their dangerous ascent Oct. 23, carrying all of their supplies of food, water, ropes, steel pitons, hand drills, hammers and sleeping bags.

The vertical and sometimes overhanging granite offered few handholds and rare spots to stand. It had to be climbed by driving pitons into cracks or drilling expansion bolts into smooth surfaces, then inching up a nylon rope and repeating the process.

In the time remaining you could become a priest or brother and help a new world emerge. Write today:
