S. Viets dispatch troops to bolster forces in Laos

SAIGON (AP) — The South Vietnamese military command is dispatching as many as 16,000 troops northward to bolster battered units fighting seven North Vietnamese regiments in southern Laos, military sources near the battle front reported Sunday.

They said the troops were being drawn from other areas of South Vietnam and flown to the Laotian operations zones in C130 cargo planes.

The South Vietnamese originally committed 16,000 troops to the Laotian incursion that began Feb. 8. It could not be determined from the military informants at Quang Tri how many of the 16,000 fresh troops would be replacements or how many would be classified as additional troops inside Laos.

The South Vietnamese forces facing seven enemy regiments in Laos are engaged in the biggest battle yet of the Indochina war. A North Vietnamese regiment at full strength numbers 2,900 men.

Lt. Gen James W. Sutherland, commander of U.S. forces supporting the South Vietnamese offensive, said the North Vietnamese appear to be marshalling all their forces to thwart the Laotian drive.

"This is it," he said at Khe Sanh. "The enemy has chosen to react with everything he's got left so it appears we'll have to fight him right here."

As the third week of the Laotian campaign ended, the fierce fighting of the past several days appeared eased somewhat around the South Vietnamese bases on Hills 30 and 31.

But U.S. helicopters providing fire support still were drawing heavy antiaircraft fire and the number of losses continued to mount. The U.S. Command announced that three more were shot down Saturday, and field reports said another went down Sunday. Three crewmen were reported killed and one wounded in the four crashes.

The command acknowledged a total of 35 helicopters and two fighter - bombers destroyed in the Laotian operation on both sides of the border. A spokesman said American air casualties were 40 men killed, 18 missing and 34 wounded.

There were field reports of many more helicopters shot down or damaged. The U.S. Command reports only those aircraft that are considered total losses.

Though ground fighting was at a lower level in Laos, it remained heavy more than 30 miles to the south in eastern Cambodia where a parallel drive by more than 20,000 South Vietnamese is trying to smash North Vietnamese supply routes, base camps and sanctuaries.

North Vietnamese troops attacked the headquarters of three South Vietnamese task forces and a ranger battalion north of Highway 7, a main supply route.

AAUP votes to seek sole bargaining right

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

The MSU chapter of the American Assn. of University Professors voted Thursday to seek recognition as the exclusive bargaining agent for MSU faculty by a 48 - 5 vote.

At a meeting in the Union, AAUP members set May 15 as the target for completion of a drive to obtain authorization cards from at least 30 per cent of the faculty.

The AAUP enters into competition with MSU Faculty Associates, an affiliate of the Michigan Education Assn. (MEA), which announced the start of an organizational drive a week earlier at a meeting in Kellogg Center.

Faculty for Collective Negotiations, an unaffiliated campus group, also is expected to announce the beginning of a card distribution campaign this week.

David Klein, an attorney for the AAUP, said the AAUP is involved in drives to organize faculty members at Wayne State University, the University of Detroit, Lawrence Institute of Technology and Eastern Michigan University.

Faculty at Central Michigan University have selected MAHE as their bargaining agent, and faculty at Oakland University have selected the AAUP.

In response to a statement by an AAUP member who said he was concerned that collective bargaining would lead to the "complete bureaucratization of the University," McKay said that there was no reason for the University's AAUP to "follow other models."

Sigmund Nosow, professor of labor and industrial relations and president of the MSU chapter of the AAUP, said that 52 per cent of all AAUP members replying to a survey of the AAUP membership favor a formal collective bargaining contract between faculty and administration.

Twenty - three per cent were opposed to collective bargaining with 24 per cent undecided.

Nosow said that more than 80 per cent of the respondents said they favor the AAUP as bargaining agent should collective bargaining come to MSU.

Authorization cards will be distributed by the AAUP this week, Nosow said.

In response to a question concerning the feasibility of using the Elected Faculty Council as bargaining agent, C. Keith Groty, asst. professor of labor and industrial relations, said that although it is not a common procedure, it is "not impossible for a standing organization within the University to sever its ties with the administration" and become the faculty bargaining agent.

Fire guts Lansing buildings

By BOB ROACH
State News Staff Writer

mpeted by crowds and winds gusting
m.p.h., hundreds of Lansing area
Saturday night battled a two - fire called Lansing's worst in nearly ars.
teating several blocks of private s, the blaze reportedly broke out in ld Bishop Furniture Co. warehouse on er St., on the city's near - North Side, e spreading to the Grand Rapids Sash oor company across the street.
hough no cost estimate of damage available Sunday, both buildings were oyed and the nearby Staszuk Moving and Storage Co. was damaged. No cause had been determined.

Several moving vans and a Lansing fire truck were destroyed in the blaze that sent four firefighters to the hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Lansing Fire Dept. officials said a general alarm was declared shortly after the units responded to the initial alarm at 6:48 p.m.

For the next several hours more than 300 firemen struggled to control the blaze. Residents of the five - block area between Turner Street and the Motor Wheel Co. plant on North Larch Street were immediately evacuated from their homes when the strong westerly winds carried large chunks of flaming debris several blocks from the scene of the fire.

Unofficial reports Saturday night said that approximately 25 homes in the area sustained minor roof and porch fires.

Congested traffic and crowds of onlookers hampered the flow of firemen and equipment to the scene, until members of five area police agencies were able to cordon off the area and reroute traffic.

Police had been alerted to watch for looting of the vacated homes but reported Sunday that no arrests had been made.

At 9:30 Saturday night, a state of controlled urgency still prevailed at the Lansing Fire Dept. headquarters, at Shawansee and Grand avenues, about a mile from the fire.

Scores of grimy firefighters shuffled upstairs to the makeshift clinic where volunteers salved blistered ears and noses.

In the downstairs kitchen volunteers, including Lansing Mayor Gerald Graves and his wife, pushed hot coffee and hamburgers at tired firemen who trudged in to relax before returning to the blaze.

Raymond P. Breathauer, a deputy chief who had directed the shuttling of men and equipment from the firehouse, called the fire the worst in recent years.

"In the past 35 or 40 years, this is the biggest we've had in terms of area. The last comparable major fire was in 1934 when the old Hotel Kerns burned down," he said.

Warming his hands around a cup of hot coffee, Deputy Chief Joseph Buttraw, who was the first on the scene, said there was a lot of smoke coming from the Bishop warehouse, but little in the way of flames.

"Then all of a sudden fire sprung out all over," he said. "We first saw flames reflected from the river on the west side, then the wind whipped it all over. Once it started, it was the fastest thing I've ever seen. It just went up all at once and there were some small, muffled explosions."

Ladder Truck No. 5, the department's oldest serviceable truck, was caught by flames and destroyed, the firemen said.

Tired and grimy, but still speaking affectionately of the old rig that he drove, Wilson told how the truck was trapped by

Referral agencies provide N.Y. abortions

about 25 such abortion referral services have begun full ations since the liberal New York law took effect July 1, 0.

New York's law provides for legal medical abortions for any women up to the 24th week of pregnancy.

Since the change in the New York law about 150,000 women have taken advantage of the change and obtained abortions.

About half of the women are from the state of New York.
Michigan has a statistically impressive stake in the number of women to obtain abortions in New York.

The Detroit News recently estimated that 30,000 Michigan women have received legal abortions in New York.

Of this number only one woman in four operated through a non-profit referral service, while the other three-fourths paid an average of $650 through one of the profit making referral services.

Michigan Clergy for Problem Pregnancy counseling service handled the other one-fourth (4,500) of the women.

They can put a person in touch with a clinic where an abortion can be performed for as little as $150, depending upon the term of the pregnancy.

The non-profit organization talks to women interested in abortions and discusses the alternatives to abortion.

The clergymen tell the women where they can call to arrange an abortion, but the woman has to take the initiative by setting up the appointment and providing her own transportation to New York.

Oil plans probed

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee is finding it difficult to obtain from the State Department details of South Vietnamese plans to grant potentially lucrative offshore oil concessions to American firms.

As a result, committee sources reported Sunday, chairman J.W. Fulbright, D - Ark., has sent a second letter to the State Dept. after he found an initial department reply unsatisfactory.

Fulbright has been asked to hold hearings on alleged connections between the continuing U.S. presence in Vietnam and the plans for oil exploration.

Women denied vote

The men of little Liechtenstein kept up the barriers against women's lib Sunday, deciding by a mere 80 ballots not to give women the vote.

In a nationwide referendum the male burghers of the world's smallest hereditary monarchy decided 1,897 to 1,817 against female suffrage.

Only four nations — Jordan, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and Yemen — still do not grant women the vote.

Israel considers plans

Israel's Cabinet met Sunday to discuss the latest Middle East peace moves, and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat claimed that his diplomatic moves to regain occupied Arab soil has placed the Israelis on the defensive for the first time.

Addressing the Palestine National Council of guerrilla leaders in Cairo, Sadat declared that his strategy was aimed at forcing Israel to expose its "aggressive and expansionist intentions."

Cairo's expressed willingness to reach a peaceful settlement would win universal sympathy for the Arabs should they be forced to resort to military measures to try to regain their lost lands," Sadat asserted.

Israeli officials are reported studying several proposed maps involving partial withdrawal from territory won from the Arabs in the 1967 war, but the leaders have said they would never return to the prewar borders.

Government faces test

The world's largest - ever polling operation spread over 10 days, is beginning Monday in India to determine the fate of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Socialist government.

An electorate of 275 million - half the country's population - will be eligible to vote in what is considered the most crucial election in 23 years of independence.

For the first time, the ruling congress party is faced with a major challenge from a four-party opposition alliance that campaigned on the single platform of ousting Mrs. Gandhi.

Rail talks look up

With some optimism, negotiators for the United Transportation Union and the railroads bargained to resolve work - rule differences Sunday in Washington, the last day the union is forbidden to strike.

A strike of the 90,000 UTU rail workers immediately after the midnight deadline is not expected.

"We're hopeful of a settlement before midnight," said Asst. Secretary of Labor W.J. Usery Jr., who added he expected talks to continue on a voluntary basis after that hour if no agreement was ready.

Casey testimony questioned

A federal judge disputes an account of an old court case given to a Senate committee by William J. Casey, President Nixon's nominee for chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

An exchange of letters with Judge J. Braxton Craven Jr. of the Fourth Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals was released Sunday in Washington by Sen. William Proxmire, D - Wisc., who has succeeded in delaying a favorable committee report on the nomination pending further study.

Proxmire said they show serious discrepancies in Casey's testimony concerning a plagiarism case.

U.S. ties to Greek coup noted

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

The Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) - engineered Greek coup of 1967 which placed a "brutal, totalitarian regime" in power was probably accomplished "without the knowledge of America's civilian leaders," Andreas Papandreou said Friday.

Papandreou, a deputy in the Greek Parliament at the time of the coup, said the most tragic aspect of the coup was that "President Johnson probably didn't know any more about it than we did."

"It appears to me that a 'National Security Management' clique of (presidential advisers) Rostow and Kissinger rule this country without the knowledge or consent of the President, much as they did in 1967."

"These people feel that the strategic decision - making processes of the countries of the world are too important to be entrusted to the civilian rulers."

"The Greek tragedy is an American problem," Papandreou told the small audience in the Auditorium - "because this country is no more in the hands of the American public than is Greece in the hands of the Greek people."

Papandreou said the United States is maintaining control of Greece via the Pentagon, despite growing protest on the part of American legislators.

"Senator Muskie recently wrote me a letter condemning the brutality of the junta regime which is violating every principle of democracy," Papandreou said.

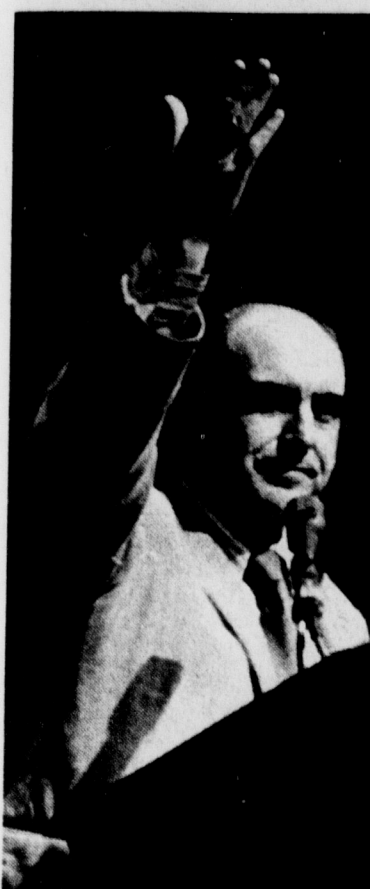

"In addition," he continued, "virtually every potential Democratic party leader has expressed outrage over the situation in my country."

Papandreou, now a professor of economics and director of graduate programs at York University in Toronto, said the coup took place because "the CIA could not afford to have us in power."

"We (the Center Union party) were a progressive group. We wanted to be allies of the West much as Denmark and Norway were, but not satellites."

"It was generally agreed on all sides that in the elections scheduled in 1967 we would be sure winners," he said, "and the CIA could not afford that."

"We were determined to destroy, and I wish to emphasize the word 'destroy,' the garrison state which the United States had been supporting since the end of World War II."

"We were determined to put the rule of Greece back into the hands of the Greek people, and that is why we were overthrown," he charged.

"To permit the Greek people to chart their own course would be impossible for the military of this country. They cannot risk the security foothold which they enjoy."

"In terms of logistics, in terms of reconnaissance, in terms of intelligence and espionage, Greece is vital to the security of the Western world."

"Democracy for the Greeks is a luxury which the Pentagon cannot afford," Papandreou said.

He claimed that while the coup was engineered by NATO and the CIA, the CIA relinquished its power to the Pentagon when "it saw what a mistake it had made."

In a press conference held prior to the speech, Papandreou said "all talk of the junta being liberalized is false. Nothing could be farther from the truth."

"The junta takes its orders from the Pentagon, and the Pentagon says 'no.' The Pentagon uses Greece for its center of espionage in that part of the world, it is the base for the Sixth Fleet and it is vital in maintaining the balance of power between the Soviet Union and the United States in the Mediterranean."

Papandreou also charged the United States and the Soviet Union are only "superficially in conflict," that the hegemony attempted by both powers in the postwar period has ended in detente.

"What it all boils down to is this: 'You do what you want in Greece and I'll do what I want in Czechoslovakia.'"

Though critical of the official U.S. stance on Greece, Papandreou said that he was "definitely not anti-American."

"If anything, I am sadly pro-American," he said. "I am sad because the American people do not know what is happening in Greece anymore than their President or senators do. In investigations and hearings following the coup, it became obvious that civilians do not rule this country."

IRA organizer kidnapped, hurt

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — A political organizer of the Irish Republican Army who was kidnapped from his home was found early Sunday beaten and bleeding beside a country road.

Police said they were working on the theory the attack was part of the fratricidal warfare in the IRA that has arisen over how to deal with the troubles in British - ruled Northern Ireland.

Denis Reynolds, a 30-year-old schoolteacher, was found five miles from his home in Drogheda, 30 miles from Dublin.

A hospital spokesman said:

"Apart from being beaten up is not seriously ill."

Reynolds is a member of Sinn Fein, a recognized political party in the Irish Republic, militant parent — the IRA — outlawed, however.

Reynolds is an active member of the Marxist - oriented Dublin-based IRA that has swung to the line of trying to drive Ireland on the political front.

Bernadette Devlin supports strategy.

A splinter faction - called themselves the "Provisionals" and blamed by the British for the guerrilla warfare in the — are dedicated to driving the British by any means.

The Provisionals denied a part in the kidnapping.

Reynolds answered a knock on his door early Sunday. The men grabbed him at gunpoint, dragged him into a car and off toward the republic's border with the North.

Two other men drove another car that police might have been a maneuver as the alarm went to set up road blocks.

Police said both cars were believed to have Northern Ireland registration plates.

In Northern Ireland, a Roman Catholic crowd, including women wearing the uniform of the IRA, stoned an army post in Belfast.

The crowd hurled stones, bottles but troops did not retaliate and there were reports of injuries.

Panel calls for ed reform

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
State News Staff Writer

Three local educators teamed with Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, Thursday in calling educational reform one of the top crises facing the United States in the 1970s.

The panel, addressing some 150 students and teachers, emphasized the urgency of changes needed in U.S. schools. "We are at our last hope," Vaughn said. "If we can't get the blacks, the browns, the young and the dissatisfied radicals to bring about innovative change, it stands little chance of ever coming about."

James McKee, professor of sociology, said reform has little opportunity of beginning on the university level.

"Colleges have rarely undertaken educational reform from within," he said. "Usually they operate under quite orthodox and rigid systems."

McKee said university faculty members are the most resistant to change.

"Professors feel that students are a threat to their professional rights," he said.

"The true test of student involvement will be if any significantly different judgments come from student sat-on boards. Students on boards and committees must be programatically prepared and able to look at issues and agendas from a distinctively student standpoint."

McKee warned that if they "don't do their homework" on committee affairs, students will be co-opted by faculty members who will easily coerce them.

Dale Alum, associate professor of secondary education and curriculum, called for increased options in the primary and secondary grades.

"Kids in school don't have options," he said. Most of the choices available to them are like asking the kid if he wants diphtheria, whooping cough or measles."

Alum urged a relating of "cognitive standards."

"There's more to a human being than his cognitive self," he said. "There are a great number of psychological needs that must, but as of now, aren't being met in our schools. This postponing of gratification has got to go."

Robert W. Docking of the East Lansing school system agreed with Alum's judgment on the shortage of options.

"Parents and students alike should be given choices in education," he said. "In East Lansing, we're trying to give them the option of where to send their kids to school as well as what they will learn."

Docking called the state's schools "deplorable" and cited a lack of achievement and innovation in nearly all of its districts.

Jews pressure Russians

MOSCOW (AP) — A group of Jews staged a sit-in at the Supreme Soviet building last week and won a promise from the government to make a major decision on the Jewish question, reliable sources said.

Actions such as the sit-ins are in the Soviet Union.

The sources said Alexander S. Dumin, deputy chief of the Supreme Soviet reception unit, told them the decision would be made public by today.

The "Provisional" Supreme Soviet is demonstrating Jews, all seeking to leave Russia, have expressed skepticism over Dumin's promise, however.

Following a nine-hour confrontation in the building in downtown Moscow, Dumin told the demonstrators:

"According to a decision of this office, all of these problems you have spoken of will be decided upon by March 1. This is the decision of very high government officials."

"It will cover not the common problem of all Jews, but your personal desire to leave."

One Jew who participated in the sit-in said Sunday: "We cannot hide our hope that the authorities have at last decided to do something. But in all honesty, not many of us are truly optimistic."

"We have been given a lot of promises during the past few years. None of them has been fulfilled. There is little reason to believe he (Dumin) had any motive other than to avoid a confrontation between us and the KGB (secret police) — he knew we would not leave the place without some form of satisfaction."

The informants gave this account of what happened:

At 11 a.m. Wednesday, the 24 Jews filed into the reception bureau and presented a statement demanding free emigration and an end to persecution of those who have expressed a desire to leave the Soviet Union for Israel.

Making it clear that they would not leave until they received an answer, the Jews waited six hours before Dumin appeared.

When the Jews asked him to justify the Soviet government's refusal to allow free emigration of Jews to Israel, Dumin replied: "You have the right to request permission and we have the right to turn you down."

Governments' chunk of pay check lessens

NEW YORK (AP) — You will be working two hours and 37 minutes out of an eight-hour day this year just to pay your taxes, the Tax Foundation, Inc. said Sunday.

That means that if you earn $10,000 a year, taxes will take $13.05 out of $40 daily wages.

The foundation, a private research organization, said that of this average daily bite out of your paycheck, $8.70 would go to the federal government and $4.35 to state and local governments.

Sharp as the tax pinch will be this year, it isn't quite as painful as last year, when it took two hours and 43 minutes each working day to earn enough to pay the tax collector.

The decline is due in part to federal tax reductions, the foundation said.

Court decision erodes civil liberties in U.S.

With the new Nixon appointees tipping the scale, the Supreme Court Wednesday chipped away at the Warren Court's landmark 1966 Miranda decision.

In the first case the new court has heard on the Miranda decision, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, writing for the majority, said a statement that was inadmissible as evidence because the suspect had not been informed of his Miranda rights — the right to remain silent, the right to a lawyer, the right to know that anything he says may be held against him — still can be used in court to contradict a suspect's testimony.

Thus, if a defendant blurts out a confession before being informed of his rights, the prosecutor cannot convict him on that information but can introduce it as evidence to show that his courtroom testimony is contradictory to his confession.

The 5-4 decision does not overrule the Miranda decision but does substantially narrow a defendant's rights by allowing the police to secure a confession illegally and then use the confession against the defendant, should he choose to testify in his own behalf. Justice William J. Brennan, in the dissenting opinion, said the decision "tells the police that they may freely interrogate an accused incommunicado and without counsel and know that although any statement they obtain in violation of Miranda can't be used on the state's direct case, it may be introduced if the defendant has the temerity to testify in his own defense."

The 5-4 decision may indicate the new conservative-liberal court split that could overrule many of the Warren court's 5-4 libertarian and civil rights decisions. The majority coalition included Burger and Harry Blackmun, Nixon's two appointees, and three justices who dissented in the 1966 Miranda decision — John Harlan, Potter Stewart and Byron White. Brennan's dissent was joined by William O. Douglas and Thurgood Marshall, with Hugo Black dissenting without stating reasons.

Burger based his opinion on a 1954 decision allowing a prosecutor to use inadmissible evidence obtained in an illegal search to contradict a defendant's testimony. The benefits of exposing false testimony, he said, outweighed "the speculative possibility that impermissible police conduct will be encouraged" by the decision.

The court is sanctioning lawbreaking by law officers, it seems, to obtain evidence and testimony, so long as that evidence is used only to refute a defendant's testimony on the stand.

A broad interpretation of the decision by the lower courts could severely infringe on a defendant's rights by allowing police to squeeze a confession out of him, whether it be truthful or not, and then coerce the defendant into staying off the witness stand in his own behalf because his testimony would allow a prosecutor to use the illegally obtained confession.

The chip by no means leaves the Miranda decision impotent, but neither will it remain entirely intact. An Indianapolis police legal adviser said it is now customary to warn people of their Miranda rights, and, hence, the decision would be useful for prosecution only if a suspect blurts something out before being informed of his rights.

But what happens if, either by police action or further court erosion of Miranda, police begin stalling for time before warning a defendant of his rights, just to see if perhaps he might "blurt" something out, or confess under a little police pressure. A delay between the time a person is arrested and the time he is informed of his rights could make a great deal of difference and would be difficult for the courts to police.

More importantly, perhaps, the decision may be a portent of the future. Further attacks by the new five-man majority on the Warren Court, civil libertarian decisions could seriously deteriorate already eroded civil liberties, lending court sanction to the wave of repression and abridged personal liberties.

Administration unclear on co-ed living guideline

The recently passed co-ed housing guidelines are already under fire by the administration. The guise is parliamentary; the intent may not be.

Officially, President Wharton's office is questioning the validity of the 4-3 vote that approved the guidelines. Had Trustee Kenneth Thompson, R-Grand Rapids, been present and voted with the minority, the guideline vote would presumably have failed on a 4-4 tie. President Wharton concludes that, perhaps, the Board should reconsider the motion.

Chances are probably slim that this will happen. Within the scope of the trustees' bylaws the vote is legal. Reconsideration can only be initiated by a trustee who originally voted with the winning side, according to Robert's Rules of Order, which Trustee Patricia Carrigan says governs trustee meetings.

Procedural questions aside, the co-ed living guidelines should be allowed to stand. The time of in loco parentis has passed. Allowing co-ed living to 21-year-olds and students above freshman status with parental permission belatedly recognizes the realities of contemporary society.

There also are pragmatic considerations. Residence halls are in fiscal trouble. They can compete with off-campus housing, however, if they are allowed to compete on equal terms. Significantly, very few sexually segregated living units exist in East Lansing.

It could be argued that Wharton is not at all happy with the prospect of co-ed housing. Why else would he be throwing so much procedural flak in the way of an otherwise commonplace motion?

Subtly is always, of course, a comforting trait to find in the Complete Bureaucrat. Procedure aside, however, a substantive decision on co-ed housing from the administration could prove worthwhile.

Fighting dirty to duck the cut

WASHINGTON — The trouble with most business administration schools is that they teach you everything about business except how to keep your job when a company starts to lay off people during an economy drive.

"The reason they don't teach you how to survive during an economy wave," said my friend Wholesworthy, who has lived through every pink slip crisis in his company for 20 years, "is that the only way to keep your job during a personnel reduction is to fight dirty. And schools don't want to admit you have to fight dirty to stay in business."

"Give me an example," I said. "All right, suppose you are working as an executive for the Soft-Serve Tennis Ball Co. The word is out that there is going to be a 15 per cent across-the-board cut in jobs. You don't sit back and wait to see if you're in the 15 per cent. You act immediately."

"You go to see Croton, the vice president in charge of personnel, and you say 'if you have to fire someone in my department, Mr. Croton, I would prefer it be me rather than O'Toole. You see, O'Toole has had some serious problems and that is why he hasn't been able to function for the past six months.'"

"Croton will reply 'Problems. What problems?'"

"His drinking, sir. When O'Toole first came here he never touched a drop. Then he fell apart. But it wasn't his fault. You'd have taken to drink too if you had been under the pressure he's faced lately."

"Pressure? What kind of pressure?"

"Well, sir, O'Toole's a friend of mine and that's why I hope I'm not violating a confidence. The pressure came mainly from his gambling. O'Toole started losing heavily to the bookies and they threatened to tell his wife about the woman O'Toole was keeping if he didn't pay his debts."

"O'Toole was gambling and keeping a woman and he's got a drinking problem and you want me to keep him on the payroll?" Croton will say.

"We all make mistakes, Mr. Croton," you protest. "As soon as O'Toole straightens out his financial affairs and makes up his mind whether he's going to get rid of his wife or his mistress, he'll be a great addition to the company."

"At this point Croton will get suspicious and say, 'How come you're begging for O'Toole to stay and you go?'"

"Because," you reply, "the shape O'Toole's in, he'll never be able to get another job, while with my record and

OUR READERS' MIND

Low enrollment by majors no guide for re-allocation

To the Editor:

I found Professor Wolterink's remarks on university graduate programs (reported in your Feb. 17 issue) very thoughtful and interesting. I am not sure, however, that staff imbalances are as easy to recognize and deal with as he seems to suggest. For example, he lists my department, philosophy, as one of six which "have a light enrollment of graduate and undergraduate majors." And he makes a general proposal that "extra retirement slots in those colleges that have sufficient faculty members go to colleges that are understaffed."

It is true that our department has a relatively light enrollment of majors, but not a light total enrollment or a low ratio of students to staff. This term, for example, our total teaching staff adds up to 19 (plus an awkward, extra fraction) regular, full-time members. Class enrollments total about 1,850. The ratio of some 97 students per each regular instructor is quite high, much higher than would be viewed as normal for most philosophy departments in universities of a quality comparable to ours.

To sum up, I am in agreement with Professor Wolterink on two points, and suspect that he would agree with me on a third. (1) There are, within the university, serious imbalances with respect to staff and other resources which need to be corrected. (2) As things stand, with the likelihood of additional support, to correct imbalances will require changes in existing pattern of allocating resources. It is not the case, however, that enrollment by majors is a reliable sufficient guide to the re-allocation process.

Upgraded

To the Editor:

In reply to the letter in the Feb. 17 issue by Mr. Antekier, "Football Downgraded": Miami University of Ohio has long been held in high regard as a football power in the Mid-American Conference. Almost every year the coaches have termed Miami the "team beat" in order to capture the conference championship. Miami has always been known for its clean, aggressive football for its success against Big Ten teams. I recall the 1962 win over Purdue (10-0) and the 1964 win over Northwestern (24-24) as examples. The past several seasons Miami has ranked nationally in defense statistics. Over the past two seasons, a total of less than 15 points have separated Miami from two undefeated seasons.

Let us not forget the many great players and/or coaches at Miami over the years: Earl "Red" Blaik (former coach of Army), Paul Brown (former coach of Cleveland Browns, now coach of Cincinnati Bengals), Weeb Eubank of New York Jets, Ara Parsegian (New Dame), Woody Hayes (Ohio State), Cozza (Yale), John Pont (Indiana), Schembechler (Michigan), Ernie Kellum (defensive back Cleveland Browns), Bob Babich (linebacker San Diego Chargers) to name those that come to mind immediately.

C'mon Mr. Antekier, Miami of Ohio will be a fine football opponent for Michigan State, not one that will assure winning season for MSU. You can count on that.

POINT OF VIEW

Grand jury demonstrates bias

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following Point of View was submitted by David Coburn for the United Front and Brown Berets of Kalamazoo.

On Wednesday, Feb. 17, in Kalamazoo, Michigan, a peaceful demonstration to protest the invasion of Laos was held. This march and rally was called by the United Front, supported by STP, a campus (Western Michigan University) organization; the Brown Berets, and local church and peace groups. After the crowd left Bronson Park, individual actions occurred which lead to confrontations and arrests.

The United Front, an organization composed of concerned community people, is attempting to institute needed reforms in the Kalamazoo County Jail, a free breakfast program to feed elementary school children from poor neighborhoods, a tenant's union and correction of educational problems within the school system. Because of the nature of our reforms, we have been highly critical of certain public officials in Kalamazoo County. A citizens' grand jury originally called to investigate the drug traffic in Kalamazoo County has been broadened to include those events leading up to and occurring on Feb. 17.

For the reasons stated below, the aforementioned organizations feel that unjust suppression and intense persecution has been brought to bear upon those of a specific political persuasion and with a firm commitment to combat the ills of their community and society at large. The United Front wishes to state that we as a community organization are being harassed and intimidated by elements of the local political machinery. Therefore, we appeal to those concerned individuals and parties to act to halt this misuse of the judicial system and laws of our state!

Because of the composition, bias, haste of impaneling and intent of this grand jury, we believe that its use as a means to investigate the peace rally is highly inappropriate.

Public announcements have been made in the Kalamazoo Gazette by involved or concerned public officials. These officials are directly related to the functioning of the grand jury and will in specific instances be required to render unbiased and non-judgmental decisions. From these published remarks we cannot in any way understand how these officials can be impartial to those individuals involved in the demonstration. By their own statements, they have without a doubt taken a pre-trial position. Their eagerness to make public statements has disqualified them from related legal proceedings. We insist that these officials disqualify themselves.

The disturbances were witnessed by Judge Fox, who called for the grand jury investigation, as well as two other judges who will be presiding at the grand jury. The county prosecutor and several of his assistants were also witnesses to the disturbances. The prosecuting attorney has made a statement to the Kalamazoo Gazette saying, "This is only the beginning... they've thrown down the gauntlet." Because these people were witnesses and because of the prosecuting attorney's statement, we feel that the impartiality of the grand jury will be seriously jeopardized.

The three presiding judges called upon the grand jury to investigate the disturbances, presumably because of the extent of the violence that occurred. The damage was estimated at $1,000, which for the large part was broken windows. The windows, we might add, were repaired by jail inmate labor.

Last spring, a campus riot occurred in Kalamazoo with damage estimated at over $10,000, including broken windows and some damage done to several buildings. No grand jury investigation was called. In light of that we cannot help but feel that the calling of the grand jury to investigate this comparatively small disturbance is a purposeful and willful intention on the part of governmental machinery in Kalamazoo to block the United Front in its efforts to achieve much needed reforms in this county.

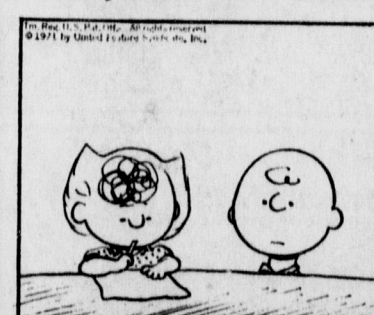

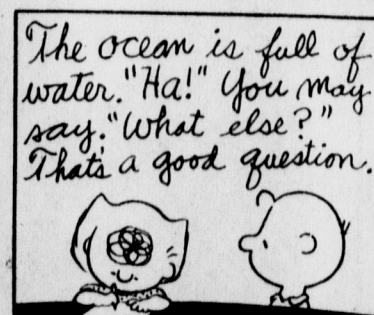

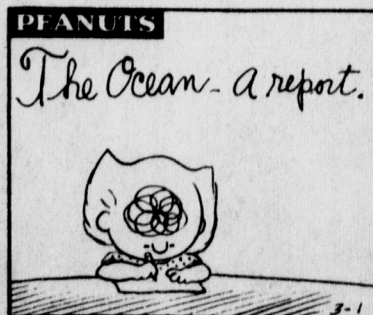

Out of the 150-200 people outside the county building, few were from racial minorities, yet Wednesday's arrests involved 3 Mexican-Americans, one black, 3 people with long hair and another white. In addition to this, certain police officers acted unlawfully and unprofessionally. These obviously warrant investigation as much as the illegal acts of some demonstrators. Yet, the officials who are to preside over the grand jury have created an atmosphere of conflict in which it seems unlikely that both sides will be heard.

On the day following the incident, when Judges Sweet, Fox and Anderson met and decided to utilize the citizens grand jury, there was an atmosphere of hysteria! This atmosphere was created by rumors propagated by certain county officials. The day of the incident, Sheriff Ma informed the Gazette that more violence could re-occur the following day. On following day, 30 sheriff deputies were on special guard duty at the county building at a cost of $300. In addition this, 85 civil defense personnel were activated and present in the building.

The Sheriff's department explained these extraordinary measures by claiming that armed revolutionaries (rumored to be Black Panthers) were plotting with certain students at the university to raid the and free the prisoners by force. Similarly, a member of the county board of supervisors circulated the rumor that the city was sealed off by roadblocks to keep out Black Panthers. All of these rumors and statements were obviously false.

In summation, the decision to broaden the scope of the citizens' grand jury to investigate the incidents of Feb. 17 was made in an atmosphere of anger and hysteria. The illegal activity following the peace rally, while intolerable, is comparatively modest, yet the officials involved in the grand jury overreacted, creating a situation that will be prejudicial to anyone subjected to investigation. For these reasons we urge you to oppose the use of this grand jury as a means of suppressing legitimate dissent in this community.

UFWOC official urges unity

By RICHARD CAMPOS

The secretary-treasurer of the United Farm Workers Organizing Committee (UFWOC), speaking to a crowd of about 100 late Thursday, told of his union's struggles and of the troubles of Mexican-Americans living and working in the United States.

Antonio Oredain spoke of working in the fields as a young man and making just enough money to survive. Now, farmworkers represented by the UFWOC receive medical help and the minimum wage, Oredain said.

An issue Oredain considered important is that of unskilled workers working in the fields.

"When I went to work in a factory I didn't dare ask what wage I would receive because the boss would think that I was interested in making money and not working," he said. "I worked very hard hoping that I might get $2 to $2.50 an hour, but when payday came I looked at my small check and then saw that I was paid $1.75 an hour."

Another issue was what he termed "brother worker pushing brother worker." Farmworkers' brothers who work in the fields in Mexico come to the United States and work for lower wages and ultimately break the strike.

"If they throw the illegal workers in jail for coming to the United States to work, why don't they throw the farmer in jail, too, for bringing them up to break the strike illegally," he asked.

Oredain said people have asked when Cesar Chavez is going to come to Michigan.

Oredain said he tells them that Chavez would not come until the farmworkers do their "homework" by helping each other in the fields of Michigan. A member of the audience asked Oredain, "How can we help the farmworkers?" "You can help by asking people not to buy nonunion lettuce and by not eating nonunion lettuce," he replied.

Deposit bottles return

After studies showed a demand for deposit beverage bottles, shoppers in 86 Wrigley and K-Mart stores in Michigan now will have the option of buying soft drinks in deposit or no-return bottles. More than 60 per cent of Allied Supermarkets, Inc., customers polled in December said they would buy the deposit bottles if they were made available.

POLICE BRIEFS

A 19-YEAR-OLD Fee Hall resident was expected to be freed Sunday afternoon on $2,500 bond after MSU police apprehended him Friday night for possessing marijuana and a hunting knife.

Police said the student broke into a run Friday night after he saw a patrol car on Fee Road. Officers, who said the student acted suspiciously, got out of their car and gave chase. Police said the youth stopped suddenly in an east stairwell in Fee Hall and handed officers a tobacco can believed to contain marijuana.

Police said they found the hunting knife under the student's belt.

The student demanded preliminary examination at arraignment Saturday in East Lansing District Court.

PATROL OFFICERS recovered a stolen automobile early Saturday morning in parking lot I behind the Men's Intramural Building. Police said Michael Kosar, 23, of Detroit, reported the vehicle missing Friday morning from parking Lot L at the corner of Harrison Road and Kalamazoo Street.

Bridal show set for Wednesday

The MSU Floriculture Forum, student organization in the Dept. of Horticulture, will present the seventh annual flower and bridal show at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Fairchild Theater.

The show, entitled "She Walks in Beauty," will consist of three complete weddings, making use of several thousand dollars worth of floral arrangements created completely by students.

The first wedding, "She Walks in Beauty," will have a blue-white color scheme and give examples of simple bridal fashions and formal wear.

The second, "She Walks in Beauty," will show more elaborate ideas in dress and flower fashions for the whole bridal party, church and reception.

For the third and most formal wedding, "She Walks in Beauty," Fairchild will be entirely by candlelight. The wedding will emphasize dark blue and white.

Professional commentators will describe the New York fashions and formal wear modeled by 35 coeds and their escorts.

Following the weddings, there will be a complete reception in a completely landscaped area with more than 7,500 tulips and daffodils including a three-foot tree.

Student struck by truck near freeway ramp

Joseph L. Schechter, Ann Arbor junior, was reported in serious condition Sunday at Sparrow Hospital with injuries sustained Thursday evening when he was struck by a truck near the entrance ramp to I-96, near the I-496 intersection.

The driver of the truck, Roger Butt, 24, of Detroit, told state Police that Schechter ran in front of the truck and was struck by the vehicle. No tickets were issued, troopers said.

'Forty Carats' due on campus Tuesday

The current Broadway comedy hit, "Forty Carats," featuring a New York cast, will be presented Tuesday in the Auditorium as part of MSU's Broadway Theater Package.

Barbara Britton, star of many popular movies and the "Mr. and Mrs. North" TV series, will star here in the role of a fashionable New York divorcee who is wooed and won by a 22-year-old man.

"Forty Carats," which recently concluded a two-year run on Broadway, was originally a French farce by the same pair who wrote "Cactus Flower." Mrs. Jay Allan, author of "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie," turned the French play into the

Purdue rips cagers, 100-70

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

After his Purdue team finished handing MSU a 100-70 loss, a Boilermaker assistant coach tried to console MSU coach Gus Ganakas by saying that the game would be closer the next time the teams met, and he added the old cliché, "You know, when it rains, it pours."

The tired saying provided an apt description of the game played Saturday as the Spartan defense crumbled before the continuous Purdue pressure, releasing a torrent of points that washed MSU out of the Purdue Arena. Even as the game neared the end and both coaches cleared their benches, the Boilermakers were still pouring in the points as they struggled, and succeeded in reaching the century mark.

MSU was never in the ballgame after Purdue reeled off 10 straight points, breaking a 15-15 tie.

The best chance of MSU winning anything during the game came when Brad Van Pelt and Boilermaker center William Franklin traded blows for a brief moment before they were separated by officials and tossed out of the game.

According to Van Pelt, Franklin had given him an elbow in the mouth, Van Pelt shoved him away and then Franklin hit him again. After that there was a brief flurry of blows, none of which did any damage.

For the first eight minutes of the game it appeared as if the game would be close until the end as the two squads traded baskets in between turnovers.

With 12 minutes left in the half Purdue took advantage of two travelling calls against MSU, three straight missed shots and an offensive foul as the Boilermakers scored 10 straight points.

Van Pelt scored the next two baskets for the Spartans to keep the difference between the two teams at 10, but following his ejection from the game Purdue went on another scoring spurt and the lead was increased to 18, the difference at halftime.

MSU never had the satisfaction of being only 18 points down in the second half as Purdue outscored the Spartans 11-2 in the first two minutes, ending any MSU hopes at a comeback.

Purdue held a 32-point margin at three different moments of the game and they ended the game with a 30 point lead after substitute Murray Malveaux put in a 25 foot jumper with six seconds remaining.

Purdue simply had too much physical power for the Spartans to handle. After the first few minutes of the game, however, was Boilermakers George Faerber, hampered by a third foul he replaced, Jim Rogers, completely dominated the game. The quartet equaled the number of rebounds captured by the entire MSU team and they were constantly scoring from inside the Spartan defense.

Faerber played his best game ever as a Boilermaker. The senior captain had 12 chances from the floor and he converted 11 of them, finishing with a total of 24 points, the high for the game. Faerber also added seven rebounds and eight assists to the Boilermakers' cause.

Ford was the other principal antagonist of the Spartans. The big 6-7, 230 forward scored 21 points and had nine rebounds. Ford used his advantages of weight and experience to penetrate the MSU defense easily.

Purdue used both a 3-2 zone and a man to man coverage on defense as they kept the Spartans outside, taking the bad shot.

Bill Kilgore led the Spartans with 17 points and 10 rebounds. His defense, however, was hampered by a third foul he first half. The Spartan center was unable to block the progress of the Purdue forwards as they drove towards the basket because he was afraid of getting his fourth foul.

Rudy Benjamin was the next highest scorer for the Spartans with nine points and Paul Dean added eight.

Ohio State beats U-M

Ohio State opened up a game - and a - half lead in the Big Ten basketball race with a 91-85 win over Michigan Saturday at Ann Arbor.

Alan Hornyak fired home eight straight shots and 17 points in the game's first five minutes and 20 seconds to boost Ohio State into a lead that reached 20 points, led a U-M comeback that finally tied the score with six minutes left before OSU came on again to win. Hornyak finished with 37 points.

Indiana tied U-M for second place by bombing Northwestern, 97-74. The Hoosiers and Michigan are both 8-2 to Ohio State's 10-1.

A Spartan sweep

All that counts now is the Big Ten, and MSU's track team warmed up successfully for next weekend's league clash with a 82-54 trouncing of Iowa Saturday. The Spartans won 10 of 11 events on the track, enough to balance an Iowa edge in the field events. Spartan runners swept four events, the high and low hurdles, the 300 and the 400.

John Morrison and Wayne Hartwick shared hurdle wins, with Morrison taking the highs and Hartwick the lows. Dave Martin completed the sweep in the high sticks while Rich Jacques placed third in the lows. Al Henderson led a MSU sweep in the 440, with Mike Holt and Mike Murphy following, while LaRue Butchee, with a 30.9, claimed a 300 win, Herb Washington finishing second and Tom Spuller third.

Other notable efforts included a 1:51.0 half-mile by senior John Mock, the second best posted in the Big Ten this season, a 4:06.8 in the mile by Ken Popejoy, also second in the league rankings, 6.0 and 6.1 times by Washington and Butchee in the 60, and a 1:10.3 600 by Bob Casleman.

MSU's mile relay continued its excellence, outclassing Iowa with a fieldhouse record - tying 3:14.8. The quartet of Henderson, Murphy, Holt and Casleman had first set the mark three weeks before at the MSU Relays.

Spartan coach Fran Dittrich was pleased with the win, MSU's second against one loss in dual meets this winter.

"I thought the team, with few exceptions, performed excellently," Dittrich said.

Ira Schwartz, in foil, was big winner of the day for MSU defeating all six of his opponents. Bill Mathers was in epee, and Doug McGaw in the same mark in sabre.

Big shot for Big Ten

Michel Chaurest, scoring his third goal of the series, booms home a long slap shot from the right side of Wisconsin goaltender Jim Makey for a sudden death overtime victory last Saturday night. The goal assured the Spartans of the Big Ten title in hockey.

'S' grapplers win finale

The Big Ten championships NCAA tournament are the remaining competition for the Spartans wrestling team this year. Over the weekend the Spartans entertained the Minnesota Gophers and defeated them, 21-9, in a tune-up at the conference tourney next weekend. The victory closed out the Spartans' dual meet schedule and brought their record to 7-3.

The Spartans dominated the meet with seven victories in the matches. Two of the MSU wins came to inexperienced wrestlers Bates and Rod Musser who wrestled for Tom Milkovich and John Abajace, respectively. Greg Johnson and Lon Hicks, 118 and 126, provided MSU with an early 6-0 advantage. A 20-2 margin racked up by Johnson was his second consecutive victory in consecutive weeks. His opponent was able to score only two escape points. Bates broke a long losing streak with his 10-5 win. Hicks had won victories early in the season before his record slumped to 3-7-1 mark prior to the Gopher meet.

Bates drew the starting berth at 134 and wrestled Reid Lamphere, Big Ten runner-up behind Milkovich last year. Lamphere encountered few problems as he chalked up a 16-4 victory.

Mike Ellis almost repeated Johnson's wallop as he coasted to a 16-2 decision over Ron Henrickson. Like Johnson, Ellis gave up only two escapes for his opponent's points. Ellis is now 14-3 this season.

Musser made his first appearance this year and although trailing by only one point after the first period, he suffered a 11-3 setback. After the meet Coach Peninger was pleased with both freshmen

Bates and sophomore Musser.

"We had to put green kids against seasoned kids and you always wish too much," he said. But he added, "not being pinned, itself was a moral victory. I'm very pleased with them."

Peninger said that although Milkovich and Abajace could have wrestled and that they wanted to, he didn't want to risk the chance of recurring injuries that might keep them from the Big Ten meet.

Rick Radman (158) scored a reversal in the second period but was behind 3-2 throughout the final period. Radman, however, won two minutes riding time advantage for a narrow, 4-3 victory.

The Spartans opened up a 21-6 lead with decision victories by Gerald Malecek (167), Bruce Zindel (177) and Dave Ciolek (190). Malecek's victory came over last year's Big Ten champion at 158, Jim Axtell.

Zindel's match was even closer. A takedown at the buzzer gave him a 5-3 win. Ciolek wrestled to an early 4-0 lead and then scored an escape and takedown to complement riding time points for a decisive 9-2 win.

Heavyweight Ben Lewis took his first conference loss as he was defeated by Dave Simonson.

Yes, all resident disbelievers, the MSU hockey team does exist on Saturday nights. And when the Spartans win on a Saturday night, they do it in grand style.

This past Saturday night at the MSU Ice Arena, the Spartan hockey team:

- Beat Wisconsin to totally shatter their Saturday night jinx.
- Took a sweep from a WCHA team for the first time since the early January killing of Michigan.
- Destroyed the long standing overtime jinx that had plagued the Spartans for three, long, agonizing years.
- Broke the all-time single season win mark by an MSU hockey team by copping number 18.
- And last, but surely not least, took the Big Ten title for the first time since the long begone year of 1967.

The Spartans collared the two most important games of their season by dumping the Wisconsin Badgers, 4-2 on Friday night and 6-5 on Saturday night.

With a crowd of 3,137 standing, stomping, cheering, and pleading for the Spartans to produce a victory, an overtime period began Saturday which was to tell the Big Ten world just who was the best team.

Before either goaltender could get the feel of the puck in the extra sudden-death session, Michel Chaurest popped a shot from the right wing boards that Wisconsin goaltender Jim Makey could do little about but look at.

Chaurest's slap shot at 1:18 of period four caught the inside of the far goalpost and fell cleanly into the net, setting off a frenzied, triumphant on-ice celebration by the Spartans, with Chaurest acting as master of ceremonies from the bottom of a pile of 19 green-and-whites.

But until that goal, MSU's dream game was growing progressively sour.

With a 5-2 lead going into the third period, the Spartans surrendered three goals within three minutes and fifteen seconds midway through third session. MSU, which had prided itself on its third period play throughout the season, could not reclaim the lead, and was forced into a previously dreaded overtime game. But this time, like a child who has lost a toy and wants it back, the Spartans were successful in salvaging the win.

Gilles Gagnon and Jerry DeMarco gave MSU a 2-0 lead after the first period.

Jim Young climaxed a frustrating minute and one-half of the second period by capitalizing on the inability of the Spartans to clear the zone with the puck by banging home Jim Boyd's rebound shot.

Randy Sokoll got that one back on a power play effort, steering home Bob Boyd's point shot from the left of Makey.

After Wisconsin's Norm Cherrey scored on a break-away at 12:30 of the second stanza, Bill Sipola and game hero Chaurest clicked to push the Spartan lead to 5-2.

A third period nightmare with goal scorers Pat Lannan, Stan Hinkley, and Jim Boyd starring for the Badgers forced the Spartans to go an extra period before they could lay claim to the game and the Big Ten title.

On Friday night, the Spartans struck gold early, kept digging, and rushed home with the 4-2 win.

Don Thompson banked in a rebound of a Bob Boyd backhand point shot at 5:10 of the first period to project the Spartans into a lead that they would never lose.

Chaurest, playing in the best series of his college career, scored on a power play on a perfect goalmouth pass from Randy Sokoll at 8:31 of the first period.

Wisconsin staged a short-lived comeback at 5:28 of the second period as Jim Johnston scored on a partial break-in from 20 feet on the right side.

MSU jumped into a tie for third place in the WCHA with Wisconsin with a record of 11-9, but more important, polished its Big Ten championship record at 9-3.

UCLA, USC both squeak by Both No. 1-ranked UCLA and No. 3-ranked Southern Cal had to come from behind to win Saturday. UCLA edged Washington State, 57-53, and USC nipped Washington, 81-80.

In other games involving ranked teams Saturday Marquette crushed Tulane, 90-76; Penn trounced Yale, 93-63; Houston upset Jacksonville, 83-82; Kansas nipped Colorado, 66-65; Fordham ripped NYU, 102-87; South Carolina beat North Carolina State, 82-69 and Notre Dame beat St. John's, 92-79.

Abortion referral services provided by businessmen

A spokesman for the clergy service, who chose not to be identified, said he believes that why Michigan women would rather work through a profit-making referral service—they don't have to trouble themselves with the details or arrangements.

The clergy service is made up of ten clergymen from 5 denominations.

The abortion referral services have placed their advertisement in college newspapers throughout the country, provided that the administration of the university had no objection.

An abortion referral service which began last October to fly Michigan women to a private clinic in New York for the purpose of obtaining an abortion is still in operation, although some changes have been necessary.

Martin Mitchell, 31, Oak Park businessman who runs the Mitchell Referral Service of Niagara Falls, said he now refers the women to private clinics in New York rather than to his own clinic which he used at the beginning of his service.

His clinic was stopped as a result of a city ordinance drawn up by the citizens of Niagara Falls, a predominately Roman-Catholic community.

Mitchell refers girls who are under 12 weeks pregnant for a charge of $300. If the term of pregnancy is longer the price goes up, but not at any standard rate.

For an additional $100, Mitchell's service provides for air transportation to a New York clinic and a meal after the abortion.

Mitchell's package deal of $400 allows a girl to be picked up in Detroit, flown to New York and returned to Detroit the same day.

Mitchell would not say how many people have operated through his service, but did say that 50 per cent of the women he dealt with were married and 75 per cent of the women were over 21.

Mitchell said if at least six MSU coeds were in need of an abortion he would provide the transportation from East Lansing to New York and the abortion for a package price of $450.

Information about Mitchell's referral service can be obtained by writing to Box 1053, Niagara Falls, New York.

The Professional Scheduling Services Inc., also refers people to places where they can obtain abortion.

The service, which began last October, charges $245 if the term of pregnancy is under three months.

Tina Horowitz, senior counselor, said about half of the women come from outside the state of New York, with about 30 per cent of that figure comprised of Michigan women.

The service is made up of people who have B.A.'s in social work, Miss Horowitz said.

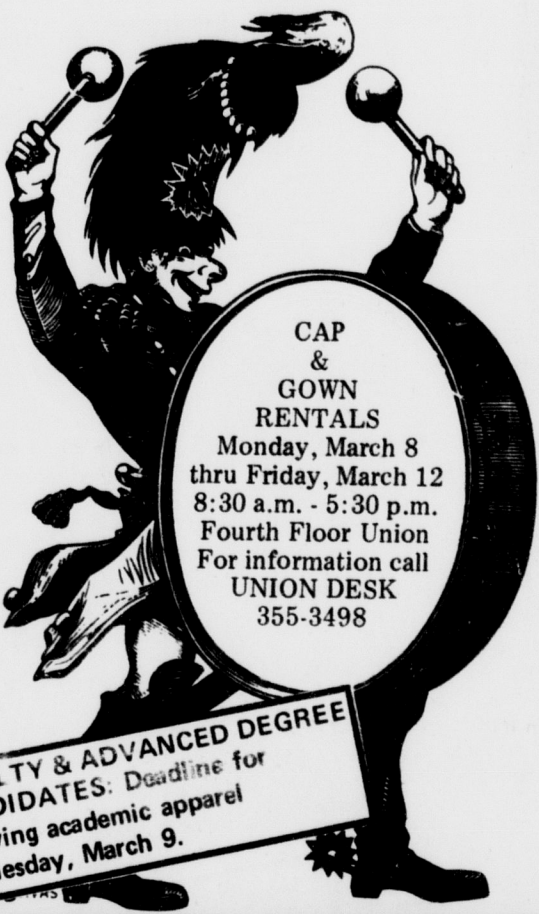

Miss Horowitz said arrangements can be made within 24 hours after the woman gets in touch with her service.

Information can be obtained by writing Professional Scheduling Services Inc., 545 Fifth Avenue, Room 1107, New York, N.Y.

Dr. Arnold Werner, author of the Doctor's Bag, which appears weekly in the State News, said he does not think women who have abortions experience "significant" problems afterwards.

Werner said that he was sure some people have problems after an abortion, and said he thought the ones who had the most difficulty adjusting are those who are pushed into it by a husband or boyfriend.

"We just dropped everything and got the hell out of there," a fireman said. At 1:30 Sunday afternoon, everything flammable had long since burned, but smoke still poured out of the rubble and hung heavily in the air.

The fire had officially been brought under control several hours earlier, but firemen said that they would continue pouring thousands of gallons of water on the ruins for at least another day, possibly longer.

Gingerly touching a mangled steel beam, I heard a crack and glanced up in time to see a brick wall tumble into the Grand River to the cheers of a group of kids watching on the opposite bank.

"It's incredible the kicks people get out of a fire," my shivering young police escort said. "Last night, people were wandering around with smiles ear to ear and their eyes as wide as a kid on Christmas morning."

"I don't know what the hell they expect to see," he said. "I guess it's cruel, but it seems like people get a thrill out of seeing something being destroyed: unless it belongs to them."

Most area residents had been permitted to return to their homes by Sunday afternoon, but they had to do it on foot. Crowds of sightseers were kept behind police barricades.

"We haven't had any trouble with looters," a fireman said,

"but we don't want to. Most people are just curious, but there is still some valuable material in those buildings."

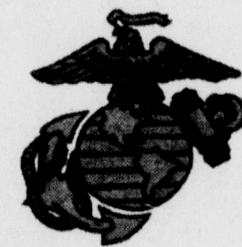

Fanned by 40 to 50 m.p.h. winds, the blaze is reported to have burned for almost two hours before police and firemen were alerted.

"When we got here, flames were shooting out of walls, ceilings and doors like it had been burning forever," a fireman who had been on duty for over 16 hours said.

"I was at the church fire (Plymouth Congregational Church) Thursday, and I wasn't scared then. Last night I was scared as hell. I've been a fireman for 11 years, and I've never seen flames like those. We didn't even think about saving the buildings. We just wanted to

A decision is expected late today in the case of Interfraternity Council (IFC) against the Phi Mu Alpha fraternity.

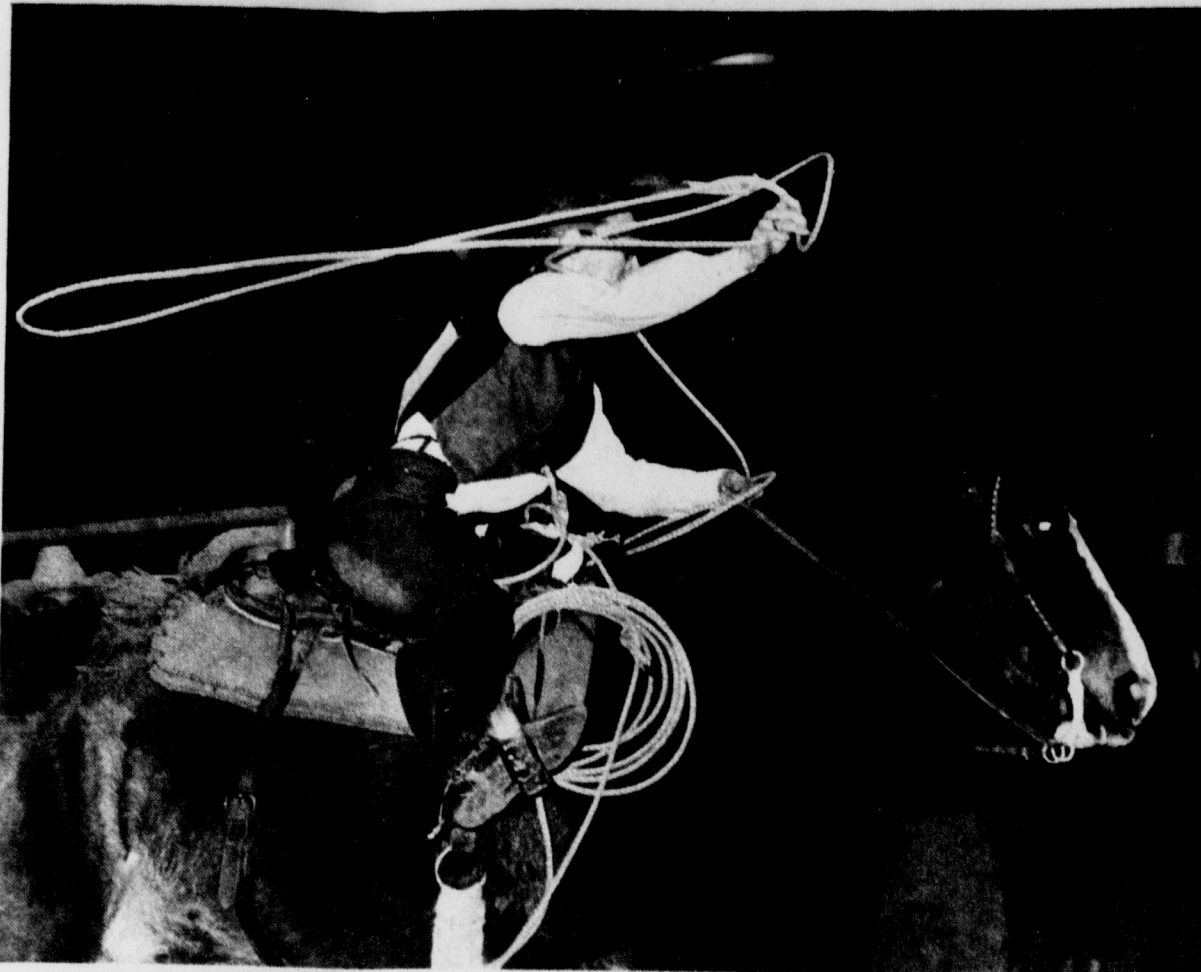

The hearing was held Friday by the IFC judiciary, consisting of three justices, in which IFC charged the professional music fraternity with lack of participation.

Joseph Ditzhazy, IFC president, said Phi Mu Alpha had violated provisions in the governing group constitution requiring all fraternities to be members of IFC.

"Phi Mu Alpha has not been represented at our meetings, IM sports events, Greek activities or paid dues in more than a year," Ditzhazy said.

Chief Justice Mark Hoag said Sunday that both IFC and Phi Mu Alpha presented their views Friday.

Hoag said the justices found Phi Mu Alpha to be in violation of the IFC constitution, but that the formal results of the decision will not be available until this afternoon.

ATTY. GEN. FRANK J. KELLEY filed a motion with the Michigan Public Service Commission Friday to turn down a proposed rate increase by Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

Kelley said the company in its application did not specify how much the increase would be but had merely asked for authority to adjust the rates based on the company's expense estimates.

In addition, he said, the company had not given adequate notice to the public stating the amount of rate increase.

"It is clear from the foregoing that Bell's so-called 'application' is not an application within the meaning of Section 10 of the Telephone Act," Kelley said.
