

Munn honored for 25 years at MSU

By MIKE ABERLICH
State News Sports Writer

About the only thing that Biggie Munn doesn't have on his office wall is an Oscar, but he may end up with one yet.

The MSU athletic director will be the honored guest tonight at the Lansing Civic Center to commemorate his 25 years at MSU.

Munn's the one who put MSU on the athletic charts. It was during his football coaching reign that the Big Ten decided MSU was worthy of becoming a member.

A number of distinguished guests well-versed in the world of football will be on hand for the dinner, including Murray Warmath, University of Minnesota football coach; Frank Kush, Arizona State University football coach; Dan Devine, Green Bay Packers head coach; Elroy Hirsch, University of Wisconsin athletic director; Bump Elliott, University of Iowa athletic director; Forest Evashevski, former Iowa athletic director, and Bronco Nagurski, former all-American from Minnesota.

Tickets for the 6:30 program cost $20.

Much has changed in the quarter century in which Munn has worked at MSU coaching, teaching and directing athletics.

"Our budget back then, or what we had to take in, was $107,000" Munn laughed.

"Now we take in over $2 million."

But money wasn't the only thing to change. Football did too.

"In the years I remember," Munn said, "equipment was made of leather; now it's all plastic."

The days of the single platoon and leather equipment have passed as have Munn's coaching days. But while they were here, they were quite successful years for MSU.

Munn played fullback, tackle and guard in his college days with Minnesota, gaining all-American honors in his senior year, as well as being named the Big Ten's most valuable player in 1931.

A job as assistant coach at Minnesota came after his graduation, from there he went to Albright College in Pennsylvania, Syracuse University in New York, the University of Michigan, and then back to Syracuse as head coach. After one season with Syracuse, he came to what was then Michigan Agricultural College.

"I've scratched my head many times and asked myself why I came here," Munn said. "When I first came here I thought I was committing suicide."

In 1949, the Big Ten selected MSU to take Chicago's place in the league.

In his seven coaching years Munn's teams compiled a 54-9-2 record, including a 28-game winning streak and a national championship in 1952, when he was named coach of the year.

numerous controversies over polling and balloting procedures.

Five candidates, Steve Crocker, James Faulkner, Phillip Haack, Brian Jordan and Judy Pick, were deleted from the ballot as a result of what Elections Commission Diane Rathnow called a "failure to comply with election regulations."

Miss Rathnow declined to comment on specific violations, although it was reported that several of the omitted candidates failed to file a financial statement of their campaign expenditures.

"It was the unanimous decision of the eight commissioners to delete these five people from the ballot," she said. "Although they may, according to elections procedures, appeal our decision, no appeals have yet been filed."

Miss Rathnow also revealed that two cases have been filed with the commission charging irregular polling procedures in off-campus districts.

Interfraternity Council (IFC) President Joseph Ditzhazy Jr. and Barry Larman, West Hartford, Conn., sophomore, each filed suits protesting the absence of a polling booth at MAC and Grand River avenues.

According to James Humes, council for Larman, the MAC - Grand River location was approved by the student board at its April 12 meeting as one of the eight off-campus polling places. The site was listed in Wednesday's issue of the State News.

"Fraternities and sororities do not have equal voting rights," Larman said. "All the dormitories have ballot boxes but Greek houses do not. Since our houses are residences sanctioned by the University, the absence of ballot boxes is highly discriminatory."

Larman said he would try to delay validation of the entire election and referendum until such time as the case is decided. Miss Rathnow would not comment as to the probability of such action.

RELAXES TRADE EMBARGO

Nixon issues program to ease China relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon announced Wednesday a five-point program to ease relations between the United States and Communist China, largely through relaxing of the long-term embargo on trade between the two countries.

Nixon's long-awaited decision, coupled with Premier Chou En-lai's statement to American table tennis players about "a new page" in U.S.-Chinese relations, marked a notable step in the gradual thaw replacing the prolonged freeze between Washington and Peking.

Presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon made his decision two or three weeks ago following a high-level administration review begun last December.

"So the substance of the action was not connected with the recent action by the Peoples Republic of China in its invitation to the U.S. table tennis team and surrounding circumstances," he said.

But White House officials acknowledged that the timing of Nixon's announcement was, as they put it, appropriate in the aura of good will stemming from Peking's hospitality in the unprecedented current visit to China by a U.S. table tennis group.

The Nixon announcement did not deal with U.S. policy on the strong move expected in the United Nations this fall for admission of Red China to the world body.

Nor did it get into what the United States might do in the future about officially recognizing the Peking regime, with whom it now has no diplomatic relations. Ziegler said a Washington decision on that is still "way down the line."

The presidential announcement — issued by the White House as a one-page statement — dealt with a range of travel and trade restrictions which have been in effect since the early 1950s.

In line with his state of the world message last February promising to "examine what further steps we might take to create broader opportunities for contacts between the Chinese and American peoples," Nixon said he has decided on these actions:

- The United States is prepared to give fast handling for visas, or entry permits, for visitors or groups of visitors from Red China.

- U.S. currency controls previously barring use of American dollars in dealing with Red China will be dropped.

- American oil companies may now supply fuel to ships or planes going to and from Red China, except on Chinese-owned or Chinese-chartered vessels sailing to or from North Vietnam, North Korea or Cuba.

- U.S. ships and planes may now carry Chinese cargoes between non-Chinese ports, and U.S.-owned foreign flag ships may call at Chinese ports.

- The U.S. government will prepare a list of nonstrategic goods which may be exported directly to Red China, without a specific license. Following a presidential review and approval of items on this list, direct imports of specified items from mainland China also will be authorized.

The new Nixon action places U.S. trade policy toward Red China generally on a par with that toward the Soviet Union, officials said. American firms are allowed to sell nonstrategic items to the Russians and East European Communist countries.

Premier to let writers from U.S. enter China

PEKING (AP) — Premier Chou En-lai, announcing that U.S. newsmen will be allowed to enter China "in batches," hinted Wednesday that he wants to visit North America.

He also said a "long cultural exchange" between Britain and China may be in the offing and discussed the American hippie movement.

Chou, 73, spoke at a reception for table tennis teams from the United States, Britain, Canada, Nigeria and Columbia. These were invited to visit China when the world championships ended in Japan a week ago.

Resident American correspondents have been barred from China since 1949. A few writers have been admitted from time to time for brief visits. Other groups of foreign correspondents, such as British, French and Canadian, operate here regularly on a restricted basis.

The American writers and television men invited in for this week's visit by the table tennis team comprise the first group of U.S. correspondents to come here in 22 years.

Chou, who was formerly foreign minister, recognized an AP correspondent from his assignment to China 23 years ago. Chou said: "Mr. Roderick, you have opened the door."

The hint that Chou would like to visit North America came in a remark that he had never seen that continent. He thus did not specifically speak of a visit to the United States, which has no diplomatic relations with Peking. Canada has such relations established recently by the Pierre Elliott (Please turn to page 13)

Speakers debate bill to legalize abortions

By JEFF SHELER
State News Staff Writer

Emotional speeches both for and against abortion law reform marked a public hearing at the state Capitol Wednesday on a bill to legalize abortions for any reason in Michigan.

The bill, which was passed by the state senate in the House Social Services and Corrections Committee, would allow Michigan residents of at least 90 days to have an abortion for any reason during the first three months of pregnancy.

The hearing Wednesday was one of a series of statewide hearings before the Social Services and Corrections Committee, headed by Rep. David S. Holmes Jr., D-Detroit.

The emotional tenor of the hearing began with the first speaker who identified herself as an unwanted child.

"I'm glad I was left as a living human being abandoned on a doorstep and not as a pile of flesh and bone in a bucket," Lorraine Govan said.

Miss Govan, who said she is a registered nurse, graphically described the abortion process which she called "inhumane."

The "Ku Klux Klan" held a rally behind Conrad Hall Tuesday night.

They burned a five-foot-high cross and sang songs and chanted for 10 minutes before two campus patrol cars rolled in and chased away most of the 30 to 40 demonstrators, corralling a few for questioning.

No arrests were made. Eldon R. Nonnamaker, dean of students, issued a statement Wednesday morning that the "student responsible for the incident is known, and appropriate action will be taken against him."

Nonnamaker said the case is still under investigation. When the investigation is completed, the case will be turned over to either All-University Student Judiciary or Student-Faculty Judiciary, he said.

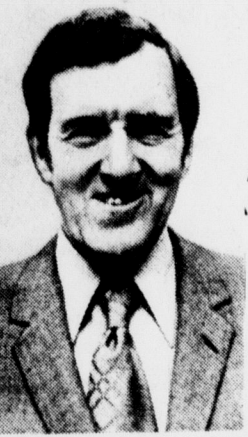

The incident apparently was a "student election campaign prank," Nonnamaker said.

Absence supports rumors

President Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier did not turn out Wednesday in Port Au Prince, Haiti, for a parade in honor of his birthday, as government sources had said he would.

"The doctors have told him to take a rest," a government spokesman said. There have been reports Duvalier, Haiti's "president for life" had suffered a stroke recently.

The same official last week denied reports that Duvalier was near death.

Economy still sluggish

Output of the nation's industries barely inched ahead in March, providing fresh evidence that the economic snapback sought by President Nixon has yet to develop.

The Federal Reserve Board reported Wednesday that industrial production moved toward by less than two-tenths of one per cent last month.

The production index indicated the economy still is suffering from considerable slack.

Rail settlement proposed

A presidential emergency board has recommended a five per cent general wage boost for members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen who had threatened a nationwide rail tie-up.

The board's findings will now go to the union and the railroads represented by the National Railway Labor Conference. They will have 30 days in which to consider the document and reach a settlement.

Although the union's 10,000 members represent only two per cent of all rail employees, other unions would honor their picket lines should they go ahead with strike plans after 30 days.

Jackson, HHH rated high

JACKSON

Darkhorse Henry M. Jackson and 1968 loser Hubert H. Humphrey are Democrats mentioned most by editors who were asked to name one with the best chance of beating President Nixon next year.

In a random sample of 40 members attending the American Society of Newspaper Editors convention, Sens. Jackson of Washington and Humphrey of Minnesota emerged virtually neck and neck, and slightly ahead of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine.

Surveillance termed 'vital'

U.S. intelligence "will have a major and vital role in any international agreement to limit strategic arms," Director Richard Helms of the Central Intelligence Agency told an editors' meeting Wednesday.

While giving the American Society of Newspaper Editors a rare public report on the functions of his supersecret agency, Helms said it would be "unthinkable to conclude a strategic arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union without the means for monitoring compliance."

Bill to protect horses

Heeding emotional appeals from school children and conservationists, Congress will consider next week a federal law to protect the nation's vanishing herds of wild horses and burros.

Pending before the House and Senate Interior Committees are bills sponsored by 97 House members and 17 senators to establish no less than a dozen refuges for the remaining wild, free-roaming animals and make it a crime to capture, kill or molest them.

The legislation would designate the unbranded and unclaimed horses and burros as "a national esthetic resource."

Auto standards softened

The Dept. of Transportation softened its original position Wednesday in announcing requirements for improved bumpers on 1973 automobiles.

The department held to its proposal of last fall that front bumpers absorb a five-mile-an-hour crash without damage to vital car systems.

The department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration also postponed for one year, until 1974 models, a requirement for uniform bumper height front and back.

BATTLE ENTERS THIRD WEEK

S. Viet relief force fights near base

SAIGON (AP) - A South Vietnamese relief force engaged enemy units in heavy fighting a half mile from the besieged Fire Base 6 in the central highlands Wednesday. Some of the base's defenders tried to flee on the landing skids of a U.S. helicopter taking out U.S. advisers.

The battle at the base entered its third week.

The U.S. helicopter lifted out four of the five American military advisers at the frontier base close to the triple juncture of Laos, Cambodia and South Vietnam.

Field reports said that three other U.S. advisers, attached to the South Vietnamese relief force that engaged the North Vietnamese near the base were missing. These reports however, lacked official confirmation and the U.S. Command in Saigon said it had no word of missing advisers.

At the hilltop base itself, about 40 South Vietnamese soldiers swarmed around the U.S. helicopter that evacuated the four Americans Wednesday afternoon.

Eight of them jumped aboard and were flown with the advisers to a rear headquarters.

Some of the others tried to cling to the chopper's landing skids and fly out in much the same way that some South Vietnamese troops did during the recent withdrawal from Laos. But the helicopter's crew shoved and kicked them off.

No reason was announced for lifting out the four U.S. advisers. Correspondents in the fighting sector speculated that they were exhausted by the prolonged siege and were brought out for a rest.

The lone remaining adviser, an officer, volunteered to stay behind with some 500 weary South Vietnamese defenders, newly bolstered by a 4,000 man relief force that is deployed in the immediate area. A lead element of the relief force reached the base Tuesday night.

It was one of the units of the South Vietnamese relief force that locked with the North Vietnamese a half mile northwest of Fire Base 6.

The fresh fighting erupted Tuesday night and did not break off until midday Wednesday.

The South Vietnamese Command in Saigon reported 96 North Vietnamese were killed in the six hours of fighting.

A command spokesman, Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, said about 50 of the total were killed by U.S. and South Vietnamese air strikes and artillery fire.

Hien said South Vietnamese losses were 4 killed, six missing and 37 wounded. He said 32 enemy weapons were captured including two machine guns and two recoilless rifles.

It was after this engagement that the reports reached rear headquarters that three U.S. advisers were missing.

From Tan Canh, seven miles northeast of Fire Base 6 and headquarters for the South Vietnamese forces in the highlands Associated Press photographer Nick Ut reported that enemy gunners fired two rockets into the headquarters base late Wednesday afternoon.

He said two Americans and several South Vietnamese soldiers were wounded.

Except for the South Vietnamese troops that fought the lengthy engagement a half mile from Fire Base 6, the other reinforcing troops advanced into positions in the area without resistance.

Associated Press photographer Neal Ulevich, reporting from Pleiku where the U.S. support helicopters are based, said the latest reinforcement unit sent in was a South Vietnamese paratrooper battalion. This battalion, Ulevich reported, was lifted into a landing zone 2 1/2 miles southeast of Fire Base 6 by U.S. helicopters, and drew no fire from the North Vietnamese.

The latest reinforcements brought the number of battalions to eight that are now committed by the South Vietnamese command to the relief of the base.

The action in the central highlands dominated the situation in South Vietnam. Saigon headquarters reported fresh enemy shelling against South Vietnamese forces in eastern Cambodia.

Headquarters said enemy gunners fired more than 20 rounds of mortar, rocket and recoilless rifle fire into command post of a South Vietnamese task force and field positions along Highway 19 and north of it in eastern Cambodia.

The three shellings, communiques said, resulted in light South Vietnamese casualties but no fatalities.

Nixon gives support to prisoner proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Nixon endorsed Wednesday a week-old Saigon proposal that sick, wounded and long-term prisoners on both sides in Vietnam be interned in a neutral country.

Although White House officials said the United States had been aware of the South Vietnamese recommendation before it was made at the Paris talks last Thursday, Nixon waited six days to make a formal statement on the subject.

Asked to explain the delay, press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said the timing of the statement was prompted by the fact that another Paris negotiating session is scheduled for Thursday.

Ziegler acknowledged that the Saigon proposal was not new - even last Thursday - which seemed to indicate a new and wider effort by the United States to get most American prisoners of war out of North Vietnam as soon as possible.

The press secretary said 378 Americans are known to be prisoners of the North Vietnamese and some others are held elsewhere in Indochina.

Nixon's effort to promote broad movement on the prisoners of war issue was underscored by the fact that, in his statement, he made no reference to the fact that the Saigon plan would affect only the sick and wounded and those held prisoner for an undefined "long" period of time.

He said: "I welcome the Republic of Vietnam's proposal, made on April 8 in the Paris negotiations, for internment of prisoners of war in a neutral country."

The President went on to say that internment of war prisoners in a third country would mean they no longer would "serve as hostages for political or military purposes."

The chief executive said the South Vietnamese proposal fell short of total release of all prisoners, "which is our goal," but said the suggested first step "would be a reasonable and responsible way of alleviating the plight of prisoners of war on both sides."

DROP-OUT REPORT

Panel to weigh committee bid

By MICHAEL FOX State News Staff Writer

The University College Advisory Council will consider a request for a report on student withdrawals from the University when the council meets at 4 p.m. today in Wonders Kiva.

The University College Steering Committee has recommended that the council request a report by representatives of the college student affairs office and the Office of Evaluation Services on the reasons for withdrawals especially during the freshman and sophomore years.

The steering committee also recommended that the council request information on the desirability and feasibility of further study and action and the problem of student withdrawals.

Donald R. Come, professor of social science and chairman of the steering committee, said the college is especially concerned about no preference students who "drop out" of the University.

Come said the steering committee is interested in knowing whether students withdrawing from the University because of a sense of failure or because of a sense of accomplishment.

In the later case, the steering committee wants to know what the drop-out's mind, the University is lacking.

The steering committee also has recommended that the college advisory council authorize an ad hoc committee to draft a statement on the philosophy of general education.

An interim report from Macel Ezell, asst. professor of American thought and language, on the work of the college's Faculty Student Governance on Student Participation in College Governance is also on the agenda.

Macel said this week that the final draft of his committee should be given to the dean Friday. The committee has been writing the report for four weeks following open meetings on the role of student participation in University College governance.

AFTER CHURCH ATTACK

Protestants, troops battle

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) - Protestant rioters battled British troops in Belfast Wednesday after attacking a Roman Catholic church for the second time in less than 24 hours.

Four hundred militants pelted soldiers with rocks. Troops in riot armor grabbed a youth pinning a British flag to a post just outside the main doors of the church.

Elsewhere in the Ulster capital, Roman Catholic mobs stoned police patrols in a violent finale to the Easter round of religious and political parades.

The new trouble followed a bloody seven-hour riot late Tuesday which erupted after a Protestant child was shot and wounded. The street fighting left 20 civilians and two soldiers hurt.

Prime Minister Brian Faulkner blamed "hooligans and hangers-on" for trouble which was "an unnecessary sequel to an Easter period which had until then passed mainly without incident."

Rioters smashed store windows Wednesday and looted merchandise along Newtownards Road.

Troops and police sealed off Catholic streets from Protestant crowds gathered at St. Matthew's church.

The brawl Tuesday exploded after an unknown gunman fired into a parade of young Protestants, hitting 12-year-old Thomas Martin in the legs and grazing three adults. Almost 2,000 Protestants attacked 1,000 British troops with fists, rocks and fire bombs.

Then they tried to storm St. Matthew's, earlier claimed to be a hideout for snipers. The mob threw a hail of gasoline bombs but troops extinguished the flames.

Eighteen men arrested in the riot appeared in court Wednesday accompanied by the military Protestant leader, the Rev. J. Paisley. Ten were ordered held until Friday and the rest released on a $480 bail each.

In a pre-dawn search Wednesday, police seized two automatic pistols, two revolvers and bags of ammunition and detonators in a Roman Catholic area.

ON ASMSU BOARD

Trio hits lack of Greek reps

By RANDY GARTON State News Staff Writer

Three MSU students said they will file a complaint today with the All - University Student Judiciary protesting that MSU fraternity members are inadequately represented on the student-tax supported ASMSU board.

John W. Dunn, Lodi, Wis., sophomore; Ronald L. Barnes, Royal Oak senior, and Ronald J. Newth, Livonia junior, state in the complaint that their constitutional rights under Article I, Section IV of the Academic Freedom Report and Article II, Section V, of the ASMSU constitution were being violated because the Interfraternity Council (IFC) does not have a vote on the ASMSU board.

The part of the Academic Freedom Report in question gives students the right to adequate representation in student government and the ASMSU constitution states that a tax of at least 50 cents to support the board will be levied as part of student fees during registration.

"We feel that the Off - Campus Council doesn't represent the interests of fraternities off - campus," Dunn said. "IFC represents this section of the student population, and it's not fair that we pay taxes for representation we really don't have."

IFC Chief Justice James J. Humes Jr., Grosse Pointe Woods freshman, agrees with the complaint.

"I feel that I'm not adequately represented on the board," he said. "I hope this complaint helps to straighten things out."

Humes said that AUSJ probably will pass the question of the student tax on to the Student - Faculty Judiciary. Jurisdiction is not clear in this case, he said.

The Greeks are making the complaint to call the attention of the University to the question of adequate student representation on the ASMSU board, Joseph A. Ditzhazy Jr., president of IFC, said.

"This is an emotional issue," he said. "We feel the University should be aware of it."

Refugees pour into India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Refugees from East Pakistan poured into India Wednesday, fleeing from advancing Pakistani troops seeking to crush the three-week-old rebellion in the eastern province.

"What was a trickle has become a stream," a high Indian official said.

At the same time, one of West Pakistan's top political leaders called for an end to martial law conditions in the east and urged the resumption of political activities. Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, former foreign minister, contended in Karachi that only a political settlement can end the bloodshed.

While Indian officials would not disclose the number of refugees, more than 5,000 East Pakistanis were staying at a makeshift camp at Bangoon, 50 miles northeast of Calcutta, on the India-Pakistan border.

Reliable sources said at least 500 persons had crossed daily since Monday into the Bangoon area.

The Statesman newspaper in Calcutta said that reports from its correspondents showed that at least 1,000 refugees had entered India this week from different parts along the 1,349-mile border with East Pakistan.

Most of the refugees — many of whom were women and children who had lost their menfolk — were coming from the Jessore region in the western part of the province where army resistance was now reported negligible.

A witness said East Pakistan defenders abandoned their positions at a key river crossing after the first army mortar shell exploded.

Their flight caused panic nearby villages, he said. India army units were reported in defensive positions along the border with East Pakistan.

Radio Pakistan reported that a column of Pakistani troops driving northwest from Dacca linked up with an army garrison at the university town of Rajshahi after clearing the area.

The broadcast quoted an official statement in Dacca as saying the column "pacified" Pabna, Ishardi and Natore before reaching Rajshahi.

"The entire area now is free of miscreants and infiltrators," the statement said.

Clandestine radio broadcasts from East Pakistan called for arms and ammunition to help the separatist forces. They urged governments giving military aid to Pakistan "to suspend forthwith their supplies to an army of murderers who are killing innocent men, women and children." The Pakistani army is also trying to build an alternative group of leaders around Nurul Amin the only National Assembly member from East Pakistan not committed to the rebels.

In Karachi, Bhutto, head of the majority People's party, told a news conference the 75 million people of East Pakistan ultimately must be given their rights with an end to exploitation and creation of fair rule under one flag.

"This is going to take a long time - there is hatred and passion in the hearts of the people," he said.

IN SENATE

Muskie raps FBI's spying

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edmund S. Muskie broadened congressional criticism of the FBI Wednesday by accusing it of massive spying on 40 to 60 of last April's Earth Day antipollution observances.

"If antipollution rallies are a subject of intelligence concern" the Maine Democrat said in a Senate speech, "is anything immune?"

He said there is no justification for any part of the federal intelligence community surreptitiously observing and reporting on legitimate political events which do not affect our national security of which do not involve a potential crime.

Muskie, an unannounced candidate for the 1972 Democratic presidential nomination, accused the FBI of engaging in general political surveillance without any indication of a specific target. "It was a fishing expedition," he said.

Muskie said neither President Nixon nor Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell "will do anything to change this situation," adding that "The President, in the face of reports of investigations that should outrage the nation, remains silent."

Neither the FBI nor the Justice Department had any immediate comment on Muskie's speech.

FBI sources indicated that any surveillance of Earth Day activities might have stemmed from efforts to keep tabs on such groups as Students for a Democratic Society and Progressive Labor Party, which it describes as a pro-Communist Chinese organization. Muskie commented that a large percentage of congressmen believe their phones are tapped" and told reporters that while I make no such assumptions, I do not refute them either."

In his speech, Muskie proposed creation of a new independent board to oversee the FBI and other federal intelligence agencies. He released also what he said was an FBI report describing in detail activities in Washington during last year's Earth Week, including a rally at which he spoke on April 22, 1970.

"I understand that this is but one of about 40 to 60 FBI reports of Earth Day rallies on April 2, 1970," he said.

Muskie declined to specify his sources but said "this report was not taken from the Media, Pa., FBI files, and is in no way connected with that theft of FBI material." He said also "this report contains no classified designation," and declared that it, "and evidently many others like it, has been circulated widely to the entire intelligence community, and perhaps even to local police . . ."

FOR FEDERAL FUNDS

'U' submits drug program to HEW

By DENISE McCOURT
State News Staff Writer

The University submitted a proposal to the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare Wednesday for a federally funded drug education program on campus.

The proposal was submitted to the U.S. Office of Education, which was authorized by the Drug Abuse Education Act of 1970 to support innovative college- and university-based drug education programs. Preliminary proposals from universities are due in Washington Friday.

MSU's proposals, drafted by Louis Hekhuis, associate dean of students, calls for a continuation of MSU's Drug Education Project, including the Drug Education Center, begun last year. The total budget for the program, excluding University support was $47,000.

Hekhuis said he does not know how many colleges have submitted proposals, but he said the universities will be notified April 23 if their programs are accepted.

The money will be available July 1.

"I do think we have a good chance for receiving the aid since we do have an on going program of drug education here at MSU," Hekhuis said.

The Drug Education Project was begun last year under the auspices of the student affairs office and staffed by students and former students. The board of trustees allocated $16,000 for the pilot project.

The preliminary proposal submitted to Washington outlines the accomplishments of the drug program, including the drug Education Center, located at 405 Grove St., a library of drug information and pamphlets, a volunteer speaker's bureau and research on new drugs.

"The project has proved to be filling the needs of campus students to the extent possible with available resources," the proposal states. "Proposals for continuation of the program have included finances too extensive for the University's current resources at a time when the state has directed budget cuts.

Besides a continuation of the already existing program, the federal proposal calls for the development of a drug abuse education course to be offered as a multidisciplinary course available to all students. Students from the Drug Education Center have been addressing Education 450 students this term to disseminate drug information to would-be teachers, Hekhuis said. The proposal also notes the University has three experienced and trained students from the Drug Education Center to staff a federally funded program, several student volunteers, volunteer consultant assistance from the professionals in the College of Human Medicine and the necessary office space and equipment.

The U.S. Office of Education said the primary emphasis of the federal proposals should be on prevention and treatment of the causes rather than the symptoms. The office noted that services such as drop-in centers may be essential parts of the entire education effort.

MSU's proposal states that the program places its major emphasis on informing the student population, in credible ways, "of the effects and consequences of usage of popular drugs, and in dispelling the myths surrounding these drugs — in the belief that only through education of the individual will the individual be able to make sensible and informed decisions regarding drug usage."

Hekhuis said the Drug Education Program will be continued even if MSU does not receive the federal aid, but at a greatly reduced budget.

Food scientists link 'pill,' higher blood sugar levels

CHICAGO, Ill. — The hormones in birth control pills affect the rate of sugar metabolism in women, according to MSU food scientists.

"Women who take the pill cannot use sugar as quickly as normal, and consequently they have higher blood sugar levels," Modesto G. Yang, asst. professor of human nutrition and food science, said.

Kai Yui Lei, Ontario, Canada, graduate student in food science and human nutrition, reported the results of tests he conducted with Yang, to scientists at a Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology meeting here Wednesday.

Scientists have noted higher blood sugar levels in women taking birth control pills, but there have also been reports of lower levels, Lei said.

In the study, Lei administered the two hormones which are the main ingredients of birth control pills — progesterone and estrogen — to female rats in dosages comparable to that for women taking the pill.

After four weeks, a period equivalent to five or six months in humans, some of the rats showed higher blood sugar levels.

Lei tested the rats' sugar levels by feeding them pure glucose and monitoring the glucose levels in the blood afterwards with blood tests.

The rats which had been taking progesterone, and progesterone and estrogen together, showed higher blood sugar levels for longer periods of time after eating glucose than did the control rats.

Using radioactive glucose, Lei found that tissue taken from rats given progesterone, or the two hormones together, could not use glucose as rapidly as the other rats not given the hormones.

"The implication is that the same thing is happening in women who take the pill," he said. "Somehow these hormones slow up the utilization of sugar."

This effect is not known to be harmful in normal women, Yang emphasized, "but it is a highly individual response. Even in our carefully controlled experiment there was a range of responses among individual rats."

For such reasons, Yang said, women must take a number of physiological tests before taking birth control pills, and women with diabetes, or a family history of it, should not take the pill.

Spiro zeros out as Cobo cornball

DETROIT — Honored with the presence of the America's most famous amateur comedian, delegates to the National Pollution Control Conference at Cobo Hall heard Vice President Spiro T. Agnew dispense the following in his role as keynote speaker:

"Water pollution is a big problem everywhere, even in Washington. We know that water accounts for about two-thirds of the earth's surface — and about half of the Potomac."

"Many Americans have the same attitude toward pollution control that men have toward the see-through blouse: they're great — on someone else's wife."

"I'd like to pause to congratulate CBS. Their documentary, "The Selling of the Pentagon," just won a Peabody Award — for excellence in fantasy."

"We think this table tennis tournament in China is great. But did you hear about that 18-year-old American competitor who told some Chinese that he knew all about oppression? We've found out that his mother just recently took away his bath tub toys."

Both the vice president and the conference bombed, according to reliable sources.

TRB FROM WASHINGTON

Nixon losing economic 'game'

President Nixon started his administration with an economic game plan that didn't work and had to be junked. Then he suddenly made the announcement that he was a "Keynesian," which astonished some as much as though the Hanoverian succession had embraced Catholicism. That was Game Plan II — and it hasn't worked either. Mr. Nixon embraced Keynes just when Keynesianism was going out of date — at least for the problems that beset America.

At his first press conference, seven days after he took office, Mr. Nixon abandoned, abruptly and arbitrarily, the presidential role of guiding wages and prices. It is called "jaw-boning," or "incomes policy." Mr. Nixon proudly said he was a supporter of a free market economy — letting competition set reasonable wages and prices.

The free market economy — laissez faire — was outlined by good old Adam Smith in 1776 and it worked fine until they invented General Motors and the United Steel Workers union. Today maybe 40 per cent of prices are controlled. The free market got Mr. Nixon's theological support at a time when it no longer existed. As Professor Robert Lekachman said, "Mr. Nixon has attached himself to an economic policy which was quite up-to-date two or three decades ago."

Well, inflation got worse and unemployment got worse. No wonder! Mr. Nixon in effect had notified big business and big labor that the lid was off. He did this when he smugly announced, "I do not go along with the suggestion that inflation can be effectively controlled by exhorting labor and management and industry to follow certain guidelines."

Cure

He set out to depress the economy and let the "free market" cure things. You would have thought he would have known about "administered prices" from the Berle

Means classic of 1932. Gardiner C. Means, a co-author, who is still going strong 40 years later, told the Joint Economic Committee the other day, "The Nixon Game Plan is aimed at a type of inflation which had already passed when it was made public; in spite of the waste and hardship it is creating, the plan for depressed activity followed by reflation cannot be expected to bring us to full employment and stable prices."

Events slowly pushed Mr. Nixon back into an activist economic role, kicking all the way. He rapped the knuckles (gently) of Bethlehem Steel and got them to give up half of a proposed 12 per cent price increase. He is now trying to jockey the hard hat construction workers into reason under threat of dealing with lower-paid nonunion groups on government projects — no mean feat since government accounts for one-third of all the nation's building.

Mr. Nixon doesn't have a better friend in the economic world than Arthur Burns, the man he made chairman of the Federal Reserve System. Back in 1960 Burns warned the vice president that a slump was coming that might defeat him unless Ike acted. Ike wouldn't act. As Mr. Nixon sadly says in his "Six Crises," jobless rolls increased 452,000 in October, 1960, and all the campaigning he did "could not counteract that one hard fact."

Action

Every statement Burns makes today signals to Mr. Nixon that he ought to act. I have a copy of five formal talks in front of me, 1970-1971. I heard Burns deliver fiscal and monetary remedies are doing some good — not enough. Recovery is probably on the way, but so slow. There's plenty of cash and credit, Burns insists, but the consumer is holding back. Why? The column has mentioned the circumstances before, and Burns re-emphasizes them. The consumer is cautious because he's scared. He's scared of inflation; he's scared of unemployment; he isn't buying that new color TV because he's trying to stretch today's income to cover tomorrow's higher costs. Or, to put it in Burns' economic jargon: "he has cut down his current rate of spending and is accumulating liquid assets." (March 10 testimony to the Senate Banking Committee.)

Why now?

Why bring this up now? Other events are thundering through Washington. America's top icon, J. Edgar Hoover, we firmly believe, is on his way out. You can practically feel the Vietnam war coming to an end! Why then at a time like this, talk about fusty economics? Because a quarter of America's plant capacity is idle? Because the gap between actual and potential U.S. production is now $60 billion; because there's six per cent unemployment — and because it's largely unnecessary. Restore consumer confidence and we might have a quite spectacular recovery by year-end.

Burns deserves well of America. In June, 1970, the U.S. was on the brink of liquidity crisis; an old-fashioned "money panic." The stock market had made a sickening, two-year drop. The most of them. Contrary to Nixon's economic advisers at the White House of whom George Shultz is top, Burns insists there is plenty of money available, speaking slowly and emphatically on March 10 he testified, "we face a problem unknown to earlier generations — namely, a high rate of inflation at a time of substantial unemployment." Not merely Burns but the whole Reserve Board, he reported later (March 31), favor "a multi-faceted incomes policy" including a Wage-Price Review Board. What is that in English? — he wants the president to step in, knock heads together, "mobilize public opinion" (Burns' words), maybe, scream a little (mine). And finally, perhaps, cut taxes.

Today maybe 40 per cent of prices are controlled. The free market got Mr. Nixon's theological support at a time when it no longer existed. As Professor Robert Lekachman said, "Mr. Nixon has attached himself to an economic policy which was quite up-to-date two or three decades ago."

Burns is a conservative economist and liberals don't always go along with him, but he knows as much about the business cycle as any man in America and he points out the funny situation the economy is now in. It's on a hairline. Conventional administration's planned recession was taking hold. Mr. Nixon had just horrified the nation with Cambodia. Brokerage houses were falling. The wildest rumors circulated (one: "Chrysler was going down" but you could substitute your own choice.) Then, on the weekend of June 20-21, the Fed learned that the tottering Fed Central would finally collapse.

In one of the most romantic stories of modern banking — a story that hasn't been published before — Burns and his boss worked 48 hours to tell big banks across America that on Monday the "discount window would be kept open," and followed it next day with a suspension of ceilings on large certificates of deposit — the technical equivalent of a slug of whiskey to a heart patient. The danger of a wave of fear passed. The result without this secret effort? We don't know. Some of Washington's biggest stories are things that don't happen.

WMSB programming novel TV experience

Critics have called television a wasteland. They speak truth. Televised tripe has become the order of the airways. For every half-hour of news or public service programming, television stations broadcast hours upon hours of unfunny situation comedies, grim Grade D westerns and silly quiz shows.

Attacks upon inanity have begun, however. Locally, WMSB-TV airs original productions many quality cuts above the mindless buzz that passes for entertainment on other stations.

Particularly, "Assignment 10" on WMSB probes significant issues and approaches them from angles of local interest.

Several weeks ago, for example, the show investigated the use of Ritalin, a drug used on unruly school children to keep them quiet.

Last Sunday, producers Craig Halverson and Tim Skubick stirred unusual insights into the peace movement by grilling Eqbal Ahmad, one of six citizens accused of conspiring to kidnap presidential aide Henry Kissinger.

Other subjects have ranged from the merits of vasectomy to the defects in Lansing-area ambulance service — subjects of a type untouched by other area television stations.

There is just so much value in watching Jackie Gleason reruns, Lucy reruns and Let's Make a Deal. Once the canned laughter begins to grate on your ears (hopefully by the age of reason), it is time to seek more substantive programming.

But there is precious little of it around. Most stations confine local public programming to 15 minutes of news, one innocuous editorial, five minutes of weather-guessing and 10 minutes of sports. Having thus performed their public service for the Federal Communications Commission, typical stations rack up reels of 1953-vintage tripe until the 1971-vintage tripe begins to beam over the network.

Local stations, with more resources than WMSB, do little to offer variety or substance to programming. They're out for a buck, public be damned. Station owners justify mundane programming with "that's what the public wants." Not so. The viewing public has little choice but to watch what is aired.

But Assignment 10, through the efforts of Halverson, Skubick, Executive producer Dave Rice and Producer-Writer Jim Cash are making a substantive option available. It's only an hour at 10 p.m. on Sunday. But it's an hour that offers an option to Jackie Gleason's screaming, the pseudo-drama of the Bold Ones and the movie.

Television has a legitimate entertainment function, but fat bus drivers, natty lawyers and intense interns have exhausted their potential to entertain. Even if they were still supremely entertaining, it would seem commercial stations also have a responsibility to balance programming with equal chunks of nonescapist airtime.

Assignment 10 is a sampling of alternate television. If you watch more and enjoy it less, tune in Sunday. Be entertained without having your intellect insulted. It's a novel television experience.

POINT OF VIEW

Faculty must demand end to war

EDITOR'S NOTE: the following point of view was submitted by Mike McGraw for the MSU Student Mobilization Committee.

There is a need for a coherent and vocal faculty group at MSU which will stand up and demand an end to the war in Vietnam. At present, there is one small group known as Faculty for Peace, headed by John Masterson, associate professor of mathematics. This group, working with Lansing Area Peace Council, has set up important talks (like Eqbal Ahmad) and films (like "You Don't Have to Buy War, Mrs. Smith") sponsored by the Womens' International League for Peace and Freedom.

Still, Faculty for Peace is too small to be an effective rallying point for faculty opinion. During last May's student-faculty strike, MSU had such a strong faculty group for peace that even President Wharton recognized "the sincere concern, deeply felt among many faculty and students at MSU over the issues."

This group, called New University Conference, organized facilities, raised bail money for arrested students, and raised student interest in the strike issues in and out of the classroom. Although the battle against the war and repression had then barely begun, a long summer vacation effectively dissolved bonds between the group members, leaving the University community until today without a vocal faculty antiwar position. This week is the start of the 1971 Spring Offensive for Peace, and a faculty voice is badly needed.

This February's campus opinion poll shows 72 percent of faculty and students opposed to the invasion of Laos. As early as May, 1968, 13,000 students were calling for immediate U.S. withdrawal, and 68 percent of those polled wanted an immediate end to the bombing of North Vietnam. These feelings have been supported recently by frequent faculty letters to the Straight (sic) News concerning the war.

In May, 1970, James P. Wang, chairman of the Dept. of Linguistics, spoke for that department's faculty when he wrote:

"There is every reason to believe that the war will continue to expand until we have obliterated the indigenous civilizations of Indochina and leveled the villages and towns in which they flourish. The action of the United States (Cambodia)... is an outrage to the humanistic principles of our discipline."

Several community people recently said it this way: "We have voted for peace... petitioned... written letters... sacrificed sons, brothers and loved ones... prayed for peace and now we DEMAND peace!"

I urge the concerned faculty and staff of this institution to band together, endorse and promote the mass, peaceful actions and protest of the Indochina war, beginning with the Veterans March April 18, and the massive street march of April 24 in Washington, D.C. As one activist said recently:

"We're fooling ourselves when we say that nothing can be done. We stopped the bombing once and maybe we can do it again. How will you explain to the Indochinese people why you weren't in Washington on April 24? Will you tell them it was because there was only a mass march for immediate withdrawal?"

James Wang, Meyer Wolf, Ken Harrow, Edgar and Kathryn Schuler, Walter Adams, Al Hudson, Dharendra Sharma, ... where are you?

Nixon trades lives for elections

To the Editor:

It has become quite apparent from recent pronouncements of the U.S. President, the heads of state of South Vietnam, Sen. Griffin, and others, that the grand strategy of our administration in Washington is to nurture the existing state of war in Southeast Asia and maintain some considerable U.S. forces in that area until late in 1972, at least. Thereafter, the plan envisages that the announced "victories" will lead to the re-election of various incumbent politicians and justify the costs of this policy. I should like to call attention to a couple of terrible costs entailed in the policy.

Firstly, even if we are able to keep the U.S. military death rate to 50 per week, the time horizon of 60 to 70 weeks will involve the sacrifice of 3,000 or more American boys principally to enhance the prospects for re-election of Messrs. Nixon, Ky and Thieu.

Secondly, and equally important, there is the light of our prisoners of war and their families. No sane man can seriously believe that their captors will release these prisoners short of an end to the conflict and an end to our bombing of their land.

Therefore, I urge that you and every member of the too-long-silent majority (73 per cent, at least) join in a clamor that we end the war and END IT NOW.

Prof ratings require broader distribution

Every term in nearly every class students fill out green and white Student Instructional Rating System (SIRS) forms. As many as 35 items appear on the questionnaire, covering subjects ranging from information about the students in the class to wild card "teacher's choice" questions.

The Office of Evaluation Services processes the completed forms and sends the results only to the instructor. Students are left in the cold concerning instructor evaluation. Students never get to see the results of the forms they fill out.

Student advisory groups in a few departments run their own surveys, but otherwise students are left in ignorance about ratings of an instructor's performance. In fact, since only the instructor receives the SIRS printout, the form presently has rather little pragmatic value. A professor can receive consistently inferior ratings with no fear of repercussion, since he knows that he is the only person in the University who knows how he was rated.

Unless ratings can be made public, use of the SIRS forms should be discontinued. Except in the largest lecture sections, a professor cannot help but get some feedback from students concerning the quality of his teaching.

The SIRS questionnaire in its present form serves no one.

We recommend the Office of Evaluation Services begin sending SIRS form results for each instructor to his department office and to ASMSU where the ratings can be open for public examination. Sequestering student evaluations of instructors subverts the purpose of the SIRS form; student ratings have no value when the students never get to see their own evaluations.

You bought it

Today is Support the Pentagon Day, otherwise known as the time when income tax is due. Alas, the public has exhibited a downright "bad attitude" about this hallowed American tradition. Obviously, John Q. Public has not considered the vast benefits he reaps from rendering unto Washington:

- Spies that play an out of sight Ping-Pong game.
- The best wire tap gadgetry that money can buy.
- A fine Defense Dept. "think tank" to create things like the "Kissinger plot."
- The friendliest bunch of South Vietnamese aristocrats you ever ran into.
- And, of course, Spiro Agnew's speechwriters.

Wilbins column off base

To the Editor: I had the privilege of reading an article in your newspaper titled "Jails: Ineffectual Institutions" by Rick Wilbins in your April 9 issue.

I am an inmate of the Ingham County Jail and have been for the last 10 months. My fellow inmates and I thought it quite hilarious that Mr. Wilbins was so gravely misinformed. We know there is a crime problem, for we are a part of it.

In his second subtitle "Low level treatment" we thought the contents of this quite slanderous. First, it is true that a new inmate must get his hair cut. The jail authorities state that this is for health reasons. Although, we do wish that this rule could be amended to the extent that if the inmate keeps his hair neat, clean and at a moderate length that he should be able to keep it.

Secondly, it is true that new inmates are required to take a shower and be disinfected while they are being processed. The public must realize that not all new inmates are saintly clean. We inmates do not wish to have general disease, body lice and other discomforts in our midst.

Thirdly, the people that segregate the jail because being placed in a cell with pimps, burglars, police assaulters and chiefs are themselves being very hypocritical, for what are they?

Fourthly, it is true that we are not allowed to lie on our bunks from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. The jail officials give the reason that if the inmates sleep all day, then they will be up all night. And other inmates that wish to sleep at night will not be able to. Fifthly, it is not true that the toilets overflow, and the showers do not plug up, for the plumbing system here is very modern and efficient.

Sixthly, it is not true that the inmates are taunted (at any time) by turn-keys (guards) holding candy just out of reach and then eating it in front of them. In fact, we are able to obtain candy, gum, cigarettes and toiletries from the jail store.

Mr. Wilbins also stated that education is a key factor in rehabilitating inmates of a penal institution. The Ingham County Jail, under the direction of Richard Paynton and the Lansing School District, has produced an Adult Education Program. Classes range from junior high to college level. Subjects consist of English, math, social studies, science, art, physical education and auto mechanics. It is possible to obtain a GED certificate in the program. We also have a drug discussion group, an alcohol education class, a job placement counselor and a vocational rehabilitation program where it is possible to get grants to go to college or vocational training programs.

Of course, being in jail is not a picnic, but after all they didn't invite us here.

ART BUCHWALD

'I Spy' ping-pong

WASHINGTON — It's very rare that the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) gets caught flat-footed, but the other day when Red China invited the United States to send a table tennis team to Peking, the CIA discovered it had no champion Ping-Pong players in the organization whom it could send along on the trip.

CIA officials were going crazy trying to find someone before the U.S. team left for Peking last Saturday.

In panic, the CIA officials decided to hold a crash program in Ping-Pong. Neighbors who live around Langley, Va., where the top-secret agency is located, reported seeing truckloads of Ping-Pong tables going through the gates.

They have reported that they can't sleep at night because of the noise of thousands of balls being hit back and forth across the tables set up in the CIA gymnasium.

Any agent who ever played Ping-Pong in boys' camp or at the beach had been given leave from his regular duties and brought to Langley in hopes he might be developed into a champion Ping-Pong player before the U.S. team took off for Peking.

The CIA also held an employee Ping-Pong tournament during lunch hour with cash prizes of up to $100,000 of unaccountable funds to encourage more people to take up the sport.

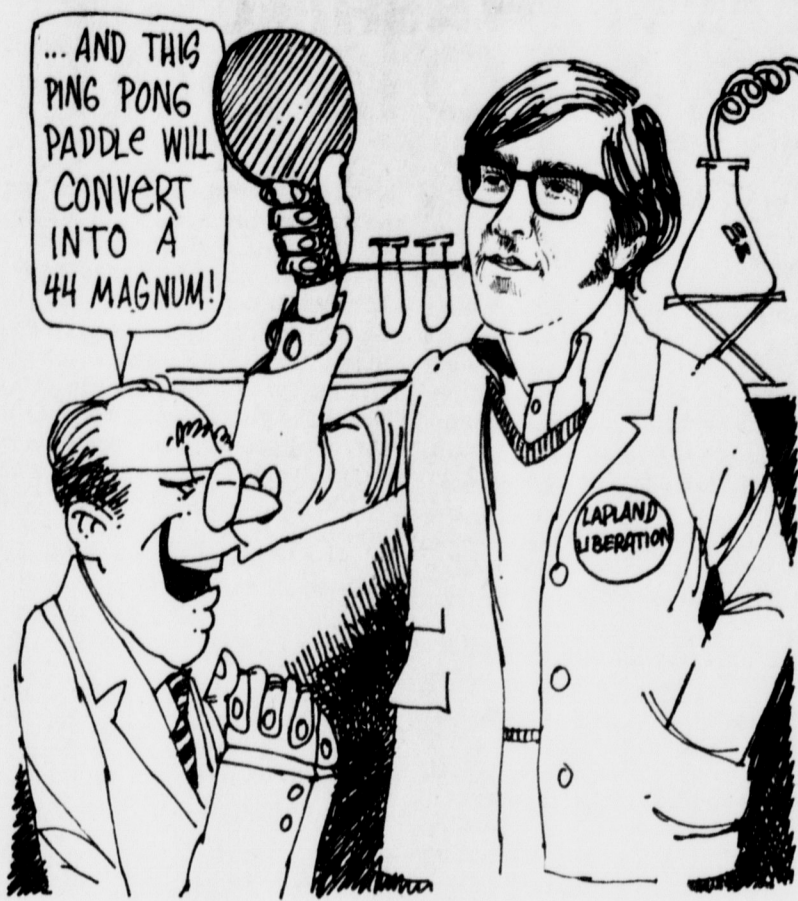

Yet, despite these desperate measures, officials of the agency are pessimistic that they'll be able to develop anybody worthy of playing Red China at table tennis.

"What difference does it make if he isn't a champion?" I asked a CIA official.

"We have a serious problem," he said. "This is the first time we're playing Red China at any sport. Table tennis is the most important game in China.

"The USIA (U.S. Information Agency) and the State Dept. want the United States to field the best team it can find because they believe that if we can defeat the Chinese at Ping-Pong it would be the greatest propaganda victory of the Cold War.

"On the other hand, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the CIA feel it would be better to send a mediocre team and risk defeat in exchange for finding out what Mao Tse-tung is really thinking.

"The ideal, of course, would be to send a champion Ping-Pong player who also can figure out what is going on in Peking. But so far we can't find anybody."

"Why is that?" I asked. "Surely in this vast organization you must have some excellent table tennis players."

"Unfortunately, most of our agents are golfers," he said sadly. "We also have some tennis players and a few people who play croquet. But no one here ever thought to recruit Ping-Pong players."

"Couldn't you borrow a champion player from another agency of the government?" I asked.

"They only one who would have qualified was a man who worked for the FBI and had won the intercollegiate Ping-Pong championship of 1956. But unfortunately, he was fired a month ago for telling a friend that he didn't like J. Edgar Hoover's barber."

"Then it looks like the U.S. table tennis team may have to go to Peking without CIA representation?" I said.

"Unless we can come up with a sleeper," the official said. "Our recruiters are out on the college campuses right now and their orders are to find someone, anyone. It doesn't make any difference if he can pass a security clearance as long as he has a vicious backhand."

"Will anyone be punished because the CIA was unprepared to provide an agent for the Red China table tennis tournament?" I asked.

"Our personnel director was demoted and transferred to Iceland the other day, but at the last minute President Nixon commuted his sentence."

POINT OF VIEW

'Pogrom' in Vietnam

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following Point of View by Jose F. Trevino, chairman of the MSU Chicano Veterans Assn., was submitted last week.

The Madhouse Mob's Vietnamization "pogrom" is not going well at all. Over the past few weeks we watched this army of the Vietnamized war cover 50 rugged miles of enemy territory (25 in and 25 out) in what the boobe-tube euphemized as "a modest operation to disrupt enemy communication and supply lines on the Ho Chi Minh trail." All this of course, with profuse promises that we would be out in a week. With some mild persuasion on the part of those dirty commie rats, sure enough we are.

Walter Cronkite could barely hold back the tears as he related how "South Vietnamese troops were withdrawing after one of the most successful raids of the war." Then a couple of days later they were performing "a rear guard action under moderate enemy pressure." Finally, in what appeared to be a righteous outburst of reporting integrity, the television exposed us to a 10-second tape glimpse of ARVN troops hanging on to chopper skids and wrapped around propeller blades in a calm stampede to perform this "modest rear guard action."

If this was a planned withdrawal, we would be afraid to witness what the military might term a rout. Another tape of similar duration shows American troops at forward support bases folding up the tent, so to speak. Seems that at this point we graciously offered these unique strategic positions to the Vietnamese who, in turn, delivered a terse message which, after translation, read something like "no thanks, you can have them." Of all the implausible missions the military has brewed yet, this one takes the grand award.

Well, so much for the think tank's Vietnamization "pogrom." But then, after all, these are not American boys taking the casualties, but "gooks" rubbing out "gooks." And as a final consolation, Blacks, Chicanos, Human Beings and Puerto Ricans have been bearing the brunt of American casualties anyhow. The McCarran Act and the built-in institutional racism of the draft boards in this racist system have cunningly conspired to that end.

As if this were not enough, the think tank at the National Shrine is now planning on hiring its own elite corps of protrained torpedoes. VA, volunteer army they call it.

With a four-year hitch in the military representing a step upward in social mobility for the underprivileged, disadvantaged, and hungry in this country, we can predict what the bulk of this VA is going to consist of, yep, Human Beings (who are almost extinct anyway), Chicanos, Blacks, Puerto Ricans, etc.

So Der Fuhrer and the brain machine at the National Oracle, with a master stroke of organizational genius, cleverly contrives to continue packing us into the cannon's muzzle and "pogrom" us right out of existence. ZPG. Not only that but with the emphasis shifting from Asia to Latin America those Spanish-speaking Chicanos should prove an invaluable asset to the peace-loving nations of the West, indeed. Just put some jingle in our pockets and bread in our bellies and we'll be there.

Like it or not, domino theory or no, the United States is getting a healthy Asiatic bootprint in its money-making behind right out of THEIR continent and about time. President Spiro Nixon's bass-ackward policy of pulling out by pushing in is almost never always right and it almost never always has been.

We have a sneaky suspicion that same game of dominoes is going to pop up in Latin America all over again.

POGROM (according to Webster): an organized massacre and looting of helpless people usually with the connivance of officials: such as a massacre of Jews: to massacre in a pogrom: one who organizes or takes part in a pogrom.

Magazine approach

To the Editor: I appreciate David Bassett's enthusiasm for the MSU Alumni Magazine. ("Editor alters alumni magazine," State News, April 9), however I fear he has not done justice to the efforts of the previous editors. The MSU Alumni Magazine has always been considered among the best in the Ten and in my meetings with editors from other schools, I have heard they held a great deal of respect for my predecessors. I think Mr. Bassett's point is simply that each new editor influences a publication in his own way and in the manner he believes will best serve his readers. We all have our own approach. Which is not to say one is necessarily bad or good.

Law aids med schools' anatomic training

Expanded medical programs at MSU have brought about an increasing need for human anatomical materials, according to a Dept. of Anatomy spokesman.

This need resulted in legislative action a year ago pertinent to the willing of bodies for teaching and research purposes.

Act 189 of Public Acts of 1969, known as the "uniform anatomical gift act," became effective in March, 1970.

Public awareness of the new act has brought an increasing number of bequests to MSU.

According to a Dept. of Anatomy spokesman, MSU's need will probably be met through donated bodies and receipt of unclaimed bodies.

In the past five years, the department has received about 300 promises from prospective donors. A few of these have been received.

Unclaimed bodies available to medical schools are decreasing in number because increased public welfare funds have provided a source of burial costs for institutionalized patients.

To date, MSU has been able to meet its needs through cooperation of various state institutions and the medical schools at Wayne State University and the University of Michigan.

Most states' medical schools receive their anatomical material from city, county or state institutions in which patients die without known relatives.

The Dept. of Anatomy reports that it receives about three or four requests each week for information on the Willing Body Program. Responses, they say, are generally from adults but sometimes from students.

"Most who respond are in very good health," a spokesman said. "They have heard about the program and think it's a good idea."

In accordance with the anatomical gift act, appropriate legally binding forms have been prepared by the Dept. of Anatomy and may be obtained by writing: Dept. of Anatomy, 274 Giltner Hall, MSU.

Section Three of the act provides that "any individual of sound mind and 18 years of age or more may give all or part of his body for any purpose specified in Section Four of the act, the gift to take effect upon death."

Subsection Two of this section also provides for donation by the decedent's survivors and establishes an order or priority for granting this permission. It states:

"Absence of actual notice of contrary by the decedent or actual notice of opposition by a member of the same or a prior class, the following persons in order may give all or part of the decedent's body for any purpose specified in Section Four of the act:

- the spouse.
- an adult son or daughter.
- either parent.
- an adult brother or sister.
- a guardian of the person of the decedent at the time of his death.
- any person authorized or under obligation to dispose of the body."

Subsection Five of Section Three states that "the rights of the donee created by the gift are paramount to the rights of others, but are subject to the laws of the state prescribing powers and duties with respect to autopsies."

Section Five, Subsection One of the act, provides that "a gift may be made by will. The gift becomes effective upon the death without waiting for probate. If the will is not probated, or if it is declared invalid for testamentary purposes, the gift, to the extent that it has been acted upon in good faith, is nevertheless valid and effective.

"A gift may also be made by document other than a will. The document must be signed by the donor or signed for him at his direction in the presence of two witnesses who must in turn sign the document in his presence."

Section Eight of the act states that "the donee may accept or reject the gift. If the donee accepts the gift of the entire body, the surviving spouse, next of kin, or other persons having authority to direct and arrange the funeral and burial may, subject to the terms of the gift, authorize embalming and the use of the body in funeral services."

At the present time, MSU's medical college and osteopathic college are in a position to accept only whole bodies for teaching and research purposes. Autopsied bodies are not accepted by the school. The University does not buy bodies but does pay all expenses for transportation, cremation and burial after death.

After a body has been used by the school, its remains are cremated and placed in a cemetery plot maintained by the University. If the donor or family desire the ashes returned for burial in the family plot, the University will comply with such requests, if they are so stated on the forms returned to the Dept. of Anatomy.

If a member of the program dies in another state, the body should be taken to the nearest medical school in the state where death occurs, as the costs of transporting a body are too great to be supported by the University.

Law practice changing: Kelley

By LESLIE LEE
State News Staff Writer

The future practice of law lies in the public sector rather than the private sector, Atty. Gen. Frank Kelley told members of the MSU Pre-Law Club Tuesday.

"The great challenges of today are not in the private practice but in the government or quasi-public service," Kelley said. Public service lawyers are concerned with issues such as consumer protection, civil liberties, civil rights and other public causes. Law is one of the few areas that pose tremendous possibilities for women he added.

Kelley cautioned against expecting a highly exciting career in law or expecting great financial rewards. Around the turn of the century a lawyer's income was well above that of a doctor or dentist but the practice hasn't done too well recently despite high barriers to entry, Kelley said.

Lawyers have a long tradition of contributing greatly to human rights, Kelley said, pointing out that most of the framers of the Constitution as well as leaders in the civil rights movement were lawyers.

Even if a lawyer knows the "system" and how it works for social change, the lawyer must serve individual interests to provide for his own livelihood, he added.

Commenting on the future of law in Michigan, Kelley predicted that divorces would come into the hands of psychiatrists and marriage counselors and that the lawyers would only handle property disputes.

The divorce court is largely a carry-over from medieval England when divorce was possible only when one of the parties was guilty of a great sin and the court had to determine what breach of contract was involved, Kelley explained. If the divorce cases were taken out of the courts, the dockets would be cleared by 50 percent.

Kelley noted that California is paving the way with a no-fault divorce system.

Viewing the prospects for lowering the age of majority from 21 to 18 in Michigan, Kelley said the legislature will probably be pressured into it by the current national drive for lowering the voting age and the difficulties of maintaining dual systems for voting and legal status of those between 18 and 21.

Calling New York's off-track betting system "a cop-out and a stupid cheap stunt," Kelley said that taxing gambling is another carry-over from the philosophy of taxing the sinner to pay the way for society. He said this is also involved in the alcohol and tobacco taxes which have virtually made the government a partner in these industries.

This association taints the image of government, Kelley said, because the taxes bring in such a large revenue that the government has a vested interest in their continued success.

Saying the system of "let the sinner pay the fray" won't work, Kelley pointed to Las Vegas where practically all vices have been legalized. The crime rate there in every classification is the highest in the country, Kelley said.

"The highest crime rate is not in Detroit, or New York or Watts but in Las Vegas where the vices have been legalized and taxed," he said.

Explaining this ruling on migratory workers issued this week, Kelley said dignity and civil rights were given to thousands of western Michigan workers living in conditions that were the same "as the slaves in the pre-Civil War south."

The decision made invalid trespass laws used by many farmers to keep migratory workers from having visitors on the premises of their tenement dwellings.

Kelley called the property tax another carryover from medieval England which in no way reflects the ability of the owner to pay. He joined Gov. Milliken in calling for abolition of the tax. Kelley said corporations should have to pay their share of the costs rather than taxing the general public in excess.

Genius' mother criticizes education for gifted child

Public school systems across the United States are doing little to encourage or educate the intellectually-gifted child, the mother of one of MSU's youngest graduates told the annual conference of licensed practical nurses on campus Tuesday.

Audrey Grosz, mother of Michael Grosz who earned a master's degree in mathematics from MSU at age 16, is the author of the book, "Genius in Residence." Mike, now 17, is working toward a doctorate degree at Yale University.

Referring to the "noneducation" of the gifted child in U.S. schools, Mrs. Grosz said all this country has done in this area is to conduct some studies which are "now gathering dust because of no money to implement them" and to provide enrichment reading programs and acceleration.

By acceleration, she referred to brighter children skipping grades when they could handle the advanced work. But she said the holding of special classes for gifted children is almost nonexistent in U.S. schools.

"Administrators think that segregation of the intellectually elite is dangerous and undemocratic," she said. In Russia, she noted, 300 13 to 14 year-olds a year are singled out for superior intelligence and taught in a special school.

She referred to a newspaper story years ago that quoted a U.S. Office of Education official as saying, "Helping gifted children is like taking up a collection for Howard Hughes."

She wrote a letter to the Office of Education asking for an explanation of this comment. An aide replied that, for the United States to change its stand on gifted children, present institutional policies and commitments would have to change, she said.

"The United States is churning out ivory tower slogans while Russia is churning out 300 superior minds a year," she said. "I find that frightening."

Mrs. Grosz said she wrote her book because she and her husband, who live in Lansing, were amazed about the misconceptions of gifted children.

She said the uninformed public thinks the gifted child is a spoiled brat, a sissy, a book worm, and a troublemaker who is unable to establish any enduring relationships and commits suicide at the age of 30.

Her belief is that gifted children grow into gifted adults, do not "burn themselves out" by the age of 25 or 30 and can be productive for their entire lives.

Mike's relationships with his brother, 14, and his sister, 16, have always been healthy, she said, with his siblings regarding him first as a brother, secondly as a genius.

She said his sister, Patty, can shut him up effectively if he wants to by asking him, "What do you know, anyway?"

"That really cools him off," Mrs. Grosz said, "because if he were to answer her and tell her he knew, it'd probably take 10 years."

Van Cliburn to perform

Van Cliburn, one of America's best-known concert pianists, will perform at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the Auditorium.

His appearance is a Series "B" attraction in MSU's Lecture-Concert Series.

He will play Brahms' "Rhapsody No. 2 in G Minor," Beethoven's "Sonata in E Flat Major," three works by Debussy — "Feux d'artifice," "Clair de lune" and "L'Île Joyeuse," — and three works by Chopin — "Ballade in G Minor," "Nocturne in E Major, Opus 62, No. 2" and "Scherzo in B Flat Minor, Opus 31."

Cliburn, who performed at MSU in 1966, is currently on a 60-city tour performing both in recital and as soloist with the major symphony orchestras.

In 1958 he skyrocketed to international fame after winning the First Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow. When Cliburn returned to the Soviet Union in 1960 sponsored by the U.S. State Dept., the renowned professor of piano, Nehaus, teacher of Gilels and Richter, proclaimed him "the real and brilliant successor to Rachmaninoff!"

Cliburn began to study piano at three with his mother, an accomplished pianist. She remained his only instructor until he went to New York City in 1951 to study at the Juilliard School of Music with Mme. Rosina Lhevinne.

He has won many musical competitions during his career, but his most important achievement came in 1954 when he won the Edgar M. Leventritt Foundation Award with his playing of Liszt's "Twelfth Rhapsody." This gave him the privilege of playing in concert with the New York Philharmonic at Carnegie Hall.

In 1959, Cliburn's career was threatened. An infection in one of his fingers necessitated a delicate operation, forcing him to cancel his entire season's concert commitments.

His summer appearances have included Saratoga, Ravinia Park, Interlochen, the Garden State Festival in New Jersey, Philadelphia's Robin Hood Dell, the Hollywood Bowl and Tanglewood.

FORECAST WITHHELD

By ROBERT KIPPER
State News Reviewer

Tonight, for the 43rd time, the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences will dole out its Oscar awards.

By now the futility of predicting the winners must be obvious to everyone. Any award group that nominates "Airport" for best film and Ali MacGraw for best actress can't be expected to be logical or pertinent when it comes to choosing winners.

This year no predictions will be offered from this corner.

My reluctance stems partly from disinterest. Many of the year's finest achievements — Barbara Streisand's Doris ("The Owl and the Pussycat"), Alan Arkin's Yossarian ("Catch-22"), and Leonard Frey's Harold ("The Boys in the Band") — were not even nominated.

In place of guesses, what follows are personal choices — the nominees who in one man's opinion most deserve to win.

They probably won't. But, to one who has viewed each nominated film and performance, they should.

Best Film
"Five Easy Pieces," Bob Rafelson's stunning probe of an educated drifter, towers above the other nominees — "Airport," "Love Story," "M*A*S*H," and "Patton."

The film focuses on one man, inciting curiosity with his misleading personality, involvement with his growing complexity, and fascination with his unanswered contradictions. In the course of the film, a seemingly ordinary laborer is "fleshed-out" to a complicated and tormented individual.

Best Actor

George C. Scott's performance of the title role in "Patton" is a magnificent study of ambition, egomania and delusion in high command. Scott creates such a forceful portrait, the viewer's preconceptions of Patton are shattered. After Scott's treatment, simply loving or hating Patton is no longer easy.

Scott doesn't want the Oscar. He has asked to be excluded from the nominees. But, for the Oscar record to lack Scott's performance would be similar to a history of Rome forgetting Julius Caesar of the story of baseball overlooking the contributions of Babe Ruth.

Best Actress

Sarah Miles' performance as Rosy in "Ryan's Daughter" is a lingering study of a girl — women, unsure of her aspirations, sure only of her discontent. A surface loveliness conceals the tangle of emotions, dashed hopes and uncertain longings that torment Rosy internally.

Best Supporting Actor

Chief Dan George made what could have been a standard performance an eloquent display of seasoned wisdom, compassion and humor. As Old Live Skins, George gave "Little Big Man" its most lasting image: the sight of a man confused by the difference between his simple vision of the world and the bloody reality of events. A blind Indian experiences white mistreatment of his people and sees and perceives all.

Best Supporting Actress
Karen Black's depiction of the simple waitress in "Five Easy Pieces" was so complete it often became cloying. Miss Black epitomized the empty-headed doll who dotes on Tammy Wynette records and services the man whose shadow she lives in. For her efforts, Miss Black's character finds a mistreatment her limited mind cannot rationalize.

SDS forum

Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) will host a forum on the Lt. William Calley - My Lai affair at 8:30 p.m. today in 35 Union.

A spokesman for SDS said that the purpose of the forum is to open discussion on the massacre, as well as to "suggest actions that the people should take."

"We believe that Calley is a racist murderer and should be punished, not by the military but by the people," an SDS spokesman said.

Brody site of concert by singers

The Black Sisters of Butterfield Hall are presenting the Donald Vails Choraleers of Detroit in concert at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in the south dining room of Brody Hall. The concert is being sponsored by the Center for Urban Affairs and admission is free.

The choraleers have performed on several college and university campuses, including Wayne State University, Howard University and Saginaw Valley College, and have performed in various states. They have accompanied popular singer Freda Payne on her recordings such as "Band of Gold."

Appearing with the Donald Vails Choraleers will be the Gospel Vibes of Butterfield.

Musical evening

Van Cliburn, world famous concert pianist, will perform Friday evening in the Auditorium as a part of the Lecture-Concert Series.

WEEKEND AT SHAW

Festival to urge change

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

Community, involvement, social action and celebration will bound in and around Shaw Hall this weekend as the first Festival of Alternative Life Styles and Community Action for Social Change opens on campus.

From geodesic domes to music, from plays and skits to films, the festival is an attempt to bring people together and engage them in community action and social change.

Four hours of free social change films will be shown beginning at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Shaw Hall lower lounge.

Saturday's activities will begin noon with more than 40 groups holding workshops and rap sessions and maintaining information tables.

Groups involved include students for a Democratic Society, the North Side Action Center, the Drug Education Center (DEC), Gay Liberation, EQUAL, Off-Campus Council, (OCC), the Student Mobilization Committee, MSU Veterans for Peace, the International Federation Society, the Man and Nature Bookstore and Women's Liberation.

The Listening Ear and the DEC will present a "psychomat" to show people how to deal with various personal and community problems.

A "Red Line" tour of the offices of University personnel engaged in military-industrial work will be conducted Saturday afternoon by the Lansing Area Peace Council. OCC will also conduct a tour of subpar student housing.

Pantomime and satire will be displayed by both the Street

Corner Society and the Suitcase Theater. Balloons and flowers will be given by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and the Man and Nature Bookstore.

A concert featuring Dogs and Archangel will be presented Saturday night. Geodesic and air domes will be on display, and the builders of the domes will encourage people to assist them in building additional copies.

A potluck feast will be held Sunday at noon. Sponsors of the festival said the success of the feast depends on "everyone bringing their surprises."

A speech by John Friones of the Chicago 7 at 8 Sunday night in 104B Wells Hall will conclude the festival.

Organizers of the festival emphasize that this weekend's activities are an attempt to encourage people to "come together."

"This is a festival of life, a festival of spring," Lenny Brenner, East Lansing graduate student, said. "If you come, the festival can be whatever you want it to be."

SECRETARY OF STATE RICHARD H. AUSTIN said Tuesday he will seek to take stiffer action against habitual traffic violators as a result of an accident in Detroit last weekend that took seven lives.

Austin said John Glidden, 20, whose car, traveling at 100 miles per hour, jumped a guard rail and slammed into oncoming traffic,

"was one of those chronic problem drivers."
"Between August, 1968, and February, of this year the Dept. of State suspended his license for a total of 15 months," Austin said.

He said he would review present guidelines to determine if more stringent action should be taken "even from a single offense."

Batsmen blank Albion twice

By BOB VIGES
State News Sports Writer

MSU unleashed its batting power in the first game of a double header against Albion and in the second the Spartans learned how to score runs without getting any hits as MSU took both ends of the twin bill, 8-0 and 5-0 Wednesday at Kobs Field.

A pair of four runs innings accounted for all the Spartan runs in the first game and a four run inning, in which MSU did not get a hit padded the lead MSU had gotten earlier on a Rob Ellis home run in the second contest.

Spartan pitchers also turned in excellent performances as five hurlers limited Albion to five hits for the afternoon, Larry Ike, Elliott Moore and Dave Bewley combined for a one hitter in the opening contest, the one hit a harmless single in the third inning off Ike.

Dave Leisman pitched a strong game in the night cap for the first five innings and Brian Lieckfelt went to the mound for the final two stanzas to finish shutting out the Britons, as he struck out the final five men he faced.

The twin shutouts increased the Spartan's, who are rated sixth in the nation, record to 15-2 for the year. Albion dropped its eighth game of the season against two victories.

MSU had little trouble in the opener as it stormed out to a quick four to nothing lead in the first stanza. Gary Boyce opened the inning with a pop up to the Albion first baseman but the ball fell off the glove of Greg Macy and Boyce reached base safely.

After a fly out Ellis lashed a single past the shortstop and Shaun Howitt walked, loading the bases for catcher Ron Pruitt.

The ex-outfielder blasted the ball on one hop to the fence in right field but Pruitt was prevented from increasing his long hit to more than a ground rule double as the ball rolled under the fence. Two runs came in on the blow, however, and the Spartans were never headed after that.

In the fourth inning Ellis walked to start another Spartan rally. The muscular junior walked four times during the afternoon to supplement his 4-4 hitting day. After advancing on a ground out Ellis came home for the second time on another hit by Pruitt.

DeLonge followed with a single to right and when the right fielder let the ball get past him, the Spartan second baseman scampered all the way to third scoring Pruitt ahead of him. A single by Phil Rashead and a double down he right field line by Ike completed the Spartan scoring.

Leisman retired the first 10 men he faced in the nightcap before two singles and a hit batsmen in the fourth gave him his only trouble of the day.

the middle. Luckily for the Spartans, Albion coach Morley Fraser decided not to attempt to send the runner home because Howitt, in center field bobbled the ball twice before finding the handle.

With runners on first and third and only one out, Lieckfelt then Leisman, a Lansing product made Macy pop up to the threat.

In the top of the sixth, Lieckfelt faced the toughest situation a Spartan pitcher met all day. A walk and a throwing error by DeLonge, after a force out, put a man on second and a moment later the Briton's clean up man, Harry Turney singled up regained his poise and struck out the final five batters.

Ahead only 1-0, via Ellis' lone homer, MSU iced the game in the bottom of the fifth by coming up with four runs without the benefit of a hit. Four walks, an error, a wild pitch and a passed ball aided the Spartan cause. MSU was out in the nightcap four to three.

An Albion baserunner slides into third base, but Spartan third baseman Phil Rashead (20) has already made the force play at third in action during the first game of Wednesday's doubleheader at Kobs Field. MSU won the first game, 8-0.

WIN 8 OF 9 MATCHES

'S' netters rip Western

By MIKE ABELICH
State News Sports Writer

KALAMAZOO — The MSU tennis team took an easy 8-1 victory over Western Michigan Wednesday afternoon.

The Spartans won five of the six singles matches and all three doubles matches as they raised this regular season record to 2-1.

Tom Gray won the No. 1 singles match for MSU, beating Jerry Smith, 6-1, 7-6.

MSU's No. 2 man, DeArmond Briggs, took care of Rick Westhoff easily, 6-1, 6-1.

Rick Vetter, Jim Symington and Rick Ferman, MSU's No. 3, 4 and 5 men, respectively, also came home with victories. Vetter knocked off Pat Birney, 7-6, 6-0; Symington was victorious over Roger Thurman, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2 and Ferman beat Bruce Karazia in a hard-fought 4-6, 7-6, 6-4 match. MSU's only loss came at No. 6 singles where Jim Pritula lost to Ralph Potter, 6-4, 0-6, 6-2.

At No. 1 doubles Gray and Briggs beat Smith and Westhoff, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

The No. 2 team of Vetter and Ferman beat Birney and Thurman, 6-2, 6-2 and the No. 3 doubles team of Symington and Pritula beat Potter and Al Hiddema, 6-0, 6-2.

MSU's next matches will be against Northwestern and Wisconsin on Friday and Saturday on the MSU tennis courts.

Yanks belt Tigers again, 8-4

NEW YORK (UPI) — Winning pitcher Fritz Peterson, Gene Michael and Horace Clarke each drove in two runs Wednesday to lead the New York Yankees to an 8-4 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Peterson capped the four-run fourth inning with a run-scoring single and walked with the bases loaded in the sixth inning. Michael hit run-scoring singles in the fourth and eighth innings. Clarke added a two-run single in the eighth.

Detroit, which got 11 hits off Stan Bahnsen Tuesday, finally knocked Peterson out when Jim Northrup walked and Al Kaline doubled for his fourth hit and Detroit's 12th to lead off the ninth. Jack Aker came in and wild pitched home a run while retiring the side.

Tiger starter Mickey Lolich was undermined by Willie Horton's misplay of Danny Cater's long fly ball into a ground rule double in the fourth inning. Felipe Alou started the inning with a homer and with one out and one on, Horton let Cater's towering fly to the 402-foot sign in left fall in for the ground rule double that put runners on second and third. John Ellis' sacrifice fly — which would have been the third out if Horton had caught the fly — Bobby Murcer's walk and run-scoring singles by Michael and Peterson followed Horton's misplay.

Peterson's bases loaded walk in the sixth inning made it 5-2 and New York made it a rout with three more runs in the eighth. Horton went 0-5 in the game and stranded nine runners as his average dipped to .120 this season. Aurelio Rodriguez drove in Detroit's first two runs off Peterson with a run-scoring double in the third and a run-scoring single in the fifth. Dick McAuliffe homered in the eighth for Detroit's third run.

In other games Wednesday afternoon Mike Cuellar tossed a four-hitter and Boog Powell belted a two-run homer as the Baltimore Orioles snapped a three-game Cleveland winning streak by defeating the Indians, 3-0.

Cuellar, who hurled 21 complete games and four shutouts last season became the third Oriole hurler to go the distance this year. The 33-year-old lefthander, pitching in 34-degree weather, struck out two and walked one to pick up his first triumph of the season.

Tommy Harper's seventh-inning single scored rookie Rick Auerbach, on base with his first major-league hit, with the winning run of the game to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 3-0 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

Reggie Jackson hit two solo homers and pitcher Deigo Segui added a three-run blast in the sixth inning to give the Oakland Athletics a 6-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

DeBusschere, Frazier top NBA all-defensive team

NEW YORK (UPI) — It's no coincidence that the New York Knicks have the best defensive team in the National Basketball Association. Dave DeBusschere and Walt Frazier measured up to team standards when they were named to the league's all-defensive team. Gus Johnson of the Baltimore Bullets, Nate Thurmond of the San Francisco Warriors and Jerry West of the Los Angeles Lakers rounded out the team announced by Commissioner Walter Kennedy on balloting conducted by the Newspaper Enterprise Association of the league's 17 coaches.

DeBusschere was the top vote-getter with 32 points, three more than Frazier. West was next with 25. Johnson had 22 and Thurmond 21.

The second team and their votes: Lew Alcindor, Milwaukee (18); John Havlicke, Boston (15); Jerry Sloan, Chicago (13); Norm Van Lier, Cincinnati (8) and Paul Silas, Phoenix (7).

"It's a real honor to be the guy to get the most votes," DeBusschere said on learning of the designation. "Our club has always prided itself on defense, and it really means a lot to me to make this team because of the guys I have to guard on other clubs."

DeBusschere, Frazier, Johnson and West are repeaters from the 1969-70 defensive squad.

Bruins, Rangers can clinch NHL playoff series tonight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Three teams have a chance to wrap up their quarter-final Stanley Cup series tonight as they take 3-2 leads into tonight's sixth games.

New York, Boston and Minnesota all broke 2-2 ties in their respective series with victories Tuesday night.

The Rangers will play at Toronto and the Bruins will play at Montreal tonight, but Minnesota will have the home ice advantage when they meet St. Louis in the sixth game in that series.

The Chicago Black Hawks have already wrapped up their series and are awaiting the outcome of the New York - Toronto series to play the winner of that match-up.

The winner of the Minnesota - St. Louis series will play the survivor of the Boston - Montreal quarter-finals.

Lou Nanne, who scored the goal that gave Minnesota a 4-3 victory over St. Louis with 3 1/2 minutes to go in the fifth game, said he was "just lucky." He said he got a rebound with St. Louis goalie Glenn Hall out of position and managed to slap the puck into the net.

Ted Irvine batted home his own rebound with the game only 34 seconds old as the charged-up Rangers went on to beat the Toronto Maple Leafs, 3-1, Tuesday night.

Although the Rangers are the only National Hockey League team to qualify for the playoffs in each of the last five years, this marks the first time since 1950 they have won as many as three games in a series.

Vic Hadfield scored his fourth goal of the series early in the second period, and team captain Bob Nevin wound up the New York scoring at 6:25 of the final period.

Veteran forward John Bucyk snapped a four-game slump and Ed Westfall registered a key shorthanded goal Tuesday night to lead the Boston Bruins to a 7-3 win.

Wayne Cashman, Phil Esposito, Mike Walton, John McKenzie and Ken Hodge also scored for the Stanley Cup defenders while Yvan Cournoyer, Frank Mahovlich and John Ferguson tallied for the Canadians.

The Bruins raced out to a 3-1 first period lead while bombarding rookie Montreal goalie Ken Dryden with 23 shots. Cashman's goal in the first minute of play was offset by Cournoyer five minutes later, but Esposito's third goal of the playoffs and Walton's second of the series established the lead.

Referee Bill Friday handed out 15 penalties in the first period, including fighting majors to Henri Richard and Walton.

The game quieted down thereafter with three minors in the second period and five in the third round as the Bruins constructed a 56-27 shooting edge in the game.

and Minnesota as Tuesday night's winners. All three teams now lead their quarter-final series, 3-2.

Cheerleading trials begin tonight in IM

By NICK MIRON
State News Sports Writer

A good attitude, says MSU cheerleader Mike Yockey, is the main ingredient needed to become a member of the MSU cheerleading squad.

Yockey pointed out skills that would be needed in the tryouts that open at 4 p.m. today in the Sports Arena of the Men's IM. Times posted in Wednesday's State News were incorrect. Thursday trials will be from 4 to 6 p.m. and Tuesday trials from 7 to 9 p.m.

The MSU squad is unique in its field, its style of performing, and its great emphasis on teamwork.

The entire squad is open and subject to change this year. Previous squad members have no priority, which will open up positions for six male, 12 female and four alternate members; 22 positions in all.

"We want the people that are willing to make the sacrifice for the squad," Yockey said. "We look for the way people develop and adapt to our style."

Whereas females have perennially been in abundance in tryouts, the squad has had troubles drawing male entrants.

"Girls come out because they've been cheerleaders before," Yockey said. "Males generally have no experience. They usually just chance on it. We want to increase the number of males on the squad."

"We want the individual who can work and participate on a team level. Someone who is a leader but can also work as part of a group."

Males are especially welcome on cheerleading squads because of their general knowledge of the games being played and thus their sense of what mood the crowd is in and how they will react to certain cheers.

The MSU Cheerleaders enjoy varsity status and usually travel to all Big Ten games or contests within a 500-mile radius.

"We have a definite style but we're certainly not stagnant," Yockey said. "We realize the need for change when it is warranted. We welcome people with innovative minds."

Rah team!

MSU cheerleaders lead cheers during last season's MSU - Michigan football game. Tryouts for positions on the 1971 cheerleading team will begin at 4 p.m. today in the Sports Arena of the Men's I.M.

No surgery for Hundley

CHICAGO (UPI) — A preliminary examination indicated today that Chicago Cubs' catcher Randy Hundley will not have to undergo surgery on his injured right knee.

Dr. Jacob Suker, Cubs' team physician, said the cartilage appears to be intact. "At the moment, no surgery is contemplated," he said.

Suker said more X-rays would be taken before a final decision is made. He said he could not predict when Hundley would be ready to rejoin the lineup.

9 Spartan athletes

cited as "outstanding"

Nine MSU athletes have been chosen to appear in the 1971 edition of Outstanding College Athletes of America.

The nine selected and their respective sports are: Rob Ellis, of Grand Rapids, Mich., baseball; Rudy Benjamin, of Dayton, Ohio, basketball; Eric Allen of Georgetown, S.C., football and track; Mike Rasmussen, of Fresno, Calif., football; Larry Ike, of Grand Rapids, basketball and baseball; Herb Washington, of Flint, track; Tom Muir of Bay City, wrestling; Don Thompson, of Rexdale, Ontario, Can., hockey; Art Demling of St. Louis, Mo., soccer and Charles Morse of Livonia, gymnastics.

Coaches and athletic directors from individual colleges and universities across the nation nominated the winning athletes on the basis of their displayed abilities, not only in athletics but also in community service and campus activities.

Other criteria for the award included strength of character, leadership both on and off the playing field, and scholarship.

Survey on 'U' health care needs proposed

By BARBARA FARY
and
DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writers

A proposal to conduct a survey to learn what various members of the University perceive as being their health care needs was discussed this week by the All-University Health Center Advisory Committee.

The survey would study reactions to the possibility of a prepaid group health care package for the MSU community.

Robert Perrin, vice president for University relations, said that while no formal survey now exists, various recommendations have been made by the Urban Survey Research Bureau.

These include 75 in-depth interviews with students, faculty, staff and administrators to determine what type of questions should be asked on the survey questionnaire.

From this data, a survey could be made to be distributed to approximately 1,250 people, with results available by July 1.

A spokesman from the research bureau said that "at least 250" questionnaires would be sent to students.

Also studied at the meeting was an information pamphlet explaining the features of a prepaid health care package. This pamphlet explained that the package, in its simplest terms, would provide University people with a broad range of services for a set, pre-paid fee.

James Cook, health center administrator, said that the cost to students for the group plan "probably would be around $13 per student per term."

Clair Huntington, administrative assistant to the vice president for business and finance, said that it is possible that student fees, including tuition, would be reduced if the plan were implemented.

The pamphlet also said all students might not be required to join the plan, but the cost for each student would be greatly reduced if they did.

Huntington said earlier that the plan might better be termed a total health care plan.

"It differs in fee - for - service plan in that the individual makes a monthly payment which covers all the medical care, both in-and-out - patient, that he receives through the University," he explained. "It differs from the Blue Cross approach which reimburses a member after he has paid his medical bills."

Huntington said the proposed plan is not only feasible, but has been practiced for the past 20 years as the Kaiser Plan.

The Kaiser plan was begun by Kaiser Aluminum Co. employees who were able to finance a clinic and hospital to take care of their families through monthly pooled contributions. Several universities, including Harvard, follow this plan. The main advantage of the proposed plan, he said, is that it provides coverage for students who often experience difficulty in obtaining health care away from home, especially married students with small children.

"East Lansing physicians are often reluctant to add new patients to their practice, especially if they are transient like most college students are," Huntington said. "A plan that would guarantee health care to students and their families would be a great help to students and particularly to faculty and staff who make their homes here."

President Wharton introduced the plan to improve the quality and availability of health care and reduce costs.

"If such a plan can be successfully implemented at MSU, it would also be helpful to the education of physicians and other health professionals and could prove to be a model system," he said.

President Wharton had introduced the plan to improve the quality and availability of health care and to reduce costs.

"If such a plan can be successfully implemented at MSU, it would be also helpful to the education of physicians and other health professionals and could prove to be a model system," Wharton said.

Although the program would be first implemented as a pilot program with limited service in the College of Human Medicine clinic as it now exists and the in-patient care at community hospitals, Huntington said its scope could eventually be expanded to include office calls, house calls, dental work, rehabilitation therapy and medical - social services.

Health care plans for specific groups are the latest trend in medical news and "HMO's" (health maintenance organizations) are being considered by Congress as a possible solution to the nation's medical needs, Huntington said.

"The kind of HMO that we would like the University community to consider," Wharton said, "is one which would be tailored to our particular health care needs and would also aid our educational and research projects aimed at improving health care."

The plan would be implemented with the assistance of the Colleges of Human and Osteopathic Medicine, Huntington said, which are being built to train community physicians.

"Our medical students would then be training in a real community setting," he said, "treating children as well as adults. And the new student or married students with families would not have to worry about moving to a new city where they did not know where to find good health care."

The survey may indicate a lack of interest in the proposal, Huntington predicted, among single students.

"We surveyed the student body three years ago and found that 84 per cent were covered by their parents' insurance," he said. "I doubt if a single student's most important area of interest is his health."

Another factor to consider, Huntington said, is that most single students leave the campus on weekends and during the summer and most faculty appointments are 10 months long.

"This type of plan is most valuable to a stable community like the company towns under the Kaiser Plan," he said. "However, married students are automatically dropped from family health plan and might respond most favorably to a University plan."

The All-University Health Center Advisory Board, which will be responsible for the survey, was appointed last year by President Wharton to give members of the University community a voice in the policies of the MSU Health Center.

The board is composed of both graduate and undergraduate students, faculty and staff members and nonvoting professional members.

Urban 4-H seeks volunteers

By BARBARA FARY
State News Staff Writer

The Urban Lansing 4-H Club is recruiting MSU students through Wednesday to work this term with disadvantaged youths between the ages of six and 18.

"Over 650 young people are now involved in the program which, for many, is their only planned activity outside of school," John Duff, 4-H volunteer coordinator said.

"More could be involved if more volunteers can be found."

"We need more volunteer educators to work with kids in these projects," Duff said. "No special knowledge in any subject area is needed. The main thing is to be interested in working with youth who need to have an adult to look up to."

Kay Siegrist, asst. coordinator, said she learned as much as the girls she worked with last year when she and another girl taught quilting.

"We taught the girls how to make wall hangings and things like that," she said. "I didn't know a thing about quilting, but my partner did, and it was fun learning with the girls. We try to match up a volunteer with a special skill with a volunteer who has no one area of interest, as in my case."

"The kids we work with our are disadvantaged," Miss Siegrist said, "but in more ways than just coming from a low - income neighborhood. Many of them come from broken or unhappy homes and have little self - respect or pride in their environment. We try to teach them new skills to give them self - confidence."

The 4-H activities are relevant to the young people they serve, she said. For example, girls in a cooking class are taught how to prepare low - cost but nutritionally balanced meals and how to shop wisely.

"Sometimes a young girl in a fatherless home may have to do all the cooking because her mother works," Miss Siebert said. "We will help her learn that skill."

Volunteers are urged to meet with parents and try to involve them in the projects, she said.

"As long as we have a volunteer out in the community, we want them to do something worthwhile and not just babysit."

Volunteers spend from three to five hours a week with their group and are provided with transportation from the MSU volunteer bureau or fellow volunteers.

All new volunteers are given on - scene training from experienced volunteers before taking over a group of their own.

At present, students from MSU and Lansing Community College meet with youth groups at area schools, churches, community centers and club houses.

"We'd like interested students to call us or drop in at the 4-H urban office at 175 S. Anthony Hall, because we really need them," Miss Siebert said.

Sports Car Club sponsors gymkhana Sunday at mall

The MSU Sports Car Club will sponsor a gymkhana from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday in the back parking lot of Meridian Mall, Marsh Road and East Grand River Ave.

A gymkhana is a timed event in which drivers compete one at a time against other drivers whose cars are similar in weight, style and engine size.

Interested people in the greater Lansing area are invited to compete.

Students' group to show film

"Alaska Wildlife Wonderland," a travelogue adventure film will be shown at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Vet Clinic auditorium.

The film is being presented by Campus Advance, a Christian student organization. Admission is $1.50 for the public and $1 for students and faculty. Children under 12 will be admitted free.

POLICE BRIEFS

MSU POLICE SAID they received a call Tuesday from doctors at Sparrow Hospital in Lansing who said they were treating an MSU coed in serious condition from an apparent overdose of drugs and alcohol.

Information from sources close to the coed indicated that the overdose did not result from a suicide attempt, officers reported. Police declined to identify the coed.

NINE TEXT BOOKS, with a total estimated value of $88, were reportedly stolen Tuesday from two students who left the books unattended in public areas and from one student who left his books inside an unlocked room, MSU police said.

Three books were discovered missing from the Holden Hall cafeteria coat rack, police said, and six of the books were taken from a shelf in the Bailey Hall room of Gerald D. Canali, Lewiston, N.Y., junior.

POLICE SAID THEY RECEIVED four complaints Tuesday from students who said thieves stole a billfold, a radio, a purse and wallet, a camera and a tape recorder, with a total estimated value of $182.

In two of the incidents, students told officers they were absent from their resident hall at the time of the theft and left the doors closed but not locked. The other thefts occurred when students left items unattended for five minutes and for a half - hour in public areas of Bryan and Holden halls.

A MOTORCYCLE valued at $30 which had been missing since fall term, 1970, was returned Tuesday to its owner, Patrick M. Casey, Buchanan senior, after two East Lansing youths discovered the vehicle hidden in a dump of bushes in the Sandford Woodlot, behind Holmes, McDonel and Owen Halls.

Police said they received a call from East Lansing police, where the two notified about the discovery.

DANIEL J. RHODES, St. Joseph freshman, told police someone apparently had thrown a ball through the windshield of his automobile parked on Abbott Road between 5:30 p.m. and 11:25 p.m.

Damage to the windshield was estimated at $125.

Poll finds students doubt mixed marriage success

The majority of college students, according to a recent campus survey, are convinced that total racial equity may be more a hoped - for ideal than a fact.

Notwithstanding the attitudes of a generation which has probably been as tolerant of one another's opinions and actions as any previous, about two out of three college students would assess the prospects for a successful interracial marriage as slim.

The skeptical outlook is attributed more to the pressures brought about by society than to personal incompatibility in such a marriage.

Asked about the prospects for harmonious interfaith marriages today, the large majority of students were much more optimistic.

Interviewers polled 1,085 college students in mid - March. A cross - section of 43 representative colleges and universities were sampled for the survey. They were asked:

"How would you gauge the chances for success of an interracial marriage today?"

The majority of students who expressed little confidence in the outcome of an interracial marriage frequently cited as their reasons:

1. reluctance on the part of society to fully accept the marriage;
2. the potential problems of acceptance the couple's children might face; and

3. possible conflict owing to the different values held by the couple's families.

Interviewers posed the same question to students concerning interfaith marriages. Less than one in eight indicated that they would have any strong doubts about this type of union.

A response representative of many of the students' thinking came from one Berkeley coed who observed:

"I think that many years ago, an interfaith marriage would have been more handicapped than it is today - people are better educated, more tolerant of one another's views, and probably less apt to blindly follow the dogma of their particular faith."

Interestingly, no difference existed in opinions between men and women. Attitudes did, however, noticeably vary according to geographic region. Students attending eastern schools were more optimistic in their answers to both questions - particularly on the chances for success of an interracial marriage.

Doubts were considerably stronger in the South, though, where students almost unanimously questioned society's acceptance of a mixed marriage.

Speakers debate reform of Michigan abortion law

"Sometimes the aborted fetus cries," she said. "I wonder how many more will cry." Moments later, Denise Coburn, asst. professor of social work, described child beating and cruelty which she said was inflicted upon unwanted children.

"In many of these instances contraception had failed, and case studies show that most of these children were unplanned and unwanted," Miss Coburn said. She said she supports abortions "for social reasons."

Morality of abortions developed into a major issue during the early testimonies as both sides claimed moral positions.

The Rev. Thomas Stark of the University Reformed Church said it was "unfair" for supporters of abortion law reform to criticize Roman Catholics, Dutch Reformed and other religious groups who oppose the proposal "by accusing them of trying to force their morals on society."

"No one can address himself to the abortion question without reflecting his own moral attitudes," Stark said. "It's not just the tactic of one side."

Stark compared abortion to "infanticide," a practice which he said men have tried to justify throughout history.

"If you pass a law making abortion convenient in Michigan, how long will it be until you are asked to have the state provide free abortions for the poor, or to require abortion after the second child is born as a method of population control?" Stark asked the committee members.

John R. Hurley, professor of psychology, said about 25 per cent of maternal deaths are the result of illegal abortions.

"Is it moral for the legislature to condemn hundreds of Michigan women to death at the hands of quack abortionists?" Hurley asked.

He said each year hundreds of discarded infants are found in garbage cans in Detroit as the result of unwanted births.

"Wouldn't we improve the quality of life by raising the status of pregnancy from a fear to a reasonable choice?" he asked.

Rabbi Philip Frankel of Shaarey Zedek Congregation in East Lansing said he hoped he reflected the view of most Jews, "especially liberal Jews," when he said he supports abortion law reform.

"One can, within a religious orientation, see abortion as moral, necessary and worthwhile," Frankel said.

State Democratic party Chairman James McNeely, a Catholic and father of seven, said the abortion question "is not what is one's religious belief. It's at what point does life begin?"

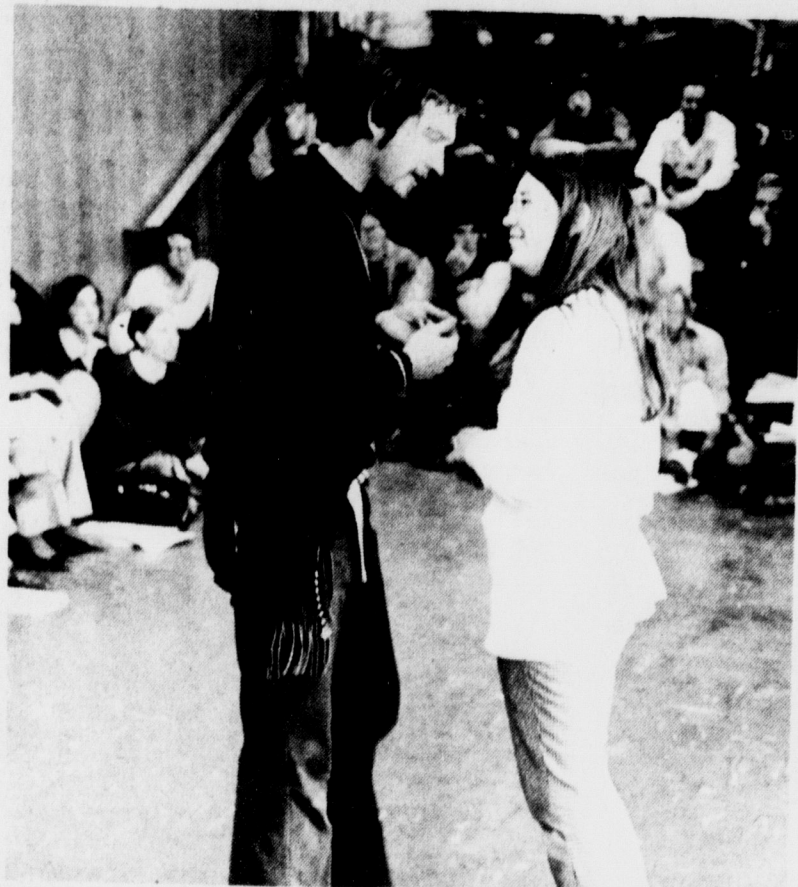

"I don't think the legislature should attempt to make the kind of theological distinctions involved in abortion laws," McNeely said. "An abortion should be viewed merely as an operation."

Following McNeely, former state Democratic party Chairman Zolton Ferency, representing the Greater Lansing American Civil Liberties Union, said the current Michigan abortion law is unconstitutional "because it's constitutionally vague."

"It should not be deemed a crime for a woman to seek, or a doctor to perform, an abortion in Michigan," Ferency said.

He said the rights of the poor under the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution are being denied "because abortions are readily available to the rich but not to the poor."

Rep. Holmes has said he hopes to conclude committee deliberations on the bill by late May or early June.

Abortion satire

A satirical look at the present abortion controversy was presented Wednesday by the Streetcorner Society in Erickson Hall.

China's premier speaks

Trudeau government. Ambassadors were named Tuesday.

Chou is often spoken of as China's leading moderate. He said his government wants to have contacts with all countries — even those with which it has no diplomatic relations. He indicated Chinese teams would accept invitations from the British, Nigerians, Canadians and Columbians to play table tennis in those countries later this year.

Jack Howard of Seattle, Wash., captain of the U.S. team, told Chou he hoped a Chinese team would visit the United States. The premier replied this was up to Graham Steenhoven, president of the U.S. Table Tennis Assn. Steenhoven said later the Chinese had been invited.

Chou said that for Britain in particular the reciprocal table tennis matches "may be the beginning of a long cultural exchange between the young people of China and England."

Turning to the Americans, the premier said, "In the past exchanges between the peoples of China and the United States have been very numerous. They have been cut off for a long time. Now, with your acceptance of our invitation, you have opened a new page in the relations of the Chinese and the American people. I am confident that this beginning again of our friendship will certainly meet with the majority support of our two peoples."

Chou said many "American friends" came to China in the past. "You have made a start here, and I believe in the future more American friends will come to China," he said, adding that Americans and Chinese will "in the near future be able to have many contacts. I believe it will not be slow in coming."

The United States recently relaxed restrictions on Americans' travel to China, and a few hours after Chou's news conference the White House announced a loosening of trade inhibitions.

Glenn Cowan, 19, Santa Monica, Calif., one of the 15 members of the U.S. table tennis delegation, asked Chou what he thought of the American hippie movement.

"I'm not very clear about it," the Mandarin turned revolutionary replied. "In the second place what I have seen is only very superficial. But perhaps the youth of the world today are dissatisfied with their present situation and want to seek the truth."

The young "should always try to find something in common with the great majority," the premier said. "In this way the great majority of mankind can make progress to advance and achieve happiness."

Pollution cures sought

that the administration is committed to finding environmental solutions that will be equitable and effective.

"The President feels very strongly that we must preserve our environment — so strongly that in his State of the Union message in January of this year he identified restoration of the quality of our environment as one of six of the great national goals for 1971," Agnew said.

The vice president outlined present administration programs before moving to future actions. Recent programs have involved new legislation, utilization of existing laws and re-organization of agencies.

The President has proposed legislation in 37 areas, Agnew said, although Congress has not acted on all of them. Congress, however, has appropriated $1 billion this year for construction of waste treatment plants, he said.

President Nixon is using existing power under the Refuse Act of 1899, he added, to order a nationwide permit program, with the Justice Dept. prosecuting violators.

The Council on Environmental Quality and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) are helping the President to monitor and control pollution, Agnew said. The council developed this year's legislative program and ensures that all federal programs are evaluated for possible environmental impact.

Under EPA, he said, the President has consolidated several pollution enforcement authorities that were previously ill-coordinated among several federal agencies.

Agnew said that future administration actions that should merit special attention include financial "disincentives," proposed laws and strengthened laws.

The disincentives — in the form of taxes — would be aimed at exhaust emissions of sulfur oxides from coal-burning industries and leaded gasoline emissions.

"These taxes," the vice president said, "are expected to reduce the consumption of such fuels without actually prohibiting them. The money raised by the sulfur oxide tax would be used for government programs to enhance the quality of our environment."

The administration hopes to strengthen existing programs for pesticide control and improved water quality, Agnew said. To assist the water program, the President has asked Congress for $6 billion as the federal share of a three-year $12 billion municipal waste treatment program, he added.

Agnew said the administration also has asked for new regulation on the sale and use of pesticides with streamlined procedures for canceling or suspending their use.

The cost of all these programs will be very high, Agnew said, but they must be borne by both the government and the private sector.

"Most important," he said, "is that although the costs of controlling pollution may seem high, they are as nothing compared to the tremendous cost of not controlling pollution."

Because all the costs ultimately will fall to the individual, Agnew predicted a shift in consumer demand leading to increased expenditures for mass public transportation.

Individual citizens as well as industries will be asked to alter their behavior to accommodate our new concern for the environment," Agnew said.

The first class of the Thursday evening expectant parent classes will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. today in Everett High School, Lansing. Chinese-American relations leap forward PEKING (AP) — Suddenly Chinese-American relations have taken a great leap forward. The question now is: can the momentum be maintained?

Premier Chou En-lai set the tone of the new look when he told 15 U.S. table tennis players and officials Wednesday that "a new page" in links between the two nations has been opened and that Americans soon may be streaming to the mainland.

Until Chou's meeting with the team in the great Hall of the People, no one was quite sure how to measure the Chinese thaw. The warmth with which Chou greeted the Americans suggested that China's offer of friendship at the human level is no passing fancy. The door has been opened more than a crack.

It would be underestimating a pragmatic, hard-headed group of leaders, however, to suppose that their campaign of smiles is based on a new-found affection for America. Possibly the affection for individual Americans always has been there, but it has not been judged useful or politic for nearly two decades to restore people-to-people contacts. In doing so now the Chinese recognize that the barriers have been up too long. But they apparently also count on some positive American responses at the government level.

What these are has not been spelled out, but that is likely to be apparent soon.

A first guess is that Peking hopes to see a change in U.S. opposition to this country's entry into the United Nations when that issue comes to a vote this fall. There also have been signs that Peking might be anticipating some more significant changes in the long-sustained American restrictions on Chinese trade — restrictions underlined in the Korean War 18 years ago. Word of the Nixon administration's new moves toward relaxation of the rules reached Peking in the middle of the night, and no reaction is yet evident.

In some way or another most people in the West believe that there can be no peace in Asia until the China question is resolved. In the past any small Chinese concessions were acclaimed. Now they seem to be pouring out.

The ping-pong players chosen to be the catalysts for this transmutation of the base metal of hostility toward the purer alloy of good will were charmed by Chou's versatile performance at Wednesday's reception. Yet the Americans, being of the ordinary apple-pie type with a couple of erudite exceptions, were bewildered by the fact that all around them they have seen slogans which picture U.S. "imperialists" in less than flattering terms.

They couldn't reconcile this with all the sweetness and light. The slogans represent the threat the Chinese say they have felt for years from the American military presence in Asia. The situation hasn't changed. Although Chou with superpoliteness refrained from an unkind word during his encounter with the Americans, he did not say anything laudatory about the Nixon administration. So the slogans will remain where they are.

MSU team plans police libraries

A three-man team of MSU criminal justice experts are laying the groundwork for 14 regional police libraries in Michigan.

William G. Horn of Riverdale, Ill., and Frank S. Horvath of East Lansing, master's degree candidates in the School of Criminal Justice, have been traveling through Michigan studying possible sites for the libraries.

Lawrence J. Baril, asst. professor of criminal justice, is directing the project.

Baril said each library is expected to have about 300 volumes on subjects such as psychology, sociology, police management and criminal investigation.

"We want (the policeman) to improve himself in other fields than just the one he's in. We want him to know something of the sociological and psychological impact of what he is doing," Baril said.

Baril also said the two graduate students have primarily been interested in placing these books in community college libraries with already existing law enforcement programs. Fourteen sites have tentatively been selected but more may be added later.

By placing the libraries in community colleges, policemen that are attending classes as well as professionals will have access to the books.

The project is being financed by a $9,100 grant from the Michigan Commission on Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice. Baril said they are also working closely with the Michigan Training Council.

'KKK' rally

said. "Nevertheless, such a misguided 'joke' is in extreme bad taste and served only to expose the lamentable judgment of the perpetrators."

The rally and cross-burning apparently were an attempt to ridicule or embarrass James P. Hill, Pickford junior and a candidate for Akers-Fee district representative to ASMSU.

Hill appeared to have no connection with the incident. He could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

It hadn't been much of a rally. The dozen sheeted students and their hangers-on, white and long-haired, grinned self-consciously as they mixed cries of "Right on!" and "Seig Heil!"

A late-comer wandered by, mumbled a question to two girls. Giggling, jumping up and down excitedly so that their sheets flapped slightly in the night, they told him: "We're having a KKK rally!"

All the while, a wooden cross wrapped with cloth burned in the center of the group.

"Hey, everybody, let's have a prayer, every Klan rally has to have a prayer," called the (unsheeted) apparent leader of the rally. And he commenced to pray:

"Oh White Heavenly Father, look down with favor upon our racist University."

Another time: "Who do we want, who do we want? Hill, Hill, Jim Hill!"

So it was a farce, a prank. "If we shout real loud, maybe our man himself will come out. We can't expect too much — this man has a lot of rallies to go to tonight — but we can try." This from the "leader."

"Seig Heil!" roared the group. "Seig Heil, Seig Heil, Seig Heil, Seig Heil, Jim Hill, Hill, Hill, Hill!"

The cross tottered and fell. The group moaned.

All of this took place between 9 and 9:10 p.m. Then the police, who had been called at 9:08 p.m. arrived and people ran. Discarded sheets fell onto the muddy ground.

Some students were taken inside the patrol cars for questioning. The rally "leader" approached one car. A black student intercepted him and asked him what was happening.

"Oh," he said, "there's this guy we don't like and so we decided to hold a rally for him."

A crowd was beginning to gather.

"... And they started one hell of a fire," a policeman was telling a newly arrived colleague.

"I don't care about the fire, man," a black bystander interjected. He did not elaborate on what he did care about, and no one asked him to.

Police tried to put out the burning cross with a portable fire extinguisher, but the Fire Dept. had to be called in to finish the job.

The crowd out in the chill night air had grown to nearly 500, according to later police estimates. Several hundred more watched from their dorm windows.

"You might as well leave, folks," a policeman told them.

But the crowd stayed even after the police had left, stayed to chant "Hill, Hill, Hill!" and laughed a little.

Boy to girl: "Oh, yes, we're really committed to Hill."

Girl to boy: "There are some people here who should be committed, all right."

The crowd, losing interest, began to drift away.

Two male students walking away stopped to pick up the discarded sheets. "... Look great on the wall."

At 9:30 p.m., a bugle sounded "Taps." The sparks from the burning cross died slowly in the mud.

Eileen Earhart, asst. professor of the Institute of Family and Child Services, will be interviewed on WKAR AM at 5:30 p.m. Saturday concerning the Head Start program.

The program will give an overview and an analysis of the program as well as its history, effectiveness, funding and the future.
