Mall camping ban lifted; 108 arrested on Court steps

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal court order banning antiwar veterans from camping on the Mall was dissolved Thursday evening after the Justice Department made no attempt to enforce it.

The development came after 108 Vietnam veterans were arrested while demonstrating on the steps of the Supreme Court.

The order, banning camping or sleeping on the Mall, was rescinded by U.S. Dist. Court Judge George L. Hart Jr., who had issued it earlier in the week. The order had been upheld Wednesday by the Supreme Court.

Ken Bass, a lawyer for Vietnam Veterans Against the War, said Hart had told Justice Department officials he saw no reason to continue the order without an attempt at enforcement.

It was then that Justice lawyers asked Hart to dissolve the injunction.

The camp itself a few hundred yards from the Capitol thrived with visiting congressmen, speeches, a military-type chow line, tents, some vets toting toy M16s, seemingly well rested after sleeping where the court said they couldn't.

The veterans at the court were protesting the Supreme Court action upholding the injunction against their sleeping, pitching a tent or building a fire on the Mall, where they have been staying all week as a preliminary to Saturday's major antiwar protest.

The veterans arrived at the court singing and chanting "bring our boys home, now," and "all we are saying is give peace a chance."

One young man climbed a tall statue representing Justice, smashing a plastic rifle against the figure's head. There were some obscenities, but the tone was generally passive.

Twice Capt. V. W. Coble announced to the protestors they were violating federal law.

When the police moved in many of the veterans walked to the police vans in prisoner style, hands clasped over their heads.

Bill Wiman, 23, Boston, had his friends take his wheel chair to the door of a police van, but the police carefully went around him, refusing to arrest him. Then he left his chair to sit on the steps, still no arrest. He lost both legs to a land mine last August in Vietnam.

At city jails the 108 (two were women) were charged with disorderly conduct, rather than the more serious charge cited at the scene: obstructing and impeding justice, which carries a possible maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Individual bonds of $10 were set and the free veterans — their total strength is around 1,000 — set out to raise the money by panhandling and selling blood to blood banks at $25 a pint.

The demonstration delayed regular tourist stops at the Supreme Court. One group included 15 visiting Russians.

In another sortie, a dozen veterans, an ex-Army and Navy information officers and enlisted, led by Ron Rottmann, Corrales, N.M., found they could not have a press conference at the National Press Club.

Rottman, a former information lieutenant with the U.S. 25th Infantry Division at Cu Chi, was there to say there is military censorship of military gathered news in Vietnam.

Marchers encouraged

Students should "bring that fire back home" from the Washington demonstration and marches and be "subversive to destroy the system that has destroyed humanity," Dhirendra Sharma, visiting associate professor of philosophy, urged more than 150 students Wednesday night.

Sharma said students and other groups working for social change should prepare to continue their efforts for many more years because "no movement ever succeeds or gets the mass together in one moment. Simply marching is not enough."

"It is only a beginning. You must carry that fire back home to parents and boyfriends and girlfriends and professors," he said.

Sharma said students should remain aware of their reasons for marching.

The Student Mobilization Committee (SMC) announced Thursday that all bus tickets to Saturday's march in Washington, D.C., have been sold. Those still wishing bus tickets may pay $25.25 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. today in 320 Student Services Bldg. If 39 people sign up, another bus will be ordered. Buses will leave the Union at 7 tonight. For information, call the SMC office, 353-9799.

the agony and suffering of the people of Vietnam," he said.

Not only the people of Vietnam but the oppressed peoples of the world will know "that the beautiful people of America have marched for us," he said.

Sharma called for students to "subvert all classes" Thursday and today by politely and courteously asking professors and fellow students if they are going to march and why or why not.

Al Harshey, East Lansing senior and member of the steering committee of the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC),

"When you're marching, keep in mind said the march on Saturday has the support of "virtually the entire antiwar movement in the United States."

Harshey said the demonstration, intended to be a mass legal demonstration "so far looks like it's going to be successful."

Duvalier dies in Haiti; son named heir

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The era of Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier ended in Haiti on Thursday and a new one was launched by his teenage son.

Duvalier 64, who mixed voodooism and intrigue to make him dictator of Haiti nearly 14 years ago, died Wednesday night. A palace announcement said he had been ill for three months.

The official radio announced that his designated successor, his chubby son Jean Claude, 19, had assumed the presidency and named a Cabinet with only two holdovers. Since he is considered a playboy, unschooled in politics, the implication was that there is a strong

Prof points out pattern of trustee intrusions

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

The rejection of two recommendations from the board of trustees by the Academic Council is reflective of a negative faculty reaction to recent trustee interventions in the operation of the University, Frederick Williams, professor of history, said Thursday.

"The faculty seem to detect a pattern of trustee intrusion into the internal affairs of the University to such a degree that it is an encroachment upon the prerogatives of the president and the faculty," Williams said.

One of the rejected amendments would have included in the bylaws a statement that in case of a dispute concerning the application of Provision 2.5.8, "final judgment shall rest with the board of trustees."

Section 2.5.8 prohibits any act which "diminishes, suspends or compromises the distinctively professional rights or duties of the faculty."

A second rejected amendment would have required that all amendments "affecting the substance of academic governance" be referred to the trustees for approval.

Williams said that, in rejecting the trustee recommendations, "the faculty is saying very firmly and yet very politely that we have a special competence as faculty, that we have rights as faculty, and

Council teaches trustees political lesson

The Academic Council Tuesday reconfirmed what students have been telling trustees all along: that the faculty has no intention of establishing a truly academic government for MSU. When the Academic Council insisted last term that the faculty in a veto on student participation in academic governance, students complained that a conditional vote was no vote at all. Students took their grievance to trustees, who rejected them in a 4-4 deadlock. In fact, the entire Taylor Report on student participation was sent back to the Academic Council by trustees — after the trustees had recommended changes on priority voting, plus a few changes that would help clip faculty's democratic wings.

To no one's surprise, the faculty-dominated Academic Council Tuesday rejected trustee proposals suggesting trustees have final say in academic matters. Although the council denies it, the rejection of the two proposals borders rejecting trustees' constitutional right to govern the University.

By now the trustees must realize that students have been right all along: the Academic Council is a misnomer. It is a faculty lobby that, having denied students full academic participation, now has slapped down trustees by rejecting two reasonable trustee recommendations.

As a group, trustees are notoriously backward. Between the hidebound conservatism of the two Republican trustees and the harebrained politicking of three Democrats, the board stumbles through meetings weighing everything, comprehending nothing.

But even the board must now realize that students are right; the Academic Council is an arrogant gaggle of faculty members who aren't about to dilute their influence with either students or trustees.

Last term, students suggested a student-trustee alliance to insure that academic government become truly academic — not faculty oriented. The trustees rejected students by sustaining the faculty veto over the proposed student vote in Academic Council. The trustees tried to have their academic cake and eat it, too:

they rejected student complaints but tried to reaffirm their own with the two recommendations rejected Tuesday in the Academic Council. The Academic Council has thumbed its collective nose at the trustees.

In a way, the trustees deserve faculty rebuke. By simultaneously rejecting student grievances and featuring their own academic nest, trustees bit off a little more than they could chew.

Both trustees and students are now on the receiving end of faculty condensation. Students realized faculty arrogance long ago. Trustees have been a little slow to learn, but students now welcome them to the ranks of faculty-shafted academia.

"The legislature has a unique method of taking our minimum operating cost and giving us an appropriation a cut below that to force us to raise fees. Somehow, somehow, we've got to figure out how to finance graduate education. I hope it will not be through fees."

China protests violations

A Peking broadcast today claimed a U.S. military plane intruded into China's air space over the Paracel Islands in Kwangtung Province on five occasions Thursday.

The New China News Agency, in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, said "a spokesman of the Chinese Foreign Ministry has been authorized, in relation to the military provocation by the U.S. military plane, to issue the 491st serious warning."

Narcotics, weapons seized

Nearly 150 officers swept through a three-county area of southern Illinois Thursday, seizing drugs and large caches of explosives and weapons. An investigator said they had information that some arms were headed for the racially troubled town of Cairo, Ill.

Forty-one persons, including a number of students at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, were arrested in the early morning raids. Another 15 to 20 persons named in warrants were being sought.

The 144 men who carried out the raids were federal and state agents, sheriff's deputies and municipal police.

Purchasing power rises

The average weekly wage of some 48 million rank-and-file workers spurred up $1.37 to $123.98 in March and outstripped last month's rise in living costs, the government said Thursday.

After deduction of federal income and Social Security taxes, and allowance for the March rise of three-tenths of one per cent in living costs, the average paycheck was worth 59 cents a week more in purchasing power, it said.

In other developments, $5.5-billion public works and economic development program won House approval after failure of a Republican drive to kill an administration-opposed construction provision.

It would authorize $2 billion to help depressed areas build public works projects, extend for four years at a cost of $1.54 billion the Appalachia and other regional development programs and provide $1.95 billion to help localities upgrade their economies through loans and other construction aids.

Women prefer to work

Would most women workers rather quit their jobs and stay home if they didn't need the money — No, concludes a Labor Dept. study.

"The majority of employed women would continue their jobs even if they had enough money to live comfortably without working," the report said.

It also compared the job attitudes of white and black women and found some similarities, and some differences. For instance, "Black women are more favorably inclined toward the idea of mothers working," it said.

Desegregation bill stands

The Senate rejected Thursday a proposal by Sen. Sam Ervin, D-N.C., to switch a $1.5-billion school desegregation bill into a general revenue-sharing plan.

The vote on the amendment was 60-22.

Under Ervin's amendment, the money would have been distributed among the nation's school districts on the basis of enrollment to use as they saw fit.

The bill, however, makes the funds available only for the specific purpose of helping solve desegregation problems. Districts would have to apply for it and agree to follow strict guidelines on spending it.

Auto laws proposed

Sen. Phillip A. Hart, D-Mich., said Thursday he will introduce a bill soon making it a federal offense to turn back an automobile odometer.

"Today one million cars yearly are sold with odometers turned back to show mileage much lower than what the car has experienced. Obviously, consumers are being deceived — and are paying more for these cars than they would if they knew the true mileage," Hart said in a speech to a conference on motor vehicle technology.

The Michigan lawmaker also said he will write legislation requiring inspection of cars for pollution. He said the bill would require that standards be developed to determine how much various aged cars could pollute and still be acceptable.

Trial witness linked to FBI

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The key government witness in the alleged priest-led plot to kidnap President Nixon's national security adviser appears to be an ex-convict who played a double agent role.

Boyd Frederick Douglas Jr. has disappeared but those who knew him as an antiwar student on the Bucknell University campus here are convinced that he was an FBI informer.

They think Douglas, a smooth-talking 30-year-old mystery man who divided his time between the campus and the federal penitentiary, provided testimony that led to the indictment of the Rev. Philip Berrigan and five others.

Berrigan, jailed for destroying draft records in Maryland, met Douglas in Lewisburg Penitentiary where both were serving federal sentences. Douglas was going outside the wall during the day to take courses at nearby Bucknell.

Douglas dropped from sight Jan. 5, 20 days after he won parole. On that day, he testified before a secret grand jury in Harrisburg about the kidnap-bomb conspiracy.

The last word many of his friends here had from him came on that January day.

It is alleged that the kidnap-bomb conspiracy involved a plot to hold presidential assistant Henry Kissinger captive until American involvement in Vietnam ended. The indictments, returned Jan. 12, also charge that the defendants plotted to blow up heating tunnels of federal buildings in Washington.

No trial date has been set. The grand jury, continuing its investigation, sent out a new wave of subpoenas last week. The defendants have pleaded innocent and attacked the charges as "a frameup."

The story begins with Douglas commuting daily to classes under a study-release program for prisoners. He became part of the peace movement on campus and later told his friends of a close friendship in prison with Berrigan.

Dr. Steven Becker, a Bucknell physics professor, says, "I suspected Douglas was a fed, and a lot of people did. But nobody made any investigation, and he gradually got more and more into things. He just sort of slipped in."

I am convinced Boyd was caught carrying messages for Berrigan and was then victimized by the FBI," Dr. Gene Chenoweth, head of Bucknell's political science dept. and a close friend, "in a way the people involved in the movement utilized him, as the FBI also utilized him."

It has disclosed only that he defrauded an Army post in San Antonio, Texas, of $19.75 while impersonating an Army captain in 1963, wrote bad checks totalling $19,215 in Maryland and Wisconsin in 1966 and assaulted an FBI agent who had come to arrest him. These charges resulted in two federal convictions and a total sentence of eight years, most of which he served.

Douglas was paroled last Dec. 16, attended a campus party in his honor, then went to visit relatives outside Philadelphia for the holidays. His friends on campus never saw him there again.

The faculty recently adopted a resolution demanding a probe into whether the government had used an undercover agent on the campus.

Zoia Horn, a 52-year-old librarian who befriended Douglas and later was summoned as a grand jury witness in the conspiracy case, said "One of the most difficult results of this situation is that I have to work very hard not to be suspicious of everyone and everything."

Douglas led a cozy life on campus, and no convict could wish for much better, except outright freedom.

• He had a job in the library working seven hours a week for

$1.60 an hour. But he always had lots of cash, sometimes flashing $100 bills. In 1968, Douglas received $10,688 from the government as compensation for a 1964 prison medical experiment that left his arms and legs scarred. Of the settlement, $4,312 went to his lawyers.

• He told conflicting stories about why he was in prison. • He moved swiftly into campus antiwar circles, long before Berrigan was brought to the penitentiary in mid-April.

"I think his involvement in the movement was a genuine attitude at the beginning," Chenoweth says. "One day he came in and said to me, 'Guess who I talked to on the telephone today? Dan Berrigan.' He was a kid in his involvement with these giants in the movement."

I asked Boyd if he was carrying stuff in and out of prison," Chenoweth recalls, "and he said, 'no,' and that he had not and that he would not. Sure, he would tell me, he was seeing people outside, friends of the Berrigans. But those people knew that he was coming out of the prison, in and out every day."

Special AUTC reviewers praised by students, officials

By JOHN BORGER
State News Staff Writer

President Wharton's creation of a special review committee to investigate the policies and procedures of the All-University Traffic Committee (AUTC) drew praise Thursday from two students who had criticized AUTC and from one of the officials criticized.

"The traffic committee on its own could probably never have done anything this fast," Robert W. Bissel, University motor vehicle supervisor, said. "What started as criticism of the committee actually turned out all right."

The review committee is partially a result of criticism of AUTC by Harold Buckner, ASMSU chairman, and Diane Rathnow, residence halls representative to AUTC.

The review committee is composed of students, trustees, administrators and faculty. All of the ex-officio members of AUTC, including Bissel, have been named as "resource persons" to the review committee.

"This committee can do a lot of good," Bissel said. "People in authority, the people who control the purse strings, will become aware of the problems with parking on campus."

"A lot of the members (of the review committee) have no idea what the traffic problems are, and they'll have to learn from other people, but I think the committee will do a lot of good," Bissel said.

Bissel said he had "no adverse comments at all" about the committee's formation.

Buckner and Miss Rathnow echoed Bissel's "good idea" opinion.

"If it follows the things I and others have asked for, it will be an extremely good idea," Buckner said.

He expressed some disappointment that the office members of AUTC would be involved with the review committee.

"I had hoped that the committee would be important in that no one on the committee would be a part of AUTC," he said. "I'm sure this will affect the committee, but I'm not sure how as yet. They should be used as resource persons but shouldn't be the only resource used."

"AUTC really needs some restructuring," Miss Rathnow said. "I hope outside work can clean it up and make it effective."

"A quick inside shot is going to do the job, though," she said. "This investigation is going to take work."

Course to investigate juvenile crime bases

Michigan's juvenile officers will investigate the "why" behind juvenile crime in a course May 3-7 at Kellogg Center.

State Police, judges and MSU faculty and graduate students will instruct sessions ranging from the probate court philosophy and procedure to drug use in schools.

Other areas will include the social deviant, interagency conflict, minority groups, abuse and neglect, child molestation, police liaison programs, use of community agencies and psychological and social aspects involving the juvenile.

"This is not a basic course," coordinator Lawrence J. Baril, asst. professor of criminal justice, said. "It's more of an orientation to present problems surrounding the actions of juveniles."

Baril said the 30 officers expected to attend the course will be given more of the philosophy behind juvenile crime, rather than technical knowledge.

The police juvenile officers course is cosponsored by the School of Criminal Justice and Continuing Education Service in cooperation with the Michigan Assn. of Chiefs of Police and Michigan Sheriffs Assn.

RESIDENTIAL HOPEFULS

Dems call for withdrawal date

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six potential Democratic candidates criticized Indochina policy Thursday night in a broadcast response to President Nixon.

Southwest's drought considered 'disaster'

ALLAS, Texas. (AP) — A drought that U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin terms "a major agricultural disaster" parts of the Southwest gave no indication Thursday of ending.

the dry weather has stretched into western Kansas, dried farm lands in Missouri and was causing concern among foresters in scattered thunderstorms in the past two weeks have eased a local situation in San Angelo, Tex., but the hit-and-miss to save most winter wheat or to prevent a heavy sell-off of the lacking drinking water and grazing.

concluded Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine. "The American people know it is wrong. And we want to end it."

Except for Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., the speakers urged Nixon to set a specific date for ending U.S. involvement in Vietnam as the best way to spur the deadlocked Paris peace talks and assure release of U.S. prisoners held by North Vietnam.

"While I do not support the immediate announcement of a deadline," Jackson said, "I understand how many Americans have come to focus on that proposal because of a lack of confidence in past assurances."

He urged the Nixon administration to "provide the American people with a continuous public accounting" of the war that reports failures as well as successes.

Besides Muskie and Jackson the taped program featured Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, George S. McGovern of South Dakota, Birch E. Bayh of Indiana, and Harold E. Hughes of Iowa. Lawrence F. O'Brien chairman of the Democratic National Committee, opened and closed the program, which was presented in prime time.

While noting "there is no single formal Democratic Party position on all aspects of the Vietnam war," O'Brien said "there is growing belief among Democrats . . . that our government should announce a date for the total withdrawal of all American troops from Indochina."

"We further believe that a substantial majority of the American people share this view out of a deeply held conviction that this war must end," he added.

If such a step fails to produce successful negotiations O'Brien said "under no conditions would our prisoners be abandoned."

House leader denounces FBI for 'thought control'

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Majority Leader Hale Boggs of Louisiana, calling again for the resignation of FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, said Thursday the FBI is moving toward thought control of the American people.

In a speech to the House following up his earlier request for Hoover's resignation, Boggs said an apathetic Congress has permitted the FBI to expand its spying practices unchecked.

"Over the postwar years," he said, "we have granted to the elite and secret police within our system vast new powers over the lives and liberties of the people."

Boggs' speech, which was awaited as his answer to demands of Hoover's defenders that he offer proof of his charges that the FBI tapped the phones of Congressmen, went beyond his earlier remarks in its denunciation of Hoover and the FBI.

He said telephone company investigators had found evidence that the phone in his home had been tapped, and he repeated other alleged instances of FBI surveillance that have come to light in recent days.

But the main thrust of his speech was an assertion that the liberties of Americans have been undermined by the secret activities of the FBI.

Att. Gen. John N. Mitchell, in a reply to Boggs' original charges, said: "Let me repeat categorically: the FBI has not tapped the telephone of any member of the House or Senate, now or in the past."

Over the years, Boggs said, Congress has been surrendering its duty of oversight over bureaus, agencies and organizations in the federal government "which are most sensitively involved with the lives and liberties of the people."

"We have authorized and permitted the bureaus and agencies to assume powers that belong to Congress," he added.

"We have established the rule of the dossier."

"We have conferred respectability upon the informer.

"We have sanctioned the use of bribes and payments to citizen to spy upon citizen."

"We have consented to the accused being denied the right to confront his accuser."

Off-campus permission reported as 'virtually nil'

By RANDY GARTON
State News Staff Writer

The chances of students seeking special permission to live off-campus next year are "virtually nil," the director of off-campus housing said Wednesday.

"I don't want students to get their hopes up," Dolores Bender said. "In the three weeks we have been accepting applications, 250 students have applied and 60 have had their applications reviewed by the special permission committee. Only five have been granted permission to live off-campus."

Under the revised housing regulations recently passed by the board of trustees, for students to get special permission to move off-campus they must present medical or financial evidence that they cannot live in supervised living quarters. Students citing "extraordinary circumstances" will also receive consideration.

The few students who have been granted permission to live off-campus presented evidence of a medical disability, Mrs. Bender said.

"These students had extremely severe medical problems," she said. "Only those students whose problems cannot be handled by any of the supervised living units on campus will be granted special permission."

Mrs. Bender said it was very unlikely that any students would receive special permission for financial reasons.

"Exemptions may be granted to those students who, in the opinion of the financial aids office, are qualified for financial aid, but cannot get enough money to cover living in University housing," she said.

No student claiming "extraordinary circumstances" has yet been granted special permission, Mrs. Bender said.

Last year almost every student applying for special permission had his request granted. Permission was mostly denied to students whose parents had refused to sign the release, Mrs. Bender said.

But starting this year, she explained, special permission to move off-campus will be almost impossible to obtain.

"It's going to be at least as hard to get special permission as it is to break a housing contract," she said. "The special permission committee is trying to use the same criteria."

Mrs. Bender said the Off-Campus Housing Office would be taking applications until September.

March for Peace:

'One small step for a man,
one giant leap for mankind'

No More War

Week's peace actions set

By DENISE McCOURT
State News Staff Writer

The Spring Offensive in Washington Saturday through May 5 will be paralleled in Lansing by the Lansing Area Peace Action.

Saturday's march in Washington, sponsored by all peace groups in the Peoples' Coalition for Peace and Justice, is aimed at committing nonviolent civil disobedience in Washington to bring the violence in Vietnam to a halt.

The People's Lobby in Washington from Monday through Friday will be there to talk with all employees of the federal government, urging them to sign the People's Peace Treaty and to participate in a national moratorium on business as usual May 5. Each day a People's Lobby will assemble at a different government agency.

The coalition plans nonviolent training at various area churches around Washington on Sunday and also at Algonquin Peace Park, formally known as Rock Creek Park.

The coalition is lobbying in Congress Monday, calling for an end to the war this year, the release of political prisoners now and a guaranteed income of $6,500 for a family of four.

Lobbyists will be going into the National Selective Service Headquarters Tuesday to discuss the criminal nature of the draft system in Vietnam.

Wednesday members of the coalition will be lobbying at the Internal Revenue Office and Thursday at the Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare. The United States spends $5,500 every three seconds on the war and only $1,600 a year for a family of four on welfare, according to coalition spokesmen.

The coalition will be joined by the Southern Christian Leadership Mule Train and welfare mothers.

Every door marked "no entry" will be opened at the U.S. Justice Dept. Friday so the people can learn "what is really happening," the coalition promises.

The first days of May will continue the nonviolent struggle for peace and social justice, culminating in the May 5 national moratorium and "Stop Business as Usual" day in commemoration of the killings at Kent State, Jackson State and Augusta last year.

Local churches in Lansing are being asked to discuss the Peoples' Peace Treaty with their congregations and members of the Lansing Area Peace Council plan "guerrilla theater" skits outside churches Sunday morning, protesting the war.

Guerrilla theater is a small skit, about three minutes long, performed on the sidewalk, street or hallway to illustrate a political message.

The council needs people to lobby at the Capitol

Monday, where State Rep. Jackie Vaughn III, D-Detroit, will present the Peoples' Peace Treaty to the legislature.

The council is urging people to call the Michigan Selective Service on Tuesday to ask how many boys have been killed in Vietnam and for women to register with their local draft boards.

People will be filing 1040 forms, amended tax forms claiming Indochinese casualties as exemptions and tax forms for the Michigan dead Wednesday. Local officials, churches and businesses are being used to stop payment of the 10 per cent federal excise tax on phone bills that goes to defense.

The Student Mobilization Committee to End the War (SMC) is supporting a massive National Student Moratorium on May 5 to commemorate the student deaths in incidents at Kent State and Jackson State Universities last year.

The National Student Assn. and the Society of American Student Governments are also supporting the moratorium. David Katz, office coordinator for SMC in Detroit, said.

Student government representatives from Michigan colleges and high schools were invited to a news conference Wednesday at Wayne State University to discuss the possibility of organizing strikes, rallies, memorial meetings and demonstrations for May 5.

Katz said representatives were present from Central Michigan University, the University of Detroit, Wayne State University (WSU) and various other colleges and high schools.

Mike McGraw, Fullerton, Calif. sophomore, said a representative from the MSU Student Mobilization Committee did not attend the meeting because of work on Saturday's antiwar demonstration in Washington.

McGraw said that after Saturday's march in Washington, SMC will be working on the May 5 moratorium. He said he would like to see memorial meetings and demonstrations on campus that day.

He said SMC plans to ask businesses in the area to close for the day to commemorate the student deaths.

Katz said he couldn't predict the scope of the moratorium, but that some participation was expected from every major university in the country.

Moratorium plans at WSU, he said, include petitioning the administration for a monument in commemoration of the deaths and organizing a convocation with the help of WSU President William Keast. In addition, SMC hopes to close the university for the day and use its facilities for moratorium activities.

Don't let go!

If this student in front of Bessey Hall had just a few more balloons, he might get carried away.

Hitchhiker raped by motorist

A 20-year-old MSU coed told police she was raped Wednesday night in a remote area of campus after she was hitchhiking earlier in the day and accepted a ride with a man driving alone.

The coed reportedly suffered no serious injuries in the incident, and police said she was probably treated and released from Olin Health Center.

No arrests have yet been made by MSU police, who said they are investigating a description of the assailant given by the coed.

After the coed accepted a ride with the man, she voluntarily entered the vehicle, police said, the man drove to a "remote area on campus" and raped the girl.

Police said they were not certain what treatment, if any, the coed received at Olin Health Center. The name of the coed was not released.

Police said the incident should act as a deterrent to MSU coeds who accept rides with strangers.

IN SALVAGE YARD

MSU refuse finds home

By MICHAEL CASSIDY

It's not Alice's Restaurant — but you can get almost anything you want at the MSU salvage yard.

Frederick W. Kletke, supervisor of the yard, said a customer will eventually find whatever he is looking for if he is patient enough and makes frequent visits to the yard located on Harrison Road.

Salvaged items at the yard range from a black and white teddy bear to a 16-inch naval artillery shell.

Kletke said he collects anything the University can't use. Discarded items such as beds, mattresses, chairs, hot plates, band uniforms and dressers show up at the yard.

Other items such as galvanized pipe, doors, windows, light fixtures, electric motors, venetian blinds, washing machines, rabbit cages and a Veterinary Clinic operating table all find a place at the salvage yard.

"I don't know what we're going to get until I receive a request to pick up materials from a dormitory or University department," Kletke said.

He said chairs, desks and items with interchangeable parts are repaired and stored if he thinks another University department might be able to use them.

"In the 25 years that I've been supervisor at the salvage yard, we've salvaged everything from egg hatches to a three-ton safe," Kletke said. At one time the salvage yard received 400 refrigerators and sold them in one week.

Kletke said some of his best customers are church and recreation camps and students trying to furnish apartments.

He said art students make frequent visits to the scrap piles in the yard in search of sculpture materials.

Personal items, including suitcases, rings, watches, skis and anything else a student might lose, eventually find their way to the yard, he said.

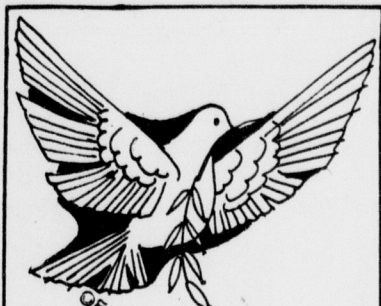

These items from the residence halls are turned over to campus police and held for the months before they are sent to the salvage yard.

About 800 bikes are auctioned off at the yard every year. The auctions take place during the spring and summer terms.

"Students should lock their bikes," Kletke said. "A lot of bikes wouldn't end up as salvage yard auctions if students would check with the campus police as soon as they find the missing."

"Anyone that can prove ownership of a bike at the yard every year, we can have it back," he said.

The salvage yard is located on Harrison Road across from the entrance to the South Campus Drive. The yard is open to the public Monday through Friday.

Abrams adds 'New World' to star gazing

By EDWARD HUTCHISON
City Editor

If you haven't been to Abrams Planetarium since your Natural Science 191 class, you'll be pleased to know that a new day has indeed dawned. Programs no longer consist only of stars twinkling on the dome. This fact was evident as early as last November when planetarium personnel produced its "ARC '70" show. The change is especially evident now with "The New World," a science fiction program with an underlying ecological theme. The basic story line: before a planet's resources have been depleted, some of its more intelligent beings launch a spacecraft stocked with many of their own kind, but in suspended animation. They are to restock and inhabit other planets in the system.

In the approximately 60 minutes the show runs, there is enough to boggle any mind — science fiction, ecological, or the questing truth-oriented varieties.

Although other planetariums in the country are beginning this sort of program, the majority are still concerned with shows of the Big Dipper, variety.

Technician Ken Parr, with John Hare who wrote the program, says "The New World" is an experiment to utilize the full projection capabilities of the sky theater.

The show started with an idea created by planetarium director Von Del Chamberlain last fall term. Parr and Hare took the idea and developed the effects, keenly aware of the planetarium's facilities.

What is remarkable is that Abrams' personnel devised most of the effects — only a few additional pieces of equipment were purchased. The rest of it came through home-made ingenuity combined with existing facilities.

Two men are needed to run the show, or as Parr says, one man as long as he has four hands. Complicated fade-outs, fade-ins and other planetarium nuances require a thorough knowledge of the equipment and its capabilities.

Parr says the show is written with the individual in mind. Each viewer is supposed to conjure up in his own mind what it means to him. A multi-media montage following the main program has brought tears from at least one coed, Parr says.

The show has drawn sitting-room only crowds since it opened March 12. Parr says the planetarium plans to buy more equipment with the profits made from the show. With an admission charge of 75 cents for students, the show is probably the entertainment and learning bargain of the year.

"The New World" ends May 16. Following that, "Stellarphonic Moog" begins a nine-day run on May 21.

"The New World" shows at 8 and 10 p.m. today, 2:30, and 8 and 10 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 and 4 p.m. Sunday. To be sure of getting a seat, stop by the box office at the planetarium at least 30 minutes before the show is scheduled to start.

Huff hopes against rise in fees

By DIANE PETRYK
State News Staff Writer

"Whether there will be a fee increase this year I'm sure I don't know," Trustee Warren Huff, D-Plymouth, told a group of about 40 graduate students in an open house Wednesday night. Speaking on problems that affect graduate students, Huff said MSU has not been successful in selling the legislature on the importance, complexity and cost of the university's graduate programs. The legislature has a unique method of taking our minimum operating cost and giving us an appropriation a cut below that force us to raise fees," he said. "Somehow, somehow, we've got to figure out how to finance graduate education. I don't see it will not be through today MSU is the seventh largest producer of Ph.D.s in the United States and growing all the time, he said. Graduate programs here have increased 100 per cent from 1963 to 1969, but percentage-wise MSU is receiving less money for them.

"In 1958 we started our medical program here, and only in the past year have we received money from the state for it," Huff said. "Next year we will be close to admitting the same number of students to our biomedical programs as the University of Michigan and we will be receiving much less money."

According to Milton E. Muelder, vice president for research development and dean of the School for Advanced Graduate Studies, who also spoke at the gathering, 7,999 graduate students are now enrolled at MSU.

"Through independent study and education, a graduate student must liberate himself from his professor and strike out on his own," Muelder said.

Concerns Associated with MSU since 1955, Muelder said he has never known this institution to have been free of intensive self-criticism or significant growth and development.

"According to national statistics," he said, "in 1968 MSU ranked 12th in the nation for production of all the doctorates awarded up to that time."

Huff attempted to outline the areas of widespread concern for graduate students.

"I'm not always as well-informed as I would like to be," he said, and he asked the students to tell him what their concerns are.

Huff cited funding as one concern. Graduate assistantships may or may not coincide with individual study interests, he said, forcing students to take their second or even third level priorities.

Job worries Job opportunities are becoming increasingly confining to one's academic training, and students are worried about personal finances and the cost of education, he said.

"There was a time," Huff said, "when bright students could make it through by loans, grants and earning, but now it is increasingly difficult."

Huff added, however, that there has not been a generation of college students in the United States that has had such a keen social conscience.

Some other complaints of graduate students, Huff said, are that programs are too course-oriented and that transfer of credits from other institutions is difficult.

Women's burden "Women have an added burden," Huff said, "in that added to their academic problems they face a conflict of their roles."

"Our society is still groping for full personal realization of the woman as a person. Circumstances surrounding the female graduate student at MSU are still discriminatory in regard to opportunities for assistantships, travel and so forth."

During the question and answer period, one student asked Huff why MSU got involved with federal money in the 1950s that created an MSU program in Vietnam.

"I think we were infiltrated. I do not think willfully so," he

PIANO QUARTETS

MSU faculty to perform in free gallery concert

An ensemble of MSU faculty musicians will perform two contrasting piano quartets at 3 p.m. Sunday, in the Kresge Art Gallery.

The gallery concert, open to the public without charge, will feature Mozart's "Quartet in G major" and Faure's "Quartet in minor, Opus 15."

Performing in the ensemble will be pianist David Renner, professor of music; violinist, Walter Verdehr, asst.

professor of music; violist Lyman Bodman, professor of music, and cellist Louis Potter Jr., professor of music. Verdehr, Potter and Bodman are members of MSU's Beaumont String Quartet.

Potter described the Mozart quartet as very powerful. "The aria-like slow movement shows Mozart's operatic style." It is one of the composer's later works.

The Faure quartet, in contrast to the Mozart work, is a youthful work. Nevertheless, Potter says, "it is a masterpiece. It is very romantic and has a sensuous ethereal beauty."

In addition to hearing the concert, visitors to the Kresge Gallery can see the current exhibit of works by eight Michigan artists.

'THX'—brilliant, antiseptic, the best in sci fi since '2001'

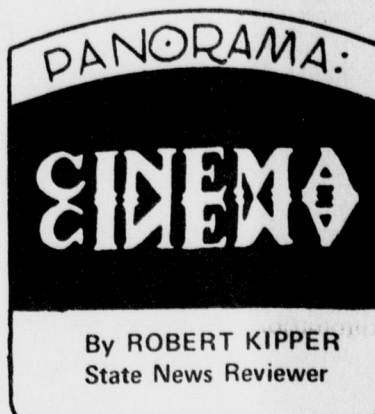

George Lucas made his first movie — a one - minute animated feature — when he was a student at the University of Southern California, using university equipment.

His movie won 30 student festival awards.

A featurette on the filming of "MacKenna's Gold," one on the filming of "The Rain People" and many festival awards later, Lucas began work on "THX 1138," a project he wrote and planned to direct.

Now, at age 25, Lucas can lay personal claims on the finest science fiction film since "2001: A Space Odyssey." "THX 1138" is a film that is almost too pure and uncompromising to be enjoyed in the usual sense but one too fascinating to be missed.

The world he presents is an antiseptic one, populated with unisex humans with clothes as white as the building walls and conformity and informers; penalties fall on those who dare not take enough drugs and those who engage in sex. "We cannot allow elicits," a stern - faced juror bellows, speaking for her society.

In this world of rectangled rooms, long corridors, no sunlight and wall - sized 3-D televisions, Lucas unravels his story. It is a simple story made fascinating by the strange setting and the technical artistry with which it advances.

One man, named THX, discovers he loves his roommate, LUH. They have sex. LUH becomes pregnant. They are discovered and separated by the state.

THX is judged incurable and sent to a reconditioning home. LUH is sent to a reproduction center. Later, THX learns of her fate: death for her crime.

At the reconditioning home, THX grows restless. Confined with other roommates in a room so large that its extremities fade from vision in a blur of white, THX decides to explore. Finding his way to the outside, THX dares to attempt escape from civilization. All he need do is cause more trouble in escaping than the city budget allows for the apprehension of criminals.

For the rest of the film, a mechanical style advances the story. "THX 1138" is antiseptic and brilliant to the eye like its sets and usually hard and unflinching like its mechanized police force.

This style is precisely right. Emotional compromises and tender interludes (beyond the two mentioned) would have softened a film that had to be rigid to be terrifying.

Unlike Stanley Kubrick in "2001," Lucas never overreaches himself to dabble in metaphysics of intentional ambiguities.

"THX 1138" is severely structured and faithful to the structure. The viewer is rivited to his seat but rarely involved or entertained.

Discussion of acting is beside the point. Robert Duvall as THX, Maggie McOmie as LUH and Donald Pleasance as a fellow inmate of the reconditioning home, perform their assignments in wind-up fashion. In other words, the acting is as impersonal and programmed as all other elements involved.

"THX 1138" now showing at the Spartan West, should not be missed by science fiction buffs or anyone looking for the unusual and fully realized on the often lacking movie screen.

Criminal action

FOOD, MUSIC

Club to present Arabian night

Arabian students and friends will gather for an evening of Arabian food, music and dancing Saturday night.

More than 250 persons are expected to attend the evening's festivities which will begin at 8 p.m. in the Veterans of Foreign Wars Hall, 2108 N. Cedar St., Holt.

The MSU Arab Club sponsors Arabian Night once a quarter, except during the summer.

"It's strictly a social affair," says Arabian Night chairman Jamal Al-Sharif.

The purpose of Arabian Night, he said, is to give Arabian people the opportunity to meet other people and to share with them a part of their culture through their food and music.

An Arabian band will play what Al-Sharif described as "very emotional" Arabian music. They will be accompanied by an Arabian dancer.

Al - Sharif will lead all the Arabians and guests in a dance called "dabkie."

A highlight of the evening will be a prize - giving drawing which the Arabians refer to as rotary.

'STOP THE WORLD'

Actors' talents saved musical

By KENNETH STERN
State News Reviewer

Stop the show, I want to get out!

Unfortunately, I did want to several times during the latest New Players' effort, an uneven revival of the Leslie Bricusse - Anthony Newley musical, "Stop the World, I Want To Get Off."

The show is basically a glorification of Anthony Newley. He starred in the original production, gave himself all the good songs and put himself in the spot light.

The leading role of Littlechap, therefore, demands a formidable talent.

In a circus setting (life is a circus to the authors) we in the audience are made to sit through Littlechap's life cycle — birth to death, and everything in between.

The hero is an ambitious chap with an eye for the girls and advancement. He knocks up the boss' daughter and marries her, whereupon the couple is sent to the out - of - the - way Sludgepool office of the company. Littlechap rises from a tea pusher (no pun) to an executive.

Domestic troubles arise when our hero's amorous adventures turn to foreign affairs. On a business trip to the Soviet Union he sleeps with Anya, and at home he has his German domestic Ilse, then in America he meets Ginny, an All - American cabaret girl.

Littlechap enters politics, is made a Lord and then retires. Whew!

At the end, Newley and Bricusse throw in some philosophical tidbits and advice. That a circle is round doesn't prove anything, but it is something to think about, says Littlechap.

"Stop the World" has some of the best music that has been written for the musical stage. "Gonna Build a Mountain," "What Kind of Fool Am I?" and "Once In A Lifetime" are musical comedy classics. This show is entirely dependent upon its music, for without it "Stop the World" would be nothing.

Ted Hollis in his role as Littlechap constantly varied between giving a good and a mediocre performance. Opening night Hollis seemed somewhat hoarse and saved his voice to belt out the last notes of his songs.

That left the middle sometimes totally inaudible. Hollis was not bad, but he didn't have the power to make the show his.

Juliana Boehnlein did however. She maintained her usual standard of excellence in her roles as all four of Littlechap's female companions. Her English, Russian, German and American speech and actions were a pleasure to see and hear, and she changed from one to the other with speed and accuracy.

The production is directed and staged by Gary Kinsky, Southfield senior.

The orchestra, under the direction of Michael T. Griffith, E. Cleveland senior, many times lacked snap, although it was basically satisfactory. "Stop the World" is an enjoyable show, nothing to get really ecstatic about, but worthwhile for the talents of Miss Boehnlein and Hollis.

Meeting slated to plan drive

Motown wonder appears Monday

By DAVID BASSETT
State News Staff Writer

When someone mentions "courageous entertainers overcoming insurmountable physical handicaps," the first image to come to mind is that of Danny Kaye rolling around in a wheelchair on a Broadway stage while the audience salute him with tears in their eyes, an act which has to be one of the schmalziest public appeals for sympathy ever.

At the other end of the spectrum is Stevie Wonder. When asked by Carson or somebody several years ago what it was like to be blind, he replied to the effect that "a handicap isn't a handicap unless you make it one," a phrase he has constantly reiterated during his more than 10 years in show business. His has been a life of accentuating what can be done and ignoring what can't.

His first big hit, "Contract of Love," was recorded when he was 11 years old and is the form which Donny Osmond and Michael Jackson have copied — screaming the high notes, growling the lows, maintaining an optimum energy level of motion.

His recent million-sellers "Yester-You, Yester-Me, Yesterday" and "My Cherie Amour" (both his own compositions) and the Beatles' "We Can Work It Out" are only three of his dozen gold records. His others include "I Call It Pretty Music," "Fingertips" and "Uptight."

Born Steven Judkins almost 21 years ago in Saginaw, he studied music in Braille as a child.

Since he recorded "Contract of Love" at 11, he has learned to play piano, organ, drums and the harmonica. He was graduated from the Michigan School for the Blind in Lansing in 1969 after three years of study there.

Stevie Wonder will appear at 7 and 9:45 p.m. in the Auditorium. Tickets for the concert, sponsored by ASMSU in cooperation with Motown Records, are $2.50 and are available at Campbell's, Marshall Music and the Union. All proceeds for the benefit concert will go to the Martin Luther King Jr. Scholarship Fund.

'Wonder'ful

"We Can Work It Out" will be one of the songs sung by Stevie Wonder in concert at 7 and 9:45 p.m. Monday in the Auditorium. His appearance is presented by ASMSU in cooperation with Motown Recording Corp.

DANCE CELEBRATION SET

'Stop the World,' music, concert, films top scene

The weekend choice is between a play, a dance concert, three music events and six movie programs.

Stage

STOP THE WORLD I WANT TO GET OFF — Anthony Newley's musical about a man's search for fulfillment, a search that lasts from birth to reincarnation. The play presents him as a clown among other clowns in a stylized circus atmosphere. "What Kind of Fool Am I?" "Gonna Build a Mountain" and "Once in a Lifetime" are among the play's 17 music numbers. Performances at 2, 7:30 and 10 p.m. Friday, at 7:30 and 10 p.m. Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Union Ballroom. Tickets are $2.

DANCE CONCERT — the MSU Orchestral Dance Troupe's annual spring celebration, with 13 dance numbers, 40 student dancers and music from modern rock composers. At 8 p.m. Friday and Sunday and at 2 p.m. Saturday in Fairchild Theater. Admission is $1.

Music

FOLK CONCERT — John Campbell, Mark Talaba, Rob Carr and Ted Lucas will appear, beginning at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in Wonders Kiva.

p.m. Sunday in Wonders Kiva. $1 admission.

Movies

THEY SHOOT HORSES, DON'T THEY — a dance marathon prize of $1,500 brings together a collection of lost souls who endure the exploitation of promoters, the scrutiny of spectators and the trauma of competition. As Gloria, the most embittered participant, Jane Fonda is tremendous.

PUTNEY SWOPE — Roger Downey's free-wheeling blast at Madison Avenue, a satire about an all-black ad agency that dishes out "truth and soul" messages and panders to the almighty dollar. At 7 and 9 p.m. Friday in Wells Hall, Saturday in Anthony Hall.

GRAND PRIX — in the high-powered driver's seats or at trackside, recording the pre-race and race excitement, the film is dazzling. Otherwise, it is dime store melodrama with James Garner and Eva Marie Saint giving performances the script but no viewer deserves. Check ads for showtimes.

FARENHEIT 451 — Ray Bradbury's fascinating novel made tedious thanks to Oskar Werner, Julie Christie and director Francois Truffaut. Shows with Hitchcock's "North by Northwest" Friday and Saturday in Wells. Check ads for showtimes.

THE RETURN OF DREW EGGAN and SINGLE SHOT PERKINS — two old westerns starring William S. Hart in the former and Tom Mix in the latter. Shows at 7, 8:40 and 10:20 p.m. in 106 Wells Hall.

I, A WOMAN — Essy Pearson signs along with her audience. At 7, 8:45 and 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday in 104 Wells Hall.

SUMMER CAMP OFFERED

Unpolluted cost: $12

An MSU graduate student is offering students 30 days of tuition-free living in a semi-rural area of central Michigan for $12.

Emo Rossi, a former high school social studies teacher in Michigan, is organizing a communal culture camp designed to provide students with the opportunity to live individually or in interest groups as part of an experiment in "living, loving and learning" during August.

If the camp is successful, Rossi said, he plans to establish a similar program for high school students as part of their regular education.

While individuals are encouraged to stay the entire month, it will also be possible to stay one week for $5. Rossi said the fees will cover the costs of chemical toilets and rent for the land.

Campers will be expected to supply their own food and other accommodations, although food will be sold at the site. The nearest village is six miles from the camp, and is "easily accessible by road."

Rossi said drinking water will be available from wells, and that natural beaver ponds and a stream are located on the site.

More than 125 people have expressed interest in the camp to date, and Rossi said he hopes to limit the number to 300, "about one person per acre."

Group discusses methods of campus pollution control

By BECKIE HANES
State News Staff Writer

The MSU Waste Control Authority Committee met Wednesday night in Holden Hall to answer questions from students concerning the University's role in controlling pollution.

A small turnout of Sierra Club and E-QUAL members directed questions and made suggestions to the committee concerning waste control and recycling on campus.

"We want feedback to find out what the Waste Control Authority should do," Emory G. Foster, chairman of the committee, said. "If the board of trustees follows our recommendation and places someone in authority — if we start today with stringent rules — MSU shouldn't be a pollutant in the community."

The committee's members described some of the precautions that are now in effect. A permanent glass bin is open Saturdays in Parking Lot L near University Village. The sorted, clean glass will be collected by the Owens-Illinois Glass Co. for recycling.

"Another prime pollution problem was married housing," Foster said. "The fact that we burned both garbage and trash in incinerators caused a considerable amount of air pollution. We are now experimenting with plastic bags and having them hauled away with much success."

Phosphates in laundry detergents have been eliminated but dishwashing detergents are posing a problem, Foster said.

"The substitutes for phosphates either pollute just as much or don't do a satisfactory job," he added.

Also, Power Plant '65 has been converted to gas and MSU's Spray Committee has eliminated the use of polluting insecticides on campus, according to the committee's report to the trustees.

The committee reported that a task force is working on the recycling of glass, paper and metals from residence halls.

"It's a social problem when computing costs," Foster said. "When computing the economic cost, the cost to the environment must be computed also."

Recycling of IBM cards is done by the University, one member said.

However, Howard A. Tanner, professor of fisheries and wildlife, said he feels recycling is not the only answer to the pollution problem.

"It is a selling, teaching and research process," he said. "We're being too idealistic if we say we are going to make all the breakthroughs. It's more than just a dirty problem of waste."

"Some say pollution is a lack of ingenuity," Tanner said. "Once we flush it out, we've lost our chance for ingenuity."

The $1.7 million project Tanner is working with takes water and extracts the waste and sprays it where it can be used.

This can create more useful land and recreation activities. The four-year-old project is financed by the Ford, Rockefeller and Kresge Foundations.

"We must work at both ends of the pipe," Tanner said. "If it's a pain to take the metal band off from a bottle intended for recycling, put pressure on the bottle company to discontinue using these metal bands."

One student voiced concern over the University's actions as a single consumer. It is much easier to influence one consumer's buying habits than it is to influence thousands of individuals, he said.

Foster said he is willing to work with anyone who has ideas or plans for waste control on campus.

Services held for Luboshutz

Memorial services were held Thursday in Maine for Pierre Luboshutz, former head of the Dept. of Piano at MSU. Luboshutz died Sunday at his home in Rockport, Ma. He was 76.

Luboshutz and his wife, Genia, joined the MSU faculty as artists in residence in 1962 and headed the piano department until 1968.

They performed professionally as Luboshutz and Nemoff, appearing with practically every major symphony orchestra in the world. They were also recording artists.

Mrs. Luboshutz is the only immediate survivor.

Extradition verdict near

By BOB ROACH
State News Staff Writer

The fate of Lester Stiggers, a young black fugitive fighting extradition back to the Arkansas penal system, may be decided by Gov. Milliken next week.

The governor has been reviewing the case and his decision may come before the end of next week, according to Kenneth Franklin, the governor's legal adviser, who presided at the extradition hearing April 2.

At that time, Stiggers, 21, said his return to Arkansas could mean his death at the hands of armed trustees who he said terrorized the predominantly white Tucker Prison farm.

Stiggers also told of his first-degree murder conviction at a one-day trial in 1965, following the shotgun shooting of his father when the youth was 15 years old. He said his father had repeatedly beaten and sexually abused him.

Testimony was also heard on the fugitive's self-rehabilitation after he fled to relatives in Michigan while on a five-day furlough in February, 1970.

J. Ronald Kaplansky, assistant

Michigan attorney general acting on behalf of Arkansas, said at the time he was convinced of Stigger's rehabilitation but felt the final determination would have to be made by Arkansas authorities.

The fugitive had come to Lansing last June to enroll in an automotive technology program administered by Lansing Community College. Completing his studies in November, Stiggers returned to Detroit and found a job on his own when the school couldn't place him in the Lansing area.

He told officials at the hearing that he had turned himself in to police in Detroit the day after returning to Michigan to begin an immediate extradition fight, the authorities said they couldn't hold him there without a warrant.

If allowed to remain in Michigan, Stiggers has been promised a job with a Southfield construction company and a home in Detroit with his mother and step-father, where he spent most of his younger years.

POLICE BRIEFS

NO INJURIES WERE REPORTED by an MSU coed from Mayo Hall who told MSU police she was walking about 9:12 p.m. Wednesday on a sidewalk west of Mayo when a man about 20 years old grabbed her on the buttocks.

The coed said the man fled immediately after the attack. Police said they were not able to find the assailant.

SEVEN BICYCLES, with a total estimated value of $225, were reported stolen Wednesday to police from students who left the bicycles parked in campus areas. Police said six of the bicycles were reportedly locked at the time of the theft, and one was left unlocked.

A STEREO CONSOLE, a cafeteria table, clothing and a set of master keys, with a total estimated value of $350, were recovered about 6:41 a.m. Wednesday by patrol officers who found the items in the southwest corner of parking Lot O, south of Owen Hall.

Police said the items apparently belonged to the University and were returned to Owen, from where they were reportedly stolen sometime between 2 and 6:40 a.m. Wednesday.

AT BUF MEETING

Students told about jobs, aid

Black United Front (BUF) in an "organized seminar" Wednesday night in the Wilson Hall auditorium, met to stimulate the interest of blacks on campus toward events occurring here.

It was reported that the Urban Corp. will be rehiring all work-study students this summer. Residents or future residents of Lansing may file applications with Model Cities for summer employment.

BUF urged all interested students who are having difficulty finding employment to check with Huey Edwards or Gene Washington in the Placement Bureau.

A spokesman for BUF announced a "Slush Fund" that makes money available to students with medical and personal problems. Financial aid applications were also made available for those who had not applied for aid next year.

BUF is sponsoring a breakfast program in Lansing for underprivileged children. More participation and donations are needed to help BUF maintain the program.

The BUF is also sponsoring a black political theater. Performances will be held in each complex, and the cast hopes to travel to other colleges and universities.

BUF meeting

Harvard scientists detect drug, vaginal cancer link

NEW YORK (AP) — A synthetic hormone drug given to seven women during pregnancy apparently has caused a rare vaginal cancer in their daughters 15 to 22 years later, Harvard Medical School scientists reported Thursday.

The scientists theorize that the drug — stilbestrol — somehow, they don't know how, altered the development of the vagina, allowing the abnormal growth.

The New England Journal of Medicine hailed the work as "of great scientific importance and serious social implications," and said it "adds a new dimension to the whole matter of what drugs are safe or unsafe to give to pregnant women."

Dr. Arthur L. Herbst, Harvard obstetrician and gynecologist and principle author of the report, said that as far as he knows nothing like this, and with the time lag involved, has been found before.

The evidence turned up by the Harvard researchers, the journal commented editorially, points to a direct relationship between the drug and the cancer, in the way birth defects have been caused by German measles and the drug thalidomide.

Six of the women are alive but one died.

Herbst emphasized that the seven cases are few considering the thousands of New England women believed to have been given the drug. It was used to treat pregnant women with a history of miscarriage from 1946 to 1951 in New England. It has not been used much since, the scientists said.

Therefore, the risk to any one woman whose mother was given the drug is very small. But he also said he does not know the extent to which the drug may have been prescribed elsewhere in the country or around the world.

The drug — its full name is diethylstilbestrol — is on the market now, but for such uses as treating symptoms of menopause, vaginitis, and cancer of the prostate. A description of one company's product warns of "possible adverse reaction on the fetus."

The researchers, who did their work at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, discovered the apparent link between stilbestrol and adenocarcinoma of the vagina after the rate cases showed up between 1966 and 1969.

This touched off some medical detective work in the science of epidemiology. The researchers studied the patients and 32 other young women, a control group, all born about the same time, the same area, under similar circumstances.

A long list of possible factors was eliminated — including cigarette smoking, mother's age at pregnancy, X-ray exposure. They were left with the fact that the mothers of the seven women all had been given stilbestrol, mostly during the delicate first three months of pregnancy. None of the mothers of the 32 controls had been given the drug.

Despite their conservative approach to their findings, the researchers recommended that doctors be alert to the possibility of malignant disease in young women at the time of their first menstrual period if there is irregular bleeding.

Activities amendment drafted

By DAVE PERSON
State News Staff Writer

A subcommittee of the all-University International Projects Committee is presently working on the incorporation of a statement barring clandestine international activities into its policy guidelines, according to L.H. Battistini, professor of social science.

The statement was passed as an amendment to the recently revised policy guidelines of the committee. The amendment was offered by Battistini, a member of the committee.

The two-part amendment states that:

"For the purpose of maintaining its integrity and credibility, the University shall not undertake any activity that has concealed funding and undisclosed purposes or is classified in such a way as to restrict publication and general dissemination of all the facts of this activity.

"University personnel shall not use a University project as a vehicle for carrying on activities for any undisclosed purpose or agency."

The amendment was made, Battistini said, to prevent the occurrence of another program such as the military assistance program in which MSU was involved with Vietnam.

The technical assistance program was responsible for training the Saigon police. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) involvement in the project was revealed in Ramparts magazine in April, 1966.

The policy guidelines of the International Projects Committee, into which the amendment will be incorporated, were revised in March to cover a broader area.

The guidelines were broadened to have the committee examine reports from individual professors who go abroad as well as reports of University-related contracts.

Spring strike fines paid

A former MSU student who was arrested in spring, 1970, for disturbances on campus is free this week after paying a $500 fine and $300 in restitution to the state for damages he caused during an incident at the Administration Bldg.

David M. Moon, 20, from Silver Springs, Md., received the sentence April 16 in Ingham County Circuit Court before Judge Donald L. Reisig after he pleaded guilty March 1 in circuit court to charges that he broke a window in the Administration

Bldg. valued at $189.

Another charge that he was responsible for breaking two windows, with a total value of $248, in Kedzie Hall was dropped during the trial.

A spokesman for the circuit court said Thursday Moon paid the $500 and the $300 restitution April 16 after his trial.

Moon was arrested May 1, 1970, by MSU police who saw him breaking the windows in Kedzie Hall and in the Administration Bldg.

Batsmen travel to U-D, EMU

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

MSU's highly rated baseball team is on the road for the first time in two weeks as it travels to Detroit and Eastern Michigan for a pair of doubleheaders Friday and Saturday.

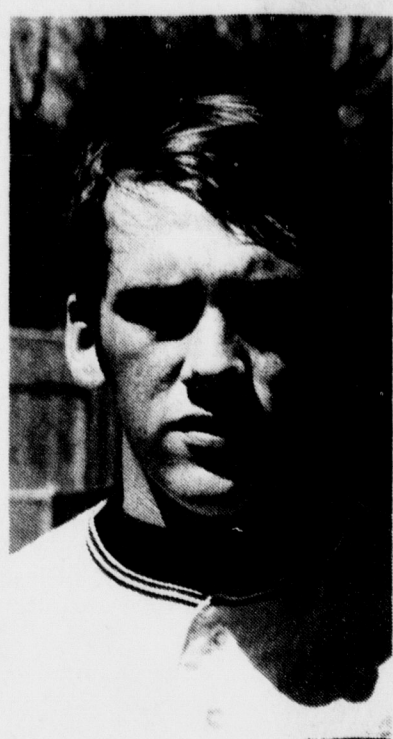

The Spartans captured wins in six of the eight games on their home stand and they hope to take an even better percentage on the road in the doubleheaders this weekend, next Tuesday's game with Western Michigan and the April 30 contest with Michigan.

MSU hopes to break out of a moderate hitting slump during the four games Friday and Saturday. After bombing Ball State 19-1 and 20-1 and then whipping Albion 8-0 in the first game of a twin bill the hits have failed to consistently fly off the Spartan bats.

True, MSU has been able to win most of the games but leaving many men on base or just not getting enough hits is not designed to comfort MSU Coach Danny Litwhiler or MSU's pitchers.

"I think we are going to break out of it soon," John Rohde, MSU's new first baseman said Thursday.

Rohde can't be accused of not taking his cuts at the plate. The Detroit sophomore had not seen any action as a starter since coming back from Florida and when opportunity knocked, in the second game against Central Michigan, Rohde came through with a double and a single in his three times at bat.

What created the chance for Rohde to break in as a starter was the injury to Shaun Howitt in the first game against CMU. When Howitt dove head first into third base on a steal he suffered a dislocated shoulder, removing him from the line-up for an estimated four weeks.

Litwhiler moved John Dace from his first base slot out to Howitt's center field position and inserted Rohde at first.

"It's too bad that this has to be the way I get into the line-up," Rohde said. "It's a tough break for Shaun but, if something like this happens there's nothing to do but take advantage of it."

Litwhiler agreed with his first sacker, adding that the Spartans wouldn't be hurt with Rohde in the line-up.

"We've been trying to get John in as much as possible," Litwhiler said, "but when you're winning you don't like to change the line-up. John's the type of player who can come in and do the job."

Rohde professed confidence in his ability to hit for the Spartans. So far this season the Detroit Scribe product is batting at a .314 clip, he has nine RBI's and he has hit for extra bases in five of his 11 safeties.

"I'm sure I can come up with the hits," Rohde said. "It's the defense that will be my biggest adjustment. I played first base quite a bit in Florida so the position's not new. If I get some more practice I don't think I'll have any problems."

Rohde and the Spartans will try to turn on the hitting and continue with the defense and pitching that has carried them through their latest games, when they come up against Detroit and Eastern.

The Titans own an 8-3 mark for the year. They were beaten by Michigan earlier this week, 10-0. EMU's Hurons have a sub-par record, considering their past diamond successes, of 8-12.

Pitching for MSU over the weekend will be Dave Bewley and Larry Ike against Detroit while Rob Clancy and Dave Leisman will hurl against EMU.

Bewley has done most of his pitching this season coming out of the bullpen and he has been an effective relief pitcher. Bewley will carry MSU's third best ERA into the game.

Clancy and Leisman have been the aces of the staff so far this year both starting and in relief. Clancy leads almost every pitching category with his 0.50 ERA and his 6-0 record. Leisman has come on strong for MSU and owns a 3-1 mark with an ERA of 0.75.

BEAT BULLETS

Alcindor the key to Bucks win

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — Lew Alcindor put it mildly after the Milwaukee Bucks beat the Baltimore Bullets 98-88 for a win in the first of the best-of-seven finals in the National Basketball Association championship Wednesday night.

"Wes (Unseld) played me the way he usually did," Alcindor said. "But I think maybe he forgot what it is like."

Alcindor was the guiding light behind the Bucks' win, even though he played just over nine minutes in the first half after being saddled with three early fouls.

"All I can say about those calls," Alcindor said, "is that they don't call them that way during the season. I guess I'll just have to adjust."

Alcindor scored only eight points in the first half, but he came up with 18 in the third quarter and five in the fourth for a game high total of 31.

"They started hitting me in good position in the third quarter," Alcindor said. "Baltimore couldn't sag in on me, because (Bob) Dandridge was hitting."

Baltimore Coach Gene Shue didn't have much to say after the game. He was looking forward to Sunday when the two teams meet in Baltimore.

"We just have to play better," he said. "We wanted to sag in on Lew, but we just made a mistake."

Keep away

IN DRAKE RELAYS

Trackmen test team depth

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — Today four MSU relay teams find out just how good they are, or could be, in the opening session of the 62nd annual Drake Relays here.

MSU Coach Fran Dittrich will likely enter baton units in the 440, 880, mile and four mile relays today. All but the four mile must rate among the eight fastest teams to make the Saturday finals.

The four mile unit, with Kim Hartman, Dave Dieters, Randy Kilpatrick and Ken Popejoy slated to run, won last week at Ohio but will have to travel the route on the Tartan track here much faster than its winning 17:03.9 of a week ago if it is to have a shot at placing.

The 880 relay could well be the best spring team the Spartans can put together at this time. Dittrich can pick from among Mike Murphy, Tom Spuller, Bob Cassleman, Herb Washington and LaRue Butcher for the squad, so any way you look at it, it's a potent outfit.

Only trouble is, the rest of the entries are just as tough. Some problem exists with the 440 relay, where John Morrison and Mike Holt will likely join Butcher and Washington. The Spartans have posted a 41.1 but will have to dig around 40.6 in the trials today just to make the finals.

Best chance for success in relay rests with MSU's shuttle hurdle squad — Morrison, Wayne

'S' golfer Woulfe an 'iron' man

By CRAIG REMSBERG
State News Sports Writer

When the MSU golf team travels to Bloomington, Ind. Saturday for the Indiana Intercollegiate Tournament, one player will be sure to make the trip.

You see, Spartan co-captain Rick Woulfe has never missed a scheduled school tournament, team practice or team play - off in his three years of MSU competition.

"That should tell you something about Rick's attitude and his play," Coach Bruce Fossum said. "He has a tremendous appetite for golf."

Further evidence of his competitive nature can be seen by how he came to MSU. No "hungry" recruiters pounded on his door nor did letters flood his mailbox asking for his talents. Instead, he wrote a letter to Fossum inquiring about the Spartan golf program and his chances to make the team.

"My guidance counselor at high school had been from Kalamazoo and he recommended Ohio State, U of M and MSU," Woulfe said.

"I wrote to Coach Fossum asking about scholarship opportunities at MSU and he said there were none available at the time, that I would have to be a walk-on athlete. But I'm glad I came to MSU."

Fossum is happy too, on the basis of Woulfe's performances.

In 1969, the six-foot, 175 pound Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. senior played in 28 rounds, averaging 76.6. In 1970 he averaged 77.9 for 19 rounds of tournament action.

This season he has placed 26th and 20th in early tourney play, plus finishing a fine eight in the Mid-America Invitational at Oxford, Ohio Monday. He shot a four-over-par 148 for 36 holes.

"He has a natural swing and flair for playing golf and is a hard worker," Fossum said. "If he makes up his mind to be the best golfer in the Big Ten, he can be."

Woulfe was introduced to the game by his father and has been swinging for nine years. To improve his game, he receives some instruction from a professional at his home course whenever he can get home.

He has enjoyed a couple of real high spots in his golf career. Like a 65 first round in the Eastern Amateur Tournament recently ("the biggest thrill I've ever had in golf"), and playing in the U.S. Amateur Open in 1969 at Oakmont, Penn. ("the course there is the best I've ever played on - beautiful but unbelievably tough").

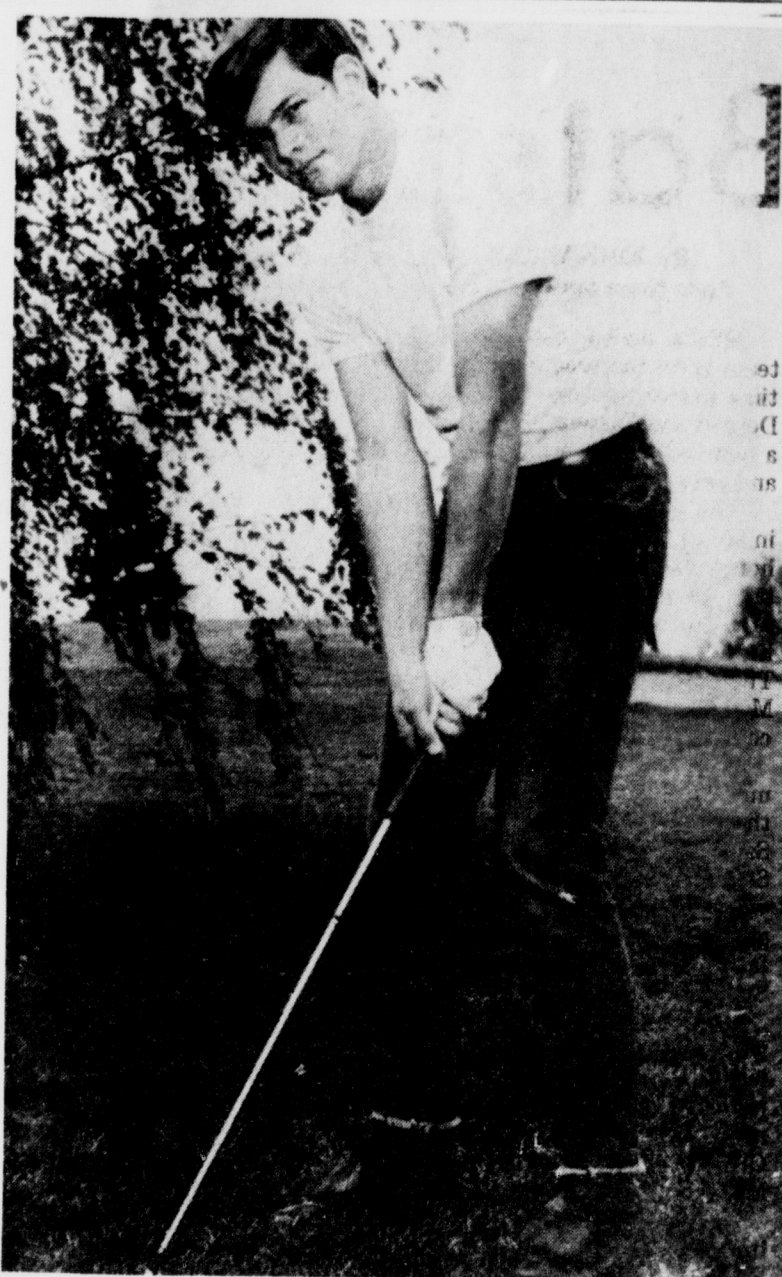

As to the best part of his game, Woulfe names his irons but says his woods are just starting to come around this year.

The economics major believes the Spartan team is improving rapidly and that the Indiana Tournament Saturday should show how the team will play for the rest of the season.

"We have a real even team this year and the regulars are all capable of winning any tournament we play in," Woulfe said.

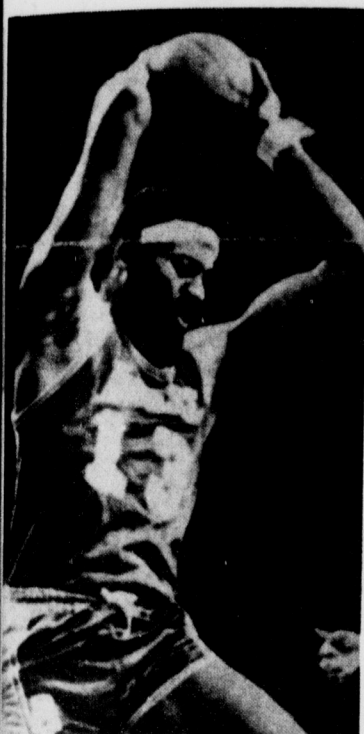

"John VanderMeiden is really coming along, Dick Bradow and John Peterson are both playing well and (co-captain) Denny Vass, of course, is a top golfer."

Law school or a graduate school of international business looms in the future for Woulfe. He is thinking about becoming a professional golfer if the opportunity presents itself, but not for two or three years, until he makes up his mind.

Chamberlain backs off, fight plans cancelled

WILT CHAMBERLAIN

HOUSTON (UPI) — Muhammad Ali's proposed 12-round fight with 7-foot-2 Wilt Chamberlain, the greatest scorer in basketball history, was cancelled after a two-hour dispute Thursday when Chamberlain refused to agree to terms of the contract.

Chamberlain had previously agreed to the terms, but at the last minute he backed out of the bout, four years in the making, because his counsel said he would have to pay too much taxes on the one-night, $500,000 paycheck.

Chamberlain and his attorney arrived at 12:45 p.m. in a helicopter, and they met with officials of the astrodome and Top Rank, the promotional group, before refusing to go through with the bout.

Ali, the former heavyweight champion, left the news conference a half hour after the scheduled 3 p.m. start of the news conference for the official signing, and he never returned to hear the doleful announcement that the fight would not take place.

The promoters had predicted that Chamberlain would make $1-million on the bout, which they expected to gross $10-million to make it the second richest boxing event in history. He had been guaranteed $500,000 against 25 percent of the revenue for the fight, which was to be telecast on closed circuit.

Ali, five years younger than the 34-year-old basketball star for the Los Angeles Lakers, was to get a guarantee of $1-million or 45 percent of the revenue.

Talk of the proposed match began four years ago when Ali was still heavyweight champion. However, he was stripped of the title and barred from the sport after refusing induction into the army in 1967, ending hopes for holding the fight at that time.

SUNDAY IN IM

Weightlifting meet here

The Michigan AAU Senior State Weightlifting championships and the Mr. Michigan contest will be staged at MSU's Men's IM Building Sunday.

The events are being sponsored by the MSU Weightlifting Club. Weigh-in will be at 1 p.m. and the events begin at 2 p.m. The meet will draw some of the best lifters from the nation, MSU team captain Leonard Espinosa said.

Admission for the competition is $1 for the general public and $.50 for students.

Espinosa doubts his team will be coping any team titles as it is not the type of lifting that the MSU club specializes in.

Three MSU lifters will be involved in the competition. Gary Wandell will represent MSU at 132 pounds, Dan Paulot will vie at 198 pounds and MSU graduate Dan Gillis will compete at 242 pounds.

Roger Callard, who last week won the Mr. Southern Ontario title as well, will attempt to add the Mr. Michigan title as well.

MSU took second place to Torio's Health Club of Toledo in a meet in Windsor, Canada last week and gathered one individual first place and set many new state and MSU records.

Wandell placed second at 132 pounds to the national champion but set three state records. He hefted 370 in the squat, 480 in the dead lift and totaled 1155.

Dave Burke also placed second but set two records. He lifted 650 in the dead lift and totaled 1535.

In their respective categories Leonard Espinosa finished first and Mike Nelson, John Sulowski, Larry Hansen and Jay Breslin all finished fourth.

Duffy sees help from freshman prospects

Time to evaluate

It's that time of year when 22 positions on a football team are open and the coaches have to evaluate dozens of players to determine who will be in the starting line-up for next fall. In this sequence, the quarterbacks go through snap drills with the centers under the watchful eyes of a few Spartan coaches.

By RICK GOSSELIN
State News Sports Writer

Mike Holt. Bob Mills. Paul Hayner. Mike Hurd. Bill Chada. Ron Kumiega. Do these names sound familiar? If not, they soon will.

Duffy Daugherty has a crew of 33 lettermen returning from the team of last season, which is in itself enough to make a coach optimistic. But the new faces — the faces of last year's freshman team — compound Daugherty's hopes for a strong team next season.

Asked how much he was depending on the players up from the freshman team, Duffy was realistic in his thoughts.

"How much are we depending on them? They're it!" Daugherty said. "They've got to give us a big lift along with the players coming off last season's injuries if we hope to improve on our record.

As a slight refresher course, the frosh team of last season posted two wins in three games, securing wins against two of MSU's favorite whipping posts, Notre Dame and Michigan.

Ed Rutherford, the man who ran the freshman club last season, was abundant in his praises of the members of that team.

"You won't find a better group of kids to work with," Rutherford said. "They'll do anything you ask of them."

Talent was abundant on that freshman team, with players from all positions considered serious contenders for openings left on the varsity roster this season.

"They are quite a few who will play a lot for us," Daugherty said. "I'd venture to say a lot have chances to step into a starting role."

The offensive line would be an excellent spot for that freshman team to provide some sort of relief in the minds of both Daugherty and offensive line coach Buck Nystrom. The offensive line is the key to all good offenses. A good back is nothing without a good line in front of him. And listening to Rutherford talk, you've just got to believe that MSU's incoming sophomore line crew can provide some of the answers confronting its coaching staff.

"We had a really good offensive line last year, and most of those linemen are still in contention for a starting spot on the varsity," Rutherford said. "I'd say that the linemen with the best chance of making it into the starting line would be Mills at center."

Rutherford considers his quarterback last season, Mark Niesen, an excellent prospect, but the competition at that spot is about as high pitched as you will find on the team.

Bill Simpson has a fine chance at capturing the job of punter. Hayner and Holt could conceivably spend their Saturday afternoons next fall in the starting defensive backfield while Kumiega could, in a lot of people's eyes, "surprise" along the defensive line.

"The varsity might not get a lot of players numbers — was from that freshman team," Rutherford noted, "but they will be getting the kids as far as quality goes. The attitude of these kids is very good."

Trackmen in Relays

Hartwick, Dave Martin and Howard Doughty. That same unit was second to Texas A & M here a year ago and with Rich Jacques running for Doughty in Florida ran 56.7 for a tie of the NCAA mark.

MSU's mile relay, sixth in the meet last year, will again have tough going, with Rice, Texas A & M and Kansas State rated among the better entries. But the regular unit — Murphy, Mock, Holt and Castleman — has not run outdoors together yet and State could be ready soon to uncork a good one, like the 3:12.9 effort that won the indoor Big Ten crown and set a world mark for an eight-lap track.

MSU will also enter a distance medley relay squad, with Mike Holt running the quarter-mile leg, John Mock the half-mile, Dave Dieters the three-quarter mile and Ken Popejoy the anchor mile.

Individually, MSU has a number of entries, with two — Hartwick and Washington — rated nationally and among the best in their events.

Hartwick had the fastest race of his life, 51.4, out here last year in the NCAA intermediate hurdles race while this track has been somewhat a bad place for Herb, as he placed fifth in last year's Drake 100 and then seventh in the NCAA.

But the Flint junior looked strong at the finish in winning at Columbus and could be primed for a good effort here.

Field event entries for MSU include Eric Allen, triple jump winner at the Ohio State meet and varsity record holder at 48 1/4, and freshman pole vaulter Jim Stevenson.

Other Spartan entries include Morrison in the 120-yard high hurdles, with a best of 13.9 the year, and Butcher in the 100 with a 9.6 so far and a 9.2 needed to qualify for the NCAA in June.

WILL STAY IN PITTSBURGH

Group buys NHL's Penguins

NEW YORK (UPI) — The financially troubled Penguins' franchise of the National Hockey League was awarded to a group of Pittsburgh residents Wednesday for approximately $7 million.

Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, said the league's board of governors unanimously approved the sale of the Penguins to the local group headed by Thayer R. Potter, Elmore L. Keener, A. H. Burchfield III and Peter H. Block.

The new owners announced that Red Kelly would be retained as general manager and coach of the Penguins as will

Campbell said the group had agreed to a closing date of May 10 for payment of the franchise's principle liabilities in cash. He said the total indebtedness of the franchise was approximately $6 million.

The NHL took over financial control of the Penguins on Dec. 1, 1970, when owner Donald H. Parsons of Detroit was unable to sell the club. Parsons granted the league power of attorney on Oct. 7 to become effective Dec. 1 in the event of default.

Three other groups also were bidding for the Pittsburgh franchise. Campbell identified them as: a group headed by James and William Fuller of Detroit and a corporation called Management Control of East Liverpool, Ohio; a group headed by Bill Putnam, entertainer Andy Williams and promoter Jerry Perenchio; and Chemalloy Minerals Limited of Toronto, headed by David Winchell.

Campbell gave three reasons for the board's choice of the Pittsburgh group.

"They have the financial resources, they have management potential and they are resident owners," he said. "I would think it is proper to say they fulfill the major requirements which will contribute most to the success of the franchise in the national league."

Potter, a marketing executive, and grandson of a Pittsburgh industrialist, Col. W. F. Rockwell, will function as the chief executive officer of the team and will serve as the governor to the NHL board. Keener related by marriage to the Rockwell family, is a partner in a Pittsburgh brokerage firm of Arthur, Lestrangle and Short.

Burchfield is vice president of Joseph Horne Company, a Pittsburgh department store, and Block is a Pittsburgh attorney who was instrumental in bringing the franchise to Pittsburgh when the NHL expanded in 1967.

Potter said that his interest in obtaining the franchise started when he learned it was in difficulty.

"Being a native of Pittsburgh, I felt the ownership should really be in the hands of people from Pittsburgh," Potter said.

FROM BLOOD

Machine strips vitamin C

An MSU nutrition researcher has found that a kidney machine ... which removes toxic materials from a patient's blood also ...
removes at least one vitamin.

"We found that a kidney machine removes vitamin C from the ... blood," Jean Burge, East Lansing graduate student in human ... nutrition and foods, said. "Other vitamins may be removed as ... well," she says. "Patients on kidney machines may need vitamin ... supplements that they seldom get."

Mrs. Burge presented her findings at the Chicago meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology ... last week.

Prolonged deficiency of vitamin C results in a disease called ...
scurvy.

A lack of the vitamin also impedes efficient metabolism of ... iron and some B vitamins, she said.

"We are not saying that scurvy is widespread," Mrs. Burge said. ...
"But we are hoping that doctors will look more closely at the ... vitamin status of their patients."

Doctors have been hesitant to add vitamins to the diets of ... patients on kidney machines, she said, because until recently ... research has not proven a need. Unnecessary vitamins in the ... blood just make more work for the machine.

Dr. John F. Sullivan, using a different machine, found similar ... results at the Brooklyn - Cumberland Medical Center in New ...
York.

"Not much is known about nutritional deficiencies caused by ...
kidney machines because they have been in common use for only ...
10 years," Mrs. Burge said.

A kidney machine works by passing blood through a selective ...
membrane which removes toxic materials, if nontoxic materials, ... like vitamin C or ascorbic acid molecules, are small enough, they ... are also removed.

"The vitamin C deficiency cannot be made up by diet alone," ...
Mrs. Burge said. "Many foods rich in vitamin C, cannot be eaten ... by kidney patients because they are also high in potassium."

In her research, Mrs. Burge found that a kidney machine ... removed up to 60 per cent of the vitamin C from the blood of ...
dogs and humans within a half hour.

March

About 305 MSU students are going in eight buses. Students going in these buses should assemble at 6 p.m. Friday to leave at 7 p.m.

Harshey said labor support of the march was "real tremendous" as seen in a hospital workers' union in New York City that is sending 1,600 of its 50,000 members to the march.

He said the march has the endorsement of eight U.S. senators and several representatives as well.

People going to Washington from Michigan should assemble before 10 a.m. Saturday along 15th street near the ellipse. The march is scheduled to start from the ellipse at 10 a.m., progress around the White House and down Pennsylvania Avenue to the Capitol.

On the west steps of the Capitol tentative speakers to the rally include Ralph Abernathy, executive director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; Bella Abzug, U.S. representative from New York; Sallye Davis, mother of Angela Davis; David Dellinger, one of the Chicago Eight and coordinator of the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice; Vance Hartke, U.S. senator from Indiana; and Coretta Scott King, widow of Martin Luther King Jr.

Harshey said that "if someone does happen to get arrested — again we're not expecting this — 'they should call the Listening Ear in East Lansing collect. The Ear will collect pertinent information about the arrest and the person's whereabouts and relay the information to the necessary people. The Listening Ear number is 337-1717."

Modern dance

PROF REPORTS

Trustee intrusions noted

that these rights must be respected.

"Yet at the same time, we respect the ultimate authority of the board," Williams said.

Williams spoke against one of the trustee recommendations at the Tuesday council meeting, stating that the amendment "authorizes intrusion into the internal affairs of the University."

He said there is a need for "understanding amongst all the components of the University — students, faculty, administrators and trustees. I hope that we can resolve our differences in a climate of moderation and good will, realizing that we are all striving toward the same end.

"If we don't operate this way," Williams warned, "we may be on a collision course which could be harmful to achieving the goals of the University."

Williams said it is "almost beyond comprehension" what would occur on campus if the trustees were to seek to insert the rejected amendments into the bylaws without the consent of the faculty.

The bylaws require the approval of all amendments by the Academic Council and the Academic Senate.

Thomas H. Greer, professor of humanities and secretary of the University Steering Committee, said that the trustees cannot amend the bylaws without faculty consent "unless they want to declare null and void the whole system of bylaws and institute a new set of bylaws without faculty consent."

Greer said that the board of trustees has historically "not invoked itself in the day-to-day functioning of the University."

"By specifically requesting that these words be included in the current set of bylaws amendments, the board seems to suggest that they are questioning the delegation of their authority to others," he said.

Greer said that the "real issue involved" is the issue of whether or not the board of trustees has "confidence in the MSU faculty to perform its professional tasks. 'Statements and actions by the board over the last year are perceived by the faculty as revealing a lack of confidence in faculty competence."

Chitra M. Smith, associate professor in James Madison College, said Thursday that the faculty "genuinely propose nothing that would diminish board authority. But to the faculty it looks as though the board is trying to decrease the degree of autonomy that we were granted in the past."

"I am afraid that effective decisionmaking on the part of both students and faculty will be badly eroded if the expectation gets around that any group that gets defeated on a key vote can procure trustee nullification of the vote," Mrs. Smith said.

Duvalier's death reported

guiding hand behind him. Jean Claude was designated president for life, as was his father.

Neither the palace announcement nor the radio gave the cause of Duvalier's death. They withheld the announcement for about 12 hours. Duvalier's health had failed after a series of strokes. He also suffered from diabetes.

It was ironic that the announcement of Duvalier's death came on April 22. Duvalier considered the 22nd day of the month lucky. He assumed the presidency Sept. 22, 1957, and often made important decisions on that day of the month.

After the announcement of Duvalier's death and the transfer of power to Jean Claude, a first-year law student at the National University of Haiti, the radio played funeral music.

Port au Prince was quiet. Many Haitians seen on the streets, were crying. The palace guard band played somber music.

Jean Claude made his first appearance after being sworn into office in the morning. He emerged from the presidential palace to the garden in front and was cheered and applauded by a large crowd.

It was reported that Duvalier's body would lie in state so the public could pay its last respects, but no details were made public. In the new Cabinet as foreign secretary is Andrien Raymond, a brother of Gen. Claude Raymond, chief of the armed forces general staff. Luckner Cambronne, a former minister forced out of politics by Duvalier, is the new secretary of interior, defense and police.

All other Cabinet members are known friends of the Duvalier family.

It was because of declining health that Duvalier announced last January that his son would succeed him. The national legislature adopted an amendment to the constitution that month lowering the minimum age of a president from 40 to 18. The amendment was overwhelmingly approved in a national referendum.

Duvalier promulgated the constitution in 1964. It made him president for life to carry on what he called "the Duvalierist revolution."

Duvalier ruled with an iron fist, shot many of his opponents, and made enemies who plotted against him. But he managed to ride out each crisis and died in bed, a luxury not allowed many of his predecessors.

Many persons have speculated that there will be a power struggle, and if it follows the usual pattern it will be bloody. Duvalier's wife was reported to have opposed the designation of her son as his father's successor, fearing he might be killed.

Duvalier was born April 19, 1907, the son of a local magistrate who had been a teacher. He had promised to make a birthday appearance last month to show he was healthy

U.S. surveillance following Duvalier's death

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Dept. said Thursday the United States has increased its military surveillance of the general vicinity of Haiti.

Charles Bray, a department spokesman, said the action was taken after Haitian President Francois Duvalier's death "so that we have an understanding of the situation."

Bray emphasized the increased military surveillance has nothing to do with the internal situation in Haiti.

Other sources said the U.S. action is designed to insure that Cuba will not take advantage of any political instability which may arise in Haiti.

The eastern end of Cuba is within 45 miles of Haiti.

Bray said he had no information on whether Cuba has been supporting revolutionary insurrection in Haiti.

He also said the question of U.S. diplomatic recognition of the New Haitian government does not arise and that relations between the two countries are continuing.

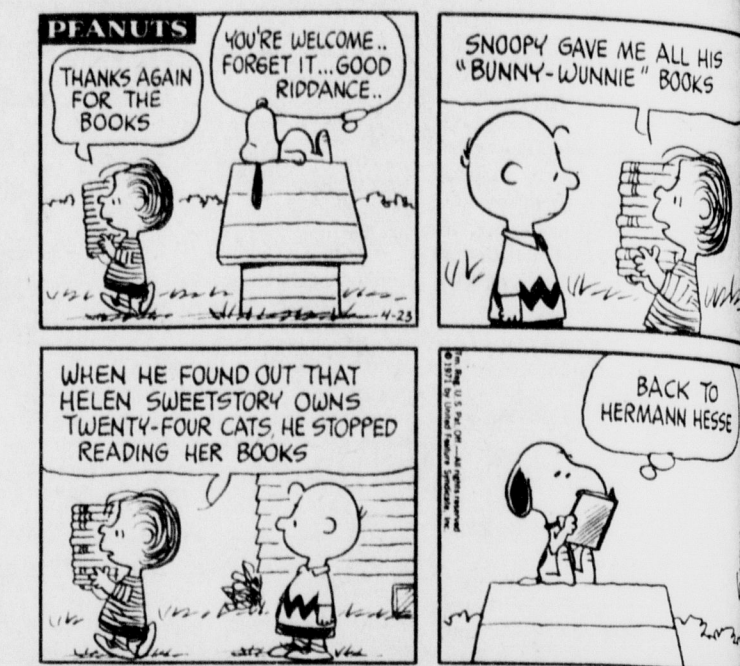

Duvalier's 19-year-old son, Jean Claude, was sworn in as president shortly after his father's death.

Bray said it was his understanding that the situation in Haiti is calm. He said he had no word of any extraordinary action taken by military forces in the neighboring Dominican Republic.

There are about 2,000 Americans in Haiti, Bray said.

The United States, he added, has had no direct bilateral assistance program in Haiti since 1963 because of what he described as an inability between the two governments to reach agreement on administration of the aid program.
