Although the presence of bloc voting primarily that of black and Greek board members - was strongly felt in Tuesday's elections, vice chairman Harty said he was surprised at the board's voting behavior. "The loyalties are not where I thought they were," he said.

"There are definite factions, but they seem to be making no effort to cover them up. I hope this openness is characteristic of the new board's actions as a whole."

Although the elections were completed in record time, the meeting dragged on until nearly midnight due to frequent recesses to allow the various interest groups to caucus and discuss the candidates. There were no closed sessions.

Buckner, who was "extremely pleased" with the overwhelming support shown him by the board, said he feels the seventh session will be a tremendous improvement over its conflict - ridden predecessor.

"The executive members of the board have all worked together for several years in student government," he said. "We all know each other quite well and can work in what I feel will be a smooth and efficient manner."

Diane Rathnow, elected cabinet director on the second ballot, will coordinate the activities of organizations financially supported by ASMSU funds, such as the Man and Nature Bookstore, Women's Liberation, Pop Entertainment and MECHA.

"Although a formal structure still has to be finalized, there will be some major changes in the cabinet organization," she said. "These groups will definitely have to answer to somebody for a change about where all the money is going.

A controversial action taken by the MSU Board of Trustees April 16, which extended the contracts of two nontenured faculty members for one year, was defended Wednesday in a statement issued by Trustee Patricia M. Carrigan, D-Ann Arbor.

By STEVE WATERBURY

State News Staff Writer

The board action extended until Aug. 31, 1972, the contracts of Eileen R. Van Tassell and Bertram G. Murray, both asst. professors of natural science, so that the question of their contract renewal may come under new procedural guidelines which include the right to receive reasons for a decision to not re-appoint.

The extension has been sharply criticized in a letter to the provost endorsed by members of the Dept. of Natural Science Ad Hoc committee for Re-appointment and Tenure for 1971.

The statement by Mrs. Carrigan stressed that there has been "no challenge to the scrupulousness of any departmental faculty group in carrying out existing policies applying to nontenured faculty.

'The board's action needs to be viewed in context," Mrs. Carrigan said. Cited as contributing to the context in which the board acted were the following:

• The position taken by Committee A of the American Assn. of University Professors (AAUP) endorsing the giving of reasons to nontenured faculty members who are not re-appointed and who request

• The fact that a similar position was taken by the MSU chapter of the AAUP as long ago as 1966.

• The recent recommendation of the University Tenure Committee which was in basic agreement with the Committee A recommendations. The "expectation that this recommendation (from the University Tenure Committee) would be approved by the Academic Council and the Faculty

• The fact that some departmental committees had already approved policy changes which included giving reasons, if requested, to any nontenured faculty member who was not to be re-appointed.

It was the "considered judgment of University Attorney Leland W. Carr Jr., based on the legal questions involved, that the policy expressed in the AAUP Committee A document should be implemented at MSU.' Mrs. Carrigan said that the motion approved by the trustees was "a class action motion" that applied to all who are presently members of the nontenured faculty who had been notified in December

Council suggests drop of HPR requirement

By SIEVE WATERBURY State News Staff Writer

If the Academic Council accepts a recommendation from the University Educational Policies Committee, students will no longer be required to complete three credits of health, physical education and recreation (HPR) William D. Collings, professor of physiology, said Wednesday. Collings, chairman of the University Educational Policies Committee, said that his committee will recommend to the council on May 4 that the HPR requirement be dropped at the earliest convenient time.

"The committee would like to see this go into effect Universitywide beginning in fall, 1971," he said.

Collings indicated that the committee advocated that all students in the University should be be exempted from the requirement as of the effective date. This would mean that students presently enrolled in the University who have not completed three credits of HPR would no longer be required to do so to graduate, if the proposal is adopted.

"Instead of saying that three of the presently required 183 credits must be HPR, we are advocating that the policy be changed so that they may be any elective nonmajor credits," Collings said. 'if the student wants to enroll in HPR courses, the courses will still be there, and they will be less crowded.

"The whole tenor of things these days is to give students more flexibility in setting up their programs," he said.

Collings said that 10 years ago, students were required to enroll in six credits of

The University of Michigan eliminated all HPR requirements two years ago.

Collings will also propose that the council eliminate the current regulation that there be no charge for credits in excess of 20 credits per term.

Also scheduled to be considered at the May 4 council meeting is a report from the University Curriculum Committee on changes in courses and curricula, an information report from the University Business Affairs Committee concerning the proposed hold card policy and a report on the Assn. of Michigan Collegiate Faculties. Although not on the agenda that was mailed to council members this week, the council will also consider a report from the University Tenure Committee which advocated the adoption of a policy requiring the giving of reasons to nontenured faculty members who are not reappointed and who request them.

The policy to be recommended to the council is similar to one recently adopted by the American Assn. of University

Five activists tried unsuccessfully to persuade the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, long in the forefront of congressional war criticism, to launch a filibuster to block other legislation until the war is ended. At the same time action in the antiwar movement outside Washington is bringing unexpected pressure to bear on congressmen.

Calls and letters are coming from the homefolks, prodded for the most part by Common Cause, the self - styled citizens' lobby headed by former welfare secretary John W. Gardner.

The statements the congressmen are hearing about are being circulated by bipartisan groups in the House and Senate endorsing full removal of the U.S. military from Vietnam by the end of the year.

Sen. George S. McGovern, D-S.D., a candidate for his party's presidential nomination in 1972, called blocking of buildings self - defeating and told reporters "The effect of such ill - advised tactics is to play into the hands of the President."

Officials fear disease may strike 'U' elms

State and local officials expressed concern Wednesday over the possibility of the 1,700 tees on MSU's campus becoming severely infected with Dutch elm disease.

Expansion continues

The government flashed another sign of expanding economy Wednesday, reporting that its leading business indicators advanced for the fifth straight month.

The Commerce Dept.'s index of leading indicators increased by six-tenths of one per cent in March, an unspectacular gain but in line with the steady growth of economic activity.

Oil controversy renewed

Santa Barbara, Calif. has returned to normal since an offshore oil well blowout two years ago blackened beaches and created an 800-square-mile slick.

But the battle continues between Santa Barbara groups opposed to oil drilling and the oil industry over the future of the Santa Barbara Channel.

Feelings are running high again - this time after disclosure by the Interior Dept. that Texaco, Inc., was granted a permit for exploratory drilling near where the Union Oil Co. well blew out in 1969.

Alabama Gov. Geroge C. Wallace is expected to be called before a grand jury Thursday in Montgomery Ala. in a Justice Dept. probe of income tax records and campaign funds.

The one-time top aide to Seymore Trammell, a key leader in Wallace's third-party run for president as well as previous races for governor, declined comment on reports he has been subpoenaed.

A source said the federal grand jury heard testimony earlier this month that an advertising executive gave false business invoices to certain campaign donors in the 1966 state-house race at Trammell's request.

Cancer lead discovered

A Nobel prize-winning scientist reported Wednesday in Washington that research aided by a rocket-fuel ingredient suggests that cancer may be due to an inborn enzyme defect - and is possibly treatable with extracts from calf liver.

But Dr. Albert Szent-Gyorgyi, twice winner of the Nobel prize in medicine, said further exploration of the lead is threatened by scarcity of federal and private support for his research.

The scientist, director of the Institute for Muscle Research, Woods Hole, Mass., told about it in a report to the spring meeting of the National Academy of Science.

Women to attain priesthood?

Two bishops Wednesday in Detroit at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops raised the possibility that women and married men may be ordained as priests of the RomanCatholic Church.

A group of Catholic women who demanded women be ordained and accused the church of discriminating against women stood outside the conference room.

During the bishops' closed door meeting, Archbishop James E. Davis of Santa Fe, N.M., said, "The possibility of ordaining married men seems not remote." His remark was read to newsmen by a spokesman during the briefing.

Traxler, who is chairman of the judiciary committee, said the law is needed to provide a more "coordinated and codified system of drug control similar to that now utilized at the federal

Gov. Milliken has made recommendations revising the Michigan drug laws in a special drug abuse message delivered March 4. The proposed measure covers the areas of the governor's recommendation. However, drafting of the bill had begun prior to the message, Traxler said.

The proposed legislation breaks down the narcotics and drugs into seven separate schedules with different penalties provided for each. Marijuana has a schedule of its own.

Under the bill, the sale of heroin, which is listed in the first schedule, would still be a felony punishable by up to 15 years in jail and a fine of up to $25,000, while possession would be punishable by up to four years in prison and a mzximum fine of

The federal law, however, makes the penalty for possession of heroin a misdeameanor punishable by up to one year in prison. While the Traxler bill is stricter in the punishment for 90- day penalty for the possession of marijuana is softer than the 90- day penalty for than the federal law, which punishes the possessor of marijuana by up to. one - year confinement.

Although the introduced state legislation would make possession of marijuana a misdemeanor, it would still grant state and local authorities felony powers in enforcement. "If he (the authority) has reasonable cause to believe that violation of this act has taken place or is taking place . . . (he) may arrest that person without a warrant for the violation irrespecting of whether the violation was committed in his presence."

Conversely, the appointment of counsel would be provided to a person charged with the possession violation. "So it's really for tat," Traxler said.

Traxler admitted an inconsistency in making possession of marijuana a misdemeanor and yet granting felony enforcement powers, but he explained that such a clause is necessary if the is to receive public support.

"You have to be realistic," he said. "If we are to get this by through we can't have every policeman opposed to it, althour most of them already are. At least this does take away some the state police objection to the bill."

Traxler said "chances for passage of the bill are excellent in the House and good in the Senate."

Forced sterilization: mapping the macabre

South Carolina Rep. Lucius O. Porth thinks he's got the answer to the poverty problem in his state: sterilize welfare recipients after they have had two children.

He introduced a bill in the South Carolina House Friday that would make sterilization of welfare mothers mandatory. If the female did not consent, her family would automatically be taken off the welfare payroll. He reasons that the bill would compensate for the poor people's "lust for sex" and save the state welfare money as well.

Porth apparently feels that the problem of poverty can be directly traced to the people's insatiable sex

His mastery of social problems and their origin seems to be of grade school caliber. "Lust for sex" is certainly not the prime cause for poverty; if it were, there probably would be far more poor people.

Porth fails to realize one's sex appetite is not necessarily related to the frequency of having children. Poor women, uneducated to the use of voluntary contraceptives and unable to afford "the pill," may have more children than middle or upper class women who use contraceptives in an educated and diligent manner. But that does not mean poor women have a greater sexual appetite than middle class women.

Porth does not understand that poverty is not a temporary affliction, easily overcome; it's a way of life and a diseased one. Society will have little success eliminating poverty by treating its symptoms (poor living conditions, crime, too many children) rather than causes (illiteracy, ethnic prejudice, high rate of unemployment, etc.).

Not many citizens are taking Porth seriously, but it is somewhat frightening that such a macabre bill could be introduced into a society that purports to be democratic.

If body functions are not sacred from governmental tampering, then the government would appear to have codified the very essense of humanity. Physiologically tampering with the mind seems only a small step from fertility control.

Ideas like Porth's need time to incubate. Our guess is that it will take about 12 years for bodycontrol to be popularly accepted. Let's see, that puts us somewhere near 1984 . .

Hanging on the chopper's skids

By C. Patric Larrowe Professor of Economics

You may think I'm putting you on when I tell you that as recently as six years ago a student could be kicked out of here and he couldn't get anyone to tell him why. "You know why," was all the dean of students would tell him.

When some of the faculty suggested it was impossible for a student to appeal if he couldn't find out why he'd been kicked out, here was the dean's answer: "If we put the reasons in writing, they might cause him to be turned down for a job in later

"Anyway, if he didn't deserve to be 'suspended,' he wouldn't have been 'suspended'. He knows that. Furthermore, the faculty committee that reviews the work of my office doesn't see anything wrong with the way we treat students. So why do you?"

What could a student do? Nothing. He'd pack his bags and slink quietly away, and usually, we'd never hear of him again.

Then, in 1965, we had a student here who went all the way up the line, asking for reason, not getting any. Eventually, he wound up in the president's office. "I never second-guess my deans," the president told him.

That wasn't good enough either, so, with a little help from the ACLU and AAUP, the student took us to court. (Ironically, some of the precedents he relied on came out of state prisons where wardens were mistreating prisoners and wouldn't tell them why they were punishing them or let them appeal. The courts told the wardens they had to.)

"It really shouldn't be necessary for this court to order a university to give its students due process," the judge told our startled president and his advisers. "But you apparently don't realize that the Constitution applies to you the same as it does to everybody else. If you don't give him reasons and a proper appeal, I'll have to order you to do so.

Having been told to open 'er up or shut 'er down, we had the wit to readmit him, and we put a faculty committee to work writing procedures to protect student rights. The case was Schiff vs. Hannah et. al. (282 F. Supp. 381), and the committee produced the Academic Freedom Report.

Most of us (I'm leaving out, of course, tenured mossbacks and arrogant administrators) would, I suppose, assume that if students and felons have constitutional rights, it goes without saying nontenured faculty, too, are entitled to the due process the Constitution commands. We'd be wrong. Some of my colleagues don't agree with that at all.

Only a few years ago, when three ATL profs who'd been fired and several hundred students who supported them with an eight-day sit-in in Bessey asked for reasons, Dean Carlin gave them the word: "The ATL Department," he explained, "is following a strong ethical tradition of the university teaching profession in refusing course, when they remind us the nontenured faculty have always been kept in the back of the bus. But, now, thanks to a half dozen court decisions, the national AAUP and our own board of trustees, the end of that tradition is in sight.

Our trustees, instead of waiting for faculty version of the Schiff v. Hannah or the national AAUP to put MSU on its censured list, have asked us, in effect, to write the AAUP procedures for reappointments into our bylaws. And the they extended two Nat Sci profs for a year so their reappointments could be reviewed under the new procedures. (The profs have been trying in vain for 13 months to find out why they were being kicked out.)

In these parlous times, when denial of rights so often leads to noisy campu disruptions, we scholars who do our research and writing best in a tranqui at mosphere must feel grateful to our trustees for taking such a far-sighted course.

Some of our administrators don't see it that way. Our provost told the State Journal the other day, for example, that the trustees' action may lead to some problems: "(I am) worried," he said "about protecting the excellence of gifted faculty members and about keeping then on campus with higher salaries as they do to publicize reasons for its decision. "This decision is intended not to cloak unjust actions, but to protect men seeking employment in other universities.'

The head of the Grape Growers' League couldn't have said it better.

That hands-off attitude, moreover, is supported by quite a few of my tenured colleagues. After the ACLU, the AAUP and the MSU chapter of the American Studies Assn. condemned the ATL firings, the State News asked English prof Russel B. Nye, national president of ASA, what he thought about the trouble over in ATL. He spoke for a sizable minority of us when he replied: "I don't really know what's going on there. Inflation real cause of GNP rise

Warren flag statute: unnecessary, archaic

It seems that the longer responsible citizens fight to abolish unnecessary and archaic laws, the quicker other citizens attempt to put such laws on the books.

Take the Warren City Council. Tuesday Councilman Richard Saughbaugh proposed a city ordinance that would make it a crime to display a flag of any country engaged in armed conflict against the United States, Violation of this statute would be punishable by a $500 fine and 90 days in jail.

Saughbaugh said he proposed the ordinance because "I'm an American concerned about our boys fighting in Vietnam . . . '

However, we view Saughbaugh's proposal as more than concern for "our boys." It appears logical that the councilman might be attempting, in one manner or another, to create a law by which individuals of antiwar demonstrations could be successfully prosecuted, assuming that they had done nothing wrong other than raise a Viet Cong flag.

The proposal also seems to be in conflict with the spirit of the First Amendment which states that citizens should be guaranteed freedom of expression and speech. Flag displays of any country are simply visual expressions of opinion or feeling and should be treated as one would treat verbal expression. Logical extension of the spirit of the First Amendment would seem to conflict with the tone of the Saughbaugh proposal.

Saughbaugh and the councilmen supporting him are, in reality, trying to make public sympathy law. Following Saughbaugh's line of action, the mere fact that town citizens are opposed to Viet Cong flag displays is reason enough to enact legislation that prohibits such displays. A basic problem with the Warren proposal is that like all flag desecration laws, the symbol has mistakenly become that thing which it represents. It seems that even though symbol desecration is harmless, it somehow threatens the public's security or morale; therefore, we have a law preventing such desecration. That type of reasoning makes for laws of dubious

Back again

The announcement that Lansing city buses may once again resume service Monday, pending organization of a new Lansing transportation corporation, is a welcome resumption of necessary services for those citizens without private transportation.

In this day when multi-million dollar expressways are becoming commonplace through the middle of cities, usually uprooting poorer citizens, little effort has been made to provide public transportation that is efficient, inexpensive and adequate for the needs of the city's urban population.

Hopefully, public bus service in Lansing will not again be disrupted. A city that can help construct I-96 through the middle of town, but not provide municipal bus service, seriously needs to re-examine its spending priorities.

GNP is made up of private (nonbusiness) savings and spending, the saving, spending and inventories of businesses, the amount of dollars in goods and services spent abroad subtracted from the money foreign nations spend on American goods and services, and government expenditures.

GNP is supposed to be an indication of the welfare of the entire nation. Under the circumstances described above, no one is any better off than he was a year ago. And perhaps things are actually economically tougher than a year ago. In other words, a rising GNP increased because of extreme increases in government spending (on the war, for example) does not indicate that the nation is better off. It is conceivable (and in the present situation, extremely probable) that rising GNP completely misrepresents the national welfare. Ask the guy who comes back draped in a flag.

Another way of computing GNP involves prices in one period multiplied by the quantity of goods in that same period. An increase in GNP may reflect more goods being produced (hence, more employment, less poverty, etc.) On the other hand, it could simply be a stable amount of goods produced by at higher prices. And that's what happened in 1970. Prices up

In short, prices went up, the quantity of goods decreased but the GNP went up. Again, the national welfare is, if anything, in atrocious condition. But don't tell that to the GNP computers.

If businesses decrease spending, they decrease expansion. And if they do that, they lay off a portion of their labor force or have no openings for kids looking for summer jobs or June grads looking for the real thing.

So tell an MSU kid who can't find a summer job, who knows tuition, room and board will go up next year no matter how sorry the trustees say they are about doing it, and who can't live off campus next year to try to save some money because the trustees are also hit in the economic stomach - and he'll laugh in your face.

If these inadequacies and malfunctions in determing GNP aren't enough, there are a few more to add to the whole mess.

Arbitrary For example, the items which go into GNP, or more accurately, what "they" this case, some far-off economists) ded to count in GNP, are more or arbitrarily determined. To illustrate how messy this thing can get when y decide to use three beans from this jara seven from that in trying to compute how many beans there are in all the

Yet some economists estimates GNP for any one year wuld rise by 30 g cent. In other words, almost one third the country's output (in terms of god and services) is ignored and no one see to mind very much.

Not infallible

Not that they should. But it just goes show that the numbers which seem govern our collective economic life at a the infallible, all - encompassing littles that they're cracked up to be. The details of the incidents, previously announced by official sources in Calcutta, were contained in three separate, strong protest notes sent to the Pakistan High Commission or embassy.

In the most serious incident, according to the Foreign Ministry, a Pakistan army column Tuesday afternoon entered the Indian enclave of Banspachi, about 275 miles northeast of Calcutta, and "indulged in indiscriminate" 'Falstaff' firing and arson, causing at least 25 casualties.'

where Hopper was editing his latest film, "The Last Movie."

The film is 50 per cent fictional, Carson said. Many of the situations were dreamt up by Hopper or by crew members, and then enacted by Hopper. In one scene, Hopper walks through a fashionable suburb and, in a gesture of mock disrespect, takes off all his clothes. In another, Hopper's fantasy of having 18 girls at once is suddenly realized.

Carson first met Hopper in 1969 when Carson interviewed him for a story in Evergreen Review.

"Because of that article - and another piece I did on him -Dennis came to trust me," Carson said. "We became friends."

'Hopper is an example of a Kansas farm boy who made it big in the movies. His typically American dreams of acquiring fame, fortune and beautiful women have all come true. Now he is a victim of these major American dreams."

There is nobody he completely trust and no one he listens to. He has never had anyone to comfort him."

Carson said he intended "The American Dreamer" to be a first person documentary, a film that does more than just follow its subject around like a dog.

"Too many documentaries are third person works," he said. "They treat their subjects like animals in a zoo. Such films are shot as if through a cage's bars.'

The 29 - year - old Carson has had a varied career encompassing newspaper work, acting and television directing. He wrote and played the lead in "David Holzman's Diary," a film that won the Grand Prize at the 1967 Mannheim Film Festival. The film was shown at four other film festivals but was never given national distribution. "It is agony to finish something, have it recognized as good

Judiciary's cases show shift in emphasis

By DIANE PETRYK State News Staff Writer

MSU judicial programs have olved from a system primarily ncerned with individual sciplinary cases to one dealing the most part with group nflict over constitutional estions or over the fairness of gulation during the past year. The major shift in emphasis me last spring as a result of licy changes," Michael Nunn, st. director of judicial

The chemical industry holds the key to solving the problems of environmental pollution, H.D. Doan, former president of the Dow Chemical Co., said Tuesday.

Doan spoke at a dinner meeting of Michigan high school chemistry teachers sponsored by the Dept. of Chemical Doan acknowledged that many sciences have contributed to the awareness of environmental problems.

"It will be the use of technology by the chemical engineer, the chemist, the analytical chemist and the toxicologist that will provide the answer to these problems," he said.

He noted that all pollution is the result of a chemical process, whether related to the chemical industry itself or to the production of steel or paper or power. The human body is a chemical process, he added, and so is the growing of plants.

Doan, who retired as Dow president in February, said two things are necessary for the chemical engineer to make his contribution to pollution control:

"One is attitude," he said. "Everyone, particularly leaders in

"In the case of industry, I would like to convince people that they can, over the long run, be solved profitably," he said. Doan said the second factor was developing the specific capabilities to solve the problems. "It will take some time to develop the proper attitudes and it will take additional time for people to understand what capabilities are required and then to develop these capabilities,"

Doan was speaking as part of a program to alert teachers to career opportunities for their students in the chemical engineering

Aaron hits home run No. 600

ATLANTA (UPI) - Hank Aaron hit the 600th homer of his Major League career in the third inning of Tuesday night's game between the Atlanta Braves and the San Francisco

The 37-year old Aaron, now in his 18th major league season, came within inches of ireaching that milestone in the first inning when he rifled a double off the top of the right field fence.

But there was no question in his second time at bat when he ofted a two-run homer, his eighth of the season, high over the left field fence to become the third man in baseball history to reach the 600 mark.

The other two are the late Babe Ruth who had 714 homers and San Francisco's Willie Mays, who has 633 and who also had a double early in Tuesday night's Still searching for a sixth man to compete with his regular five starters, Coach Bruce Fossum will take his squad to Boyne City, Mich. to play in the 72-hole Northern Invitational Tournament Friday and Saturday.

The tourney was initially scheduled to be held in Madison, Wis., but the Badger's course is too wet and unplayable. The meet site was switched to Ann Arbor but course officials there told the coaches of the 12 participating teams that they had some previous commitments.

All the Big Ten schools will be competiting in the event at Boyne. Two other schools- Notre Dame and the University of Miami (Fla.) -will also be sending their squads.

death after a much - admired soldier from his unit was killed by a land mine nearby.

Notley gave his unsworn testimony to an unofficial, selfconstituted congressional volunteers' accounts of alleged war crimes.

"This was the first time I've been able to talk about it," Notley said. "I didn't even tell my wife about it until last

The panel, chaired by Rep. Donald V. Dellums, D-Calif., has for three days listened to former American servicemen give what they said were eyewitness accounts of indiscriminate killings of South Vietnamese and of beatings, torture and murder that they sometimes participated in themselves.

Notley's tale was perhaps the most startling of all. It prompted Dellums to exclaim. "What the hell is the country doing to young people to train them to go out and kill innocent off "the rest of the people people?"

Notley said the murders he saw were committed in the village of Truong Khanh II,

He said his platoon was area, and had taken several from a hospital complex. Finally, he said, one of the most popular men in his unit stepped on a land mine. "He'd rather play with the Vietnamese kids and laugh and play with him for it," Notley said, "and

He said his lieutenant assumed someone from a nearby village a "vil" in Gi GI slang - had set the mine.

"The lieutenant said, "There's a vil over there and there's people in it and they're committee which is hearing responsible . . . I want some kills," Notley said.

Once in the village the squad spotted a group of about 10 women and children, he said. "I didn't see any men." He said four or five men did the shooting, while Notley and the rest were dazed, shocked numb. "They did it so systematically," he said. Later the unit came across another group of villagers and, Notley said, his squad leader suggested Notley kill them with his M79 grenade launcher. He said as he pulled the grenade launcher's trigger he deflected the round into the ground, but he does not know whether he personally killed any of the villagers. He said that as his round went opened up and killed them.

Notley said he withdrew in a state of shock and trembling while those doing the shooting Quang Ngai province, on or moved through the village and about April 18, 1969, two and a continued to slay the occupants, half months after he arrived in a total of about 30 in all.

action programs, Bernard J. Offerman, instructor in labor and industrial relations, told a group of MSU volunteers Tuesday.

Offerman, an activist in the civil rights movement in the South and in the Lansing grape boycott, defined social action as changing a basic condition which affects many people, such as inferior education or inadequate housing.

"Work on an individual basis is required to get a campaign going for an issue," he said.

Offerman said people avoid becoming involved in social action because they are afraid of breaking life patterns. He said today's social action concentrates on changing behavior because changing attitudes is more

A volunteer may become frustrated when he continually comes "up against the system," Offerman said. To lessen his frustration, the volunteer should accept the system as it is and try to humanize it and make it serve him. After a volunteer has completed an assignment he should find a way to give feedback to authorities. Groups who supply feedback to authorities are still more effective, Offerman

"Today power works from the bottom up," he said. "Community organizations are now legitimate. GM expects to hear from people." Offerman emphasized that a volunteer can only spend limited time with a person or

"You must realize that some of a person's problems are beyond you and there is a point at which he will require either an attitude change or professional help," he said.

survey started fall term, 1970.

"The main reason we're said. interested in studying the variation of rents in the East Lansing area is our feeling that exorbitant, especially when compared with the renting situation in the surrounding greater Lansing region," Ipcar

"A recent survey of apartment houses conducted by the Michigan Housing Authority indicates that rents for two bedroom apartments in the East Lansing area are about 30 per cent higher than the average outside of East Lansing."

In addition to interviewing tenants, the assessed value and background information on the rental units was collected and coded by the survey team from the assessor's office in City Hall during winter term.

To study variation in rents, by Rep. Jackie Vaughn, D-Detroit, on Feb. 8 and still in Ipcar said, the survey team compiled information such as assessed value, size of rental population, proportion of student renters, number of rooms, distance from the boundaries of the MSU campus, said Wednesday's activities types of landlord and the number of parcels owned by the individual landlord.

"About 10 per cent of the houses in our sample which were listed as owner occupied at the city assessor's office, proved to be occupied by tenants when the houses were cross - checked in the field survey," Ipcar noted.

The survey team programmed the 1,800 rental units from the city hall information through routines. According to Ipcar, the results indicate a degree of discrimination in rent situations as comparing East Lansing will on the basis of student versus

He said the study showed that at least 75 per cent of the rental property is controlled by the rents paid by students are small landlords, with the remaining 25 per cent controlled by 15 to 20 people. Rent is usually lower in rental situations where the owner is older, retired, owning one parcel and living outside the East Lansing area, Ipcar said.

According to Ipcar, the rent is usually higher in situations where the owner is younger, has more than five parcels (plots of land) and is affiliated with a real estate company.
