

House panel passes definition of obscenity

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional definition of obscenity, striking the Supreme Court's controversial "redeeming social importance" test, was approved Wednesday by a House subcommittee.

The definition would apply to anything that "has its predominant appeal to the prurient interests when considered as a whole by contemporary community standards."

The definition would specify that anything obscene under its standards would automatically be deemed to have no redeeming social importance.

"Any slight value in such matter," says the proposed definition "shall be deemed outweighed by the social interests in order and morality."

The proposed act, in effect, would write into law the Supreme Court's test that material is obscene when it appeals to the prurient interests and is offensive to contemporary community standards.

But it would strike the court's third test — which critics contend has opened the way for much of the current sexually explicit material — that the matter be proved to have no socially redeeming importance.

The proposed act would prohibit mailing obscene matter to homes in which minors under 17 live unless it is specifically addressed to an adult.

NALS POLICY

Exam changes urged

By STEVE WATERBURY
State News Staff Writer

The University Educational Policies committee (EPC) will recommend to the Senate on Tuesday that policy be altered to eliminate compulsory final examination.

The proposal that will be submitted to the council recognizes "that in many situations, a final evaluation, comprehensive in nature and binding on the content of the total instructional period, is desirable."

However, the EPC statement also notes that "instructional settings in which such a 'final examination' is not necessary or desirable."

Instructors in such situations are urged to schedule their courses during the final week for "relevant instructional activities."

If the council adopts the EPC report, members would still be required to schedule a two-hour period during finals at the time and date listed in the syllabus of courses.

The period may be used for instruction, discussion, summarizing the course, or obtaining student evaluation of the course, instruction, or other educational activities.

If a faculty member decides to hold a final examination, it may not be scheduled at any time other than the date and hour listed in the schedule of courses.

If an instructor requires a written report or take-home examination in place of a final examination, the recommended policy states that it should not be due before the final examination period scheduled for the course.

The EPC proposal states that no student should be required to take more than two examinations during any one day of finals week.

A student who has more than two examinations scheduled during one day may take his class schedule to the assistant dean of his college who will arrange for a rescheduling of the third examination occurring on that day.

W.D. Collings, professor of physiology, and EPC chairman, said Wednesday that if the council adopts the EPC recommendations the date of implementation would be determined by the provost.

The EPC also recommends a systematic rotation of finals week schedules, so that the final examination period for each course will be scheduled at a different time each term. This provision also applies to common final examinations.

MSU ACTION

Resolution urges halt to athletic spending

By MICHAEL FOX
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board Tuesday passed a resolution asking that the university not construct any new athletic facilities at this time to conserve funds.

The motion arose from a resolution submitted to the board last week by Seth Harty, East Lansing graduate student, who proposed construction of a $4.4 million ice rink to replace the current arena in Demonstration Hall.

Harty, board vice chairman, led the fight to pass the resolution after the ASMSU agenda committee recommended that the motion be passed.

Harty said funds appropriated to build "bigger and better houses" might be better used to meet a few dead scholarships or augment financial aid.

"I think it is most important that we be concerned about MSU's scholastic image — we worry about the quality of our team," Harty said.

"Unless we repair our academic image, we will be fewer students attending these schools, and the ones there will become bored by the scoring system," Harty said.

Stempel, McDonel-Shaw district representative, defended the proposed ice rink by saying that a well-rounded

Senate halts move to raise proposed military pay hikes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave the Nixon administration a victory Wednesday in its fight for a two-year draft extension by rejecting a move to increase sharply the proposed military pay raises.

The vote was 42 to 31.

Earlier, clearing the decks for a Memorial Day recess and next week's showdown on the proposal for a one-year draft extension, it voted 67 to 8 against a move to extend the draft for 18 months.

The vote against the amendment increasing the pay raises, which are designed as an incentive to attract more volunteers and make possible an all-volunteer Army, came as a blow to opponents of the administration's two-year extension proposal.

Supporters of the one-year extension said an increase in pay raises from the $1 billion urged by the Nixon administration to the $2.7 billion voted earlier by the House would improve their chances of defeating the House's passed two-year extension in a vote scheduled for June.

The votes on the two amendments were the last on the bill, which the Senate has been debating for three weeks, until after the Memorial Day recess which began Wednesday night for the Senate and starts today for the House.

The administration asked that the pay raises be spread over two years, while the amendment combines them all in one year.

Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee and floor manager of the draft measure, read the Senate a letter from members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, or their deputies, opposing the pay amendment.

"The necessity to absorb any substantial portion of the proposed additional pay increase of approximately $1.7 billion at the expense of other accounts," they said, "would severely disrupt essential defense programs and substantially impair our capabilities to meet national security requirements."

Sen. Peter Dominick, R-Colo., said a draft extension of 18 months would be enough time for the government to move to a volunteer force and said a one-year extension on June 30, 1972, making it "a political football" in the 1972 presidential campaign when 18-year-olds will vote for the first time.

Stennis said, however, that an 18-month extension would do the same thing by making the draft "a red hot issue" in the 1972 campaign and would probably force action in a lame-duck congressional session after the election.

"That's the worst possible time we could select to have this matter expire from a practical, political standpoint," Stennis said.

Examiners find Miss. defies voting rights act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Black voters are being purged from the registration rolls in Mississippi in defiance of the Voting Rights Act and the Department of Justice, House investigators said Wednesday.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., presiding over House judiciary subcommittee hearings on enforcement of the Voting Rights Act, said in Jones County 34,000 voters have been taken off the rolls since March 1 and only 15,000 restored.

Among those removed, he said, were black voters registered by federal examiners under the Voting Rights Act, which applies to seven Southern states.

David L. Norman, acting head of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, said the department had approved Jones County's reregistration plan but ordered that no voters registered by federal examiners be removed.

Norman, who earlier told the subcommittee the department is vigorously enforcing the Voting Rights Act, apparently was unaware that federally registered voters were being purged until Edwards told him.

Edwards said subcommittee investigators telephoned Jones County clerk Donise Knight Wednesday morning and were told he was making no distinction in removing voters.

Norman said later a member of his staff reached Knight by phone during the lunch recess and received assurances that Knight would meet with persons improperly purged and see that they were restored to the rolls.

A subcommittee investigator said later federally registered black voters had been purged in nine other Mississippi counties, none of which had received the attorney general's approval for their reregistration plans as required by the Voting Rights Act.

Norman said Jones County is one of 29 Mississippi counties reregistering its voters because of redistricting requirements under the 1970 census. Only 17 have submitted their plans for the attorney general's approval, he said.

Norman said two counties — Coahoma and Pike — had told the Justice Dept. they would not seek its approval but that he expects the others to comply with the law.

Norman and subcommittee members clashed repeatedly over their differing interpretations of the Voting Rights Act, with several members insisting that counties going ahead with their plans without Justice Dept. approval are subject to criminal penalties under the act.

Norman said the Civil Rights Division had sent 11 lawyers into Mississippi in an effort to find out whether counties were complying with the law, and would send them back to check on suspected violations.

The department is working now on proposed legislation, he said, that would provide for a hearing examiner to consider the more complex cases and make a recommendation which would then be taken into the courts.

Teacher hiring scrutinized

By CHARLES C. CAIN
State News Staff Writer

The State Board of Education has announced its intention to develop new criteria for hiring teachers in Michigan, which could have serious effect on the 5,000 to 6,000 teachers in the state teaching without certification.

John W. Porter, superintendent of public instruction, said Wednesday the board is going to send letters to local school board supervisors informing them of the "oversupply" of certified teachers who will be unable to find jobs next fall.

"We are merely going to advise local school board supervisors of the oversupply of about 15,000 certified teachers who will not find jobs next fall," he said.

"This is a situation which has not existed in this state for 20 years," Porter said.

Porter said this means that school boards should not hire new teachers unless they are certified.

"School boards should not enter into contract with noncertified teachers unless there are no certified teachers available for the job in that particular area," he said.

Asked what effect this could have upon the 6,000 teachers in the state who are teaching without full certification, Porter said they could find themselves out of a job.

"It could have a definite effect upon noncertified teachers," he said. "It is conceivable that their jobs could be terminated."

Porter said the board's intention of upgrading hiring criteria for teachers is in compliance with a 30-year-old law which has not been used "because we have never had the problem of such an oversupply of teachers before."

Porter said the problem of an overabundance of teachers is due to lower-than-expected school additions and a flood of teachers coming out of the state's universities and colleges.

"Basically we find ourselves in this problem because we have not expanded the number of schools as rapidly as we thought we would and colleges have been turning out more teachers than the demand calls for," Porter said.

Advertising on drugs said out of control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Non-prescription drug advertising of $385 million a year "is out of control and has become a major public health problem," a spokesman for a leading organization of drugstore pharmacists said Wednesday.

"It is often erroneous, it exaggerates claims and it even attempts to convince people they have nonexistent diseases," said W. James Bicket, representing the American Pharmaceutical Assn.

"Most critically, we feel that over-the-counter drug advertising contributes substantially to the 'drug orientation' of our culture and we believe something should be done about it," Bicket, a pharmacist from Zion, Ill., told a Senate small business subcommittee.

In separate testimony, a Federal Trade Commission official presented a study showing that makes of nonprescription drugs spend 37 cents of each sales dollar for advertising.

By contrast, said H. Michael Mann director of the FTC's Bureau of Economics, the average for all industry is less than 2 cents for advertising of each sales dollar.

Mann said evidence is lacking to conclude that heavily advertised products cost more than lightly promoted counterparts of other makers.

But he said heavily advertised Bayer aspirin costs about 1.7 times more than the lesser-advertised St. Joseph's brand aspirin. Bicket said various groups of student and practicing pharmacists are so concerned about the volume of nonprescription advertising they are preparing broadcast spots to counter false claims and to alert the public to "the broad range of health consequences regarding use of nonprescription drugs."

He cited estimates that 20 per cent of 1.5 million hospitalizations each year for adverse drug reactions are caused by nonprescription remedies.

Hoax nets half a million

Australia's national airline paid out more than half a million dollars Wednesday in Sydney in a bomb hoax similar to the plot of the movie "Doomsday Flight" shown there recently on television.

The airline, Qantas, was told a barometric bomb was concealed on a Boeing 707 en route to Hong Kong with 16 passengers aboard. The anonymous caller said Qantas would have to pay $560,000 to find out where the device was located or else it would explode at a certain altitude while coming in to land.

Britons accepting market

Most of the British seem finally resigned to a future in the European Common Market. Many of them are unhappy about it.

Public opinion polls report that two-thirds or so believe that Prime Minister Edward Heath will succeed in leading Britain into Europe. The same polls indicate that around 60 per cent oppose the move. The clear inference is that many people believe the issue is out of their hands.

Monetary struggle continues

American consumers who hoped such products as imported German automobiles would be cheaper when the dollar-mark value floated may find their hopes dashed.

There is a low-intensity struggle now on between overseas exporters and American importers over how to quote prices, in marks or in dollars. If the mark price bloc wins, prices will not come down as much. If the prices are set in dollars, the U.S. selling cost will be down as much as the dollar falls, unless somebody ups his profit margin.

The shape and form of television has changed little since the birth of the medium, but one network executive sees some radical changes coming by the end of this decade.

The announcement, following a board of directors meeting and completion of the year-end audit, reported a 1970 net loss of $86.3 million, or $7.60 a share, against a 1969 net loss of $32.6 million or $2.90 a share.

Pittenger outlines stands

By JOANNA FIRESTONE
State News Staff Writer

In its spring sessions, the Michigan Legislature has proposed and debated several bills that may be of significance to MSU students.

Ranging from abortion reform and the age of majority to legalization of off-track betting, most of the controversial bills involve moral as well as legal judgments.

Sen. Philip O. Pittenger, R-Lansing, Wednesday explained how he voted on several such bills and revealed how he plans to vote on the proposals the Senate has not yet dealt with.

Abortion

"I voted against the abortion bill in its final form. There were several amendments to the original proposal that I don't know how any conscientious legislator could agree to. For example, the bill (the Senate) sent to the House of Representatives contained no penalty clause for illegally performed abortions. We still must protect women from the dangers of an illegal abortion, and, without a penalty clause, we are in effect powerless to do so.

"Another part of the bill that caused me to vote it down was the phoney residence requirement of 90 days. All a woman has to do is swear that she has been a resident of the state for 90 days. If she has not fulfilled the requirement, the doctor can be held liable."

Off-track Betting

"I can't support off-track betting because I see it causing more problems than it would solve. In effect, it will encourage gambling by making it unnecessary to go to the race tracks to place bets. I further do not feel that the supposed added revenue to be gained by the state will justify the problems that I see forming."

Lottery

"At this time I would support a state lottery. I'm not sure that it would actually work or even solve any problems if implemented, but I'm definitely in favor of at least giving lottery supporters the opportunity to try out the idea."

Age of Majority

"Many senators feel the bill to lower the legal age to 18 was handled a little too fast in the House. Several legal problems have been uncovered by the Senate committee such as the drinking teen-age driver.

"In addition, many legislators and citizens have expressed concern over problems concerning credit cards and installment buying with the age of financial responsibility being lowered to 18. I'm afraid that the longer that this bill is delayed in committee, the more flack and less support it will ultimately receive.

"In most cases, I feel young adults 18 and over are responsible and mature enough to handle the burdens of adulthood. I am not sure, however, that I will be able to support the bill if it includes the drinking provision in its final form."

Appointment of trustees

"I am in favor of appointing trustees because it has been proven at other universities and colleges that appointed trustees tend to function better than elected ones.

"Elected boards are good because they stem from the democratic process, but in most cases, the electorate do not know the candidates or their qualifications.

"If appointed, I feel that there is enough time and effort spent by trustees in a large university such as MSU that perhaps we should consider paying them for their services, at least on a part-time basis."

Curfew ends in Chattanooga

CHATANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Mayor Robert Kirk Walker rescinded a state of civil emergency Wednesday after calm returned to this city which had been beset by racial strife. Lifting of a 7 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew that had been in effect since Saturday opened doors of liquor and beer outlets, restaurants and shopping centers.

The curfew was imposed about 24 hours after the trouble began, when young blacks went on a rampage after a black soul singer refused to appear for a scheduled concert because he was not paid in advance.

Tensions surfaced the next night, black leaders said, because some of those arrested as a result of the Friday night trouble were in no way involved.

National Guardsmen were on the streets for the third straight night, but they were hopeful they could join some of their colleagues who were allowed to go home Wednesday. Day patrolling was called off.

Guard headquarters at Nashville said it preferred not to announce the number of troops released, for security reasons. A spokesman said, however, that the number on duty Wednesday night would match the number on patrol the night before.

Walker said volunteer patrols of unarmed blacks would continue an effort begun Tuesday to keep their neighborhoods cool. Virtually all the incidents were in predominantly black sections.

Walker said it would be impossible to assess the work of the black volunteers, although he said he felt Tuesday night's work had proved to be beneficial.

Guardsmen were kept out of housing project areas except when called.

The number of fire bombings and other incidents dropped with the deployment of guardsmen Monday. Police said there were 24 fire bombings and 15 sniper fire incidents Sunday night, five each Monday night and four fire bombings and the sniper firings Tuesday night.

Congressmen tell NASA to sell earthly successes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressmen are telling the space agency to sell its down-to-earth accomplishments to the public because the taxpayer isn't excited any more about collecting four-billion-year-old rocks from the moon.

"You people are so engrossed in your scientific investigations that you don't really appreciate how important these practical applications are," Rep. Burt L. Talcott, R-Calif., said during hearings on the request of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) for $3.2 billion operating funds in fiscal 1972.

"NASA will not go out and sell for the sake of selling," then-acting administrator George M. Low told the appropriations subcommittee in late-March testimony released Wednesday. "Maybe 'sell' is the wrong term to use," Rep. Robert N. Giaimo, D-Conn., told Low, "but I do think there is a responsibility to inform the public as to what your missions are..."

Rep. J. Edward Roush, D-Ind., said a doctor called his attention to a pump the size of a 50-cent piece used in treating children suffering from hydrocephalus. The pump, Roush said, "was a dramatic thing which was the result of the space program."

Hearing this, Rep. Charles R. Jonas, R-N.C. said: "We have been trying for two days now to get you to put on the record some accomplishments and Mr. Roush comes up with the most dramatic one we have heard anything about..."

"These are the kinds of things we need. I can explain this to anybody in the street and he will say, 'That is great.'"

O'Neil blasts 'tyranny' in U.S. political system

By JEFF SHELTER
State News Staff Writer

Seeking to correct a "tyrannical and perverted political system," State Board of Education member James F. O'Neil asked in a letter to Congress Wednesday to set up a parliamentary system of government in the United States.

"There is an urgent need to correct our tyrannical and perverted political system which permits a person to be elected president on the basis of solemn promises to the people and to continue in this crucial office long after he has defaulted on those promises, violated the Constitution and tyrannized the people of this country and the world," O'Neil said in a "citizen's petition to Congress."

He said a switch to a parliamentary system, similar to that of England and Canada, would offer "the only safeguard to prevent a president" from unilaterally involving the country in a Vietnam-type war.

"Then, if the president violates the Constitution, defaults on his major commitments or tyrannizes the people, an election can be held in a matter of weeks to remove him from office and replace him with someone who will represent the people in accordance with the Constitution," O'Neil said.

He cited former President Lyndon B. Johnson's victory over Sen. Barry M. Goldwater in 1964 as a mandate against escalation of the Vietnam war.

"However, within months after his election Lyndon Johnson started escalating the war in Vietnam and sending American boys by the hundreds of thousands to fight a war in Asia," O'Neil said.

He said President Nixon was elected in 1968 "on the basis of his promise to end the war in Vietnam and to provide us with a generation of peace."

"However, it is difficult to see how the invasion of two more countries and the bombing of five countries is going to end the war and bring peace," O'Neil said.

He said there is "no guarantee" that the winner of the 1972 presidential election will "commit further aggression and tyranny against humanity."

O'Neil sent copies of the petition to leaders of the Senate and House, including Sen. Robert Griffin and Rep. Gerald Ford, both of Michigan.

Bookstore to join cabinet

By MICHAEL FOX
State News Staff Writer

The ASMSU Student Board Tuesday night moved to make Man and Nature Bookstore a part of its cabinet, prompting Diane Rathnow, director of cabinet services, to announce her resignation.

An acclamation approval of the addition of "Title 22: Man and Nature Bookstore" to the ASMSU Operations Code facilitated the bookstore's move to become part of the cabinet. The move will not take effect until Man and Nature, Inc., is dissolved as a nonprofit corporation with the State of Michigan.

Miss Rathnow said the board's action indicated its lack of faith in her ability to effectively manage the cabinet.

ASMSU representatives and others associated with the cabinet were attempting to persuade Miss Rathnow to retain her position Wednesday, but it appeared unlikely that she would reconsider.

Title 22 failed by a tie vote when it was first voted on in a roll call vote. Off-campus representatives apparently led by Kevin Harty, board vice chairman, were conspicuous in their support for the operations code addition, which was being sought by the bookstore.

Bookstore representatives, including Elizabeth Linhart, Man and Nature manager, said they needed the guarantees provided in Title 22 to insure their operation.

The operations code addition calls for all bookstore financial matters to be handled through the ASMSU Business Office and for the bookstore's current off-campus bank account with East Lansing State Bank to be closed and not operated.

A Man and Nature Bookstore advisory committee, established by mutual consent of the bookstore director and both the director of cabinet services and the ASMSU board, also was included in the title addition. The director of the bookstore also will be recommended for appointment by the bookstore staff with the advice and consent of the director of cabinet services and the ASMSU board.

Thirty-days' notice is to be given the bookstore director prior to any changes in Title 22 under the new title.

Following almost two hours of argument the majority of the bookstore representatives stormed out of the meeting. Among the bookstore supporters who had attended to vocalize Man and Nature's cause were two former ASMSU members.

An hour of relatively quiet debate followed with Mary Jane Brininstool, a Man and Nature staff member, voicing a desire to see the board pass the proposed title. Dwight Newell, off-campus ASMSU representative; Steven Landrum, Akers-Fee district representative, and Cullen Hunt, Brody district representative, quieted the split board in its discussions over the bookstore.

The title was finally approved by acclamation.

Both Harold Buckner, ASMSU chairman, and Mrs. Linhart said Wednesday that they felt Title 22 should effectively establish the bookstore's relationship with the board. Buckner said it provides a chain of command so that suggestions on improving the bookstore can be properly handled.

"I think the nine-nine deadlock indicated that the board was concerned with more than the theoretical structure of the bookstore," Buckner said. Buckner praised the board for not walking out and dissolving their quorum, but instead facing the need for a decision. He added that if Miss Rathnow resigns, a replacement could not be found until fall term.

Procedure calls for 10 class days of open petitioning for the position with the board, then electing the director of cabinet services. There are not 10 class days left this term, nor will the board have the necessary full membership during summer term, Buckner said.

"There isn't any reason why Title 22 shouldn't make a really effective bookstore. We would like to hear constructive suggestions if they will help this place grow," Mrs. Linhart said.

All in favor . . .

Ex-ASMSU Cabinet President Robert Grossfeld argues in favor of making the Man and Nature Bookstore part of the ASMSU Cabinet. Elizabeth Linhart, manager of the bookstore, and Rick Kibbey, East Lansing senior, listen to the dialog at Tuesday's meeting. The board resolved to include the bookstore as part of the ASMSU Cabinet.

BY COMMON CAUSE

Lobbying tactics revised

WASHINGTON (AP) — Common Cause, the self-styled citizens' lobby, is formulating a new concept on the art of lobbying on the theory that people should speak for themselves. In its relatively short existence Common Cause has aroused some of the people back home to pressure lawmakers here and claims it is proving a fair match to the wine-and-dine, arm-twisting-and-cajole tradition of Washington special-interest lobbyists.

How does Common Cause reach its members, the farmer in Iowa or the housewife in Arkansas? "We call her up on the phone," answers Tom Mathews, Common Cause's public relations chief.

"And that housewife in Little Rock really responds," she calls her congressman, he said, or sends him a letter or telegram, than asks her friends and neighbors to do the same.

FBI agents reported monitoring hearing

DETROIT (UPI) — A group of young people charged Wednesday at a hearing that three FBI agents were "surveying" the public hearings into Michigan Bell Telephone Co.'s request for a $59.7 million rate increase.

A bearded youth wearing a blue denim jacket and trousers and a "Bust Bell" button stood up shortly before testimony began and told the crowd: "I want to point out that there are three FBI agents surveying this hearing."

The young man, who said his name is "not important" but said he was a member of Youth Against War and Facism (YAWF), pointed to the back of the semicircular chamber. Two girls standing next to three seated men shouted, "Here they are." "You can't even attend a public hearing anymore without being under surveillance," the young man said.

The three men he pointed to refused to identify themselves to a reporter and declined to say whether they were FBI agents. "I'm a telephone user," one of them said. "Yes, he uses everybody's telephone," Debbie Dunfield, one of the girls who pointed the three out, said.

The chain reaction can generate a flood of voter sentiment aimed at selected congressmen or the Congress in general.

The spotlight is on an individual legislator's response to the issue, making it difficult for him to evade a stand or hope an unpopular vote will be forgotten by election time.

Common Cause was formed last August by John W. Gardner, a Republican and former secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Johnson administration.

It claims 160,000 members in all 50 states.

One element of Common Cause's appeal is what it regards as a latent responsiveness in citizens who are dissatisfied but don't know what to do. "Everybody's organized but the people," goes Common Cause's primary membership appeal.

"Many people today recognize that national priorities must be changed," Gardner says in a pamphlet sent to prospective members, "but they don't know how to go about it."

"The first thing Common Cause will do is to assist you to speak and act in behalf of legislation designed to solve the nation's problems."

Which leads to a second element of Common Cause — an attack built around precise how-to-do-it instructions instead of vague exhortations.

For example, Common Cause's special antiwar television show, currently being shown across the country, is part of a package which leans heavily on membership participation.

Members were notified before the broadcast that the show was coming up and asked to gather five or six friends and neighbors to watch it with them.

The kit outlines the specific steps to be urged on the congressmen, the legislation or resolutions to be backed and arguments in their favor.

Hearing delayed on Greeks' suit

A spokesman for the All-University Student Judiciary (AUSJ) said Wednesday that the student justices would not hold a hearing until at least fall term on a suit by Interfraternity Council (IFC) against the ASMSU Student Board and Off-Campus Council (OCC).

The IFC suit contends the Greeks are unfairly denied voting representation on the board, as they are excluded from membership in OCC. Residence Halls Assn. and OCC have special interest voting rights on the ASMSU board.

The AUSJ spokesman said the case would be discussed informally by the judiciary in a meeting this term between the groups involved. If no agreement is reached, AUSJ will probably put the case on its docket for fall term, he said.

IFC had voting representation on the ASMSU board until last spring when a new constitution disenfranchised the group.

We tripped, we stumbled and we fell. Yes, kiddies, it's time once more for frustration, discontent and activist rhetoric to give way to the sun, work and play of the summer of benign neglect...

Dear God: We thank you for allowing our wars to be fought on the other side of the world. Our children, then, do not have to experience the atrocious disaster that our brothers must fight. And we do not have to smell the putrid stench of dead bodies and see the blood and guts of the dead and dying.

Bless us and make us strong so that those of us who will experience the light hearted bigotry of this summer's work companions can restrain from vomiting.

And, oh yes, help our minority brothers and sisters to quietly tolerate the stench-ridden, rat-infested ghettos of our land so that we can all rest in comfort, without reminders of the contradictions in our society...

Stop! Stop! Better benign neglect than benign guilt. So true, "I can't do anything about it. Gotta wait for the man. He's got the money." Maybe...

"Maybe not!" said the wounded soldier to the starving black man. Life is getting to be such a struggle. "So true, we haven't got the wherewithal to do anything about it. The man is too big to see us."

"Power to the people!" said the cliché-er to the cliché-ee. We must seize the it together must determine whether you can find the motivation and the confidence to respond to this opinion.

Respond?? Who said that? To what? Glad you asked. The Michigan Youth Politics Institute (MYPI), is willing to help you find the missing ingredients - direction, information, confidence and competence.

The institute has assumed a direction. It is aiming to mobilize concerned individuals willing to utilize the political system to initiate reform. It is compiling information on Michigan's politics and problems. The kind of information a person needs to act with confidence in effectively attacking the problems. Having done this, we will have developed the competence to act with formidable authority.

This is on the level, people. The institute has an established legal staff and has the formal endorsement of concerned individuals from the U.S. Congress, the state House and Senate, labor unions, the State Board of Education, industry and universities.

MYPI is designed as a prototype that, if successful here, may spread nationally. The overall concept, analogous to the "Nader's Raiders" of politics, is designed to bring both public awareness and direct action.

government. So true, then we can throw the scoundrels out and put "the People" in power. The man has all the power. Maybe next spring term...

"This is some shit!" said Joe College to his benignly neglected conscience. "I know the problems must be dealt with, but what can I do?" So true, we've tried all the simple, risky crap and we have no tangible result. The man never gets tired of coming down... Whimper.

Sit up straight and ready yourself. Here it comes. Just the solution to match the problem. Struggle, struggle, struggle.

You, the reader, is it bad enough to make you do something about it? Talking about that big word now - commitment. In case you missed that let's say it again - COMMITMENT.

If you can't dig it yet, give up. This may prove to be too much of a mental exercise.

Why haven't more people, like you, for example, chosen to transform their concern into action? Let's throw out some big words: direction, motivation, competence, confidence, information. Do any of these hit home? Note how each of the words is dependent on the others.

Perhaps these are the sorts of things we are all striving to "get together." I suppose the degree to which you've managed to put MYPI is designed as a prototype that, if successful here, may spread nationally. The overall concept, analogous to the "Nader's Raiders" of politics, is designed to bring about both public awareness and direct action.

If the institute is to succeed it needs many dedicated volunteers. Specifically, we need people who will do research on the problems and politics in the area of their summer residence.

If you've managed to read this far perhaps you would be willing to give the program a chance to sell itself.

You can give the institute that chance by attending one of the workshops today at 7:30 p.m. in 106 Holden Hall or at 8 p.m. in Brody auditorium.

The workshops will deal in depth with the methods of research to be conducted. You can get more information by stopping into the MNC office in 44 Student Services Bldg. or by calling 353-5027.

The activities we have planned for the summer will require a few hours of commitment per week. The benefits that may be reaped are potentially great. Curious? Attend one of the workshops or drop by the office - but remember nothing worthwhile ever came easy.

Carolina ruling inhibits freedom of expression

Wearing long hair simply for the sake of having long hair is no longer a right, according to a federal court in Columbia, S.C. In a recent ruling, the Carolina court indicated that society is still capable of modifying the law to reinforce cultural norms.

Last week District Court Judge Robert W. Hemphill ruled against two youths filing suit against Lexington County High School. He stated that the activities of the plaintiffs did not indicate that their lengthy locks "were expressions of political or social thought." The judge said that such a contention would have raised the legal point of whether they would be entitled to protection under the First Amendment's guarantee of free speech - vocal or implied. But because the two youths wore their hair "to do as (they) please" and not to register a blatantly social complaint, they were forced to cut it.

Judge Hemphill's reasoning suggests that the outward appearances of individual members of society do not necessarily reflect social commentary. However, social scientists tell us that this assumption is unequivocally false; without exception every individual is influenced to some degree by the culture to which he is exposed. In adopting a part of that culture, the individual is commenting as much on society as he would in rejecting it. Yet, the judge clearly feels that social thought is only a one-way street. In doing so, he has rather strangely discriminated against the individual who accepts society for the most part but wears long hair.

More importantly, the South Carolina ruling implies that freedom of expression (implied speech) means freedom of social and political thought only. Had he considered that freedom encompass all thought, then the high school boys would not have been forced to cut their hair in compliance with the high school dress code. The mere fact that they wore their hair long to "do as I please" expresses a conscious vanity to which the judge feels they have no right.

At the base of the hair controversy is the more important question of whether society has the right to standardize appearance - "to make men look like men." In the opinion of the Supreme Court, society does not, because such restrictions violate the citizens' right to safely express himself.

However, with rulings such as Judge Hemphill's, the legal tolerance generated by the Constitution is subjugated to the more banal egocentrism of the norm.

Special interest vote not presently equitable Special interest groups now hold four of the 18 seats on the ASMSU Student Board. Along with the district representatives, two representatives from the Office of Black Affairs (OBA) and one each from Off-Campus Council (OCC) and Residence Halls Assn. (RHA) give individuals associated with these three groups, in effect, double representation.

On the other hand, however, residents of fraternities, sororities and cooperatives are left off the special interest group gravy train. Members of these groups are not represented by OCC, RHA, or to any great extent, by OBA. While Section 1.4 of the Academic Freedom Report guarantees fair treatment to all members of the University community, the structure of the ASMSU Student Board has disenfranchised a segment of that community from its patch work of dual representation.

One possible solution to this inconsistency would be to give interest groups such as Intrafraternity Council, Panhellenic Council and Intercooperative Council a vote on the student board. But such a system might recreate the lopsided representation of the ASMSU of two years ago, when interest groups were on virtual parity with the representatives of the student body as a whole.

The logical answer would probably be to make all special interest groups ex officio members rather than voting members on the student board. In this way, special interest groups would still have an input in student government and every student would be guaranteed equal representation through his district representative. Voting power should be exercised by the duly elected representatives of the students, not by the representatives of lobby groups.

Seale case: unanswered

Can political dissidents obtain a fair trial in modern America? The establishment has consistently answered with a resounding "yes," while the Black Panther party and others have steadfastly rejected this claim. The outcome of the Bobby Seale - Ericka Huggins trial has done little to dissipate the pall overhanging this issue.

To be sure Mrs. Huggins and Seale have been freed - though not because they had been "fairly" found innocent, but because of legal and social quirks. The only thing that is known for sure is that Superior Court Judge Harold M. Mulvey was correct when he ruled that it would be impossible to select a second, unbiased jury. In New York the Panther 13 were acquitted of all charges. However, though innocent, most of the 13 were forced to spend many months in jail during the duration of their trial. Seale and Mrs. Huggins, now free, were made to suffer similar, possibly unjust, imprisonment. Has justice been served here?

The question of fair trials for dissidents has yet to be answered adequately. What is clear, however, is that the bureaucratic system of this nation's judiciary, with its glacier-slow procedures, is in direct contradiction to the ideal of justice through a "speedy and public trial."

Greeks must change attitudes

For the past several years, the "Greeks are dead - Greeks are alive" argument has been tossed around between both Greek and non-Greek groups with little progress on either side.

Greek Week is over, and the week of fun and frolic designed to bring the two warring factions together has created a deeper rift than ever before.

Stories are flitting across the campus about house hatreds, status-conscious houses, numerous snubs and several cases of physical violence between Greek houses. . . and the sad news about many of these stories is that they are true.

Now, with another rush only one summer vacation away, the Greeks must face even larger handicaps than they faced before Greek Week - they must eradicate the faults that were so apparent to the whole campus, and they must also dispel the ideas collected by the campus population who watched closely during the week that was supposed to bring everyone a little closer.

Within their individual groups and houses, Greeks are very much alive, but in reference to the campus and what's going on in the University they are very much out of touch and the situation seems to deteriorate as time passes.

Their aloofness can be attributed in many cases to physical distance from the campus. Isolated groups tend to develop within themselves into self-sufficient units instead of turning to other groups and people.

Because of this turning inward, which may be due to pressures within faltering houses, Greeks recently have begun to develop noticeable characteristics, which were almost glaring during Greek Week.

The characteristics aren't physical; they show up in attitude and in conversation. The Greeks can be identified by an almost teenybopper - like defensive attitude and paranoid fear of comment or criticism.

In ordinary groups (not to say that this campus is ordinary) public criticism and comment is welcomed because it is free publicity. It gives an opportunity to explain beliefs and actions, but in the past any criticism offered by writers or any other source is met by a yelp of pain and whispered murmurs of "We have our rights, it's unfair."

Despite all the propaganda to the contrary, Greeks are a small minority on this campus, but nevertheless a very vocal one. Many of the campus political leaders are Greek, but this active group cannot save the system if the rest of the campus believes that all Greeks are rich, high status slob.

Many houses have changed drastically and worked toward becoming more responsive toward feelings on campus, but many more houses simply stay back - chapter meetings, taking care of house affairs, bemoaning anti-Greek sentiment and planning for rush once a term.

If Greeks are to survive, they're going to have to live in the same place as the people whom they are rushing, meaning the residence halls. It's a strange suggestion considering the beautiful and heavily mortgaged houses scattered from M.A.C. Harrison Avenues, the houses that are supposed to be a pleasant alternative dorm life.

Not that Greeks should pack up the whole house and move back into the dorms, but in order to survive, the Greek houses should put their most active activities inside the rush situation all year. Residents not three weeks out of the year. Residence hall residents have to get to know Greek steadily, not through a handshake at a door at rush. Now, most opinions formed entirely on the basis of gossip because few people know very many Greeks at all.

Residence hall floors and groups establish as tightly-knit groups as Greek houses. . . but residence hall floors do rush.

People must learn to understand the Greek system and the people in the system before any attitudes will be changed. The Greeks who must give in, take the steps forward and change because they want the people - it's not the other way around.

OUR READERS' MIND

Full-time army vs. part-time crew

To the Editor: And so when Joan told us at Woodstock (either there or in the movie, or record) that her husband David had gotten a good hunger strike going in prison we all clapped and were really happy. Then she sang an organizing song. We liked it. It got to us.

Late last year we decided that a student-worker alliance would be the way. Lets work with the people.

Well, here we sit and it's really a beautiful day out and we walk by the river and think about this or that guy or girl sitting in the dorm. Organizing? Lets play tennis.

Now I'm not knocking play. We all like to play. You out there, like to play. Even the Vietnamese probably like to play. Remember the Vietnamese? You heard about them at the last rally. How many rallies?

I guess what I'm saying is that it's about time we started being committed. This means, maybe, putting off grad school for a while. For the women it might mean taking a term off. For the men who can beat out their draft boards, the same thing applies. It's hard to beat a full-time army with a part-time crew.

But what do you do? Riot? Demonstrate? "We can have a bigger and better rally!" No. Maybe the answer is to organize our brothers and sisters to take hold of the system. I could throw all sorts of statistics and figures at you about how many people would be needed to decide almost any Congressional race. But I won't. If you're on another trip, more power to you. If you aren't on any trip, perhaps you ought to find out about the ones available to you. Stop by the Movement for a New Congress office. I can't promise that you'll end all badness next week. I really can't promise you much. But what do we have now?

Minority, 'disadvantaged' student defined

By BILL HOLSTEIN
State News Staff Writer

DOROTHY ARATA

Dorothy Arata, member of the Residential Commission on Admissions and Student Body Composition, expressed concern today that the commission's definitions of "minority student" and "disadvantaged student" have been understood by observers.

Miss Arata said the terms often have been used interchangeably with "high-risk student" and that the commission has found it useful to distinguish "minority student" from who is economically disadvantaged. "Educationally disadvantaged," she said, "refers to individuals who are subject to discrimination or are objects of prejudice from many other people and who possess acceptable academic credentials."

but who come from low-income families and have been inadequately represented in institutions of higher learning, she said.

Miss Arata said the term "educationally disadvantaged" is probably the most controversial category because it refers to students who have "academic potential, but who have been unable to realize that potential without special assistance because of their economic, cultural or educational background or environment." The controversy and confusion which center on the definitions themselves are part of a larger controversy concerning admission standards, financial aids and supportive services, Miss Arata said.

"Minority students will, for the most part, be able to gain admission to the University under existing admission criteria," she said. "There are minority students who have an educational or economic disadvantage. But the preponderant majority are academically able."

Miss Arata said that in 1968, 10 per cent of black students admitted to the University were "special admissions," indicating that only a small percentage of minority students do not have acceptable academic credentials. Miss Arata said the economically disadvantaged come into the University under a regular admission criteria pending the University's ability to provide financial assistance. She said this category is "meant to focus on poor people" most of whom are white.

What distinguishes the educationally disadvantaged student — and makes them more controversial — from the other two categories is that "the responsibility of the University to the educationally disadvantaged student does not end with the process of admittance."

"We are not trying to establish some sort of revolving door program," she continued.

To the educationally disadvantaged student who is admitted, the University has a responsibility to "provide academic assistance to help him complete a course of study here" and secondly "to develop a sophisticated supportive network expressly designed to develop skills in reading, writing and computation," Miss Arata said.

She said these students are often three years behind the normal student in their academic skills.

Miss Arata said the University's present supportive service system is "very good but inadequate." "Those (services) that are here are fine but they can't meet the demand," she said. "What they're doing is fine, but it doesn't meet the magnitude of the problem."

She said a much wider system of tutorial academic assistance programs is needed in specific departments in relation to specific courses.

She specifically referred to Project TAC, an experimental program of "Tutorial Assistance in Chemistry," as a model for these programs.

She said that allowing educationally disadvantaged students to take courses without developing sufficient academic skills is an inadequate solution.

Miss Arata said the University should help the educationally disadvantaged "achieve a level of competence with the kids that come in under a regular admission basis."

She said courses of "questionable academic worth" may simply provide a mass of credits without enabling a student to succeed in required courses.

Miss Arata said the commission is pressing the University to recognize the potential of the educationally disadvantaged student and allow it to "flower."

"It takes a lot of money. But I think the end result would be worth it," she said.

LEGISLATION TO REMOVE "the life and death power of Blue Cross - Blue Shield over Michigan hospitals" was introduced to the Michigan Senate Wednesday.

Sen. James D. Gray, D - Warren, charged that the "blues" are doing a disservice to their subscribers by refusing to contract with many good hospitals in the state.

The bill introduced by Gray would require Blue Cross to contract with all licensed hospitals in Michigan.

Other bills introduced to the Senate would lift Blue Cross - Blue Shield's exemption from corporation franchise taxes and repeal a provision by which hospital service corporations such as Blue Cross were declared to be charitable and benevolent institutions exempt from taxation.

New Players slate musical production

"Irma la Douce," a musical comedy of the back streets of Paris, will be presented by the University New Players at 8:30 p.m. today in the Union Ballroom.

Although the love of Irma la Douce, a lady of the evening, and Nestor le Fripe, a poor law student, is true and sincere, the nature of Irma's profession is the cause of uncontrollable jealousy in Nestor.

Irma and Nestor will be portrayed by Connie Diekmeyer of East Lansing and Timothy B. Staton, Dearborn senior, respectively.

"Irma La Douce," director by Katherine Hewett, will be the final production of the New Players' season. The play also will be presented at 8:30 p.m. Friday and at 7 and 10 p.m. Saturday in the Union Ballroom.

Volunteers seek van to assist in projects

The MSU Volunteer Action Corps, a division of the Volunteer Bureau, is looking for someone to donate a van to use in their work, Judy Sorum, asst. director of the Volunteer Bureau, said Wednesday.

The group has 88 members who do short-term work such as painting houses, building ramps for people in wheel chairs who cannot afford a carpenter, babysitting for children whose parents are ill and cleaning house for the elderly and sick.

The van is needed to transport people in wheel chairs and materials needed to carry out their work.

The volunteers have put in more than 1,000 man hours since September, Mrs. Sorum said.

"If you multiply that by $2 an hour you see that these students have donated thousands of dollars worth of service to the community," she said.

Tourney starts today; Spartans face Cincy

By JOHN VIGES
State News Sports Writer

The road to Omaha, Neb. has its origin in East Lansing. MSU hopes that it will not be dethroned by Cincinnati.

The Spartans (36 - 8) and Cincinnati Bearcats (24 - 16) meet in the opening game for each in the District 4 playoffs, today at 4 p.m. on John Kobs Field.

Southern Illinois (36 - 6) and Ohio University (29 - 5) open the six game tournament at 1 p.m. The winners of each game will meet Friday at 1 p.m. with the losers facing each other in a morning contest at 10 a.m.

Radio Station WKAR will broadcast all MSU games and it will also air the championship game, Saturday, no matter who plays.

It will be interesting to note any clashes between experienced tournament teams SIU and Ohio University and the two squads relatively unused to tournament play, MSU and Cincinnati. The luck of the draw prevented this in first round play, however.

The Spartans have waited a long time since their last District tournament. Seventeen years have gone by since John Kobs led MSU to a district victory and a third place in national action.

Cincinnati has seen district play three times. In contrast, Ohio and SIU have been in district competition seven and five times respectively and each played in last season's tournament, Ohio advancing to the national tourney.

MSU's opening opponent, Cincinnati, may appear to be the poorest team in the tournament, but look again. The 24 - 16 record is not overly impressive but the Bearcats have earned their record in the late season after starting out 2 - 7.

Second baseman Jim Eaton paces Cincinnati's hitting attack with a .359 average. Eaton stepped into the second base spot after Bob Stoll fell below .200 and has since been a consistent hitter for Coach Glenn Sample.

ROB CLANCY

The Bearcats have five other batters over the .300 mark. Tom Schaefer, Cincinnati's first sacker, is the top power hitter on the team. His six home runs and 31 RBI's pace the team.

Pitching for Cincinnati has been consistent, their main starters all carry earned run averages between 2.25 and 3.10.

Dan Walton and Terry Cadle, both right handers, have the best records, 7 - 3 and 6 - 2, and one of the two will start against MSU.

Chuck Posten has been the Bearcat's top man in relief and is the only left hander that has seen a good deal of action. Posten has won one game and saved two others in his eight appearances and holds a 0.63 ERA.

The contest between SIU and Ohio will be the classic of a strong hitting team versus extraordinary pitching.

The Salukis' of SIU have six hitters over the .300 mark and a team average of .321.

Ohio University carries five pitchers with less than a 2.00 ERA and they have held opposing hitters to a .209 batting average.

Lest Ohio be thought to be without hitting, the Mid-American Conference champions have five batters over the .300 mark, the highest average being .372.

SIU will have the hottest batter in the tournament, center fielder Jim Dwyer. The battle between him and Spartan Rob Ellis could be a classic if the Spartans run up against the Salukis.

Dwyer is batting .415 to .407 for the Spartan slugger. Dwyer holds the edge in doubles and triples with 27 to Ellis's 16 but Ellis is either the stronger of the two or Dwyer has to play in a park with long fences because Ellis has 14 round trippers to Dwyer's three.

Second baseman Duane Kuiper and third sacker Make Eden are the other top offensive threats for SIU. Kuiper is a player along the lines of MSU's Ron DeLonge, a consistent line drive hitter, and he carries a .387 average into the tournament. Eden is batting .370 for the season.

Although the earned run averages are not outstanding for SIU the records are. Dick Langdon, Steve Randall and Jim Rischer are 9 - 1, 8 - 1 and 7 - 1 respectively.

MSU will begin the tournament by pitching a pair with impressive records of their own.

Rob Clancy seeks a new school record for season wins when he takes the hill against the Bearcats today. Clancy won nine straight games and added the win that clinched the conference championship for a 10 - 1 season mark.

The Pontiac southpaw will try to get MSU into the semi-finals where Larry Ike will take over. Ike started the season slowly but has been very strong lately. The Big Rapids sophomore has won his last eight games, giving up only five runs in his last four starts.

Spartan Coach Danny Litwhiler will see how the situation unfolds before he makes a decision on who will pitch the third game for MSU. The likely candidates, Kirk Maas and Dave Leisman, could be used in relief or saved for starting roles. Brad Van Pelt is also available for relief along with Brian Lieckfelt and Dave Bewley.

Big Red Machine?

Cassleman has potential to rewrite 'S' record book

By DON KOPRIVA
State News Sports Writer

He's only a freshman, but after that, you can throw out any preconceived notions about Bob Cassleman.

The Grand Rapids native is not the greatest middle distance man in MSU history — yet. But if he continues in the next three years as he's one in his first, then watch out, record book, because the changes will be fast and frequent, and Bob Cassleman will be at the root of them all.

Already the Big Ten champion at 600 yards in this year's indoor meet, Cassleman was also the chief architect of the Spartans' 3:12.9 mile relay effort which netted them a one-then second Big Ten win over Illinois and a U.S. indoor mark.

But soon after that he was sick with mononucleosis, and performance at the NCAA, which placed him sixth, was subpar for him. He's come on strong outdoors though, after a few weeks of "experimenting" with the 440 intermediates.

And now he's slated to run the 660 in the conference meet, with a strong chance that he'll be going up against Mark Winzenried of Wisconsin, two-time champion and American record holder in the odd event which is run only in the Big Ten.

"It's kind of like going into a knife fight," Cassleman said, "but maybe without the knife. But the 660 is kind of a decent race, except that it's a nowhere event."

The 660 is not contested in the NCAA meet, so Cassleman will likely be switched to the 440 for the Central Collegiate and national championship meets.

Cassleman said he's been pretty well satisfied with his outdoor season, even the time spent working on the intermediate hurdles, where Spartan assistant coach Jim Gibbard hasn't given up on his potential and will work with Cassleman next year.

"I don't think I've really fulfilled myself outdoors yet," he said. "I'm waiting for the next three meets. Running 46 something on the mile relay satisfied me only in that I was expecting it to come."

"The intermediates were kind of a disappointment," Cassleman said. "But if I hadn't been sick and had worked sooner on them, that would have been better."

As it was, his 53.8 clocking the race against Purdue gave him the MSU freshman record in the event.

Cassleman, publicized as much through his first year as He Washington was a couple seasons back, has been compared many times — in his style of running his build, his "reckless abandon" when running from behind — former MSU national champion Bill Wehrwein.

"It was kind of neat as a freshman to be compared to great runner," Cassleman noted, "but I really don't like being compared to other people. We individuals."

But Cassleman is much the same as Wehrwein in what he's done in the 600. He has helped make that middle distance one which is recognized, and of which now has two Spartans listed in the top five on all-time best performances list. And an individual Bob Cassleman definitely is, but he probably also, as Gibbard put it, "one of the top freshmen in the country, one who's done just sensational job for us this year."

As such, Cassleman will likely remain an individual, not a face in the crowd, because he's got three years to go, and bigger and better things waiting.

FOR HIRING TEACHERS

Board weighing criteria

(continued from page one) but added that he did not think the board's proposal would go far enough. "The State Board of Education has not addressed itself to the elimination of the temporary teaching permit evil," he said. "Qualified teachers are available," he said. "We can only conclude that a school district which cannot find qualified teachers has failed to look for them, or is unwilling to pay the price for a quality instructional staff," Lesure said.

POLICE BRIEFS

A 21-YEAR-OLD Brooklyn N.Y., man is free this week after pleading guilty Wednesday to charges that he was selling magazines without a permit in an East Lansing apartment house. Vladimir Salon was released from District Court after he paid a $25 fine and $14 in court costs. East Lansing officers arrested him Tuesday at 619 Oak St. after an apartment resident told police Salon tried to sell a magazine subscription to him.

COUNTY PROSECUTORS are expected to issue a complaint and warrant this week against a 22-year-old Westphalia man who was arrested Tuesday evening after an East Lansing officer saw a billy club protruding from under the left front seat in the man's automobile. The officer said he saw the club when he approached the man's vehicle parked in a lot off Beech Street. The officer added he went to the automobile because his license plate looked suspicious. The man was released until prosecutors take action.

A 32-YEAR-OLD MSU student living in East Lansing also faces prosecution this week on charges of stealing beverage bottles from the basement of the Student Services Building. A building employee told police that he saw the man take the bottles at about 6:05 a.m. Wednesday. Police said they apprehended him as he was leaving through a west door. The student was released at the scene.

A UNIVERSITY-OWNED typewriter and dictaphone valued at $915, a purse and wallet valued at $6, $5 in cash and a 1964 Ford valued at $75 were reported as stolen to police Tuesday from student rooms, from a Linton Hall office and from in front of a Spartan Village apartment.

Prof to show slides on Jewish caricature

"Jewish Caricature in American Popular Graphics, 1830-1960" will be the subject of a slide talk given by John J. Appel, professor of American thought and language and in James Madison College, at 8:30 p.m. today in 34 Union. The lecture is the fourth in a series sponsored by Congregation Kehillat Israel, a newly formed Jewish group. Cartoons will include political material from the age of Jackson, the "Gilded Age" when antisemitism as social discrimination began in earnest in this country and the ethnic humor of the 1920s. Appel spent a year at the Smithsonian Institute from 1969 to 1970 collecting and interpreting data for this presentation.
