Russians accuse Red China of trampling upon minorities

Monday, August 9, 1971

MOSCOW (AP)- The Soviet Union accused Peking Sunday of trampling on its non- Chinese minorities.

The bitter attack on China, published in Sovietskaya Rossiya (Soviet Russia), an official Communist party newspaper, was coupled with denunciations of Peking in Pravda and Red Star, the Soviet army organ. The campaign to discredit the Chinese was thought to be aimed as much at Russia's East European allies as at the Soviet readers of the three newspapers.

Communist sources here make no attempt to disguise what they describe as the Kremlin's mounting impatience with Romania's independent foreign policy course, especially where it concerns Bucharest's insistence on developing close relations with China in the face of Soviet disapproval.

By having China depicted as an internally repressive state and an unprinicpled practitioner of "leftwing opportunism" abroad, the Soviet leaders probably hope to damage in the eyes of their allies any moral justification Romania may have for pursuing its honeymoon with Peking, Western analysts conclude.

Communist sources say it is difficult to exaggerate the Kremlin's present feeling that the Warsaw Pact countries must conduct identical foreign policies. Worried about the unknown consequences of President Nixon's decision to visit Peking, soviet policymakers are thought to be unwilling to permit evidence of division within their East European empire.

The tone of the Sovietskaya Rossiya article was set by its headline, which read: "Under the Yoke of Great-Power Chauvinism."

The article accused the Chinese of repressing non-Chinese nationalities through administrative reorganization, arrests, torture and army occupation.

As evidence of what the paper called a systematic Chinese policy, it cited a recent redistricting of Inner Mongolia which stripped from the jurisdiction of the autonomous Mongolian regions three districts with Mongolian majorities and placed them under the authorities of Chinese-dominated Kansu Province.

In addition, the article said, minority leadership posts and are being replaced by Chinese.

"Before the cultural revolution there were 40 Mongols on the supreme party and administrative organs of Inner Mongolia, while now there is only one Mongol on the so-called revolutionary committee . . . All key posts are in the hands of the Chinese.

"All elements of the Mongolian peoples are being removed from intelligentsia, social leaders and religious figures have been listed as black elements" by the Chinese, the newspaper said.

"Chinese troops arrested and tortured teachers accused of local nationalism. They imprison writers . . .," the article added.

The same situation prevails in Manchuria, Tibet, Hainan and elsewhere, it charged.

The paper said this "is one of the manifestations of Peking's great-Khan

Gromyko's visit to India called mission for peace

NEW DELHI (AP) - Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, on an apparent diplomatic mission to try to prevent a war between India and Pakistan, arrived here Sunday for talks he said he hoped would lead to "the consolidation of peace in Asia and throughout the world." Indian officials described Gromyko's trip, expected to last about five days, as a "visit of peace meant to deter people like Pakistani President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan from making threats of war against India."

In a four - sentence arrival statement read in halting English, Gromyko did not mention the East Pakistan crisis or the deteriorating relations between India and Pakistan, which were believed to have prompted his sudden journey to the subcontinent.

But an Indian spokesman said the East Pakistan issue came up briefly in a 65 - minute preliminary meeting Gromyko had with Foreign Minister Swaran Singh soon after his arrival from Moscow.

The spokesman said the issue also would come up again in talks Gromyko will have with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi on Monday and Foreign Ministry officials for the next three days.

Gromyko's 12 - member party includes A.A. Fomin, head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's South Asian Division and considered an expert on India -Pakistan affairs.

Gromyko's visit comes at a time when Indian - American relations are very strained because of continued U.S. arms shipments to Pakistan and what is officially described here as "the prestige being used at the highest levels of the State Department and White House to shore up and back up the Pakistan

India has said the arms shipments amount to a "condonation of genocide" by Pakistani army troops seeking to quell the independence movement by East Pakistanis trying to establish a new nation of Bangla Desh Bengali state in their province.

India has openly sympathized with the Bangla Desh movement.

Foreign Secretary T.N. Kaul, talking briefly to newsmen at the airport, denied that any new, formal protest had been delivered to the U.S. government in the arms issue, as reported in some Indian papers. The last announced protest note was given to the United States June 27.

But Kaul said India is "continually conveying" its concern about the arms shipments to the U.S. government.

With Gromyko's final itinerary still not announced, there was no indication whether he might be in New Delhi at the same time as Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who is due here Saturday after visits to East Pakistani refugee camps in the Calcutta area and a two - day trip

Such cooperation, he added, corresponded "to the interests of the consolidation of peace in Asia and throughout the world."

Indian Foreign Minister Swaran Singh. in welcoming Gromyko, said among the issues to be discussed in this week's talks would be the "peace and security of our part of the world." Nearly 1,000 supporters of Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party and the Communist party of India traveled in buses to the airport to cheer the Soviet foreign minister.

At the time of the construction of the new plant, East Lansing also expanded its drainage interceptor system to include many drains on campus and in surrounding communities which previously carried untreated wastes

"Too many people have just assumed that the Red Cedar River is a mess that nobody has been doing anything about, Ball said. "In fact, somebody has been doing something about it over a period of years."

Further improvements in sewage treatment can be expected from Williamston, which is presently constructing a new plant, and East Lansing, which has submitted a proposal to the Water Resources Commission for construction of an addition to the present plant which will both improve the quality of the water treatment and double the capacity of the plant.

Although East Lansing constructed its present plant less than a decade ago, it is presently overloaded.

Kevern said the Red Cedar River can be said to be in relatively good shape for a river in an urbanized area.

"Relative to warm water rivers in less developed areas, it could still stand a lot of improvement," he said.

Kevern said evidence concerning the quality of water in the river can be obtained by determining what types of fish are thriving in it. In the Red Cedar, research teams recently caught Northern Pike and Rock Bass in the stretch of the river near the Brody Complex.

These, and other game fish, cannot thrive in heavily polluted water. Ball said graduate students have captured 56 different varieties of fish including small-mouth and large-mouth bass, yellow perch, goldfish and bullheads — in the Red Cedar.

British troops skirmished with rioters and snipers in Belfast, Northern Ireland's capital, until dawn Sunday as roaming mobs protested the killing of a truck driver by soldiers.

Lake slick breaks up

U.S. Coast Guard officials said Sunday an oil slick on Lake Huron which at one time measured 1½ miles wide had "pretty well broken itself up" and no longer posed a threat to the lakeshore.

A spokesman said the slick of heavy crude oil was spotted early Sunday six miles off shore and 18 miles north of Port Huron.

A Coast Guard helicopter dispatched to the scene from Detroit said the slick dissipated to only 50 feet in width by mid - afternoon and was likely to disappear by dusk.

Metric system for U.S. sought

By RAY ANDERSON State News Staff Writer

In an attempt to apply the well - worn aphorism, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," Commerce Secretary Maurice H. Stans suggested to Congress and the nation July 29 that it is time to replace our archaic system of measures with the simpler metric system.

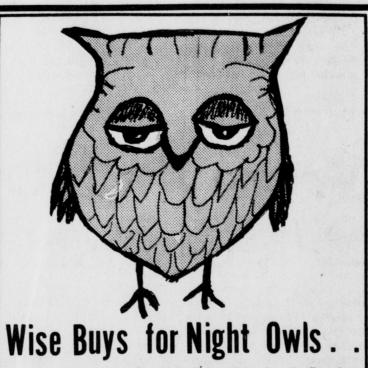

A gram of conversion will bring about a kilogram of cure, is the optimistic conclusion drawn by a 188 - page condensation of a three - year, $2.5 million, 12 - volume study of metric conversion conducted with congressional approval by the National Bureau of Standards.

The proposal would eliminate the nation's dubious honor of being only one of eight "underdeveloped nations" that have not yet moved to adopt the metric system.

It would reduce our more than 70 units of measure to the three fundamental metric measurements: the gram for weight, the liter for volume and the meter for length. All measures are simply divided into units of 10, 100 or 1,000. The prefix "deci" is used for divisions of one - tenth, "centi" for one hundredth, "mili" for one - thousandth and "kilo" for whole measurements of 1,000.

During the study thousands of corporations, educators, consumers and government agencies were canvassed and responded with overwhelming approval of the conversion.

Though congressional approval of the study is not expected independent agency be put in charge of the metric conversion.

This central coordinating body would guide a decade long conversion similar to Britain's program that is presently in its sixth year. The congressionally - established body would assist with the changes and mesh detailed plans and timetables for conversion of various industries. Stans indicated that the nation would not be exclusively metric at the program's close. Costs for the conversion, according to the report, could range from $10 to $40 billion, but the ten - year plan would allow the economy to absorb the cost. Daniel V. DeSimone, director of the metric study, told a news conference recently that metrication could increase exports by $1 to 2 billion, whereas continuing the present system will cost the nation an estimated $600 million by industries. Conversion would require the recalibration of nearly everything from assembly lines to shirt collars, to tools and about $700 million worth of grammar school arithmetic

Hardest hit by the conversion would be small machine

The report recommends that the government absorb part of the conversion cost by accelerating depreciation taxes for machinery and investment tax credits. The final determination would be made by Congress if they decide to approve the Stans pointed to the fact that the conversion cost would be minimal in view of a trillion - dollar economy and, when spread over 10 years, "the cost to the consumer would be unnoticed and immeasurable." The conversion would mean drastic rethinking of established measurements by all Americans. Speed limits would be 120 rather than the present 70, clothing sizes will be altered to metric equivalents, farenheit would turn to centigrade with a freezing point of zero and boiling point of 100. Packages would no longer be labeled with fractions and Muhammed Ali would have a reach of 2 meters ?

The current proposal is not the first attempt at metric conversion. In 1821 the secretary of state suggested that Congress adopt "in all its essential parts, the new French system of weight and measure."

Members of four Lansing area peace and welfare groups met on the steps of the Michigan Capitol Friday in memory of the nuclear bombing of on Aug. 6, 1945. About 50 people, mostly photographers, babies and capitol secretaries, listened to brief speeches by members of the Bangal Desh Defense League, the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice, the Lansing Area Peace Council, the United Farmworkers Organizing Committee and the Michigan Welfare Rights Assn.

"Some pretty terrible things have been done by the U.S. government in the name of the American people,' Marta Nicholas of the Bangal Desh Defense League,

"It is time we got the power back in the hands of the people so that tragedies like the boinbing of Hiroshima don't happen in Pakistan, Southeast Asia or the Middle East."

Four brief speeches were followed by the reading of an antiwar plan and poems.

Following the rally, members of the peace groups met in Lansing Community College's CAS building to discuss plans for "achieving peace and justice in Michigan and the U.S."

Discussion focused on Michigan's participation in the coming national actions called for the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice and the planning of statewide and local strategies.

Veterans stage 50th convention

DETROIT (UPI) - The Disabled American Veterans opened their 50th annual convention in Detroit Sunday in an atmosphere far different than when they began their first convention in the Motor City.

Half a century ago, the organizing convention was angered over a suspected slight from then Detroit Mayor James Couzens. The mayor had a bad toothache at just the time he was scheduled to welcome the visitors, and went off to a 90 - minute session with the dentist.

He sent his deputy police commissioner, George Walters, in his place, but Judge Robert S. Marx, of Cincinnati, the first national commander, refused to let Walters speak to the convention and threatened to denounce the mayor in public unless the mayor appeared forthwith.

Couzens took offense and refused to appear before the Later, however, the two men made up and became good

The first working session is today with a keynote speech by U.S. Sen. Vance Hartke, D.Ind., chairman of the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee. William John Gobert, a Blackfoot Indian and a disabled veteran of the Vietnam war, was scheduled to receive the award as the outstanding disabled American veteran of the year. EDITORIALS America's nondraft: does anybody care?

Truman adminstration this nation is without a draft. And, surprisingly enough, few people seem concerned about it.

Originally the delay in passage of new draft legislation seemed nothing more than a momentary hangup caused by political squabbling. When the old law expired at the end of June it was presumed that new legislation would be ratified in early July - just as soon as the Mansfield Amendment was taken care of.

Administration backers misjudged the motives of the Mansfield forces, however. The senator from Montana and his colleagues were not out simply to make a little political hay at the expense of the White House. In fact, they were and are dead serious about either appending a Vietnam withdrawal deadline onto the draft legislation or blocking the bill completely.

Partisan overtones aside, legislation compelling President Nixon to adhere to a Vietnam withdrawal deadline could prove a blessing in disguise. While a fixed deadline would tie the President's hands in certain areas it would also provide him a very convenient foil against conservative criticism,

For the first time since the controlled congress rather than the Republican executive which would be responsible for the withdrawal.

Undoubtedly, the President's kitchen cabinet could exploit such a legislature set-back to the ultimate advantage of Mr. Nixon.

The present stalled legislation affects only the draft, while the rest of the ongoing functions of the military remain in tact. If Congress does not act soon, however, the Pentagon will have to do some serious rearranging in its deployment plans.

The most interesting part of the draft issue does not involve the logistical problems of no draft, but rather the public's attitude-or lack of it-toward the entire matter. For the two decades of the Cold War it has been taken as an article of faith that the enforced slavery of conscription was absolutely necessary for the protection and preservation of "the American way of life."

The current lack of brouhaha over the draft deficit seems to signal yet another erosion in the Cold War mentality.

Is it possible that were Congress to neglect to renew the draft altogether the only outcry raised would come from joint chiefs of since it would be the Democratic staff and President Thieu?

The eagle slaughter: new solutions needed

A veritable slaughter of golden eagles has taken place in the Western states. Over a recent six month period, one group of ranchers alone was responsible for the annihilation of 770 eagles.

Thieu's fix

America's pet dictator in South Vietnam, Nguyen Van Thieu, has all but assured his re - election to a second term as president. Vice President Ky has been unable to conform to Vietnam's Thieu prompted nomination law, thus leaving former Gen. Duong Van Minh as Thieu's competition.

From the first, the presidential nominating law was nothing short of a fix. Under its auspices all "serious" candidates for the chief executive's office must obtain the signatures of 40 national assemblymen or 100 provincial councelors to qualify. Since many members of the national assembly and most provincial officials are Thieu's handymen, his nomination was virtually automatic while any challengers were at a serious disadvantage.

At least there is one ramification of the election debacle which should hearten Foggy Bottom: with only one opposition candidate in this election – as opposed to several in the last - Thieu should have to do only a minimal amount of rigging to assure his victory and he will only have to lock up one opponent after the voting.

Federal law allows golden eagles, an endangered species, to be shot only with a special permit from the Dept. of the Interior. However, no such permits have been issued in two years. Testimony last week before the Senate Environmental Appropriations Subcommittee may well lead to a crackdown on eagle poaching, but such a crackdown will probably turn out to be a case of too little, too late.

The only solution to the problem of endangered species lies in the mentality of man himself. If the average western rancher firmly believes eagles endanger his flocks and should be eradicated, then the handwriting is on the wall - the golden eagle and all endangered species are doomed.

Tougher enforcement may help, but in the long run what will save America's endangered species is a shift of consciousness. Man must realize he has no more right to live on this planet than any other species. Man must recognize the delicate balance of nature. For instance, rodent populations have multiplied in Western states where eagles and coyotes have been destroyed.

Man is just one part of the natural order. When he plays with this natural balance, he must face the consequences. The laws regarding species preservation should be more rigidly enforced. Bounty laws should, in many cases, be repealed. Michigan, for example, still has a $15 bounty for each male coyote, $20 for each female. But most importantly, man must learn that he cannot bend the laws of nature to suit his own needs.

TRB FROM WASHINGTON

Defending the adversary system

BY RICHARD LEE STROUT

We once had an editor who used to say: Remember, sonny, newspapermen aren't news. Wonder what he would say

The news media, a few of them anyway, are fighting with the government. That's a good thing for both sides. But the press can't stop the government from governing, and the government shouldn't stop the press from pressing.

In the Pentagon papers case, the Nixon administration suspended the First Amendment for 15 days. The Supreme Court reinstated it. But until then, the newspapers were clear losers; they were prevented from publishing news in their possession.

This administration has a hangup about the Constitution. It conveniently forgot the Fourteenth Amendment (no loss of liberty without due process of law) in the Mayday demonstrations. The cops went along the streets, swept up everyone who wasn't wearing a business suit or affluent expression and tossed them in the clink.

The idea was, people with long hair might be thinking of littering the streets or blocking traffic. The cops read their minds, divined their intentions. That's called thought control.

Three impudent reporters brought this to Mr. Nixon's attention on June 1. Six weeks later, we were still waiting for the President to hold another press conference. Press secretary Ronald Ziegler says Mr. Nixon has other ways of communicating with the taxpayers.

Definition

We like Mr. Dooley's definition of a good newspaper: It comforts the afflicted and afflicts the comfortable. When the comfortable are afflicted, their comfortable assumptions questioned, they scream. The louder they scream, the better the press is doing its job.

So alliterative Agnew alerts appreciative audiences to the evils of effete eastern editors. Atty. Gen. Mitchell, more prosaic, seeks injunctions. And Chairman Staggers, D - W. Va., of the House Commerce Committee tries to cite Columbia Broadcasting System for contempt.

The House is full of lawyers; they concluded Staggers didn't have a case that would stand up in court. The House decided the First Amendment protects broadcasters, too. It has to.

One thing has to be said: Next to the American Medical Assn., no institution is more resistant to self - reform than the news media. How is it that Ralph Nader has overlooked the newspapers?

You can count on the fingers of one hand the big newspapers that are doing a good job of afflicting the comfortable. This country has 1,600 dailies - how many are notable for conscience? Agnew wants press reform that produces less screaming; what's needed is more.

Dislike

Some administration officials -Mitchell, White House aide John Ehrlichman - frankly dislike reporters. They see the adversary relation between media and government as partisan politics (Ehrlichman complained CBS reporter Dan Rather sounded in "an arm of the Democratic Committee.")

To reporters, adversary means they chronicle the shortcomings of both parties. The same newsmen now poking at Mr. Nixon probed Lyndon Johnson (LBJ growled at reporters investigating his wealth: "You and your First Amendment; I'd like to investigate you.") They documented Johnson; deceptions long before Dr. Ellsberg made off with the papers.

Mitchell and Ehrlichman have the proper Tory attitude. Reporters are nosy creatures. Always asking questions they've no business asking, making t hard for right - minded men to get the work done. And they make so many mistakes! They do indeed; they'd make fewer if the government gave them more information.

Mr. Nixon is clever about the press He says he hasn't had a fight with reporters since 1962 ("you won't have Richard Nixon to kick around any more, because, gentlemen, this is my last pres conference,") then sends Agnew out in flail away.

The vice president is music to Republican ears. He takes them back to Ike's memorable speech at the 1964 convention. It was a dull affair until the general lambasted the columnists; then the delegates went wild. They stood on chairs, shaking their fists at the pres section. Mr. Dooley would have been

China could ruin Nixon hopes

By TERRY SMITH East Lansing graduate student

President Nixon's forthcoming trip to Red China will clearly be the most important contribution — either positive or negative - to his re - election in 1972. A successful visit will practically guarantee victory in November; a failure will insure defeat and maybe even prevent his renomination.

We could of course talk about why Nixon is going to China at all. The Peking government has not exactly been in the vanguard of international pacifism.

In 1950 China sent a million "volunteers" into Korea to kill more than 30,000 American soldiers. In 1951 China invaded Tibet and to this day is raping that ancient culture. In 1964 Mao let a hundred flowers bloom and chopped off a million heads (to add to

Yet he's going there, and assuredly has his mind made up about it, so we wish him godspeed. At the same time we must take note of the dangers inherent in this all - or -

States now has such a psychological edge in the war of nerves with Hanoi that the North Vietnamese are clamoring for a meeting with Peking to see if the Red Chinese are indeed selling them out, as is the transparent revolution to Africa, Asia and Latin America, causing untold misery for

Except for the peace creeps on the Democratic far left no authoritative Democrat now has a single overseas issue for campaign leverage.

Assuming even modest improvement in the economy (likely), John Connally as the Republican vice - presidential nominee (also likely), and the real promise of, in Nixon's favorite phrase, 'a full generation of peace," the President should be re - elected rather handily in 1972. The peace element and the election itself - hinges on the China trip's contribution to future international serenity.

Of all people, Nixon should recall the last time a golden opportunity like this presented itself.

President Eisenhower goes to Paris to meet with Soviet Premier Khrushchev at the 1960 summit conference. A high level agreement, or even a statement of mutual understanding on the issues, would be another demonstration of the Republican Party's superiority in foreign dealings and an enormous feather in the campaign cap of the Republican heir - apparent, Vice - President Nixon.

Instead Khrushchev blitzes the summit with his neatly - timed revelation about Gary Francis Powers and the U-2 overflights. Eisenhower and his party are made to look like fools and liars: Richard Nixon, an innocent bystander, suffers loss of prestige along with his party, ends up fighting Kennedy on the wrong issues in the 1960 campaign and loses the election

Khrushchev later admits that he destroyed the summit hoping that the eventual outcome, the election of Kennedy, would be the result, because the Democrats, especially the babe in - the - woods Kennedy, would be easier to manipulate.

Nixon is no babe - in - the - woods Chou En - lai will be hard - pressed to manipulate him. But Nixon is extremely vulnerable politically to a disastrous visit to the mainland.

With hundreds of millions watching on international television, Chou might denounce American imperialism Southeast Asia or America's support of the running dog Chiang Kai · shel or American espionage at the Lop Nor nuclear facility or any other bombshell that suits the Communists' purposes.

Nixon's attempts at detente would be disgraced, Red China would score immense propaganda coup, followers of the Maoist line would be heartened the world around, and Nixon, with his party, would be finished for 1972, leaving foreign affairs and the future of the world in the hands of the freaky wing of the Democratic party (God help

Chances are this won't happen. in 1959 no one imagined that Khrushchev would in 1960 wreck summit conference in order to influence grossly a foreign election.

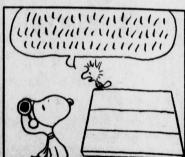

Nixon had better beware.

The level of pollution in the Red Cedar River has declined, so say MSU water quality experts. It is even supposed to decline more in the next few years. One can only wonder if sewage is on the way out in East Lansing.

However, game fish presently in the river are likely to contain parasites, he said. The parasites do not constitute a problem as long as the fish are cooked well.

Flint miscues help All Stars win, 54-6

By RICK GOSSELIN Sports Editor

The Lansing All Stars just keep rolling

Taking advantage of five Flint Wildcat niscues, the All Stars stormed the Flint pastille for eight touchdowns in stalking off with a 54-6 win Saturday night.

The Stars weren't choosy in how they got n the board, either, socring in each period ith an excellent blend of both the pass and he run. Lansing churned up over 178 yards the ground and cut into the air for 165

Ernie Pasteur gave the Stars the lead idway through the first stanza with a 10 ear run, and Craig Tefft added another score the first with a nine yard dash. Tefft's ore was set up when Ron Everett fell on a uncan fumble on the Wildcat 21.

Art Berry picked off a Kraft pass for the third major Star break, and Pasteur capitalized on it a minute later for his second touchdown as he plunged in from the one.

Tom Eifert took advantage of another Flint error in running 23 yards around left end for another score. Ken Hines fell on a fumble off of the kick - off to allow Eifert the change to score. At the half, the All Stars had a comfortable 27-6 lead.

Bob Lange scored the lone touchdown in the third period on a 27 yard pass from Jim Ball to cushion the All Star lead at 34-6.

Tom Jakovac got into the aerial act early in the fourth quarter with a 38 - yard touchdown pass to Pete Schmidt for the first three Lansing scores in the final quarter.

Namath suffers torn ligaments

NEW YORK (UPI) - Injury - prone Joe Namath underwent surgery Sunday for torn ligaments in his left knee and the doctor in charge of the case said the flamboyant New York Jets quarterback would be able to play football again, possibly as early as November.

Namath, who was injured Saturday in an exhibition game with the Detroit Lions at Tampa, Fla., has been expected to be lost for most of the regular season. But Dr. James Nicholas, director of orthopedic surgery at Lenox Hill Hospital and the Jets' team surgeon, was optimistic about Namath's future.

"This does not mean the end of Joe's career," Nicholas said. "It is not a permanent injury. He will be in the hospital for two weeks, the cast on his leg will remain for six weeks and he may be able to play by Nov. 15."

The operation at Lenox Hill Sunday morning took 52 minutes. Nicholas said two ligaments in Namath's left knee were reconstructed and that a torn cartilage was removed.

Frank Ramos, a press spokesman for the Jets, said the operation was successful and that Namath would play again. "Joe should be good for the last six games of the regular season," Ramos said. He said this meant that Namath might Ramos said Namath would undergo a period of rehabilitation after the cast is removed. He said Namath's ability to cut would be hampered, however, by the injury. Ramos said Namath was in good spirits and quoted him astronauts were in good condition.

The trio went through a four - hour medical examination aboard ship just after splashdown Saturday.

Dr. Clarence Jernigan, the space agency physician, said they lost from one to five pounds of weight each, even though they ate almost all the food packed aboard their spacecraft.

"It's just impossible to gain weight in space," Jernigan quoted Scott as saying. "Our preliminary laboratory data shows that everything is normal," said Jernigan. "The guys are in real good spirits." Endeavour, the Apollo 15 command ship, was brought aboard the Okinawa a few hours after splashdown. The heat shield on the blunt end of the cone - shaped craft was scorched from the 4,000 BEST of suburban living in degrees generated in the fiery passage through the earth's atmosphere, but otherwise,

Space agency engineers still had no explanation for why one of the spacecraft's three parachutes collapsed as Endeavour floated toward the ocean. The craft impacted the water a little faster than it would with three normal chutes, officials said, but it was designed so it could operate with only two parachutes and the collapsed chute caused no problems. Several congressmen aboard the Okinawa witnessed the return to earth of Endeavour and praised the moon mission and the precision of the recovery operation.

"Superb, absolutely superb," said Rep. Charles A. Mosher, R - Ohio.

'The timing was right on the money," said Rep. Richard T. Hanna, D - Calif. "It's just incredible how time after time such proficiency was shown." Rep. J. Edward Roush, D -Ind., said Apollo 15 shows "it's time we start dreaming a bit about the future . . . We should start thinking in terms of exploration beyond what seems to be the limit of our Apollo program."
